Texas oil industry: 'We're already overtaxed'

AUSTIN (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee got a quick answer when they asked the oil and gas industry about the possibility of increasing their taxes

"The oil and gas industry is already overtaxed by both state and local governments." said L.D. Burns, Wichita Falls, representing the North Texas Oil and Gas Association. "To add more taxes now makes no sense

"To raise oil and gas severance taxes now to make up any deficit (in state revenues) is the worst choice you could make." Russell Taylor, president of the West Central Texas Oil and Gas Association.

Testimony began Monday before the committee that will first consider any tax bill introduced in the Legislature. Hearings on other possible taxes, including those used in other states but not levied in Texas, will continue throughout the week, said committee chairman Rep. Stan Schleuter, D-Killeen

Schleuter also invited any lawmakers with ideas of how the current state budget could be cut to appear.

The first action of the committee on the opening day of the special session was to send Gov. Mark White a letter urging him to let lawmaker discuss ways of trimming the current budget that was approved by the 1983 Legislature. A special session can consider only those subjects submitted by the governor. White's call for the session was only for public education and highway improvements. The committee was told Monday that some taxes used in other states, but not in Texas, included levies on lignite and uranium, refinery taxes, and taxes on hazardous wastes.

Billy Hamilton of the state comptrollers office estimated a tax on lignite might produce as much as $70 million. He said a tax on hazardous wastes, which 40 states have, would produce $50 million to $60 million. And a tax on both the input and output of petroleum refineries might produce

Other testimony against increased oil and gas production taxes came from Bill Abbington of the Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association. He stressed the depressed economy in the industry at the present time.

Oil and gas taxes, which pay more state government costs than any other industry, dropped from $2.4 billion in 1982 to $2.2 billion in 1983. In addition, he said, the industry also pays $1.2 billion in local property taxes.

"Texas is the only state to impose a tax on producing oil and also levy a property tax on oil still in the ground," he

"Anything that discourages drilling will affect the state's economy." said William J. Murray J_r , past president of Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association Murray said there are more than 600 idle drilling rigs in Texas now, about half of the operating rigs in 1981.

Schleuter has said the committee will not act on any specific tax legislature until the Legislature passes an education reform bill

Iraq jets bomb Iran celebration

By The Associated Press

Iraqi jets bombarded an Iranian celebration today, killing more than 300 people and wounding hundreds of others, Iran's official agency said.

The Islamic Republic News Agency and Tehran Radio said Iraqi warplanes raided the Kurdistan town of Baneh during a celebration to commemorate a 1963 uprising against the Shah of Iran which led to the exile of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. Khomeini overthrew the shah in 1979 and remains the highest authority in Iran

The radio, monitored in London. indicated a march was taking place in Baneh when Iraq subjected the people "to its American and Soviet bombs and martyred more than 300 of our defenseless Muslim Kurdish brothers and sisters in that town at 10:30 (a m

IRNA said hundreds of people also were wounded in the attack on Baneh. which is about 300 miles west of Tehran and very close to the border of northern

Half of Texas farmers overdue on loans

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Texas farmers and ranchers are overdue on more than half of the outstanding Farmers Home Administration loans. agency officials say

A report Monday by the U.S. Department of Agriculture agency indicated that Texans are delinquent on abouι $690 million owed the FmHA.

That represents a record 54 percent of the existing $1.4 billion in loans from the agency to Texas farmers and ranchers, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram said

The national rate of those 30 days or more behind on their operating. emergency and ownership loan payments is 36 percent However, five states - all in the southeast or west have still higher delinquency rates, a government spokesman said

Many of the farmers are a year or more behind, an FmHA official said Mike Moeller, president of the Texas Farmers Union, predicted. "It's not going to get any better over the next several months FmHA officials have postponed numerous possible foreclosures. "but eventually they will have to enforce their own regs (regulations)." Moeller said, unless Congress loosens eligibility requirements, a possibility he viewed as unlikely in an election year Officials said some farmers have become delinquent because of FmHA delays on processing loans and be€ause of delays created by Congress, the Reagan administration and the courts

Most of our farmers are good managers," said S.M. True Jr. president of the Texas Farm Bureau. who blamed the delinquencies on unprofitable crops and little rain

Many farmers haven't been able to generate enough money to pay the principal on their loans — some not even enough to pay the interest. True

Payments were overdue on 89 percent of the $736.6 million in outstanding emergency loans. Most of the loans were related to weather disasters over several years. FmHA

John Barnes, assistant state director for the federal loan agency, told the Star-Telegram he felt most of the loans from FmHA will be repaid. He. too. attributed the difficulties to the drought, low crop prices, repeated poor crops and high interest rates

Mondale hopes to finally clinch Democratic nod

Associated Press Writer

Democratic presidential rivals are campaigning to the last possible moment in a five-state wrap-up to their grueling primary season, with Walter Mondale straining to grasp the elusive nomination that Gary Hart and Jesse Jackson seek to deny him

Mondale and Hart each predicted victory in California and New Jersey. the biggest of the states holding primaries today with 486 delegates at stake. Jackson had scant hopes of winning any of the five, but pushed hardest in California to increase his delegate strength at the Democratic National Convention in July

"Let's put it away tomorrow," the front-running Mondale exhorted supporters in West Virginia on Monday on a 5.620-mile coast-to-coast campaign odyssey that also included stops in New Jersey, New Mexico and California. Mondale's polls showed him ahead in

survey had him leading there, as well

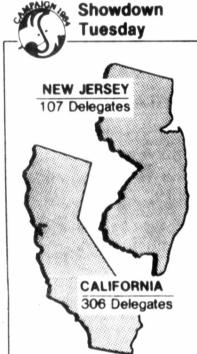

The fifth state. South Dakota, drew scant attention from Hart and none at all from Mondale Hart countered that both big states were going to be replays of the New Hampshire primary that he won We're going to win in New Jersey and we're going to win in California. he said. But he added that no matter what the outcome. "This contest is going to the convention

Hart brushed aside suggestions by some that his continuing candidacy is hurting the Democrats and helping President Reagan

Those are the same experts who said I had no chance to become a serious candidate, that my candidacy was over in March," he retorted.

Hart's campaign manager has said must win either New Jersey or California to keep his longshot hopes alive. Other aides have said privately that he must win both.

Jackson began airing his first television and radio commercials of a low-budget campaign. He viewed them himself in California, and quipped,

'I'm going to vote for the guy. All three men arranged primary day campaign stops today, even as the voters cast their ballots.

Area county clerks await word on recount

Area county clerks are waiting for word from Democratic party officials to recount ballots from Saturday's narrow U.S. Senate runoff between democrats Kent Hance and Lloyd

Meanwhile. Hemphill County Clerk Jerry Vandiver is waiting for an order to recount ballots from Saturday's tax assessor-collector race between incumbent Joann Halliburton and challenger Gladene Woodside

Hance, who lost to Doggett by 467 votes Saturday, called for a recount of ballots in all 254 Texas counties Monday. Final results gave Hance

489.460 votes to Doggett's 489.927

Gray County Clerk Wanda Carter was to meet with county Democratic Party chairman Suzie Wilkinson and a representative of Hance's office today Hance defeated Doggett in Gray County 684 to 239. He garnered similar victories throughout the Panhandle

Wilkerson said that Hance's attorney will file an order with the district clerk and judge to stop the canvass (checking the official number against the votes tallied) of the senate returns

Once you canvass the results you cannot have a recount. "she said Carter, however, explained that the results can be canvassed before a recount order. "but if the recount results are different, the canvass has to be recertified When deputies examined Saturday's Gray County returns, they found one more vote for Hance. Carter said With the close returns statewide anything can change." she said Candidates for the Hemphill County tax assessor position are aware of what close returns can mean Halliburton defeated Woodside by two votes - 324 to 322 - which is less than half of a percentage point Woodside said Monday that she would file for the recount before the end of the day Vandifer said this morning that she has not yet received the recount order, but expects it later today. The challenger has two days to file for the recount

Hemphill County Democratic officials canvassed election results Monday night and found no discrepancies in the results. Vandiver

She added that she doubts that there will be a recount of the county's results in the U.S. Senate race because "Hance won by such a wide margin

Hance defeated Doggett in Hemphill County, 513 to 111

U.S. uses bases in Honduras to watch over Central America

in Honduras

U.S. Military Buildup

HONDURAS

TEGUCIGALPA. Honduras (AP) -During the past year the U.S. armed forces have expanded their presence in this strategically located Central American nation and now have the capability to move swiftly through the region in the event of a military emergency

President Reagan has denied repeatedly that he plans to 'Americanize' the civil war in neighboring El Salvador by sending U.S. troops to fight leftist guerrillas there

But Americans based in Honduras now fly reconnaissance missions over El Salvador and man radar sites that scan Nicaraguan airspace and waters for aircraft and vessels believed to be carrying supplies to the Salvadoran

The Reagan administration has chosen this mountainous, sparsely populated nation, wedged between El Salvador and Marxist-led Nicaragua, to draw the line against the spread of leftist revolution in Central America.

EQUALLY IMPORTANT, its pro-American, civilian-elected government has been acceptable to congressmen who must approve military funding.

Since U.S. forces began a series of military maneuvers here in early 1983. they have built or expanded seven airstrips at key locations around the country that would permit rapid deployment of troops from bases in the United States

They also have operated two radar installations. One of them, at Tiger Island in the Gulf of Fonseca, was used from August 1983 until recently for short-range surveillance of the gulf. which U.S. officials believe is used by Nicaragua to funnel supplies to Salvadoran rebels. Air Force personnel also man a long-range early warning radar system on a mountain southeast of the capitol of Tegucigalpa. Near Puerto Castilla, an isolated port on the Caribbean coast, 150 Green Berets are training Salvadoran and Honduran troops in counterinsurgency tactics

The existence of the airstrips and the maneuvers, involving airborne assaults, "demonstrate that the United States can get here in a short time and project considerable military power." said a U.S. official, who spoke on condition he not be identified IN THE LATEST indication of U.S.

military objectives in the region, the Reagan administration said last month that it is seeking congressional approval to spend $4.4 million to build ammunition and fuel depots at two

A Defense Department report said the depots are needed to supply U.S. warplanes in the event of a military emergency in Central America

Until the report was released, the administration had insisted that the military construction projects in Honduras were designed only for periodic deployment of U.S. forces for training exercises

The report also said the administration plans to keep sending army intelligence flights from a base in Honduras and continue military training exercises through 1988.

The number of American troops in Honduras peaked last November at more than 5,000 during the six-month Big Pine II maneuvers. Those exercises ended in February, but at least 1,700 American troops staved on at Palmerola air base, site of the U.S. task force headquarters 50 miles northwest of the capital

U.S. congressional critics have charged that the exercises are evolving into a permanent presence in this country, the most impoverished in Central America. Since February, a 300-man military intelligence battalion based at Palmerola has been flying reconnaisance missions over El Salvador Planes equipped with infrared sensors and radar are spotting guerrilla troop concentrations and movements at night and providing information immediately to Salvadoran field commanders.

stationed here. He asked not to be identified for security reasons.

THERE ARE CURRENTLY about 3,000 American troops in Honduras. The . first phase began April 1 when about 800 Army engineers from Ft. Lewis, Wash., arrived to build two airfields for C-130 transport planes. About 1,000 arrived in late May to take part in Granadero I combat exercises with 1.800 Honduran and 1.300 Salvadoran troops near the borders of El Salvador and Nicaragua.

The exercises "have two fundamental purposes - to apply psychological pressure on Nicaragua and to reassure our allies in the area." a U.S. official said. "There are training benefits, but that is not the main objective.'

U.S. officials say precautions are being taken to prevent incidents like the Jan. 11 downing of a U.S. Army. helicopter by Nicaraguan soldiers after it strayed into into Nicaraguan airspace. The pilot was killed by gunfire from Nicaraguan troops after he landed the helicopter just inside Honduras.

Col. James Strachan, U.S. military spokesman, said American troops are under "rigidly enforced" rules to stay at least five miles from the borders with El Salvador and Nicaragua. But a U.S. military officer, speaking on condition he not be identified by name, said U.S. pilots have to use extreme caution because of lack of good maps and frequent cloud covers in mountainous regions.

LONDON (AP) - President Reagan, nearing the midpoint of his 10-day European trip, is settling in here for a round of talks with other world leaders. starting today with a Buckingham Palace luncheon with Queen Elizabeth Reagan, who departed Ireland on Monday despite "such a tug" to stay. was following his palace visit with a working dinner at the No. 10 Downing Street residence of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher Reagan and Mrs. Thatcher, who are kindred spirits on economics and a number of other policies, renewed their acquaintance Monday when the president arrived from Dublin.

Mrs. Thatcher greeted the president at the Orangery on the grounds of Kensington Palace where Prince Charles and Princess Diana live. He was the first of six world leaders she will meet this week for the seven-nation economic summit

Discussions between Reagan and

Mrs. Thatcher at her Downing Street residence tonight were likely to focus not only on the upcoming economic talks but on East-West relations and the Persian Gulf crisis Meanwhile, Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens was scheduled to meet today with Secretary of State George P. Shultz. White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the two probably would discuss the U.S. sale of 400 Stinger anti-aircraft missiles to Saudi Arabia, which Israel opposed.

The president and his security entourage caused a flurry in this country where the police force is. largely unarmed

Scotland Yard's Bob Innes, who is in charge of security arrangements for Reagan's visit and the economic summit, said last week that no foreign aide or diplomat would be armed.

Since then, however, the two governments have negotiated the issue. The result is that two of the Secret Service agents guarding the president can be armed but only with "pistol-type handguns, not automatic weapons, according to a Scotland Yard spokesman who would speak only oh condition he not be identified by name.

Teachers love White's message quest for the best roads and brightest minds has been greeted with teacher applause and a legislative mix of caution and support.

White in a Monday speech to the special legislative session focused on highways, public education reform and the inescapable conclusion that it will

White has proposed a tax increase. including an extra penny sales tax, that would raise $4.8 billion over the next three years, and he said Thursday, You can be assured of my strong commitment to avoid additional taxes in the next session.

House Speaker Gib Lewis said, "I think the attitude of most of the members I have talked with is they want meaningful (educational) reform, and if they get that they are ready to bite the bullet and pass a tax bill."

Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen and chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, said, "I was very happy to hear him (White) say he would not ask for a tax bill in 1985, but I need something more definite than that.

"The bottom line is that we have to spend more money this summer, or we will go home empty-handed," said Rep. Bob Bush, D-Paris and chairman of the House Democratic Caucus.

Senate Education Committee, said the Legislature has "an excellent opportunity to come to a decision on a teacher pay increase, which is the No. 1 issue." He said teacher pay is "an absolute emergency."

Texas prison system on forced hiring spree to increase guards

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) -Herman Kelly, personnel director of the state prison system, has a challenge ahead of him.

Kelly, who assumed his post in January, has until Jan. 1 to comply with a mandate from a federal lawsuit requiring him to hire 1,500 new prison guards.

By August of 1985, he must also have hired 653 more psychiatric workers and 166 counselors. Once that is accomplished, he'll have to add another 559 psychiatric workers over the next

The hirings are specified in the lawsuit, which is aimed at bringing about sweeping changes to the Texas Department of Corrections.

Although he's under a court order to hire the additional prison guards, their salaries have yet to be funded.

"We're going to be having a big hiring push," he told The Dallas Morning News "Needless to say, we've got our jobs cut out for us.

Prison officials say the hiring spree will be the most intensive in the system's history. The lawsuit that spawned it two years ago required the system to increase its guard staff to 6.100 strong by January.

William Turner, a San Francisco attorney who represents inmates in the Texas prison reform lawsuit, is unsympathetic Prison officials had more than two years to increase the guard staff "and don't have any excuse" for not meeting the Jan 1 deadline, he told the News.

They should have been planning for this all along." he adds. "They don't seem to do anything until somebody blows the whistle

However, newly appointed prison director Ray Procunier said the old attitudes have vanished. Complying with the court orders "is our No. 1 priority," he told the newspaper.

Kelly said prison officials will begin an advertising blitz in June aimed at attracting candidates for the new openings as prison guards. The guard job, which will be advertised in 100 newspapers across Texas, will pay a beginning monthly salary of $1,043. with an increase to $1,682 a month after 18 months. Kelly said.

Candidates must have a high school diploma or its equivalent and no felony convictions.

Filling the new positions on the psychiatric staff will be harder, says Dr. Armond Start, assistant director for health services.

"If we succeed in filling these jobs. it will be a modern-day miracle," he said "There is a very short supply of psychiatric workers. I suspect we'll probably be able to fill most of the para-professional people. But we'll probably have a terrible time with the psychologists and psychiatrists.

The maximum annual salary and benefits for a psychiatrist is $64,600. which he said is less than a psychiatrist could make in the private sector.

Turner said the "mentality of running a cheap prison" is something that Texas has gotten away with for a long time. "but they can't do it any

Hance asks for ballot recount

AUSTIN (AP) — State Sen. Lloyd Doggett, who won the results reported from Saturday's election showed that Doggett Democratic U.S. Senate runoff by 467 votes, says he doesn't expect the recount requested by Kent Hance to change the outcome but adds he'd do same if he were in Hance's shoes

"If I were in his position, I would do the same." Doggett said Monday, adding that his staff checked with county election increase of 42. officials and found little to indicate the recount would have

'We've yet to see much of anything that will change. The results may go up and down a little, but I don't expect the outcome to be any different." Doggett said

In seeking the recount. Hance noted that the secretary of state's office had verified its results Monday and found discrepancies that narrowed the gap by 42 votes. Doggett on Sunday had been reported ahead by 509 votes.

With that narrow a margin, I owe it to the voters of Texas, my supporters, everyone who worked many long hours and to those who have given money to this effort to call for a statewide recount." Hance said Assistant Secretary of State Ed Davis said verification of candidates a few more votes, with Hance gaining a net Davis emphasized that the verification only confirmed results reported by each county on Saturday. "This does not constitute a recount in any way, form or fashion," he said. Ken Vest, Hance's press secretary, said the recount decision was reached Monday after Hance workers checked the results with election officials in all 254 counties. "Just statistically speaking, with almost a million votes cast and a margin that small, the odds of there being some mistakes are great enough to seriously consider a recount,

State Democratic Party official Camille Burger said Democratic officials in each county would oversee the recount. Representatives of both candidates were expected to observe. She said recounts from the 6,063 precincts should be completed by June 12.

Ms. Burger said Hance deposited nearly $30,000 with the party for the recount. Hance aides said the costs might total $50,000 to $70,000, but Hance said that for his supporters "the only way to remove any doubts is to proceed with a recount.' Hance spent most of Monday meeting with aides and

The close runoff followed a six-way primary on May 5 which Hance won by 273 votes over Doggett cut of nearly 1.5 million cast. Each man spent more than $2 million on his race - $1 million each in the four-week runoff campaign alone.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Must government okay everything?

Has society now reached that point in its development where it expects everything to carry the government seal of Good Housekeeping

A National Research Council panel recently found that only a few of the ingredients in common chemicals have undergone extensive safety testing, while the potential hazards posed by most food. drugs. cosmetics. pesticides and industrial compounds have hardly been tested at all. Its solution? A more vigorous testing of substances many of us have come to use in our everyday lives.

The question is, does society feel the need for government testing because the technology for testing exists-or does it feel the need for testing because of a compelling concern for safety?

John Bailar, a member of the panel and Harvard University bistatistician, sees no cause for alarm. There are quite a few hazards we ought to know about. he told a reporter, but "on the other hand, there's no indication that people are dropping like flies because of

If there isn't an immediate health threat, is the panel seeing goblins where none may exist—or is it expressing a legitimate concern for safety'

The research council panel appears to be more in the business of issuing scare stories than raising legitimate concerns. It identifies most chemicals used in pestidices. cosmetics, drugs and food additives and sets percentages on the number about which test information is available.

It does not, as Bailar admits, restrict itself to those chemcials about which concerns have been raised. It simply takes the attitude that "the sky's the limit" and has at it.

To say that society has existed for thousands of years without testing every substance it uses is to evade the issue. The technology for testing is relatively new Should it not be put to use?

On an emotional level, many may be tempted to say yes. The problem arises when you actually thinK-beyond an emotional level. It then becomes a philosophical problem dealing with how we as individuals want to conduct our lives, and where we, as a society, are headed

Do we wish to become so dependent on the government that every substance we conceivably could use must first pass a national safety standard? Do we wish to give total control of our lives-of our decision-making processes—to somebody else?

We sincerely hope not, but that is the direction unlimited government testing takes us. It's a direction to be feared at least as much at the ill effect of any chemicals with which we may come in contact.

Big business benefits consumer

Americans are understandably nervous about the sight of multi - national corporate giants gobbling each other up in massive mergers involving billions of dollars each. Congress, ever sensitive to public suspicions, from time to time has entertained legislative attempts to stop or limit such megala - merger - mania. Fortunately, all these attempts have been aborted by economic reality. We may not like corporate bigness, but we usually like

Americans may rail about corporate giantism, but they love to buy General Motors and Toyota cars and IBM personal computers. And they like to shop at Sears and Safeway

Deep down, polls show that most consumers believe that the reason most companies grow large is that they are more efficient and deliver better products at more competitive prices.

Now, a careful new study by Dr. Steven Lustgarten of the City University of New York for the American Enterprise Institute shows that consumer perception is quite accurate.

Lustgarten used information from the Census Bureau and the Federal Reserve to find answers to two questions: "First, are the prevailing levels of industry concentration (bigness) explained by efficiency, or could firms be smaller than they are now with no loss of efficiency?

Second, are any of the gains from growth in productivity that are attributable to high concentration (bigness) passed on to the consumers through reduced selling prices?" Put simply: Is bigness mainly a function of growing efficiency and productivity - and if it is, do consumers benefit? Dr. Lustgarten found the answer to both questions a clear and unambiguous, YES.

Lustgarten found: "Industries with rising concentration ratios (more bigness) generally showed greater increases in producing than those with declining (bigness) ratios.

'Also, their price increases were roughly equal to or smaller than those in industries with declining concentration ratios.

Furthermore, Lustgarten found: "The highest rate of growth in productivity occurred in those industries in which the increase in concentration (bigness) was greatest. (Those industries) also had the lowest rate of price increases...

The "bottom line" which Lustgarten found: "Prices were substantially lower to consumers of the superior productivity that accompanied increasing concentration. Consumers benefited when concentration (bigness) rose, and the rise was accompanied by greater - than - average increases in productivity.

There is, of course, a perfectly good reason for this. Companies which are more efficient, and produce better products at lower costs and prices, will always increase their market share and grow large, while companies that fail to "deliver" in this way tend to grow smaller. Thus, by definition, in most marketplaces, "bigness" is synonymous with efficiency Lustgarten's study will not please many of the more far - Left "consumerists," who tend to subscribe to the "monopoly theory of concentration.

As Lustgarten describes it, "According to that theory, in any industry where sellers are few, the sellers will recognize, their interdependence and collude - either tacitly or overtly - to restrict output so as to achieve a monopoly price.

Consumerists, such as Ralph Nader, argue that "existing levels of concentration (bigness) are the result of mergers that were aimed at the achievement of monopoly power, predatory pricing policies that drove out competitive firms and excessive advertising which blocked other firms from entering the industry.

But, the actual statistical history outlined by Lustgarten refutes the monopoly theory.

TOO STRONG

and supports the efficiency theory. If the monopoly theory were correct, when sellers concentration increased, productivity would NOT increase, but prices would; but this study demonstrates that industries with rising concentration (bigness) are marked by greater productivity and lower prices.

The industries where concentration was growing fastest had 35 - percent faster rates of productivity growth, and 8 - percent lower rates of price inflation. At the same time, this advantage of concentration is greatest in those industries where overall advantage of concentration is the fastest. Among high growth industries, those with the highest levels of "bigness" had an almost 60 percent faster productivity growth, and almost 30 percent lower price inflation.

What this data clearly demonstrates is that Congress should go very slow in tampering with the whole merger process. As Lustgarten noted, since price increases are smaller where concentration has increased, public policy that attempts to constrain the growth of large firms, or force divestiture, will very likely prove harmful to

Too bad the anti - trust "consumerist" zealots, who forced the costly breakup of Ma Bell, didn't understand this much sooner.

Presidents change directions

Everyone should retire as Dr. Joseph Wood Krutch retired - just far enough from the classroom - to a secluded house in suburban Tucson. Arizona - where he could view the world from a wide - angle - and write more profoundly than ever.

Or as The Wall Street Journal's editor. Vermont Royster, did. He, too, has been able to back off from the day - to - day and interpret contemporary events from historical perspective.

For example, he remembers that FDR and Ronald Reagan saw eye - to - eye on most things - at first. President Franklin Roosevelt protested "government is too expensive, too big, too much bureaucracy. He would reduce it, "cut the budget, encourage private business to attack unemployment" - and those who helped by hiring a few more people could fly the Blue Eagle of the NRA

Before the end of his first term, Roosevelt was off in a different direction, vastly expanding the role of the federal government, expanding the bureaucracy. increasing the deficits.

FDR professed neutrality in W.W. II - at its beginning

But gradually he involved us.

However.

Other presidents have similarly practiced something other than what they preached President Harry Truman said that Korea was outside our area of interest - later controls, then against them. Eisenhower was a budget cutter who subsequently ballooned the budget.

It was President Richard Nixon, arch - foe of communism, who first opened the door to Communist China. Of course it can be argued that leaders must remain sufficiently flexible to respond to changing circumstances - but policy reversal arms one's political enemies. President Reagan promised our Marines would remain in Lebanon to stay. Now they are gone.

He about - faced on China

If his political opponents are not using this inconsistency against him it is because, by every measure available, his public support was enhanced rather than diminished by these policy reversals. Mr. Royster expects President Reagan - though pledged to veto any tax increase will soon be signing one. It will be disguised as "tax reform," something favored by almost everybody. But it will raise taxes. Any ten - dollar calculater can compute that if the total budget for all government welfare agencies were divided among poor people, there would be no more poor people. Each would receive $70,000 a year! Maybe a second - term president could do something about that, too. (c) 1984, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Seeing the country at one mph

I met A. Bergman completely by chance. I was driving along in one of Atlanta's spiffiest neighborhoods when I approached an intersection and noticed a police car pulled off to the side of the street, its blue lights flashing. The policeman was out of his car. He was talking to a camp in a wooded area just off the street. I am a sucker for old, bearded men. I stopped and got out of my car. I figured the policeman was running him in for vagrancy. "I stopped to investigate a wreck and saw him," the policeman said. "I told him some of the ladies in this neighborhood might complain about him and he'd be better off going down the street to the Bitsy Grant tennis courts, but I'm not going to try to run him out now. He's already got his camp

I walked over to the man and introduced myself. His beard was long and full and white. He was sitting next to what appeared to be a non - mechanized cart or wagon.

His dog - a German shepherd named Jamie - was tied to a tree and was finishing her supper.

Al Bergman told me his name and said he was 69 and that he had retired from the real estate business in Nashville and what he was doing was walking around the U.S., pulling his wagon

"Been thinking about doing something like this for a long time," he said.

Got family? 'Wife and nine grandchildren."

And what does the wife think of this odyssey? 'Let's just say it wasn't a joint decision," he answered.

You don't see many people like Al Bergman anymore. Who bearded man of advanced years who appeared to have made a is going to risk camping out around our country with so many nuts running loose and so many Holiday Inns from which to Bergman told me all about himself. He said he didn't smoke and he jogged and that is how he was able to pull his cart without getting tired.

"I make 15 miles a day on flat land and about 10 when it's hilly," he said. He said he had parachuted into Greece with the OSS during

W.W. II and that he had been a roadbuster in South America and later in Vietnam I asked if he was afraid to be camping out alone

"Jamie's a trained attack dog," he said. "And they taught us how to handle situations in the OSS. I still know how to put a piece of wire around a man's neck.

Don't mess with Al Bergman, in other words. 'Tell you the truth, though," he went on, "I haven't had one minute's trouble. There are an awful many good people left in this country. They've offered me money and food for me and my dog, and some of 'em want me to spend the night in their houses. I don't want to take a thing, though. I want to do this all by myself." Al said he was going south and when he got to the Florida

Keys, he would head back up the west coast of Florida continue along the Gulf and on to California

"Got to see this country one more time before I'm gone," he said, "And I want to see it the right way - from the ground at one mile an hour.

I asked Al if he was going to heed the policeman's advice and move on down the road to the tennis courts. 'No," he said, "I could make it, but I think my dog's too

"Natural shrimp catches are now at the saturation point," he said. "The sea can provide no more than current

McGowan predicted the shrimp farm will produce 15,000 pounds of shrimp per acre each year. McGowan said groundbreaking for the complex is scheduled for June 18. The farm will include a solar-powered hatchery and concrete-lined growth ponds

McGowan said Texas United Fisheries' parent firm, Jarenco Investments of Texas Inc., has noted a growing gap between the domestic supply and demand for shrimp.

The total market for the United States is estimated at $1.7 billion, with $1.2 billion of that collected by foreign suppliers, McGowan said.

The Port Mansfield project will be patterned after similar operations in Taiwan and a research pond at Houston Lighting & Power Co.'s Cedar Bayou power plant east of Houston.

McGowan said the Port Mansfield farm will be the latest in an increasing active

Suspect details 14 bank robberies

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - One of the members of a modern-day Bonnie and Clyde bank-robbing duo has outlined a string of 14 bank robberies that he and his wife are accused of committing in North Texas.

Lawrence Edward Byrom, 55, detailed robberies that spanned the last 13 years in a statement to authorities, the Dallas Times Herald reported today.

Byrom's statement, released Monday during proceedings in a federal court, said he and his wife were planning a 15th holdup when they were arrested May 25 at their home in the Fort Worth suburb of Haltom City, the newspaper said. We were hurting for money so we have been looking for a bank to rob for two weeks," the paper quoted Byrom as telling authorities shortly after the arrest. Byrom and his wife, Alice Elizabeth Marie Byrom, 35, are being held in Tarrant County jail awaiting the presentation of their case to a federal grand jury

The FBI says the couple's arrest ended a search of several years for a hold-up team that preyed on small town banks and fled with a total of $572,592.

Law enforcement officers had labeled the robbers "Bonnie and Clyde" over the years because of their penchant for hitting small towns. Unlike the infamous Bonnie Parker and Clyde Barrow, however, the modern version had never fired their guns during a robbery. When we decided to start robbing banks, we used gloves, ski masks and heavy clothing to disguise us as best we could and confuse people about our size and weight." Byrom was quoted as saying in a transcribed statement introduced during a preliminary hearing Monday before U.S. Magistrate Alex McGlinchey.

After the hearing, the judge ruled there was probable cause to keep the Byroms in custody. Bond has been set at $250,000 for Byrom and $50,000 for his wife. In his statement, Byrom confirmed what FBI agents suspected in court affidavits they filed to obtain search warrants — that the couple was plotting another bank heist.

Rainfall was slight too in the Panhandle, and what little did fall quickly evaporated in the fierce afternoon sunshine, the weather service said.

Monday's storm spawned

Midland police dispatcher Sandra Serrano said some intersections had up to six feet of standing water. But she added that most people were delighted with the rain.

Despite minor drainage problems in Odessa, area farmers too welcomed the drenching. David Davis, area supervisor with the Texas Department of Agriculture. said "things are looking up" for West Texas farmers.

Davis said Big Spring-area farmers should be able to begin planting cotton after receiving more than an inch of rain

Midland Airport Assistant Director Tommy Jones said water backed up in a drainage ditches at the airport and flooded the airport parking apron

Today should be partly cloudy with a chance of showers and thunderstorms in parts of East and South

Byrom said he'd been surveying the Bryson State Bank-in the small town of Bryson, trying to determine its vulnerabilities

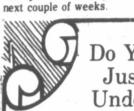

"I wanted to rob the bank in Bryson, but we were scared of it because we heard the sheriff's office in Jacksboro talking over the radio about an alarm at the bank." Byrom said.

On the day of the arrest, Byrom said in the statement, he and his wife "were back around Bryson to look it over again, and there were too many cars where there shouldn't have been. Also, we saw the planes circling over us while we were sitting in the brush listening to the scanner radio.

At the moment when authorities stormed his residence on May 25, he added, "we were just talking about leaving town because my wife and I knew someone was on to us.

Byrom detailed the robberies in sessions with Department of Public Safety, FBI and Texas Ranger investigators. His attorney, William Callaway, said he plans to file a motion seeking to suppress the statement as evidence.

Assistant U.S. Attorney R.H. Wallace said the case against the Byroms will be presented to a federal grand jury in the

At issue is a 116-ton locomotive and tender built in 1913 and now sitting ir Bryan Park at the corner of west Gulfway Drive and Augusta Avenue

Only 12 of these coal-fired beauties were made, and the one in Port Arthur is believed to be the last surviving member of the 500 Kansas City Southern series.

The grand old workhorse has been in the park for 27 years, but a relentless onslaught by vandals and the humid Gulf Coast air are slowly turning it into a very large pile of rust.

Director of Parks and Recreation George "Scooter" Auld said his department can't afford to clean up the old engine or maintain it in the future

Four years ago, he received an estimate of $10,000 just to partially restore the locomotive. He has no idea what that cost would be today, and that doesn't even include future maintenance. Auld realizes that many

The woman was fired from her job May 10 after she told another aide that she had been having sex with the student, the newspaper said.

The other aide relayed the story to the school's principal, who fired the woman. Both the principal and the other aide then gave statements to police. the American-Statesman said

Officials were told that the student's parents gave permission for the woman to move in with their son.

"It's a real weird case. said Presiding Municipal Judge J. David Phillips, who the newspaper said set bond at $5,000. "I don't ever recall another one like it

According to court records. the woman asked school officials in late April if she could take the student with her to Virginia to get her car. but that the school's principal told her it would be "very unprofessional and she should not do it

One local scrap dealer said scrap dealer wouldn't buy the engine through a museum, or that the purchaser might junk it in the future These current problems may seem difficult to comprehend for the many Port Arthurans who remember when the locomotive was brought to the park in 1957.

The Kansas City Southern and Louisiana-Arkansas Railroad Co. laid a special section of track along Gulfway Drive from the tracks between Austin and Fort Worth avenues for the big move.

The locomotive was 'backed' eastward into the park in a project sponsored by the Lion's Club. Crews picked up a section of temporary track as the engine went over it. laid it ahead of the locomotive's path and then continuously repeated the procedure until it was in the park

A chain-link fence topped by barbed wire has been erected around the engine to make it harder for vandals to do their dirty work, but it hasn't helped much.

The barbed wire has been pulled down on the back side. and the whole enclosure looks like a small concentration camp rather than a showcase for a proud memento than to travel in Europe, not just viewing towers, domes, buildings, statues and paintings, but also getting involved in many different cultures, For instance, in France one learns that slow service is not a reason for complaining but an opportunity to talk with others, to observe and to experience a country where it is a social responsibility to talk.

Then in Italy discovery is made that the price of what one eats or drinks varies dependent upon one's choice to either stand at a counter or to sit at a table. Once could pay twice as much for the same meal if a choice is made to sit at a table. And, while not common in America, it is perfectly acceptable to join strangers at a table in a restaurant in Austria or

Dear Abby Landscaper's wife wonders if he should trim his talk

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a landscaper, and right now he's working on a job that has a lot of apartments. I always ask him what his day was like, and he always has some interesting stories to tell me. For the last two weeks he's been talking about this nice-looking redhaired lady who tells him what a great tree trimmer he is. Yesterday he told me that she came out with her flatiron in one hand, a roll of electrical tape in the other and helplessly asked, "Is this what you call electrical tape?" Of course he fixed her iron during his break, and she gave him a cold beer for his

He said the men at work asked him if he had something going with the redhead. (Then he laughed.) He failed to tell me whether he fixed her iron inside her apartment or out.

Maybe I'm too touchy, but I don't feel comfortable when my husband's co-workers ask him if he has something going. Should I worry?
STAY-AT-HOME WIFE

DEAR WIFE: No. Your husband sounds like an accommodating fellow who makes friends easily. Don't worry. It's the husband who comes home with no stories to tell, never meets anybody and nothing ever happens to that I'd worry about.

DEAR ABBY: I have a serious problem. I am a 20-year-old woman who is in love with two men-a father and his son. I met them both at the same time and was immediately attracted to the father. He is 40. He was attracted to me, too, and we had sex together the very first night I met him. He told me he was living with a lady, so if we were to be lovers he would have to be very careful. We would arrange to meet for a few hours at his son's apartment. The son is 21 and goes to

Well, one afternoon while waiting for the father (who never did show up). I became involved (sex) with the son, who had more to offer (sexwise) than his father, so that's how became confused between the two of

The son says he loves me, and so does the father. I love them both.

What should I do? CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: The "confusion" you feel is a valuable warning signal. You need counseling to learn the difference between sex and love. It appears that not only are you using the father and son, they are also using you. Forget them both. They are double trouble.

DEAR ABBY: To the flight attendant who is beside herself over mothers who breast-feed their babies in flight: In the first place, the sucking and swallowing equalizes the pressure during take-off and landing, preventing the excruciating pain babies sometimes experience in flight. (When they scream, that's the reason.)

Also, to suggest that a mother take her baby into the lavatory to nurse while other passengers wait in line to use the facilities is outrageous.

Abby, that flight attendant has a hang-up. She should hang up her

New deck provides relaxation

After a busy day at the job or when the work around the house and yard is finished, it's wonderful to have a comfortable place with table and chairs or benches to sit down, unwind and just relax. It's a reward that busy people owe themselves.

Add a new deck for an outdoor living room offers a related bonus, because quite likely the deck will replace some of the lawn that has to be mowed and will cut down on yard maintenance time.

A deck can be added off almost any room of the house. wherever it will be most convenient and useful, or it can be freestanding in the yard to take full advantage of a view or shade trees.

The deck added by one family in the yard of their rural home also helps break the grade in the landscaping of the sloping lot. The deck is down three steps alongside a walkway from the rear of the house, and the walk then descends a flight of steps to the swimming pool.

The deck, built of fir 2x4s laid flat, sets above and far enough back from the pool to avoid splashes, yet the two combine for an attractive entertaining area.

A three - foot high open railing of 2x3 inch Douglas fir surrounds the deck, except on the side where the wide steps lead down to it. A 2x8 inch flat cap on the railing makes a good counter for glasses, books or other items.

Three sections of the railing have built - on benches, with seats made up of 2x4s. One of the benches is wide enough for a chaise lounge cushion. for sunbathing or just stretching out on after working or swimming.

The decking of 2x4 fir is continued in the bench seats.

Longhorns remain unbeaten in series

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) - 14 straight NCAA Dennis Cook hit with his ears much to the dismay of Cal State-Fullerton.

Texas' junior right fielder. who was hitless in his first six College World Series at bats, belted a two-out, two-run double in the bottom of the eighth inning Monday to break a 4-4 tie and help the Longhorns beat Titans 6-4.

Cal States Coach Augie Garrido provided an unintentional tip to help Cook end his slump. "I was looking for something in," Cook said. "I heard their coach say 'Keep it in.' The biggest hit of my life? It sure was.

The blow, against Cal State standout Todd Simmons, 14-3. also was one of the biggest hits of the Longhorns' season. Texas, 59-12, which has won Tournament games, remains in the winners bracket of the double-elimination tourney. But Coach Cliff Gustafson was not ready to predict a second straight World Series title for his team.

"It's too early to plan on carrying the trophy away."

The Longhorns looked like national champs in the opening inning when their first three batters scored. But Simmons then settled down. and he didn't allow another run until Darren Loy's two-out double in the sixth tied the game.

'Simmons is a great pitcher." Cook said. "He has an awesome slider. He was really tough on our

Survivors tell harrowing tale of ship's sinking

HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP) - His first time as a crewman at sea. Bill Barnhardt had just come on deck for the 4 a.m.-to 8 a.m. watch aboard the three-masted Marques when suddenly the rain stopped and the sky cleared

For about three minutes, Barnhardt, a 24-year-old sailing trainee, watched the stars emerge. The Marques, a 117-foot British square-rigger, was sailing comfortably in 28 mph winds along the course of an 800-mile Bermuda-to-Nova Scotia race for tall ships.

Then, from nowhere, a freak gust of wind slammed the ship onto its side, and cascading water drove the vessel beneath the waves within 45 seconds.

Of the 28 crew and passengers, nine people were rescued and one body was recovered within four hours of the sinking early Sunday. The survivors who were brought back to Bermuda said they doubted any of 18 others would be found alive

"The squall that hit us totally unexpectedly was incredible in its velocity." Philip Sefton.

20. a professional sailor from Britain, said Monday at a news conference by some survivors of the ship's sinking.

Criss-crossing some 360 square miles of the Atlantic, about 18 ships, helicopters and planes searched today for the missing people. said U.S. Coast Guard Petty Officer Jerry Snyder. The search began early Sunday and will continue "at least through midday when they'll make a decision whether to carry on,' Snyder said today

The Marques went down about 80 miles northeast of Bermuda. The site is just outside the top of the mysterious Bermuda Triangle. the area which has claimed dozens of ships and hundreds of lives in the past 40 years.

At the news conference, held at a British naval station on the west end of Bermuda, Sefton said he was at the helm when someone shouted, "All hands on deck!" Muscled like a weightlifter and more than six feet tall, he tried to spin the wheel to keep the ship upright but couldn't hold it. Water poured beneath the water. "From the moment the squall started to blow to the moment the ship was on its side was 10 seconds," he told reporters. Sailors at

years ago, was gone, with only scattered debris left behind.

There had been no time for a Mayday, no time to warn those sleeping below. Were they still with the ship, now on the ocean floor? "Undoubtedly." Sefton said grimly but without hesitation.

At the news conference, Barnhardt, McMillan and Sefton wore clothes borrowed from sailors on the Polish sailing ship which picked them up. That ship, the Zawisza Czarny, was one of 42 which started the race Saturday. The race, scheduled to end around June 10, was one of a series sponsored by the International Sail Training Association to team novices with professional crews on classic sailing vessels of his canine colleagues. Lucky is not fond of felines, his owner says. Now complaints from neighbors that the 90-pound mutt has killed more than 50 cats have landed Lucky on doggy death row Lucky's owner, said Monday after the death sentence was imposed by Cabell County Eircuit Judge L.D. Egnor "He doesn't bother people. He just doesn't like cats. And he kills them."

Lucky, doing time in a dog pound in Kentucky, will get to appeal his case Friday.

The half German shepherd and half husky has a record as long as his tail with the Huntington-Cabell-Wayne Animal Control Shelter, including a petition against him signed by 27 neighbors, said shelter director Pat Thomas

The events leading to the sentence began in a lower court when a neighbor filed suit against the dog's owners. Ms. Morrow and her sister. But Magistrate John Ray Rice removed himself from the case because he said he knew too much about it from previous

Ms. Thomas then suggested that the neighbors go to Egnor with their thick file of complaints against the dog and photos of

Before issuing judgment, Egnor heard evidence from six people who said Lucky had been hunting and killing neighborhood cats

The dog has caused enormous grief in the neighborhood," Dan Flannery testified. "It has killed, we figure, over 50 cats.

But Ms. Morrow says the extent of Lucky's crimes may be exaggerated.

"Not unless somebody's got an awful lot of cats around here," she said. "I've never seen that many cats around here. There are other dogs in the neighborhood killing cats. Not just the opposite direction. Egnor ordered Lucky destroyed based on a section of the state code dealing with vicious dogs. He set a hearing for Friday for an appeal by the dog's owners.

Following the hearing Monday. Ms Morrow said she had turned Lucky over to the Ashland, Ky., dog pound, but warned that the "streetwise" pooch would find a way to escape and return home.
