

Jobless rate falls to four-year low

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civilian unemployment tumbled to 7.1 percent in June, the lowest in more than four years, as 460,000 Americans found jobs, the government reported today.

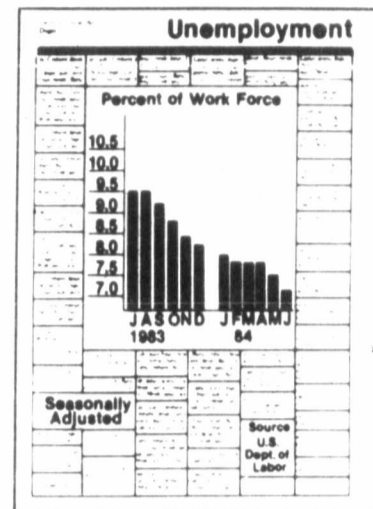

The 0.4 percentage point drop in the seasonally adjusted rate, the steepest plunge since unemployment fell from 8.8 percent to 8.4 percent from October to November last year, took this key economic indicator to its lowest ebb since April 1980.

At that time, unemployment stood at 6.9 percent.

Last month's good news from the Labor Department was spread across all population groups, with black Americans, whose unemployment has been more severe than that of whites, enjoying the strongest improvement.

An alternative unemployment rate, which combines the 113.8-million member civilian labor force with the 1.7 million members of the armed forces stationed in the United States, fell by a commensurate amount to 7.0 percent.

The total number of the civilian employed — 105,748,000 — was an all-time high. In June, the roster of those categorized as unemployed shrunk by 384,000 to 8,130,000.

In one negative note, the bureau reported that the ranks of the so-called "discouraged workers" remained unchanged at 1.3 million in the year's second quarter. Analysts noted, however, that this total was 500,000 below that recorded at the peak of the recession in the fourth quarter of 1982.

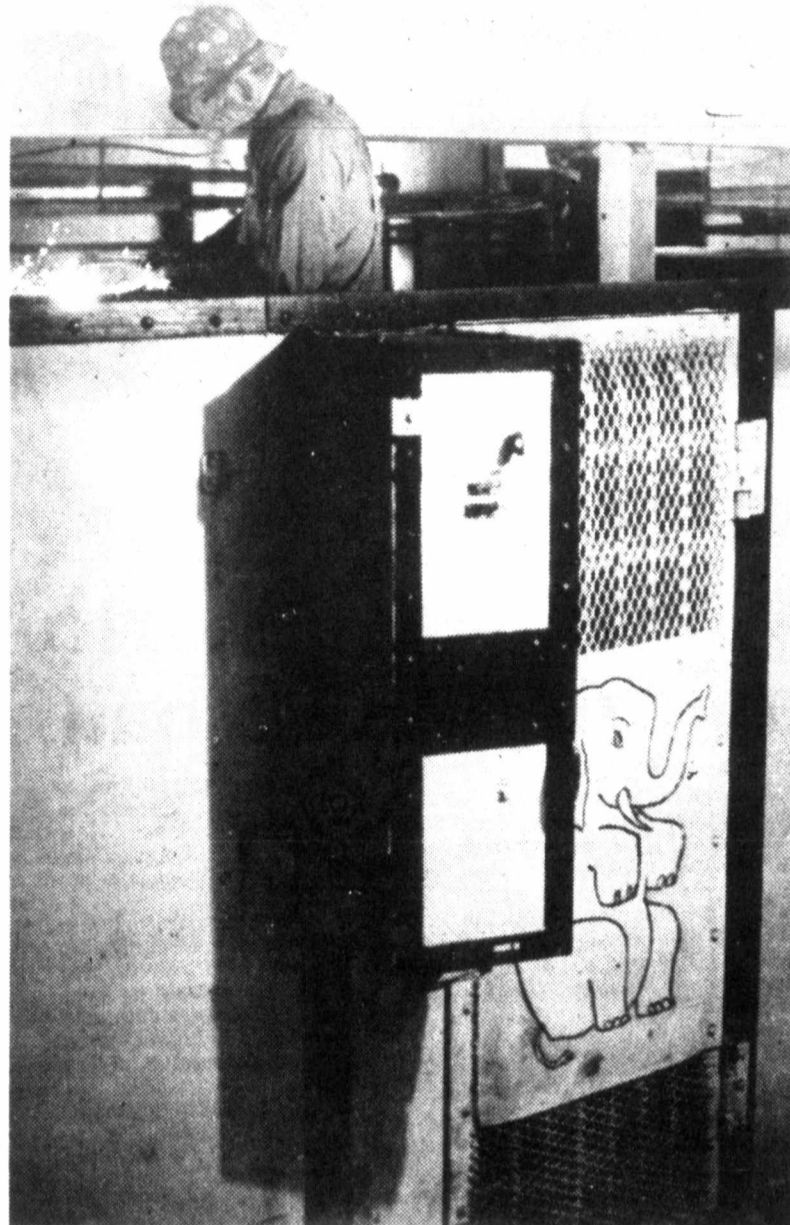

These "discouraged workers" are people shown by government surveys to have abandoned efforts to find jobs because they feel they cannot get work. This pocket of hard-core unemployed is not included in the monthly unemployment rate computation because they are not actively seeking jobs.

The latest employment report, however, was a bright one overall, confirming predictions by private economists and Reagan administration officials that unemployment would continue to recede despite a slow-down in the pace of the general economic recovery.

Treasury Secretary Donald Regan said last week that he felt joblessness could rally to perhaps 7 percent by the fourth quarter, but the newest figures show that the trend evidently is ahead of his prediction.

Opinion divided on latest court ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court's latest landmark decision is being hailed as "good common sense" by law enforcement authorities and political conservatives while liberals pan it as a crushing defeat for the individual rights of all Americans.

The court's 6-3 decision Thursday carved out for the first time a good faith exception to the 70-year-old "exclusionary rule" that bans illegally obtained evidence from criminal trials.

Closing out its 1983-84 term, the court said evidence seized by police with defective court warrants may be used at trial.

In other words, when judges or magistrates make mistakes that clear the way for police to violate someone's Fourth Amendment rights — and police reasonably rely on those court actions — the exclusionary rule generally should not come into play.

"Today's decision gives the American people a result we have sought for some time," Attorney General William French Smith said. "The court's decision will help restore respect for the criminal justice system by allowing the use of some of the most reliable and relevant evidence in the fact finding process."

Wayne Schmidt of Americans for Effective Law Enforcement praised the decision as "a return to good common sense."

But Barry Tarlow, a Los Angeles lawyer who helped represent the defendants in the California case used by the court to create its new exception, called Thursday "a sad day for every citizen who is concerned about individual rights and liberties."

"It is ironic that the death knell of the exclusionary rule comes the day after the Fourth of July," Tarlow said.

In fact, the decision is limited to those occasions in which police bother to get court warrants. But Justice Byron R. White's sweeping language in the court's majority opinion could lead lower courts to apply the decision to situations in which police acted in the reasonable — but wrong — opinion that no warrant was needed.

The exclusionary rule was first fashioned by the Supreme Court in 1914 as a means of deterring misconduct by law enforcement agents.

Although it is invoked in only a tiny fraction of all criminal cases, it has become a political lightning rod. For two decades, since he was a federal appeals court judge, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger has blamed the rule for coddling criminals.

Energas seeking rate hike

Energas Co. today notified Pampa and 62 other cities on its West Texas City Plant System that the company is filing for 7.7 percent increase in its general service rate for natural gas.

The company set Aug. 10 as the effective date for its rate hike for natural gas service to domestic and commercial customers. If the cities take no action, the rate change will automatically become effective on that date.

The average increase to a domestic customer on the basis of the proposed new rates would be 35.8 cents per thousand cubic feet (Mcf), or $3.57 for a monthly consumption of 10 Mcf. Energas officials indicated.

About 186,000 general service rate customers are affected in an area extending from Pampa, Hereford and Lubbock to Midland and Odessa. Customer classes not affected by the proposed increase would be industrial and large air conditioning classifications.

State law permits cities to suspend implementation of the new rates to allow time to study the request. Energas has suggested each city adopt a resolution to suspend the effective date for a period of 90 days beyond Aug. 10 for study by independent consultants.

Golden horseshoe is found

It was only a hunch that brought Doug Kidwell, Jr. into the office of Sheriff Rufe Jordan. But there it was, right under the sheriff's big western saddle. The Pampa Chamber of Commerce Golden Horseshoe.

The son of Doug and Judy Kidwell of Pampa, young Kidwell found the horseshoe on Clue 4: "My home can be a busy place, but hopefully not."

By finding the gold-painted horseshoe, Kidwell won box seat tickets for each night tickets to Pampa's Top 'O' Texas Rodeo, July 12-14, and will ride in a convertible in the Rodeo Parade July 14.

The Golden Horseshoe hunt was sponsored by Pampa merchants and the Top 'O' Texas Rodeo Association.

New head coach hired

Lefors principal resigns post

LEFORS — Trustees of the Lefors Independent School District accepted the resignation of the Lefors High School principal and hired a new head coach during a special called meeting Thursday night.

Allen Jenkins had sent the board a letter of resignation indicating he had accepted a position as principal of Central Elementary School at Borger.

Jenkins said in his letter he felt the new position was a career development step. He stated he had enjoyed his service at Lefors and had praise for Supt. Jimmy Collins and the school system.

The board accepted his resignation and then reviewed eight applications for the principal position.

Jenkins said he would be available until Aug. 1 to assist the new principal in becoming acquainted with matters at the school.

The board employed Randall Morrison as head coach for LHS. Morrison comes from Paradise Independent School District, where he had been serving as head basketball coach and assistant varsity football coach.

Morrison is a 1979 graduate of East Texas State University with a physical education and health degree and a degree in history.

Supt. Collins said Morrison probably would also be teaching two social studies classes in addition to his coaching duties.

In other matters, Supt. Collins said the board is "waiting for information to flow down" from the Legislature in regard to recently passed education reforms. He said the school needs to know more about exactly what all is involved in programs and funding before any changes can be implemented.

Work is progressing on construction of the new elementary school building, he reported.

"We're really happy with the way the new building is coming along," he said.

The concrete foundations have been laid and the basic utility pipes installed in the foundation. The next step is the erection of the steel girders for the building frame. Collins said. Sloped entrances are being provided to aid handicapped students.

Collins said the contractors have until March 1 to complete the building. But he hopes the building can be ready to move into during the second semester "if the good weather continues to hold," he said.

Board members will interview applicants for the high school principal position at 6 p.m. Thursday, July 12, before the regular board meeting at 7 p.m.

Dorchester granted another continuance in lawsuit trial

Dorchester Gas Producing Co. won its latest round Thursday in its continuing efforts to delay the trial of its lawsuit against the Harlow Corporation.

In a pretrial hearing in Amarillo yesterday, 100th District Judge Robert Montgomery granted a continuance of the trial to July 30.

Bob Templeton, a lawyer representing Dorchester in its suit over oil and gas rights, said the delay was needed to allow for the recovery of in-house Dorchester counsel Hubert Johnson from recent surgery.

Templeton said Johnson's counsel was essential to its presenting of material in the trial, now set for its fifth date since February.

Montgomery granted Dorchester's request but told lawyers the trial will begin July 30 in Lubbock with or without Johnson.

The new date will allow Dorchester and Harlow law teams to attend the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission hearing in Washington, D.C., beginning July 24 without the local trial creating problems of lawyers and witnesses from both sides needed at both places.

The Dorchester-Harlow trial was due to begin Monday in Lubbock.

Montgomery had granted a continuance request by Dorchester in Lubbock on June 19, but he had denied another Dorchester motion for continuance during a pretrial hearing in Amarillo on June 29.

Dorchester had requested a continuance until Sept. 10, but Judge Montgomery has indicated he wants the trial to begin earlier.

Harlow lawyers have objected to the continuances, claiming Dorchester has had two years to prepare its lawsuit. Dorchester has claimed it has needed the extra time to complete testing of two wells on Harlow's Beaver Lease and to take depositions.

The suit concerns conflicts over oil and gas rights in a 49,000-acre Panhandle oil and gas field located in parts of Gray and Carson Counties. The case is one of several between major gas companies and independent oil producers involving Panhandle fields.

The FERC hearing will consider claims by majors that 37 independents have been wrongly processing gas from the field wells and overcharging its prices.

Reagan brings attack on liberals to Texas

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — President Reagan, campaigning in one of the key battlegrounds of the 1984 presidential race, today accused liberal Democrats of trying to block his administration's policies but said, "Here's a flash from the Gipper — they're not going to win."

Opening a new assault against Democrats controlling the House of Representatives, Reagan said, "This is the same liberal leadership that has done nothing but stand in the way of initiatives the American people want and need."

In a speech billed by the White House as non-political but steeped in partisan rhetoric, Reagan addressed the Texas Bar Association convention in the hometown of Mayor Henry Cisneros, one of the half-dozen people interviewed by Walter Mondale, the likely Democratic presidential nominee, as a potential running mate. Reagan accused House Democrats of blocking action on a long-stalled package of anti-crime legislation, constitutional amendments requiring a balanced federal budget and allowing voluntary prayer in public schools, tuition tax credits and other economic programs.

"The liberals in the House can stand in the way again if they want to, just as they did when they opposed spending cuts and tax cuts, rebuilding our military strength or helping El Salvador and other nations resist totalitarian rule," Reagan said in his prepared text.

"But they didn't win then — and here's a flash from the Gipper — they're not going to win now."

It was a rare public mention by the president of a nickname he earned in his Hollywood days.

Storms leave Northeast area looking 'like a battleground'

By RON SIRAK
 Associated Press Writer

Power lines and trees were twisted in tangled knots today after thunderstorms packing 60 mph winds and unleashing up to 2 inches of rain in 90 minutes raked the Northeast, damaging dozens of homes and leaving parts of Pennsylvania looking "like a battleground."

Thunder and lightning also blasted its way across the Midwest, buffeting parts of Kansas, Nebraska, Illinois and Missouri with high winds and golf ball-size hail, the National Weather Service said.

Four people were killed Thursday in a plane crash near Winchester, Ind., that authorities said may have been caused by lightning striking the twin-engine craft.

Rains continued in the Northeast this morning, while heavy thunderstorms hammered away at south-central and southeastern Kansas and parts of northeast Missouri and western Illinois.

Experts in Massachusetts and Pennsylvania were to take a look at damaged buildings to determine if the destruction Thursday night was caused by tornadoes, as reported by residents.

"These are the kinds of storms summer brings," said Harry Gordon on the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo. "It rained last night and continued today from New England into Georgia and along another band from Wisconsin into New Mexico," he said.

A series of storms slammed into eastern Pennsylvania, damaging more than two dozen homes Thursday, authorities said.

At least 17 homes were damaged by high winds in Lehigh County, Civil Defense Director Jerry Duckett said.

"It looked like a battleground," Duckett said. "Trees were uprooted, branches down, wires were down all over. It runs from minor damage to complete roofs taken off."

In Berks County, several mobile homes were demolished and at least six homes were damaged, according to Robert Reber of the county Emergency Center.

"Some areas we can't even get into because of roads blocked with fallen trees and water," Reber said. "We know there's more damage because there's houses in there and they were right in the path."

Experts won't be able to determine until they examine debris today if the damage was done by tornadoes or powerful "down rushes," Gordon Tait of the National Weather Service said.

The storms carried winds of up to 60 mph and dumped 2 inches of rain on Philadelphia in 90 minutes, Tait said.

Power lines serving 7,000 customers were knocked out by the storms and crews worked through the night to try to restore service, a spokesman for Pennsylvania Power and Light said.

Another 7,000 people were without power for a while in northern New Jersey after heavy thunderstorms rumbled through, Art Lenehan, a spokesman for Public Service Electric & Gas said. An elderly couple in Hampton Township were hospitalized after both suffered burns when their mobile homes was hit by lightning, police said.

The weather service issued a flood warning for today along the Saddle River at Lodi, N.J.

Rodeo's banners going up Saturday

Banners for the 38th annual Top of Texas Rodeo will be going up starting Saturday.

Wayne Stribling, president of the Top of Texas Rodeo Association, said several of the banners have been stolen or vandalized in the past.

"These banners are private property, and any theft or vandalism is a crime," Stribling said.

Stribling said the association wants to let violators know they will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

"The rodeo banners that are paid for and displayed by area merchants add a great deal to our rodeo celebration," he said. "Crimes such as theft or vandalism ruin the activities for everyone."

The rodeo activities will kick off with the Kid Pony Show, with performances slated at 7 p.m. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The professional rodeo performances will begin at 8 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Tickets may be purchased from various local merchants, the Rodeo Office at the Pampa Chamber of Commerce or at the gates of the arena.

Oklahoma taking over probe of body found in Wheeler

Oklahoma authorities will take over an investigation into the murder of a convenience store clerk who was kidnapped from a Clinton, Okla., store and found shot to death one week later in rural Wheeler County, Texas authorities said.

Elma Hall, 46, of Clinton, disappeared early June 28 from the Clinton convenience store where she worked. A customer called police about the unattended Love's store about 2 a.m. on the morning of the disappearance.

Clinton Police Chief Jay Green has said Hall was the victim of an apparent robbery-kidnapping. About $200 and the clerk were missing from the store, he said.

The store clerk's badly decomposed body turned up in Wheeler County about 14 miles northwest of Shamrock. She had been shot in the head twice.

A ranchhand found the murder victim about 1:30 p.m. Wednesday. She was fully clothed. She was dumped face down on a blanket among a thick stand of trees in the isolated area. The scene is near a dirt road and about three miles northeast of Interstate 40.

An autopsy performed by pathologist Dr. Ralph Erdmann on Wednesday revealed that the woman was shot to death several hours before she was dumped at the Wheeler County site. It indicated the victim died about a week ago, indicating Hall was killed near the time of her June 28 disappearance.

Texas Ranger Bill Baten of Pampa, the Wheeler County Sheriff and the Shamrock Police Department have investigated the case along with the Clinton Police Department and the Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation.

Wheeler deputy Gary Davis said the case was turned over to the Oklahoma officials because those authorities have evidence that the killing took place in Oklahoma. The rural Texas location just off of I-40 probably served only as a dumping ground, he said.

"It is Oklahoma's, right now," Davis said Thursday.

No identification was found on the body, and authorities reportedly have had difficulty finding Hall's fingerprints on file, preventing officials from making a "positive" identification. However, Chief Green said this morning that the woman's family was able to identify the victim's clothing and a set of rings, a watch and an earring taken from the body. The family, which includes Hall's husband, children and grandchildren, has made funeral arrangements for the murder victim, the chief said.

Green said that Clinton police have made no arrests in the case. They do have suspects, the chief said, but declined to elaborate. He said there were no known witnesses to the robbery-kidnapping or the murder.

Mondale advised to discontinue interviews and start campaigning

NORTH OAKS, Minn. (AP) — Walter F. Mondale's parade of vice presidential prospects lengthens today, even as New York Gov. Mario Cuomo publicly advises the apparent Democratic presidential nominee to bring the procession to a halt and pick his running mate.

With a morning session, Kentucky Gov. Martha Layne Collins becomes the seventh person — and the third woman — that Mondale has interviewed at his Minnesota home. The others include two black men, a Hispanic man and one white man.

Mondale aides said no other interviews are scheduled. But Mondale has left the door open to name someone, such as presidential rival Gary Hart, who has not come to Minnesota for an interview.

Cuomo said Thursday that the well-publicized search for a vice presidential candidate and the resulting pressures from various interest groups is distracting the Democratic Party at a time when it should be uniting for the fall campaign against President Reagan.

Cuomo delivered his opinion in person in a meeting with Mondale in Boston.

Mondale had flown east for the day to attend a fund-raiser which brought his campaign $225,000.

Before Cuomo arrived, Mondale said, "I hope to have my decision made by the time the convention convenes."

Cuomo will deliver the keynote address at the Democratic National Convention, which opens in San Francisco in 10 days, and some party leaders have touted Cuomo as a possible running mate for Mondale.

But the governor repeatedly has insisted that he intends to serve out his term as New York's chief executive.

Hart, still holding out hope for the presidential nomination, said Thursday that he is considering more than 25 people as potential vice presidential running mates.

GETTING READY—Many shrimpers were taken by surprise when the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department ended the closure of the Texas Gulf water shrimping season eight days earlier than planned. Shrimp boats to head for open seas again

PORT ISABEL, Texas (AP) — Fred Gonzalez, captain of the Princess Patricia anchored here on the ship channel, plans to head for the open sea this afternoon.

Shrimp season officially begins today, 30 minutes after sunset. And Gonzalez knows exactly where he is heading.

"We always go to the same spot every year, off Mansfield and south. It's the best for the first couple of nights," said Gonzalez, whose trawler was one of more than 20 shrimp boats resting in port here Thursday.

The Port Isabel captain said he will know how well the shrimping season will be during the upcoming 10-month season by the first day's catch.

"It all depends on your luck. If you have good shrimp in the opening day, you've got the year made," he said. "The first 24 hours tells you how it's going to be."

Five shrimpers left Port Isabel on Thursday, to rest at sea before the season begins, Gonzalez said.

"They anchor out in the Gulf. You try to rest around here, but you always run around doing things," he added.

The waiting period for many shrimpers was taken up with stocking supplies, mending nets and other last-minute preparations, including one last Catholic mass on the mainland.

The Rev. Ben Verbrugge of Our Lady Star of the Sea Church in Port Isabel held a Mass for the shrimpers at 7 p.m. Thursday.

Following the Mass, the Roman Catholic priest blessed the ships of those shrimpers who requested the additional service.

Gonzalez said he always stays out in the ocean for at least 30 days. On this trip, he will have a four-man crew.

"You usually have five people aboard, including the captain, this time of year," he said. The captain and two crewmen work the boat during the winter, he added.

In addition to the captain, who is responsible for both the vessel and the cargo of shrimp, a "rig man" operates a wench to pull the 36-foot long shrimp nets out of the ocean, and a "header" is in charge of decapitating the shrimp and miscellaneous chores on board the vessel, he said.

Despite the different titles, Gonzalez said everyone on board takes part in the different jobs. "Everybody heads and everybody helps with the wench."

The Princess Patricia is a freezer boat with the capacity to hold 13,000 pounds of shrimp, but Gonzalez said he averages about 1,000 pounds of shrimp.

The remaining room in the ship's freezer is taken up with ice. "If you can take ice with you, it's very helpful this time of year," he added.

River drops, so does business

NEW BRAUNFELS, Texas (AP) — After wrangling for months with a severe drought, the Lower Guadalupe Business Association is taking steps to stimulate river activity and restore tourism that has dwindled to a trickle.

The association plans to purchase 500 acre feet of water from Canyon Lake this weekend.

The $5,400 worth of water will be let into the Guadalupe beginning midnight tonight.

A severe drought that has plagued many areas of the state for several months, took its toll over the Independence Day holiday as river recreation businesses experienced a drastic slump.

"On a normal Fourth of July, we make about $2,000 to $2,500 a day," said Dave McDermott, owner of Gruene River Co. along the Guadalupe River. "Today, we made $20."

McDermott said that only two customers showed up on the Fourth of July. In normal years, 200 to 300 customers usually turn out, he said.

The dry spell also deterred crowds on the Comal River Tube Chute. "Today, it's not even like a normal Fourth of July," chute manager Ann Celli said Wednesday. "It's been terrible. I'd say we're down 75 percent."

Sheriff: disappearance may be hoax

MADISONVILLE, Texas (AP) — A bullet-riddled, bloodied van belonging to an East Texas man identified as a key witness in an investigation of Texas' prison system may be part of a hoax, a sheriff investigating the case says.

Madison County Sheriff Ed Fannin said Thursday he believes James Rodney Pitts, 37, of Palestine may have tried to stage his own murder Tuesday by leaving the vehicle in a roadside park six miles north of here — about 60 miles southwest of his hometown.

"My personal opinion is that I think he skipped the country," Fannin said. He said the shooting of the van "could be his doings also."

Fannin said he was hoping tests of the blood found in the van would be returned today.

Asked why Pitts might do such a thing, Fannin said, "He's in trouble. And the more I've looked into it the more trouble I find him in."

"It's been a devil of a thing for us but it sure looks like a set-up deal now," said Fannin after learning Pitts cashed a $2,000 payroll check at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday at the Elkhart State Bank in Elkhart, 10 miles south of Palestine.

Fannin also said drivers and customers at a truck stop reported seeing a man who looked like Pitts walking about six miles south of where his van was found.

Pitts, a former construction superintendent for the Texas Department of Corrections, promised to cooperate in investigations of the state prison system's handling of construction contracts, state Attorney General Jim Mattox said Monday.

Pitts also agreed to pay $25,000 in damages for conspiring to circumvent state bidding procedures, the attorney general said.

Houston Post reporter Fred King, who interviewed Pitts Tuesday afternoon in a restaurant in Madisonville, about 65 miles southwest of Palestine, said in an article in Thursday's editions that Pitts said he had told the attorney general's office not to reveal his cooperation in the investigation until others had appeared in court.

Pitts "gaped when he learned Mattox had revealed his agreement to cooperate and expressed fear for his life and his family," the Post said.

But Elna Christopher, a spokeswoman for Mattox, said Thursday that Pitts and the attorney general had no such agreement.

"He (Pitts) knew all along, and indicated to our attorney that he wanted people to know he was cooperating so he 'could put this all behind him,'" Ms. Christopher said. "This (cooperation) is one of two terms in the settlement agreement. The other is the $25,000."

Ms. Christopher said the attorney general's office would work with authorities to find Pitts.

"We'd like to know if he is alive, where he is," she said. "If somebody's done something to him, we want to know who did it."

A bullet had been fired through the driver's side of the windshield, the rear passenger seat and left rear window, and lead fragments in the back of the driver's seat — and blood — show a person could not have been seated erect in the driver's seat when the bullet was fired, Fannin said.

Blood was on the side of the driver's seat, console and driver's side window, but investigators found no splashes that a bullet would make leaving a body, Fannin said.

Mrs. Pitts said she doubted her husband would stage a shooting. "I'll whip him if he did," she said. "He would had to have cracked to do that."

Punishment phase enters second day in Spence trial

WACO, Texas (AP) — A psychiatrist was on standby to describe the mental stability of David Wayne Spence as the punishment phase of Spence's murder trial entered its second day today, with prosecutors seeking the death penalty.

Spence, 25, was found guilty Tuesday of capital murder in the slaying of 17-year-old Jill Montgomery of Waxahachie, who was killed July 13, 1982 and found the following day in a park near Lake Waco.

Jurors could begin deliberating Spence's punishment late today.

The stabbed and mutilated bodies of two other teen-agers — Raylene Rice, 17, also of Waxahachie, and Kenneth Franks, 18, of Waco — were also found.

Spence has been charged but has not stood trial in the deaths of the two other teen-agers. He faces life in prison or death by injection for Miss Montgomery's death.

State District Judge George Allen was expected to decide whether or not to admit the testimony of Waco psychiatrist James Jolliff, Jolliff, who interviewed Spence in April of 1983, said out of the presence of jurors that Spence had asked whether the psychiatrist thought the suspect had a split personality.

On Thursday, a 19-year-old woman from Waco testified that she was bitten and raped by the convicted killer after he threatened her with a knife.

Prosecutors also called to the stand a 19-year-old Waco man, who was assaulted and sexually abused by Spence and Gilbert Melendez in September 1982, to testify.

Spence was sentenced in March 1983 to 90 years in prison for aggravated sexual abuse in that crime. Melendez, 29, also a defendant in the Lake Waco killings, pleaded guilty to the sexual abuse charge and was sentenced to seven years in prison.

Prosecutors during the two-week trial called witnesses who testified that bite marks found on the bodies of Miss Montgomery and Miss Rice matched Spence's dental pattern.

During the first day of the punishment phase, the Waco woman said she was raped in a city park in August 1982 by Spence, who insisted she call him "Chili," his street name.

"He said, 'You be good to Chili and Chili will be good to you,'" she testified. She said she did not report the rape for about two weeks because she was afraid of retribution.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Time for U.S. to disengage?

In 1960, Henry Kissinger said, "We lack a strategic doctrine and a coherent military policy." In the spring 1984 issue of Public Interest Quarterly, one of his students, Harvard Professor Eliot Cohen, makes a persuasive case that: "Today, even more than then, American defense policy faces the problem Kissinger capture in the title of that remarkable book - the necessity for choice."

That "choice" is whether we are prepared, on the one hand to increase our tax burden to sustain our present global foreign and defense policy commitments, or to reduce those commitments dramatically. This "choice" has been forced on us by our national decision to double government spending on social programs, while trying to keep our federal tax burden at about the same level.

In 1962, when everyone agrees we had our strongest defense posture, we spent 9 percent of GNP on defense, and only 6 percent on federal social programs, with a 19-percent tax burden. By 1981, defense spending was down to 5 percent of GNP, while social spending was up to 12 percent, and total federal spending to 23 percent with a 21-percent tax burden.

President Reagan's decision to lower tax rates to 1962 levels, while expanding defense spending, without really significant cuts in social spending (still 12 percent of GNP) produced the deficit crisis. Even so, Reagan's defense spending is still only 6.5 percent of GNP, well BELOW the 9 percent of the Kennedy years.

So, unless we are prepared to increase the federal tax burden by $100 billion and cut social spending by another $50 billion, we cannot afford the military build-up our world commitments now demand. This is why Professor Earl Ravenal of Georgetown University, a former Pentagon official, thinks it's time to "disengage."

In a thoughtful and readable 47-page monograph, "Defining Defense," written for the libertarian CATO Institute, Ravenal makes a case that we have no choice but to change our defense and foreign policy: "The framework of deterrence and alliance is increasingly unstable, because its foundations are being eroded by objective factors in the world, and in the American domestic system."

These "objective factors" include on the international scene, "an increasing diffusion of power, frustrating American intervention," and on the domestic front, "revolts against taxes and conscription..."

The most serious "objective factor" is that 80 percent of our present budget goes for conventional forces, military divisions, tactical air wings, and carrier force attack groups to support commitments to Asia, Europe and the Persian Gulf. Each tactical air wing costs us $2.1 billion a year to maintain; each division $4.8 million; each "forward-deployed" carrier group $13 billion, when you count all the protective and supportive ships manpower and back-ups needed.

Unfortunately, we cannot even fulfill our present global commitments with the $231 billion now earmarked for seventeen divisions, forty-two tactical air groups and thirteen carrier groups.

Thus, Ravenal argues, "Both of the cardinal elements of the present American strategic paradigm would have to change. Instead of deterrence and alliance, we would pursue war-avoidance and self-reliance."

"Self-reliance" in Ravenal's eyes would be a deliberate process of disengaging from Europe and Asia: "Actually, Europe could go quite far toward defending itself without American help. If the U.S. were to withdraw (from NATO) the principal European countries would probably increase their defense spending gradually... to 5 or 6 percent of GNP." This would allow us to reduce our conventional forces by about 50 percent.

Ravenal would change nuclear deterrence into "war-avoidance" by two policy decisions: First, he would "eliminate land-based missile systems as they become even theoretically vulnerable to a Soviet preemptive strike," and replace them with "a diad of strategic nuclear forces: missile-carrying submarines, and bombers armed with medium-range air-launched cruise missiles," all aimed not at the Soviet nuclear missiles, but at "a list of some 3,000 military targets, such as naval and air bases."

Then, to break the cycle of conventional war escalation, Ravenal proposes that we "impose upon ourselves an unconditional doctrine of no first use of nuclear weapons." The effect of this approach, he argues would give us "crisis stability" in a "principled policy of nonintervention," in which we would "protect our security by reducing vulnerabilities to the practical minimum..."

Ravenal freely admits that in this "fortress America" approach, "there may be disorder in the world, but we are compensated by the fact that we are not implicated in it."

This basic policy change could cut the present $291-billion budget authority to $154 billion, a 47-percent reduction by freezing military spending at current dollar levels for ten years.

We find it difficult to accept Ravenal's vacating the present world scene to Soviet hegemony. On the other hand, he forces us to realize we cannot afford our present defense commitments, unless we tax ourselves more heavily, or cut social spending more drastically, than we so far have been willing to do.

Unnecessary laws sustain the mob

The government is once again gearing up to sear us all to death about organized crime. Is this one more effort to divert our attention from noticing that, as Mark Twain once observed, the only genuinely criminal class in this country is Congress?

Each new administration believes it hasn't done its duty unless it has launched an expensive effort to tut-tut about organized crime. The Reagan version is an 18-member commission (is this one Blue Ribbon?) that will hold hearings for two years, issue reams of press releases, produce voluminous studies and make suggestions that will be ignored or ineffective or both.

This effort, like the previous efforts, will be serious. President Reagan has said that "the time has come for all of us to assist in the flight to break the power of the mob in America."

It can be predicted that the commission will ignore the one step that would most effectively break the back of organized crime; repealing laws against acts for which no specific victim can be identified.

There always has been crime, and as long as societies make rules, some will break them. Organized crime in America gained a foothold during our failed experiment with prohibition. Laws against liquor were predictably ineffective, converting otherwise law-abiding citizens who wished to continue doing something that didn't harm anyone else into instant criminals. An underworld quickly grew to meet the demand for an item government had banned.

Once it got its foothold, organized crime branched into activities banned by government that consenting adults did not view as harmful to others or inherently involving a victim: chiefly, gambling, narcotics and prostitution. It is the laws against these activities that breathe life into organized crime, and will so long as the laws exist.

There is little question that mob activities often involve violence, murder, intimidation and harassment. This is partly because banning certain activities or substances makes them expensive—a great deal of money is at stake—and partly because some people tend toward criminal activities.

Repealing laws against victimless crimes, thus focusing attention on real crime like fraud and violence, would reduce the power of organized crime and reduce the level of violence in our society.

We suspect we will wait a long time before any presidential commission recommends such a sensible step.

The most frightening words

The most frightening words in the English language are, "Our computer is down." You hear it more and more as you go about trying to conduct your business.

The other day I was at the airport attempting to buy a ticket to Washington and the attendant said, "I'm sorry, I can't sell you a ticket. Our computer is down."

"What do you mean your computer is down? Is it depressed?"

"No it can't be depressed. That's why it's down."

"So if our computer is down just write me out a ticket."

"I can't write you out a ticket. The computer is the only one allowed to issue tickets on the plane." I looked down the computer and every passenger agent was just standing there drinking coffee and staring into a blank screen.

"What do all you people do?"

"We give the computer the information about your trip, and then it tells us whether you can fly with us or not."

"So when it goes down, you go down with it."

"That's very good, sir. I haven't heard it put that way before."

"How long will the computer be down?" I wanted to know.

"I have no idea. Sometimes it's down for 10 minutes, sometimes for two hours. There is no way we can find out without asking the computer, and since it's down it won't answer us."

"Don't you have a backup computer, when the main computer goes down?"

"I doubt it. Do you know what one of these things costs?"

"Let's forget the computer. What about your planes? They're still flying, aren't they?"

"I couldn't tell without asking the computer, and as I told you..."

"I know, it's down. Maybe I could just go to the gate and ask the pilot if he's flying to Washington," I suggested.

"I wouldn't know what gate to send you to."

"I'll try them all," I said.

"Even if the pilot was going to Washington, he couldn't take you if you didn't have a ticket."

"Why don't I give you the money and you could give me a receipt and I could show that to the pilot as proof that I paid?"

"We wouldn't know what to charge you. The computer is the only one who keeps track of air fares because they change every hour."

"How about my credit card?"

"That's even worse. When our computer is down it can't notify the credit card computer to charge the fare to your account."

"Is there any other airline flying to Washington within the next few hours?"

"I wouldn't know," he said, pointing at the dark screen. "Only 'IT' knows."

"And at the moment 'IT' don't know nothing."

"IT' knows it," he said defensively. "IT' just can't tell me."

By this time there were quite a few people standing in lines. The word soon spread to other travelers that "the computer was down." Nobody knew exactly what this meant, but some people went white, some people started to cry, and still others kicked their luggage.

A man in a red blazer came out. "Please don't get excited. Wichita has been notified."

"What's Wichita got to do with it?" I asked.

"That's where our main computer went down. But as soon as it gets over its glitch, it's going to buy everyone who missed his plane a free drink."

WRITES OWN TICKET—Ladonna Jones, 11, of Lewisville, wrote superstar Michael Jackson last week complaining that she couldn't afford to attend one of his Dallas concerts despite saving almost $30 for a ticket because tickets must be purchased in lots of four. After Jackson mentioned her name at a news conference Thursday in Kansas City, Miss Jones was told she would be allowed to attend. (AP Laserphoto)

Texas girl writes her own ticket to concert

DALLAS (AP) — A young Texas girl who worked odd jobs to earn money to buy a Michael Jackson concert ticket only to find that she was $100 short, may get to see the superstar perform after all.

Promoters of the Jackson concert, scheduled for July 13-15 at Texas stadium in Irving, told a Dallas radio station that 11-year-old Ladonna Jones will get her wish to attend one of the three concerts.

"They said they would guarantee that she will see one of the performances," said Bob Morrison of KVIL radio.

The sixth-grade girl wrote Jackson last week telling him she was disappointed that despite hard work to save $30, she still couldn't attend one of the concert dates in nearby Irving because tickets had to be purchased in blocks of four at a cost of $120.

In a news conference Thursday in Kansas City, Jackson mentioned the girl's name and predicament, saying he asked promoters to work out a new way of distributing tickets. Jackson said he asked that the present money-order system requiring purchase of four $30-dollar tickets be changed.

Miss Jones, from the Dallas suburb of Lewisville, told Jackson in her letter that she had saved nearly enough for one ticket working odd jobs.

"I told him I had done babysitting, cleaning houses for people and laundry. I had saved about $20 to $25. But that was before I found out you had to buy four," the sixth grader said.

"I wanted Michael Jackson to feel it wasn't fair for the ones who couldn't afford the $120," she said. "I was really disappointed that I couldn't go."

The little girl said she watched Jackson's news conference on television and was "excited he said my name."

"I'd really like to meet Michael Jackson in person. I'd like to see him when he comes," the young girl said.

De la Madrid denies any distance between government and workers

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Despite calls for prosecution of a clique of powerful oil union leaders, President Miguel de la Madrid went into the center of their activity and said there is no distance between workers and the government.

"We are part of the same system and allied in the revolution," the president said in Ciudad Madero. "We are going to continue struggling and to show that there will not be any maneuvers, intrigues or slanders that might distance workers and their unions from the government of the revolution."

De la Madrid spoke before more than 10,000 members of the Mexican Oil Workers Union. His stop Wednesday in Ciudad Madero, on the Gulf of Mexico just north of Tampico, was part of a two-day tour of the northeastern border state of Tamaulipas.

The 190,000 member union is the strongest and wealthiest labor group in Mexico. Its operations are critical to the continued flow of petroleum, which by far is the No. 1 source of dollars badly needed to meet payments on the country's massive $87 billion foreign debt.

Dissident worker groups and politicians have called for an investigation into allegations that union leaders siphoned off millions of Mexico's petroleum dollars. Although none of the allegations mention how much money might have been lost to corruption, more than $50 million a day entered Mexico from oil sales abroad during the height of the oil boom in 1981.

De la Madrid took office in December 1982 promising a campaign of "moral renewal" to rid the country of endemic corruption. His willingness to investigate the oil workers union is considered a test of how far he is willing to push the campaign.

At a news conference earlier this year, the president was asked if the government has any intention of investigating oil worker union leaders Joaquin Hernandez Galicia or Salvadoran Barragan Camacho.

"In any case, and without referring to specific cases, when there are adequately based denunciations before the authorities, with impartial and objectively carried out investigations, the corresponding decisions will be taken," de la Madrid replied.

Nun starts a jogging habit

DALLAS (AP) — With her new $35 track shoes, stereo headphones and sweatshirt, Andrea Lacosta looks like anyone else who's hooked by the jogging habit. The only thing different is, well, her habit.

Sister Andrea Lacosta — a jogging nun — has been running regularly in her white habit for about a year.

"I think it's a very calming thing," said Sister Andrea, who has been one of the Daughters of Charity of St. Vincent dePaul for 40 years. "I can think about a lot of things spiritual and otherwise... It gives me a good feeling to know that I've done some exercise, that I've accomplished something."

The 59-year-old nun started running after she became conscious of her weight while watching slides of herself working as a volunteer at St. Paul's Hospital.

She weighed 171 pounds then. Sister Andrea said jogging has now cut her weight more than 50 pounds.

"I was afraid to run with all that extra weight," she said.

The registered nurse, who works as a management analyst at the hospital, visited a doctor who treats obesity. She started a diet and began walking briskly each day.

Sister Andrea said motorists used to stop and gaze at her along the jogging route.

"Now they're pretty used to me," she said. "Sometimes, a car will slow down to watch. Usually, I wave and they smile and wave."

Dear Abby

Woman figures she's a dummy when simple math stumps her

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: So you think you've heard it all? Well, please don't make a face or roll your eyes up into your head when you find out what I want. First off, I am no dummy, but there are times when I think I am. There may be others who suffer from the same problem. If so, you may print this, but for heaven's sake don't use my name.

I am a 22-year-old married woman who is absolutely stupid when it comes to math! I can count money, and if I take my time I can figure out how much to tip, but if I'm in a big hurry I draw a complete blank! Recently I went to a sale where all merchandise was marked 25 percent off, and I felt like a fool because I couldn't figure how much I'd have to pay for a dress marked $110.

I know they offer classes for people who are illiterate, but how about people who need to learn math from the bottom up? I'm ashamed to admit I need that kind of help. (Nobody would believe it.)

PENNSYLVANIA DUMMY

DEAR PENNSYLVANIA: I wouldn't call anyone a "dummy" who recognizes a problem and seeks to solve it. Call your county department of public education and explain your need to learn math "from the bottom up." Inquire about adult education classes and private tutoring, and your problem should be as simple to solve as adding 2 and 2. (It figures.)

DEAR ABBY: I've followed your Fat Fannie Panty Hose comments with amusement and feel it is my duty to share with you one more use for old panty hose—Fat Fannie or otherwise.

I cut the leg portion into three pieces, and use them to tie up my tomato plants. The stretchy material doesn't "bite" into the stem as the plant continues to grow.

IRENE IN COLUMBUS

DEAR IRENE: Thanks for an idea tomato growers will dig.

Panty hose were created for "tomatoes" in the first place.

DEAR ABBY: "Animal Lover's" letter suggesting caution in giving dogs to new owners by way of want ads brought to mind a story I heard.

There was this sicko who collected kittens—he answered ads reading "Free to good home." Upon investigation, it was found that he collected kittens to feed to his pet boa constrictor!

How can we protect these helpless creatures?

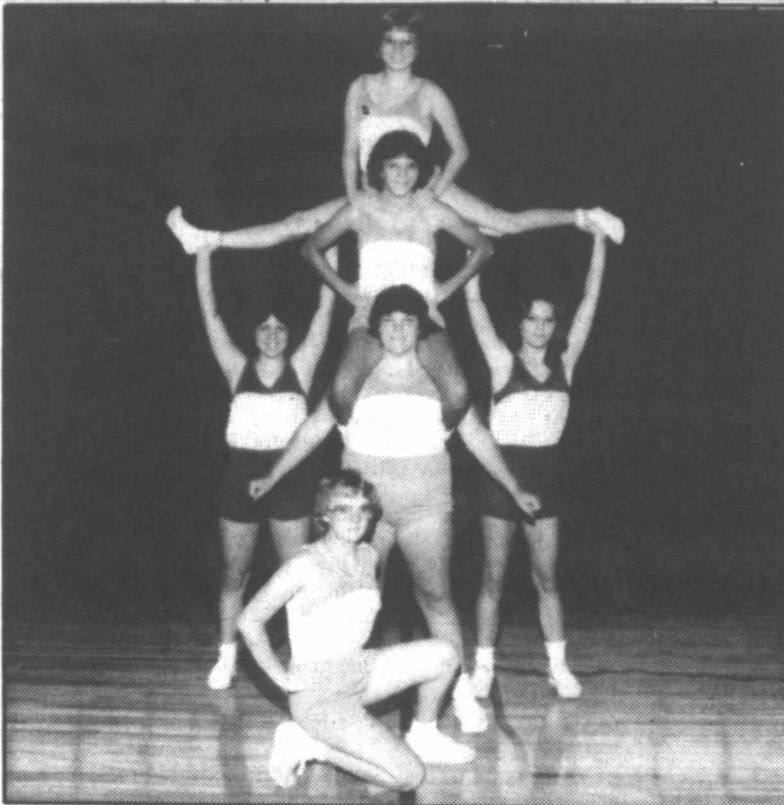

ANOTHER ANIMAL LOVER

DEAR LOVER: Never give more than one pet to a person. And before giving the "helpless creature" away, be sure to tell the prospective owner that you will be dropping by from time to time to see how the little fellow is getting along.

CONFIDENTIAL TO OLDTIMER IN PASADENA: Before you put down the youth of today, read this: "Our youth now love luxury. They have bad manners, contempt for authority; they show disrespect for their elders, and love chatter in places of exercise. They no longer rise when elders enter the room. They contradict their parents, chatter before company, gobble up their food and tyrannize their teachers."

Socrates wrote that in the fifth century B.C.

Volunteers recognized

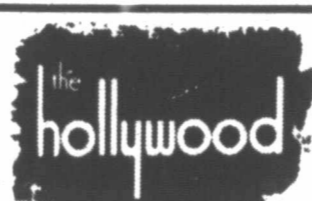

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — For many retirees, volunteer work is its own reward. But a "Second Wind Hall of Fame" offers further recognition.

"We give awards to a very wide variety of types of volunteers," said the Rev. Charles V. Covell, president of the award organization with headquarters in Hendersonville, 100 miles west of Charlotte.

Recipients, who must be age 60 or over, are nominated by church groups, crafts organizations, chambers of commerce, women's clubs, garden clubs, Little Theater groups, historical societies and service clubs such as Lions or Rotary Club.

"It's not for anything done before retirement," said Covell, 75, who received his Second Wind award for his work with the local mental health association.

Once there are five recipients in a community, they can form a chapter.

Record event with child's birth record

By APRIL BAIL
I'm firmly convinced that half the population of adult females is now pregnant. It's beyond me why anyone would voluntarily carry around an extra 25 or 30 pounds in 100-degree weather, especially when everyone else is making a mad dash for the lake or nearest swimming pool.

I'm not knocking the cause; in fact, I've done it a few times, myself. It's just that having a baby is a trying event at best, and should be acknowledged with style. The child's birth record is a terrific way to save that special moment for posterity.

The child's birth record features an adorable baby made from stuffed pantyhose, with soft-sculpted facial features, tucked snugly in a delicate eyelet-trim bassinet. The bassinet and embroidered birth announcement are framed in fabric covered embroidery hoop.

This project is as fun to make as it is easy, using our fully-illustrated plans. They include a complete materials list and step-by-step sewing and soft-sculpting instructions.

If you would like to receive plans for the Child's Birth Record, simply specify Project No. 1307-4 and send $3.95. Mail your order to: Kid's Stuff, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 159, Bixby, Okla., 74008.

Begin by stretching colorful print fabric over a 12-inch diameter embroidery hoop. The bassinet consists of tree tiers of eyelet trim, formed by five separate lengths. Whipstitch the eyelet to the hooped fabric, following the curves and centering the eyelet at the bottom.

To make the hood of the bassinet, stuff a portion of white nylon hose with fiberfill, forming a small half-circle. Use a long needle and heavy duty thread to section off the hood, and cover the straight edge with eyelet trim. Whipstitch the hood to the tiered eyelet trim and add a colorful ribbon bow.

Stuff a small portion of nylon hose to form the baby's head and body. Soft-sculpt the facial features and whipstitch the baby to the inside of the bassinet.

The rectangular birth announcement features a lace border and embroidered message. Hand tack the announcement above the bassinet and add colorful ribbons. Finish the project by gluing eyelet trim to the back edge of the hoop, and by covering the tightening screw on the hoop with a ribbon bow.

Gena on Genealogy

By GENA WALLS

The annual Family History and Genealogical Research Conference sponsored by Brigham Young University, Provo, Utah, is scheduled for July 31 - Aug. 3. The theme this year is "Broadening Genealogical Horizons" and classes are designed to the needs of all interested persons - from beginners to advanced and including a sub-seminar for professional genealogists. Topics range from new perspectives on family history research, publishing and to the new computer programs.

Another feature is to be field trips to the Genealogical Library in Salt Lake City. This is an excellent way for "first timers" to visit this facility and take advantage of the general orientation provided by the Genealogical Society and will include a library tour. If you choose not to take this tour, plan to use the genealogical library at the university. The library is open from 7 a.m. until 11 p.m., allowing time before and after the conference class sessions for you to take advantage of that material.

Does taking notes present a problem? Purchase a syllabus that includes the instructor's remarks in narrative form to reduce the need for taking notes. This can be purchased in advance or at the conference. Some copies of earlier conference syllabi are still available for purchase at the conference, but not in advance.

Basic cost of the conference is $40 per person or $70 per married couple. Campus lodging is available for $43 and a package cost of $68 will include both lodging and meals. The special options have various fees, for example, the field trip into Salt Lake City cost $7 and the syllabus $5.

Write for a registration form that describes all the sessions and gives you the advantage of pre-registration but does not guarantee reserved space. Seating in each session is to be on a first come, first serve basis.

The address is Conferences and Workshops, Conference Center Registration, Brigham Young University, Provo, Utah 84602.

Faculty at Baylor comes under fire

WACO, Texas (AP) — Academic freedom at Baylor University may be jeopardized by the victories won by fundamentalists last month at the annual Southern Baptist Convention in Kansas City, a campus religion professor fears.

"I think there's no question what their designs are. Now they've prevailed at the national level, (they'll) work more intensely at the state level," religion professor W.J. Wimpee told the Dallas Times Herald.

Zig Ziglar of Dallas, a Baptist layman who recently was elected first vice president of the Southern Baptist Convention, made statements during the convention indicating his displeasure with professors not holding traditional Baptist views, Wimpee noted.

Ziglar said Spanish professor Phillip Johnson should be placed "in a caretaker position" away from students because he is a Mormon, a faith considered by many Baptists to be a non-Christian cult.

Religion professor Bob Patterson also has come in Ziglar's disfavor because of his acceptance of evolution.

Ziglar, a professional motivational speaker, questioned Patterson's contention that evolution is not necessarily incompatible with the Genesis account of creation.

Fundamentalist furor over a Baylor textbook has finally died down, but Johnson and Patterson are at the center of what Wimpee said appears to be a new round of attacks on the orthodoxy of the Baylor faculty.

The Kansas City convention ended with fundamentalists claiming almost total victory in a five-year effort to root out so-called liberalism in Baptist seminaries by gaining majority votes on seminary boards of trustees, Wimpee said.

Every undergraduate at Baylor is required to take at least two religion courses.

Paige Patterson, a fundamentalist leader and president of the Criswell Center for Biblical Studies in Dallas, asked recently, in religion classes "if all they do is present various viewpoints" on Bible interpretation, "why do we need Baylor? By definition, a Baptist school advocates a certain viewpoint."

That view disturbs Wimpee. "It concerns me that if they continue to prevail, they'll take control and turn us into a little Bible college instead of a university," Wimpee told the Times Herald.

In 1979, a furor involving the religion department focused on a Baylor textbook that said some of the Old Testament may have been compiled from traditions about Israel's history rather than being the inspired word of God as revealed directly to its authors.

To fundamentalists, the question is whether Baylor religion classes give a fair hearing to the view that the Bible is verbally inspired of God and free of any historical, scientific or other error.

To faculty members, the issue is having academic freedom to teach the full range of scholarly views on Bible interpretation and modern critical methods.

Mixed marriages more than double in past 12 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interracial marriages in the United States more than doubled in the dozen years after the Supreme Court invalidated laws against such unions, government statistics show.

Still very small in number, interracial nuptials amounted to 1.9 percent of all marriages in 1980, according to figures collected by the National Center for Health Statistics.

That's up from 0.7 percent of marriages reported in 1968, a year after the Supreme Court invalidated laws in 20 states that banned such marriages.

The increase was reported in the July edition of American Demographics magazine, in an article by Barbara Foley Wilson of the health statistics center.

"In conjunction with the Supreme Court's ruling that struck down laws on miscegenation, racially mixed marriages, though still rare, have become more frequent in America's melting pot," Ms. Wilson reported.

She used figures from 35 states where racial characteristics are recorded in marriage records.

The most common interracial marriages involved white brides and black grooms. They accounted for about 0.5 percent of all marriages in 1980, up from 0.2 percent in 1968.

White brides with Asian or other non-white grooms, excluding blacks, accounted for 0.4 percent of marriages in 1980, about the same as white grooms with Asian or other non-white brides, excluding blacks. Both those shares were doubled from 1968.

... "we thy people and sheep of thy pasture ..."

We realize that the Lord our God created all things and has dominion over the earth. It is through him that we have this wonderful land. We plant and we water, but it is God that gives the increase. "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want . . . surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever."

Attend church and give thanks to the Lord each Sunday.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Slide, film show to be presented

Sam Smith will be appearing with his newest multimedia Heavy Light production, "The Progression," at 5:30 p.m. Sunday at First United Methodist Church, Foster and Ballard streets.

"The Progression" is a multi-projector and multi-image slide and film presentation incorporating 26 projectors, pyrotechnics, a $10,000 computer to run the projectors and special effects.

The presentation uses a story plot with a soundtrack featuring music by such artists as Bob Dylan, Manfred Mann, the Resurrection Band, Servant and Petra.

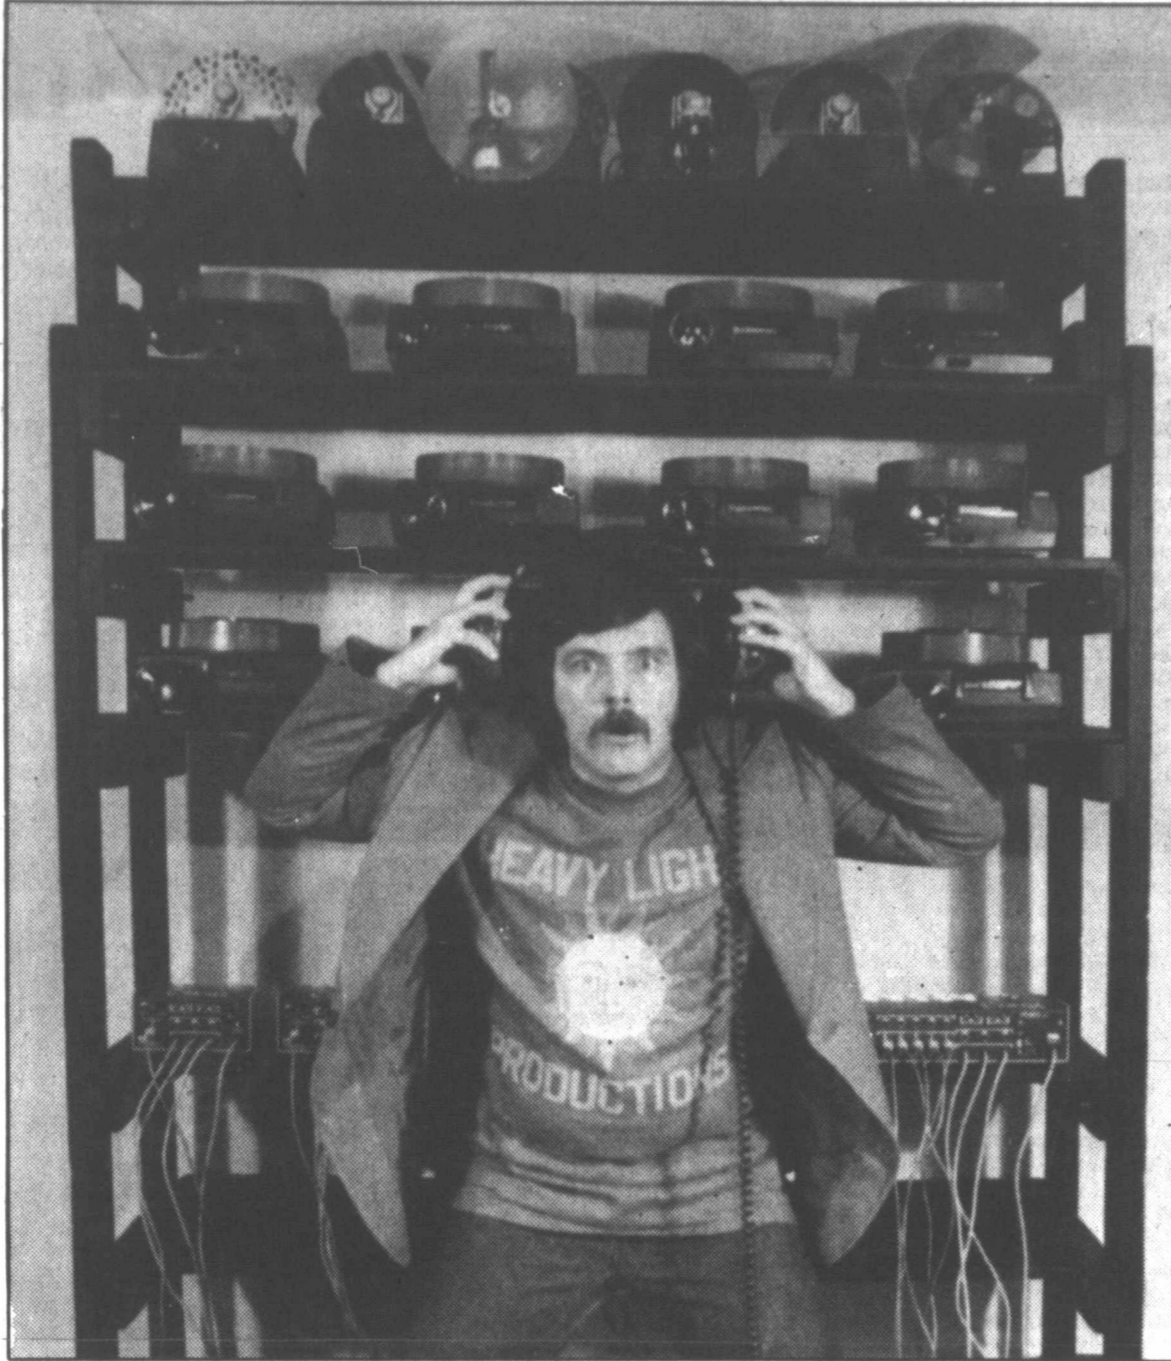

Smith said the production sought to provide answers to life's great dilemmas, including a world engulfed in hate, doubt and fear as people feel a need to progress toward peace, love and fulfillment amid threats of a nuclear holocaust.

Smith narrates the introduction and conclusion for the 30-minute program.

Heavy Light Productions has been the ministry of Smith for 14 years. Smith is a writer, photographer, producer and speaker.

He is a 1971 graduate of Chicago's Moody Bible Institute with a pastoral major and a 1973 graduate of Wheaton College in sociology. He has also studied church history in Europe and Israel with Gordon-Conwell Seminary. Smith also studied journalism at Wheaton Graduate School.

The Rev. Richard H. Whitwam said the public was invited to attend the free program.

Nigerian envoy is called in over kidnapping

LONDON (AP) — Britain's Foreign Office summoned Nigeria's ambassador today to ask why one of his aides was at an airport when a leading foe of the Nigerian government was found drugged and stuffed into a diplomatic crate.

The British Broadcasting Corp. said a Nigerian Embassy official supervising the loading of cargo onto a Nigerian Airlines plane

Activists sue over fence

DALLAS (AP) — A newly-formed political activist group has filed a lawsuit trying to halt construction of a fence around the site of the Republican National Convention.

The fence infringes on First Amendment rights of free speech, the group said.

The suit filed Thursday accuses city officials of using the fence to keep GOP delegates "well insulated from the views and opinions of demonstrators," who have been given permission to gather in an area away from the convention center entrance.

The suit also asks the city for the same amount of financial support that is being provided the Republican Party. City officials have denied that any taxpayer money is being used for the Republicans.

Security and crowd control are two of the reasons the city has given for erecting the $65,111, 6-foot-high chain link fence around the Dallas Convention Center. The fence is currently under construction.

"The events were are organizing are peaceful," said Roger Kallenberg of the Dallas March and Rally Committee. He said that with the new fence, demonstrators "can't even be within shouting distance."

Writer freed from jail cell

BELLEVILLE, Ill. (AP) — An editorial writer freed from jail after the sources whose identities he had steadfastly refused to reveal stepped forward voluntarily has vowed to "fight to change this law from a typewriter and sleep at home each night."

Richard Hargraves, 34, was ordered released from St. Clair County Jail by Circuit Judge Roger Scrivner on Thursday after attorneys reached an agreement in the case. He was the first journalist jailed in a civil libel suit in 26 years.

Hargraves was jailed Tuesday for refusing to identify two sources he consulted before writing a 1981 editorial for the Belleville News-Democrat critical of Jerry Costello, chairman of the St. Clair County Board of Supervisors.

In a copyright story in today's News-Democrat, board member Dave Hickey said, "Apparently, I am the source who talked to Rick Hargraves prior to him writing an editorial. . . . Apparently Mr. Hargraves is referring to me as one of the people he talked to."

Ed Anderson, another board member, revealed his connection to Hargraves Wednesday night on a St. Louis radio program.

Hargraves, who now works for the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, would not say if Anderson and Hickey were the sources.

"I haven't broken my confidentiality pledge at all," he said.

Interviewed by telephone Thursday night, Anderson said he was one of the sources. He said Hargraves recently contacted him and said, "I may have to go to jail to keep from revealing you."

"I told him, 'Reveal me. What I told you I can't see is worth going to jail for,'" Anderson said.

Anderson said he didn't know what the libel case was about. "To this day, I have never read that editorial."

Lawyer Amiel Cueto, who represents Costello, said Thursday that he spoke with Hickey and believed him to be the second official Hargraves consulted.

Reached at his home early Friday morning, Hickey refused to discuss the newspaper interview, adding, "Anything else will come out in depositions."

Costello sued Hargraves for libel over the editorial that accused the county board chairman of lying and breaking campaign promises to oppose new taxes not first approved by the voters.

The judge ordered Hargraves released after Cueto said he would not object because he now knew the sources' names.

Of the sources, the judge said: "Had they shown as much bravery as Mr. Hargraves and come forward earlier, this whole incident would have been unnecessary."

Hargraves expressed relief about being freed. "I can now fight to change this law from a typewriter and sleep at home each night," he said.

"If reporters can only stay out of jail if confidential sources . . . feel they have to come forward, there's still a chilling effect," he said.

Thursday told customs officials at Stansted Airport that crates containing former Transportation Minister Umaru Dikko and two other Nigerians were diplomatic baggage.

Dikko, 47, and the two other men were under police guard and being treated at hospitals today, according to the domestic news agency Press Association. The BBC said Dikko was in satisfactory condition.

Dikko was a close adviser to former President Shehu Shagari and the Sunday Observer newspaper reported in January that his wealth was estimated at $1.4 billion.

He had vowed to launch a holy war in the West African country to overthrow the six-month-old military government of Maj. Gen. Muhammadu Buhari, which overthrew Shagari last Dec. 31.

The new government has accused Dikko of taking massive kickbacks for approving contracts under the former government and has called him its "most wanted man." It has vowed to bring him back for trial, but it denied involvement in Thursday's kidnapping.

British government sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Nigeria's high commissioner, or ambassador, Maj. Gen. Halidu Hannaniya, had been summoned to the Foreign Ministry today to answer questions about the affair.

The Foreign Office said it has asked Hannaniya to explain why one of his staff was at the airport.

The London Daily Mail said British officials were taking the line that Hannaniya was not personally involved. When Dikko was snatched, the high commissioner was lunching at the Foreign Office as the guest of the Foreign Office minister of state, Malcolm Rifkind.

Witnesses said two kidnapers forced the struggling Dikko into a yellow van in front of his London apartment at about 12:30 p.m. Thursday, said police spokesman Mike Cobb.

Police have refused to make a detailed statement about other facts in the case.

Press Association said the first hint of trouble at the airport 30 miles northeast of London came when customs officers telephoned the Foreign Office and reported doubts about a diplomatic consignment, which apparently didn't meet the specifications of diplomatic baggage.

The BBC said an embassy staff member told customs officials that the crates were diplomatic baggage, although they apparently were not labeled as such. Police opened the boxes in the presence of the embassy official. Press Association said.

Inside were Dikko and the other two men, who have not been identified. Press Association said police were conducting a manhunt for the kidnapers and believed the men were armed.

Shagari is under house arrest in Nigeria.

MOVES INTO FINALS— Chris Evert-Lloyd (above) defeated Hans Mandlikova, 6-1, 6-2, Thursday to advance into the Wimbledon finals. (AP Laserphoto)

Lloyd, Navratilova in Wimbledon finals

LONDON (AP) — Kathy Jordan doesn't think Chris Evert Lloyd is in Martina Navratilova's league. The 19-year-old Australian right-hander gained the last four by ousting sixth seed Andres Gomez of Mexico in the quarterfinals. The other men's semifinal featured No. 3 seed Jimmy Connors — playing in Wimbledon's semis for his eighth time — and No. 2 Ivan Lendl, the Czechoslovak ace who upended McEnroe in the finals of the French Open on clay four weeks ago.

Connors has the edge in his career series with Lendl, 11-5. But Lendl has won most of their recent meetings, including this year's Volvo Masters indoor tournament and the WCT Tournament of Champions at Forest Hills in New York on clay. In the latter, Lendl demolished Connors 6-0, 6-0, the only time in his pro career that Connors has been shut out.

Lloyd, who dominated women's tennis for a decade and took singles titles here in 1974, 76 and 81, has been overshadowed on the women's circuit by the seemingly invincible Navratilova, who already has beaten Lloyd four times this year.

After Lloyd's loss two weeks ago to Jordan in the semifinals of the Eastbourne, England, grass court tournament, tennis pundits began asking if she's got what it takes to stay in the top echelon of the women's game.

San Francisco (AP) — Right-hander Scott Sanderson pitched five shutout innings, and Ron Cey hit two homers, powering the Chicago Cubs to a 9-3 victory over the San Francisco Giants. The division-leading Cubs jumped to a 2-0 lead in the third inning on consecutive homers by Cey and Dave Owen off loser Bill Laskey, 4-8. Owen's homer was the first of his major league career.

Thad Bosley's two-out single and Cey's second homer made it 4-0 in the fourth.

Sanderson, 5-1, was staked to a 9-0 lead when the Cubs erupted for five runs in the sixth.

Sanderson, who hadn't pitched

Cubs pound Giants, 9-3

since May 29 because of a back problem, retired the first eight batters and blanked the Giants on three hits through the first five innings, striking out five.

He was chased in the sixth. Dan Gladden led off with a single, stole second and scored on Johnnie LeMaster's triple. After Jeff Leonard belted a one-out single, Rich Bordi relieved and notched his third save.

Rangers fall to Tigers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The Detroit Tigers came out of a horrendous slump Thursday night—horrendous to the Tigers, that is. They beat the Texas Rangers 7-4 to snap a four-game losing streak, the Tiger's longest this season.

"It's been a while since we won a game like that," said the Tigers' Kirk Gibson, who knocked in the game's winning run. "We were beginning to wonder what was going on. We haven't had many breaks the last few games."

Four losses is just a drop in the bucket for most teams, but for the Tigers who with the recent losses are still 31 games over the 500 mark, it is a lot.

"It's a funny game," said Lou Whitaker. "We needed this game. We had jumped out to some early leads lately and lost."

However, it wasn't just that the Tigers broke their losing streak. It was how they did it.

With Rangers starter Charlie Hough's knuckle ball in fine form and the score 4-1 Texas with two outs in the Detroit ninth, the Tigers scored six runs with Gibson knocking a three-run homer into the rightfield stands to win it. Rejuvenating the Tiger forces in preventing Hough from gaining his ninth straight complete game and his seventh victory in a row.

"It's been two weeks since we won a game like that," said Chet Lemon, who was part of the ninth inning rally. "But we never quit. We find ourselves always coming at the opposition. It was a good feeling to see us do that."

Doug Petry started for Detroit but left the game responsible for all four of Texas' runs. Aurelio Lopez took the Tiger win in relief going one and two-thirds innings and giving up one hit, to put him at 7-0. Willie Hernandez picked up his fifteenth save of the year, pitching to one batter in the ninth.

Hough's loss puts him at 8-7.

THSCA official says grade rule unrealistic

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The executive vice president of the Texas High School Coaches Association has criticized as "unrealistic" a provision in a new education reform bill in Texas that will require high school athletes to pass all courses with a grade of 70 to remain eligible.

Some coaches said the provision will be challenged in court and expressed the fear that some athletes will find no reason to stay in school once they are ruled ineligible for inter-school sports competition.

"It's unrealistic to think a 15- or 16-year-old child is not going to stub his toes somewhere along the line," Eddie Joseph, who led his organization's lobbying efforts against the eligibility provision, told the Austin American-Statesman.

"But it passed, and it goes into effect in January."

Despite fierce opposition from the coaches' association, the Texas Legislature included the provision in the reform bill — spurring pleas of coaches to allow athletes to fail at least one class.

Ebbie Neptune, athletic director and football coach of Austin Westlake, said the new rule will be especially costly to athletes who try hard in the classroom but just don't have the ability to pass something like math or science.

"We're going to take athletics away from him," Neptune said.

Once that happens, such a student would have no incentive to stay in school, he said.

The bill requires that all students pass all academic subjects in a grading period with a grade of 70 on a scale of 100 to retain eligibility. If they do not, they will be suspended from extracurricular activities until the next grading period, which in most schools is six weeks.

Because the reform bill was passed only this week, Joseph said, "many coaches and parents across the state are probably not aware of exactly what it means and what impact it may have."

"Even so, in some ways we (the THSCA) feel fortunate. We were able to get some other things eliminated from the bill," Joseph said. One proposal would have had the effect of eliminating athletic periods during the school day.

Joseph said another measure to ban extracurricular activities on Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays would have curtailed basketball programs and would have virtually eliminated junior high athletics.

Joseph declined to speculate on what the outcome of a legal challenge to the Legislature's eligibility standards would be.

"It is not an inherent right for a youngster to participate in extracurricular activities. Activities are part of the educational process, and it seems that legislators are confused about that."

Jim Streety, athletic director and football coach at New Braunfels, said the coaches and administrators felt they could live with a University Interscholastic League rules change, effective in September, requiring students to pass four courses for eligibility.

Leaders fear politics overshadows prayer at camp meeting

By TOM HAYWOOD
The Town Talk
TIOGA, La. (AP) — Prayer, not politics, is the purpose of the annual Pentecostal camp meeting here, but church officials are concerned that the latter has been more prominently displayed in recent years.
Politicians since the 1940s have increasingly made the trek to Tioga for the huge camp meeting during the week of July Fourth at the United Pentecostal camp grounds. And it's little wonder why.

Thousands of Pentecostals stream in for the services, which can last 16 hours a day. One would be pressed to find a more captive audience — drawn from every corner of the state.
When the crowds swell to between 8,000 and 9,000, the camp becomes the third-largest "city" in central Louisiana.

It is a mutually beneficial relationship which has evolved through the years. As the camp meeting is held the week of Independence Day, a certain patriotic fire is often sparked.
Denominational leaders extol the virtues of patriotism, liberty and religious freedom, and welcome politicians to make brief remarks or at least recognize them on the platform.

Money also figures in. No politician would think of attending and fail to leave a respectable offering. Many have made a point of just how respectable it was.
At times, they were coaxed, in a humorous way, to up the ante.
The money was never an important factor in district finances, but it did help cover the cost of the camp meeting and improvements to the grounds.
Though it is not unusual for politicians to make charitable contributions, press coverage over the past decade caused concern among denominational officials.
"The press, of course, is attracted to people," said Rev. T.F. Tenney, state district superintendent.
Reporters covering the camp meeting naturally focused on the political aspects and the activities involving public figures.
It wasn't long until the camp meeting became news. Even The New York Times covered one.
And surely the encampment is a fascinating window on the Pentecostal movement, rich and colorful in its exuberance. But that was not the main focus of the reports, which is "unfortunate" though understandable, Tenney said.

"They (the reporters) are not going to be interested in doctrine or worship. That doesn't make good press," Tenney said.
It appeared that "the bottom line is money, which is not true," he said.
No public officials were specifically invited to this year's meeting though they know they are welcome to attend, Tenney said.
On Tuesday night, when state Superintendent of Education Tom Clausen made a point that he was leaving a contribution, Tenney reminded the crowd that was not why Clausen was there and he, and anyone else, was welcome if he gave "not one copper penny."
Tenney is not apologetic for having fun with politicians in the past, but he is concerned that it allowed the public perception of the meeting to become distorted.
"It really grieves me that people see this as a great political gathering when it is not," Tenney said.
One way to handle the situation would be to stop recognizing public figures, Tenney said. But why shouldn't the politicians be welcome?
"It's a national holiday, we respect our public officials and they are our friends," Tenney said.

When politicians speak to the assembly they usually address issues that most concern the Pentecostals.
For example, in his brief remarks Tuesday night, U.S. Sen. Russell Long addressed church exemption from Social Security taxes, prayer in school, the equal access bill and the need to encourage rather than discourage religion in the country.
It was a fairly safe speech and warmly received. Long was not taking new positions, but was using the opportunity to outline some of the positions which he and the crowd had in common. And no mention was made from the platform of any contribution from Long.
Clausen, on the other hand, did use some of his five minutes to appeal to the assembly's support in helping him through his "trials and tribulations."

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC CITIES SERVICE OIL AND GAS CORPORATION

Panhandle East and West Gathering System
Gray County

It has come to Cities Service Oil and Gas Corporation's attention that some residences are receiving natural gas through unauthorized connections, or "tapping," onto the field gas pipeline serving the Panhandle East and West Gathering System. The residue pipeline system is not designed for safe use by residential owners. The gas is extremely hazardous for residential use since it is not odorized, and it may be subject to explosion and/or fire due to possible loss of pressure.

Cities Service Oil and Gas Corporation will not accept liability for personal injury, death or property damage that may result from any unauthorized use of this natural gas. For the safety of those unauthorized users, and the public in general, we ask that action be taken immediately to disconnect any such gas pipeline connections and that all future tapping cease. Any failure to immediately disconnect unauthorized pipeline connections serving residences or other buildings will result in Cities Service taking whatever action is necessary, including legal action, to protect and retain Cities Service's property and to eliminate the safety hazard created.

Scientist: oil, gas production may have caused Texas earthquakes

AUSTIN (AP) — Oil and gas production may have caused earthquakes that were recorded near the towns of Fashing and Pleasanton in South Texas, according to a University of Texas scientist.

"The earthquakes all appear to originate on known faults where those faults form boundaries of an oil or gas field," said Dr. Wayne Pennington of UT's Institute for Geophysics and Department of Geological Sciences.

Pennington said Thursday that two earthquakes in Atascosa County within the past year have reached magnitudes of 3.2 and 3.9 on the Richter scale.

The Richter scale is a gauge of energy released by an earthquake as measured by the ground motion recorded on a seismograph. An increase of one means that the motiearthquakes have caused no appreciable damage and can be expected to pose only minor hazards to the communities involved, Pennington said.

He said oil and gas production lowers fluid pressure in reservoir rock, and this affects the strength of the rock. "What we think is happening is that the faults that are present have been moving naturally but without earthquakes until fluid pressure along them was decreased to a point where the faults would stick and slip in jerky motions, producing earthquakes," he said.
