Bad Boys Of Chicago News Row Authors

Unconventional Love Story Woven Into Startling Drama

During the long run of the piece as a Broadway stage hit, it was discovered that women are among the first to applaud "The Front Page," that fast-moving newspaper thriller which comes to the Ritz Theatre today, Monday and Tuesday.

"The Front Page" originally written for the stage by those "bad boys" of Chicago newspaperdom, Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, has been brought to the screen by those iconoclastic movie-makers, Howard Hughes, of "Hell's Angels" fame, and Lewis Milestone, director of "All Quiet on the Western Front." It is realistic to a degree and reveals the fascinating human interest side of newspaper life, and the dramatic exploits of reporters who stop at nothing in their loyalty to their papers.

Naturally, it has been stripped of all convention and hokum, and unrolls on the screen in all its boldness and blustering splendor. The unconventional love-story woven into this dramatic tale of back-stage newspapering may account, too, for the amazing feminine interest in "The Front Page." When Hildy Johnson, a star reporter, desperately in love with her girl, tries to quit the newspapering "jacker" so, he can turn "respectable" and settle down, and his managing editor refuses to let him because he is too valuable a reporter, you have situations which appeal to every real human instinct. Torn between sympathy for the girl's impetuosity and her admiration for Hildy's newspaper loyalty, women in the audience have a fine emotional time.

One of the most expensive casts ever assembled for a film-play is seen in "The Front Page." Adolphe Menjou, in his first departure from the type of impersonations which made him famous, plays the part of Walter Burns, a ruthless, debonair managing editor. Pat O'Brien, former New York stage star, is Hildy the crack police reporter who tries vainly to extricate himself from Burns' clutches so he can marry the girl, played by Mary Brian, who finds this a particularly sympathetic part.

Edward Everett Horton, as a reporter, who as his pals say is "goody" on the subject of personal hygiene, has a comic role worthy of his best efforts. Others important "cast" are Slim Summerville, George E. Stone, Walter Catlett, Matt Moore, Phil Teas, Frank McHugh and Spencer Charters.

determines to throw everything, including Wynne, overboard, and begin life anew with the girl. How he discovers the impossibility of this step and disillusion the girl whom he loves furnish the surprising climax of this drama, "Man of the World."

Miss Gibson has, in "Man of the World," one of the most important roles the screen has so far provided her with, although she was seen to advantage in Jack Oakie's "The Gang Buster" as well as in several other recent screen hits. She is a stage actress of wide experience. Guy Kibbee, who with Lawrence Gray, supplies the chief male support, is known as a splendid character actor. Recently starred in "Torch Song" on the stage, he contributed an exceptional bit of acting to Nancy Carroll's "Scien Heaven." Gray is a competent young juvenile, remembered favorably for his work in "Marilyn," "Diamond Handcuffs," "Imperfect Ladies" and "Oh Kay."

With Carole Lombard's make-up, the list of supporting players in William Powell's latest starring drama, "Man of the World," at the Queen Theatre for two days starting Wednesday next, beauty as well as skill are injected into the character roles of the Herman J. Mankiewicz story.

Miss Lombard's blonde beauty has been seen frequently lately in such outstanding pictures as "Fast and Loose" and "It Pays to Advertise," both comedies. In "Man of the World" she has an exacting part as the forbidden sweetheart of a Paris blackmailer, played by William Powell.

The story of "Man of the World" introduces Powell as a suave, cosmopolitan gentleman-cheat, a black-mafer who lives off the "weak" nesses of Paris wealthy American visitors. Powell is the editor of a yellow gossip weekly, designed to circulate entirely among the Americans in Paris. Paris police are unable to discover the identity of the editor, and Powell moves about the city freely. Wynne Gibson, seen most recently in "June Moon," his assistant, is in love with him. Powell, however, falls in love with Carole Lombard, the face of one of the most expensive casts of his picture. This love makes right state his profession, and he

Seismograph, Home-Made, Is Science Mystery

BELLAIRE, O. (INS)—A crude seismograph, consisting of nothing more than a butcher's steel used for sharpening knives, which hangs on a nail driven into a heavy post imbedded into the earth, has been beating college and government stations in detecting earthquakes and has aroused scientists of this state who are unable to explain its workings.

Discovered quite by accident in the home of Mrs. Charles Blackmer, the steel has given accurate registration of several recent quakes. Although unable to register the vicinity of a quake, the "seismograph" always swings and jangles exactly the pillar at the first tremor.

Attempts to make the steel swing by shaking the house have proven failures. Even the light of a stick of dynamite near the home failed to budge the steel. Yet when New England was rocked by a tragic quake this year, the "seismograph" registered a series of distinct shocks several hours before the quake was reported from college instruments.

Those who have investigated the phenomenon explain a possible solution in that the Blackmer home is situated on the top of a high hill, perhaps a huge rock extending far into the earth. Any vibration of the earth under these conditions, it is said, would cause a vibration of the rock which in turn would cause the pillar to vibrate.

Mr. Horace Kelson of San Antonio and Pat Lyons of California have returned home after a visit with W. C. Barnett.

Jack Oakie In 'Dude Ranch' To Show Here

June Collyer Supports Missouri Minstrel Boy At Ritz

Actors play the parts of actors in "Dude Ranch," the Jack Oakie special comedy with the big name supporting cast which comes to the Ritz Theatre on Friday and Saturday next for the last half of the week.

The story of this hilarious comedy, based upon Milton Krims' humorous novel, "The Lone Rider of the Mojave," reveals the fun that ensues when a traveling troupe of stage performers takes over the under-cover amusement concession at a busy guest ranch in the Rockies. Oakie is seen as the star actor of the troupe. The others are Eugene Pallette, Mitz Green and Cecil Weston. Arriving at the ranch owned by Stuart Erwin, they suggest that he will be making things interesting for his patrons if he allows them to dress up as characters of the old West and put on a few realistic scenes in the vicinity of the hotel.

The stunt works and the patrons get all thrilled over the gun-flourishing deeds of the "Westerners." June Collyer, prettiest guest at the hotel, becomes enamored of the rough-riding sure-shooting Oakie.

But the hoax hits a bumpy place when a band of real outlaws arrive on the scene, fresh from a bank holdup in the nearest town. The desperadoes place the blame for the crime on the innocent Jack—and there is plenty of fun stirring as a result.

But Jack finally assists in bringing the real desperadoes to justice—and (p. 3.) he gets the girl.

Back Jones On Queen Schedule

Among the most dramatic landmarks in the world are the old ghost cities which abound throughout the western section of the United States. These deserted mining towns are mute testimonials to the hardships and suffering endured by pioneers in the early gold rush days. They have gained an added interest in modern times because they have been more than once utilized as strongholds by desperate bandits.

A depiction of one of these old ghost cities is one of the interesting features of "Desert Vengeance," Columbia's all-talking Western picture starring Buck Jones, which comes to the Queen Theatre on Friday and Saturday. Running true to form, the dilapidated old town serves as a cache for a gang of desperadoes, and in this vivid and colorful background the picture shows the life and struggles of an outlaw chief and his followers.

The ghost city is just one of the features of "Desert Vengeance." The story has novelty and drama. It gives Buck Jones many acting opportunities as well as a chance to display his skill at horsemanship. Barbara Bedford plays opposite. Louis King handled the production.

Marion Davies On Ritz Bill

'It's A Wise Child' Proves Popular On Screen

Marion Davies is starred in "It's A Wise Child," Metro-Goldwyn Mayer's picturization of the Lawrence E. Johnson stage hit. The talkie will open Wednesday at the Ritz Theatre.

This hilarious farce is of particular interest because it follows closely the style of roles in which the star excelled so sparkling a comedy characterization of her, last, offering "The Bachelor Father."

Tremendously Popular
The film was screened from Johnson's adaptation of the play which was produced in 1929 at the Biisco Theatre in New York. The play won wide attention because of its novel theme.

Robert Leonard, who directed the new picture, was acclaimed for his adroit handling of Miss Davies' last talkie, "The Bachelor Father." Leonard was placed at the head of a list of the six outstanding directors by a leading film trade publication, having screened "The Divorcee" and "Let Us Be Gay" with Norma Shearer.

Sidney Blackmer, recognized as one of the stage's foremost leading men, heads the splendid supporting cast. He plays the part of the small-town lawyer who finds his pretty client too troublesome to get along with—and too attractive to get along without. Blackmer last appeared in "Under Western Skies" and "Little Caesar."

Glenn Scores In the Mysterious Role of Cool Kelly, the Ice Man, James Gleason was offered a rare opportunity which the author-star of "The 24th Hour" is said to have accepted in a big way.

The intimitate Polly Moran plays the part of Bertha, the inquisitive servant. Lester Vail, who last played in "Dance Pools, Dance," is the handsome Roger whom Joyce, the heroine, almost weds. Marie Prevost is Annie, the romantic domestic about whom the tempest rages, and Clara Handlisk is cast as Mrs. Stanton. Johnny Arthur is Otto and Robert McWade is seen in the character of G. A. Appleby. Hilda Vaughn is Alice. Ben Alexander is Bill and Emily Fitzroy is Jane Appleby.

Miss Davies plays the part of the local belle who, through a misunderstanding and neighborhood gossip, is believed to be in what is known in polite circles as an "interesting" condition. The fact that she is engaged to G. A. Appleby, town banker and reform leader, makes it doubly interesting. All this comes about because of her concern for Annie, the servant girl, who is about to become a mother, having been secretly wed to Joyce's brother. Other men are involved in the complication until the truth is brought out by the avowal of Joyce's lawyer to marry her himself—which he does anyway.

THE NEW OLDSMOBILE HAS FINER BODIES-INCREASED POWER and the SYNCRO-MESH TRANSMISSION

THE 4-DOOR SEDAN

The many new features incorporated in the 1931 Oldsmobile are not confined to any one part of the car. Body, engine, and chassis—all provide evidence of the advanced engineering which makes the new Oldsmobile such a remarkable value at its new low price. Fundamental advancements in construction make its insulated bodies by Fisher strong, quiet, and serviceable. And, smart new tailoring and appointments add to the attractiveness of body interiors. New features which have been added to Oldsmobile's dependable engine make performance even more pleasing than in the past. Down-draft carburetion, for example, brings increased power—with higher speed and faster acceleration. And a new carburetor-silencer contributes to quieter operation throughout the entire speed range. In addition, new ease of handling is offered by the famous Syncro-Mesh silent-shift transmission. And Oldsmobile's new Quiet Second Gear assures smooth, swift acceleration which rivals high gear performance in quietness.

DOG BITES
The warm days are the out-door days for humans and dogs. The result is a seasonal increase in dog bites and a great danger of rabies or hydrophobia.

Dogs and humans must be considered, and the preventive measures advised are for the benefit of both. Dog lovers sometimes overlook this point.

When the muzzling of dogs is recommended, or the leading of dogs on the leash is required, they conceive these measures as discomforts imposed on dumb and defenseless animals for the comfort and security of humans only.

The facts, however, are that dog bites dog, as well as man, and that it is in this manner that rabies or hydrophobia is spread from animal to animal.

Rabies is a transmissible disease caused by a specific agent. It is never developed spontaneously. If it were possible to keep rabid animals from biting and infecting other animals, the disease would die out.

It was stamped out in England for a period of time, but reappeared when, during the world war, dogs were brought in from other countries without being subjected to a quarantine period of observation.

Australia has never had any rabies and Denmark, Norway and Sweden, have been free from the disease for more than 50 years.

The United States, on the other hand, has been badly afflicted. In 1928 the Federal census reported 143 deaths from rabies in 30 states; in 1928 there were 111 deaths, and rabid animals were reported in 535 localities.

In 1911 there were 1,881 localities with rabid animals. Since then there has been a constant increase in the number of rabid animals, and in the number of dog bites.

A vaccine has been developed in recent years which, when administered to dogs, renders them immune to rabies for a year. But even so, muzzling and leashing still remain the most practical methods of preventing dog bites and rabies.

Motoring Behavior

If anyone is ever able to discover some device which will make human beings act in their automobiles used as they act when they are walking, it is probably that the alarming toll of fatalities taken by automobile traffic each year will shrink to comparatively small proportions.

Anyone who doubts that statement is invited to consider the strange change that comes over the average American as soon as he gets behind the wheel of his car.

On foot, the American is usually a genial good-natured, a more or less leisurely sort of chap. He would like to walk on a sidewalk that isn't crowded, but that isn't always possible and he makes the best of it. When he has to walk through a crowd he takes his time at it and makes due allowance for the feelings of others. Unless he has some special reason for being in a great hurry, he doesn't jostle and push and strain every nerve to get ahead of everybody else.

Set him to driving an auto, however, and a great transformation comes over him.

Instead of taking his time he gets in a life-and-death hurry. He will behead a pedestrian, or run over a ten-year-old child. When another car passes him he sees red. His consideration for others vanishes. He wants with all his soul to be at the head of the procession and to stay there. If that isn't possible he does the best he can.

In consequence, the traffic stream on an American highway often resembles a procession of irritated lunatics. The driver who cheerfully gives way to another in the rare exception. The driver who goes along leisurely gets cursed from every side.

All of this not only takes a lot of the fun out of driving, it makes traffic the dangerous thing that it is.

We can pass all the traffic ordinances we have in mind to, we can conduct safety campaigns week in and week out, we can write columns about the tragedy of our 26,000 yearly traffic deaths, but until we find some way of inducing ourselves to act with ordinary human courtesy and common sense while we are driving our auto, it won't do a great deal of good.

Safety in driving, after all, is largely a matter of courtesy and common sense. In most fields Americans exhibit these two qualities in quite satisfactory quantities. Why is it that we tend to shed one or both of them when we go driving?

HOLLYWOOD—The American-born son of American parents, Frank O'Neill, Jr., has found himself in Hollywood, a sort of cinematic "man without a country."

The younger O'Neill, son of the famous jockey who has won most of the famous race tracks of the world, was born at Gravesend, Long Island, 24 years ago, but was taken to France by his parents when he was six months old and has lived most of his life there, except for visits to America with his father.

He was educated in French schools and learned to speak the language fluently, while acquiring at home a perfect command of English. He speaks both languages without accent.

Early Ambition
Despite his father's fame on the turf, young Frank never desired to be a jockey. His ambition, from early youth, was pointed to the screen.

Nearly three years ago he was on the verge of entering the industry in the exhibition field. The late Jules Mastbaum, theater chain executive, brought him to Philadelphia to learn the business. Then Mastbaum died, and young O'Neill came to Hollywood to become an actor.

It seemed that his ambition was to be realized, for he broke into films almost immediately. It was in a French version, true but it seemed inevitable that it would lead to an opportunity on the American screen too.

Foreigner at Home
But Frank reckoned without Hollywood's penchant for typing its actors, cataloging them in little niches from which they may not escape. He became to Hollywood just another French juvenile.

So he played in one French version after another—the French version of David Rollins in "The Big Trail" of Charles Farrell in "The Man Who Came Back," perhaps of Phillips Holmes in "An American Tragedy" and so on.

But to present an English-speaking version of Frank O'Neill, Jr. himself on the screen has been denied him thus far. He knows few of the American actors here, and most of his friends are in the French acting colony.

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—The American-born son of American parents, Frank O'Neill, Jr., has found himself in Hollywood, a sort of cinematic "man without a country."

The younger O'Neill, son of the famous jockey who has won most of the famous race tracks of the world, was born at Gravesend, Long Island, 24 years ago, but was taken to France by his parents when he was six months old and has lived most of his life there, except for visits to America with his father.

He was educated in French schools and learned to speak the language fluently, while acquiring at home a perfect command of English. He speaks both languages without accent.

Early Ambition
Despite his father's fame on the turf, young Frank never desired to be a jockey. His ambition, from early youth, was pointed to the screen.

Nearly three years ago he was on the verge of entering the industry in the exhibition field. The late Jules Mastbaum, theater chain executive, brought him to Philadelphia to learn the business. Then Mastbaum died, and young O'Neill came to Hollywood to become an actor.

It seemed that his ambition was to be realized, for he broke into films almost immediately. It was in a French version, true but it seemed inevitable that it would lead to an opportunity on the American screen too.

Foreigner at Home
But Frank reckoned without Hollywood's penchant for typing its actors, cataloging them in little niches from which they may not escape. He became to Hollywood just another French juvenile.

So he played in one French version after another—the French version of David Rollins in "The Big Trail" of Charles Farrell in "The Man Who Came Back," perhaps of Phillips Holmes in "An American Tragedy" and so on.

But to present an English-speaking version of Frank O'Neill, Jr. himself on the screen has been denied him thus far. He knows few of the American actors here, and most of his friends are in the French acting colony.

He is an American citizen, but in the movies and in Hollywood

EXIT

by Harold Bell Wright

SYNOPSIS: If, as Tony Latour believes, his childhood sweetheart watches from the wings, she sees his love for her surviving her marriage to Roy Donovan and her final exit from life's stage. In Pierre, her son, Tony, formerly an actor, sees her theatrical talent reborn. The turning leaves of memory disclose Tony's and Harriet's childhood and the building of their affection. The girl's latent in amateur dramatics had drawn grudging praise from Orchard Hill's citizenry, regarded to regard the stage as wicked and the devoting child-minded. But this conviction—shared by his parents, who saw her as a barrier to Tony's intended career as a minister—did not dim Tony's hopes of marriage to Harriet, although he had not yet proposed to her.

Chapter 3
DRAMA OFF-STAGE
Toward the end of their last year at the academy, Antonio began to think seriously of the future. He had not fully committed himself to the ministry, but he was tacitly accepted by his parents and the community that he was to enter Theological Seminary following his graduation from the academy. The young man realized that the time for definite decisions was at hand.

Then it was spring and the Dramatic Club was giving its last play of the season. Harriet and Tony were reorganizing in their theater—that little retreat walled in by the flowery banks and the willow thicket.

The memories of their first boy and girl meeting and of the many hours they had spent together—er—the season, warm and rich with the fragrance of the earth and growing things—do you wonder that the young man was stupid about the play which he and the girl were rehearsing and that she had often to chide him for not getting into his part?

His thoughts were all upon the roles that Harriet and he were to act in a play of much greater importance than the one in which they would appear on the Dramatic Club stage before all Orchard Hill.

Tony wanted to make the love passages real. But the girl was too intent upon the drama and he dared not risk speaking of his very real love when she was so occupied with the art of making their stage love seem real. So the boy took what comfort he could in their mimic love scenes and waited a more opportune time.

"That play was a great success. Harriet, in her love scenes with Tony, must have felt the genuineness of his passion. Certainly she electrified the audience like a creature inspired. Even those who were most emphatic in their disapproval of the professional stage and of Harriet, crowded about her when the final curtain was down, with congratulations. The girl threw her arms about Tony's neck and kissed him before everybody. It was an unheard-of thing for an Orchard Hill girl to do—and Orchard Hill did not forget it."

Tony felt so confident of her love that he almost spoke that night when he took her home. But something warned him that this was not the time; so he asked her to meet him at their theater the next day, in the afternoon.

When the appointed hour arrived Antonio was there, hidden among the willows. He wanted to see her as he saw her that day when that means nothing because he made his screen debut speaking French.

VEST-POCKET "MIKE"
DENVER—(INS)—Relief for radio sufferers is promised in an invention recently exhibited here, which is intended to do away with microphone panic. It consists of a vest pocket "mike" which is so small that the speaker is not aware of its presence. It fits into the speaker's pocket and catches the vibrations from his chest. Only the high notes are caught from the air. The vest pocket "mike" will be used at numerous public gatherings in Denver during the next few weeks.

AUDIENCE GOT FAT
NEW YORK—(INS)—An audience was paid to listen at St. Patrick's Cathedral recently when fifty students of New York University were hired by the Bell Laboratories to assist in an "articulation test." The students were scattered over the auditorium in groups of five, and for four hours listened to words in an effort to determine the acoustical qualities of the Cathedral.

GOLD PANS IN DEMAND
BUTTE, Mont.—(INS)—Revival of gold mining in Montana, due chiefly to the economic conditions, has brought about a startling increase in the sale of gold pans, according to local dealers. The old black pans, many of which had lain on shelves in local hardware stores for almost half a century, have suddenly become the objects of a widespread demand. Hundreds of otherwise unemployed men have taken to the hills this summer to pan gold from the streams which, former years, yielded many a fortune.

BEES IN ICE HOUSE
HIGHLAND LAKE, Conn.—(INS)—The owner of an ice house here is keeping watch in anticipation of a store of honey. For some strange reason a queen bee led her swarm into the air chamber of the building and started honey-making with ice on one side of the hive and the great outdoors on the other. The swarm entered via a knot-hole and has been there ever since warm weather opened up.

MODEST MAIDENS

Youngster Prefers Practicing On Cash Register To Piano

A roll-top desk and a filing cabinet are the play things of Dorothy Kassel, aged eleven, who is the niece of Mrs. Abe Gardner and who is visiting her at present.

Dorothy is the daughter of L. H. Kassel, of Ft. Worth, one of the state's largest brokers. It has been her ambition for the last three years to have an office just like Daddy's. Gradually she acquired it. She began with a small desk; now she has the large roll-top one, a typewriter, a cash register and a filing cabinet. On the outside of her room is an office sign presented her by O. E. Carr, city manager of Ft. Worth.

While other youngsters are playing with their dolls, Dorothy is making typewritten copies of her father's business letters and then filing them. Lately when she had a letter almost as high as she is, her mother threw them out and now she has to accumulate an entire set for her filing cabinet. When she gets tired of typing and filing she practices on the cash register.

For light reading, Dorothy peruses a volume on salesmanship put out by the Alexander Hamilton Institute. And for relaxation she carries on imaginary conferences with her business associates that sound very much like those Daddy is engaged in.

At present she is very seriously contemplating an offer from the Faultless Starch Co., one of her father's clients, to check up on business conditions in Ft. Worth for them. Being already a shrewd business woman, she is not jumping at the offer they make.

Today's Linoleum Designs Suit Any Room

By MARGERY TAYLOR
Interior Decoration Editor
McCall's Magazine, Written for The Herald

Linoleum, for some time gradually coming out of the kitchen and bath, has now, with its latest patterns and smart treatments, definitely arrived in every room.

Not only does it fit any scheme of decoration, but may actually "make" it. The possibilities appear almost unlimited; for in addition to drawing from the bewildering variety of stock patterns, the decorator can combine such units as stars, shields and bands in any color and arrangement.

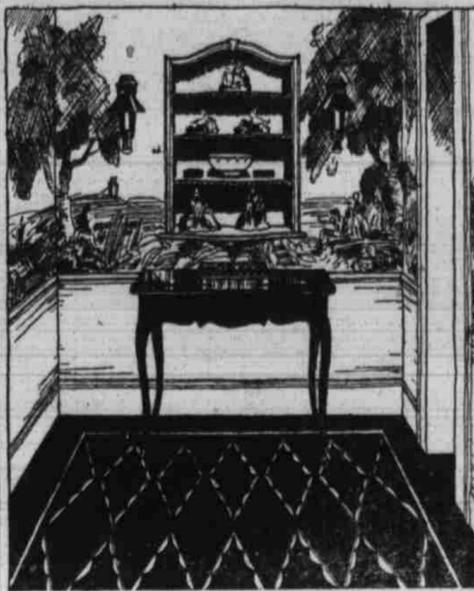

In its many striking and pleasing combinations, the new diamond motif seems due for the highest popularity.

For example, there is a large diamond pattern in such sure-fire color schemes as black with peach and black with sand—admirable for a hall. Again, one may prefer the linoleum with a tete-de-negre ground cleverly broken by diamonds in blue green edged with a sand-colored scallop.

On the floor of a room with blue-green woodwork and doors and a gay scenic wallpaper, this linoleum would be extremely effective.

A similar design, though simpler, shows small diamonds spaced regularly and widely over the surface. Black with blue diamonds, blue with cream and light plum with sand are some of the alluring color combinations.

From our Early American forefathers, who have done much for us in the way of decorative inspiration, comes a delightful pattern based on the old spatter floors. In this, terra cotta stripes, laid out like a plaid, are used as a kind of accent with three different color combinations. This pattern comes in a blue background spattered in red, black and sand, or with a sand background spattered in brown, blue, green and rose.

Among the most important of the style notes concerning linoleum is the very effective way, recently discovered, of laying almost any linoleum with a plain black border.

Tried out first in the kitchen, the idea has proved too good to be kept out of the other rooms.

Utopia Expected In A. D. 3000, Dean Makes Prophecy

By KINGSBURY SMITH
International News Service Staff
Correspondent

LONDON.—A land without taxes, debt, disease, army, navy, crime or lawyers, and in which physical perfection will be cultivated and beauty recognized in the body as well as in the face.

This is the Utopian ideal which "Gloom" Dean, an English foreseer for England in the year A. D. 3,000, if the people really want it.

Lecturing before the Royal Institute on "The Future of the Human Race," the Dean declared that the future of the world lies in the hands of the masses and they can make or mar it.

He suggests the following conditions as a basis for an ideal social order.

Cultivation of physical perfection. No persons allowed to have children without certificates of bodily and mental fitness. Large families neither approved nor desired. An A-1 husband or wife as much sought after as wealth and titles are now.

A rational costume for both sexes, cheap, becoming and scanty, enabling beauty to be recognized in the body and limbs as well as in the face.

War and all tariff walls abolished. Most of the nations really self-supporting.

No army, navy, national debt, foreign politics or dotes, which would make the functions of the central government almost nominal.

A parliament which meets only for a fortnight or so a year and is composed of a dignified and elderly senate of ex-officials and retired business men.

United Christian worship in each parish. Medical assistance given by the state.

Crime never punished by imprisonment. Reformatories for first offenders, and if delinquency is pronounced incurably asocial, he should be privately and painlessly extinguished in a lethal chamber without any publicity or humiliation to his family.

Infectious disease completely stamped out, except for the common cold.

Organization Of Local Merchants To Be Attempted

An attempt will be made by the Chamber of Commerce to bring about the formation of a merchants league for the purpose of studying business operations. The effort is the result of a series of talks given in this city by Alfonso Johnson, Dallas business expert.

In event such an organization were perfected retailers of this city would be given an opportunity to study operating costs, cost accounting, overhead in relation to volume, and many other questions of concern to dealers.

Ruth-Gehrig Phillies On Again Under Full Steam

CHICAGO, June 27. (AP) - The firm of George H. Ruth and Herby L. Gehrig, famed bats in the championship days of the New York Yankees, is back in business in a big way. According to semi-official averages which include Thursday's games, the Babe moved back into the individual batting leadership of the American league during the tenth week of the season, while Larryrug Lee was in charge of three other offensive departments. Ruth added 14 points for an average of .369 to displace Eddie Moran of Cleveland, while Gehrig improved his mark 29 points to take tenth place among the regulars and become the leader in hitting runs home; home runs and total bases. Following Ruth in the individual list were: Morgan, Cleveland, .362; Simmons, Philadelphia, .371; Webb, Boston, .365; Cochran, Philadelphia, .366; West, Washington, .364; Averill, Cleveland, .357; Goslin, St. Louis, .356; Cronin, Washington, .347; Gehrig, New York, .340. Gehrig had batted in 68 runs, knocked out six homers to bring his total to 17, one more than the Babe had, and had total bases amount to 138. Joe Cronin, Washington's young sensation, had eight triples and had hit safely 93 times to tie with Al Simmons and Earl Combs of the Yankees for the leadership, and Ben Chapman, another Yankee star, had stolen 26 bases to run away from the field. Washington's team batting average fell off two points, while Cleveland added four points to leave them tied at .302. Connie Mack's Athletics fielded at 978 clip, and remained at the top, while Washington improved its average one point to take second place from the Yankees, who slipped five points. St. Louis had completed 68 home runs to lead Cleveland by two. Bob Grove's thirteen victories and two defeats gave the Athletics speed ball artist an edge on the field, although Charlie Fischer of Washington had a higher percentage from runs triumphs and one defeat. Each was credited with two victories during the week. George E. Ryan, Philadelphia's right hander, also led the streakiest race with 85 in 10 games.

Dempsey 'Copy', Typical Young American To Battle For Heavyweight Championship

A clean cut young American and a fellow known to sports writers as a "scowler" the night of July 3, are to fight ten rounds in the Cleveland Municipal stadium for the world's heavyweight championship. The one, William Lawrence "Young" Stribling, strongly resembles one of the heroes drawn to illustrate "boy and girl" love stories in the magazines, though he has been in some 200 battles as a heavyweight since his ring career began back in 1921. The "scowler" Max Schmeling of Germany, is something of a "carbon copy Dempsey," so far as personal appearance goes. Indeed, it was this resemblance to the old Manassa Mauler that gave Schmeling what is known as "color," and aided in his quick build up as a first fight performer. The boys now searching the records for comparison of the giants, a customary ritual preceding a heavyweight championship fight, have found singularly little to go on. The only fighter both have met is Jack Sharkey. The terrible Boston job" Stribling lost a 10 round decision to Sharkey at Miami Beach, Fla. in 1925, in what has since been called in some sections the "Battle of the Bleeding Palms." Schmeling defeated Sharkey on a foul in four rounds at the New York Yankee Stadium, June 12 of last year. However, tip until the time Der Maxie was "low punched" into the heavyweight championship he was taking a "boxing lesson." Schmeling has been inactive since for a few exhibition appearances. In the meantime, Stribling piled up a record which resulted in his selection by 70 boxing experts as the best heavyweight of 1930. He scored quick "knockouts" over Otto Von Porat, Phil Scott, K. O. Christner, and outpointed Tuffy Griffith at Chicago in 10 rounds. The Cleveland battle will give both men an opportunity "to show" the public something a condition which not infrequently arises in boxing contests. Schmeling, the only man who ever won a heavyweight championship flat on his back, will be in there to "show" he is a "real champion." Stribling, who to date has fallen down on his major assignments will be striving to "show" that he can battle with the pressure is on. Physically, both men are in their prime for any possible demonstrations. Stribling, who lives an outdoor life at Macoon, Ga., when not engaged in his trade, is now 26. He is six feet tall, and weighs around 195 pounds. Although Schmeling has not been very active in the ring since 1929, the year he moved into fast company with victories over Johnny Risko, Joe Sekyra and Paulino Uscudun, he also has kept in the open, chopping wood, golfing and motoring. Schmeling, six feet one inch tall, also scales 195 pounds. Stribling is a typically successful young American. He is interested in civic affairs down at Macoon, the father of two children, and is greatly concerned with "speed." He is an airplane pilot and likes to drive fast automobiles. Schmeling, 25 years old, is still single. During the several years he has been in America, he has manifested much interest in the paraphernalia of Twentieth Century life. His chief preoccupations have been golf and the movies. He loves to watch the "flicker" heroines, and appeared opposite one of the German variety in a film made shortly after he returned to his country the world's champion.

Battle Of Copia Street, El Paso Sample Of Border Guard's Duties

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth of six articles on Cordova Island. The next will appear in the Herald tomorrow. By H. C. MARSHALL (Associated Press Staff Writer) EL PASO, June 27. (AP) - The fight at the foot of Copia street, which runs through El Paso's Mexican tenement quarter to Cordova Island, smuggling rendezvous, was one of the fiercest in the history of the border patrol. Into the night about a giant's agly, the inspectors of the patrol, guarding a section of the dangerous Cordova boundary, saw two men against the background of a bright moon cross the monument-marked border and walk rapidly toward a number of abode hovels. On their backs were loads of what appeared to be liquor tied up in sacks after the manner of professional smugglers. "When the patrolmen gave the command to halt, one of the smugglers opened fire with a pistol. The officers returned the fire, but were suddenly met with a storm of bullets from three quarters, indicating they had been deliberately ambushed. The fire came from across the boundary in a clump of trees on the island, which is Mexican territory, and from around corners of abodes, on American soil, behind the patrolmen. The officers' dropped into an irrigation ditch in water up to their waists, and for more than an hour the battle raged. Finally the smugglers withdrew, and the officers crawled to the spot where they had seen the two packers. On the ground lay the body of a Mexican, a pile of liquor and an automatic beside him. And two bullet wounds in his chest. Nearby was the sack of liquor dropped by the other smuggler in his flight. Another hard fight occurred in December of last year. Near midnight a patrol of three inspectors in dangerous areas like Cordova Island three patrolmen work together - observed several men creeping across Eucalyptus street in South El Paso, perhaps 50 feet from the island and the international boundary. Suspicious because the men were going in the direction of the border, rather than from it, the patrolmen did not give pursuit, but hugged the walls of an abode but moved to intercept the trio from another angle. The precaution probably saved their lives. Without warning the officers were fired upon from around the corner of a house, and naturally returned the fire. After a sharp ten-minute battle, the smugglers fled and on the ground the patrolmen found two Mexicans, bullets through their hearts. Visiting the scene recently, the writer saw six bullet holes in a tree less than eight inches in diameter and all within an area of 12 inches three to four feet from the ground. The smugglers had died at the foot

GRAVEYARD FOR CRAFT

NEWBARK, Conn. (INS) - Sheffield Island, off Norwalk harbor, has suddenly become a graveyard for craft that ply Long Island Sound. Watermen are curious about the new condition which has claimed two vessels this spring, one in a manner unaccounted for. The schooner W. B. Wilson, of Boston, went on a reef there on May 12 and was still there six weeks later. Then the tanker Tydol, Bayonne to Portland, Maine, squatted within one hundred yards of the schooner. The Wilson went aground during a storm but the sea was calm when the tanker went into nine feet of water and was firmly lodged.

RARE HOSPITAL CASE

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (INS) - As the result of the death of Mrs. Nina M. Branton following an explosion of ether in her lungs while she was under an anesthetic, the Rev. Harry Branton, her husband, and two sons, Robert and Ralph Branton, brought suit for $151,500 damages against several doctors, a nurse and a hospital. A spark was believed to have caused the explosion which ruptured Mrs. Branton's lungs. The accident was declared to be without parallel in hospital circles.

HE 'FLEW' AWAY; DIVORCE

CLEVELAND (INS) - A divorce was granted to Mrs. Elizabeth K. Canfield, by Judge Samuel H. Silbert here because her husband literally flew away. Mrs. Canfield said that her husband had taken an airplane to Detroit with another woman.

ARE WE SELFISH?

Big Spring people could use 250,000 gallons of Cosden Liquid Gas each month. We are hoping to increase our sales to that much at least.

We believe a 250,000 gallon distribution would form a profitable nucleus, which would enable us to broaden our distribution facilities throughout Big Spring's natural territory - a radius of 100 miles in all directions, ultimately resulting in Big Spring and its territory containing the entire present production of Cosden Liquid Gas. This would in turn enable Cosden Refinery to quadruple its present export business and triple its payroll.

The net result of such an accomplishment would prove a busy and prosperous Big Spring. Then, are we selfish?

Our efforts, plus your gasoline business, will get the job done. We are ready. What do you say? The prospect depends wholly upon the broad local consumption of Cosden Liquid Gas - your and your neighbors' business.

Exhibit Of Home Products May Be Continued Next Year; 19 Firms Participate In Show Of Past Week

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 11) sance, that private loans made by German states and municipalities to German industry and business by foreigners represent some five billion dollars, of which possibly half came from this country. Those bonds or other securities now are held by American investors, having been marketed by the banking groups that carried through the transactions. The interest income from these securities plays its part in American purchasing power in Germany. Any political upheaval in Germany that upset those interest payments would have a direct effect on business conditions in the United States.

Would Destroy A Customer? Similarly such developments in Germany would, for a time at least, destroy Germany's power to buy in the American market. She is chiefly a customer for American farm products and other raw materials.

Added to the possibilities of a collapse of the German government would be the effect on American overseas trade, due to steps which might be taken by countries surrounding Germany to meet the situation. What those might be, or how they might further limit or disorganize existing American overseas markets, already at low ebb in consuming power, is merely a matter of speculation.

Added disruption of trade however would almost certainly, in the beginning at least, be reflected by more unemployment in this country.

Crisis Changes Aspect All these factors and many more enter into the situation with which the Washington government is attempting to deal through the proposal for a debt and reparations holiday.

Every congress and president from Wilson to Hoover has maintained that there is no connection whatever between the two, the United States not having demanded any reparations payments from Germany either in money or colonies.

Faced by the crisis in Germany which might even engulf the world again in war, however, President Hoover has been forced to accept the unavoidable economic relationship of debt and reparations in a time of world depression because of the grave threat contained in the German crisis of further peril to American business at home.

"It is highly probable that the Home-Manufactured Products Exhibit will be continued next year and on a larger scale," said C. T. Watson, manager of the Chamber of Commerce, the body which sponsored the exhibit which closed last night. Watson added that the affair this year had been planned on a larger scale than was affected, but last minute difficulties necessitated cutting down.

The exhibit was especially planned in view of getting the people of Big Spring to realize "What Big Spring Makes Big Spring." The exhibit was also staged to gauge the public's interest in such a matter and interest shown during the days the affair has been available to the public has given Watson the basis for his opinion that the matter will be continued and will grow.

"People who patronize home industries are building businesses that will turn money back into channels of local trade," stated Watson. "I believe people will consciously or unconsciously do that which is best for themselves and the other person. If they realize that it is best for them to trade with home industry, they are going to do it."

Nineteen local firms had exhibits entered in the exposition just ended. Each concern occupied a private booth and formed attractive layouts advertising their product matter and interest shown during the days the affair has been available to the public has given Watson the basis for his opinion that the

"Let us turn back a few pages and see if Big Spring has been given any publicity by having a band as an entertaining feature at conventions where, if you get in the picture, you must have something for the cameraman to shoot at."

"At the W. T. C. C. convention in Anasillo Big Spring band won second prize in the band contest in its class. Big Spring's band appeared on the front page of state newspapers before others."

"At Fort Worth's W. T. C. C. convention the news man gave Big Spring a big boost when he put on such a wonderful picture, showing our band, uniformed and all delegates on parade. The picture no doubt was shown in many show houses over the country."

"Can you attract so much attention without a musical organization?"

"We don't have to have our city to engage any musical talent. It is here. All there is to do is to develop it."

"I am sure all mothers and fathers are proud of the children when they are in parade and playing with some musical organization. Don't you think it is educational and elevating to place such an environment around them? Music will make them happy and will help you to forget some troubles of the day, if you have any."

"It puts pep in the young man on the football field when he comes to band playing. He'll beat the average all here. When he knows they are playing for him he will fight. What a wonderful presentation it would be in other towns if Big Spring high school would step out with a nice-uniformed band and pep squad on parade."

"At present Big Spring has a good band, and is called upon to play on many different occasions and it is always willing and ready to do its bit."

"Our local bandmaster has been holding rehearsals twice a week since last September without pay from anyone in the city. He buys and furnishes the music used by the Big Spring band."

"One of our neighbor towns has a band and people of that community are paying Mr. Hartman for his services as band master. As he is a resident of Big Spring he spends all his money here."

"Now we've had a round table discussion. Let's get out and do something."

"Here is my proposition: as I am only a working man I can't do much but here it is: 'I am going to challenge 10 other cities to let it be individuals, companies, lodges, clubs, business or professional men—any one that can do it.'"

"I will give $10 per month for a period of 12 months to keep and maintain a high school of municipal band in Big Spring."

"Also, I will give $10 to buy un-

New Nash Models Are Shown Here

New Nash models will be displayed in Big Spring for the first time Monday, according to an announcement Saturday by Walter Van Line, dealer. On Tuesday evening the Nash Company will inaugurate a series of radio broadcasts by Max Hendix and his band which has been selected as the official band of the 1933 World's Fair in Chicago. The program will be heard in Big Spring over WBAP at 7 o'clock.

Synchro-Safety-Shift is a combination, with spiral second gear, which makes speed operation simple and pleasant; completely sound-proof insulated bodies and chassis, and a remarkable new science of "silence engineering" throughout are features of major importance in the three straight-eight groups and the six-cylinder series.

Other essentials of driving luxury in the new Nash cars include complete insulation of the bodies against rumbling, squeaks, heat, cold and dust and the sound-proofing of chassis with live rubber insulation and cushioning.

Interior metal panels of the Nash bodies are covered with a thick plastic insulation. Insulating material is also applied to all panels where the stomach would meet the body. Body wood is treated to guard it permanently against rot and attacks of weather. New beauty of interior appointments and body lines mark all of the cars, which are designed with new V-type frames to accent their speed and low-swinging chassis.

The presentation of new straight-eight groups and the 600, series brings a fresh and powerful stimulus to the automobile manufacturing field at a time when renewed confidence and fundamental business building is vitally needed, in the opinion of experienced Nash Motors Chalmers officials. They believe the new cars will add materially to industrial confidence and to public interest in the manufactured products of the new economic age. The cars represent, they declare, the finest mechanical workmanship of its day and offer inherent qualities matched to the most rigid standards of value.

Home Town

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 11) ed or just plain away (the last is most rare) can always find plenty of reasons for giving the folks who happen to be in the exchange, married, positions hall Columbia, happy land.

Back to the band proposition. We hope to see some real results very soon from sentiment that appears to be spreading—the sentiment that Big Spring should have a good bandmaster before the rest of the world in the form of a band.

If we, as a community, have one big fault, it is provincialism. We live too much to ourselves. At time we are not cordial enough to strangers. Sometimes we may unconsciously make folks feel we'd rather they wouldn't fool around too much. We have a few folks who are afraid that if somebody else came to town he might accidentally happen to get in the radio business they are in and thus reduce our business. We forget that it is the man who works hard—keeps on his toes that can meet competition and, therefore, do a not need to fear.

After all, the better the town the better off everybody in business or on a salary that town is going to be.

We need to get about more, get out among folks of other towns, see what we have that they do not have and what they have that we lack.

Big Spring is the best town in the country, year in and year out. It's a living. Let's make it and keep it the best town in the country in which to live, year in and year out.
