

Lipscomb residents welcome coal pipeline project

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

Residents of Lipscomb County announced their support for a proposed coal-slurry pipeline from Wyoming through Texas at a state public hearing Tuesday in Lipscomb.

Most county landowners who spoke at the hearing and the county judge said they support the project. The landowners, the county taxing entities and the local economy stand to reap millions if the pipeline is built, according to a presentation given at the hearing by the company proposing to build the line.

Representatives of Energy Transportation Systems Inc. (ETSI) told the Lipscomb residents that the pipeline could generate $948,000 per year in property taxes for the county's taxing entities. The pipeline would also bring a new industry, a huge pump station, to the small town of Lipscomb, company representatives said. They told the landowners that in addition to payments for 100-foot-wide rights of way, the company would pay them for any damages caused by the buried line.

"We're very much in favor of the pipeline. We think it would be a boon to industrial expansion," Lipscomb County Judge James Sheer announced for the record at the hearing Tuesday.

Judge Sheer told The Pampa News that the company's estimate of potential taxes from the pipeline may be too optimistic. He said the figure of nearly a million dollars a year in extra tax dollars should probably be cut in half as a more realistic prospect.

Even that much lower estimate of potential new tax revenue is "nothing to sneeze at," he said.

The county judge, though, said the main benefit of the pipeline's route through the county would be the pump station's benefits to the local economy

BEHIND THE WINDOWS - U.S. Postal Service employee Christie Hinds, left, shows some of the mail sorting slots to Sidney Jackson, center, and Mrs. Frank Kelley during open house tours Tuesday at the Pampa Post Office. Postmaster Richard Wilson said about 300 persons toured the facilities, including the operations behind the postal service windows. "We had a real good turnout," Wilson said. "We really didn't know what to expect," since this was the first time the office had held an open house, he added. Wilson said the employees started showing people through the office about 9 a.m. yesterday and continued until about 3:30 p.m., even though the official hours had been scheduled for 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. (Staff photo by Ed Copeland)

Condition for tests approval

Senate demands Reagan promise he's negotiated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate says President Reagan has to promise he has made a "good faith" effort to negotiate a U.S. Soviet treaty before the Pentagon goes ahead with its plans for testing a weapon to kill Soviet satellites.

The 61-28 vote late Tuesday capped more than seven hours of debate which included a secret session to hear U.S. intelligence reports about recent Soviet advances in space, the last frontier of the arms race between the two superpowers.

It came only a day after Soviet President Konstantin Chernenko said a treaty should be negotiated "without delay" to ban anti-satellite weapons, a call which was publicly rejected by the White House.

Reagan insists an anti-satellite ban would be too difficult to verify and says the United States should go ahead with its own anti-satellite weapon — known as an ASAT.

The ASAT weapons are different from the successful Sunday test of the Army's missile designed to knock down other missiles. And they also differ from Reagan's call for research into a futuristic "Star Wars" shield against Soviet missiles, although all three systems use some common technologies.

The Senate restriction would ban the next round of testing of U.S. anti-satellite weapons unless Reagan certifies he is "endeavoring in good faith" to negotiate the strictest possible limitations on anti-satellite weapons.

The provision tacked onto a Pentagon authorization bill differed from a House vote last month to ban the tests unless the Soviets break their self-imposed, 10-month-old moratorium on testing the weapons. The two versions will be worked out later by a House-Senate conference committee.

The secret session, the first in 15 months, was held to discuss classified reports about Soviet capabilities to kill U.S. satellites.

Both nations rely on satellites for spying, communications and early warning of attack.

The session lasted 2 hours, 45 minutes and when it was finished, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said he hadn't heard anything to make him "ready, as the administration has been, to throw in the towel as far as arms control agreements over space weapons is concerned."

But Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman John Tower, R-Texas, berated the attempts to limit the Reagan administration, shouting,

"Why don't we pass an amendment instead urging the Supreme Soviet to negotiate? But that wouldn't do any good, would it?"

For more than a decade, according to the Pentagon, the Soviets have deployed a workable system which could knock out low-flying U.S. satellites. But critics argue that the Soviet weapon is too cumbersome and inaccurate to pose much of a threat to the Pentagon's eyes and ears.

The United States is developing its own anti-satellite weapon, a small three-stage rocket which would be launched from under a high-flying F-15 jet. The recent first round of test firings was successful, but a later and important series of tests is scheduled to begin in November against specific targets.

The "good faith" requirement was proposed by Sens. John Warner, R-Va., and James Exon, D-Neb. It was a substitute for an earlier, and more sweeping proposal by Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., who had 34 co-sponsors for his proposal seeking a halt in the U.S. tests and calling for renewed U.S.-Soviet talks.

Those talks were halted in 1979 by the United States as part of the American response to the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan.

Miami moves to enforce dog ordinance

BY CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

MIAMI — City officials hope to get a 7-year-old licensing ordinance out of the dog house by building an animal shelter.

Miami City Council members voted to build a six-bay (room) animal shelter near the city warehouse north of Highway 60 during their regular meeting Tuesday. They reason that the new shelter will enable the city to enforce a dog licensing ordinance that was passed in 1976.

The council also updated the ordinance by raising impoundment fees from $1 to $5 for each dog picked up and from 50 cents to $4 for each day the dog is kept at the pound.

The ordinance declares that all dogs kept within the city of Miami be licensed and vaccinated against rabies. When the ordinance was passed in December 1976, the city issued tags to be placed on the dogs' collars. Untagged dogs running at large within the city were to be picked up and impounded.

The dog ordinance also prohibits commercial dog kennels within the city.

While the ordinance said nothing about other domestic pets such as cats or rabbits, it did prohibit keeping hogs within the city unless the property is 10 acres or more.

According to Mayor Paul Goodman, the ordinance seemed to be enforced for the first few weeks of its existence. But with no place to put the dogs, the enforcement efforts stopped.

There had been periodic discussions about the ordinance over the past seven years, but no action was ever taken. In May, council members decided to look into building a shelter and reviving the dog-eared ordinance.

Goodman asked the Humane Society of the United States for guidelines in building a shelter. He also checked the shelters at Canadian and Pampa for ideas.

He reported that while the Humane Society had "no set rules" for an animal shelter, it made several

Rape charge dismissed; complainant investigated

The district attorney has dismissed a rape charge brought against a Pampa man last month and will investigate the possibility that a false complaint was filed by the "victim" of the alleged sexual assault.

Assistant District Attorney David Hamilton said he will file a motion to dismiss a charge of aggravated sexual assault returned after the arrest and indictment of Sang Ho Cho, 32, 318 W. Foster.

Cho was arrested and arraigned on May 14. He was charged in connection with the "rape" of a 19-year-old Pampa woman, who, according to police reports, had accompanied Cho on a date on the night of May 11.

The woman told police that she went with Cho to his home but said she later told the man she wanted to go home. The Pampa woman said the suspect forced her into his home by making threats and cutting her with a knife.

He then "forcefully raped" her, the woman told police.

But the alleged victim's story doesn't match up with some of the physical evidence in the case, Hamilton said.

Cho denied raping the woman and he passed a polygraph examination that backs up his version of the story, the assistant D.A. said.

Hamilton said he wanted to question the reported rape victim earlier this week but found out that she had left the state. He said he located the woman in Kansas. The prosecutor said the woman told him in a phone conversation that she never intended to return to Texas and refused to testify in the case, saying, "I don't want to mess with it."

Hamilton said that while Cho has been cleared in connection with the case, it remains under investigation.

Perryton Parkway project accepted by city

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

City commissioners passed two ordinances on second reading in a special called meeting this morning, then discussed the need to consider such matters as city tax collection, problems with city parks and distribution of hotel-motel tax funds in later meetings.

The first ordinance given final approval was one accepting improvements on Perryton Parkway (Hwy 70), and to ratifying and confirming assessments for property owners in the project area.

The assessments were made to pay owners' shares of the costs of installing curbs and gutters along the roadway. The owners will be able to pay their shares in installment payments, City Attorney Don Lane explained.

The second ordinance approved permits a zoning change from Single Family 2 District to Special Use District for Block 3, Lot 6, Buckler-Merten Addition. The change will permit Service Insurance Agency to locate its office in the former Rogers Dental Clinic on N. Somerville.

Though the agenda permitted action only on the two ordinances, the commissioners took the opportunity to discuss needs to be considered in later meetings.

City Manager Mack Wofford said the city staff has been working with the Gray County Appraisal District on a plan to consolidate tax assessing and

Legislators trying to decide which 'sins' to tax

AUSTIN (AP) — Liquor and beer dealers say they won't like it but could live with proposed new "sin" taxes. Bartenders and cigarette sellers, however, say they can't.

The House Ways and Means Committee, where any new tax bill will originate, took a preliminary look Tuesday at proposals of Gov. Mark White to increase levies on so-called luxury items.

Rep. Lee Jackson, R-Dallas, suggested the state comptroller might furnish a list of all the tax exemptions now enjoyed by "sin" taxes.

"I don't think the comptroller would be able to make up a list of just what is considered 'sin' in this state," Billy Hamilton, revenue estimator for Comptroller Bob Bullock, replied jokingly.

The governor has proposed to partially pay for public school improvements by increasing taxes on liquor, beer, wine and mixed drinks by 20 percent and increase the cigarette tax by 5 cents a pack.

Later the committee will hear more testimony when, and if, specific tax bills are prepared for debate.

Hamilton told the committee that cigarette tax collections are in a decline now, partly from the no-smoking drives and from recently increased federal taxes. He said beer tax collections are up slightly but bottle liquor sales are down. Mixed drink sales are up 8 to 9 percent and wine sales are ahead 10 percent.

"I don't see any real growth in the next few years in any of them except may mixed drink sales," Hamilton said.

Rep. Roy English, D-Arlington, said he would like to suggest a new "sin" tax — one on the subscription pornographic TV films being shown in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

"They pay nothing but a franchise tax at the local level and any sales taxes on equipment they buy," English said. "Can we put some sort of tax on them?"

"I assume if you can tax any service, you could tax them," said Hamilton.

Mike Hopkins, speaking for the Wholesale Beer Distributors of Texas, said he felt the beer industry was paying more than its share of taxes now, but "if we need more taxes, we believe the 20 percent is reasonable."

A spokesman for Coors beer agreed. Mary Jo Carroll, Austin attorney representing Licensed Beverage

Distributors of Texas, said any increased tax on liquor would also affect other businesses.

"We are expecting a big federal tax increase also," she said. "Restaurants and hotels will be hurt by an increase in liquor taxes. Newspapers are anticipating the increase in cost because of federal raises will decrease advertising at least 8 percent."

"But if you have to have taxes to pay for education, I think our members will hold their nose and pay the 20 percent," she said.

Determined opposition to the governor's "sin" tax hikes came from sellers of mixed drinks and cigarette wholesalers.

Waggoner Carr, attorney for Associated Clubs of Texas, said increasing the gross receipts levy on sale of mixed drinks from 10 to 12 percent would be "unfair and inequitable... we're getting the double whammy."

Joe Ratliff, representing Texas Tobacco and Candy Distributors, said the cigarette tax would cause a decrease in state tax collections and encourage bootleggers and sales of cigarettes on military installations (where there is state tax).

Miami ordinance

recommendations. According to Goodman, the HSUS says concrete floors allow for better drainage and cleanliness.

"You do have to keep the big dogs from the little dogs and the males from the females," he said.

There were also recommendations on how to euthanize dogs that have been kept at the shelter for excessive lengths of time. One method the HSUS frowns upon is a gas chamber.

"The most humane way, they say, would be to give the dogs a shot of barbiturates," Goodman said. "They said a $5 bottle would kill 20 dogs. That comes out to 80 cents per dog."

"And they said that you'll never get rid of the problem," he said. "The city of Houston now counts the dead dogs by the ton."

Goodman said that since Miami is located along Highway 60, the town has become a dumping ground for strays, with people driving through town and leaving their unwanted dogs on the street.

Larry Bryant, the city's part-time employee, said he sees people drop three or four dogs a day.

"Just take down their auto tag number and I'll take care of those people," Roberts County Sheriff said to Bryant.

expressed concern that the dog packs, especially those with big and vicious dogs, could hurt children.

Earlier this spring, a "big German Shepherd chewed up three poodles," Goodman said, adding that there were three reports of dogs biting.

The ordinance amendment sets a $5 fee for picking up the dogs, plus a $4 per day fee to keep the dogs at the shelter. After four days, unclaimed dogs will be euthanized.

City worker Bryant will be responsible for catching the dogs.

Goodman said the shelter construction will begin as soon as possible. Kent Sims, legal counsel for Miami, said the city should now start a licensing drive to get the dogs registered.

With the dogs out of the way, city officials took on another animal problem, horses in the city limits.

Residents in north Miami had complained of neighbors keeping horses within the city. Sims said that while there is no ordinance governing horses or other livestock within the city limits, complaints may be made under the city public nuisance ordinance.

The council authorized council member Steve Haskell to meet with the horse owners to clear the matter up.

Church of Christ minister David Brown, who operates a furniture refinishing business, asked the council for the zoning so that he could start a business in Miami.

The zoning was criticized by some area residents who were worried about extra traffic that could result from the commercial business. Council members discussed extending commercial zoning on U.S. 60 to the east and west city limits, but dropped their action.

Council members also discussed hiring Bryant full-time and pay him a monthly salary. For full-time work, the city must provide Social Security and workman's compensation.

Bryant said he preferred working part-time with an hourly wage. He said he works long summer hours, but work during winter may be too light for a full salary.

Higher phone bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court, in a decision likely to mean higher telephone bills for Americans next year, has ruled the Federal Communications Commission may require consumers to pay telephone "access charges."

Unless Congress overrides the FCC or the matter is successfully appealed to the Supreme Court, the court's ruling on Tuesday clears the way for the FCC to impose a $2-a-month telephone access charge on residential customers sometime during the first half of 1985.

collecting duties. The Pampa Independent School District has also been considering allowing the appraisal office to take over those duties. Wofford noted.

"We see this as the best method for tax collection," Wofford said, adding the item should be placed on the agenda soon for consideration in a regular meeting.

Wofford also said the Pampa Softball Association has requested it be permitted to construct a restroom facility at Hobart Street Park. The city had decided against action on the facility in May after rejecting three bids which exceeded previous cost estimates for the project.

Wofford said the association has been collecting an additional $5 fee from players to go toward cost of the construction. He said the association is requesting the city return the funds to the association so the members can build the facility themselves. The building would then be deeded over to the city for maintenance.

Pipeline hearing and the possibility that other industry might set up in the county because of the availability of the coal moving through the pipeline.

The Railroad Commission held the Lipscomb hearing on the pipeline's proposed route through Lipscomb, Hemphill and Roberts Counties. The line would also cross the Panhandle counties of Hutchinson, Carson, Potter and Randall and would continue through Texas to end points south of Houston and near San Antonio.

The commission's series of hearings is to determine whether it should grant ETSI a "certificate of public convenience and necessity," which would grant the company the authority of eminent domain to build the pipeline.

Commission examiner Stephen Webb, who with two other examiners conducted Tuesday's hearing, said the agency will okay the certificate, if it decides the pipeline "meets a public need."

Webb said a final hearing on ETSI's request will be held in Austin some time in August.

The commission asked the Lipscomb landowners at the hearing whether they wanted to become official parties to the proceeding and give evidence. The property owners involved were also allowed to question company officials for the record. Time was also allotted for any resident's additional comments about about the proposed pipeline, but none were made Tuesday.

The Lipscomb landowners were told that the company would acquire a 100-foot right of way for the construction of the line, and the permanent right of way would be reduced to 50 feet after the line was in operation.

The property owners questioned the company officials about potential damage to their lands and about potential crop losses if the line's construction interrupted a growing season.

In all cases, any damages sustained would be paid by the company, the representatives said.

"We pay for all damages. We leave you whole when we are through," ETSI official Mike Hunter told the crowd.

"We try to arrive at fair market values for the right of way. We do everything possible to negotiate a right of way. Sometimes, that isn't possible," Hunter said.

Two landowners in neighboring Hemphill county grumped outside the hearing that the company's promise of returning their land to its original condition probably wouldn't stand up. A

"They feel they can do it more cheaply," Wofford said, perhaps subcontracting some of the work.

"It's a matter we need to pursue," Mayor Calvin Whatley said.

Mayor Whatley said, "We've got a problem with our parks. We've got so many, it's getting hard to keep them all up."

The city has more than 140 acres of irrigated parks, Wofford said.

Whatley specifically mentioned problems of upkeep and vandalism for the public restroom facilities, suggesting better security is needed to cut down on vandalism. He also said some means should be developed to keep better care of the restrooms, especially in eliminating trash problems.

Public Works Director Allyn Moore said "it would probably be impossible" to build a public restroom facility that would not receive some damage.

He suggested the possibility of building better facilities and instilling pride in the neighborhood park residents to watch against vandalism and aid in their upkeep.

The commissioners and city officials discussed the possibility of making some private contracts for maintenance of the parks and restrooms. Moore said the use of private contracts "seems to be a growing trend in civic government."

Whatley asked about the collection of the hotel-motel taxes, approved last fall by the city. He said the city needs to decide how the money is to be distributed and how often.

Wofford said that needs to be considered is what groups are going to benefit from the collection of the tax and what percentages will be assigned to the distribution of the funds.

The city should get input from the qualifying groups which will benefit from the funds to determine what their needs are, Commissioner E. L. "Smiley" Henderson said.

Commissioner Clyde Carruth said the distribution plan should be subject to review each year to change the percentages as needed.

bare strip covered with weeds would be left where the pipe was laid, one of the Hemphill residents complained.

The company told the crowd that the ground over the pipeline would be put back into place and reseeded. The company would do the work, or would pay a landowner for doing it himself.

"It usually regains its pre-construction appearance in one growing season," the company told the Lipscomb residents.

"What's going to happen in 50 years after the pipeline wears out?" one complaining Hemphill resident remarked outside the meeting.

Judge Sheer said in any project of this size, a few landowners could never be satisfied. That's why the company needs the power of eminent domain, he said.

Webb told the Lipscomb crowd that if the certificate of need is granted, landowners can't refuse to sell a right of way. The only thing left to negotiate, he said, would be the price for the land.

ETSI attorney Jerry Bell said he needs to do some research before answering one question posed at the hearing. Bell said he doesn't know whether landowners would be held liable if they damaged the pipeline while operating a piece of farm or road equipment on their property.

The company presentation before the hearing began included a slide show explaining the proposal.

The project, a joint venture of Texas Eastern, Inter North, Bechtel Corp. and KN Energy, is the largest coal-slurry pipeline ever proposed.

The pipeline would run 1,670 miles from coal mines in Wyoming to electric utility companies in Texas. Branch lines would extend it to about 1,800 total miles.

The line, ranging in width from 16 to 40 inches, would carry finely-powered coal mixed with water.

The pipeline could move up to 26 million tons of coal per year at a speed of 3.6 miles per hour.

Water for the coal-slurry line would come from the Oahe Lake on the upper-Missouri River in South Dakota. The agreement for the water has already been secured, the company said.

The water extracted from the coal at "dewatering plants" near the utility companies would be available for use by the utilities. If the Texas companies couldn't use the water brought by the line, it would be "discharged into local waterways," ETSI said.

Skellytown cleanup proving successful

SKELLYTOWN — Residents seem to be heeding the city's call to clean up their town during a two-week clean-up campaign, but town officials note, some residents still have problems.

In the campaign, which continues through Saturday, city officials are encouraging residents to clear their property of weeds and junk cars. City secretary Sheri Daves reports that there is more traffic than usual at the town dump.

"We had 26 people there in one day, and that's a lot for Skellytown," she said.

As part of the clean-up, city officials voted Tuesday night to send letters to approximately 14 residents who have excessive weed growth on their property. Daves explained that the letters will be sent to the residents "to see if they can co-operate before charges are filed."

She noted that excessive weeds are a fire hazard when the weather is dry and a health hazard (attracting snakes and insects) when the weather is wet.

In other business, the city voted to get the city volunteer fire department key rated in an effort to lower insurance rates. Daves explained that key rating bases insurance rates on city fire and health standards. She could not estimate how key rating would affect city fire costs.

The city also voted to repair a water tank owned by Santa Fe railroad. Daves explained that the tank, one of three in the city, had been put on an automatic flow system several weeks ago. However there was a short in the system and the city had to turn to the other two water tanks for back-up.

"It really hasn't hurt our water supply, although we have not been able to fill city tank trucks," she said. "Now we have no problem and plenty of water and we hope to get the Santa Fe tank repaired."

Education bill is heading for committee

AUSTIN (AP) — The education reform bill that will go to a House committee is being worked out where Speaker Gib Lewis likes such work to be done — anywhere but the House floor.

On Tuesday, most of the negotiating was done in Lewis' office behind the House. The negotiators included Gov. Mark White, House Public Education Committee Chairman Bill Haley and lobbyists for education interests.

"I think the House floor is the worst place in the world to write legislation," said Lewis.

White said "dramatic progress" was being made toward agreement on an education package — a program he wants to raise taxes to pay for.

"I don't know that anybody said what we'd do here would make everybody happy," White said after a meeting in Lewis' office. "But I do feel like they can come up with a (school funding) equalization plan that can improve the situation we are in today and meet the judicial test."

Equalization, along with the future of the State Board of Education, are the two "sticky items" delaying progress on an education bill, Lewis said. The 30-day special session called by White ends July 3.

White and H. Ross Perot, chairman of the Select Committee on Public Education, have urged lawmakers to scrap the 27-member elected State Board of Education and set up a smaller panel with members appointed by the governor.

A compromise plan that includes both an elected and an appointed board was working its way through negotiations Tuesday, according to Speaker Pro Tem Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi.

The compromise would establish a nine- or 12-member board appointed by the governor. But that board would be reviewed by lawmakers in 1989, and could be replaced by an elected panel.

"What we are looking for is a management-type team to put in place which will be a combination of appointed and, at some future point, go back to an elected board," Berlanga said.

White said he would support that system "if it will guarantee the improved management system" for public schools.

Asked if it would guarantee better management, White said, "at least for four years, it will."

High-tech executive applauds Gov. White

AUSTIN (AP) — Poor public schools could be the "Achilles' heel" that would prevent Texas from enjoying yet another economic boom, a high-tech executive has told legislators.

Bobby Ray Inman, a product of Texas public schools, said location of Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp. in Austin has made the city a major research center, but he indicated manufacturing facilities would not necessarily follow.

Inman, president of MCC, the computer research consortium, told the Legislature on Tuesday there are at least a dozen states "that have very energetic programs underway to try to be that third or fourth great center of manufacturing in this country."

"When corporations try to decide where to put their manufacturing plants, they are going to be very concerned about business climate but they're also going to look at the quality of the work force," Inman told a joint session of the House and Senate.

"Along with that strong (Texas) work ethic, is there going to be the base of knowledge to permit them to be trained rapidly to whatever level of technology is needed? My judgment is that's the Achilles' heel for the potential great economic boom for this state in yet a new area," he said.

In Greek Mythology, Achilles was a leader of the Trojan War who was killed with an arrow that struck his only vulnerable spot, his heel.

Inman also told legislators he was "inflamed" by a Republican billboard reminding voters that Democratic Gov. Mark White once promised not to raise taxes.

"Education is a bipartisan issue," said Inman, who described himself as a registered independent.

"I've never endorsed a political candidate, and I don't plan to start. But I greatly admire Gov. Mark White's courage in coming to grips with the public education problem and the cost — no matter what he may have promised before. I was inflamed last night with some coverage about some ads focusing on taxes."

The billboard near the Capitol quotes White as saying in the Fort Worth Star-Telegram on Oct. 23, 1982, "There will be no new taxes for Texans when I am governor."

White now proposes a three-year $4.8 billion tax increase to improve public education and highways, and called a 30-day special session of the Legislature to consider it.

George Strake, chairman of the Texas Republican Party, said Monday the billboard was purchased by the GOP to "graphically demonstrate how (White) has broken this important promise."

Inman, a retired Navy admiral, said he had called around the state Tuesday and found that "old friends" such as former Republican Gov. Bill Clements and former state GOP chairman Peter O'Donnell "are out working to support the governor on this issue of reforming public education and on paying for it."

"It's a bipartisan issue that holds the future not only of the youngsters that are coming along but potentially of the nation. If this state rises to the occasion, it will provide the leadership this country must have in competing effectively at the international market place in the year 2000."

"I believe all of us need to set as a goal that we want a public education system that is in the top five in the country," Inman said.

Mother fights order to keep twins at home

HOUSTON (AP) — A judge who was overruled when he decided to divide twins between their divorcing parents has now ordered that the 4½-month-old, breast-fed babies spend alternate two-week periods with each parent.

The mother has gone back to court to fight the order, which would force the children to travel every two weeks between Houston and northeast Texas — a 500-mile round trip.

State District Judge Virgil Mulanax of Gilmer in northeast Texas touched off the latest round in a custody fight between Dena Denise Carter and her estranged husband, Stan, both 17.

Mrs. Carter's lawyers convinced the 12th Texas Court of Appeals in Tyler to block the judge's order until a June 21 hearing.

The battle for the twins, Chad Edward and Chase Edward, began Feb. 14 after Carter filed for divorce. Mrs. Carter dropped out of high school and moved to Houston with the infants to live with her parents.

In March, Mulanax decided each parent should have custody of one of the twins. But Mrs. Carter fought the ruling and it was suspended last month by the appeals court.

Then Mulanax issued his latest ruling, but Mrs. Carter is fighting it, too, arguing the two-week custody periods won't work. She said she must accompany the babies, who were born prematurely, because they must be breast-fed.

Mrs. Carter said she is taking classes two days a week to get her high school equivalency certificate and will have to drop out of school to comply with the ruling. She also said it would be an emotional strain to live with her in-laws during the visit to Big Sandy in northeast Texas.

Carter will be a senior next fall at Big Sandy High School. Mrs. Carter's father, Houston police Officer Manuel Ortega, said Mulanax is a friend of Carter's parents and should be disqualified from the case. But a visiting judge from Dallas denied a disqualification motion filed by Mrs. Carter's lawyers.

Mulanax admitted he knows Carter's father, Ed, because they attended Texas A&M University. But the judge insisted they are only acquaintances.

The judge said he issued the two rulings because he believes the couple "is still in love and willing to reconcile."

But Mrs. Carter said she does not want to reconcile with her husband.

"Earlier, yes," she said. "But so much conflict has gone on that I don't care any more about him. He has showed me that he doesn't care."

Carter's attorney, Ric Freeman, called the order "reasonable" and said Mrs. Carter refused to let her husband see the twins when

Woman defied odds, has healthy quads

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — For five weeks, Patricia Rios stayed in bed and took medicine, struggling to defy the odds against having healthy quadruplets.

It apparently paid off. The Rios quads — two boys and two girls — were reported in stable condition, and breathing without respirators Tuesday at Methodist Hospital.

"We were prepared for the worst. Fortunately, we got the best," said Dr. Carlos Nieto, one of three specialists who helped deliver the eight-week premature infants.

Nieto, two other doctors and Patrick Rios, the father, said Tuesday that Mrs. Rios had stayed in bed and taken medication for more than a month to delay premature delivery.

"We realized there was a possibility of a multiple birth, but we didn't expect four," said Rios, 33, a pharmaceutical salesman.

Rios said his wife had taken a fertility drug, clomid, before the birth of their first child — Patrick Bryan, now 2 years old — and before this pregnancy because she had had difficulties becoming pregnant.

Michael Errin, Matthew Elliot, Catherine Lee and Lauren Marie were born in rapid succession in a four-minute span beginning at 11:41 a.m. Monday. The infants weighed 3 pounds, 2½ ounces; 3 pounds, 5½ ounces; 3 pounds, 2 ounces; and 2 pounds, 7½ ounces.

Mrs. Rios also was reported in stable condition Tuesday, but asked that the media be kept away for at least 24 hours. The mother may go home as early as Friday, but the children probably will stay in the hospital six to eight weeks.

Dr. Mark Paine, an obstetrician, said multiple births usually occur prematurely because the additional fetuses in the womb will use up the food and oxygen sooner than a single fetus.

"The longer you delay the pregnancy in these cases, the better chance the infant has of survival," Paine said.

Mrs. Rios had been experiencing "pre-labor pains" as long as eight weeks ago and her doctors prescribed total bed rest and medication to stop uterine contractions.

Mrs. Rios delivered her babies after 32 weeks of pregnancy, while a normal pregnancy lasts about 40 weeks.

Dad drowns trying to save young son

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — A Fort Worth man disappeared and was presumed drowned in Lake Arlington after he tried to save his 8-year-old son, who had been swept into a current, fire officials said.

A 63-year-old man who was visiting the lake and pulled the boy from the water said the youth gasped "save my dad" just before the father went under.

Arlington Fire Department divers and lake patrol officers searched the lake for the body of Jim Lyons, 33, who police said had been fishing along the shore Tuesday morning with his two sons, Mat, 8, and Shawn, 10.

Lyons disappeared in the water about noon after he ran to help Mat after the boy waded in to untangle a fishing line. His eyes were set, he was out of wind, but I reached down and grabbed his head.

"I saw the current grab him and spin him, and he hollered for help," said Elbert Jones, of Fort Worth, a former life guard who pulled the boy from the water. "His dad was looking out over the lake toward the dam, and when the boy hollered, he looked "And then he went straight for him. He got to the boy but the current took them apart. I was already going in, and I was going toward the boy and he was saying 'save my dad,'" Jones said.

"I saw the dad struggling and he went down. I was looking straight at him. And then the boy went down. I didn't think he would come up that last time.

Doggett aides confident of victory

WEDNESDAY, he said.

Camille Burger, primary director for the Texas Democratic Party, said the party intends that the recount be completed Wednesday.

Bexar County, which is scheduled to recount on Wednesday, is the largest county in which the results haven't been rechecked. Doggett won Bexar County in the June 2 voting.

Most of the remaining counties are small and rural. Doggett said, adding that he doubts there will be anywhere near enough vote changes in them for Hance to close the gap.

"There'll be a little change up and down, but we don't think the total will change very much. There just aren't that many votes that will switch. The (original vote) counts were pretty accurate," he said.

Spokesmen for Hance said the Lubbock congressman's count shows him trailing by between 700 and 750 votes late Tuesday.

"We're showing that we just over 700 behind at this point. The changes have been just nickle and dime at a time," said aide Craig Tounget.

Tounget told the Dallas Morning News that the Hance camp is not ready to concede and still has hopes that some bigger counties could turn the tide.

"I don't think we want to (concede), especially with Bexar County left. That's a big county and there's plenty of opportunity that we could pick up a lot out there," he said.

"The Doggett people are including some counties that are in Louisiana and New Mexico," added press secretary Ken Vest.

However, Vest declined to predict whether Hance could make up sufficient ground in the 62 remaining counties.

"We're just going through this procedure and we'll see what's out there," he said.

Since he requested it, Hance must pay for the recount. Party officials estimate the total expense could be between $50,000 and $70,000.

Each campaign has had representatives on hand to monitor the recounts, and Begala described it as "such a tedious process."

"It's a shame it has to drag on so long and cost so much," he said. "The good side is that the count we wind up with is very accurate."

Testimony is continuing in baby smuggling trial

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — The Mormon father of eight children choked back tears as he told a federal judge how Nelda Karen Colwell had helped him adopt a Mexican infant he believed would have died of starvation if left with her natural mother.

Dr. Bruce Bennett, a botanist from Layton, Utah, was the third witness called by defense attorneys Tuesday in the trial of Mrs. Colwell, also of Layton. The 39-year-old woman is charged with conspiring to smuggle Mexican babies to prospective adoptive couples in Utah.

Bennett testified that Mrs. Colwell had warned them repeatedly against violating any laws in adopting their foreign-born baby.

"Nelda told us numerous times to be sure and get the documents we needed. She told us don't do anything illegal and don't lie," Bennett told U.S. District Judge George Kazen.

Bennett described how he went to a Mexican town near Juarez, where Mrs. Colwell had found a mother so impoverished she wished to give up her child to save the infant from starvation.

"The baby's mother came in and put the child in my wife's arms," Bennett said, choking back a sob. "If you've never been through such a thing you can't understand the emotional experience."

"I believe if our child were still in Mexico she'd be dead."

Authorities say Mrs. Colwell may have arranged as many as 50 adoptions of Mexican babies, half of which could be illegal.

Before resting the prosecution's case, Assistant U.S. Attorney David Almaraz called eight witnesses in an attempt to prove Mrs. Colwell was the leader of a baby smuggling ring.

One witness, Julie Coleman of Brigham City, Utah, told the judge that she contacted Mrs. Colwell for assistance in adopting a baby in February 1983 but backed out of the proposed deal before it was complete.

Mrs. Coleman said she and her husband paid a fee of $1,600 they were told covered food and medical care for a destitute Mexican mother, lawyer's fees and expenses, including telephone charges and airfare involved in locating the children. They were refunded only $500 when they changed their minds, she said.

She said Mrs. Colwell told her that the baby would be picked up in Mexico within a few days of birth.

"We asked about the legality of it, how you bring them (babies) over? We asked isn't this wrong, isn't it against the law? Our religion tells us to follow the laws of the land," said Mrs. Coleman, who is a Mormon like the defendant and most of the Utah couples who adopted babies through Mrs. Colwell.

"Nelda told us, 'Well, abortion is a law of the land and you don't believe in that. We are to obey the law as closely as we can but there are some laws we can't follow. We're saving these babies' lives.'"

Mrs. Colwell, who waived her right to a jury trial, faces a three-count indictment charging that she conspired to transport undocumented infants into the United States. She was indicted April 10 with three Laredo women who have pleaded guilty to lesser charges in exchange for their testimony.

One of the three, San Juana Martinez-Lopez, testified Monday she was the go-between in finding impoverished Mexican mothers willing to give up their babies to American couples who contracted with Mrs. Colwell.

Juanita Melendez-Calderon, a Laredo midwife, pleaded guilty to falsifying a birth certificate as part of the scheme. Celestina Rios-Rivera admitted transporting the undocumented babies across the border as part of the conspiracy.

Defense attorneys have maintained that Mrs. Colwell is being made a "scapegoat" by the Laredo women who committed illegal acts without Mrs. Colwell's knowledge.

Immigration and Naturalization Service officials began investigating the alleged smuggling ring after a Mexican mother from Nuevo Laredo, Lidia Guerra Garcia, told authorities that she had given her baby up for adoption but had changed her mind and wanted the baby back.

Prosecutors maintain Mrs. Colwell arranged for a Utah couple, Stephen and Shauna Frazier, to fly to Laredo to pick up the baby after it had been smuggled across the bridge at her direction.

Frazier was called by defense attorneys Tuesday afternoon and testified that "Nelda told us it was her responsibility to find the baby and our responsibility to follow through."

"She emphasized we had to go by the law" in adopting a foreign-born child, he said.

Under cross examination, Frazier said that he did not ask details about how $5,000 he paid for the adoption was being used because "I didn't care."

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Our opinion

Property rights erosion continues

The right of citizens to own and control their property is the cornerstone of liberty. Without that right, all other freedoms become virtually meaningless. Yet it is a right that continues to erode in the United States of America.

And, just when you think the courts and the government have gone about as far as possible in stripping away property rights of citizens, something else happens that surpasses anything they've done before.

The latest such instance came a couple of weeks ago when the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that it is not in violation of the U.S. Constitution for the state of Hawaii to force private landowners to sell their property to other private citizens if the state decides it is in the "public interest."

In the Hawaii case, the state legislature decided there is a critical shortage of residential land and passed a "land reform act," expanding state powers of condemnation over concentrated land ownerships. The state intends to order large landowners to sell small tracts of their property to persons who now rent the property.

The vote upholding the state's right to do exactly that was a distressing 8-0, indicating that there is little concern among Supreme Court justices for property rights of individuals.

This is a new development in property owners' continuing struggle to defend their rights against the authority of the state.

The Constitution says that private property cannot be taken for public use without just compensation. "Public use" in the past has been interpreted to mean something actually used by the public, such as a highway.

But in this case, the court has ruled that "public use" is anything the governing entity says it is. Conceivably, under the new definition, the Pampa City Commission could decide it would be in the public interest to force whoever owns the Pampa Mall, for example, to sell tracts of land to individual businesses. The state could decide the Four Sixes Ranch is too large and cause it to be broken up.

The city of Baltimore is attempting to use the eminent domain laws to seize the professional football team that wants to move to another city. This latest ruling could mean that it will succeed.

Add to this expanded definition of eminent domain power the zoning laws in most cities, which allow government entities to dictate to private citizens what they can do with their property, and we have reached the following situation in this country:

Government can tell us what we can build on our own property and what we can do on it, government can take our property for its own use if it wants, and government can force us to sell it to someone else.

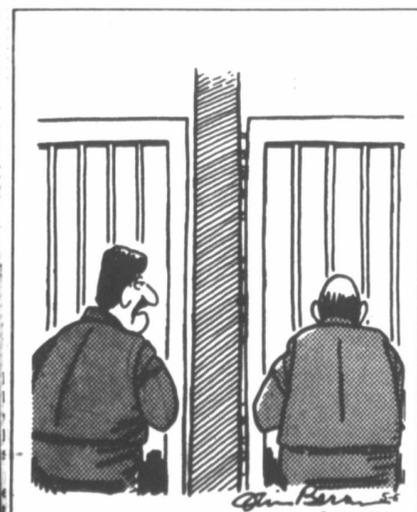

If you accept our proposition that the right of property ownership is the cornerstone of liberty, you can't feel too secure right now.

Reagan criticism just won't stop

The Labor Department reported that last Friday that civilian unemployment for May dropped to the lowest level in nearly three years 7.5 percent.

The news followed reports of strong retail sales in May: 19.8 percent for J.C. Penney, 9.7 percent for K Mart and so on. Which reports followed news of an 8.8 percent gain in gross national product during the first quarter and of lower inflation than had originally been looked for. But, in Washington, D.C., are they building bonfires and singing TE DEUMS? I wouldn't bet on it. That isn't quite the local fashion.

"Why," asked Ronald Reagan, some months ago, as the economy flexed muscle it wasn't supposed to have, "why don't they call it 'Reaganomics' anymore?"

The sly old president was jesting. He knew very well the answer, which is that, after months of vituperation through its way, Reaganomics - meaning essentially the stimulation of the private sector through the easing of government burdens - started to work. At which point it became immune from public ridicule: the smirky joke, the arched eyebrow, the knowing poke in the ribs. The little joke just vanished, not to be mentioned or alluded to, like an uncle convicted of white slavery.

Of course that's very different from saying that, owing to the economic recovery, Democratic congressmen are strewing palms in Reagan's pathway. There is a new fashion among detractors of private sector incentives. Such as tax cuts. It is sourly to say: Oh, all right, all right, so the economy did come back, but what about those federal deficits which are keeping interest rates up, which threaten to crowd out private borrowing, etc., etc.?

It is fair to concede this much to defenders of the status quo ante Reagan. The federal deficit is a nasty thing. At some point, for some reason or other - "budget-narrowing" tax increases would do the job nicely - the recovery will wash out. That is what happens to recoveries. Like the rest of us, they are mortal. It won't necessarily be the president's fault. Indeed, he may be long out of office when the bleak day comes. It will be said, nevertheless, to be his fault.

How can one know this? Because, in establishmentarian circles, everything is Reagan's fault. Nothing the man does is right. The failure to give the Devil his due for the economic recovery is one example. Similarly Reagan catches it in the neck for his foreign policies. Last winter nothing would do but that he should withdraw the Marines from Beirut; the minute he did so, up went the cry over the collapse of U.S. policy in Lebanon. Durned if you do, and durned if you don't.

The low estate of U.S. - Soviet relations - the collapse of nuclear arms talks, the Soviet boycott of the Olympics - seems to be entirely Reagan's fault. He brought all this on by beefing up military spending, deploying new missiles in Europe, and calling the Soviet Union "an evil empire."

Well, one thing about all this: it shows Ronald Reagan to be something more than a faithful steward of inherited policies. Had he not set out to make certain things different, there would be less yowling about how different these things are.

The irony, of course, is that Reagan isn't half the revolutionary that many think he is. Witness only the fact that federal spending, as a percentage of gross national product, is actually higher under Reagan than under Carter. But Reagan isn't Gerald Ford or Richard Nixon either - unphilosophical, uncombative on crucial issues, solicitous of Washington mores and customs.

Most maddening of all: the voters simply won't stop liking him. The polls, even where they register disagreement with specific Reagan policies, point to the president's popularity. On current projections, he would beat either Mondale or Hart. Is it any wonder the president's foes are dyspeptic? And likely to stay that way a while?

We don't mean what we say

The trouble with foreign people in this country is that they take everything Americans say literally. I have a French friend named Michel Bernheim. I met him the other day on the street, and after the usual chitchat about Paris I said, "Give me a call some time."

The next day he was on the line. "Bonjour," he said. "It's Michel. You said to give you a call."

"I did?"

"Oui, don't you remember? I spoke to you yesterday on Pennsylvania Avenue."

"I didn't mean for you to give me a call right away. I was just finding a nice way to say goodbye to you."

"Then you don't want to talk on the telephone?"

"I can't think of anything to say, frankly." "But you asked me to call you."

"You're right, Michel. Look, I'm terribly busy right now. Let's have lunch some time."

"I would like that. When?"

"I'm not sure. Why don't you give me a holler?"

Two days later I heard someone calling my name from the sidewalk. I opened the window in my office and Michel was down below.

"What in the devil are you shouting about?" I yelled down to him.

"You said to give you a holler when I wanted to have lunch. How about today?"

"I'm busy today."

"Well, when can you have lunch?"

"I'm not sure. I'm tied up for the next three weeks."

"Why did you tell me to give you a holler when I wanted to have lunch if you were tied up?"

"Michel, you've been around long enough to know when an American says, 'Let's have lunch some time,' he doesn't necessarily mean it. It's a pleasantry. You French say, 'Au revoir,' the Germans say, 'Auf wiedersehen,' the Spanish say, 'Hasta manana,' and Americans say, 'Let's have lunch,' which in our country means, 'Don't call me. I'll call you.'"

Michel said, "I didn't mean to bother you."

"You didn't bother me. I'll tell you what. Let's check in with each other and have a drink one of these days."

"That would be great," Michel said.

I was sweating out a column the next day when the door opened and Michel stuck his head in.

"Now what?"

"I'm just checking in to see if you wanted a drink."

"Can't you see I'm busy?"

"I can see that now, but I couldn't before I checked in with you."

"Michel, you're driving me nuts. You can't take everything we Americans say as gospel. The only reason I said 'Let's have a drink some time' is because I wanted you to stop hollering under my window about having lunch together."

"All you have to do is tell me you don't want to see me," Michel said in a hurt voice, "instead of asking me to meet with you all the time and then breaking the date."

I felt badly. "You're right. I feel terrible about the way I've treated you. Our problem is that we're so used to saying goodbye to each other with a promise we'll get together soon, that no one in this country expects the other person to keep it. We couldn't be able to get things done if we had lunch with everyone we accidentally met on the street."

"I understand," Michel said. "But if you change your mind, you have my card and you can call me."

"I don't have your card, Michel. That's another thing you don't understand. When Americans exchange business cards with each other, they usually throw them away when they get home."

More giveaways not the answer

Pressure already is on for the U.S. to ease up on the debtor nations in Latin America and elsewhere. It will intensify in the next few months and become very intense after the presidential election.

In recent weeks, there have been various news reports to the effect that officials in Latin America - and even a few in Europe - are proposing a "rate cap" in repayment of foreign loans to U.S. banks. This is a gimmick proposal and should be understood as such.

A "rate cap" simply means that banks in the U.S. would be asked to accept interest payment at below their cost of borrowing money. In other words, the banks would be asked to subsidize the foreign governments which borrowed vast sums, spent them, and now are reluctant to pay what they owe.

In reading of the "rate cap" notion, one is reminded of President Coolidge's remark, concerning World War I loans by European governments: "They hired the money, didn't they?"

For their part, the Europeans are eager that the U.S. banks and government continue to lend large sums to the debtor nations or relax the credit terms. The Europeans are concerned because they are worried about their loans to Third World countries. They hope to expect Uncle Sam to bail them out as he has done so often in the past.

The U.S. has exported hundreds of billions of dollars in foreign aid since the end of the World War II. This country has given aid until its own financial situation is in peril.

The U.S. has to be concerned about the danger of default by debtor countries. Default would have a severe impact on major U.S. banking institutions. The time has come, however, when the U.S. can't continue sending good money after bad, as it did in the most recent bailout of Argentina. The debtor nations can't be permitted to evade responsibility for their unwise financial practices. U.S. banks, which have made unwise loans - often as a result of U.S. government pressure - will have to face the music. They will have to write off bad debts regardless of what it does to their financial reports.

Some segments of the U.S. banking community are in a shaky condition, as evidenced by bank failure and threatened failures in the past year. Continental Illinois Corporation recently required a $7 billion infusion of federal funds. The overall stability of the U.S. banking system won't be enhanced by "rate capping" loans to Latin debtor nations. Something of a shakeout may be necessary in order for American banking institutions to gain a new measure of stability. The European banking institutions will have to experience the same shakeout and pain involved with it. More giveaways, open or disguised, are not the answer to a global financial crisis, if that is what's ahead of us.

Civil rights bill provisions under fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee says a civil rights bill pending before Congress would be a "legislative time bomb" that could require farmers, as recipients of federal aid, to comply with federal civil rights laws.

Committee Chairman Jesse Helms, R-N.C., hosted a hearing Tuesday where a half dozen witnesses said the bill is too ambiguous and would allow federal courts free rein in deciding who is covered by the law. One witness said the bill could result in farmers having to install ramps for the handicapped.

"This piece of legislation, as written, would be just a legislative time bomb for any federal judge around the country to tamper with," said Helms.

The bill is sponsored in the Senate by Robert Packwood, R-Ore., Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and 54 other Senators. It is aimed at reversing a February ruling by the U.S. Supreme Court which said Grove City College in Pennsylvania could not be denied all its federal funds because one of its programs was discriminatory.

A House version of the bill has been approved by two committees and is awaiting floor action.

Packwood "can't understand all this resistance to guaranteeing American civil rights," said Packwood's press secretary, Etta Fielek, after the hearing.

Proponents of the legislation say the court's decision seriously diluted enforcement of civil rights laws and say their bill would restore those laws to their previous effectiveness — and no more.

But witnesses told Helms the bill would expand coverage of the civil rights laws by replacing the language "such program or activity" with the word

"recipients" of federal aid. That language, said U.S. Agriculture Department counsel Daniel Oliver, "is sufficiently ambiguous to leave unresolved whether or not a farmer is a recipient under the definition in the bill."

Charles C. Rice, a Notre Dame University law professor, said the measure could become a "back-door ERA" by allowing the term "recipient" to be broadly defined by the courts as virtually all-inclusive.

Said Gordon Jones, vice president of the Heritage Foundation, a conservative think-tank, "Under this bill, (the Department of Housing and Urban Development) could enforce its regulations pertaining to architectural barriers to the handicapped against a farmer operating with federal loans, guarantees, or protected by commodity marketing orders."

Tower: Republican delegation reflects Hispanics, women

AUSTIN (AP) — In the Texas Republican Party, women play an equal role in making decisions, and the composition of the state's GOP National Convention delegation proves it, Sen. John Tower says.

In announcing the 28 at-large delegates to complete the 109-member delegation Tuesday, Tower took a shot at Democrats who use an involved formula to ensure that women and minorities get national convention representation equal to their numbers in the population.

The GOP delegation is made up of 55 women and 54 men.

"Republicans have never needed to rely on quotas to produce a representative sample of our party," Tower said.

"I am particularly proud that our delegation not only reflects the growing Hispanic Republican constituency, but also shows once again that women not only have a role in our party, they have truly equal access to the decision-making process," he said.

The delegation includes 10 Hispanics.

The 28 at-large delegates were announced on Monday. Another 81 delegates were chosen May 26 from the state's 27 congressional districts.

The majority of district places went to long-time party volunteers, while most of the at-large spots went to high-ranking party leaders.

Unions applaud court ruling opposed by feminists, blacks

By The Associated Press

A U.S. Supreme Court ruling upholding "last hired, first hired" policies has sharply split organized labor leaders who support the seniority system and civil rights leaders seeking economic opportunity for blacks and women.

"It reverses affirmative action programs which are already in place and those being contemplated," said Benjamin Hooks, executive director of the NAACP.

"We certainly believe in affirmative action, but we don't believe it ought to take priority over negotiated contracts," said William King, president of the International Union of Electrical Workers local at the General Electric plant in Tiffin, Ohio.

The 6-3 decision Tuesday overturned a lower court decision that barred the Memphis, Tenn., Fire Department from laying off firefighters according to seniority during the city's economic cutbacks in 1981. The lower court ruling protected black firefighters hired under a department affirmative action program.

The Reagan administration led the battle against protection for the affirmative action employees, saying that keeping black workers on the job would amount to racial discrimination against white workers who had been hired earlier.

Attorney General William French Smith called the ruling "the correct decision" and said it "does not in any way affect those persons who have been victims of discrimination."

Justice Byron R. White's majority opinion said Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 protects seniority systems which are not discriminatory, "and it is inappropriate to deny an innocent employee the benefits of his seniority."

White also noted that there had been no finding of racial discrimination against any of the individual black firefighters whose jobs were protected.

The dissenters were Justices Harry A. Blackmun, Thurgood Marshall and William J. Brennan. They argued that since the Memphis firefighter layoffs have been rescinded, the decision was moot and the case should have been thrown out of court.

"This decision insulates decades of discrimination against women and minorities," said Rita Bernstein, an attorney for the Women's Law Project in Philadelphia. "It advances the Reagan administration's goal of protecting a white, male work force."

"It's terrible," said Ramona Ripston, director of the American Civil Liberties Union of Southern California. "It takes the teeth out of affirmative action."

"Those who are racist are certainly going to become emboldened," said Rep. Parren Mitchell, D-Md.

Democratic presidential candidate and civil rights activist Jesse Jackson said the decision "represents a return to the days of pain."

"Another nail in the coffin, another stab in the heart of civil rights," said Dr. Emmett Burns, regional director for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in Baltimore.

However, the decision, which may affect similar layoffs and lawsuits over layoffs in Detroit, Boston, Cincinnati and other cities, was roundly hailed by organized labor.

"The principle of seniority has long been one of the goals we strive for at the bargaining table," said Robert J. Kelley, president of the St. Louis Labor Council. "We see seniority as one of the pillars of union contracts."

Roscoe Hamby of the California Council of Firefighters said the ruling may help minorities and women in the long run. "Once minorities are on the job, seniority rules will protect them as well," he said.

Reagan rejects regularly scheduled US-Soviet summits

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has rejected a plan advocated by top Republicans and Democrats for regularly scheduled summits with the Soviet leadership to discuss general world problems and ways to avert global war.

White House deputy press secretary Peter Roussel said Tuesday that Reagan is insisting that any summit have a carefully prepared agenda and a good chance of producing concrete results.

"Setting a fixed schedule for summit meetings would not in and of itself solve the very real substantive problems existing between our two countries with such different values and interests," Roussel said.

The idea of regularly scheduled summits, possibly once a year, has been endorsed by Democratic presidential hopefuls Walter Mondale and Gary Hart, and by Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., and Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee.

Percy and Baker took their arguments for an annual summit to the White House Tuesday and presented them to Reagan. Baker said Reagan's guidelines for conducting summits were anachronistic.

But shortly after the meeting, the proposal was dismissed as "questionable" by Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

Shultz told reporters a get-acquainted meeting between Reagan and Soviet President Konstantin U. Chernenko could disappoint people around the world if it failed to produce results.

Besides, Shultz said, "all of you would immediately write a story about an election-year ploy, and probably the Soviets would evaluate it that way."

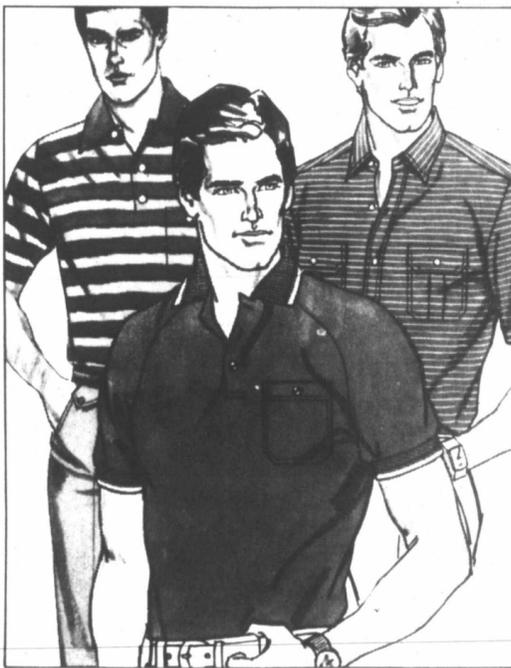

Percy said he had urged "that we meet at least once a year" with an agenda of "of whatever happens to be the problems facing the world that involve both the Soviet Union and the United States."

Expectations for such meetings "do not have to be high because they'd be regular meetings," Percy said. "But it's dangerous not to do it."

Baker said, "I think the idea of only having summits when you've got a prearranged agenda and know what the result's going to be is sort of anachronistic."

"I just say the world is so dangerous and the Russians are so stubborn and obstinate right now on coming back to the table to talk about arms control we ought to say, 'Look, OK, forget about that.'"

Rhode Islanders defeat economic plan

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A multimillion-dollar plan aimed at creating 60,000 high-paying jobs and increasing wages in the nation's smallest state was "perhaps too bold," Gov. J. Joseph Garrahy said after residents rejected it by a 4-to-1 margin.

The proposal turned down Tuesday, known as the Greenhouse Compact, would have authorized up to $90 million in notes and bonds as the first step in the $250 million revitalization plan.

With 99.5 percent of precincts reporting, 121,079 voters, or 80.1 percent, voted against the plan; 29,994, or 19.8 percent, favored it.

"If Rhode Island really is going to do something with its economy, it will have to adopt something like this in coming years," said Ira C. Magaziner, a business consultant and principal author of the 976-page report that recommended the plan.

"People knew there was a lot of money involved, but they didn't know exactly what we were going to do with it," he said.

Garrahy, who declined to seek a fifth term so he could lead the Greenhouse effort, said fear of increased taxes raised by opponents bothered many voters. "There's no question it was bold, perhaps too bold," he said.

"This was an attempt to create the Rhode Island version of industrial policy. It would have placed a great deal of economic power in the hands of a small group of people" — people the voters did not trust, said Alan Feldman, a Brown University economics professor and a leader of the opposition group Common Sense.

Common Sense said the state economy was not as bad off as the plan's supporters believed, and argued that the proposal would cost taxpayers more than its worth to the economy.

The plan, released in October, was named for research "greenhouses" it would have established to develop new industries. A commission of 19 business, labor, academic and government leaders drew up the proposal after a 13-month study.

Under the plan, four greenhouses, backed by $48 million, would have tapped existing research at the state's universities and hospitals to develop profitable industries. Possibilities mentioned included robotics, a specialty at the University of Rhode Island, and clinical testing of pharmaceuticals, now done by a consortium of hospitals.

New vehicle law invalidated

AUSTIN (AP) — U.S. District Judge James Nowlin says Texas' "Lemon law" is unconstitutional and void because it gives consumers a better break than manufacturers.

Nowlin said Tuesday that the law, designed to protect new car buyers from faulty vehicles, "is invalid and unenforceable because of the constitutional invalidity."

The law, which became effective last October, was backed by the Texas Automobile Dealers Association, which represents most new car sellers in the state.

The law passed by the 1983 Legislature allowed the state Motor Vehicle Commission to conduct hearings and order cash refunds or the replacement of a faulty car. Consumers were allowed to file a complaint if a car needed repairs at least four times within the first year or was out of service for 30 days during the warranty.

Chrysler Corp. filed suit in November charging that the law was unfair to manufacturers because car dealers were allowed to sit in judgment of the disputes. Dealers, who comprise five of the nine members on the motor vehicle commission and who backed the bill, were not liable under the law for any defects in a new car.

The suit also charged that manufacturers were not allowed sufficient appeal of commission rulings, and that there was no stipulation in the law to withhold fines against manufacturers while a ruling was appealed.

Nowlin ruled that "the differing treatment afforded owners of vehicles and the manufacturers of vehicles in the commission's review process lacks rational basis. The owners have several options in pursuing their complaint. The manufacturers are bound by the commission orders without effective stay pending appeal."

Investigation launched of TEC

AUSTIN (AP) — A House subcommittee has been named to investigate the Texas Employment Commission, and Rep. Lloyd Criss says the probe will look into the firings of two top officials and the sale of three TEC buildings.

"The best interests of the public will be served if everything is brought out into the open," said Criss, D-Texas City, who is chairman of the House Committee on Labor and Employment Relations.

Criss' full committee is responsible for overseeing the TEC. He named the investigative subcommittee after the three agency commissioners refused to answer some of his questions about the firings of two top agency officials.

Storms stalk Midwest, heat comes back to sweltering East

By The Associated Press

Thunderstorms pounded the Midwest today after more than two dozen tornadoes raced across five states and driving rain pushed bulging rivers higher, while residents of the sweltering East braced for the return of near-record heat.

Five people were injured in south-central Nebraska Tuesday night when a tornado smashed through four farmhouses near Bruning, authorities said. By early today, nearly 7 1/2 inches of rain had fallen at Weeping Water, Neb., since Tuesday evening, forcing Weeping Water Creek over its banks and some people from their homes, the National Weather Service said.

In the East, meanwhile, the mercury was climbing back toward the century mark today after a brief break Tuesday from oppressive heat and humidity that has claimed at least 12 lives.

What could become the first hurricane of the season was developing in the Atlantic Ocean off the coast of Florida and Georgia. The National Hurricane Center today classified the storm a tropical depression and said it would reach land later in the day.

The depression was 100 southeast of Jacksonville, Fla., and moving west-northwest at about 10 miles an hour. Packing 30 mph winds, it did not appear to be gaining strength.

Violent thunderstorms hammered away for a second straight day from eastern Colorado to Michigan.

"We've had 25 tornadoes touch down in five states and reports are still coming in," Hugh Crowther of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., said early today.

A tornado Tuesday night near Limon, Colo., destroyed some buildings and "another one ripped some telephone poles from the ground," said Byron Louis of the National Weather Service in Denver. No injuries were reported.

The twister that touched down near Bruning was one of nine Tuesday across southeast Nebraska. Bruning was sealed off by authorities because of the danger caused by downed power lines in standing water. Civil Defense coordinator Tim Aldrup said.

Tornadoes also touched down Tuesday night in Iowa, Kansas and Michigan, the weather service said. No serious injuries were reported.

In Missouri, flooding along the Platte River left almost 400 people living in temporary quarters today — 225 in the Bean Lake area and 150 in the community of Tracy.

Escapee from Vietnam prison reports he saw six Americans

HOUSTON (AP) — An escapee says he saw a crewman from a sunken American drilling ship and five other Americans alive in a Vietnamese prison camp in November, the Houston Chronicle reported today in a copyright story.

Nguyen Hun Chanh, a 35-year-old industrial engineer now in a Filipino refugee camp, wrote a letter to Austin attorney Douglas Pierce saying he saw Pierce's son, John, during his captivity in Da Nang.

Nguyen said he recognized Pierce from a photograph in an Oriental publication. The elder Pierce placed $1,500 in advertisements offering a reward for information about his son's fate.

"This face is exactly your son," Nguyen wrote in a letter which the elder Pierce said was translated by two Vietnamese.

Douglas Pierce said Nguyen has declined the $100,000 being offered for information about John Pierce.

The younger Pierce was one of 81 crew members of the Glomar Java Sea, an American drilling ship which sank during a typhoon in the South China Sea Oct. 25.

The Houston-based owner of the ship, Global Marine Inc., has issued statements saying officials are presuming dead the 47 men whose bodies were not found in the wreckage of the vessel.

Nguyen's letter contradicts information given to the State Department and the vessel's owner.

Douglas Pierce said he intends to discuss the letter with Coast Guard and National Transportation Safety Board representatives, who were scheduled to resume local hearings today on the sinking. Since the ship was built to withstand rough weather, the cause of the sinking remains a mystery.

In his letter, Nguyen said he sat next to six Americans in a Da Nang prison Nov. 19.

"There is your son, by the picture in the magazine, included in those six Americans," Nguyen said.

He said the man in the prison looked different only in that "the hair is longer than in the picture. The face is skinnier and the beard is longer. I confirm to you that your son, when I met, looked exactly like in the picture."

Woman makes cent$ with coupon trade

WACO, Texas (AP) — One of the most frightening things Shirley Shepherd can imagine is having to pay full price for something.

But she rarely has to do that.

If she needs a baseball cap, she just sends in UPC (Universal Price Code) labels off 20 cans of spaghetti and meatballs and gets a free cap.

Running low on ice tea? She uses a 50-cent coupon on double-coupon day and gets a family-size box of tea bags for 79 cents.

"I don't buy anything without a coupon, and I never pay more than half price for my groceries," said Ms. Shepherd. "I went shopping at a Temple grocery store and bought $230 worth of groceries for $10. I felt so good about myself."

Ms. Shepherd is a coupon fanatic who prefers to call herself a smart shopper. Over the past seven years, she has compiled an intricate system of filing and cross-referencing coupons and refund forms, and she has turned her garage into a library of neatly categorized empty packages and boxes.

Among her necessary equipment is a big purse. "I have to have a big purse. I'll be walking down the street and I might have to stop and pick up a candy wrapper or something — anything that might have a refund on it."

She visits area stores just to take refund slips, and she skims her seven or eight monthly refund guides to check for products that have refunds offers. She mails between 50 and 100 completed forms for cash refund each week.

"So many people don't use them, and they don't know what they're throwing away. They really, really don't," said Ms. Shepherd, who also spends time raising her 7-year-old twins. "It would be such a good way for low-income people or old people to save money."

But for Ms. Shepherd, her coupon operation has transcended simple financial need. Although it helps pay the bills, it also is an intense hobby.

It takes most of the time she has left after working in the McGregor High School cafeteria. She spends about 30 hours a week in her kitchen clipping new coupons and purging her kitchen table-top files of expired coupons.

"It's just exciting. It's wonderful," she said, grinning devilishly and clinching her fists, as she tends to do when she talks couponing.

"I'd rather be doing this than going out to the lake and swimming or skiing. Oh, every once and a while I'll break away and go fishing — I love fishing."

Mrs. Shepherd, a McGregor native who returned from Gatesville four years ago, said she has always used "cents off" coupons, but it took a thrifty aunt to get her serious about having fun with coupons.

"I didn't care about it before," Ms. Shepherd said. "I said she was crazy. I laughed at her. A lot of the refunds she had I already had, but I'd never gotten around to sending them in.

"She said, 'If you've got the refunds send them in.' I did, and when the money came back, I was tickled. That's what got me started."

Shepherd shops almost exclusively at stores that have "double-coupon" days, when each coupon is worth double its face value. Often a double value makes the coupon worth more than the item itself, meaning the shopper actually makes money on the purchase.

One of Mrs. Shepherd's best killings came recently during the monthly double value day at her favorite grocery, Klanders Red and White in McGregor. Armed with a colorful array of coupons, she escaped with $185 worth of groceries for free — and she even earned $27.

Impressed by her own prowess at thriftiness, and wanting to learn more, she began attending coupon-swapping conventions this year. The largest one she went to was the Houston National Refunders convention in April.

"We got there early, but we put a sign up on our door that said, 'Refunders, Want to Trade? Knock.' We had ladies beating our door down," Shepherd said. "It was non-stop trading for 30 hours after that."

The cash she makes from coupons and refunds helps pay her light bill and buy gifts and clothes for her children.

Dear Abby Nosy minister tries to make couple's session a confession

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I would like your opinion of a minister who would say to a bride, "I have to know if you are a virgin or not." I was asked this question during a premarital counseling session. My fiancé was present and was as shocked as I was.

When I told the minister it was a private matter, he replied, "Then I will have to jump to conclusions." I said, "That is your privilege." The minister then insinuated that I had to get married. Abby, we announced our engagement in August of 1982 and set our wedding date at that time. The minister was aware of this, so he had to know that we didn't have to get married.

He then said he had to know if we were living together, because if we were, it would reflect badly on him and the church. My fiancé and I are not living together, never did, nor do we intend to until we are married.

Neither my fiancé nor I is Catholic, and confession to a clergyman is not required by our faith. We are both over 21. I have been very upset since this meeting, and I don't want to have this minister officiate at our wedding. Am I wrong?

BOTHERED BRIDE

DEAR BRIDE: You are not wrong. Ask your minister's superior if the questions you were asked were appropriate in your situation. I certainly understand your wanting another minister to marry you. "Seek and ye shall find."

DEAR PERPLEXED: Maybe she's looking for a father figure. Or he's looking for a daughter figure. Or his income figures in the millions. I can't figure it out. But then, it's really none of my business.

DEAR ABBY: You said, "There is no way a man can demand to be called 'Mister' without coming across as arrogant, pretentious and self-important."

Wrong! Perhaps you've been eating in too many restaurants that require the staff to say, "Hi, I'm Bruce, I'll fill your water glass," and "Hi, I'm Nancy, I'll be your breadbasket girl." Have you ever asked some intelligent restaurant employees how they feel about saying that? They hate it.

That kind of cheap familiarity spills over into the rest of life, demeaning everyone who is victimized by it, usually the young and women. Sit in a doctor's office and listen to the staff call the patients: "Sally, Dr. Fletcher will see you now. Mr. Jones, Dr. Smith will see you now." If informality is so terrific, what's wrong with, "Sally, Sam will see you now?"

Formality is terrific stuff. It allows for room to become more familiar. But when you start out on the chummy plateau, there's nowhere to go.

Cystic Fibrosis bike-a-thon set for June 23 here

Author Tom Wolfe called it "the right stuff" in his best-selling novel about test pilots and astronauts.

But it also applies to some very special children: the 30,000 youngsters who inherited a lung disease, cystic fibrosis, that is not yet curable.

These children have all the bravery and pioneering spirit of any astronaut, said Larry Hendrick, chairman of the Pampa Cystic Fibrosis Foundation Bike-A-Thon scheduled June 24.

"The difference, however, is that no matter what they do or how hard they try, they will eventually lose. The disease is always fatal.

"Children born with cystic fibrosis have an instinct for survival — an innate determination. They struggle every day through physical therapy, swallow dozens of pills and confidently make plans for the future."

As a tribute to these courageous kids, Hendrick said a special bike-a-thon is to be held at 2 p.m. on June 24, beginning at the Austin Elementary School parking lot. Proceeds from the bike-a-thon is to help support research to find a cure or control for cystic fibrosis and to help fund a nationwide network of clinics that specialize in diagnosis and treatment.

A short course, about one mile, will be set out for younger bike-a-thon participants, while the teenage and adult bikers will follow a longer course, about six miles, looping around the city.

To sign up for the bike-a-thon and to pick up pledge sheets, go by Polaris Bicycles, 910 W. Kentucky. T-shirts will be awarded to all participants bringing in $25 or more in pledges.

The major problem with cystic fibrosis is a thick mucus that clogs the lungs and intestines and makes simple things like breathing and eating a daily struggle. The wear and tear on the respiratory and digestive system is eventually fatal.

Although scientists don't know yet what causes cystic fibrosis, they have developed better medicines — antibiotics — to help combat the debilitating effects of the disease. Just 15 years ago, few children with cystic fibrosis lived past five years. Today about half will make it into their 20s.

Surviving into adulthood however produces more obstacles, Hendrick said. Cystic fibrosis is not a cheap disease: it costs between $6,000 and $12,000 a year for treatment. Some patients find themselves in a "catch-22" situation: too ill to work full-time, but without a job, they can't afford medical insurance. Those who can work often encounter discrimination caused by myths about a misunderstood disease.

Adults with cystic fibrosis also face difficult decisions about marriage and family. The psychosocial, physical and financial demands of the disease can strain the best of relationships. The majority of males are sterile and while females can bear children, it is a risk to their own health. An even more difficult decision is whether to risk passing the disease onto a future generation.

"Despite all this, children and adults with cystic fibrosis approach life positively," Hendrick said. "They automatically go into high gear when confronted with an obstacle and do the best they can in every aspect of living. They are truly an elite group of people."

Pampa to join the fight against cystic fibrosis by being part of the upcoming bike-a-thon.

"More money for more research — that's the best way we can help provide a better, brighter future for people with cystic fibrosis," he said.

The Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, a private, voluntary health agency with 100,000 volunteers across the country, receives no government funds and relies solely on contributions from the public to help support programs of research, care and education.

Flashtype contest plans continue

Flashtype, a new fund-raising contest benefiting the Muscular Dystrophy Association and several Pampa MD patients, will give area typists and secretaries a chance to show off their skills and vie for exciting prizes while helping a good cause.

The typing contest which is based on speed, accuracy and word per minute sponsorship will be held Saturday, June 23, at Anton's Starlight Room in the Coronado Inn, beginning at 10:00 a.m.

All Flashtype contestants will compete on identical, IBM model 6705 Selectric III typewriters donated by Southwest Business Machines. Each contestant will be given a one-minute warm-up, an additional minute to review the official typing contest and then a three-minute test. Competition will be in two divisions: typing speed-accuracy and most money raised from sponsors for each correctly typed word per minute.

Since the competition is divided in this way, amateur and beginning typists are encouraged to enter, as well as the professionals. Several exciting prizes will be awarded based solely on money raised for MDA and will have little to do with actual typing skills.

Interested typists should send a $5.00 tax deductible entry fee along with their name and address to MDA, percent Peggy Kirchoff, 305

Lea, Pampa, Texas 79065 for an official kit with complete instructions. Entry forms are also available at local FLASHTYPE sponsor locations: KGRO - KOMX Radio, Coronado Inn, 7-11 Store on North Ballard and Southwest Business Machines.

A variety of prizes will be awarded in each of Flashtype's two competition categories. No one will go away empty handed since all typists will receive an official t-shirt, complimentary fresh flowers, and "goody bag". Those raising $25 or more will receive a souvenir Flashtype coffee mug and several door prizes will also be awarded. The top three fastest typists will receive large trophies and gift certificates. Grand Prize for the contestant raising the most money over $500, is an all-expense paid trip for two to Cancun, Mexico, courtesy of Let's Go Travel and American Airlines. Second place is a personal home computer (keyboard only) and third place, a $50 gift certificate from Vance Hall and a $50 gift certificate from Dunlap's.

The National Grand Prize, awarded to the one Flashtype contestant in the U.S. who raises the most money for MDA by December 31, 1984, is an all-expense paid trip for two to Hollywood and a visit with David Hasselhoff on the set of his hit television series, "Knight Rider".

Hasselhoff, an MDA National Vice President, is National Chairman of the Flashtype program. Honorary Advisory Committee for the local Flashtype includes Stu Schroeder from KGRO - KOMX Radio, Debbie Musgrave, Phyllis Laramore with American Business Women, Peggy Kirchoff and Pat Young with Citizen's Bank.

More information on Flashtype is available by calling Mrs. Kirchoff at 9-1291 or the radio station at 5-6809.

MDA is a national voluntary health agency dedicated to conquering 40 neuromuscular diseases through world-wide research, comprehensive patient care, and far-reaching professional and public health education.

Sound advice for the computer bugs

By LARRY BLASKO
Associated Press Writer
Kafka's character had just a little problem: He awoke as a giant insect. You could do worse — you might awake as a computer bug.

It's much more costly. And only slightly more socially acceptable.

Computer bugs feed on information. It grows on magazine stands and bookshelves, running about $2.50 for a magazine and from $5 and up — way up — for books that race to print looking over their shoulders for technological change.

No bug can afford to buy it all. And even an hour's "browsing" at the magazine rack is apt to draw pointed directions to the public library.

So maybe this column can help. It's no substitute for buying the magazine or book if the topics really interest you. But it's a money-saving way to discover what might be of interest.

And computer bugs need money, because if you think the literature is expensive, wait until you see the words "low-priced" used before gadgets costing $500.

Like we said, Kafka's friend had just a little problem...

On leap gosub looking before — that's a Techlish version of sound advice, and the June issue of "Family Computing" (Scholastic Inc., $1.95) has an excellent guide to 10 popular family computers. Systems covered include ADAM, Apple IIe, Atari 600XL, Atari 800XL, VIC20, Commodore 64, IBM PC, IBM PCjr, TRS-80 Color 2 and TRS-80 Model 14.

Pictures of the machines, straightforward evaluations and comparative charts make the article worthwhile for prospective shoppers. Best advice of the piece: "Walk into any computer store and ask a salesperson what computer to buy. You're likely to get one of two stock answers: 'How much do you want to spend?' or, 'What do you want to use it for?' If you get the first question, run — don't walk — to the nearest exit." (Ask yourself the question before you run anywhere. The models compared range from $99 (VIC-20) to $1,797 (IBM PC).

Required reading, shoppers' division: If you are determined to spend money on a computer, you'll have to spend time with computer salesmen. The June issue of "Creative Computing" (Ziff-Davis Publishing, $2.95) has an article, "Undercover Consumer," by Betsy Staples and John J. Anderson that should leave you forewarned and forearmed — also laughing. Sample sub-heads: "Seared at Sears"; "K-Mart Marvin Tells It Like It Is."

Apple reviews? Wait IIc — Apple Computer's just-announced $1,300 IIc — including disk drive — is a hot topic, drawing cover-story "previews." (A "review" involves extensive, hands-on testing of a production model. A "preview" is a quicker look, generally just after product-release.) Here's a look at some of those "previews," plus some full-fledged reviews of other products and interesting articles:

—June "Computers and Electronics" ($1.95, Ziff-Davis Publishing). On the Apple IIc, little more than a laundry-list of system specifications. Spend time instead with "What Makes Jr Run," a review of the IBM PCjr that pulls few punches: "Junior is overpriced and it has a few annoying flaws."

—June "Popular Computing" (McGraw-Hill, $2.50). Apple IIc should hope to work as well as its preview here is written: "Two years ago, Apple chairman Steve Jobs walked into engineer Peter Quinn's office. He slapped an Apple IIe main circuit board on Quinn's desk and plunked a low-profile keyboard at one end of it and a disk drive at the other. Jobs pointed to the assemblage of parts and declared, 'That is a great product. Do you want to do it?'" It's also worth taking a look at the "Special Report: Information Management" if you think life might be simpler if you could just get organized in a database.

Computer camps? Why not? But where? And for your child? You can get some of the answers from the June issue of "Personal Computing" (Hayden Publishing, $2.50). For one thing, a good camp should be authentic — a place where youngsters can learn about computers and catch frogs in the same afternoon.

Tips for lasting roses

HASLETT, Mich. (AP) — Red roses mean "I love you," and their deep color symbolizes respect and courage, according to Roses Inc. here, the association of American rose growers.

To make the magic last, take a few moments to give your roses the care they need to prolong their beauty, advise association experts, who offer these suggestions:

If your roses arrive from the florist already arranged in sponge-like foam, immediately add enough barely warm water to soak the foam. Add fresh water every day to keep the foam soaked.

If your roses are delivered loose in box or wrapper, keep them in a cool, dark place until you can arrange them properly. Your refrigerator — not your freezer — is an ideal spot.

When you are ready to arrange your roses, fill your vase or container with barely warm water, and add a floral preservative. (This may come with your roses; if not, most florists sell small packages of the inexpensive preservative.)

One rose at a time, remove the leaves that will be below the water line of the container. Hold the stem end under running water or in a pan filled with water and, using a sharp knife or scissors, trim about an inch off the stem, cutting at an angle. Immediately place the rose in your vase, without letting the stem dry out.

Remember to remove enough stem so that the rose is about one-and-a-half times as tall as your vase. Then, arrange the roses at different heights to achieve a staggered effect.

Proper care will help your roses stay fresher longer.

New cookbook filled with recipes, hints and helps

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Lifestyles Editor

A plethora of recipes and cooking hints are combined in the recently release 1984 Pampa charter chapter of the American Business Women's Association Cookbook.

Besides a wealth of easy recipes the whole family will love, the cookbook also contains seven pages of such cooking helps as an oven-temperature chart, time chart for roasts, temperatures for baking flour mixtures, time tables for cereals, dried fruits and vegetables Measurements and equivalents and metric conversions are also included.

Ingredient substitutions (always a help when you don't have just what the recipe calls for) and uses for herbs is also a part of the cookbook.

Did you know that two 10 pound cans of beans will feed 50 people? "Cooking for a crowd" section lists a number of common foods used for cooking for crowds and the amount needed for groups of 25, 50 and 100.

Also listed are a slow crockery cooking conversion table, microwave cooking principles and common cooking terms.

In addition to all these helpful cooking hints are 39 pages of tasty recipes contributed by members of the Pampa ABWA chapter. The recipes are categorized under the headings of Salads, Bread, Rolls and Cookies, Cakes and Pastry, Candy and Icings, Casseroles, Meat, Fish and Poultry, and Miscellaneous.

The ABWA Cookbooks are available at a small price from any ABWA member or by calling Ways and Means committee chairmen, Wynona Seely at 669-7277 or Phyllis Laramore at 669-7574.

Cool summer soups are hottest idea

Light, refreshing and full of the season's best flavors, icy cold soups are just about perfect for warm weather meals. Easy to prepare without sophisticated equipment, these cooling soups can be made the day before and tucked into the refrigerator until it's time to serve. They're a great change of taste from summer's standard barbecues and last-minute sandwiches, and nothing could be easier on the cook.

Throughout the Southwest, cool summer soups have long been menu favorites — especially when prepared with south-of-the-border flair. Home economists in San Antonio have created two exciting icy soups with authentic Mexican flavor by teaming seasonal fresh vegetables with a few everyday ingredients.

Served as a main dish for a casual family meal or for entertaining Picante Avocado Soup is light yet satisfying with rich, fresh flavor appeal. Be sure to select fully ripened avocados in order to enjoy their most buttery texture and fullest flavor. Avocados are ready to use when the fruit yields easily to gentle pressure. A casual, as-summer way to serve this soup is buffet style with the soup in a chilled tureen and accompaniments arranged for diners to help themselves. Slice green onion tops and diced cucumber make "soup-er" stir-ins. Crusty French bread, a basket of fresh fruit and a selection of cheeses will complete the easy, elegant meal.

Gazpacho, that humble Spanish soup sometimes thought of as "liquid salad," has found international celebrity as a year-round favorite. San Antonio style Gazpacho simplifies the preparation and travels the taste toward Mexico with the addition of picante sauce.

Busy meal planners with active summer lifestyles note that a more tasty, nutritious and low-calorie soup will be hard to find. Chock full of garden fresh vegetables, this no-fuss soup spotlights the season's most succulent tomatoes. Serve this bright, light soup as a first course in place of salad, or as a main dish for an easy, refreshing warm weather meal.

PICANTE AVOCADO SOUP
2 lg. ripe avocados, peeled, seeded and cut up
2 c. chicken broth
2 t. lime juice
1 cucumber, peeled, seeded and cut up
1/4 c. picante sauce
1 c. half and half
1/2 t. salt
green onion tops, thinly sliced
Combine avocados, 1 cup of the chicken broth and lime juice in a food processor or blender; process until smooth. Transfer to large bowl. Combine cucumber and picante sauce in food processor or blender; process until smooth.

Stir into avocado mixture with remaining chicken broth, half and half and salt. Cover and chill. Top with green onions. Makes 4 to 6 servings, about six cups soup.

SAN ANTONIO STYLE GAZPACHO
2 c. beef broth

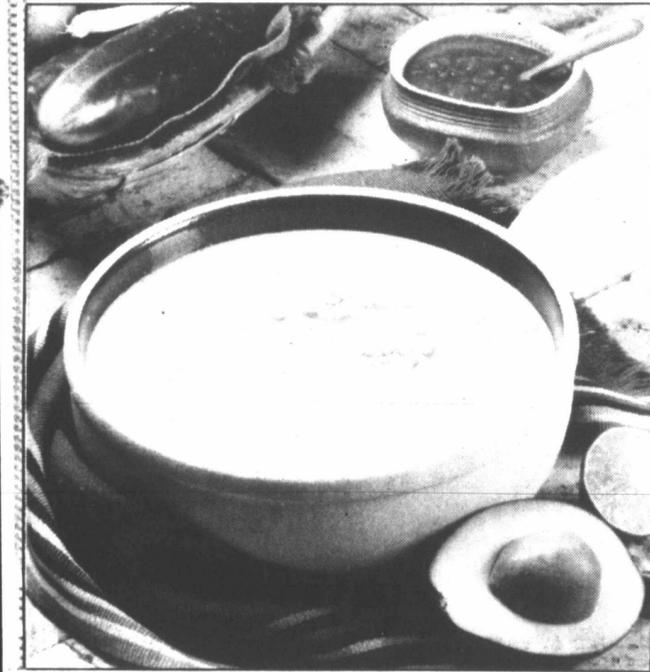

1 med. onion, quartered
1-3rd c. lemon juice
1/4 c. olive oil
2 t. salt
1 (46 oz.) can tomato juice
2 c. finely chopped celery
2 tomatoes, diced
1-3 c. picante sauce
1/4 t. pepper

Salt to taste

Cut off heavy stems from spinach and discard; cook spinach and drain; with a kitchen scissors shred coarsely. Heat oil; stir in spinach, raisins, pistachios and salt until hot. Makes 3 servings. (Use a small sharp knife to halve the pistachios.)

Combine one cup of the broth, onion, lemon juice, oil and salt in food processor or blender; process until smooth. Transfer to large bowl. Add tomato juice; remaining beef broth, celery, tomatoes, picante sauce and pepper; mix well. Chill at least three hours. Top each serving with green pepper, cucumber and croutons. CHICKEN SALAD — It's dressed with curry-flavor mayonnaise and mounded in the cavities of papaya halves.

Papaya halves hold salad

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

A good many modern cooks have changed the way they serve old-time chicken salad. For some years now a favorite way of offering it has been to couple it with fruit — notably pineapple and seedless green grapes. Now an inventive cook has teamed chicken salad with papaya. That delectable fruit sets off the chicken combination and it may be mounded in the cavities of papaya halves. The following recipe for chicken salad with papaya benefits from homemade curry mayonnaise, and we are giving you the recipe for that dressing. It's quickly whirled together in an electric blender.

CHICKEN SALAD WITH PAPAYA

- 3 cups diced (¾ inch) cooked chicken
- 1 cup thinly sliced celery
- ½ cup thinly sliced scallion
- 2-3rds cup Curry Mayonnaise, recipe follows
- 2 papayas (each about 1 pound)
- 2 tablespoons toasted sesame seeds, if desired

Watercress sprigs
In a large bowl thoroughly toss together the chicken, celery, scallion and 2-3rds cup mayonnaise; cover and chill. At serving time halve papayas lengthwise and remove the seeds. Cut away peel from each papaya half, if you like. Place each half on an individual salad or luncheon plate; mound chicken salad in papaya cavities. Sprinkle with the sesame seeds. Garnish with the watercress. Serve at once. Makes 4 servings.

CURRY MAYONNAISE

- 1 large egg
- 2½ tablespoons lemon juice
- 1½ teaspoons curry powder
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon cayenne
- 1 cup vegetable oil

In an electric blender whirl together just until blended the egg, lemon juice, curry powder, salt and cayenne. With the motor running, pour in the oil in a thin steady stream; whirl just until oil is incorporated. Turn into a jar, cover tightly and refrigerate. Makes about 1½ cups. Use the amount called for in the Chicken Salad with Papaya recipe and keep the remainder stored in the refrigerator for use with other salads or in sandwich spreads.

Cinnamon used in many lands

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

The aromatic spice known as cinnamon is one of the world's oldest seasonings, popular in gourmet cuisines the world over. Actually, there are two varieties of cinnamon. The reddish-brown bark from the cassia tree is the one we usually see in the United States. Buff-colored Ceylon cinnamon from the bark of a laurel tree is popular in many lands, including Mexico, but it is rarely consumed in this country.

Cassia cinnamon is a native of southern China, where the people in ancient times regarded the cassia as the Tree of Life. Our two principal cassia sources today are Indonesia and Vietnam. There are several mentions of cinnamon in the Bible. The Lord told Moses on Mount Sinai to make an anointing oil which would include cinnamon. And the 45th Psalm says "all thy garments smell of myrrh and aloe and cassia..."

Cinnamon is cultivated today, much as it was thousands of years ago. It is harvested during the rainy season because the bark is easier to handle in wet weather. Once stripped, it is rolled into long, slender quills — the sticks familiar here in the United States.

Cinnamon is usually regarded in the United States as a seasoning to be added to recipes for sweets, but it has many other uses.

In Greece, the spice is used in beef stew, while in India it is used in curries. In our country, the Pennsylvania Dutch sprinkle cinnamon sugar over sliced tomatoes.

which I have found very tasty. Cinnamon sticks are also used to stir mulled cider and wine.

As for other uses, I once enjoyed a pungent chicken dish that was flavored with cinnamon. Here is the recipe.

4-pound chicken, ready to cook

- 2 teaspoons salt
- 4 cups water
- ½ cup chicken fat
- ½ cup flour
- 2 slices bread, crumbled
- 2 dozen sliced green olives
- 1 cup (8 ounces) tomato sauce
- 1-3rd cup seedless raisins
- 3 tablespoons instant minced onions
- 1 cinnamon stick, 1 inch long
- 2 teaspoons ground coriander
- 2 teaspoons oregano leaves
- ½ teaspoon black pepper
- ½ teaspoon instant garlic

Icy raspberry liqueur-flavored dessert

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

A variation on baked Alaska takes on new meaning with the use of homemade flavored ice. Use the syrup from canned pears or peaches and blend with black raspberry liqueur for the ice.

Fruit and ice are then topped with meringue and slipped into the broiler for a minute to brown the meringue. Serve with a black raspberry liqueur sauce.

BLACK RASPBERRY FIRE & ICE

- 1 can (1 pound, 13 ounces) pear or peach halves in heavy syrup
- 1/3 cup black raspberry liqueur
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 2 eggs
- 1 tablespoon sugar

1 teaspoon vanilla

Thoroughly drain pears, reserving syrup. Cover and chill pears. Pour 1 1/4 cups of the pear syrup into small saucepan (add water, if needed). Bring to boiling; simmer 5 minutes. Remove from heat and cool to room temperature. Stir in black raspberry liqueur and lemon juice. Pour into shallow bowl and place in freezer. When mixture is frozen about 1 inch around edge, beat until thoroughly blended. Cover and return to freezer. Freeze several hours or overnight, until mixture is solid throughout. Prepare Chambord Sauce.

To assemble: Preheat broiler with rack about 3 inches from heat. Cut each pear half into 3 or 4 wedges. Arrange pears, equally divided, in 6 shallow, heat-proof serving dishes. In small-bowl beat egg yolks, sugar and vanilla until light and lemon-colored. In another small bowl beat egg whites to form stiff but not dry peaks. Mix about 2 tablespoons of the whites into yolk mixture, then fold yolk mixture into whites. For each serving, place a scoop of Chambord ice on pears. Quickly spoon egg mixture over ice to coat completely. Place in broiler just long enough for egg mixture to brown lightly; about 1 minute, watch closely. Spoon some of the Chambord Sauce over each serving, dividing equally. Serve immediately. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 6 servings.

CHAMBORD SAUCE: In small saucepan bring 3/4 cup black raspberry liqueur just to boiling. Combine 1 tablespoon strained lemon juice with 2 teaspoons cornstarch. Stir into liqueur. Cook and stir over medium-low heat until thickened, about 3 minutes; cool. Sauce may be covered and refrigerated up to 5 days. Bring to room temperature and stir before serving.

SERIES MVP — Larry Bird passes the Most Valuable Player of the seven-game series and the Celtics' 111-102 victory over Los Angeles in their 15th NBA championship. (AP Tuesday night. Boston's Bird was voted Laserphoto)

Celtics win 15th title

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — If one weapon is misfiring, the Boston Celtics reach into their potent and varied arsenal and pull out another. Somehow, they find a way to win.

Plagued by miserable shooting, players on the National Basketball Association's most successful franchise pounded the boards, paraded to the foul line and claimed an unprecedented 15th championship Tuesday night.

The Celtics capped a surge from a 2-1 deficit with a 111-102 victory over the Los Angeles Lakers in the seventh and deciding game to win the series, 4-3.

"There's no way we were going to lose this game," said Boston hero Cedric Maxwell, who matched his season-high with a team-leading 24 points. "We have leadership, courage, poise, charisma. We have it all."

"Their aggressiveness won it," said Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley. "The Celtics, who were to visit President Reagan at the White House today, hit only 39.5 percent of their field-goal attempts, their second poorest performance in 23 playoff games, while Los Angeles connected at a 48.8 clip. But the Celtics' 52-33 rebounding margin was its second largest of the playoffs and marked the fifth time in the series that they outrebounded the Lakers."

Trailing by two points in Game 2, Boston found a way to win on a steal and game-tying layup by Gerald Henderson with 13 seconds left in regulation. Boston won in overtime, 124-121.

In Game 4, the Celtics trailed by five points with less than a minute left in the fourth quarter, but a three-point play by Robert Parish and two free throws by Larry Bird forced the game into overtime and they won 129-125.

In Game 7, the team that couldn't shoot straight won with rebounding and foul shooting, in which it enjoyed a 43-18 scoring advantage. "What has been our Achilles heel has been rebounding and countering their aggressive play," said Riley. "Their strength is size and power inside. That was the difference. They are a great rebounding team."

Nowhere was it more evident than late in the third quarter when Boston seized control of a tight game. With Maxwell scoring 17 points, Boston took a 58-52 half-time lead.

"Before the game started, Maxwell said everyone get on his back because he's going to carry us and that's exactly what he did," said Henderson.

Los Angeles crept to within 73-72 with 5:17 remaining in the period. But a jumper by Bird, the unanimous choice as the series' most valuable player, launched an 18-6 spurt that put the Celtics on top 91-78 heading into the final quarter.

Boston ended the third quarter by scoring nine consecutive points. Kevin McHale and Danny Ainge hit jumpers, then Parish sank one of two free throws after being fouled while hustling for an offensive rebound with 59 seconds to go.

He was fouled again 30 seconds later while fighting for another offensive rebound and made both shots. Finally, with two seconds left, McHale was fouled on a fastbreak and hit two free throws.

"It seemed like everybody played with a little more character than," said Maxwell, the playoff MVP when Boston won its last title in 1981. "We dropped down deep. We got all the rebounds. We pushed the ball up."

"We built the lead. We had things in our eyes that said we're not going to be denied," McHale said.

Celtic fans celebrate

BOSTON (AP) — Screaming, dancing, chanting, kissing Boston Celtics fans did leaping high-fives and rolled exuberantly in the street in front of Boston Garden early this morning after their heroes whipped Los Angeles for their 15th National Basketball Association title.

"Larry Bird is the NBA," Paul Delaney of Weymouth, Mass. shouted about the Celtics star while dancing and stomping atop an unoccupied Boston police cruiser parked in front of the Garden. "The Celtics are a dynasty."

"They're wonderful," agreed Police Officer Joe Poggi, standing 10 feet from the cruiser. "I hope the boys from LA are crying crocodile tears."

Ecstatic Boston fans celebrated the decisive 111-102 win with the city's characteristic sports spirit.

"The best thing was watching Kareem Abdul-Jabbar walking to the locker room with his head down," said William Tripp of Marlboro, Mass. "His head was down, can you believe that?"

Then Tripp turned to a friend, both men leaped into the air, slapped hands in the high-five manner affected by pro basketball players and rolled in the street.

Scores of others did the same thing. In the middle of the crowd, Marty Mullin, 22, and Kathy McPath, 19, of Falmouth, Mass., kissed.

"A celebration kiss," they said and kissed again.

McIlhenny to give up NFL football career

DALLAS (AP) — Former Southern Methodist

quarterback Lance McIlhenny says he's given up on the idea of pursuing a professional football career.

McIlhenny, who guided the Mustangs to a 35-5 record, two Southwest Conference crowns and three post-season bowl appearances after taking over midway through his freshman year, said Tuesday that he's decided against trying out as a free agent in the National Football League.

Dallas, Denver, Atlanta and Green Bay had expressed interest in signing him to a contract, McIlhenny told the Dallas Times Herald.

McIlhenny said he knew it was time to retire when he started thinking of playing football only for the money.

"If I did go (to pro football), it would have been for the wrong reasons," he said. "I was considering it for the money part of it, and I didn't want to play football for the money. If I played, it would be because I like to play the game."

McIlhenny also said the idea of going "out there and get beat around as a free agent trying to make the ball club didn't make any sense.

"I've been reasonably injury free, and I can still play golf and still go skiing and do the things I like to do," he said. "It was fun, but everything has to come to an end."

McIlhenny, who still has two semesters left at SMU, has taken a job with a real estate firm in Dallas.

Rangers win five in a row

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Mike Smithson made his former teammates mad and had to pay the price.

Smithson, traded to the Minnesota Twins in the off-season, was pounded for 11 hits Tuesday night in a 6-2 Texas Ranger victory.

Only last Wednesday, he limited the Rangers to five hits in a 2-1 victory for the Twins.

Smithson was touched by a two-run, seventh-inning Larry Parrish homer after he had hit Parrish with a pitch in the first inning. Parrish was so irate he slammed down his bat and yelled at Smithson.

Larry threw his bat down like that," said Smithson. "I didn't know what he was doing. I locked next to him last year."

"He knows I'm not throwing at him. He also knows I throw inside."

Parrish said, "He might not have been throwing at me but it makes you mad. I just channeled it into a homer."

For the Rangers, it was their fifth straight victory, their best streak of the season.

played the hero but I decided to tell (Manager) Doug Rader," Darwin said. "It's better to be safe in a situation like that."

Darwin was touched for two home runs but earned his fifth victory of the year against three decisions.

Smithson's record dropped to 7-7.

The Rangers tagged Smithson for four runs in the second inning.

With one out, Donnie Scott singled and took third on Wayne Tolleson's double.

Nicklaus shoots for another Open crown

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (AP) — It was in an oblique fashion that Hale Irwin got around to mentioning Jack Nicklaus.

The discussion, concerning the United States Open Golf Championship, was general in nature: courses and players, the Winged Foot layout in particular, rough and strategy.

Then Irwin, who won the first of his two Open titles at Winged Foot 10 years ago, turned his attention to the demands made on a player by the test of the Open.

"He must have talent, determination, courage, confidence — and luck," Irwin said, and immediately thought of Nicklaus.

"Jack has been most successful in going out and doing all those things necessary in the major championships. I have marveled, over the years, at Jack's ability to concentrate on the task at hand, to shut out everything around him. To do what he must do."

His talent never has been questioned. The most remarkable record in the history of the ancient game attests.

His courage has been displayed for a quarter-century.

His determination never was in greater evidence than two weeks ago when he, somehow, salvaged a tournament title he'd apparently lost with a shot out of bounds.

And it was in that tournament, Nicklaus' own event, the Memorial, that his confidence received a boost and the luck turned.

"I'd played pretty well for quite a while, but it seemed someone was always shooting 64 or 65 at me in the last round to keep me from winning," Nicklaus said.

"This time, someone did something (Andy Bean missed two short putts) that allowed me to win. Maybe it's not the way I'd like to win, but winning is important. It's important for the confidence."

Reds' Hume retired to bullpen

HOUSTON (AP) — Cincinnati Reds Manager Vern Rapp said reliever Tom Hume is back in the bullpen indefinitely, for the middle innings, until he proves he can be a stopper or a starter.

Hume says he's just confused.

"I could have gone on and middle relief until he earns his way back. A player can only be given so many chances. Then it's up to them. They have to overcome it by themselves," said Rapp.

The right-hander has split time between the starting rotation and the bullpen this season while struggling to a 3-6 record and a high 5.63 earned run average.

"I feel fine," Hume said. "I feel good throwing the ball. How am I mentally? I'm confused. I don't know what I am doing, starting, relieving or what."

"I don't mind starting," Hume said. "I don't mind relieving. I'll do whatever they want me to do. But I would like to do one or the other."

Cluttered ceiling at Boston Garden

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer
BOSTON (AP) — The interior decorator at Boston Garden is about to have a major problem.
He was running out of room for championship pennants even before the Celtics claimed their 15th National Basketball Association title Tuesday night. After all, the ceiling at this venerable building is only so big and it's beginning to get just a little cluttered.
Now he is going to have to do some selective shifting of the pennants to squeeze one more in.
Not to worry. The man is experienced. He's been finding room for flags ever since 1957 when pro basketball's most successful team began constructing this dynasty.
A visiting player walks in the building and sees a sea of green flags hanging from the rafters at one end, celebrating 1957, 1959, 1960, 1961, 1962, 1963, 1964, 1965, 1966, 1968, 1969, 1974, 1976, and 1981. It can be, well, a trifle intimidating.

The Star Spangled Banner is played and gets about as far as "Whose broad stripes and bright stars," before the roar of the fans begins to drown it out.
This is no ordinary gym. This is Boston Garden, the closest thing to a basketball museum this side of the Hall of Fame in Springfield, Mass.
"This is the shrine of basketball," James Worthy of the beaten Los Angeles Lakers, said. "It's a challenge to come in here, to play here."
"I think the fans affect the Celtics more than their opponents. They pick up the home team. I can understand it. I came along in the days of Jo Jo White and John Havlicek. I rooted for them. This is the place to play. It was a dream to play my first championship series here. I enjoyed every minute of it. There's so much tradition here."

Mostly, the tradition is winning. All you have to do is look around the building.
There in his regular seat is Red Auerbach, architect of the dynasty, first as coach, later as general manager and finally as president. His victory cigar is always at the ready.
There's Tom Heinsohn, with eight championship rings as a player and two more as a coach, broadcasting the game.
There's Tom "Satch" Sanders, watching from a corner seat, with eight rings of his own.

There's coach K.C. Jones running the show from the Boston bench, another eight-ring man.
It can get positively eery. Boston also had history on its side.
Never had the Celtics lost the seventh game of a championship series, winning all six previous times they had reached that stage.
Never had they lost a championship series to the Lakers, beating that franchise all seven times they played for the title, and three of those times in seventh games.
Never had Los Angeles won the seventh game of a championship series, against anybody, losing four of them.
With all that working against them, the Lakers had to feel they were in deep trouble when they walked into this temple.

Astros blank Reds

HOUSTON (AP) — Joe Niekro, the Houston Astros' hard luck pitcher early this year, says his teammates have been making his job easier recently and the difference is paying off in victories.
Niekro's first complete game of the year Tuesday night paid off in a 7-0 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.
"It makes my job a lot easier when I get a lead like that," Niekro said. "What we need now is to get a win streak going. We've got three wins now, but we need about 10 in a row."
Niekro, 5-7, has won his last three starts as his teammates produced nine, 14 and seven runs. Previously the Astros averaged two runs a game with the 39-year-old knuckleballer on the mound.
Niekro said he changed his pitching style as he grew more confident.
"After the four-run lead I relied more on my slider and fastball and after being up by seven, I went mainly to the fastball," he said.

The Reds have lost five consecutive games and 10 of their last 13.
Niekro hurled the 21st shutout of his 17-year-career.
"Knucksie" pitched an outstanding game when we really needed to give our bullpen a rest," Houston Manager Bob Lillis said. "His knuckleball was really dancing. This has to be one of his better games."
Niekro allowed only five base runners and retired 14 straight Reds between Dave Concepcion's single with two outs in the second inning and Dan Driessen's one out single in the seventh.
Houston outfielders Jose Cruz and Jerry Humphrey each drove in two runs to lead the 13-hit Astro attack.
Lillis was enthusiastic about his club's chances of catching the Reds and taking over fourth place in the National League West today.

AL roundup Red Sox rally for win

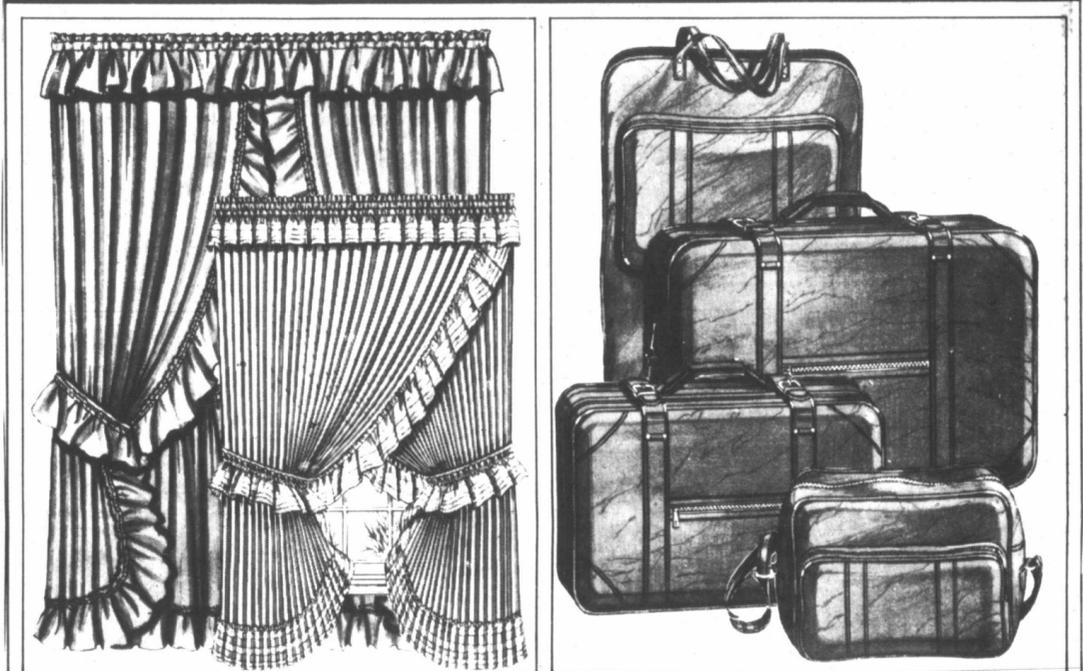

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer
The Boston Red Sox are not only making a habit of winning these days, but they're doing it the hard way — with late-inning heroics.
For the third straight time, the Red Sox pulled out a game in the late innings when they rallied on Dwight Evans' three-run homer in the eighth to beat the New York Yankees 9-8 Tuesday night.
"The pitch was kind of high, probably a ball, but I managed to hit it well," Evans said of the gopher ball by Yankee reliever ace Dave Righetti. "I don't think I can hit a ball any better."
"Of course, here (Fenway Park) it doesn't make any difference whether you hit it 315 feet down the line or 550 feet or whatever onto the turnpike. They all count the same."
The victory was Boston's fifth in a row, and 12th in the last 14 contests. Previously, the Red Sox beat Milwaukee Sunday when Rick Miller drove in the winning run with a pinch triple in the eighth. On Monday night, Reid Nichols capped a six-run ninth with a three-run pinch homer against the Yankees.
In other American League action, it was Texas 6, Minnesota 2; Baltimore 5, Milwaukee 4; Toronto 12, Detroit 3; Seattle 3, Kansas City 2 in 10 innings; California 3, Chicago 2 in 10, and Cleveland 11, Oakland 5.
Boston's comeback offset two homers and five runs batted in by Don Baylor and five consecutive singles by Don Mattingly of the Yankees. Rangers 6, Twins 2.

Buddy Bell hit a two-run double off former teammate Mike Smithson and Larry Parrish drilled a two-run homer, carrying Texas over Minnesota behind the pitching of Danny Darwin and Odell Jones. Orioles 5, Brewers 4.
Mike Young and John Shelby homered in the eighth inning to rally Baltimore over Milwaukee.
Young led off the eighth against reliever Rollie Fingers, 0-2, with his third home run of the season to tie the game 3-3. One out later, Floyd Rayford singled and Shelby homered for the winning runs.
The blow gave the Orioles a 5-3 lead and helped them withstand an RBI double by Jim Sundberg in the ninth off reliever Tippy Martinez, 3-4. Sammy Stewart came on to get the last out and post his first save after Martinez left with the bases loaded.
Blue Jays 12, Tigers 3.
Damaso Garcia socked four hits and scored a pair of runs. George Bell contributed three hits and Ernie Whitt walloped a three-run homer as Toronto routed Detroit and snapped a five-game losing streak.
The Blue Jays shelled Detroit starter Jack Morris, 11-3, for six runs on eight hits in the first three innings in the earliest exit for the Tiger right-hander in two seasons. The loss was Morris' first on the road in six decisions this season and prevented him from posting his 100th career victory.
Toronto right-hander Jim Clancy, 5-6, bounced back from three straight losses. Mariners 3, Royals 2.
Larry Milbourne, who had tied the game with a solo homer in the sixth, drove home the winning run with a 10th-inning single as Seattle beat Kansas City.
Alvin Davis opened the Mariner 10th with a single and moved to second on a sacrifice by Al Cowens. Ken Phelps was intentionally walked, and Barry Bonnell forced Davis at third. But after Darnell Coles went in to run for Phelps at second, Milbourne lashed a 1-2 pitch off Bret Saberhagen, 2-6.
Mariner right-hander Mike Moore, 3-4, went all the way, scattering seven hits.
Angels 3, White Sox 2.
Doug DeCinces singled with the bases loaded with one out in the 10th inning to boost California over Chicago.
Rob Wilfong's single with one out off Al Jones, 0-1, brought on Juan Agosto, who surrendered a single to Rod Carew and an intentional walk to Fred Lynn. Salome Barojas then came on to face DeCinces, who singled sharply to score Wilfong.
Doug Corbett, 2-0, pitched the final 1-2-3 innings to pick up the win.
Indians 11, A's 5.
Julio Franco and Pat Tabler hit their first home runs of the season, worth two runs apiece, in a five-run first-inning outburst which propelled Cleveland over Oakland.

Babe Ruth League Roundup

Troy Patterson, Curt Brashears and Dustin Miller led the hitting attack as First National Bank owned Cree Company, 11-6, Tuesday in the Babe Ruth League Baseball Tournament.
Patterson had three hits for the Bankers while Brashears and Miller added two hits each. Gardner also had a hit for the Bank.
Winning pitcher was Jimmy Massick.
Getting hits for Cree were Heath Babcock, Bryan Hogan, Shawn Frye, Chris Wilson and David Day.
Pampa Hardware defeated Grant Supply, 6-2, in the other game played last night.
Winning pitcher Cliff Medley allowed just two hits. John Mounthy, Kevin Hunt and Kyle Clark had the only hits for Hardware.
Hardware won the regular-season title.
Robert Perez and Brian Fleming had hits for Grant.
Tonight, J.T. Richardson meets First National Bank at 7:30 p.m. at Optimist Park. Hardware meets the winner at 8:30 p.m. Friday night.

Conservative minister leads Southern Baptists

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Delegates to the national meeting of the Southern Baptist Convention have given the Rev. Charles Stanley, a conservative Atlanta minister, an easy victory over two opponents in his bid for the presidency of the 14.1 million-member denomination.

Stanley won 7,692 of the 14,822 votes cast to outdistance the Rev. Grady C. Cothen of Nashville, Tenn., who had 3,874 votes. The Rev. John Sullivan, the convention's current first vice president, finished third with 3,174 votes. About 100 votes were invalid.

Stanley's election was a sharp victory for Southern Baptist conservatives, who have elected their candidate every year since 1979.

During the past five years the denomination has split into conservative and moderate factions, and convention leaders have said this meeting could line up the denomination along one side.

As a conservative, Stanley said, he opposes the ordination of women and backed prayer in schools. "I am committed to Biblical authority," he said after his election.

Stanley, 51, said he did not believe he was elected by just one faction, and he downplayed the conservative-moderate rift.

"You'll never get all Baptists to agree. I think we'll have to learn to live together and love each other," he said.

Paul Pressler, a leader of the conservative movement, said Stanley's election clearly showed what Southern Baptists wanted.

"I think his election shows where the hearts of Southern Baptists are and moves us solidly back to the Biblical basis that has made us a great denomination," said Pressler, of Houston, Texas.

Pressler scored his own conservative victory by narrowly winning election to the convention's Executive Committee, which serves as the main governing body. In a controversial move, moderate forces nominated the Rev. Bruce McIver, of Dallas, to oppose him. After strong debate on the nominations, Pressler received 5,462 votes and McIver 4,607.

Earlier Tuesday the outgoing head of the Southern Baptist Convention urged members to spread the gospel, saying that duty must be the center of their lives.

Christians owed the world the gospel, said the Rev. James T. Draper Jr. "This debt that we owe the world, it is a mandate from God," he said.

More than 22,000 Southern Baptists are attending the meeting, which began Tuesday and ends Thursday. There about 18,000 messengers — voting delegates.

The rift between conservatives and moderates appeared early Tuesday. Messengers narrowly rejected a measure to withhold a $411,000 allocation for the Baptist Joint Committee for Public Affairs.

The Washington-based committee lobbies on issues of religious liberty and the separation of church and state. Nine Baptist denominations form the committee but the Southern Baptist Convention contributes about 80 percent of its funding.

It has drawn fire in the past year from conservatives who said the committee did not give Southern Baptists their own voice.

"We can do more as Southern Baptists working in this field of religious liberty, than we can do alone," he said.

News in brief

LONDON (AP) — Leaders of the British Communist Party have lost a two-year struggle to regain control of the party's daily newspaper, the Morning Star.

Shareholders elected only two of five party-nominated candidates to the newspaper's 15-member management committee. Four of the six seats contested Tuesday went to nominees of the newspaper. The result means that editor Tommy Chater and his deputy, David Whitfield, look certain to retain their jobs.

About half the Morning Star's 30,000 daily circulation is flown abroad for sale in Communist countries.

PEKING (AP) — The Chinese army has established a separate strategic missile force and is reforming training procedures to concentrate on mechanized mobile warfare rather than infantry, the official Xinhua news agency says.

Han Huaizhi, assistant army chief of staff, said a separate missile force was the only way the army could win battles in any coming war, Xinhua said Tuesday.

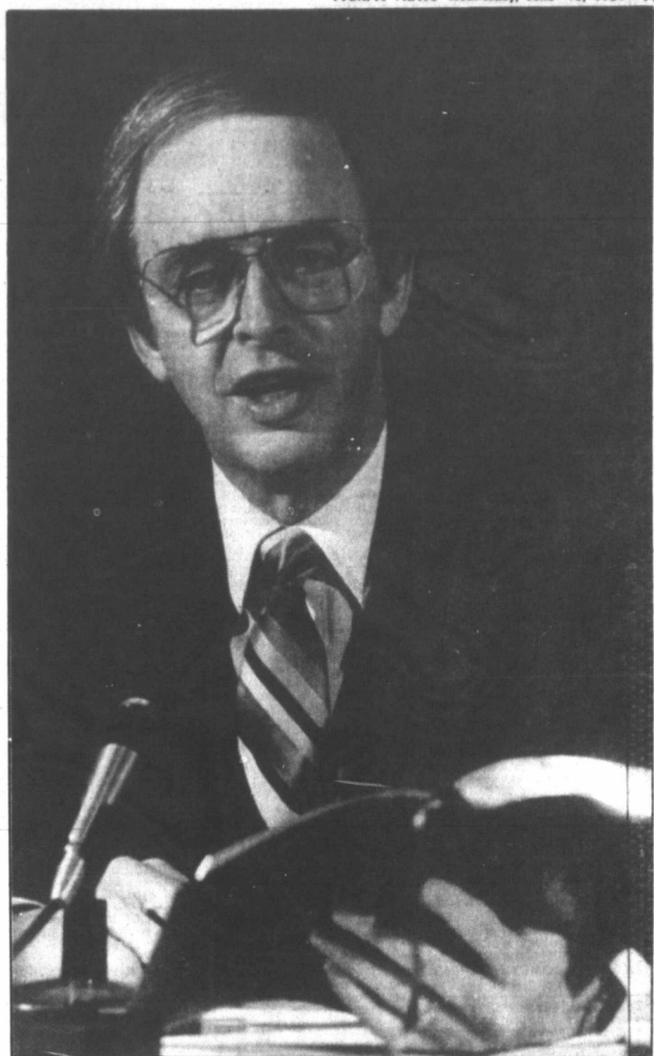

China's strategic missile force previously was controlled by the army's 2nd artillery command, according to a 1983-84 report by the London-based International Institute for Strategic Studies.

Han also said the 4.2-million-member army was changing its training methods to concentrate on officers rather than soldiers, mechanized mobile warfare instead of infantry and combined maneuvers rather than movement by a single force.

China is estimated to have more than 100 medium- and intercontinental-range nuclear missiles.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan heads for Long Island, N.Y., on Sunday to open the 1984 International Games of the Disabled.

Rev. Charles F. Stanley, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Atlanta, quotes from the bible after being elected new president of the Southern Baptist Convention Tuesday.

LONDON (AP) — Steven Spielberg, creator of the movies "E.T.," "Jaws" and "Raiders of the Lost Ark," says he'll make a film of the classic children's story "Peter Pan."

Spielberg, in London for the premiere of his latest film, "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom," said Tuesday that the story of the boy who never grew up would be his next project.

"This is the first real motion picture version of 'Peter Pan,' and I am really excited about it," Spielberg said.

Filming should begin in London next summer, and the movie is scheduled for release in 1986, Spielberg said.

A portion of the film's proceeds will go to London's Great Ormond Street Hospital for Sick Children, which was bequeathed the rights to "Peter Pan" by its author, the late J.M. Barrie.

Thurmond easy victor

By The Associated Press
South Carolina Republicans nominated a "very grateful" Sen. Strom Thurmond for a sixth term in a landslide, while Democrats gave a college professor a second chance at becoming the state's first black congressman this century. In Arkansas, a pugnacious sheriff who has been arrested twice won a Democratic runoff for Congress.

In other elections Tuesday, voters in Rhode Island killed a $250 million reindustrialization program called the Greenhouse Compact, while in Maine they approved by nearly a 3-1 margin a $157 million bond issue for building sewage-treatment plants and cleaning up hazardous waste sites.

Residents of Birmingham, Ala., and surrounding Jefferson County endorsed horse racing for the first time in the state by a 3-2 margin. Mayor Richard Arrington and other backers said it would be a boon to the local economy, but opponents, including Gov. George C. Wallace, warned it would bring crime and moral degradation to the area.

In Providence, R.I., Acting Mayor Joseph R. Paolino won a five-way Democratic primary for mayor, racking up 12,508 votes or 52.1 percent. Former Mayor Vincent Cianci Jr. was forced to resign after drawing a suspended sentence on a felony conviction, but he is one of several independents who will oppose Paolino in a special election July 17.

North Dakota Democrats picked state Rep. George Sinner to challenge Republican Gov. Allen I. Olson in November. With 58 percent of the vote in Sinner had 22,298 votes or 87 percent, to 3,312 or 13 percent for Anne Belle Bourgeois, a supporter of Democratic presidential candidate Lyndon LaRouche.

In a footnote to history, Sen. Gary Hart won North Dakota's first presidential primary in 50 years, which went virtually unnoticed because Walter Mondale claims he has enough delegates to guarantee nomination and the state's delegates had already been allotted at conventions. Hart led with 4,040 votes to 654 for LaRouche, the only other name on the ballot.

In Maine's only congressional contest, state Rep. Barry J. Hobbins defeated former college president Ralph Conant for the 1st District Democratic nomination to challenge GOP freshman Rep. John R. "Jock" McKernan.

Also in Maine, Louis Jalbert, who had served in the state House for 40 years and was the nation's third-longest-serving state lawmaker, lost a Democratic primary by 15 votes, 488-473, to former Lewiston school committee member John A. Aliberti. Jalbert's supporters said they hoped he would seek a recount.

Virginia had two Democratic congressional primaries. State Sen. Richard Saslaw won a three-way race in the 8th District for the Democratic nomination to challenge three-term Republican Rep. Stan Parris. Saslaw soundly defeated Craig Coverdale, a retired Army colonel who is being treated for lung cancer, and Alexandria lawyer and publisher David S. Holland.

In the neighboring 10th District, former federal prosecutor John Flannery of Arlington defeated former congressional aide Harris Miller of McLean for the Democratic nomination to oppose two-term Republican Rep. Frank R. Wolf.

In South Carolina, with 82 percent of precincts reporting, Thurmond, the 71-year-old Senate president pro tem and chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, had 42,476 votes or 94.7 percent. Retired CIA agent Robert Cunningham had 2,406 votes or 5.3 percent.

"I'm very grateful to the people of South Carolina," Thurmond said by telephone from Washington. "They have been very good to me and I've tried to represent them the best I can."

Thurmond, who was first elected to the Senate on a write-in vote as a Democrat in 1954 and switched to the GOP a decade later, spent more than $1 million on the campaign, compared with Cunningham's estimated $15,000.
