

Demo charges don't stick on 'teflon president'

WASHINGTON (AP) - Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., calls it "the Teflon-coated presidency" because, try as they might, the Democrats don't seem to be able to make their charges against Ronald Reagan stick.

Richard Drayne, a longtime aide to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, says Reagan "carries no baggage. He's not troubled by the movie he made last year. It's only the script he's got in his hand

The strategists and publicists for this year's crop of Democratic challengers agree that Reagan is widely regarded as a "nice guy" who will be hard to beat.

They also agree that to have a chance they have to make Reagan appear vulnerable on two broad fronts — that he has treated the American people unfairly and jeopardized world peace - and to exploit that by cementing the Democratic coalition that Reagan and the Republicans shattered three

But all agreed his personal popularity makes him a

"He would obviously be formidable," said Greg Schneiders, spokesman for Sen John Glenn. "But he has vulnerabilities. ... Defeating him is a doable task."

David Landau, who develops issues for Sen. Gary Hart, said: "You can't rely on Ronald Reagan to make mistakes. You make your argument on ideology. Ronald Reagan is the candidate and the captive of corporate special interests whose vision of the country is literally to enrich the rich.'

All agreed they could not use the president's age against him, although Reagan already is the oldest man ever to serve in the office and would be 77 at the end of a second

Nor was there a sense that they could make much use of the president's tendency to stumble over some facts, or his inclination to leave details to others.

The economy, which has been the central issue of Reagan's first term, is a tough one for the Democrats because the recovery has dampened the bitterness of last year's unemployment statistics and the long recession. But former Vice President Walter F. Mondale's acting campaign manager, Jim Johnson, is among those who do not concede that issue to the incumbent. "I think people care about $200 billion deficits," he said. "It's increasingly clear now that the president has decided he doesn't care. And as a result of the deficits, we have the highest real interest rates in American history. Johnson also points to trade problems and pockets of persistent unemployment.

"There's a very wide perception in the country that Reagan's economic policies are the most unfair in American history," added Johnson.

Schneiders said he doesn't expect the economy to be a major problem for Reagan, although, "It's not inconceivable by any means that we could have an economic setback.

"We have never had any experience, historically, with deficits of this size or real interest rates of this magnitude over a long period of time," Glenn's spokesman said. "And the economists, if they haven't proven anything else, have proven that they aren't very good at projecting.

Hart's man, Landau, predicted the recovery would not

"It's not long-term economic growth and renewal, and nobody's going to buy it," he said. "It's a false recovery. As Gary likes to say, Reagan is mortgaging the future of the country to have an election-year recovery.

Addressing the foreign policy issue, Mondale's spokeswoman, Maxine Isaacs, said simply, "Reagan has made the world a more dangerous place.' Landau echoed that view. "People think we're closer to war than we were four years ago," he said.

But Schneiders, who served former President Carter, cautioned that it's too early to assess the impact of Reagan's

Hotel's guests rescued from suspicious fire

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A suspected arson fire broke out in a 14-story hotel early Saturday, injuring at least 34 people and forcing guests onto balconies where some were rescued by ladder, officials said.

About 250 people were evacuated from the Howard Johnson's Hotel after the fire broke out on 250-room building's seventh floor at 1:51 a.m. and began spreading upward, officials said.

People were on the balconies, of course, and tying sheets together to come down the sheets," said Orlando Fire Capt. Bill Smith. "We had to convince them not to do that.'

Fire department spokeswoman Leslie Brewington said 34 people, including four firefighters, were treated at the scene for burns and smoke inhalation. Officials at four local hospitals said they admitted 10 people and treated and released 22 others.

"Suspicious persons" were seen leaving the hotel, but no arrests had been made, Smith said. "Our investigators ... termed this an arson case," he said, adding that the fire electrical wiring through the building. The blaze was controlled about an hour later

Guests, most awakened by a hotel intercom, fled to balconies to escape smoke that spread as high as the 11th floor, said Ms. Brewingon.

Ten people were plucked from seventh-floor balconies with a ladder truck but those on higher floors were beyond the reach of rescue equipment, Ms. Brewington said. They waited until firefighters ventilated halls and arrived with paramedics carrying oxygen equipment to escort them to safety, she

"It was terrifying," said 32-year-old Diane Mangum of Salt Lake City, who was staying with her husband, Karl, in a 10th-floor room. They made their way through smoke-filled halls to a ninth-floor balcony and awaited help with 24 other guests.

Among those hospitalized were Ampro Morales, 32, of Houston, and her 6-year-old son, Paul. They were listed in serious condition at Orlando Regional Medical Center with secondand third-degree burns.

Harley Moore, 64, of Augusta, Ga., also was in serious condition after suffering smoke inhalation and requiring resuscitation, said a hospital spokeswoman who asked not to be

First of 10 flights

Biggest year in space begins

astronauts and the space shuttle Challenger are to launch from Cape Canaveral on Friday to kick off the most ambitious year in NASA's history - with a total of 52 men and women scheduled to make 10 flights.

This week's mission will feature the first untethered space walks, with two astronauts testing jet-powered backpacks to roam up to 300 feet away from the orbiting shuttle.

The flight starts at 8 a.m. EST Friday, and much of what the crew does, including the backpack tests, is rehearsal for the next flight in April when another crew will attempt to retrieve and repair the defective Solar Max satellite orbiting balloon to test maneuvers needed to track down Solar Max and will practice the necessary repairs. They plan to end the flight Feb. 11 with the first landing on a 15,000-foot runway near the launch pad at Kennedy Space

"This flight will be a bridge to the next one," said commander Vance D. Brand, veteran of two earlier space

Other crew members are Navy Lt. Cmdr. Robert L. Gibson, the pilot; and three mission specialists, Navy Capt. Bruce McCandless; Army Lt. Col. Robert Stewart; and Ronald E. McNair, a physicist who will be the spaceship.

After the April flight, the NASA launch rate accelerates to one a month. The most manned flights ever launched by NASA in a single year was five. during the Gemini program in both 1965

The 1984 missions will include deployment of a dozen commercial satellites, the second Spacelab science flight and the first all-military mission in June with a secret payload. A third shuttle, Discovery, will debut in June, joining Columbia and Challenger in the Six women and three blacks have been assigned missions during the year. An August flight will have two women in the five-person crew - Sally Ride and Kathryn Sullivan, the first female astronaut ticketed to make a space walk

Brand said the major goal of the upcoming flight - the 10th for the shuttle - is to deploy two commercial communications satellites for paying customers, Western Union and the Indonesian government.

These are to be dispatched on the first and second days of the mission. Then the cfew will concentrate on the tools and techniques for the April Solar Max mission. Solar Max is the $100 million Solar Maximum Satellite, which has been ailing in orbit since an electronic box fuse failed shortly after it was launched four years ago

More county candidates file

Gray County has a candidate for every position except one in the May primary elections following filings last week.

Longtime Sheriff R.H. "Rufe" Jordan and three other incumbents, County Attorney Robert McPherson, Precinct 1 Commissioner O.L. Presley and Precinct 4 Constable Jim McDonald are the latest to file their candidacies in the Democratic primary.

The only position up for election that had no candidate late Friday was constable of Precinct 3. which is a non-salaried position. The incumbent is Robert Payne.

Only one contested race has developed in the county election. Darrell L. Keckler has filed for constable of Precinct 1, Lefors. He will run against incumbent Jerry Dean Williams.

County candidates have until Feb. 6 to file. No Republican candidates had emerged at the end of the week.

Other incumbents who had previously announced they would seek re-election include District Attorney Guy Hardin, Tax Assessor-collector Margie Gray, Precinct 3 Commissioner James O. (Jimmy) McCracken and Precinct 2 Constable Herman

In addition, Roger C. Scott has filed for an unexpired term as Justice of the Peach, Precinct 2.

Jordan has been sheriff of Gray County since 1950. The last year he had an opponent was 1964.

Singer suffers burns on scalp

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Singer Michael Jackson checked out of a hospital Saturday after being treated for severe scalp burns he suffered when his hair was ignited by special effects while he filmed a TV commercial

More than 200 calls a minute had streamed into the switchboard at Brotman Memorial Hospital and avid fans had poured into the medical facility in attempts to see him.

Dr. Steven Hoefflin said Jackson left the hospital in a wheelchair at

'Devil winds' finally die down LOS ANGELES (AP) — Firefighters

doused hot spots Saturday from brush fires that charged across hundreds of acres of Southern California whipped by gale-force Santa Ana winds, damaging or destroying a dozen homes.

Three people died because of the winds, which gusted up to 100 mph. More than 8,000 of the 1 million customers who lost electricity in Southern California because of the winds remained without power Saturday, and the damage figure from one fire alone topped $1 million.

The high winds subsided Friday after a two-day siege, and a 550-acre fire in the La Canada-Flintridge area, 15 miles north of Los Angeles, was contained Friday night and expected to be controlled by Sunday, said U.S. Forest Service information officer Robert Brady.

The fire, whose cause was under investigation, destroyed three homes and damaged four others. Damage was estimated at more than $1.25 million.

"We are mopping up hot spots, starting from the houses into the interior of the fire," Brady said.

The Forest Service reopened the Angeles Crest Highway on Saturday. It was closed Thursday afternoon when the Santa Ana - hot, dry "devil winds" from the mountain passes - blew into

"The winds are being good to us. The only danger now would be if the winds came back in force," Brady said. National Weather Service forecaster Stan Massey said none were expected.

In Modjeska Canyon, about 50 miles southeast of Los Angeles, firefighters Saturday controlled a brush fire that scorched 1.200 acres and was apparently caused by a controlled burn that got out of hand.

More than 1 million area customers lost power Thursday and Friday when trees and branches cut power lines. Southern California Edison Co. spokesman Bob Hull said 8.675 customers still were without electricity Saturda y

The Los Angeles Fire Department received a record 2,394 fire calls for the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. Friday.

In Rancho Cucamonga, about 35 miles east of Los Angeles, an electrical fire ripped through Michael Hawkins' home, destroyed a neighbor's house and damaged another.

"I'm so broken-hearted," Hawkins said Friday. "I just don't believe it happened." He suffered first-degree burns on his arms and face and lost his three dogs and six cats to the fire. "Everything I have was in there. I don't have anything anymore," he said.

Another Rancho Cucamonga fire destroyed two mobile homes, a car, a motorcycle and outbuildings at the Pines Mobile Home Park.

In Hemet in Riverside County, gusts toppled two house trailers and several occupants were hurt.

The high winds were blamed for three deaths. An employee for a concessionaire in Yosemite National Park was killed when a tree crashed onto his tent. The driver of a van blown over the side of a cliff in La Canada died from his injuries, and a third man died in Canoga Park when he picked up a downed power line.

Reagan expected to announce candidacy in TV speech tonight

Reagan will disclose his re-election plans Sunday night in a $400,000 televised speech and the senior aide with the closest personal ties to the president said "I'm sure he's going to announce" his candidacy for a second

The statement by Michael K. Deaver. deputy chief of the White House staff, came as close as any to a declaration that Reagan will run.

The 72-year-old president has been coy himself, telling people to tune in at 10:55 p.m. EST to find out.

But the establishment of an extensive re-election apparatus, the mood of his aides, and the announcement's timing - too late in the political cycle to give fellow Republicans a chance to organize a thorough campaign for themselves - leaves almost no

"He feels a great sense of duty and he knows the job isn't finished," said Deaver. "In his own frame of mind, it would be very hard to go back (to his California ranch) and dig post holes and get out on the mashed potato circuit' delivering after-dinner speeches as a retired president.

Reagan remained at the White House over the weekend, rather than visiting Camp David, the presidential retreat in Maryland. The only events on his Saturday schedule were his weekly radio speech to the nation and a black-tie dinner with the members of the Alfalfa Club, an exclusive Washington men's club that meets in

But his aides were busy preparing for a round of television appearances Sunday morning. Senior White House officials and the already functioning Reagan campaign were booked for interviews on network news programs leading up to the announcement.

Reagan allies were invited to a private White House reception late Sunday afternoon, and a party at a downtown Washington hotel several blocks from the executive mansion was planned in the evening.

The Reagan-Bush '84 committee, in operation on two floors of an office building at the foot of Capitol Hill for several months, budgeted $500,000 for the announcement, which will be broadcast live in the Eastern, Central and Mountain time nones and on a delayed basis in the Pacific time zone.

However, actual costs are expected to be $400,000, campaign committee spokesman Jim Lake said.

In addition to buying time on the three major commercial networks, the campaign purchased time on 20 independent television stations.

examiner's office ruled the death a Free tax help for elderly available

Free income tax advice will be available for older citizens and retirees in the Pampa area starting Thursday, Feb. 2, through the Tax - Aide - TCE program of the American Association of Retired Persons Volunteer counselors trained by the Internal Revenue Service will be at the Pampa Senior Citizens Center, 500 W. Francis, from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. each Tuesday and Thursday beginning Feb. 2 through April 12.

Carl Hoskins, local coordinator for the program, said the service is designed to help older persons understand the various income tax forms and become familiar with special benefits available to retirees.

"Our counselors are trained and equipped to assist in the preparation of the simpler and uncomplicated tax returns for the older citizens," Hoskins

According to Hoskins, past experience has indicated that many older persons are unaware of special benefits they may be entitled to claim. Some may not even by required to file a return because of their limited income.

Persons wishing to use this service should bring with them copies of their last returns and the forms for the current tax year, including W - 2's, 1099's, and other relevant materials showing income for the tax year.

For futher information about the service, call Mr. Hoskins at 665 - 2842.

Friends of Hamon, who had known him either socially or through civic affairs, said they stunned by the suicide even though he had been depressed by his recent divorce and a disagreement with his family.

College considering electronics course

Clarendon College is exploring the possibility of expanding the electronics program at the Pampa Center to include a course in television-home entertainment instrument service

The college has asked that persons who might be interested in the course fill on the questionnaire on Page five of today's Pampa News and return it to the college to help in determining the best scheduling possibilities.

Objectives of the course will be to train electronic technicians in the home entertainment field. Projected target date for it to begin is May 7.

The course will be four semesters, with the first two providing basic electronic training that will apply toward all areas of electronic servicing. The final two semesters will be directed toward home entertainment instruments

Successful completion of the program leads to an Associate of Applied Science Degree and certificate

Two local men arrested here Friday

Pampa police officers arrested two men Friday, one on a charge of cruelty to animals and the other on a charge of felony theft

Thomas Daniel Short, 20, of 1008 Crane Road, was arrested in connection with an incident in which a dog was injured in the alley in the 1000 Crane Road

According to police reports, neighbors heard a dog yelping and crying in the alley. A male subject was observed kicking an object, then picking the object up and placing it in a trash dumpster.

Texans are generally known for the pride they have in their state. But pride in one's state - or country - is not limited to boasting Texans.

American Field Service foreign exchange student Guilherme Herkenhoff Mesquita, 18, is quite proud of his native country, Brazil - or Brasil, as it should be spelled. In fact, he's downright enthusiastic and talkative about the place. Sounds like a Texan chatting about his native state Sitting down to talk with him about his stay in the United States under the student exchange program, one finds himself learning more about Brazil and soon wanting to go visit the place. Guil makes it sound as good as Texas.

Guil arrived in the United States on Aug. 15, staying in New York for three days of orientation before coming to Pampa on Aug. 18. He's enrolled as a senior in Pampa High School. He had already attended one semester at a university in Brazil - uh, Brasil, that is - where he was an architectural major

His native city is Vitoria, located in the state of Espirito. Located on the eastern coast, Vitoria consists of a city on an island as well as part on the mainland, with a population of 800,000 - "about the size of Dallas," he said. It's situated about 500 kilometers or 300 miles northeast of Rio de Janeiro.

Vitorio, the capital of Espirito in the southeast region of Brazil, has a big harbor, with its major industries being exportation of minerals, especially iron, and iron and steel production. It's a quite modern city, he explains, bringing

Illiterate widow fighting to keep her home, land CARROLLTON, Texas

(AP) - An illiterate widow stands to lose her ramshackle house and five acres of suburban Dallas land because of an 18-year-old agreement with a contractor who was deeded the property after claiming she didn't pay him promptly for fixing her leaky roof

Callie Wallace, 75, says she cannot read or write and barely remembers signing the document that turned the land over to the contractor, Virgil Whatley, in 1966.

Whatley maintains that Mrs. Wallace knew what she was doing when she signed an agreement and plans to sell the land soon. But several friends of Mrs. Wallace, who has been given three weeks to leave the house, have gone to court to stop him.

"If the Lord could come down here and speak, he'd say I've been cheated." said Mrs. Wallace, a tiny woman with thick horn-rimmed glasses. "There's always somebody messin' with colored people. Like buzzards, they always want something for nothing.'

Mrs. Wallace and her husband, John, were given the land 40 years ago for their work on a nearby cotton farm of Charles McKamy.

At the time, Carrollton was a tiny isolated community and McKamy estimated the land's value at $2,500. Now it's a bustling suburb of Dallas with 40,000 residents, condominiums and office buildings have sprouted on farmland and the land where Mrs. Wallace lives was assessed last year at $524,000.

In March 1965, she hired Whatley to fix her roof and signed what he said was a contract requiring her to pay the $3,500 bill within 90 days, something she said would have been impossible.

According to Jeff Shore, her attorney, Mrs. Wallace made payments to a bank, but when she didn't pay the total on time. Whatley returned the next year with another man and falsely claimed that the bank would foreclose on her property if she didn't sign a contract calling for $45-a-month payments to him.

The document actually deeded over her home to the contractor in return for $10, something Mrs. Wallace said she didn't realize until 1982.

She said that over the years, she has paid Whatley $9,000 in $45 payments that she thought were for the repairs. Whatley said the payments were for rent, and said he hadn't misrepresented the contract.

"She's all wet if she says that," he told the Dallas Times Herald. "A lot of times you get down the road and later you regret a deal that you made. That's all there is

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Demos' response insult to citizens

If the Democrats' televised response to the president's State of the Union address is a sample of the campaign to come, then you might as well get ready for three more years of a Reagan administration.

While there are some legitimate reasons for dissatification with the president, both for things he said and things he didn't say, the Democrats' program aired in response to his remarks was irresponsible in its charges and empty of alternatives.

The most incredible portion of the program was the part talking about interest rates. The Democrats paraded a farmer and a businessman before the cameras telling the world that they had been forced to cancel plans for expansion because of high interest rates caused by the Reagan administration.

Do the Democrats really think the American people are so stupid that they won't remember prime rates in excess of 20 percent during the last Democratic administration, compared to current rates in the neighborhood of 12 percent? When the Democrats start blaming Ronald Reagan for high interest rates, they insult the intelligence of citizens of this country.

That was one of the irresponsible charges. There are

The program put together by the National Democratic Party berated Ronald Reagan for causing huge budget deficits, and at the same time, charged him with being unfair to the poor by cutting social programs. They did not explain how they would spend more on social program than Reagan and reduce the deficits at the same time. Their proposals for cutting defense spending did not match what they wanted added for domestic

They put un unemployed steelworker on the screen who blamed the president for the fact that he didn't have a job. But they did not mention it was the steelworker's union's demands for excessive wages for the past two or three decades, demands that have been supported by every Democratic president, that have priced thousands of American steelworkers out of jobs.

The criticism of the Reagan foreign policy was that it had no directions and no goals, but the Democrats offered no suggestion of what their goals would be. They called for nuclear disarmament talks, but didn't explain how they would get the Soviet Union to participate.

The Democrats, rightfully, we thought, were criticial of the president for devoting only one paragraph of his speech to the Lebanon situation. They blamed the president for U.S. Marines being in that country, but didn't remind anyone that the Democratic Congress had approved of them being sent there in the first place.

If this is the best the Democratic Party can do in the coming presidential campaign, Ronald Reagan will be easily re-elected, not so much because of what he's done. but because his major opposition offers no responsible alternatives

Legitimate role of government

The whole debate over what government should be doing, what programs it should sponsor, and how much it should tax and spend has been shallow at best. The Reagan administration which SAYS it wants to cut spending, taxing and government controls has been portrayed as simplistic, mean and uncaring. But nobody in the White House knows, or has the guts to talk about, the legitimate role of government in a free society. And sadly enough only a few congressmen, most notably Ron Paul (R. -Tex.) and Robert Walker (R. - Pa.), both understand and have the guts to argue the case for individual liberty and limited government.

At the heart of the question about the legitimate role of government is another question: what kind of social order do we want? This columnist believes that on balance most Americans prefer relationships which are voluntary and non coercive. That means most Americans prefer exchanges like, "I'll do something good for you if you do something good for me." The reason is that both parties benefit. That's the essence of your relationship with the painter, butcher, and gasoline station owner. You do something good for him - pay money - and he does something good for you - deliver the product. It's all voluntary.

By contrast our relationships with government are mostly coercive. You MUST pay, through taxes, for Amtrak, crop irrigation, food stamps, the International Monetary Fund, foreign aid, the U.N. and $800 - billion - plus worth of other things whether you receive the service of not, and whether you like it or not. You pay - or you go to jail. The nature of government is

Government, however, is a necessary evil. There must be some bit of government coercion to prevent others, foreign and domestic, from taking that which belongs to us, our rights, and our lives. To finance the legitimate government functions there must be taxes to support the military and police. There are disputes at law and contracts which suggest a role for government in adjudication

There may be one or two other legitimate functions for government in a free society, but not many more. But surely government shouldn't be in the business of taking from one and giving to another.

Most of today's government activity is what mathematicians call the "zero - sum" game, where one person gains ONLY at the expense of another. For example, when government gives one American one dollar, some other American MUST be worse off by transaction. Or when Reagan helped Harley - Davidson by putting tariffs on Honda bikes, the company gained; but American bike consumers lost through being forced to pay higher prices.

Because government interference involves coercion, there is a moral reason for limited government.

There are some Americans, however, who like government activity since it allows them to do things they cannot do when relationships are voluntary. Chase Manhatten Bank officers like government intervention because they suspect we won't voluntarily help bail them out for making imprudent loans. So they get government to confiscate our money to help bail them out. Sol Chaiken, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, can't get us to voluntarily buy higher - priced shirts made by his high - wage members. So he gets expensive, union - made shirt or do without. Do - gooders figure we won't voluntarily give enough money to feed poor people plus pay for the do - gooders' limousines, so they get government to confiscate our money through taxation.

Each of these activities constitutes illegitimate government activity. They are totalitarian acts veiled by modern names like welfare, industrial policy and orderly markets but this can't hide the fact that these are totalitarian acts nonetheless.

Government growth and control is inconsistent with a free and prospering

But you might say, if government didn't do all that it's doing we wouldn't have a "just" society. What's "just" has been debated for centuries, but let me offer my definition of social justice: I keep what I earn, and you keep what you earn. Do you disagree? Well then tell me how much of what I earn BELONGS to you - and why?

Today in History

By The Associated Press Today is Sunday, Jan. 29, the 29th day of 1984. There are 337 days left in the year. Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 29, 1980, Canada's foreign minister revealed that six U.S. diplomats had been smuggled out of Iran after hiding in the Canadian embassy in Tehran. On this date:

In 1843, the 25th president of the United States, William McKinley, was born in Niles, Ohio.

In 1861, Kansas entered the Union as the 34th state

In 1863, the New York Stock and Exchange Board changed its name to the New York Stock Exchange.

And in 1900, the American League was organized in Philadelphia, with baseball teams in Buffalo, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Milwaukee and Minneapolis. , Ten years ago: A California judge said he would order President Richard Nixon to testify at the trial of former White House aides indicted for the break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist. Five years ago: President Jimmy Carter commuted the bank robbery prison sentence of Patty Hearst, opening the way for the newspaper heiress to leave prison.

One year ago: Secretary of State George Shultz left on a 12-day mission to the Far East in the hopes of easing tensions in U.S. relations with China.

Putting a limit on compassion

Americans are beginning to mention the unmentionables

This is an election year. Incumbents will claim credit for a vigorously healthy economy. Outs wanting in will endow themselves with more compassion for poor

So this year we will be forced to look at and listen to some people we might prefer to

Newsweek magazine gave much of a recent issue to the "Homeless in America."

It found them in the dingy byways of a dozen cities. Several companion articles sought to sort them - the deserving destitute from those who chose "the street life." Most chose it

It can be argued that transients who elect to stay drunk and forage on garbage and sleep in doorways are no less deserving of our compassion and assistance.

Even when they spend welfare checks on more drink. But taxpayers are wearying of that argument. Each month's employment statistics specify that most unemployment is among young black males, that half of them are out of work. Yet the National Bureau of Economic Research finds that much unemployment among young black men reflects unreported income

"One - fourth of the income earned by black men ages 15 to 24 comes from crime." Duke Professor W. Kip Viscusi says. When individuals can make more money from crime, jobs are not very attractive." And pushing drugs, for example, can net hundreds of dollars a day.

Americans are beginning to mention the unmentionables.

No agency more than the Salvation Army seeks to serve society's destitute, providing 42,000 beds every night. The Army has long recognized that most chronic poverty is self - inflicted. Most relates to drink and recently, increasingly, to drugs.

Newsweek referred to "an underclass of people who have purposed to slide through the safety net and into the gutter.'

We are beginning to mention the unmentionables; we are beginning again to call a bum a bum.

And that's all right. One of the rights of free men is the right to be a bum

But I confess a limit to my compassion; I've only so much to go around; I will reserve what I have for the involuntary victims of poorness.

Hypocrisy on the hunger issue

NEW YORK (NEA) - Ham is forever associated with eggs; robins are inextricably linked to spring; and "hunger" settles like a vast fog over America during Republican administrations as Election Day approaches.

To a Democratic Party largely deprived of the economic issues on which it had hoped to run in 1984, and uneasily aware that foreign policy is an extremely risky substitute, "hunger" is a positive godsend. Simply by raising the subject, the Democrats can put the administration on the defensive and force it to attempt the near - impossibility of proving a negative:

that "there is no hunger in America." The only thing any administration can honestly say on that subject is that, on the basis of the welfare programs that have been in place for many years, there ought to be no hunger in America. Every person at or below the poverty level in this country, and many others well above it, qualify for all sorts of federally financed assistance: food stamps, Medicaid, legal advice and out - and out welfare checks, not to mention more broadly available benefits, such as extended unemployment compensation.

Despite which, in a nation of 226 million ople, there are, of course, a good many individual instances of serious undernourishment. In cities like New York, a sizable proportion of those qualified for federal aid are either alcoholics (like the famous Bowery bums) who aren't interested unless the aid is readily convertible into booze, or ex - mental patients incapable of complying with the relatively simple bureaucratic steps necessary to claim their handouts.

It is helping such people that private charities move in and take up an important part of the slack. Federal aid programs are rightly required by law to make reasonably sure that the aid goes to qualified recipients. That requires at least a modicum of cooperation from the individual in question: answering questions about his income. perhaps even making a legitimate effort to find work, etc. A far - gone alcoholic or a borderline schizophrenic may not be able, and certainly isn't often inclined, to go through that sort of hassle if he knows of a church - sponsored soup kitchen nearby that will feed him without asking any questions whatever. Without the efforts of such private groups, there is no question that a certain number of Americans would die of undernourishment and - or exposure, despite everything a solicitous federal government could reasonably be expected to do for them.

That is why President Reagan, knowing of all the federal programs in place and yet aware of the Democratic charges about 'hunger in America'' appointed a blue ribbon commission to look into the matter and try to get at the facts. The commission has now reported, treating the matter with the seriousness it deserves and stressing how difficult it is to nail down a charge so nebulous. It exonerates the government including the administration - of any imputation of callousness or indifference, but acknowledges that we have, as a society, nonetheless not yet succeeded in eradicating hunger altogether. That hardly served the purposes of the Democratic Party, however, and its allies in the media wasted no time trashing the committee's report. (Most of the committee members, the media huffed, are Republicans - the implication being that a Republican would naturally be happy to lie to cover up for Mr. Reagan.)

Then the networks grabbed their TV cameras and fanned out to various private charitable organizations near their studios, to get a little anecdotal footage. On the "news" show I saw, they had evidently asked a woman in charge of a church - run food program whether her operation wasn't a waste of time, given all the federal assistance available to the poor. She replied indignantly that it was absolutely essential. and spoke feelingly of the hunger and gratitude of those she had fed. The camera soaked it all up, and that evening sprayed it across America. And no doubt a great many people went to bed wondering why a nice guy like Ronald Reagan would deliberately let people starve.

I have been putting off the writing of this letter for some time, but now, my conscience has compelled me to write.

Why must the Pampa New continue to condone such 'news reporting' as Mr. Jeff Langley seems to enjoy reporting? I am speaking specifically of Mr. Langley's reporting concerning the Bob Price family.

Throughout the end of last year, the Pampa News found it to be "newsworthy" to slander, diminish, lie and just plain gossip concerning the Price family. I do not doubt that Mr. Price has large financial problems, nor do I doubt that his son was involved in some wrongdoing; but why is it necessary to literally tear another human being's family apart publicly, day after day? If Pampa has forgotten all the years Senator Price so faithfully served us in Washington, please, Pampa, do not forget your Christian, moral responsibility to treat someone else as you would wish to be treated.

What family has not suffered financial hardship or problems with their children? Would you want it published day after day? No, I believe Pampa citizens would not.

Please, try to divert Mr. Langley's "news-gathering talents" to other areas which will be informative of the news, not malicious.

T. Etheredge

EDITOR' NOTE-When anyone has borrowed over $2 million in taxpayers' money and failed to pay it back, we think the public has a right to know about it. When any Pampa area resident pleads guilty in connection with international drug smuggling, we think we should print it. If any of the stories mentioned had contained "slander" or "iles," be assured it would have been emphatically called to our attention, and to yours, long before now.

photos to show a number of high-rise office buildings and in the conversation for awhile." But now he's used to even apartment buildings.

"Today in Brasil it's more common that people live in apartments," he said. He lived on the island near a beach. On the coast behind the beach are forested mountains. But there's no snow on them, he said. The lowest temperature there is

"I was kind of scared when I saw the plains." Guil said of flying into the Texas Panhandle. It was quite a change from the harbor, beach and mountains of his home city. "But I've kind of gotten used to it.

He said he had heard much of the friendliness of people in Texas. Here he found people would often smile and say hello to him on the streets. "But a lot of it seems impersonal to me," he said, since the "friendliness" rarely went beyond that, at least with strangers. But now he has made some friends and got involved in various activities, so he's found there are friendly people here. "I have now a lot of nice people."

Guil said school is easier here than in the one he attended in Vitoria. In his last year of high school there, for example, he was taking 27 subjects. But the subjects were usually broken up, with several classes in mathematics, chemistry and other areas. There was no "chemistry class" - instead, there was organic chemistry and inorganic chemistry, for example.

School was taught from 7 a.m. to noon, he noted. The afternoons were spent in special classes, such as foreign languages, or playing sports. Or doing homework. "We had more homework there," he explained.

There are more student activities and organizations here than in Brazil. Most sports are played informally for fun, he said. "People are really serious about sports here."

But he likes the emphasis on sports in schools. School "is really academic in Brasil," he said. Currently he is on the PHS track team, trying out the high jump, something he has never done before. He's also considering the long jump and possibly some running events

In Brazil he played soccer and volleyball or went swimming or bicycling. He played with the city soccer league last fall. He wanted to play football and basketball, but since state regulations requires parents to be here, he had to forego those

At Pampa High School he's taking "easy courses" such as photography and drafting, which were not offered in his school

He had four years of English before coming to the United States. He said he hasn't encountered many problems with the

"Texan, yes," Guil said, smiling, as though it were another language. Shortly after his arrival in town, he attended a rodeo. He said he stood with a group of cowboys and "got lost

His native language is Portuguese, the only country in the continent with that as its native language. That has created some problems, since many people come up to him here and start speaking in Spanish. He said there's some similarities between the two languages, but not enough for him to easily understand Spanish

He's taking French here and plans on taking German when he goes back to Brazil. There is German background in his family, since his grandfather came from Germany. He explained there has been a lot of German, Italian and Polish immigration in Brazil, especially in the south. That region thus has a lot of European influences and heritage along with the black culture resulting from use of early slave labor by the Portuguese.

Guil became interested in the American Field Service program, now existing in 55 countries, when a friend made application in Vitoria. He had wanted to visit other countries, and after he learned more of the purposes of AFS - learning about other cultures, integrating ideas among people and thus seeking to promote peace among nations - he decided to apply, too. He did so on the last day, submitting his biography and other materials and taking the tests.

He said 150 students applied for the program in Vitoria. Of those, only 20 were selected for further tests and interviews. Afterwards, 10 students were selected for participation in the program, Guil being one of them.

Although he feels the AFS program is "a good way of education" by living and studying in another country, with more opportunities available from meeting other AFS students from other nations, he believes he also is here to teach people of other cultures, perhaps change some opinions. "One thing I think students should have more here is geography," Guil stated, since so many Americans seem to be generally unaware of other cultures, lands and lifestyles. He, for example, has been asked questions about the jungle life, the Amazon (located way north of where he lives) and problems of dealing "with all those snakes."

"But I look at it in a funny way; I don't get mad," he said. And then he really begins talking about his native land, dragging out photographs and brochures and tape cassettes of Brazilian music.

Too many Americans see Brazil as a small country, he said. Actually, it takes up over half of South America. "Brazil is about as big as the U.S. - without Alaska," he said.

Brazil is "energy conscious," he said. The country is developing a number of cars which run on alcohol and even electricity. There are supposedly large reserves of oil in the Amazon region, he said, but they are hard to get to and thus too expensive to develop. The nation also is developing large sources of hydroelectric power.

Tourism is growing, with such attractions as Rio de Janeiro (where he lived for six years) and Sao Paulo and the Foz do Iguacu (the Iguassu Falls, more than comparable to Niagara Falls, amid a forested section in south Brazil near Paraguay).

Soccer and carnival "are the Brasilian passions," he said One soccer stadium he attended before coming to the United States, for example, seats 200,000.

"The country stops for four days" for the carnival; comparable to Mardi Gras in New Orleans. But instead of being located in one city, carnival is celebrated throughout the nation at the end of February or March. Groups of people, called "schools," spend months in preparation for the event, using large sums of money to make floats, prepare costumes and devise dances for the parades, which go on for hours. If you've ever seen the movie "Black Orpheus (Orfeo Negro)," then you know about the carnival spirit.

College in Brazil is different, too, he explains. Since most of the universities there are free, "You just don't show your average." Instead, students have to pass a number of special tests for admission to specific programs.

In his architectural studies, he is specializing in urban design and landscaping of gardens. "My goal is to link these two areas, art and engineering," he said.

His father works for a Brazilian oil company - Petrobras, meaning "petroleum from Brazil," Guil said. His mother is a housewife. He has a sister, 20, who is studying psychology and arts while working in the traffic department.

But while he talks enthusiastically of Brazil, now he is interested in learning more about the United States and other nations. He experienced some problems of being homesick shortly after he came to Pampa, missing his family and friends in Brazil. But that doesn't bother him too often anymore. In fact, he's "not too excited" about returning to Brazil soon because of the number of things he's enjoying

In addition to New York and Pampa, he's also visited Fort Worth, Austin, Albuquerque and Denver, where he went on a skiing trip, experiencing a cold winter. "The snow there was deep," he said

Winter was hard on him at first, but "I kind of got used to it. Now it's being okay. I thought I'd have trouble, but now I'm managing okay." Still, he has caught a minor cold. Just another experience for him.

He will be leaving Pampa in June, joining other AFS students for a bus trip to New York before returning to Brazil. In Pampa he has been staying with Mr. and Mrs. Bill Potts, teachers, and their son, Parrish

For the past several weeks we have been discussing Preferred Stocks, their characteristics and some of the advantages. Since every coin has two sides, let's share for a moment some of the disadvantages of preferred

Generally speaking, preferred stocks will bear a fixed rate of dividend. Unless there is some written provision to the contrary, if we buy a $4.50 Preferred Stock, that's all we will ever get from it, $4.50 per year per

With a common stock, as we previously discussed, the dividend is not stated. It can go up, down, or disappear completely if the financial situation of the company dictates. With a common stock, however, careful investigation will reveal that many old, blue chip corporations have a long history of increasing their dividends each year. If good fortune continues, you can logically anticipate the practice to continue and make the investment with the strong possibility of a rising income through the years. With the preferred stock this is not the case - they have promised you a set dividend and that's all you're going to

Another disadvantage of a preferred stock is that, at the discretion of the directors, preferred dividends may not have to be paid. Remember, no matter how we dress them up, whatever frills we adorn them with, preferred stocks are still equity and represent ownership. With ownership our fortunes rise or fall on how well - or not well - the company does. With a debt instrument - a bond or debenture - the company has to meet its interest payments. It doesn't have to pay dividends either to common

As a common stockholder you have the right to vote on company policy. This is generally done at the annual stockholders meeting either by you physically being where (and you are invited) or by a proxy which is mailed to you well in advance. You get a vote for each share you hold. With preferred stock, even though it does represent ownership, often it will carry a no voting restriction - it may be bought with no voting rights. This may be of little importance to you, but it is a restrictive feature you should make yourself aware of

These selected ideas on preferred stocks by no means answer all oif your questions. I do hope, however, that we have basically covered what they are and some of the advantages and disadvantages of owning preferred stocks. Next week we'll continue with our discussion of income

THE NEW TESTAMENT OF JESUS CHRIST

For where a testament is, there must of necessity be the death of him that made it. For a testament is of force where there hath been death: for it doth never avail while he that made it liveth." (Hebrews 9:16,17) The death of Jesus Christ brought to an end of law of Moses and rendered the testament (law) of Jesus Christ effective. Like all wills, or testaments, Christ's testament now dictates the terms and

But first the terms of the will had to be made known. The apostles of Jesus Christ were assured that the terms of His testament would be revealed to them and they should preach them to every creature (Luke 24:44-48; Mark

DALLAS (AP) - When the Texas Department of Highways opened bids last year on contracts for picking up trash along Dallas County highways, the low-bidder turned more than a few

When Mary Kay Cosmetics, Apple Computer, Texas Instruments and Xerox needed some sorting, collating and packaging work done, they turned to a subcontractor that may just be one of the best-kept secrets in Dallas.

Non-profit Goodwill Industries, while still collecting and reselling garments as it has for more than 60 years, has taken a turn toward free enterprise.

Faced with budget cuts, rising costs and even bankruptcy, Goodwill has entered the competitive business world by bidding on jobs that will put wages in the pockets of its handicapped beneficiaries.

"The public really has no idea what we do. People think of Goodwill and all they think of is old, dirty clothes," said Rodney Ginther, the 35-year-old executive director of Goodwill Industries of Dallas

"We've found recently we can do more, and we have to. We're a business and we've got to conduct ourselves as a business." Ginther said.

In Dallas, Goodwill handles the state's highway trash contracts and operates an in-house subcontracting shop staffed with handicapped workers. In Washington, Goodwill handles janitorial contracts for some federal buildings. In Denver, Goodwill runs one of the country's most sophisticated clothing re-sale operation.

"In 1979, the board (of directors) said it was considering filing for bankruptcy," Ginther said of the Dallas chapter. "So we had to find some other ways to generate revenue. It's an exciting change we're going through.

Through the litter contracts and subcontracting work, Goodwill pays out $218,000 in wages to 96 handicapped people who, Ginther said. would otherwise be institutionalized or completely reliant on public welfare programs.

Janet Williams, 59, had no way to earn money until a job opened at Goodwill. "I was in Terrell (State)

Hospital with no where to go and no job," she said. "It's been a life-saver for me." Ginther read about the state's highway litter contracts in a Dallas newspaper last year. "It sounded simple to us. We said, 'This is something a handicapped person could do," he said. "Then when we actually got the first contract. we really got scared."

Other contractors complained that Goodwill, a non-profit organization, had an unfair advantage. But the uproar has since subsided.

'Yeh, it cut into my pocket," said Ray Woody of Pride Maintenance Corp., which lost out on the Dallas County litter contracts when Goodwill entered the bidding.

'But I don't have any hard feelings. In Dallas, there are seven contracts up for grabs receive the benefits of it.

So it certainly saves and they have taken over all taxpayers' money.' but two. We've had to go to something else, but we were Ginther has taken Goodwill's contributed goods program up-scale, putting both collection centers and stores in richer Dallas neighborhoods. He now uses a stock control system developed by Sears Roebuck and Co., and is currently working to improve the physical appearance of Goodwill stores.

'Since we are selling to a higher class of people, we need to change our image. We have second-rung, thrift store image. We don't want to look like a Sears or a J.C. Penney.

but maybe like a K mart or Wal-Mart," he said.

Goodwill's main store, located southwest of downtown Dallas, had a 51/2 percent increase in sales last year while a store in a growing northern suburb, Farmers Branch, saw sales jump 29 percent.

The contributed goods program still provides the largest number of jobs for handicapped people at Goodwill. Last year the charity paid more than $1.2 million in wages.

Ginther, an accountant by training, wants to find a long-term in-house said.

manufacturing contract that could employ a large number of handicapped people in Goodwill's shop.

"The state has a tremendous need for battery cables, and binders and jumper cables - things like that," he said. "There's got to be something out there we can acquire.

The drawback to the subcontracting work done for Dallas firms is that it is temporary work.

"It's very hard to tell a handicapped person there's no work for him today," he

Christian Le Blanc (Kirk McColl of AS THE WORLD TURNS) tells the national media "that smoking makes people smell bad, taste bad, and look bad." He even refuses to date people who smoke ... now that could be an incentive for any woman to quit smoking ... All this was part of the American Cancer Society annual SMOKEOUT DAY. Christian participated in the day's activities because he feels that life is too precious to waste it on a cigarette, and he hopes that his support will count.

Warren Carter, that scoundrel on "Search For Tomorrow," hasn't been punished for his unconscionable behavior yet, but Michael Corbett, the actor who portrays him, unfortunately has "Over the weekend as I was parking the car in front of my apartment, I heard some people shout, 'Warren Carter, you louse, keep away from Wendy and other profanities. ignored it. But later, I found my tires had been slashed and the paint scraped off my new car. It's really troubling to realize that people can't distinguish between the character and the person playing the role, because I'm really a nice guy.

Gretchen Oehler, Vivien on "Another World," wishes she could find some Indian blood in her lineage to explain her fascination with Indian lore. "When I was a child, my father wrote a book called "The Great Sioux Uprising," which my mother helped research. So I've been exposed to the Indian sensibility since birth." Recently she attended the first annual crafts fair at the Onondaga Nation, a Mohawk Indian reservation near Syracuse NY. "I learned the rabbit dance, a women's choice involving a lot of hopping back and forth. One of the premier basket-weavers invited me to her reservation to learn that craft. The attraction seems to be mutual. Says Oehler. "They're really crazy about 'Another World' up there.

'Cagney and Lacey' to rise from ashes

Pampa

Travel

By JERRY BUCK AP Television Writer LOS ANGELES (AP) -'Cagney & Lacey," a cop show about two women who are buddies, is about to rise phoenix-like from the ashes of

This police show, which recently went back into production, and which now stars Tyne Daly as Mary Beth Lacey and Sharon Gless as Chris Cagney, has a rap sheet as long as your arm.

It originally was telecast by CBS in October 1981 as a TV movie with Miss Daly and Loretta Swit in the title roles. Its high rating and critical acclaim caused CBS to select

It debuted in March 1982 as a regular series. Miss Daly reprised her role but Miss Swit was committed to 'M-A-S-H." Meg Foster was cast as Chris Cagney, then was dropped after six episodes because CBS, worried that the show summer reruns. presented too much of a

"harsh women's lib" image, said it wanted a softer feminine look. That's where Miss Gless came in. She was cast as Chris Cagney for the 1982-83 season. The show failed to attract much of an audience and CBS said it would not renew the show. Three things combined to and revive the show, a move virtually unprecedented in television. The press lobbied for its return, the public inundated the network with mail, and "Cagney & Lacey" suddenly became a hot item in the ratings during the movie 'Hobson's Choice' last May when I heard the show had been killed," says Miss

ROAD MAP!

Astro-Graph by bernice bede osol

The year ahead could prove to be one of your better ones because you'll pay your dues and gain entrance to the world of success. Wisely, you won't be looking for any easy roads or handouts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 29 Feb. 19)
There is no better tool than quiet reasoning to achieve any goal. You are a master at this and will brilliantly use your talent today. Major changes are in store for Aquarians in the coming year. Send for your year-ahead predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Past experience will prove to be a valuable ally in your attempts to climb that ladder of success today. It will make your footing sure and firm.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) The reason you'll succeed today is that you have the ability to face cold hard facts. You won't allow your logical faculties to get sidetracked. TAURUS (April 20-May 20) It may require all the patience you possess to explain the facts of life to a cohort today. Fortunately, you are amply qualified.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your ingenuity is a welcome addition around the workshop or at the office today. Don't fear to advise others how to accomplish tough tasks.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) A serious matter seems to be the topic of conversation today when the gang gathers for a coffee break. Happily for all, you can provide some insight. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The first things you'll tackle today are all those nuisance jobs that have been piling up. What a grand way to start the week! VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your affairs may appear to be some-what complicated today, but they won't overwhelm you or cause any problems. You'll keep your head on straight. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You seem to understand today every penny has a way of add-ing up. Because of this insight you'll slowly, but surely, accumulate a tidy sum

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Being able to express yourself in a sensible, realistic manner makes you a good leader Others follow you because they know you're SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec 21) When it comes down to push-and-shove, you know how to drive a harder bargain than your opponents. You may get an opportunity to use this talent today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) What puts you head and shoulders above the crowd today is that you know how to strive for a brighter tomorrow by anticipating obstacles.

Winter Games mark 60th birthday

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia NEA) - On the afternoon of Feb. 8, 1984, at least 1,200 athletes, male and female, from more than 40 nations will march through Kosevo Stadium in the Zetra isports complex just a mile from the heart of this city to signify the formal opening of the XIVth Olympic Winter Games.

Actually, the 14th renewal of the winter festival will already have begun the night before with the new U.S. hockey team - descendents of the gold medal champions of the 1980 Olympics - taking the ice in Zetra Hall against North American rival Canada.

The Games in Sarajevo mark the 60th anniversary of the Jack Frost Olympics and significantly are the first ever to be staged by a communist bloc nation

The focus naturally will he on the teams from the two most powerful countries on earth, the United States and the Soviet Union. Despite the Olympic creed that professes these Games to be a convocation of amateur athletes taking part in the spirit of friendly competition, these sports duels have become deadly serious.

Today's Olympic Games are highly marketed and merchandised by the host nation to meet the staggering cost of producing such a vast project, and propagandized by the competing countries as a matter of political pride. The original philosophy of Baron Pierre de Coubertin, who revived the ancient Greek athletic rites in 1896, seems to have been sidetracked.

The important thing in the Olympic Games is not winning but taking part,' proclaimed the Baron. "The essential thing in life is not conquering but fighting

Try telling that to an Olympic skier who has contracts in six figures awaiting him or her for the simple act of picking up a gold medal. Or an Olympic figure skater who can cash in a sterling performance by joining an ice show.

It would also be a tough sell to the folks at ABC Tele vision, who have invested $200 million in the Winter Games alone (including $91.5 million for the tele casting rights). They still figure to reap a handsome profit from the 65 broadcast hours over a period from Monday, Feb. 6, through the closing ceremonies on Sunday, Feb. 19.

Yet for all the materialism, and cynicism, involved in the Olympics, a broader spirit and a true thrill of pure competition manages to take over.

I was less impressed with the pandemonium that ensued at Lake Placid in 1980 when the U.S. hockey team scored its emotional upset over the highly favored Russians than with the reactions of the losers. The Soviet players seemed affected positively by the Americans' achievement and even enjoyed, as bystanders, the wild celebration on the ice.

For sure, men don't risk their necks sliding at a milea-minute pace down an icv incline on flimsy sleds because they expect a payoff. There isn't one.

Nor is there one beyond the possibility of a cherished medal and an engraved name in the record books for soaring vast distances encumbered by a pair of long, clumsy skis.

There are other sports biathlon and cross-country skiing, specifically - where the ecstasy of victory or the agony of defeat are the sole residue of intense and dedicated training.

It has become impossible to ignore the nationalism inherent in the competition. Ironically, the Soviet Union and the United States are not the leading collectors of Winter Olympics medals. That honor goes to small Norway, a country where winter sport is a way of life. It has collected 152 since winter games were solidified into one international meet exactly 60 years ago.

The Soviets, who didn't enter a team until 1956, have won 140 medals and lead in total golds with 39 The United States is tied with Austria, a country where winter sport also comes naturally, at 106 medals.

Before the first official Winter Games at Chamonix, France, in 1924, figure skating had been introduced to the program of the 1908 Summer Games, and ice hockey was initiated at Amsterdam in the summe of 1920

The early Winter Games. in such charming retreats as Chamonix, St. Moritz, Lake Placid and Garmisch-Partenkirchen, were cozy get-togethers. There wasn't even any Alpine skiing on the program until after World War II. From a total of 15 events in the early days, the Olympics have grown to the scheduled 39 for nine sports at six different venues in and near Sarajevo. The expanded competition is sure to produce its share of heroes, and the United States is no less eager than the rest of the world to glorify them.

In 1980 at Lake Placid, we had a sure-fire star in Eric Heiden, the dominant speed skater in the world. He lived up to expectations by winning five gold medals in the most brilliant sustained performance in the history of that sport.

At Sarajevo, the anticipated American winners are Phil Mahre and Tamara McKinney in Alpine skiing, Scott Hamilton and Rosalynn Sumners in figure skating, with Jeff Hastings and Kerry Lynch rated highly in ski jumping and Nordic combined, respectively.

Any other gold medal winners would be an unexpected bonus.

The exploits of the U.S. hockey team four years ago spur eternal hope. That's what the Olympic Games are all about.

Harvesters roll over Levelland

Pampa ran off 13 consecutive points in the first half and coasted to a 95-49 District 1-4A win over Levelland Friday night in McNeely Fieldhouse.

The lopsided win boosted Pampa to an 8-0 district record and a commanding first-place lead in the standings.

Borger, which walloped Brownfield, 77-51, Friday night is in sole possesion of second place at 6-2 after Lubbock Estacado surprised Canvon, 58-53. Canvon drops to 5-3.

Levelland is now 7-15 and 1-7.

In the previous meeting, Levelland battled the Harvesters on fairly even terms for three quarters before falling, 68-48. This time out, it was all over for the Lobos in the second quarter.

Pampa led at the end of the first quarter, 18-10, and its pressing defense didn't allow Levelland a point for almost four minutes of the second quarter while building a 29-12 lead. The Lobos turned the ball over three consecutive times on a pair of steals by Craig Chapin and another swipe by Rodney Young early in the second quarter, all resulting in easy Harvester baskets.

Pampa had six players scoring in double figures, led by Coyle Winborn's 24 points. Winborn also collected 10

"It's kind of mind-boggling for me, because everbody here is so great," said Walsh, the San Francisco 49ers coach who is drawing his first Pro Bowl assignment. "I look at all these players from the other teams and wonder how we ever win a game."

Walsh said the contest is a showcase for NFL talent and added that they have plenty of incentive to play well.

"It's an important game to the players because they know it's the best against the best," he said. "It's up to us as coaches to use all their great talents."

Seattle's Chuck Knox, guiding the AFC in his fifth Pro Bowl coaching assignment, echoed Walsh's statements, saying: "Pride makes the players play hard in this game. As the coach, you try to let them show their skills, let the players decide the game.'

Wheeler girls' cagers move closer to district crown

By L.D. STRATE Sports Editor

Wheeler's Lady Mustangs are well on their way to clinching their second straight District 1-1A basketball championship after walloping Briscoe. 78-46, Friday night.

The Lady Mustangs are now 5-0 in district action and boosted their overall record to 19-2. Their only losses have been to Borger and Booker.

Melanie Williams, who is averaging 13 points per game this season, hit for 24 against Briscoe. Shawna Hamption, also a 13 ppg scorer, added 16

second-half play Friday

Mustangs' Coach Jan Newland said balanced scoring has offset the mistakes made by her young, talented squad this season.

"We're young and we make always seem to compensate for it," said Newland, who is in her fourth year at Wheeler. "Balanced scoring has been our strength. I've also been pleased with our defense."

Marlo Hartman, only a freshman, leads the club in both scoring (14.0) and rebounding (13.0). The 5-9 Hartman along with Williams and Hampton, both juniors,

43-18, at halftime, began will make the Wheeler girls' basketball program almost as popular as Mustang football next season. Renee Hogue, another starter, also returns next season. Christy Pierce is the only senior starter

Wheeler should win the loop a lot of turnovers, but we title with ease. Samnorwood. considered the district's second-best team, was routed by the Lady Mustangs, 65-28. in an earlier game.

"This is the best Wheeler team I've coached, but we should be even better next year if everything goes okay," Newland said.

Wheeler's season ended last year with a loss to Claude in the bi-district round.

Grant retires as Vikings' head coad

Bud Grant, the stone-faced coach who directed the Super Bowls during his 17-year National Football League career, has retired, the team announced

Grant, 56. "I've enjoyed coaching so much that I never Minnesota Vikings to four looked forward to retirement from my job. I don't have any aspirations to take another coaching job or coach in another league."

Grant flew to Honolulu

"I'm not burned out," said Friday with General Tribune. "I decided this was lives in Honolulu in the off-season.

"In my mind, timing is the most important thing," Grant told the Minneapolis Star and Manager Mike Lynn to tell the time to quit. There wasn't season and postseason Vikings president Max any pressure on me. There victories, making him the Winter his decision. Winter were a lot of things I want to do while I still have my health."

Making your food dollars count

If you're trying to feed a to be flexible in your shopping family on a shoestring budget, it will be easier if you consider the nutritional value. as well as the dollar value of the food you buy. While a cubic yard of Puffed Yummies for only $1.99 may look like a good buy, if it does not contribute to filling your nutritional requirements, you're losing money.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture booklet, Making Food Dollars Count, can help prevent this. It combines nutritious recipes with a balanced meal plan at a low cost. For your copy of Making Food Dollars Count, send 50 cents to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 83, Pueblo, Colo., 81009

No matter what kind of food budget you're on, be sure to plan your daily food intake around the basic four food groups - vegetables and fruits, breads and cereals. dairy products and meat or meat alternatives.

habits and meal plans. Do make a shopping list, but don't decide the final menu until you get to the supermarket. That way you can take advantage of store sales and seasonal prices. Be a careful shopper and you'll be able to substitute lower cost items in each food group that are as good nutritionally as those at higher prices. When selecting meat, however, the price per pound is not always the way to get the best buy. Consider the amount of fat and bone in your purchase. The bone - in cut with a low price per pound may not yield as many servings as a boneless piece of meat at a higher price per pound. You can also substitute dry beans and peas, peanut butter and eggs for meat to vary your menu and reduce costs. These foods provide protein and many of the same nutrients found in

These foods are inexpensive sources of nutrients, and contrary to popular believe, are not high in calories — that is if you can withstand the temptation to top them with sour cream. butter, jams or jelly.

To maintain good health everyone needs to eat a specific number of servings from all four basic food groups every day. And, according to the booklet, don't forget to include snacks when you're planning your family's diet. A peanut butter sandwich, apple and glass of milk, for instance, contains servings from all four groups.

Feb. 2 is the day for the waddling, bucktoothed critter to come out of his burrow and tell us what kind of weather sunny, the ground hog will see his shadow and there will be six more weeks of winter plus poor crops. If the sky is cloudy, there will be shadow. and the ground hog will stay above ground because an early spring is coming.

All of the meteorological clairvoyance belongs to the ground hog because the legends say so. They can be traced to medieval Europe where the hedgehog or German badger predicted the spring weather.

When the German settlers arrived in this country they found no hedgehogs, so they fitted their legends to the ground hog. He most likely sleeps through the whole day. The animal is actually a ground dwelling squirrel who lives only to eat and sleep.

Examine trees and shrubs for winter wind damage, prune out split or broken branches. During the winter it is easy to detect weakened limbs or those that cross and rub. Young saplings should be trained the way they should

To hurry spring, cut branches from forsythia, quinse, pussy willow and others. Place them in a bucket of warm water. Sometimes they are lazy and will take more than two weeks from them to open.

Spray your evergreens with the garden hose occasionally. This is the time for spraying. Miscigle oil spray can be bought locally and will get rid of a lot of your scale

Research on pruning indicates that it is wiser to wait until the coldest part of the winter has passed before getting out the pruning shears and saw. Winterkill begins at the end of the branches. The best course is to waint until most of winter's freezes, ice and snowstorms have passed.

Have had several calls on roses. Don't untie them until late March or the first of April. Warm your shredder and put it to work on the pile of leaves you stashed away in the fall. The chopped - up leaves can be spread on your beds for mulch.

It is time to start your garden diary this month. Don't be afraid to make diagrams that show the kinds of position of various species and varieties. Be sure to keep records of sowing and planting dates, the length of time elapsed befor first appearances, also the dates of transplanting and blooming.

Don't neglect to jot down any other facts or characteristics that appear significant. Such notes can be of great value and pleasure in the future years, guiding and rewarding you at the same time. This is a good way to start your garden year.

As soon as the coldest weather is past, it is time to prune the grapes. If you get in a tree or shrub that have sprouted or broken bud, put them in pots and don't let them freeze. Don't put them outside until the weather has warmed. If you planted snowdrops, they should be up and blooming by the end of

DEAR ABBY: I was once advised that at all costs I should try to keep peace in the family, yet when I'm with my in-laws I feel as though I've landed on another planet. They are the most bigoted people I've ever known. They make their feelings known in many ways. My father-inlaw always has a new "joke" that invariably insults a

Is your hair dull? Do you think perhaps the winter weather has dried out your shiny hair, but you're' not sure? Well, give yourself this test. Take a lock of hair in your hand and rub it between your fingers. If it crackles like static, your hair is too dry - normal hair squeeks, almost like a high-pitched song note. Try the test on both your root area and at the ends - usually the ends are a lot drier. Now that you know the problem, the treatment is easy. Use a shampoo and a conditioner marked for dry hair. Most likely you will find these products to have a low ph level, which will fill in the brittle areas of the hair shaft and smooth over the hair's damaged cuticle. After several washes and conditionings, your hair will be shiny and bouncy again.

of designer labels

County Extension Agent

When you buy clothing, do you buy for status or for value? In the last few years, designer labels have been extremely popular, especially in jeans, knit shirts and accessories. What are you really paying for?

Designer clothing is easily recognized by most of us jeans with a famous person's name attached, shirts with alligators or a polo player or scarves and belts with the designer name attached. Another source of clothing is store brands, house brands or private brands. They usually have the name of a department store, supermarket or mail - order catalog on them.

In many cases, the store brand comes out of the same factory as a name brand, but is less expensive because the manufacturer isn't paying as much for advertising and fancy packaging. A store brand isn't always made by the manufacturer of a well known brand name. It may be made by the store's own plant or by a little - known

A company has to spend money to keep up with the competition. It works constantly to develop new products, test them and come up with faster and better ways of doing things. Anyone who runs a business has general expenses ranging from the cost of pencils to telephone service, and that is called overhead. The price of every product helps to pay for rent, taxes, office furnishings, electricty and other business expenses.

It takes many hands to put a product together and package it, and everyone has to be paid. Labor costs are higher if a product reequires a lot of time, detailed

upset over alien detention center

By PHILIP BRASHER Associated Press Writer

MINERAL WELLS, Texas (AP) - It was the and of news that a military-dependent community ike Mineral Wells learns to dread: the Army was bandoning another base.

Private enterprise, however, saved the day. Electronics manufacturers and oil companies napped up parcels of the Fort Wolters land at pargain-basement prices.

A new form of private enterprise, though, isn't sitting as well with the town.

An Amarillo-based firm. Palo Duro Private Detention Services, wants to turn the base's abandoned barracks into a 600-inmate alien detention center that would be the first privately run federal prison.

Opponents of the plan, including many of the North Central Texas city's business leaders, conjure up images of prison riots. They say their women and children won't be safe at the nearby manufacturing plants or the adjacent state park.

"If 600 people decide to leave that place, five, six or seven guards with night sticks won't be able to stop them," says James Toland, manufacutring manager at a TRW-Optron electronics plant that overlooks the barracks.

"I had a chance to live in a metro area, but I chose to move my family to a small town away from the crime," he said. "The fear of those metro areas is why people chose to live in small towns. They (prison officials) are adding the stigma of

The Federal Bureau of Prisons, which claims the prison will be safe, has thrown the problem into the lap of the town's City Council.

The government decided to seek a private contract for the detention center, because of the time and cost of building a permenent facility, prison bureau spokesman Bill Garrison says.

It costs the government $28 to $30 a day to operate a detention center, but Palo Duro offered the low bid of $21.80 a day to operate the Mineral Wells prison and probably can run it for $22 to $27,

But Garrison said the government will drop its plans for the 25-acre site if the City Council objects. Aliens could be held at the prison for up to 18 months, but most would stay about six, Garrison

About 500 residents, most of whom appeared to oppose the prison, attended a public hearing last week in an auditorium at a branch of Weatherford College, located across the street from the three-story, concrete-block barracks.

A prison bureau official and Palo Duro preident Branch Archer tried to assure the audience that the prison would be safe.

"I realize that's an emotional issue with them, but it (safety) is just not a realistic concern, Garrison said later. "There's no danger to the community.'

The prison would be surrounded by two 8-foot chain-link fences and have two guard towers. Only one of the 15 guards on duty, however, would be armed. Archer said

FREEZE INJURY ON PECANS

Even though we do not have a lot of pecan trees, I thought the following information on possible freeze damage to pecans would be of interest. Our growing conditions are a lot different than the Central Texas pecan country, However, some of the same type of damage can occur here to our pecan trees as well as other landscape plantings

The extended cold period in December resulted in freeze injury to pecan trees across the state. This was especially true on nursery trees and young, fast growing trees Mature trees which were stressed from a heavy crop in 1983 could also have been injured. This is especially true of Barton, Mahan and Wichita varieties.

Growers should inspect Electronic marketing nursery trees before purchasing them. The buds, cambium and crown should be sliced with a very sharp knife to determine if brown tissue exists.

> Young trees or mature trees should not be pruned back until late May in order to determine the extent of Freeze injury can be deceiving, pecan trees which have been frozen frequently bud out and look healthy in April and May. This growth can be six to 12 inches long before it wilts and turns brown in late April and May. The cambium of freeze injured pecan trees will have a brown color and syrup-sugar smell in late April or may.

Pecans may be gorwn as far north as Ontario, Canada, and as far south as Mexico City, Mexico. However, in this wide range they are influenced significantly by winter temperatures. If a pecan tree is completely dormant, it can withstand extreme winter temperatures. However, if the tree is growing in October, Novermber or December when a relatively mild freeze hits, the tree can be damaged.

Pecans have been shown to have a chilling requirement of approximately 600 hours. This is the number of hours below 45 degrees which is usually required to break dormancy. These figures are not obligatory because pecans can be grown in areas receiving less than 600 hours of chilling. They can also be grown in areas receiving much more than 700 hours of chilling.

In a TAMU research project concuted at College Station during 1969 through 1972, the Mahan, Desirable and Stuart varieties were evaluated. These varieties did not begin to grow in a greehouse at 72 degrees until they had received 500 hours for Desirable and Mahan and 600 hours for Stuart

Since the pecan has a relatively low chilling requirement and since the chilling requirement is non-obligatory, it can frequently be very slow in going into the winter rest period and dormancy. Because of this, pecans are subject to early winter freeze.

Cold injury in pecans is due to three types of physiological freeze injury occurs when ice crystals form inside the cell The cell wall and membrance is punctured by crystals during the freezing process. This type of injury normally occurs when a fast freeze hits moving cold front.

-Desiccation injury. During the freezing process water is moved from inside the cell to the intercellular physical injury to the cell protoplasm. As the water moves through the cell, the protein strands are severed and broken. If the freeze is rapid and dehydration occurs in a short period of time, the serious type of freeze injury

-Ice Crystal injury. The least significant means of in conjunction with a rapid spaces. This process dehydrates the cell, causing membreance can also be severed and irreparabley damaged. This is the most

-Flooding injury. After the freeze has occured, injury can be further manifested if the ice thaws quickly. This prevents water from returning into the cell. Consequently the cells are disarranged and float in a pool of water. Freezes which occur early int he fall or late in the spring can be associated with warm temperatures immediately after the freeze with flooding injury resulting Rapid growing pecan trees which are less than seven years of age and are not bearing are especially vulnerable to freeze injury. If these trees are rapid growing in October, November December or January when a freeze occurs, the tree can be killed to the ground. This occurred in Texas in the spring of 1978 in Adnerson, El Paso, Falls, Mitchell and Bandera counties. Very little cool weather had been received to stimulate the onset of dormancy or the winter rest period when a major freeze occurred.

Young pecan trees can also be damaged if late spring freezes occur in April after the trees have begun to grow. This type of injury is less frequent than early fall injury in Texas. The injury is usually to the phloem tissue only and the tree will not be completely killed. New phloem tissue is generated and the bark is characteristically very rough. The bark will have a typcial cauliflower appearance. This type of injury was identified in 1975 and 1978 in Adnerson, Medina and Brown counties. New shoots usually develop following the freeze injury and a health water sprout

Young trees which have a thin bark are also subject to winter sun scald injury. The lower trunk is the last part of the dormant tree to enter the rest period and become fully dormant. If the trunk is exposed to warm temperatures from direct sunlight during December, January and February and followed by a cold freeze during the night hours, the bark of the tree can be killed on the south or southwest side of the tree where the sun hits the tree. This problem is quite prevelant in far west Texas. This problem can be reduced by painting the lower trunk with whitewash to reflect the sunlight

1600 N. Hobart

Pampa

Mature pecan trees were seriously injured by cold temperatures in much of Texas during the 1975-76 and 1977-78 winter periods. The injury occurs during the fully dormat midwinter period. Trees which go into the winter rest period in a weak condition tend to be more seriously damaged. Trees producing a heavy crop such as Mahan or Wichita have been found injured. Trees which are drought stressed at the time of the severe winter freeze also appear to be more frequently injured

Sunshine warms, drys out state agriculture

COLLEGE STATION. Texas (AP) - Sunshine returned to most of Texas at mid-week, helping warm and dry out pastures and fields that had received snow, freezing rain or drizzle and hampered livestock feeding operations for many days.

The milder temperatures also brightened the outlook for recovery of many wheat pastures, still suffering from the late December record-shattering cold wave that laid waste to native pastures and severely damaged small grain crops. said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter. director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Texas A&M

University System

Although wheat started to make progress, Texas farmers and ranchers began upping their estimates on winter-kill of oat fields. In many areas it appears that the entire crop may be lost. Ranchers also continued their heavy feeding schedules of hay and protein for their livestock, and this is putting severe pressure on existing hay supplies in many areas, Carpenter said.

Despite the heavy feeding schedules which are increasing feed bills and marketing of animals in many areas, other cattle continue to lose condition. Above average death losses are being reported by some stocker operators, and many newborn calves have succumbed to the sub-freezing temperatures and continuing dampness of this past week. Respiratory and other herd health problems are being noted in some areas.

Growers in Smith County have estimated that approximately $10 million worth of ornamentals and roses were killed or damaged by the late December freeze. Elsewhere, freeze damage assessments are continuing for other crops.

In the Rio Grande Valley, very little processing fruit is being harvested due to deteriorating quality, and no fresh fruit shipments have been made. The sugarcane harvest is progressing, along with limited harvest of broccoli, cabbage and carrots. Winter Garden area farmers are hand-harvesting carrots to take advantage of increased prices, and spinach fields are regrowing satisfactorily. Replanting of onions killed by the freeze

PANHANDLE: Some beneficial moisture in the form of light snow was received during the past week, but moisture is still short. Grazing conditions continue very poor due to snow cover and dormancy of the wheat crop. Cattle feeding has been heavy, and stockers have made very slow gain. Some sickness reported in SOUTH PLAINS: Adequate moisture reported over most of district. All crops are now harvested, but land preparation has been slowed cold weather. Farmers are hurrying to make up for lost time as warmer, sunny days arrived briefly this week. Heavy supplemental feeding continues for range cattle. ROLLING PLAINS: Light blowing snow provided only a trace of moisture but hampered agricultural operations across the Rolling Plains. Unseasonably cold weather late last week again stopped wheat growth and caused stockmen to sharpen their axes in order to cut ice so that livestock could obtain drinking water. Some scattered bales of cotton still remain in fields. Pecan trees in Knox County are suffering from freeze damage. Some livestock weight loss continues, despite heavy

NORTH CENTRAL: Wheat plants, burned by recent low temperatures, are starting to show some signs of recovery, but most of the oat crop was killed by the cold. Some counties are reporting short hay supplies as heavy feeding of livestock continues. Extremely cold temperatures also killed most vegetables in the area, and many pecan trees were damaged by snow and the cold. Some cattle fields are greening up slightly after receiving serious setbacks from the December freeze, but most oat crops show no signs of recovery. The condition of cattle continues to decline, although owners are providing heavy hay feedings which are depleting local supplies. Numbers of cattle going to market is up despite price declines. In Smith County, growers estimate that about $10 million worth of roses and ornamentals were killed or damaged by the December growth continues to be hampered by sub-freezing temperatures, and the cold weather has virtually halted all agricultural operations throughout the district. Some producers report adequate moisture, which could encourage growth of winter weeds for sheep feeding if the weather warms sufficiently.

WEST CENTRAL Moisture is mostly adequate in northern counties and short in the southern half of district. Temperatures which hovered below the freeze level for long hours havedamaged small grain crops. Pastures need warmer weather to provide growth for winter weeds and grasses.

A two-day Estate Planning Seminar will be held at the Rustic Inn Restaurant meeting room in Pampa Feb. 7-8. This is similar to the prgram held last year. We heard many nice comments about the value of the ideas and tax savings methods discussed.

Dr. Wayne Hayenga. Extension economist and project group supervisor in farm management, will present the program. In addition, he is an attorney and has an excellent background to assist farmers, ranchers and agri-business people in developing estate plans to save taxes. He will give you several ideas and methods to lower your estate tax burden. The program will start at 9 a.m. and conclude around

4:30 each day. The registration fee is $10 which includes both noon meals, refreshments and materials, and can be paid at the door. Preregistration is needed by Feb. 6. Please call 669-7428 or come by the County Extension office. TRANSMISSIBLE GASTROENTERITIS

The LRL Weekend Workshop, March 9-11, welcomes all volunteers who are involved in recreation programs such as: Boy Scout. Girl Scout and Campfire leaders; 4-H and Youth Leaders; church youth and adult leaders; hospital volunteers; nursing home and senior citizen volunteers: Big Brothers and Big Sisters; recreation students; special population volunteers and Extension homemakers.

The LRL Weekend Workshop is a training opportunity designed specifically for volunteers who are actively involved in planning and conducting camping programs for youth and adults

This informative and enjoyable workshop will bring together persons, 16 and over, from a wide variety of recreation programs for a stimulating exchange of ideas and techniques. Volunteers will take home newly developed skills and ideas to share with others in their communities.

Longhorn Recreation Lab is a self sustaining, non-profit workshop with no formal affiliation with any organization or group. The Board of Directors, elected from the lab membership, is responsible for program development and administration of the lab.

The LRL Lab will be conducted at the 4-H Center in Brownwood. The cost per person is $50, which includes room, board, insurance and one copy of the resource manual which contains instruction material presented by the resource people in their sessions.

For more information contact the Gray County Extension office. Deadline for reservations is Feb. 28.

GRAY COUNTY 4-H'ERS PARTICIPATE IN FUTURITY

Several Gray County 4-H'ers exhibited their livestock projects at the Bob Skaggs Memorial Futurity held Jan. 21-22. Some of the placing exhibitors were:

In the American Breed Class of the Steer Show, Shawn Hunter placed third. Cody Gable placed second with his exotic breed, light weight steer, and Willie Cross place sixth in the medium heavy class of Exotic Breed

crosses, Julia Graham place figth and Trent Watons ninth. And to finish up the placings, Julia Graham placed sixth in the medium weight cross class. 4 - H DEMONSTRATE LEARNING, SHARING The 4-H achievement program encourages young persons from nine to 19 to give their time and talents to a variety of individual and group service activities.

The program is conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System, and is sponsored by the Ford Motor Company Fund.

The young achievers may work with low-income adults and children in expanded food-nutrition programs. Or they may volunteer their after-school and weekend hours as candy stripers in local hospitals, provide companship to the aged and assistance to the mentally

Whatever activity 4-H'ers chose, their dedication to serve others is an outgrowth of the learn-by-doing situations they encounter in the 4-H program. 4-H projects stress practical skills that contribute to personal growth

4-H PROGRAMS KEYS ON CAREERS, BETTER HEALTH

Across the country thousands of young people are taking an active interest in improving their health habits and the health standards of their communities.

Through the national 4-H health programs, 4-H'ers participate in activities emphasizing the importance of good personal health habits.

4-H'ers in the 4-H health program, working as individuals and groups, participate in activities where they learn the importance of basic personal hygiene, proper health maintenance and disease prevention. In addition, career possibilities in health-related fields, such as medicine, food processing and public health are stressed in the program.

Kraft Inc. and Eli Lilly and Company, program sponsors, provide incentive and recognition to outstanding individuals and groups in the 4-H health program. Medals are awarded to 4-H'ers in each county, plus an expense-paid trip to National 4-H Congress in Chicago is awarded an outstanding winner from each state.

During the annual 4-H event, eight national winners are announced, with each receiving a $1,000 scholarship, courtesy of the sponsors.

Master of humanities degree added at LSU

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) courses - and not disrupt a - Louisiana State University regular profession. is searching for mid-career professionals who want to become Renaissance men and women

The university is offering a master of arts degree in the humanities

"This is about being a better person. What it amounts to is a degree in personal enrichment," said Fred Youngs, history professor and coordinator of the program.

The program is designed to appeal to the mature student who earned his bachelor's degree years ago, but now wants to add new depth or fresh perspectives to his education, career or family

"It's a chance to go back to school and pick up the things that maybe you rushed by the first time around, didn't fully appreciate then or later found that you wished you had taken," said Youngs.

The program is designed so a degree candidate can take as few as six hours a semester - all in night

We envision most candidates taking five or six semsters to complete requirements because they'd be taking only a few classes each semester," Youngs said.

"Saying were trying to create more Renaissance men and women in what many call the age of specialization is a good way of describing the program,' he said.

The so-called Renaissance man is a highly cultured individual who is skilled and well-versed in many fields, ideally with some knowledge in all the arts and sciences.

Among the first courses the new graduate students take is a seminar on the meaning and interrelationship of the humanities and the place of humanities in the community, Youngs said.

"This is a non-traditional academic program," he said. 'It's characterized by flexibility and the approach is interdisciplinary, allowing the student to select from a wide range of courses."

As an example, he said a person who moved to the South might be interested in knowing more about the culture of the region.

politics and pick up courses in southern literature and architecture. He wouldn't have to be bound to just one area," said Youngs.

Students can choose from any one of four concentrated study areas

-Arts and performance which include art and music, speech, English, journalism and architecture

-Letters and thought with a focus on English, speech, philosphy and the romance and classical languages.

FORMER OWNER-Ernest Goodman, 84, of Ringling, Okla. stands among dusty shelves of automobile parts at the G&G Service Station. Goodman recently sold the station, which has been part of his livelihood for 60 years, to a local church which plans to turn it into a parking lot.

'Full service' station closing "He could take courses in southern history, southern after 60 years at one location

By C.A. FULLER Daily Ardmoreite

RINGLING, Okla. (AP) - Ernest Goodman's Texaco in Ringling neve: was much to look at, but it always had a warm fire going in the winter and a pitcher of ice water for customers in the summertime.

Goodman never turned off the air and water hoses and he left the front door open for customers whenever he had to run up to the bank or the store up the street.

When Goodman and his brother bought the station in 1924, they sold gasoline at six gallons for $1. When he closed up for the last time Saturday, after nearly 60 years of business at the same corner, regular was going for $1.19 and unleaded for

The 84-year-old businessman decided a few months back that he would run the Texaco until October 1984, at which time he'd have put in 60 years. But his faltering eyesight and the bitter cold spell that hit in December changed Goodman's mind. He moved the close-up date to the first of the year.

"I chickened out from January to October," he said. "I was just a few months short of 60 years - didn't quite make it, but at least the years count up to 60. I started in 1924 and closed in

From the day he purchased the station until 1931, he pumped the gasoline produced by the George Jolly Oil Co. in Wilson. In 1931, he switched to Texaco products and sold nothing else for Texaco sent a couple of representatives down this month to honor Goodman and his accomplishments. "They said they didn't know of another Texaco dealer who had been in the cation for as long as I have," he said as he, long-time buddy Reed Kyker and son, Harry, sat around the fire at the station one last time to swap stories.

The station and the property it sits on have been sold to the First Baptist Church across the street. Plans call for the station to be bulldozed and turned into a parking lot.

"I came pert near to backing out on the deal when I found out what was going to happen to it," he said. "I told the people who were buying it that they were getting themselves a real good building there. They said, "Well, that doesn't matter. We're going to bulldoze it down anyway."

That was a big lump for Goodman to swallow, considering he's spent about half a lifetime pumping gas, fixing flats and swapping tales at the little station that's probably one of a handful around the state where a brand new set of clutch plates for a 1935 Ford can still be found.

Goodman sold just about everything in the station to the church. Fan belts and air filters still line the walls and hundreds of parts fill the dusty shelves.

"I guess they (the church) can give them to the family who brought the most people to church or drove the farthest to get there," he said.

Goodman isn't the only person saddened to see the station closing. His oldest and most respected customers have repeatedly questioned his decision to close since they first heard the rumor

'The customers don't like it any better than I do," he said. Several elderly widow women became dependent on me taking care of their cars. They've been asking me, 'What am I going to do now with you gone?

The majority of his customers "are getting up around my age," Goodman said. Some of them, like Kyker, have been trading at the station for 50 years.

"Young customers don't want to trade with you if you don't run fast enough," he said. "And, I don't run as fast as I used

He may not be as quick to get to the gas pumps as he once was, but until he pumped his last tankful this month, Goodman was the epitome of a full-service gas attendant. That's what kept customers coming back year after year after year. And, if they didn't need a fill-up, they'd just stop by to talk.

"Old George Henderson would always park under the porch when it rained. And I'd have to go out and stand in the rain to pump gas while his car sat under the roof," Goodman recalled. "I never complained about his parking in the drive-way, though. But, he could tell the longest stories."

G and G Service Station itself always was a one-man that he and his partner, Shirley Turner, made work for the

Turner, a young man when he first came to the station, started doing odd jobs there before he finally started working on people's cars. Goodman saw that Turner had the makings of a good mechanic, and offered him a place in the back of the

"He worked for himself. He didn't pay me any rent - no commision." Goodman said. "I ran the station and he ran the shop. It helped my business to sell all the parts that went in the cars he worked on. And, that's the way we operated 'till he passed away. There never was a bit of trouble.

Ernest Goodman never had trouble with anyone. When he would run up the street on an errand, he would often come back and find a note that said so-and-so got $10 worth of

Executive swapping between Britian and United States on the upswing

LONDON (AP) — Trans-Atlantic swapping of top executives nationality. From a language point of view, it's obvious for is on the upswing between the United States and Great Britain as talent becomes more important than nationality.

American executives are breathing new life into several British companies, including the multinational British Oxygen Co. and the health care and household products conglomerate LRC International

British executives who cut their commercial teeth in the United States have returned home to tackle the sagging fortunes of state-owned British Steel and British Airways and the computer giant ICL with American management know-how

And British chief executives have gone to the United States for top posts with American giants, such as Dennis Fill with Squibb, Edward Jefferson of DuPont, and Harry Taylor with Manufacturers Hanover bank.

"I think without a doubt we're going to see more and more trans-Atlantic trade of executives," said Harry Cressman, director of the American Chamber of Commerce in Britain. The top-level talent swaps have replaced two trends - the British brain drain of the 1960s and '70s and the worldwide flood of American executives working at all levels for big multinationals in the 1950s and '60s.

Thousands of trained Britons started moving across the Atlantic 25 years ago to escape high taxes and to seek opportunity for quicker advancement in the higher-paying U.S. market. But Cressman said the brain drain ended when Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government came to power in 1979 on a platform of less state interference in business and lower taxes.

"American companies are using far less expatriates to run businesses, not just in Britain but all over Europe, because an American expatriate is a very expensive person. U.S. companies have gone a long way to get British people trained along American management styles," Cressman said.

Currently, the British operations of companies like Ford, IBM, TWA, Gillette and National Cash Register are all headed by Englishmen, with very few American employees.

"Now, what we're getting is senior Americans coming here and top British executives going to the States," Cressman "It's something that's been coming into the system for the Britons and Americans to interchange.

Larry Langley, a former Royal Air Force pilot who is TWA's chief executive in Britain, said nationality became less important with the arrival of the jet age and the 10-nation European Community's removal of the need for work permits. Americans and Europeans taking up residence on the other side of the Atlantic still need work permits.

"Communications and the interchange of people are now so rapid that I'm as home in Scottsdale, Ariz., as I am in Guildford, England. I have no difficulty switching from driving on the right to the left," he said. "I think of myself very much as an Anglo-American.'

At the top, American salaries are still the pacesetters and the price has to be right to attract the best brains

Britain's highest-paid executive is Richard Giordano, a 49-year-old American who was lured from the States by British Oxygen. He earned $730,100 last year - an $80,500 pay cut from the previous year because of a switch from an annual bonus to a stock option.

Since Giordano arrived in 1979, British Oxygen's pre-tax profits have grown from $102 million to $134 million in 1983.

It took $210,000, a $35,000 "disturbance allowance," the option of 1.4 million cut-price company shares and other perks to lure British executive Robb Wilmot from U.S.-owned Texas Instruments to crisis-torn ICL. In two years, Wilmot and a new chairman have turned the computer company around. But British and American executives say it's also the challenge that counts. Barbara Thomas, the 37-year-old former commissioner of the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, told London's Financial Times she turned down several lucrative jobs in the states to join the 134-year-old British merchant bank Samuel Montagu because "Montagu is a shooting star."

Colin Marshall, lured to America 20 years ago with a job offer from the car rental firm Hertz, gave up a high-paying job as president of Avis last year to return home and take on the challenge of putting British Airways on a money-making course for just $123,000.

The difference in style seems to benefit both sides. American business is theory- and management-oriented while Britain's is less scientific and still heavily reliant on last 10 years — the cross-fertilization of talents regardless of practical experience.

Tide and time, wind and sea are nibbling at the coastline and the Lone Star State is slowly shrinking, inch by inch.

In some areas, the loss is just barely perceptible.

But on other beaches, the shoreline retreats before the hungry tide at a rate of over three feet a month.

Longtime Texans, returning to Galveston or to Surfside or to Padre Island after years of absence, are startled to find missing some of the beaches they knew as sun-kissed children. Vast sandy stretches - once the province of sand castles, pods of sunbathers and ranks of unbrellas - now are awash, lost beneath the waters of the Gulf of Mexico.

Scores of houses that once stood beside the sea are now part of it. Roads have been washed out, small inlets have become large bays. Islands have grown smaller and some have been cut in two by the

This process continues daily, but powerful hurricanes, such as Alicia last August, are particularly damaging.

"It's amazing what a 12-foot tide will do to a little ole bit of sand," said Mark Sweatt, operator of the Sandy Hook stables on the west beach of Galveston Island.

He looks across a few acres of sand toward brand new fence posts he built just recently to take in what is left of his horse lot.

'We had 40 acres here in 1975 and now we're down to about six," he said. "We had a 40-by-60 barn about where the fence is and Alicia took it out. Before that, another storm took out a concession stand and another barn."

He shook his head in wonder at his shrinking empire: "If it keeps up, we'll have to move."

According to the experts, it will keep happening.

Robert Morton of the Bureau of Economic Geology at the University of Texas and Mike Kieslich of the Corps of Engineers in Galveston have studied the changing coastline of Texas. They believe the natural processes of wind and tide will keep chewing up beaches no matter what man tries to Kieslich said Hurricane Alicia cut away up to 200 feet of Galveston at San Luis pass and part of the island lost four feet of vertical elevation. The lost land, he said, is gone

"There's a long term trend of erosion on Galveston Island," he said. "I don't expect the beach will rebuild itself significantly. The Gulf is advancing."

Sand is being swept away on both sides of Galveston Island, he said. The surf skims away sand from the beaches on the Gulf side, and curents carry off soil from the mainland side of the island.

Galveston loses five to 10 feet of shoreline a year. Some years, sand is added, only to be swept away later by storms. But over the decades. he said, "there's a net loss."

Morton said the loss of beach is even more dramatic on the Matagorda Peninsula or near Sargent's Beach in Matagorda County

"Rows of houses have been lost in that area and the erosion is progressing at up to 40 feet a year," said Morton. A highway on Bolivar

Peninsula, he said, has repeatedly been washed out and parts of Padre Island also are disappearing into the

The scientists said the erosion is part of a natural force that can not be halted, no more than man can control earthquakes, stop volcanoes

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) or slow the seasons. It is all a part of the continuing, forever changing evolution of the Earth's land form.

"You cannot overcome this problem - it's simply too big," said Morton. "If you build some grandiose barrier, drawing a line in the sand and say 'it will stop here', it will beat you. You'll still lose the Only 18,000 years ago, short by geologic time, said Morton, what is now the Texas coast line extended another 80 to 100 miles out into the Gulf. Where Galveston is now was part of an inland plain.

In the vast sweep of the planet's history, he said, 'that wasn't that long ago. It was in the era of the pyramid building and there could have been people living in Texas then.

The sea level dropped about 5,000 years ago, said Morton, and Galveston and the other barrier islands were formed, nourished by sand and sediment carried down Texas rivers and carried along the coast by currents. But in the last 4,000 years or so, the islands and the coastline have slowly eroded.

Man is partially to blame. but the human effect has only accelerated a natural process, he said.

Dams on rivers reduced the silt carried to the sea. Barriers along the coast have blocked the current that can carry fresh sand from river mouth to the beaches. Dredging and levees have changed the natural flow that helped build some beaches.

But even these effects were puny in the face of Nature's restless, powerful forces.

"The erosion is accelerating through time," said Morton. "It's going at a much more rapid rate now. The sea level is creeping up and there's a natural subsidence occurring."

Some islands, Morton said, are losing beach area on the Gulf side and gaining soil on the inland side. At the same time, the mainland shore of lagoons are losing soil. The net effect, said Morton, is that the harrier islands and the inland. These islands will persist, he said, but over hundreds of years they actually will change their location dramatically.

The changes of coastline are not recognized in Texas land law and about 100 coastal residents, who once owned houses well back of the public beaches, now find their structures actually may be on what is defined as public

In Texas, public beaches are those areas between the low tide surf and the permanent vegetation line. But, as Morton noted, there is no such thing as "a permanent vegetation line" on the Texas coast

I am home in Heaven, dear ones; Oh so happy and so bright. There is perfect joy and beauty in this everlasting light. All the pain and grief is over. Every restless tossing passed; I am now at peace forever Safely home in Heaven at last. Did you wonder I so calmly Trod the valley of the shade? Oh, but Jesus' love illumed Every dark and fearful glade. And he came himself to meet me in the way so hard to tread; And with Jesus' arm to lean on Could I have one doubt or dread? Then you must not grieve so sorely For I love you dearly still. Try to look beyond death's shadows. Pray to trust our Father's will. There is work still waiting for you so you must not idly stand. Do it now while life remaineth you shall rest in Jesus' land. When that work is all completed, He will gently call you Home Oh the ranture MINI STORAGE All new concrete panel buildings, corner Naida Street and Borger Highway. 10x10, 10x15, 10x20, 10x30. 'Professional Color Analysis will dramatically change your life. Watch as the 'correct colors' instantly cause your eyes to brighten, your skin to glow..." Jinger Heath, Chairman

Color Analysis is revolutionizing the fashion and beauty industry. Every woman knows she looks better in certain colors, but often doesn't know why. Professional Color Analysis reveals your individual "coloration" and pinpoints your best makeup and wardrobe colors. Every woman who discovers Color Analysis wants it, and some are paying anywhere from $50 to over $150 to "color companies" for this service.

Now you can be Color Analyzed in the convenience of your own home. Call today to find out how you can get your Free Color Analysis and receive your own Free Color Book, a life-time guide to help you select your correct makeup and wardrobe colors.
