

Civil rights official investigating state's role in fight with church

By The Associated Press

The regional director of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights concluded a fact-finding mission on the controversial uncertified Faith Christian School of Louisville, Neb., after meeting Wednesday with the Rev. Everett Sileven and three other fundamentalist ministers.

Meivin Jenkins, regional director of the commission's Kansas City, Mo., office, met earlier in the day with State Education Commissioner Joe Lutjeharms and with two members of Gov. Bob Kerrey's staff in Lincoln.

Linda Chavez, staff director of the civil rights commission in Washington, D.C., said Jenkins was sent to Nebraska to determine if there were grounds for a "full-scale investigation" into allegations that the state has violated the fundamentalists' rights to freedom of religion.

Seven fathers of Faith Christian School students have been jailed since Nov. 23 for refusing to answer questions about their alleged involvement in operating the school located in the basement of Faith Baptist Church.

The school was ordered closed in 1979 for refusing to hire certified teachers as required by state law.

It has remained open in defiance of the court order.

Jenkins finished the probe with a two-hour meeting in Council Bluffs, Iowa, with Sileven, Faith Christian School director; Buddy C. Gillispie, head of Kentuckians for Religious Freedom; Clay Nuttal, president of the Fundamentalist Christian Coalition of Michigan; and Edward Rowe of Wheaton, Ill., president of the Church League of America.

The meeting was held in Council Bluffs apparently because Sileven is wanted on a Nebraska arrest warrant.

Jenkins was attempting to gather information about the whole controversy over the Christian schools and not just about the seven jailed fathers, Ms. Chavez said.

"We're looking to see if there's evidence of discrimination on the basis of religion in the way the schools are licensed," she said.

She said Jenkins would send her a report, probably by the end of this week, which would then be discussed by the commission.

Ms. Chavez said the commission's chairman, Clarence Pendleton of San Diego, may come to Nebraska next week to talk with some of the fundamentalist ministers supporting the church school.

Jim Keeton, acting Faith Baptist pastor, said the three fundamentalist ministers believed their meeting Wednesday with Jenkins was "profitable."

Jenkins met for about 90 minutes Wednesday morning with Lutjeharms, and later spent about 15 minutes with Kerrey's chief of staff, William Hoppner, and staff assistant Gene Crump.

Lutjeharms said most of his discussion with Jenkins concerned the state's certification requirements for teachers. Supporters of the school say it is part of Faith Baptist Church and the state has no right to regulate churches.

In another Faith Christian matter, a hearing was scheduled for 11 a.m. Thursday in Cass County District Court on a motion to cancel arrest warrants for Sileven, his daughter, Teresa Schmidt, and seven mothers of Faith Christian School students.

The motion was filed by attorneys for the nine, who have been sought in Nebraska since they failed to appear at a November court hearing on the dispute between state officials and operators of Faith Christian School.

WHAT A DIFFERENCE—Visitors in Pampa this week, seeing joggers breezing along in 60-degree weather, would find it difficult to believe conditions here less than a week ago when the mercury was plunging below zero and the area was covered by ice and snow. The fact that Chris

Syria, Israel endorse plan to separate Lebanon foes

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syria and Israel have endorsed a proposed security plan to separate Lebanon's civil war combatants and establish a stable cease-fire, Lebanese officials disclosed today.

However, the officials said President Amin Gemayel would ask that the United States, France, Italy and Britain keep their peacekeeping forces in Lebanon in support of the new plan, which would extend authority of the government over much of the territory not under Syrian or Israeli control.

Reagan administration officials have voiced optimism that the proposed plan will eventually mean U.S. Marines stationed in Beirut can be removed.

But one Lebanese official, who spoke on condition he would not be named, said, "It is wrong to assume that the plan, even if thoroughly implemented, will make it possible for the multinational force to leave at any foreseeable future date."

"The security plan is aimed at extending government authority from Beirut to less than one-third of Lebanon's territory," said the official. He said the presence of the multinational force "is essential to see this step through."

Lebanese Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan reported Tuesday that his government and leaders of the principal warring factions were near agreement on the plan expected to be announced by this weekend.

It calls for establishment of buffer zones in Beirut's embattled southern outskirts and the neighboring Chouf

Officials think withdrawal possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration officials say they are optimistic that a plan to expand the authority of President Amin Gemayel's government in Lebanon will eventually mean U.S. Marines stationed there will be removed.

They hope the government and rival Lebanese factions can agree by the weekend on the plan, which is being promoted by Saudi Arabia and was discussed with Gemayel on his recent visit to Washington.

The plan would extend authority of the Gemayel government over much of the 40 percent of Lebanon that is not under Syrian or Israeli control. However, it wouldn't lead to what the Reagan administration has said is its main goal in Lebanon, the withdrawal of Syrian and Israeli armies.

An agreement for the withdrawal of those armies would be left to follow-up negotiations.

John Hughes, the State Department spokesman, said Wednesday the withdrawal of all foreign forces remains the goal of U.S. policy in Lebanon. But he said the security plan, as it is being called, would be "a welcome development."

Although President Reagan and Secretary of State George P. Shultz have previously said the Marines would remain in Lebanon until foreign armies leave, the administration has stopped emphasizing this point.

While Israel has indicated it would cooperate with the new security plan, Syria's attitude remains in doubt.

One feature of the agreement to extend Lebanese government authority into areas Beirut now controls by private militias might be the designation of the Beirut airport as a neutral zone, said one official, who insisted on anonymity.

Most of the 1,600 U.S. Marines in Lebanon as part of the multinational peacekeeping force are based at the airport where they have sustained heavy casualties. If the airport is declared a neutral zone, the Marines could be deployed elsewhere and possibly some of them could even be withdrawn onto American warships offshore.

mountains. The government plans to seek 800 observers from Italy and Greece to police these zones.

"We are still far away from the ultimate objective of extending state authority to northern, eastern and southern Lebanon," the official said. "So the notion that the forthcoming security plan could mean an early MNF departure isn't valid."

Lebanon's northern and eastern regions are held by the Syrian army, and Israel occupies the south and southeast.

The Israeli occupation forces have been coming under escalating guerrilla attacks, and on Wednesday Israeli jets pounded pro-Iranian guerrilla bases in the Bekaa Valley.

Lebanese state radio reported nearly 100 people were killed and 400 wounded.

It was the second Israeli attack in two days on the guerrilla bases in the Syrian-controlled valley.

Most of the targets were strongholds of the Islamic Amal Movement and the Hezbollah, or Party of God — Lebanese extremist groups whose members are Shiite Moslems. They are supported by Iranian Revolutionary Guards who preach Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's brand of revolution.

The two groups were widely reported to be involved in the truck bombings that killed 241 U.S. servicemen and 58 French paratroopers in Beirut last Oct. 23, and 29 Israeli soldiers and 32 Arab detainees in Tyre on Nov. 4. Both groups have denied they were involved in the bombings.

Grandstaff suit now $5 million

After several delays, trial slated to begin in Amarillo Monday

AMARILLO — After several delays, jury selection is scheduled to begin at 2 p.m. Monday in Amarillo federal court in a lawsuit, which now asks for increased damages of at least $5 million, filed by the family of a 6666 ranchhand killed by police in 1981.

Lawyers involved in the civil rights suit filed in connection with the shooting death of James Grandstaff, 31, are scheduled to meet in a pre-trial conference at 2 p.m. Friday.

McLean, Alanreed areas lose power

McLean and Alanreed area residents were without electric power for several hours this morning after a transformer went out at a substation near McLean.

According to Ken Vaughn, communications specialist with Southwestern Public Service in Amarillo, electric power to 960 customers went off at 4:43 a.m. today after damage occurred to the transformer. Exact cause of the damage was not known.

"The blackout was not widespread," Vaughn said. Service to the 750 SPS customers in McLean was restored by 7:14 a.m. after power lines were tied in with West Texas Utilities, he said. Power to 140 customers in Alanreed was expected to be on by late morning by connecting lines with a substation in Lefors.

A mobile substation was on its way late this morning to the McLean substation to transfer connections to restore power to rural customers, Vaughn said. Service was expected to be restored to all affected customers by this afternoon.

The lawyers say they expect the trial before U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson will last from four to six weeks.

Grandstaff was shot to death in front of his north-camp home on the 6666 Ranch about six miles east of Borger early Aug. 11, 1981.

Borger police had chased a fleeing suspect east from Borger on Texas 152. The fugitive's truck crashed through two fences and onto the pasture in front of Grandstaff's home. The suspect abandoned his truck, and officers lost sight of him.

Grandstaff drove a few hundred yards down to the pasture to investigate the commotion raised by the attempted arrest. He stepped out of his pickup and was cut down by police gunfire.

A subsequent state grand jury investigation of the shooting death returned no charges against police involved, though jurors said officers killed the innocent cowboy and family man. The officers named in the lawsuit deny responsibility for killing Grandstaff.

Defendants in the suit are the City of Borger, Hutchinson, Carson and Gray Counties, officers Ricky Morris, Bailey Roberts, John Robert Alonzo, John Wayne Turner, John Ray and "other unknown police officers."

The City of Pampa was dropped as a defendant to the suit last Aug. 23.

The original petition asking for at least $2 million damages in connection with Grandstaff's killing was filed in Robinson's court Oct. 13, 1981. An amended petition filed by Grandstaff's family March 26, 1982 raised the request to at least $3 million. The complaint was changed again last summer and upped the requested award to at least $5 million.

Jan Fox, lawyer for the plaintiffs, said the requested damages were twice increased because law officers' conduct was even more "gruesome" than initial reports indicated.

"The facts were even more gruesome in discovery than we or the family first thought," Fox said.

The lawsuit charges that after Grandstaff's death, police and officials conspired to "cover up and whitewash this vile murder."

Fox, an associate of Richard "Racehorse" Haynes in the Houston law firm, Haynes and Fullenweider, has said a decision about whether Haynes will personally try the case will be made "on the eve of the trial."

Kissinger panel to recommend $1 billion for Central America

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Kissinger Commission on Central America is expected to recommend that the United States spend $1 billion in economic and military aid over the next several years to help resolve development and security problems in the region, U.S. officials say.

The officials, who asked not to be identified, said the recommendation will be included in a report the commission will submit to President Reagan next week.

They said the panel, known formally as the National Bipartisan Commission on Central America, is not expected to call for significant departures from the present administration policy toward the region.

The commission, which has a Jan. 10 deadline for completing the report, will suggest that the bulk of the suggested aid package be earmarked for economic assistance, consistent with current policy.

Alluding to the $1 billion aid recommendation, one official said that figure is comparable to what the United States has spent in the region over the past several years.

Headed by former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, the 12-member commission encompasses a wide range of political opinion. Its members include the former Republican governor of Texas, William P. Clements; San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros, a Democrat; former Democratic National Committee chairman Robert Strauss; and AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland.

In gathering information for the report, the panel made two trips to the region and heard testimony from dozens of expert witnesses.

U.S. officials said that at the insistence of its more liberal members, the panel will urge that continued military aid to El Salvador be linked to improved human rights performance.

Jackson returns to campaign with applause ringing in ears

WASHINGTON (AP) — With applause still ringing in his ears, the Rev. Jesse Jackson is working to transform his personal foreign policy triumph into votes and money for his bid for the Democratic presidential nomination.
The civil rights leader met with supporters Wednesday to plot strategy, planning the next step to follow his successful mission to Syria to free a captive U.S. aviator.
"It's a bit early to evaluate the impact on the campaign," Jackson said of his trip that led to the freeing of U.S. Navy Lt. Robert Goodman Jr. from Syrian captivity. "Obviously, there is an even greater interest in the campaign and by a broader cross-section of people."
Overall, he said, the Syrian mission is a plus for his White House aspirations.
"The war in the Middle East threatens all of America. And so to have a successful mission — that has attached to it national honor and attached to it some reasonable display of skill and acumen — certainly does have some positive effects," he added.
Asked if he had any other "missions" in mind, Jackson replied:
"I'll be on my way to New Hampshire on Friday," said the ordained minister-turned-candidate. Jackson will be one of several Democratic presidential hopefuls addressing a weekend conference on acid rain.

Two men charged in Monday robbery

By JULIA CLARK Staff Writer
Two Mexican nationals were charged with aggravated robbery and bond was set at $20,000 each Wednesday.
The brothers, 20-year-old Raol Vargas Alarcon and Salvadore Alarcon, 17, were charged with the robbery of Ward's Minit Mart Monday evening. The Alarcon brothers allegedly entered the convenience store about 6:45 p.m. Monday, sprayed the face of the clerk with a chemical similar to Mace and took an undetermined amount of cash from the register. The two suspects then fled on foot down an adjoining alley.
Using composite drawings to identify the two men, detectives arrested the men about 24 hours later.
Pampa police detectives have concluded an investigation of the Dec. 13 burglary of the Pampa Grocery Outlet in which a safe was removed from the store.
Detective Ron Howell arrested Damon Lynn Cox, 21, of 1105 S. Dwight in connection with the grocery burglary. After arraignment on a charge of burglary with intent to commit theft, Cox was transferred to Gray County jail. Bond was set at $20,000. The safe has not been recovered, according to a news release issued by Chief J.J. Ryzman.
James E. Kendall, 61, was arrested Wednesday in Amarillo and charged with unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.
Kendall was in a 1972 Ford pickup which was reported by Martha Ann Smiley of Pampa as "taken and not returned" Dec. 11, 1983.
Kendall will be returned to Pampa by Detective Susan Ortega.

Education secretary releases school rankings among states

WASHINGTON (AP) — Education Secretary T.H. Bell, in a bid to dramatize the shortcomings of American schools, today released statistics ranking all 50 states on their dropout rates, test scores, teacher salaries and other measures.
The figures showed that among 28 states where college-bound students customarily take the American College Test, the best average was compiled by students in Wisconsin, followed by Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska and Colorado.
Among 22 states where students usually take the Scholastic Aptitude Test, the leaders were: New Hampshire, Oregon, Vermont, California and Delaware.
The states with the worst ACT average were from the bottom: Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama, West Virginia and, in a tie for the fifth lowest, Kentucky and Tennessee.
Those with the lowest SAT average were: South Carolina, District of Columbia, Georgia, North Carolina and Hawaii.
From 1972 to 1982, college entrance exam scores fell in every state; only the District of Columbia registered an increase.
Some of the figures Bell spotlighted have been publicized previously, but some were being released for the first time from data culled from his National Center on Education Statistics and other sources.
New statistics showed that the high school dropout rate got worse from 1972 to 1982. Only 72.8 percent of ninth graders now stay to get their high school diploma, down from 77.2 percent a decade earlier.
The District of Columbia had the worst dropout rate in 1982, followed by Mississippi, Louisiana, South Carolina and Florida. The dropout rate that year was not available for Georgia, which ranked 49th out of 51 in 1972.
The states with the highest percentage of graduates were: Minnesota, North Dakota, Iowa, Hawaii and South Dakota.

Paralyzed man suing gun manufacturer

DALLAS (AP) — A cheap handgun that accidentally discharged and paralyzed a high school student was a "time bomb" that should not have been put on the market for purchase by unwary consumers, an attorney says.

Windle Turley, representing David Duane Clancy, 22, of Amarillo, told a state district court jury Wednesday that the marketer, manufacturer and designer of the .22-caliber revolver should be held liable.

"In opening arguments in Clancy's $43 million lawsuit, Turley said the cheap handgun has no useful purpose other than 'the wrongful killing and injury of human beings'."

But a lawyer for the Zale Corp., named as a defendant in the suit, said holding the marketer liable would be like holding an automobile dealership responsible for injuries inflicted by a drunken driver.

Other defendants are the Arms Corp. of America, which manufactured the gun; and Rogers Research and Development Co., which designed the weapon. The suit was filed in Dallas in 1981.

Turley, who contended the Armsco revolver had a defective design and was unreasonably dangerous to the user and others, said the hazards of the weapon outweigh its usefulness.

The suit's focus is not the right to bear arms, but whether the marketer, manufacturer and designer of the weapon should be held at least partially liable for the permanent injuries Clancy sustained, Turley said.

But Turley said he would try to show that such weapons, which constitute "a time bomb" for unwary consumers, should be sold under restrictions, such as to police officers and other individuals trained in the use of firearms.

Turley said the companies "that made a profit from the sale of the handgun (should) bear part of the financial responsibility" for Clancy's injuries.

During Wednesday's opening arguments, Randal Mathis, lawyer for the Zale Corp., said the gun, first sold by an Amarillo sporting goods dealer in 1971, had changed hands several times before Clancy was shot and had not been properly maintained.

At the time of Clancy's shooting, the gun was dirty, had a broken part and other parts had been filed down, Mathis said.

The gun is not dangerous if used in accordance with "safe gun-handling techniques," Mathis said.

The defendants contend the gun was not defective and that Clancy was shot because the boy with the weapon was not handling it properly. Clancy, then 15, was talking with a group of students on the parking lot of Alamo Catholic High School in Amarillo when he was shot in the neck on Oct. 4, 1977.

A teen-ager holding the gun when it fired testified in a deposition that he bought the gun from another student for $10 about two weeks before the shooting.

He said he brought the gun to school to sell it and was showing it to a girl when it discharged. The bullet lodged in Clancy's spine, and he was left paralyzed from the neck down.

Turley acknowledged that the case is one of more than a dozen he has filed across the country against sellers and manufacturers of so-called "Saturday night specials." But he denied his intention in Clancy's case is to do anything other than recover damages for his client's injuries.

The weapon was not properly designed and discharged as the youth was turning the chamber, Turley contended.

But Mathis indicated that the defense would challenge the testimony of the youth who was exhibiting the gun at the time of Clancy's shooting.

Mathis said the youth had changed his story "several times" and contended that the weapon discharged only after the teen-ager pulled the trigger.

Hearing delayed in Mobil lease case

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — Attorneys representing Mobil Oil, Exxon Corp., millionaire rancher Clinton Manges and the State of Texas faced a hearing today on a $1.7 billion lawsuit.

Visiting Judge George Miller set today's hearing for 10 a.m. after rescheduling the hearing five times Wednesday on the suit filed by Manges against Mobil.

The state, Manges and Mobil had reached an agreement by 9 a.m. Wednesday, the hearing time originally set by the judge, who must approve a settlement. But throughout the day, attorneys emerged from meetings to ask the judge for more time to work out a deal.

Attorney General Jim Mattox, at an impromptu noon news conference in the lobby of the hotel where the meetings were taking place, told reporters that the agreement was being held up by Exxon Corp.

Eight hours later, Land Commissioner Garry Mauro admitted "we have come to an impasse. We will now pull apart and try to figure out what Exxon wants."

Mauro said Exxon was "flying down a decision maker," possibly the company's chief counsel, before this morning's hearing to assist in the negotiations.

"We expect to be ready" for the hearing, Mauro said.

But Cleo Haston, one of two attorneys representing Exxon, wasn't quite so optimistic.

"We're going to be spending a lot of time tonight in hopes of meeting the judge's time schedule before he gets away tomorrow," Haston said. "But it's going to be a long night. We have a lot of work to do."

Haston declined to provide details on the stumbling blocks preventing a settlement from being reached.

The agreement being discussed was "basically the same deal" worked out last month, according to Mauro. That deal was scheduled to be approved in court on Dec. 20, but fell through when Exxon intervened.

The suit against Mobil was filed in 1982 when Duval County rancher Clinton Manges alleged that company had not adhered strictly to a drilling schedule required by a lease dating back to 1932 on Manges' ranch.

Manges claimed all the oil drilled by Mobil since 1932 as his own and the state later joined Manges in the suit because it owns some of the mineral rights to the land.

Although Exxon owns 30.9 percent of the minerals on the acres in dispute, the company had not entered the negotiations until last month.

Judge Miller said attorneys for all parties are determined to reach an out of court settlement, despite the difficulties in negotiations.

But he said he would stay only until Thursday afternoon to hear the agreement.

"And if no agreement is reached we'll meet in court to decide where to proceed from here," Miller said.

Student tells of finding stabbing victims

HOUSTON (AP) — A university student told a jury she knew her best friend was dead as soon as she and a deliveryman found the bodies of three other arcade employees early July 1.

Naghmeh Naghavi, 16, took the witness stand Wednesday, the first day of the trial of Richard James Wilkerson, 19. Wilkerson is charged with capital murder in the stabbing death of 18-year-old Anil Varughese, whom Miss Naghavi called her best friend.

Miss Naghavi, a pre-med student at the University of Houston, testified she went to the building because she saw Varughese's car outside long after he should have been gone.

She said she asked a deliveryman who arrived about the same time she did to check the men's room of the Malibu Grand Prix arcade and miniature car race track.

"He opened the door just a little bit and said there was blood on the floor and a body," Miss Naghavi said. She said she went in to look.

"I saw three bodies instead of one," she said, and her friend was not among them. The three, all young men who worked at the business, had been stabbed to death.

Miss Naghavi said she and the deliveryman called police.

"I told them that Anil had to be dead because his car had been there all night," she said. Just as she expected, she said, Varughese's body lay inside his office.

"I could only see from his toes up to his waist. And then one of the policemen took me outside so I wouldn't see his body," she testified.

Wilkerson is also charged in the deaths of the other three victims, Arnold Pequeno, 18, and his brother, Joerene Pequeno, 19, and Roddy Dane Harris, 22.

The trials of two other defendants — Kenneth Ray Ransom, 19, and James Edward Randall, 16 — are pending.

Jurors also heard a six-page statement which Wilkerson gave to detectives after his arrest.

Wilkerson told police he killed Varughese after his friends came to tell him they had slain the other three workers.

Wilkerson had been fired from the arcade about a week before the killings.

Defense attorney Robert Scardino Jr. conceded he is chiefly hoping his client receives a life prison sentence.

"It's a tough case to expect a not-guilty verdict," Scardino said. "We're looking toward, hopefully, the jury to spare his life."

Processing of public bonds being studied

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox says his office is reviewing the way government bonds are handled in Texas in hopes of making the procedure less expensive for taxpayers.

Mattox, who is under indictment, made the statements Wednesday in response to reporters' questions about a newspaper article that Mattox's office was investigating his chief accuser, the law firm of Fulbright and Jaworski, for possible anti-trust violations.

One of Mattox's top assistants, Arthur Mitchell, was quoted in the Dallas Times Herald as saying he mailed letters at state expense to public bond clients of Fulbright and Jaworski asking about work the firm did.

Mattox was indicted in connection with a charge of commercial bribery after a Fulbright and Jaworski law partner accused him of allegedly threatening to ruin the firm's public bond business.

Mattox said the letters also went to clients of other firms that specialize in the bond business, and Mitchell questioned why so few firms handle so much business.

"There are a handful of firms who get most of the (public bond) business and there are 48,000 lawyers in this state," Mitchell said. "Why is it a damn country club?"

Mattox, who was in Laredo trying to settle a lawsuit against Mobil Oil Corp., said Mitchell sent the letters in response to complaints he said were filed to the attorney general's office "and these anti-trust complaints are under investigation."

Private law firms get involved in bond proposals offered by local governments because the bond packages have to be prepared a certain way and then approved by a division of the attorney general's office.

Mattox said the work might not even be needed. He said his office is conducting a review of how other states handle issuing bonds to see if Texas might be able to save money by doing it differently.

"It has come to our attention that a few individuals make a vast amount of money off the taxpayers," Mattox said. He said his office is trying to determine if it can save the taxpayers money by having the attorney general's office prepare the bonds. He said the state handles the "lion's share of the work, and others get paid."

Mattox was indicted last September by a Travis County grand jury.

Too early to assess lawn damage, expert says

DALLAS (AP) — Get out your garden hoses and leave the pruning shears in the garage.

That's the advice from Texas A&M University specialists are giving to homeowners across North Texas who fear their lawns, shrubs and ornamental plants may have been damaged by the prolonged period of sub-freezing temperatures during late December.

Dr. William Knoop said some grass, mainly St. Augustine, may have to be replaced.

Knoop said he believes most Bermuda grass probably survived, but said the prolonged periods of sub-freezing temperatures may have killed much of the St. Augustine grass.

"We should have a lot of winter damage," Knoop said. Homeowners should start watering their grass as soon as the ground is thawed, he said.

"Take a screwdriver and punch it into the ground to be sure the ground is thawed. If it is thawed, give the lawn a good watering," he said. "It doesn't make sense to water frozen soil."

Additional damage can result if the soil moisture level is not good, he added.

"We need to be sure we have good soil moisture if we have another cold spell," Knoop said.

The freeze probably went about six inches deep, he said.

"St. Augustine doesn't go dormant, making cold injury more possible, but Bermuda would live in Minnesota," Knoop said.

It will be the end of March or the first of April before homeowners will know for sure the extent of damage their lawn suffered, Knoop predicted.

Homeowners have two options if the St. Augustine is ruined. One, Knoop said, is to completely remove the dead grass and plant Tall Fescue, a tougher grass he described as a viable alternative to St. Augustine.

The other option would be to plant Zoysia grass, a type that also does well in the shade. He said the Zoysia grass can be sodded in and "there's no hurry in establishing it."

Persons with lawn irrigation systems that are not buried deep enough, about 6-8 inches, may discover that their pipes were frozen and the systems were severely damaged and may have to be replaced, Knoop said.

The systems would probably not be damaged, he said, if the owners were able to drain them before the onset of freezing weather. Some systems, he noted, do not have such drains.

Dr. Marty Baker, an extension horticulturist specialist for Texas A&M, says homeowners should immediately start watering shrubs, trees and ornamental plants and should not do any pruning except to remove damaged limbs. He said that if possible they should also use mulch 3-4 inches deep.

The mulching, he said, should be done "because winter isn't over. We still have January and February."

Homeowners should postpone any corrective pruning and shaping until mid-March, Baker said.

The watering should consist of flooding beds, making certain not to get water on the leaves and should be done every 10-14 days for the remainder of winter.

"We will be losing a lot of our plants. Where they were not watered beforehand, there will be some root damage," Baker said.

Baker said he does not believe trees were badly hurt, but said strawberry plants have been badly damaged and many were killed.

It will be spring before the extent of damage is fully known and said persons considering replacing plants or adding plants should wait 2-3 weeks before buying anything because some nursery stock may have been damaged by the freeze.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Some real facts concerning hunger

Now that the flash flood of outrage appears to have passed, calmer heads are considering just what it was that Edwin Meese III said recently about hunger in America.

It smacks of political opportunism that Meese's clumsily worded and somewhat insensitive iteration of an obvious truth could elicit what one headline called a "firestorm" of indignant criticism. It is a commentary on the major media in America that most reported the criticism with a straight face, giving credence to (perhaps whipping up?) ignorant indignation. It is a tribute to the sense of the American people that the flap is unlikely to play.

We refer to presidential counselor Meese's impolitic but candid remark: "I have never seen authoritative figures that there are hungry children in America." Meese blundered ahead: "We have considerable information that people go to soup kitchens because the food is free and that's easier than paying for it."

Now an enterprising team of reporters and cameramen probably could find some children in America who are going hungry. The important questions are whether those cases are a) common or typical; and b) the result of bad government policies or attempted cutbacks in federal food programs.

There is simply no reliable evidence of widespread hunger in America. Whatever hunger does exist is clearly not due to government hardheartedness. Spending on food aid for the poor has increased 30-fold since 1955 (making no discernible impact on the quality of diet or nutrition). Food stamp enrollment has increased from 20.6 million to 22 million (and monthly benefits have been increased) since President Reagan took office. Food assistance spending has increased 34 percent since 1980.

There are 13 federal food assistance programs, including 10 for children, many overlapping, several with no income eligibility limits. Food stamps were marketed aggressively (often to reluctant recipients) through the 1970s. Fraud and abuse are rampant.

The true scandal is government policies that make it more difficult for people to feed themselves without government assistance. Minimum wage laws and high taxes have crowded many Americans out of the job market, making it impossible for them to buy food with their own earnings.

Studies also indicate that the most common nutritional problems among lower-income people are deficiencies in Vitamin C and calcium, nutrients provided naturally by fresh fruits and vegetables, and milk. Government marketing orders keep the prices of fruits and vegetables artificially high, while price supports do the same for the price of milk.

Now there are some facts to incite a firestorm of outrage.

Tale of two economic forecasts

On Dec. 5, The Wall Street Journal reported that the "further sharp decline in the unemployment rate (to 8.4 percent) has forced many economists to eat their words..." Indeed, most economic forecasters had predicted that unemployment would rise slightly in November. Typical was the Merrill Lynch economics forecast of 8.9 percent.

As a result of the unexpectedly good news, the American Institute's Annual Public Policy Conference opened on Dec. 5 with many of the gloom- and- gloom monetarists "hedging" cautiously, while new optimism emerged from a most unlikely "coalition": the supply- siders on the Right and the Keynesians on the Left.

As President Carter's former economic adviser, Charles Schultz of the Brookings Institution, said, "The problem is, too many people have been crying 'Wolf, Wolf' about the deficits, and the wolf has not yet appeared."

While admitting that the deficits "could be problematical in the long run, in the short run, they won't hurt. In fact, they will help keep the recovery strong," Schultz said.

"After all, deficits at 3 to 4 percent of GNP are not all that dangerous. Other countries have survived much worse."

The Federal Reserve Board's Henry

Wallich agreed. "With a $200 billion deficit, there's no way this expansion can halt. There's not enough drag from interest rates to overcome the positive force of that element."

While Wallich readily admitted that "each $100 billion in deficit adds about 1.5 percentage points to interest rates," and that large deficits "are not sustainable indefinitely," he was very bullish on 1984.

So too was Nobelist James Tobin of Yale, one of the nation's leading liberal economists, who said, "We are having a strong Keynesian recovery. So far, hysteria about the deficit choking off the recovery has turned out to be nonsense."

While Tobin argued for a "different mixture of policies for 1985," his mood was upbeat enough to tickle the political heart of Ronald Reagan. Ironically, that mood echoes that of the supply- siders who are also looking for a big year in 1984.

H.C. Wainwright's David Ranson has trimmed his original 9 percent real growth forecast for 1984 (made a year ago) only fractionally to a husky 8.2 percent.

This bullish outlook is shared by economist William Dunkelberg of the National Federation of Independent Business, who has predicted 6.9 percent growth - saying that "while the rate of growth will be lower in the fourth quarter than in the second or third, there is no sign that the economy is in trouble."

Against this euphoric backdrop there was one very discordant note, and it comes from the former Chief Economist of Reagan's Office of Management and Budget. Larry Kudlow told the AEI seminar ominously that "pervasive optimism has limited serious debate and action on the deficit, and I for one am not calm."

"We are in for some unpleasant surprises in 1984 - and some of them are here already. For example, interest rates have already risen about 150 basis points since the beginning of the recovery - usually interest rates go down in a recovery."

"Stock and bond performances have not been all that good for the last six or seven months. Optimism has shifted to uncertainty."

"Inflation signs are already reviving. Raw materials prices, for example, have risen faster than during any previous recovery and the basic monetary growth trend is back up to historic long-term levels of 8 to 9 percent."

Noting that "political pressures have pushed federal spending to more than 24 percent of GNP, with no fiscal discipline in sight," Kudlow told us privately that he was sorry that Martin Feldstein had already "backed away" from his strident position on the federal deficits. "He should be sending up red flags about spending cuts, and inflation threats, and demand serious cuts."

"Unfortunately," Kudlow warned, "Marty has been Stockmanized, so you're going to see a budget forecast of 4 to 4.5 percent GNP growth, 4 to 5 percent inflation, and slightly lower T-bill rates."

"The president had better not believe that, because when interest rates and inflation start to rise later this year, and they will, Mondale will jump into that one with both feet."

Yet, 10 days after Kudlow told us this, producer prices (PPI) confounded the experts, including Kudlow, by falling two-tenths of a point and giving us a 1983 annual PPI rate of less than 1 percent, the lowest since 1964.

So there you are - for the Keynesians and supply-siders, the 1984 glass is more than half full, and brimming with potential for strong non-inflationary growth. For the monetarists, the 1984 tumbler is less than half empty, and fraught with the danger of rising interest rates, inflation and even incipient recession.

Terrorism ticking bomb in U.S.

Our White House is now barricaded against potential car-bombers. Other public buildings also.

These precautions resulted from anonymous threats, tips and the understandable anxiety of our officials.

In early December a terrorist plot against a public building in Seattle was intercepted by our FBI.

In mid-December, two live suitcase bombs were found in time in front of New York's Honeywell Building.

Our nation suffered 30 terrorist incidents in 1983; seven of them killed people.

And so that we will not underestimate the ominous potential, in Chicago somebody has broken into the storage locker of a professional exterminator.

The damage something like that can do in the wrong hands - in a city's water supply - is almost too hideous to contemplate.

But somebody has to. Nuclear weapons are self-defeating. Since 1945, for example, the Soviet has intruded on no nation which has "the bomb."

They attack only the weak. We are most vulnerable "internally." A Morgantown, West Virginia man confesses - yes - he stole from eight libraries 1,863 technical books.

But he explained. He said he feared somebody would use them to build a nuclear bomb.

He's worried about the wrong bomb.

The Senate Judiciary Committee's subcommittee on security and terrorism has monitored the growing threat to our internal security as best it can.

Sen. Jeremiah Denton of that subcommittee says "no one is immune. The Pope is vulnerable - but so were the 954 men, women and children - innocent bystanders - who were killed worldwide this past year by terrorists."

American embassies around the world are taking such steps as are practicable to protect personnel and premises.

Two-hundred fifty-six diplomatic posts are installing gates, laying pipes to guard against suicide drivers of bomb-loaded vehicles.

While here at home we enter upon an election year; also a year when we host international Olympic Games.

The prospect is not a happy one. (c) 1983, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Press reaction to Jackson mixed

By The Associated Press

Here is a sampling of editorial reaction to Syria's freeing of Navy Lt. Robert Goodman Jr. after a plea by the Rev. Jesse Jackson, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination.

"Now the second-guessing starts. For the present, suffice it that Jackson produced. The last American hostages in the Mideast had 440 days to wait before they walked."

"Too bad Jackson wasn't involved in that one." - Sioux City (Iowa) Journal.

"As the saying goes, there is no arguing with success, and the excursion of Democratic presidential hopeful Jesse Jackson to Syria was successful in all of its objectives: It freed U.S. Navy Lt. Robert Goodman, boosted Jackson's candidacy, made Syria and its President Hafez Assad look reasonable and forthcoming and President Reagan seem stubbornly against accommodation."

"The lieutenant's release is the one accomplishment among those that all Americans can rejoice in, as, additionally, we take pride in the professionalism with which Goodman conducted himself in the political circus that was roistering around his release." - the Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.

"Citizen diplomacy is risky - for governments, for individuals who try it and for international negotiation. But in this instance the risks proved worth taking. Welcome home, Robert Goodman." - Minneapolis Star and Tribune.

"Does the Goodman release enhance the credibility, hence the standing, of Jesse Jackson? Yes, but it shouldn't. Why? Because it's a grandstand play designed to please the crowd - designed to win him a lot of ink in the newspapers and a lot of footage on the evening TV shows." - The Richmond News Leader.

"In all the euphoria over Syria's release of U.S. Navy Lt. Robert Goodman Jr., it shouldn't be forgotten that the Marxist government of Syrian President Hafez Assad scored as much of a political and propaganda coup as the instigator of the mission to win Goodman's release, the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

"...Assad by no stretch of the imagination is a humanitarian. He is a ruthless cutthroat."

"As for Jackson's political fortunes, they probably will not benefit measurably. The trip was transparently political..." - The Arizona Republic

"...no one should look upon Assad as a great humanitarian. Despite his personal charm, he is one of the world's most notorious thugs, and he is the man who most stands in the way of pacifying Lebanon."

"Unfortunately, his liberation of Goodman was not what Jackson said it was - a giant step toward peace." - Sun-Times, Chicago

"We trust that those naysayers who gratuitously ridiculed Jesse Jackson as a blundering busybody will now have the good grace to acknowledge that results do count for something. From the outset, we felt that Jackson's mission to rescue the American pilot from the Syrians was a long shot, but we failed to perceive the harm of trying."

"In the meantime, let us also hope that no more pilots are exposed to the kind of unnecessary danger that led to Goodman's captivity." - The Evening Sun, Baltimore

"While all Americans rejoice that Goodman has been freed and that Jackson's mission was a success, there is an uneasiness over Jackson's trip."

"The fact remains that President Reagan is in charge of foreign policy. It is not the province of presidential candidates, no matter how well intentioned... It is the responsibility of the president and, after all, it was the policy of the president that put American troops in Lebanon in the first place." - Tucson (Ariz.) Citizen.

"The Rev. Jesse Jackson returns in triumph. He set off for Damascus in the hope of bringing Goodman back with him, and has met with a splendid success. The president spoke for everyone when he told Jackson, 'All Americans thank you.' His cautious and dignified handling of his role is a striking contrast to the bungling by the various unofficial negotiators who tried to get the American hostages out of Iran." - New York Daily News.

"The Syrians were clear in why they joined in this publicity stunt: Because they want to encourage agitation in America for withdrawal of the Marines from Lebanon..."

"It does not follow, however, that anything Syria wants is automatically bad for the United States. That Syria wants the Marines out of Beirut is no argument for keeping them there."

"Those 1,800 troops are more nearly hostages than Lt. Goodman ever was. They are trapped in a factional crossfire they cannot hope to subdue. Their main mission is no longer to protect others, only themselves." - The New York Times

"It appears there is now an opportunity President Reagan should not waste. Because the initiative was taken by the Syrian government, and Goodman was released prior to any official American action or agreement, a U.S. troop withdrawal cannot possibly be interpreted as ransom paid for the flier's release... If there is to be an opportune time to extricate this nation from the Middle East muddle, that time is now..." - The Cedar Rapids Gazette.

"You would have to be a terrible curmudgeon not to be grateful that Lt. Goodman is free and safe, the hero of almost the only story in Lebanon that has had a happy ending. Still, the successful exercise in personal diplomacy by Mr. Jackson raises some questions that are extremely discomfiting."

"The exchange offered Mr. Assad... a chance to return to the spotlight with a magnanimous gesture, almost as if he were not the butcher of Hama and the man who at least tacitly acquiesced - and may have done more - in the bombing of the barracks where 241 Marines were killed in October." - Detroit Free Press.

El Salvador sends 2 officers linked to death squads abroad

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Two former Salvadoran intelligence chiefs linked with death squads have been reassigned abroad following U.S. demands for the exile of officers suspected of involvement with the right-wing terrorist groups.

A government official, who asked not to be identified, said Wednesday night that Lt. Col. Aristides Alfonso Marquez, former National Police intelligence chief, and Maj. Jose Ricardo Pozo, former Treasury Police intelligence chief, were transferred out of the country.

In another development, U.S. special envoy Richard Stone arrived in San Salvador on Wednesday to meet with President Alvaro Magana and other government officials. Stone was to travel today to Nicaragua to meet officials of the leftist Sandinista government.

As Stone continued his peace-seeking mission, Salvadoran air force planes Wednesday bombed guerrillas positions in northern El Salvador and CIA-backed anti-Sandinista rebels pressed attacks in northern Nicaragua.

The Salvadoran official said Pozo was ordered to Paraguay, but he was not sure whether Pozo was assigned as a military attaché at the Salvadoran Embassy or was given a scholarship to study counterinsurgency. He said he did not know Marquez' destination.

Diplomatic sources quoted in published reports in the United States in November identified Pozo and Marquez as being involved in the death squads, blamed for the deaths of most of the 39,000 civilians killed in the four-year civil war between leftist rebels and the U.S.-backed government.

U.S. officials say the squads are composed in part of off-duty or retired military members and financed by wealthy Salvadorans living in Miami and elsewhere abroad.

The Reagan administration has said those connected with death squads ought to be exiled and Vice President George Bush warned during his December visit here that the government would lose U.S. support if action was not taken against the death squads.

Stone, in Honduras earlier Wednesday, said he was hopeful a high-level diplomatic meeting beginning Saturday in Panama may produce concrete steps toward peace in Central America. He praised year-old peace efforts by foreign ministers of the Contadora group — made up of Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia and Panama.

In fighting, civilian sources in Suchitoto, 27 miles north of San Salvador, reported bombing runs Wednesday after a clash between guerrillas and government troops.

In northern Nicaragua, rebels pressed attacks against Sandinista troops near Jalapa, 11 miles from the Honduran border.

To buy or not to buy a house

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The same old question, the very same dilemma that harassed them last year, faces many thousands of families again this year: To buy or not to buy a house.

For those caught up in the battle a few hints might help: —There is probably no ideal time to buy. If interest rates are down a bit you'll probably find prices up a bit. And if prices are down, the probable cause is that higher interest rates have cut into sales.

—Most housing industry forecasts seem to call for slightly lower interest rates early this year, tending higher by autumn. Prices, which have remained fairly stable for three years, also are expected to rise.

In the first three years of the 1980s the median price of a single-family resale home rose about 12 percent. This year, says Jack Carlson, executive vice president of the National Association of Realtors, prices of resale homes are likely to rise 6.2 percent above 1983's median price of about $70,400.

—Lenders are pushing adjustable rate mortgages for all they're worth, which is debatable. Adjustables are offered now at about 11.5 percent to 12 percent, compared with 13 percent to 13.5 percent for fixed-rate mortgages.

Which should you seek? In some instances you'll have no choice but to take an adjustable. But when you have a choice, you should keep in mind the great fear of the various housing groups — that a continuation of budget deficits is almost certain to force interest rates higher within a year or so.

Consider this: The National Association of Home Builders estimates that every 1 percent increase in interest rates eliminates 2 million Americans as potential buyers. If you already own, therefore, it could cause problems.

To continue renting might buy time but probably not much more. Builders' costs are continuing to rise, and so must rents. Moreover, limited partnerships have bid up prices of existing apartments. To justify purchase prices, new owners must increase their rent rolls.

—To buy a smaller home is not necessarily to buy an inferior home. Builders have taken a tip from carmakers: They are shrinking size but raising quality and efficiency, thus keeping both initial price and operating costs low.

—Several other cost-cutting options exist.

If you supply the lot, the foundation, the plumbing connections and the landscaping, you may be able to have a 1,200-square-foot factory-built home delivered and connected for as little as $30,000.

If you are willing to buy a house before completion you can save thousands of dollars, the amount saved being dependent on the amount of work left to be completed by you.

If you are willing to tackle the entire building job yourself — you can cut your costs to a fraction.

Crowd looked on as woman dies
NEWPORT NEWS, Va. (AP) — A crowd of about 20 people looked on as a deaf woman was fatally stabbed on a busy city street, but "nobody moved to help" her, says a truck driver who passed by and tried to break up the attack.

"I just couldn't understand why people were just standing around and looking," James Greene said Wednesday, a day after 41-year-old Virginia Price died with what police said were about 20 stab wounds.

A 39-year-old construction worker, James L. Forbes, was arrested Wednesday and charged with murder. He was being held without bond in the Newport News city jail, police said.

Greene said he was passing through the city's East End, an area of urban renewal projects and middle-class neighborhoods, at about 3 p.m. when he spotted the struggle from a distance.

"It looked like they were wrestling," said Greene, a veteran of the Army Special Forces. "It looked like he was hitting her with his fists, but then I saw the knife. That's when I parked my truck." Greene, who is from nearby Hampton, said he grabbed an ax handle from the truck, ran to the pair and pounded the attacker squarely in the back near the neck.

"He just stood straight up like a grizzly bear. I thought I'd killed him the way I hit him, but it didn't seem to faze him one bit," said Greene.

Then, he said, the attacker reached into his coat pocket.

"I tried my best but I thought he was going for a gun so I just backed off of him. I don't mind helping people, but I don't want to get shot in the process," Greene said.

Woman sets plane lavatory afire

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A woman who set fire to a lavatory aboard a Delta Air Lines flight as it approached Los Angeles was arrested by two U.S. marshals aboard the jet, and the blaze was quickly extinguished, the FBI said.

Audrey Jean Taylor, 31, of Las Vegas, Nev., was booked for investigation of destroying an aircraft, said FBI spokesman John Hoos.

The incident occurred Wednesday aboard Delta Flight 331, which was carrying 148 passengers — including the marshals — about 35 miles east of Los Angeles International Airport, en route from Dallas.

"During the course of the flight, Taylor set fire to a lavatory on the aircraft which was extinguished by the crew," Hoos said. "Two U.S. marshals aboard the flight assisted the crew and placed Taylor in their custody."

She was turned over to the FBI in Los Angeles just before 5 p.m.

Delta spokesman Jim Ewing in Atlanta said the fire "scorched" one of two lavatories at the rear of the Boeing 727, but the jet was able to make a scheduled return flight to Dallas.

Ms. Taylor was held at Sybil Brand women's prison and was scheduled for arraignment Thursday.

Marbles finds broken water pipes are not funny

Cold does funny things. Take pipes for instance. Pipes have the strange tendency to show their dislike of cold by waiting until the most perfectly miserable day in winter and then bursting, creating underground ice rinks beneath already frigid floors. It happened to us one day when Old Dad was in nice, warm Arizona and Mumbles the Obstinant was in nice, warm Austin. Wacko and I were alone in the house when we heard what sounded a great deal like Niagra Falls rumbling merrily 'neath our aptly named pier and beam foundation. I was my usual cool self, being extremely useful by running around screaming

LOOSE MARBLES

things like "Help! Help!" and "Man the lifeboats!" Wacko, in a spurt of what I considered sheer genius, turned off the water.

I might be wrong, but I could have sworn I saw the tips of icebergs roaming around under there. I know for sure that the wind was howling outside, that the temperature was plummeting, and that my youngest offspring and a dear friend were dog-paddling underneath our home - turned houseboat. I'm pretty sure they were wearing snorkles.

Of course it all turned out well. The protesting pipe was replaced. Wacko was given an excused absence from school (the principal said that learning you didn't want to be a plumber was one of the most valuable educational experiences a kid could have), and we think our friend's pneumonia is about to clear up. We'll know for sure if he'll just start taking our calls. All in all, Wacko and I learned a lot. We learned that good plumbers are worth their weight in gold - should you ever catch one long enough to weigh him. We found out that insulated coveralls can be propped in a corner - provided they soak in ice water for several hours. And we learned that if you ask a friend for the loan of a pipe wrench and squirt water on his hand as he's giving it to you, most likely it will freeze to him, and he'll be forced to help you repair the plumbing. Maybe someday we'll have another friend we can try that on.

NEW YORK (NEA) - Not all writers find themselves testing their own ideas, but after Alyson Fendel published her fashion advice book for the expectant mother, she herself became pregnant. She's been appearing before women's groups to give advice - and her own pregnancy lends weight to her words.

The practical advice in "Waiting in Style" includes basic shopping lists for several budget levels and chapters on accessories that spark up outfits.

The Christmas Toys for Tots drive begun this year by Pampa Medical Services is to become an annual event after receiving an enthusiastic response from local citizens, says Joseph Zillmer, director of the organization.

Zillmer and his staff say they wish to thank all the citizens and businesses, including the Pampa

Exemption rules are complex but not too difficult

By Robert Metz
(Fourth of 14 articles)

Taxpayers have claimed everything and everyone from dogs to Uncle Sam as

Who is your dependent?

exemptions. Yet the rules governing exemptions, while complex, are not unduly difficult.

Exemptions are of two classes: personal exemptions for you and your spouse; and exemptions for dependents. You can subtract $1,000 for each exemption.

CUT YOUR OWN TAXES AND SAVE

You can take a personal exemption for yourself. You get another exemption if you are over 65 or blind. If both taxpayers are blind and over 65 you may deduct $3,000.

TAX TIP: You may be able to claim a blindness exemption even if you're not totally blind. You need a doctor's statement, which you should attach to your tax return, to document the condition.

If you are married and file jointly, you may claim an exemption for your spouse. Take exemptions for age or blindness if appropriate. If your spouse files separately, you may take his or her exemption only if your spouse had no gross income and was not the dependent of another taxpayer.

You may claim an exemption of $1,000 for each person who qualifies as your dependent. But you may not claim exemptions for age or blindness for them.

A child born anytime during the year entitles the parents to a full year's exemption. No exemption is allowed for a stillborn child.

You get a $1,000 exemption for each dependent. Generally, an exemption is lost if the dependent has a gross income of $1,000 or more. However, income from Social Security or from tax-exempt municipal bonds doesn't count. Children under age 19 who earn more than $1,000 or who are full-time students may be claimed as dependents, if you provide more than half their support.

The tests for exemptions are as follows:
- Support Test: You must provide more than half the money for the dependent's total support for the year. Consider the entire amount of support the dependent gets from all sources. Support is money spent for necessities such as food, shelter, clothing, education, medical care, recreation and transportation.

TAX TIP: In figuring support, you can include items such as a car or television you gave to your dependent for his or her use.

TAX TRAP: But, if you retain ownership of the car and use it with your dependent, it is not support. The expenses of operating the car for your dependent's benefit would still be part of support.

- Gross Income Test: Other than children under 19 and those who are full-time students, your dependents must have had less than $1,000 in gross income for 1983. Social Security does not count.

- The Member of Household or Relationship Test: A member of your household who lives with you for the entire year need not be related to you. Temporary absences from your home do not disqualify that person as your dependent.

A dependent who is related to you need not live with you. Relations include children, grandchildren or great-grandchildren, stepchildren, but not their descendants; brothers, sisters, half-brothers, half-sisters, stepbrothers or step-sisters; parents, grandparents or other direct ancestors, but not foster parents; stepparents; aunts or uncles and nieces or nephews; fathers-in-law, mothers-in-law, sons-in-law, daughters-in-law, brothers-in-law or sisters-in-law.

Relationships established by marriage are not terminated by death or divorce.

- Citizenship Test: Your dependent must be a U.S. citizen, resident or national, or a resident of Canada or Mexico, for part of the calendar year.

- Joint Return Test: You may not claim a person who files a joint return with someone else as a dependent.

Example: Your daughter, who was married on Dec. 24, files a joint return with her husband. You cannot claim her as a dependent.

TAX TIP: Consider having your recently married dependent forego filing with his or her new spouse so that you can claim the dependency exemption.

Next: Selling a home (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Dear Abby

Wife is 'other woman' for straying husband

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: A year ago, my husband of 23 years (we're both in our mid-40s) left me to move in with a 23-year-old girl he picked up in a bar. Until then we had a good and loving relationship. Then his business failed, which was more than he could handle, so he left.

He didn't leave completely. He keeps many of his personal belongings here, still pays all the household expenses and comes to see me two or three nights a week. (We usually end up in bed.) Of course, we can't see any of our old friends anymore or go out in public because he doesn't want his girlfriend to know about our continuing relationship.

My question: Am I doing the right thing by continuing to see my husband? I think he needs all the love and support I can give him. I'm sure that when he gets things figured out he will want to come back home again. But until then, what about the girl?

I don't want to hurt anyone, but I still love my husband and don't want to let him down when he needs me. What do you advise?

THE OTHER WOMAN

DEAR WOMAN: You are to be commended for your loyalty, devotion, understanding and support of a husband who left you to live with another woman. But what kind of man would live with one woman and sneak out to be with another two or three times a week? Take a closer look at this deceitful and mixed-up character. What assurance have you that he will return and be a decent husband again? You are being more a forgiving mother to him than a wife, but if you are happy in that role, 'tis folly to be wise.

DEAR ABBY: I recently announced my engagement, so everywhere I go people congratulate me, then they say, "I'm looking for my invitation." Or they ask the wedding date, and when I tell them, they say, "Oh, great, I can make it!"

I am furious at myself for not saying something on the spot to let them know I had not planned on inviting them. These people who are not my close friends try to bribe me by saying, "If you invite me, I'll bring a nice present." That is not the point. I can't invite the whole blasted community to my wedding!

My parents are retired and can't afford to pay for my wedding, so my fiancé and I are footing the bill, and we are limited because of the cost.

How should I handle these people who invite themselves? I hate to hurt their feelings, but I need to let them know they shouldn't expect an invitation.

SPEECHLESS AND FUMING

DEAR S. AND F.: What's wrong with the truth? Tell them you are planning to have a very small wedding because that's all you can afford.

DEAR ABBY: A New York reader wrote that a relative who had died on a trip to Poland was buried there because it would have been too expensive ($7,500) to have his body flown back to the United States for burial. I wondered why cremation wasn't considered. It would have cost much less to have his remains (ashes) flown home.

I had always wondered why, with Europe's long history, some of those countries weren't crowded with cemeteries. On my first visit there I learned that as long as someone pays rent on a burial plot, the remains are left undisturbed. But if payments cease, the grave is emptied in preparation for the next occupant.

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY - I have tried substituting yogurt for sour cream in cooked dishes like beef stroganoff. The yogurt seems to separate and turn into lumps. Is there any way to keep these sauces smooth? - LINDA

DEAR LINDA - Yogurt will curdle when overheated. Never allow a sauce to boil after you've stirred in yogurt. The best procedure is to complete the cooking of the sauce, allow it to cool down from a boil very slightly, then stir in the yogurt just before serving. If the dish needs to be reheated, use a very low flame, stir constantly and turn off the heat as soon as the desired temperature is reached. Don't let it boil and your sauce should stay fairly smooth. - POLLY

Harvesters boost confidence at prestigious Fort Worth tourney

PERFECT SHOOTER—Senior guard Randy Harris (above) didn't miss a shot while scoring 15 points in Pampa's 109-80 win over Canyon Tuesday night. Harris was a perfect six of six from the floor and three of three from the foul line. Teammate Marty Cross didn't miss a field goal attempt either in scoring 18 points. Cross was nine for nine from the floor. (Staff Photo)

Pampa's 109-80 win over Canyon Tuesday night may have been set up by the Harvesters' outstanding showing in the prestigious Fort Worth Lions Club Tournament last week.

"The kids gained a lot of confidence in that tournament," said Pampa coach Garland Nichols. "The big thing about the tournament is that the kids got to handle every phase of the game."

Pampa won its first three games and then met Waxahachie, defending Class 4A champion and currently the top-ranked team in the state. Pampa gave Waxahachie quite a scare before losing, 72-64.

"I was real pleased with the way we handled the presses all through the tournament," said Nichols. "The presses ever bothered us."

Pampa jumped out to a 22-16 first-quarter lead before falling behind, 39-36, at halftime. Pampa never regained the lead, but pulled within two in the fourth quarter after falling behind by as much as eleven points.

The Fort Worth Tournament is ranked among the top five invitational high school tournaments in the nation.

"It can't help but give a team confidence when we played like we did against those caliber of teams," Nichols added. "The kids should get confidence if they don't get anything else."

"When you play all the time in this part of the country, you begin to wonder if you can beat anyone down south. When you realize you can play against other teams and beat them, it's going to give you a lot of confidence."

Even with the confidence-builder, Nichols had no idea Pampa would whip Canyon by such a lopsided score.

"I thought I might have a problem of getting them up for the game, because they were down after playing in last year's tournament for a long time."

The Harvesters were anything but down, hitting 44 of 72 (61.6 percent) field goal attempts and 21 of 30 foul shot tries (70 percent).

Two Harvesters—Marty Cross and Randy Harris—never missed a shot while scoring in double figures.

Cross was nine of nine and Harris was six of six.

Harris was also a perfect three of three from the foul line.

Pampa committed only two turnovers in the first half while piling up a 61-35 halftime advantage. For the game, the Harvesters had just ten turnovers.

"We want to keep it going and never let up," Nichols added. "You'd have thought we lost that game Tuesday, because we had a hard workout Wednesday."

Pampa hosts Lubbock Estacado in another district clash Friday night. Estacado, 1-1 in loop play, defeated Levelland Tuesday night.

District 1-4A standings through Tuesday night are as follows:

Pampa 2-0; Borger 2-0; Lubbock Dunbar 2-0; Lubbock Estacado 1-1; Canyon 1-1; Brownfield 0-2; Levelland 0-2; Dumas 0-2.

Lady Harvesters host Estacado Friday night

Pampa's Lady Harvesters host Lubbock Estacado at 6 p.m. Friday night in McNeely Fieldhouse.

The Lady Harvesters were crushed by a taller Canyon club, 65-28, Tuesday night, and coach Albert Nichols is hoping his players can forget about it and look ahead to Friday night's game.

"I think if the girls can get their heads back together, they can get back on the winning side," Nichols said. "Canyon was really pumped up after winning the Slaton Tournament and it was just hard to match up against their taller girls."

Nichols feels the Lady Harvesters have an excellent shot at winning their next three games—against Estacado, Borger and Brownfield, three of the district's weaker teams.

"We're not going to kid ourselves that we can beat teams like Canyon, Levelland and Dumas, but I feel like we're capable of beating these other teams if we'll just settle down," Nichols said.

White Deer tournament switched to Skellytown

The White Deer High School Basketball Tournament has been switched to Skellytown this year after water from a broken water pipe damaged the floor in the Bucks gym.

The gymnasium floor was flooded when freezing temperatures caused the water pipe to break.

"It was just completely destroyed, but they've started work now on a new floor," said girls' coach Lenora Barnes.

The White Deer tournament will be held today through Friday at the Skellytown gym.

White Deer girls were defeated by Booker, 67-34, Tuesday in their first game of 1984.

Tina Ford was White Deer's top scorer with 21 points.

John Hilbig poured in 32 points to lead Booker past White Deer in boy's game.

Darren Russell had 27 for White Deer while teammate Will Brown added 10.

Pampa rifle club to meet Jan. 12

Johnson, Hogeboom to be traded?

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry said he will abide by a promise he made last September to wide receiver Butch Johnson that he would trade him at the end of the season.

Landry made the pledge in a Sept. 21 meeting with Johnson after the outspoken backup to Drew Pearson returned from an impromptu, in-season, 2-day "vacation" to Cancun.

The Cowboys coach also confirmed that backup quarterback Gary Hogeboom had come to him this week asking for a trade. Landry did not indicate he was inclined to grant that request.

Hogeboom still has one year plus an option year left on his contract.

Landry said his promise to Johnson, an eight-year backup, was made in return for Johnson's pledge he would keep his complaints to himself for the rest of the season.

"He did his part, and now I will do my part," Landry told the Dallas Morning News. "Butch is at the point right now that a trade is what he needs as a person. It's in the best interest of everyone."

Landry added, "If I tell a guy I will trade him, I will trade him if that's what he wants. I told him he would be traded at the end of the year, and we will trade him."

However, Johnson balked Wednesday, after reading of Landry's remarks in the newspaper.

"I will refuse to report to any team that trades for me," Johnson said. He told WFAA-TV in Dallas that he wants the Cowboys to place him on waivers so he can negotiate with the team of his choice and make his own deal.

Landry imposed a ban on end zone demonstrations the past season that Johnson viewed as an infringement on his rights.

His "California Quake" celebration had given him widespread exposure.

Hogeboom was unhappy about his lack of time as a quarterback, despite trouble that starting quarterback Danny White had during the year.

"I went in and talked to Tom, and told him I wanted to be traded. He didn't have a whole lot to say to that. Hogeboom told the Morning News.

"He told me he thought would be better off as a Cowboy and that I would have a better chance of playing this year. But I've heard that before. The meeting didn't last more than five minutes."

Texas Tech, Arkansas off to quick starts in SWC

By The Associated Press

The Southwest Conference's first major battle doesn't tip off until tonight, but some challengers to the league throne have made quick starts.

Both Arkansas and Texas Tech, two teams that fared well in non-conference action, won games Wednesday as the league race opened for six schools.

Arkansas defeated Baylor 57-50 behind center Joe Kleine's 18 points and Texas Tech routed Texas Christian 79-60. In other action, Texas A&M held off Rice 52-47 and Texas lost a non-conference game to Kansas State 64-54.

Tonight in Dallas, the two league's leaders in non-conference play, defending champion Houston and Southern Methodist, open play. SMU brings a 12-2 record into the game. Houston, 10-2, is a 5½-point favorite.

Razorback coach Eddie Sutton, whose team raised its season record to 10-2 Wednesday night, was just happy to get out of Waco's Heart O' Texas Coliseum with the win over Baylor, 4-8.

"As long as I've been at Arkansas, it seems we've never played very well here," Sutton said.

"It's something about this place that brings out the worst in us. We've had trouble winning here in the past and about the only good thing you can say tonight is that we came away with a victory. But we didn't look very good doing it."

Alvin Robertson, added 17 points for the Razorbacks, keyed a 10-0 Arkansas outburst at the start of the game with three quick baskets, and the Razorbacks never trailed although Baylor made a run at the end of the game.

Arkansas led by as many as 13 points at 48-35 with 7:11 to play before the Bears rallied behind James Stern and DeWayne Brown.

Stern scored 18 points while Brown, a freshman from Dallas, popped in 10, mostly on driving layups against the Arkansas pressing defense.

In Lubbock, Tech, 7-5, broke open a tight contest with a 20-7 surge midway through the second half.

Junior forward Vince Taylor, who led the Red Raiders with 10 points, 12 rebounds and four blocked shots, was at the center of the rally, scoring 4 points, hauling in four rebounds, swatting away a pair of TCU shots and dishing out two assists.

Texas Tech coach Gerald Myers credited the surge and several transition goals for his team's success against the Frogs.

"The success that we have had this year has come as a result of team effort," Myers said. "I thought the turning point was when we got a couple of transition baskets that opened an eight-point lead to 12."

TCU, 7-5, played without freshman standout Carven Holcombe, who fractured a foot last week.

"Obviously, our not having Carven was a big difference. Still, we've got to learn to play with the people we have available." Killingsworth said.

In Houston, Winston Crite scored eight of his team-high 10 points in the closing minutes of the first half to spark A&M, 6-4, to its victory over Rice, 4-6.

During Crite's scoring spree, the Aggies increased their lead from three to 10 points and outscored Rice 15-8. The Owls did not get closer until Tony Barnett hit two baskets late in the game to pull them within five at the closing buzzer.

Texas A&M led 33-23 at the half.

Rice coach Tommy Suits laid blame for the loss squarely on his team.

Lefors edges Samnorwood

SAMNORWOOD—Lefors edged Samnorwood, 52-50, in a high school boys' basketball game Tuesday night.

Neither team was separated by more than five points throughout the contest as Lefors pulled away late in the fourth quarter for the win.

Preston West led Lefors with 18 points, Bo Lake had 13 and Ronnie Alderson 10.

Steve Bentley and Scott Martindale had 19 and 18 points respectively for the losers.

Lefors, 6-7, will meet Wheeler at 8:30 p.m. tonight in the first round of the Wheeler Tournament.

Samnorwood won the girls' game, 54-45.

"It was a lot closer than what the score showed," said Lefors coach Charles Sullivan. "We got behind in the fourth quarter and had to press to catch up. We just turned it over too many times."

Stacy Brandvik led the winners with 21 points.

Crystal Roberts topped Lefors with 16.

Lefors will meet Wheeler girls at 7 p.m. tonight in the Wheeler Tournament.

Groom defeats Happy

Groom swept won two games from Happy in high school basketball action Tuesday night.

Groom rallied from behind to win the boys' game, 49-47.

Groom had trailed at the half, 23-22.

Wesley English and Darron Eschle led Groom with 12 points apiece.

Clinton Clark had 16 for Happy.

Kathleen Koetting tossed in 23 points to lead Groom to a 57-52 win in the girls' game.

Fields added 16.

Carrie Sanders and Jacinda Stockitt had 14 and 13 points respectively for the losers.

PUBLIC NOTICE

In proceedings pending before the Public Utility Commission of Texas (PUC), local exchange telephone companies are requesting authority to charge AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc., for use of their facilities. These proposed charges are higher than AT&T Communications can pay at current Texas long distance rate levels. To position itself to be able to implement rates that are sufficient to produce revenues that will recover the costs facing the company, AT&T Communications must now file for rate relief to be able to implement rates that reflect the costs of access that are ultimately imposed on the company.

While AT&T Communications does not want to increase its Texas rates, an increase would be required to recover the increased access charges AT&T Communications will have to pay to the local exchange telephone companies under several proposals pending before the Commission. These access charges at the proposed increased levels represent more than 80 percent of AT&T Communications' operating expense in Texas.

Accordingly, AT&T Communications, in accordance with the Public Utility Regulatory Act and the rules of the PUC, hereby gives notice of the company's intent to implement a new schedule of rates for long distance calls within Texas. The proposed rates will be effective January 28, 1984, unless otherwise determined by the Commission. All customers and classes of customers would be affected by AT&T Communications' proposed rates.

If higher access charges are ordered, AT&T Communications has no recourse but to pay these charges and recover the costs from its customers as a cost of providing long distance service within Texas. AT&T Communications has filed rates which would mean a maximum overall increase in adjusted test period revenues of $301.4 million, or 27.85 percent. This amount would help recover cost increases due to the proposed level of access charges now pending before the PUC.

A complete copy of all tariffs and rate schedules is on file with the Texas Public Utility Commission at Austin, Texas, and with every municipality in Texas.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene or participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information also may be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Dramatic survival story turns into police probe

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — What began as a tale of survival on a snow-covered mountain has developed into a spreading investigation involving high-quality cocaine, a pilot with a revoked license and $19,200 in cash in a wrecked plane, authorities say.

In the latest development, state police Maj. Neil Curran revealed Wednesday night that 36-year-old pilot Tony Mink of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., has agreed to meet with investigators to discuss what Curran called the "strange circumstances" of Mink's Dec. 23 crash landing.

Mink and his 14-year-old son, Brian, said they spent five days trapped in the cramped wreckage of their single-engine plane in the rugged northern New Mexico wilderness, huddling together for warmth, nibbling sparsely at food and burning checks to melt snow for drinking water.

Mink's 36-year-old wife, Charlene, died in the crash, which Mink said occurred as they were flying from Colorado to Utah for a Christmas visit.

He and his son were found and rescued by helicopter Dec. 28.

But the rescuers also discovered $19,200 in cash in the back of the plane, prompting state police and agents of the Drug Enforcement Administration to wade through chest-deep drifts three days later to inspect the wreckage, Curran said.

On one wing they found a package which tests showed to be 14 grams of cocaine, 80 percent to 90 percent pure, said Curran, estimating its street value at $5,000.

In Miami, meanwhile, a U.S. Customs spokeswoman said Mink and another Fort Lauderdale man were arrested in the Bahamas in 1980 when Mink allegedly ditched a plane carrying 400 pounds of marijuana off the coast of Bimini. Sgt. Granville McMinnis of the Bahamas Police Department said he remembered the arrest but not the disposition.

And the Federal Aviation Administration said Mink's pilot license was revoked in 1981, with no record of a new one being issued.

Mink, who attended his wife's funeral Tuesday in Utah, has not been charged and "at this time we don't have sufficient evidence to charge anyone," said Curran.

TELL OF RESCUE—Tony Mink, left, and his son Brian are shown in wheelchairs following their rescue last week from the crash of a single-engine airplane on a snow-covered New Mexico mountain. But what started out as a story of survival has evolved into an expanding investigation by police involving cocaine and thousands of dollars that were found at the crash site. (AP Laserphoto)

Arrested veterans haunted by memories of combat

GREENFIELD, Mass. (AP) — One of three Vietnam veterans accused of torching a Buddhist shrine "cried for seven years" after returning from the war and once pointed a gun at his ex-wife, thinking she was Vietnamese, the woman said.

The 33-year-old veteran, Roland F. Voudren, of Turners Falls, was returned to a Veterans Administration hospital in Leeds today, along with the two other men, Richard A. Papineau, 35, of Hartford, Conn. and Donald E. Taylor, 37, of Charlemont.

Innocent pleas to "willful and malicious burning of a building" were entered Wednesday in Greenfield District Court on behalf of all three by attorney Robert Carlsen, head of the local chapter of Vietnam Veterans of America.

Judge Allan McGuane set $10,000 bond apiece before ordering them to remain at the hospital pending a pretrial conference Jan. 27. The three had entered the hospital voluntarily for undisclosed treatment prior to their arrests at the facility Wednesday.

District Attorney W. Michael Ryan said one of the men happened upon the shrine in the isolated town of Hawley in the Berkshire Hills sometime before the New Year's Eve fire, "freaked out" at the sight of the Oriental architecture and planned the fire with the two other men.

Voudren's former wife described the ex-Marine as haunted by nightmarish memories of Vietnam. She said he never got over seeing his best friend die in combat and was dogged by his belief that he was guilty of killing enemy children.

"He always used to say to me, 'I was in the war. I had to kill people. Nobody understands,'" said Linda Albino, who said Voudren's drinking and Vietnam "flashbacks" led to divorce.

"He cried all the time. He cried for seven years," she said. Voudren used to discuss Vietnam with Taylor and both men frequently took their weekend passes from the VA hospital together, according to Mrs. Albino.

Mrs. Albino said her husband once threw her on their living room floor and pointed a gun at her.

"He thought I was a (Vietnamese). He was convinced," she said.

Psychological counseling at the VA center never seemed to help, his family said.

Veterans in the ward said Wednesday that wartime memories are no excuse for peacetime violence.

Firestone has brought a superior intelligence to car care. Our new computerized engine diagnostic machine analyzes 200 different engine functions in only minutes. Then a print out tells the customer what's wrong and the mechanic what problems need checking. This system is designed to get the job done right the first time and eliminate unnecessary repairs. The charge for this service is $29.95 and up to the entire amount is applied toward any work done that the computer reveals, thereby resulting in no charge at all for the analysis in many cases.
