

Recount reverses outcome in Hemphill County tax assessor race

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

CANADIAN — One vote can make a difference

In a recount of votes for Hemphill County tax assessor-collector Monday, challenger Gladene Woodside overtook incumbent JoAnn Halliburton to win election by one vote, 324 to 323. Original returns in the June 2 run-off had Halliburton leading by two votes, 324 to 322.

"It reversed itself by one vote," Hemphill County Clerk Jerry Sandefur said following the recount. "Woodside gained two votes, giving her 324. Halliburton lost one vote."

Both candidates were present at the recount.

"Isn't it heartbreaking for both of them," Sandefur said, adding that the official tallies make Woodside the new assessor "unless someone writes-in during the November general election."

After the recount was confirmed Woodside said she "was elated and relieved."

Recalling the tension during the slow recount process, Woodside observed "there was more pressure there than I realized."

"I didn't know what to expect," she added. "It was down to the very end before I knew for sure. I had confidence in the people who were doing the counting."

Although she faces no Republican or independent candidate in the November general election, Woodside is waiting until the November election is over before she'll claim victory. She does not know of any possible write-in candidates. If her position is secured, she'll take office in January.

Still, Woodside says she'll be doing some study on county tax procedure. She hopes the current staff in the assessor's office will help her before she officially takes office.

Halliburton kept her chin up following the recount.

"That's the way it happens," Halliburton conceded. "I hope I can accept it gracefully."

Halliburton became assessor when the Hemphill county tax office split from the sheriff's office in 1978. She was elected to the office in 1980.

What she does now, she says is "up to my family and I."

"It's just a decision my family and I will have to make," she said.

After the run-off, Halliburton expressed dismay at the low voter turnout, noting that only 25 percent of county voters showed up at the polls. She added that there was a low turnout at the May 6 primary.

"I was disappointed by the low turnout then and I still am," she said. "I don't think there is an elected official who wants to win by a margin that was not wide."

Hemphill County Democratic chairman Ray Byard confirmed the results of the recount Monday. The recount, which began at 9 a.m. and ended by noon, was conducted by three people not associated with either candidate.

"There were two boxes (from Precincts 1 and 2 in Canadian) where we had discrepancies from the run-off," he said. "So we counted the boxes twice to make dang sure they were right."

"It's very easy to miss three votes," he added.

After the results were counted and certified, they were sent to the Texas secretary of state's office.

Byard said that with these votes final, "there cannot be another recount."

Sandefur said that the election results may be contested through district court.

"But I don't know if that applies to a recount," she said. "The election law just says the results of any election."

Halliburton says she has no plans to contest the results.

Democratic officials in Hemphill County had another recount task Monday as they retallied the ballots in the U.S. Senate run-off between Kent Hance of Lubbock and Lloyd Doggett of Austin. Other area counties also had U.S. Senate recounts Monday.

According to Sandefur, Hance gained one vote in the recount, giving him 514 votes while Doggett stayed at 111.

County officers in Carson county said Monday's recount turned up nothing different from the June 2 run-off, which gave Hance 912 to Doggett's 125.

Heat, rain problems

By RON SIRAK
Associated Press Writer

A blistering heat wave that has claimed at least 10 lives clung to the Northeast today, with only a faint promise of a break from stifling temperatures and wilting humidity that closed schools and drained water and electricity supplies.

In the Midwest, meanwhile, violent thunderstorms pounded away with heavy rain and flung two dozen tornadoes at Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa, the National Weather Service said.

Two dozen tornadoes raced across Nebraska, Kansas and Iowa on Monday, the National Weather Service said. Thunderstorms packing winds gusting to 65 mph fired baseball-sized hail and dumped up to 4 inches of rain at Wauneta and Cairo in Nebraska.

A sizzling preview of summer continued Monday from Virginia to New England, breaking temperature records for the date. In Baltimore, the mercury hit 100 degrees at 2 p.m., shattering a mark for the date that was set in 1911. Boston reached a record 98, New York City, Washington, D.C., and Richmond, Va., hit 97, and Atlantic City and Newark, N.J., saw 96.

Marks were also set in Bridgeport. See WEATHER, Page two

Hispanics fight law prohibiting hiring of aliens

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, trying to curb the influx of foreigners sneaking across America's borders in search of work, turned today to the question of whether hiring an illegal alien should be against the law.

At the heart of an immigration control bill before the House is a proposal designed to cut the flow of illegal aliens. For the first time, it would subject employers who hire undocumented workers to penalties — fines or even imprisonment.

Foes of the legislation, primarily Hispanics, argue this will lead to wholesale job discrimination against anyone who looks foreign because employers would be fearful of the sanctions.

The opponents suffered a 291-111 defeat Monday in their attempt to prevent the chamber from even considering the bill, and said they would try to remove the penalties provision from the measure.

As an alternative, they have suggested amendments to beef up enforcement of the labor laws that deal with the minimum wage, maximum hours, child labor and safety and health standards.

He said he and his Hispanic colleagues planned a section-by-section attempt to modify the bill and expected debate to last the entire week.

Under existing law, it is illegal to hire an undocumented worker and proponents of the bill see that as the magnet that has drawn the estimated 3 million to 6 million illegal aliens to this country.

Under the bill, an employer who knowingly hires an illegal alien would be subject first to a warning and thereafter a fine of $1,000 per employee for the first offense, $2,000 for the second. Subsequent violations could mean a penalty of $3,000 or a year in jail or both.

City approves bonds for two new clinics

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Pampa city commissioners approved the issuance of Amarillo Health Facilities Corporation development bonds for the construction of two health care facilities in Pampa during their regular meeting this morning.

The issuance of the bonds, permitted by the state Health Facilities Development Act of 1981, requires city approval for the location of facility projects within the city.

Steve Dalrymple, Amarillo lawyer, said the bonding authority would remain with the AHFC, with no financial obligation occurring to the city.

The AHFC plans to construct a dental clinic and a physicians clinic in the city under the authority of a local dentist and three local physicians. The corporation plans to issue $350,000 in bonds for the dental clinic and $585,000 for the physicians clinic.

The physicians clinic will be operated by the Pampa Medical Development Association, Inc.

Dalrymple explained the tax exempt bonds will provide lower costs of financing for the clinics, leading to lower health care costs for patients.

The physicians clinic will be designed to provide services currently available only at the local hospital, including laboratory facilities, comprehensive X-ray equipment and minor surgery procedures. Such operations can cut down hospitalization costs, Dalrymple noted.

City Attorney Don Lane explained the AHFC bonds are similar to industrial development bonds. City approval is required, but the costs will be borne by the developers.

Commissioner Clyde Carruth said cheaper costs in such facilities should be passed on to the people "or it's just a shot in the dark toward cutting back medical costs for patients."

Commissioner David McDaniel, with the approval of the other commissioners, abstained from voting on the dental clinic bonds since he has a vested interest in the project.

In other business, the commission authorized the city's application for Texas Community Development Program grant funds for paving of streets in the southeast section of the city.

Public Works Director Allyn Moore said the project, if approved by the Texas Department of Community Affairs, would allow paving of the more reasonable street arteries and solve some drainage problems in the area.

The commissioners authorized payments to Lewis Construction Co. of Pampa of $125,428.80 for street repairs completed in the northern sections of the city and $14,850 for purchase of materials for seal coating projects.

Forrest Cloyd, Engineering Department technician-engineer, reported repairs in the northern sections are nearly completed. Seal coating of the sections north of Harvester St will begin in July, with repairs continuing throughout the city.

Math biggest problem for Miami students

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

MIAMI — Third graders here are tops in reading and 'ritin' while fifth and ninth graders need work in 'rithmetic, according to Texas Assessment of Basic Skills test scores.

Miami school counselor Ken Baxter showed the test scores to trustees at their regular meeting Monday night. The TABS tests are given to third, fifth and ninth graders to determine their mastery of reading, writing and mathematics.

"The tests determine what students should master before graduation," Baxter told board members. "Our main area of concern is mathematics."

According to Baxter, TABS officials believe that students who fall below the 85 percentile (meaning they score better than 85 percent of other students) in certain areas of the test need help with their work. Those who fall above the 85 percentile "master" the subject.

He added that most textbooks in Texas are geared toward TABS mastery and to expect more of this type testing.

Out of 21 ninth graders tested in TABS math, 19 mastered the tests while two had to retake the test. In reading, all students exceeded the 85 percentile.

In writing, correct English usage, some ninth graders fell below the 85 percentile.

"This year, the students had to write a letter to the school board president to say whether they support girls in summer baseball," he said. "The students did quite well except that two forgot to put their names and forgot the salutation."

He added that this year, the standards are higher on the writing test. The test gets tougher each year.

Baxter pointed out that fifth graders seem to need help in geometrical terms and place value in math, and identifying the main ideas of paragraphs in reading. They mastered all of adding and dividing whole numbers, reading facts and penmanship.

Third graders scored in the 100 percentile in reading and writing and in the 89 percentile in math.

U.S. families' weekly earning up by 7.5 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The weekly earnings of an estimated 40.3 million American families with one or more breadwinners averaged $488 in the first quarter, up 7.5 percent from $453 during the same period in 1983, the government reports.

Over half of these families contained at least two wage-earners.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics said. It added that the average wage and salary earnings of these multi-earner families, at $648, were more than twice those of single-earner families.

The earnings of families maintained by women — $280 a week — continued to be a little more than half the earnings of married-couple families, which averaged $530 a week, the report said.

The report, based on a survey of 60,000 U.S. households, said that in instances where the husband was unemployed and the wife was the only worker, usual weekly earnings averaged $203. But when the wife was jobless and the husband was the lone breadwinner, the usual weekly earnings averaged $342, it said.

The "usual weekly earnings" of individual full-time wage and salary males averaged between $325 and $400.

The average weekly earnings of people with full-time jobs rose 5.4 percent in the first quarter.

Lefors takes action to solve water woes

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

LEFORS — The Lefors City Council will have the second public hearing on proposed improvements in the city's water system at 8 p.m. Tuesday, June 19, as part of the steps toward making application for Texas Community Development Program grant funds.

Council members met Monday night with Gary Pitner and Linda Allen, representatives of the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission, and Gene Barber, city engineer, to discuss final steps in making the application for the TDCP funds.

The program, administered by the Texas Department of Community Affairs, is funded by federal money being passed down to the states for use by cities and counties. Texas has been divided into 24 regions. The 25-county Panhandle region has been allotted $1,369,000 this year of the approximately $45 million available to the state. Pitner noted.

The council will be applying for funds to make improvements in the city's water system to meet current and future needs.

Barber noted the city faces problems with its water wells, water storage facilities and future water supply. Some equipment may soon be wearing out, with damages likely occurring from salts in the water supply, he said. Lefors also needs to seek additional water rights to insure continued supplies for expected increase usage in the near future, he said.

Councilmen have been discussing the need to develop a long-range water plan for the past several months.

"We'd be in sad shape if one of our wells went out," Mayor Ben White said. "In other matters, Mayor White signed and issued a declaration designating Sunday as Citizens Appreciation Day for the Lefors U.S. Post Office. The declaration was made in conjunction with the Post Office's scheduled open house from 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday.

Postmaster Norma McBee said the office will have the reception for individuals and families served by the Lefors Post Office as part of its activities for Postal Customer Appreciation Day.

In his declaration, Mayor White ordered "this day to be set aside for Postmaster Norma McBee and the U.S. Postal Service to show appreciation to Citizens of Lefors."

McBee told councilmen the open house will allow citizens to see all the facilities of the office. In addition, a registration table will be set up and light refreshments will be served.

"You've been most cooperative with us," she said. "It's certainly a pleasure to serve our citizens."

Councilmen discussed aspects of providing water service to a group of residents living north of Lefors outside the city limits.

Mayor White said the group had agreed to pay costs of installing the line. When completed, the system will be dedicated to the city, which will take over its maintenance.

Councilwoman Betty Hannon said she had been informed the group was ready to begin installing the water line soon.

City Attorney Mark Buzzard said the city would have the responsibility of insuring proper water pressure to the area. He said there might be questions about whether the city or the residents should provide fire hydrants for use in the area.

Buzzard also noted there might be questions concerning right of easement along the road where the line will be laid. The mayor said he understood the road belonged to the county. Buzzard said the group needs to make certain they have county permission to lay the line.

The city attorney said the city also needs to make certain easements and titles to the line are properly obtained.

before the city accepts dedication of the line. Councilmen also considered problems that might arise from the number of residents using the 3-inch line in the area. Mayor White said apparently no more than a dozen houses would be on the line. In that case, no problems should arise with water pressure, he said. But such problems could develop if more houses are attached to the line, he said. Councilmen agreed they should consider limiting the number of taps

Legal expert says poor schools likely to win in equalization suit

AUSTIN (AP) — A University of Houston legal expert says the odds are better than 50-50 that the tax-poor school districts that have challenged the state's public school financing system will win their lawsuit.

Professor Richard Strahan said if the eight districts were his clients, he would tell them their "potential for success" is "55-45 or 60-40."

Strahan, a professor of educational leadership who has a law degree, said one problem with the lawsuit is that it deals not with "total deprivation" but asks the court to contrast "poor quality with better quality (education), and that is difficult to deal with legally."

He said suits that have been successful in attacking state financial systems have stated that the wealth of a local school district should be minimized and the wealth of the entire state should be considered.

Strahan on Monday joined state education commissioner Raymond Bynum, Dallas school superintendent Linus Wright and Jared Hazleton of the Texas Research League in presenting their views on education to the Texas Senate.

The 31-member Senate met as a committee, then broke for lunch, followed by subcommittee sessions on public education, one of two major topics before the Legislature in special session.

Bynum said he was "greatly concerned with a potential teacher shortage." He said researchers have estimated that Texas will need more than 14,000 new teachers each year between now and the year 2000, and last year state colleges graduated only 9,000 teachers.

"The pay issue has to remain paramount in the attraction of teachers," Bynum said.

He also cautioned senators against neglecting "regular pupils" in attending to the needs of exceptionally bright students or students requiring special care, such as the retarded.

Wright, with 36 years of experience in public education, said 95 percent of the students are "capable of learning" if given the proper setting.

Asked about comments by H. Ross Perot, chairman of a special committee on public education, that the state was not doing a good job using education funds, Wright said, "I would agree that we're not doing as good of a job as we can in spending $8 billion."

Wright said, however, "I feel it will be necessary" to put more money into teacher salaries and aid to poorer districts to raise the quality of education.

Bynum was asked if merging some of Texas' 1,071 school districts might help in efforts to achieve quality education, and the commissioner said, "I don't think there's any doubt about that."

But he said the Legislature would have to provide more financial incentives for districts to merge, because "people feel very strongly about their independent school districts."

"I do not envy you," Bynum told senators. "It's quite a task ahead of you."

"It's not an easy task you face," said Hazleton, "but it's a very vital task."

Seniority plans upheld by court

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court said today that "last-hired, first-fired" seniority plans may not be scrapped when hard times hit to protect affirmative action programs aimed at giving blacks and women special preferences to make up for past discrimination.

By a 6-3 vote, the justices ruled that the Memphis Fire Department wrongly insulated blacks from possible layoffs or demotions when that Tennessee city was hit by an economic crisis.

Today's ruling represents a momentous defeat for civil rights and feminist organizations but a victory for the Reagan administration.

The administration had urged the court to rule that preserving affirmative action programs under such circumstances violates a federal law banning on-the-job discrimination based on race.

Justice Department lawyers and the fire fighters' union had argued that innocent whites were being discriminated against.

But lawyers for the National Organization for Women had told the justices that adhering to seniority plans when laying off workers "disproportionately affects women and minorities in a way that can evaporate the modest progress made to date in integrating the work force."

Writing for the court in its most important affirmative action decision of the 1980s, Justice Byron R. White said a court order protecting blacks from layoffs violated Title VII of the federal Civil Rights Act of 1964.

With python in sewer, bathroom a bit scary

ROSENBERG, Texas (AP) — Word that "Gaya" escaped had this small-town community scared. One lady stacked objects on top of her toilet seat to keep the intruder out, and another took a shower with her foot on the drain.

But by Sunday it was business as usual as Thomas Houston found his 11-foot python — his "sweetheart and baby" — sitting on a manhole ledge one block from his house.

"She was all scratched up," he said. "She smelled terrible."

Houston discovered his 21-pound pet python was missing Wednesday. Because she had escaped from the family bathroom, where she was customarily locked up for the night, Houston concluded his pet had pushed up the bathroom's toilet seat with her head and had slithered into the Rosenberg sewer system.

"It was her only way out" of the bathroom, Houston, 26, said. "And she loves water."

Houston then began a search of the city's manholes. A day later, he reluctantly asked Rosenberg's sewer department if they had seen his pet.

"I don't like people to know about her. It seems to upset them," Houston said in explaining his reluctance.

Sewer officials hadn't seen the snake, but they decided residents should be cautioned that a 5-year-old python had entered the sewer system.

So the local press was notified. City hall and the police department were immediately bombarded by telephone calls from residents wanting to know if the snake had been found and what to do if they discovered it.

"People were pretty upset," said Don Meyer, sanitation director.

After finding his pet, Houston took her home and gave her a bath in the family bathtub with baby shampoo — a weekly ritual he says Gaya enjoys.

Gaya contracted a minor bacterial infection from her romp in the sewer, but otherwise seems none the worse for wear, Houston said.

"We're just glad to get her back," Houston said, as Gaya circled about his neck, her forked tongue constantly in motion.

Houston says he believes Gaya pushed up the toilet seat because she was hyperactive from some vitamins recently prescribed by a veterinarian. The snake had been locked in the bathroom at night without incident since breaking her cage three months ago, he said.

Since her cage broke, Houston has let the snake freely roam his house except at night.

"She's like a little puppy, not aggressive at all," he said.

Gaya spends her days sleeping on curtain rods in the Houston home. She lives on a diet of rats and rabbits, which she is fed monthly.

'Miranda warning' overruled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in a decision that limits the rights of criminal suspects, ruled today that police need not warn the accused of his rights when "prompted by a concern for the public safety."

By a 6-3 vote, the court said New York prosecutors may introduce as evidence a gun seized by police before they told the suspect he had a right to remain silent and was entitled to be represented by a lawyer.

Justice William H. Rehnquist, in his opinion for the court, acknowledged that today's ruling creates an exception to the procedural safeguard of the so-called "Miranda" warning, which requires police to alert a suspect of his rights.

"This case presents a situation where concern for public safety must be paramount to adherence to the literal language of the prophylactic rules announced" in the Miranda decision, Rehnquist said.

The ruling comes one day after the court sanctioned an exception to the so-called "exclusionary rule," which prohibits the use of illegally seized evidence at criminal trials.

On Monday, the court ruled that unlawful evidence may be used if a judge decides that it inevitably would have been discovered by legal means.

Official investigation begins in nursing home poisoning-death

SAVOY, Texas (AP) — An initial investigation into the nursing home death of an elderly woman who died after drinking cleaning fluid — thought to be cranberry juice — shows "no evidence now of criminal activity," officials said.

Dorie Emerson, 83, died Saturday, less than 24 hours after she was spoon-fed two glasses of cleaning solvent with dinner Friday night at the nursing home in Savoy, 65 miles north of Dallas, officials said.

"This may be an accident, or an intent on somebody's part to do bodily harm on an individual," said Bob Elrod, a Texas Department of Health official in Austin monitoring the investigation.

"We do not rule out anything until all facts are in and the results have been reviewed by the appropriate people," said Elrod, administrator of program integrity for the health department.

Fannin County Attorney Dan Meehan said medical examiners in Dallas could have toxicology tests completed by Wednesday.

"There's no evidence now of criminal activity, but I'm not going to close out the investigation until we have a cause of death," Meehan said.

State health officials began conducting interviews and examining records Monday at the Savoy Nursing Home, Elrod said. Six other residents besides Mrs. Emerson reportedly drank the liquid, which nursing home officials say was mistaken for cranberry juice.

Emma Zuver, 57, remained in satisfactory condition at a Denison hospital with second-degree burns to her mouth and throat. A spokeswoman for Texhoma Medical Center said officials were trying to identify the composition of the liquid the woman ingested.

Nursing home administrator Joan Pierce said that other patients suffered no difficulties after drinking the fluid and did not require hospitalization.

She said kitchen remodeling had been "chaotic" and that cranberry juice may have been mixed up with chemicals used by a painting crew. She declined to identify the liquid but called it a "non-toxic, non-corrosive, nonflammable cleaning solution."

An official of Dallas-based Chemco Chemical Co., however, said the liquid is a corrosive alkaline-based chemical.

"If it was taken internally, non-diluted, it could do that (cause burns)," said the company official, who did not want his name used. "If you dilute it down, it's as safe as it could be."

Elrod said that a registered nurse and a health facilities specialist were checking to see if anyone at the home witnessed the incident. He said that the state may withhold the nursing home's Medicaid payments until the investigation is over.

James Roberts, vice president of operations for Savoy Nursing Homes Inc., said an internal investigation showed the death was an "unfortunate accident."

A Dallas County medical examiner's spokesman said a ruling has not been issued in Mrs. Emerson's autopsy. Results of pending "toxicological and microscopic" tests might not be available for several weeks, said Don Kirby, a field agent.

Elrod said a written report could be prepared as early as today. He said the health department will share the information it gathers with Fannin County authorities.

Roberts said the home was cooperating with visiting representatives of the health department's Arlington office. He said health department regulations require nursing homes to keep cleaning substances away from food preparation areas.

Fannin County sheriff's Deputy Jack Robinson said his investigation indicated the poisonings were accidental.

Immune-deficient youngster goes home after transplant success

HOUSTON (AP) — T. J. Davis, a 11-month-old boy who had only days to live when he arrived at Texas Children's Hospital last February, has gone home "in good health" after an experimental bone marrow transplant apparently gave him the disease-fighting blood cells that nature forgot.

Dr. William T. Shearer, a specialist in immunology, announced Monday that the transplant was a success and that T. J. "has now acquired the lymphocytes and antibodies that fight infection. We can send him home."

T. J., the 11-month-old son of Linda and Terrance Davis of Caldwell, Idaho, suffered from severe combined immune deficiency, a congenital defect in which his body could not produce lymphocytes to fight disease. He was brought to Houston on Feb. 1 suffering from a life-threatening infection in his mouth and gum.

Bone marrow, taken from his father and treated to prevent rejection, was transfused into T. J.'s body and Shearer the transplanted marrow is now producing lymphocytes sufficient to control infection and disease.

Shearer is the physician who treated Houston's famed "Boy in the Bubble," a SCID victim who died after a similar transplant failed.

"We're really excited," said Davis, T. J.'s father. "Instead of seeing our son deteriorate in front of us, he's getting better and better every day."

The toddler's parents said they planned to live in Houston.

Shearer said the boy will continue to be kept indoors and not allowed to associate with other children for several months because his immunity is still "weak and needs protection." But the doctor said that T. J. will probably develop a fully-active immune system within two years.

"T.J. was on death's door when he came here," said Shearer, because an infection had invaded his mouth and jaw and had penetrated until it was "bordering on the brain." The boy would have died within two weeks, said the physician.

Doctors used antibiotics and shots of gamma globulin to fight the infection until the transplanted marrow could start producing lymphocytes.

"Now he has rid himself of those infections," said Shearer.

The doctor said the boy has received inoculations against tetanus, diphtheria, whooping cough and polio. Such routine childhood shots were impossible earlier because T. J. lacked the ability to generate antibodies against disease.

Shearer said the youngster still faces a long medical regimen. There will be periodic blood tests for at least two years to monitor his immune system. And in six to 12 months T. J. will undergo reconstructive surgery to repair parts of his gum and mouth that have been destroyed by the disease.

T. J., who will be a year old on July 7, was born with SCIDs, but the immune deficiency was not detected until last December when he developed the infection. He was treated at hospitals near his parents' home in Caldwell, Idaho and at a medical center in Salt Lake City where a diagnosis of SCID was made. The boy was then flown to Houston and Texas Children's, one of the few hospitals in the country that treats the rare condition.

Normal treatment for SCID is a transplant of a matching bone marrow, but no matching marrow was available for T. J. Instead, doctors removed bone marrow from his father and treated the marrow to kill all mature lymphocytes, called T Cells. Two and half ounces of this treated marrow was then injected into T. J.

Success was indicated when lymphocytes were found in T. J.'s blood that matched the genetic pattern of lymphocytes from his father. This showed that the transplant was now growing and producing disease-fighting cells.

Officials said treatment of T. J., who was kept in an isolation room at the hospital, cost $125,000 to $150,000. Part of the cost, said Shearer, is being paid for by the David Fund, a trust established in the name of Houston's famed "Boy in the Bubble", a SCID victim who died Feb. 22 after spending all but a few days of his 12 years of life in a sterile

Baby smuggling trial underway

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — A federal prosecutor says a Utah woman was the American link in a scheme to smuggle Mexican babies into the United States for adoption, but a defense attorney claims the woman is merely a "scapegoat."

Nelda Karen Colwell, 39, of Layton, Utah, faces a three-count indictment of conspiracy and aiding and abetting in the smuggling of babies born to impoverished Mexican women.

Assistant U.S. Attorney David Almaraz on Monday said Mrs. Colwell was the American link in a baby smuggling operation in which three Laredo women played key roles dating back to February 1983.

San Juana Martinez-Lopez, Celestina Rios-Rivera and Juanita Melendez-Calderon have all pleaded guilty to conspiracy to transport illegal aliens.

Mrs. Calderon, a midwife, also pleaded guilty to falsifying birth records by swearing the babies were born in Texas.

Mrs. Colwell was indicted with the three other women April 10.

Mrs. Martinez-Lopez testified Monday through an interpreter that the idea of smuggling children had not occurred to her until it was suggested by Mrs. Colwell.

"Nelda told me (to do it). It was not my thought," she said.

Mrs. Colwell's attorney, George Handy of Ogden, Utah, has said his client is a "scapegoat" — an unfortunate victim of an ambitious prosecutor and Mrs. Martinez-Lopez who is desperately trying to save her own skin.

Handy has called Mrs. Colwell "a very good person" whose only crimes are a love of children and a desire to help people find children to adopt.

At least one adoptive couple, expected to testify later this week, have come to Laredo at their own expense to testify in Mrs. Colwell's behalf, Handy said.

But in his opening statement, Almaraz painted Mrs. Colwell as a woman who became "so obsessed with trying to find babies" that she violated the law.

Almaraz said prior to making connections in Nuevo Laredo, Mrs. Colwell had been in other areas of Mexico arranging the adoption of babies through Mexican attorneys. However, lengthy waiting periods imposed by the Immigration and Naturalization Service while processing papers caused Mrs. Colwell to begin "taking shortcuts," Almaraz said.

Almaraz has said the indictments stem from two instances in which Mexican mothers gave birth in a Nuevo Laredo clinic to children who were then smuggled into Laredo by Mrs. Martinez-Lopez and Ms. Rios-Rivera.

Mrs. Melendez-Calderon then prepared false birth certificates showing that the children were born in the United States, Almaraz said. Two adoptive couples from Utah then transported the infants to their homes, the prosecutor alleged.

INS agents began investigating Mrs. Colwell and the Laredo women after a Mexican mother from Nuevo Laredo asked authorities for help in retrieving the infant that she said she was coerced into giving up for adoption.

Senate recount is continuing

AUSTIN (AP) — The recount of the Democratic U.S. Senate runoff has given Lloyd Doggett a 1,015-vote lead so far and a spokesman for the state senator says that might be enough to guarantee victory.

"I think we are in a very strong position," said Paul Begala. "Each county shows little fluctuation. I don't think there could be enough error out there to switch the results."

Doggett's June 2 win by an apparent 467-vote margin was challenged by U.S. Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock, the top vote-getter in the May 5 primary. Hance requested and paid for a recount that continued today.

Begala said Doggett led by 1,015 after several counties reported Monday. Craig Tounget, a Hance spokesman, said the Doggett lead was only about 800, but he agreed the margin has been constant for several days.

"There's been no change to speak of," Tounget said Monday. "We picked up 90 earlier today but we lost it again I think."

The Doggett lead was about 800 votes Monday, according to Tounget.

Reports on the county-by-county recount are being monitored by the two campaigns. Democratic Party officials will announce no numbers until the recount is completed.

Camille Berger, party primary director, said the final recounts are set for Wednesday.

"We'll be going to the state convention with a U.S. Senate nominee," she said.

The State Democratic Convention opens Friday in Houston. Results of the June 2 runoff will be certified by party officials on Thursday.

Recounts have been completed in the urban counties. The Hance camp is now hoping the re-check will discover errors in the smaller counties.

Hance, a conservative, was the top vote-getter in the May 5 primary. Doggett, a liberal, ran second, keeping former U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger of New Braunfels out of the runoff.

Hance gave the Texas Democratic Party $28,000 to begin the recount. Party officials have estimated that it could cost the candidate between $50,000 and $70,000 to recount the ballots in all 254 counties as Hance requested.

Early returns on June 2 gave Hance a substantial lead, but as the urban counties reported Doggett pulled even and built the slim margin that apparently gave him the nomination to face Republican U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm of College Station in November.

County funds low after drug trap shut down

COLDSRING, Texas (AP) — The shutdown of a highway trap in which minority group members and "hippies" were stopped without cause has left San Jacinto County low on money and morale.

Former Sheriff James C. "Humpty" Parker is serving a 10-year prison sentence after he was convicted of using water torture to extort confessions from jail inmates.

Parker is serving a concurrent sentence after pleading guilty to separate charges alleging he violated the civil rights of motorists caught in his U.S. 59 "marijuana trap."

In addition to lamenting the negative publicity the county suffered from the prosecution of Parker and his deputies, the county now is feeling the pains of losing between $70,000 and $100,000 annually in fine revenues coming in from motorists on U.S. 59.

The zenith of that seven-year crackdown on U.S. 59 probably came in 1981. That year Parker's full-time and 21 reserve deputies arrested 1,124 drug offenders, which yielded the county $240,000 in fines.

The volume of arrests in 1981 ranked San Jacinto second in Texas only to the 1,172 caught by Harris County's 700 deputies.

"The people here feel hurt at this point," says K.P. Bryant, a 62-year-old retired Air Force sergeant who spent eight years as the county judge before losing to Kent Morrison in the 1982 elections.

Morrison, 38, was indicted last week on two counts of soliciting a bribe from a drug offender.

"That man defeated me, but still I'm hurt about it. I spent 12 years of my life trying to build up the reputation of this county," Bryant said.

Other law enforcement officers say the public's memories of Parker's reign have also hurt their image in the county.

"I'm just sick of it," says highway patrol Trooper Van Loggins. "You stop somebody on 59 now and they don't even look at the uniform you're wearing."

"They equate you with what's gone on here. You start writing and they say, 'Oh, this is San Jacinto County. I know about this county.'"

The drawn-out Parker case has left San Jacinto County poorer and demoralized. What it's done to local law enforcement agencies fall into the general category of a phobia.

"I have seven full-time deputies and we go to U.S. 59 only if it's an aggravated situation," says the new sheriff, Robert E. Brumley. "Now we leave U.S. 59 to the Department of Public Safety."

Laredo border patrol uses horsepower

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — Border patrols along the Rio Grande are turning to "horsepower" in an effort to stem the flow of illegal aliens, officials said.

Laredo sector chief Larry L. Teverbaugh said he has received the verbal "go-ahead" to lease three horses and begin a mounted patrol unit similar to the successful horseback patrol program in Chula Vista, Calif.

He said the pilot program should begin within the next three weeks and will be monitored for two or three months to see if patrolling on horseback is "feasible and productive."

The cost of leasing the horses for one month from a local rancher will be about $500, he said.

Teverbaugh said the posse will be manned by border patrol volunteers who will receive some training in equestrian skills before being sent out to search for undocumented aliens.

Decontrol of gas would be blessing

The possibility that a crisis may be looming in the Persian Gulf makes the case for immediate and complete deregulation of natural gas prices even more compelling than it is in "normal" times, when simply common sense demands deregulation.

Economists at the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis have recently pointed out one preserve effect of natural gas price controls. With gas prices regulated, the demand for oil becomes less responsive than it should be to the price of oil. This is because, with gas prices regulated, natural gas is a less effective substitute for oil than it otherwise would be. With less effective substitutes, people cannot reduce their use of oil when its price rises. Thus oil prices are probably now higher than they would be if natural gas prices were decontrolled.

If the tussle in the Persian Gulf does turn into a crisis, resulting in a significant reduction of crude oil supplies from that region, it will be especially important to have alternative energy sources available. One of the quickest ways to bring alternate energy supplies on-line would be to deregulate natural gas prices. It would require no government programs, no government expenditures, simply a determination to get government out of the way.

A Persian Gulf crisis might skew the price structure for a while. There is little question, however, that energy prices overall would be lower under decontrol than they ever will be if price controls are maintained.

Congress is now considering so-called "perfecting" amendments to the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 which would, in effect, reinstate natural gas price controls at the wellhead. Those supporting these amendments seem to have been influenced by a propaganda campaign launched by "consumer" groups who claim gas prices would skyrocket if controls were lifted. These groups seem not to have noticed that their similar predictions with regard to crude oil prices were without merit.

The major reason a Persian Gulf crisis is not likely to bring on a deep and long-lasting energy crisis is that crude oil prices were decontrolled in 1981. It would be a blessing for American consumers, and a wise response to the possibility of a Persian Gulf crisis, if gas prices were decontrolled now.

An old-fashioned, left-wing lie

The Joint Economic Committee of Congress (JEC) Monday started hearings on the actual effects of the Reagan tax cut, on the "progressivity" of the tax burden, and the "fairness issue." The hearing should be an ideological rebuke to the liberal Democrats, who beat up on Reagan's "tax cuts for the rich." But, it could be an even greater embarrassment to the White House if it shows that members of the administration sought to discredit information politically helpful to the president.

This JEC hearing was promoted by a lively media debate over the impact of the actual IRS 1982 tax distribution data, showing that the effect of the first-year tax cut the rich paid a 14-percent larger share of the income tax burden, while that paid by those earning under $20,000 dropped 12 percent, completely opposite to liberal charges. The IRS table appeared first in this column (March 25), and was subsequently presented by the Wall Street Journal (April 11), then cited in Time magazine (April 30).

The IRS data was so totally at variance with the Washington Post's politics that the Post lost its cool on April 22, and published an analytical article by John Berry with the headline "IRS figures for '82 Don't Vindicate the Supply Siders." Berry used a series of tables to try to show that the primary reason the share of taxes paid by the lower-income went down, was their incomes dropped, while those of the rich rose.

The problem is Berry's long and tortured analysis turned out to be fatuous. First, as the Wall Street Journal pointed out (May 7), the primary reason incomes under $25,000 fell in 1982 was that there were 2.5-million fewer taxpayers in this group. A like number moved to higher brackets due to inflation. On a per-taxpayer basis, incomes rose, not fell, as Berry stated.

Second, if Berry had bothered to study the IRS release, he would have found that another reason for the lower Adjusted Gross Income (AGI) figures was "a sharp increase in the amount of income placed into individual retirement arrangements (IRAs) and the introduction of the two-earner married couple deduction."

In other words, much of the Reagan tax cut was "off the top," reducing the income taxes, especially among the low- to medium-income earners. As the IRS report stated, "total payments to (IRAs) increased by 492 percent (from $4.7 billion) to $28.4 billion." This means IRAs alone accounted for nearly $24 billion in lower income being reported in the AGI figure, more than enough by itself to account for the Post's mistake.

What is most troubling is that, through sources, we have learned that Berry's badly flawed analysis was leaked to him by a staff member of the Treasury's Office of Tax Analysis at the instigation of David Stockman's Office of Management and Budget (OMB).

Their urgency in doing this was tipped off in Berry's line, "Some administration officials were urging that President Reagan cite the (IRS) number in a forthcoming speech as evidence that his tax cuts were working exactly as promised."

In other words, the OMB's anti-supply-side insiders were determined not to let the president make that "mistake." Unfortunately, their own analysis used by the Post was "mistaken."

Within ten days, the prestigious American Institute of Economic Research weighed in with its analysis in the Wall Street Journal showing that, on an individual tax-return basis, the 1982 tax cut was actually 25- to 40-percent more favorable to low-income groups than the Congressional Budget Office (and OMB) had predicted, and 74-percent LESS favorable to the rich. For example, where CBO had estimated (as recently as April 3) that the 1982 tax cut provided an average reduction of $5,100 to the average over-$80,000 income-earner, the actual figure in 1982 for this group was only $1,210. Why?

"The data strongly suggest that the 'rich' chose to show more income to the IRS in 1982, a supply-side response to the Reagan tax cuts." Just as Arthur Laffer had forecast, lower rates produced higher taxpaying by the rich.

But the most important rebuttal to the Washington Post and its administration shills was an analysis by two former JEC economists, Lowell Galloway and Richard Vedder of Ohio University, provided in this column recently. This analysis wipes out all of the distortions caused by inflation, recession, and bracket creep, and simply applies an income percentile basis to compare the 1981 and 1982 income groups.

It shows that in 1982, the tax share paid by the nation's top 1 percent (incomes over $80,000) rose 14.1 percent, while that paid by the bottom 20 percent (incomes below $9,000) declined 12 percent, and the bottom 40 percent dropped by 9 percent. A classic "progressive re-distribution."

Taxes paid by the top 1 percent rose $6 billion, while taxes paid by the bottom 40 percent dropped $1.9 billion. This means during the first year of the Reagan tax cut - the year when the rich got the biggest percentage cut, the actual tax distribution got substantially more "progressive."

Economists have a term for this called the Gini Coefficient that measures the degree of difference from top to bottom in any distribution curve. In 1982 that Gini Coefficient rose from .573 to .587, a substantial 3.3-percent rise in "progressivity."

So, the "fairness" assault on the Reagan tax cut is merely an old-fashioned, left-wing lie.

Legacy

In the feature we excerpt material that has appeared on Freedom Newspapers editorial pages in previous years, whether from the editorials or the column written for many years by Freedom founder R.C. Hoiles.

Our solution to the problem of war is not the United Nations, nor any kind of world government with a police force. Our solution is free trade.

We cannot claim this solution as being original with us, however. The great economists have always advocated free trade. The greatest free trader of them all, Frederic Bastiat, said, "If goods do not cross frontiers, armies will."

No economist will deny that Japan was forced to seek a market for her goods when the Western nations put up tariffs which denied our consumers the right to take advantage of cheap Japanese products. We built a wall around Japan and called the Japanese beasts for their brutal method of attempting to crash through the wall of our making. The only solution is: Let us tear down the walls ourselves.

Textbooks mislead our children

If our school-agers are less than 101 percent patriotic, little wonder.

Page one persistently "puts our worst foot forward."

News media emphasis on negatives distorts the image of our nation and its prospects.

And their textbooks in school are as bad or worse.

A new book published by the Hudson Institute is titled: Why Are They Lying to Our Children?

The book quotes from scores of textbooks now in use in our public schools, citing information that is out-of-date, flawed, distorted or downright untrue.

"Sixty-six percent of the world's people go to bed hungry every night."

"The world's population has been doubling every 35 years."

"The greenhouse effect will melt the polar ice caps, destroy civilization."

"Within our lifetime, a severe shortage of food, fuel and water."

Each of these statements - quoted from a school textbook - is misguided, misleading or wrong.

If our school-agers see their future as bleak, it may be because their assumptions, their judgment and their emotions have been fed a diet of intellectual junk - food, more distressing than nourishing.

Ecological doomsayers cannot know what they are talking about. Norman Cousins says, "No man knows enough to be a pessimist."

Yet when their dark theories are printed as fact in textbooks, malleable young minds are understandably disturbed.

Son Paul's Rest of the Story stories recite history in chronological sequence. He admonishes his researchers always to seek two independent sources for every fact and, in sensitive subjects, three.

"Independent sources," because some historians are willing to parrot other historians, a practice which can compound the circulation of erroneous information.

Some schools have been accepting Thomas Malthus' "Essay on the Principle of Population" 1798 as gospel - though his persuasive notions relating to projected population and "famine and starvation" have already disproved themselves.

Follet's World Geography (1983) similarly miscalculated.

In 1972 the Club of Rome, widely quoted on global problems, anticipated what sounded like "the decline and fall of the American Empire." The ominous predictions had a profound effect on our national psyche.

Two years later the Club of Rome had already modified its findings, but the earlier doomsaying is what still gets quoted.

The Hudson Institute's evaluation of all the dire predictions indicates today's schoolbooks as "a curriculum of lies."

Columnist discloses gifts list

President Reagan's recent financial disclosure form included a list of gifts he received last year. They included:

Hearing aids from retailer Byron Burton of Santa Ana, Calif., worth $1,600.

A bolo tie with a gold slide worth $300 from Mr. and Mrs. George Harmon of Las Vegas.

A pair of Justin boots from ol' Enid Justin himself worth $596.

Cash, $5,500, from California friends to buy himself a four-wheel-drive vehicle.

Leather jacket worth $300 from Merv Griffin.

Just a few things I needed, said the hard-of-hearing president in making his disclosure as he wheeled his jeep out of the White House press room while wearing his new cowboy boots, bolo tie and the leather jacket even Merv Griffin thought was too tacky to keep.

I think it is a marvelous idea to make public officials disclose what gifts they have received and where they came from.

I also think it is a good idea for other people in the public eye.

even newspaper columnists, to do the same. Today, then, I shall disclose the gifts I have received over the past year.

Most newspapers have a stringent policy regarding the taking of gifts. If you can't eat it or drink it in 24 hours you are not allowed to accept it.

Here were my gifts from last year:

Four cases of Coors beer from the Coors Brewing Company after I wrote a column saying how happy I was that Coors would be sold in the East. Did I keep the gift?

Not for long. I called a couple of buddies and there wasn't a drop left in a single bottle 14 hours later. I may be a lot of things, but I'm not one to flout company policy.

A dozen packages of cheese puffs after I wrote a column about a man being jailed for stealing cheese puffs. They went down with the Coors.

A dog from a friend. You can't eat a dog, of course, but later someone from a large tennis shoe company gave me a free pair of tennis shoes which the dog promptly ate, so I called it even and kept the dog.

A Texas fifth of homemade pepper sauce that you put on vegetables, from a farmer in Alabama. After the Coors ran out, my buddies and I drank that. On the rocks it wasn't that bad.

A pound of liver from a meat processor after I mentioned how much I hated liver. My dog didn't want the liver, either. He took it out in the back yard and buried it and came back inside and finished up another pair of tennis shoes, obviously preferring them to the taste of liver.

A bright red shirt with pictures of exotic birds on it from a reader who included a letter that said, "If you're going to write like a clown you ought to dress like one."

You can't eat or drink a shirt, of course, so I didn't keep it. I sent it to the president to wear with his tacky leather jacket and bolo tie.

Nation's wheat crop expected to be a whopper

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Prospects for this year's winter wheat crop declined slightly last month, says the Agriculture Department. But the harvest, gradually edging through the nation's bread basket, could still be a whopper.

The Agriculture Department's latest forecast issued Monday put the crop at 1.97 billion bushels, down 1 percent from the 1983 harvest of 1.99 billion bushels and about 0.5 percent less than predicted in May.

But if the harvest turns out as predicted, it will be the fourth largest in U.S. history and will mean a buildup in total wheat stockpiles, along with further downward pressure on prices paid to farmers.

Winter wheat is planted in the fall and harvested the following summer. It makes up about three-fourths of total U.S. wheat production.

As of June 1, the crop was rated in "generally fair to good" condition, the report said. Harvest progress was "behind average across most of the South" as of the first of the month.

In a related report later Monday, the department said 6 percent of the winter wheat acreage in the leading production states had been harvested by June 10, about twice the average pace. But most of cutting was in Texas, where hot, dry weather has hastened ripening.

About 39 percent of the Texas acreage had been harvested by June 10, compared to the normal progress of 16 percent, the report said. California farmers also were ahead of schedule, with 25 percent of the winter wheat cut, compared to a normal 19 percent.

In Oklahoma, 5 percent of the wheat crop had been combined, right on schedule, according to the long-time average. No other major winter wheat state showed enough harvest progress to register.

Production in Kansas, the usual leader, was indicated at 399.6 million bushels, down 11 percent from 448.2 million bushels in 1983.

The department's Crop Reporting Board said the average yield, based on indications as of June 1, was estimated at 38.2 bushels per acre, second only to last year's record of 41.8 bushels per harvested acre.

A month ago the yield was also put at 38.2 bushels per acre, but a decline in area for harvest reduced the production outlook slightly, from 1.98 billion bushels indicated as of May 1.

Now, the report said, farmers are estimated to have 51.6 million acres for harvest, compared with 51.8 million indicated in May. The 1983 winter wheat harvest was from 47.7 million acres, and the 1982 harvest from 58.5 million acres. Winter wheat plantings were reduced sharply for the 1983 crop under the government's PIK program which provided a "payment-in-kind" of free surplus grain in return for idling part of their cropland.

No 1984 production estimates for spring wheat, corn and many other spring-planted crops will be released by USDA until later in the growing season.

The record total wheat harvest was 2.81 billion bushels in 1982, a slight increase from the 1981 harvest of just under 2.8 billion bushels. The 1983 crop was 2.43 billion bushels — the third-largest harvest on record.

Production dropped last year as a result of the government's PIK program to give farmers a "payment-in-kind" for reducing acreages of certain crops, including wheat. In return, farmers got $9.7 billion worth of free surplus wheat, corn, sorghum, rice and cotton to use or sell as they chose.

Although wheat farmers were offered a PIK program for 1984, producers of other commodities were not offered those benefits because most of those surpluses have been reduced sharply.

The wheat stockpile, on the other hand, declined only slightly. Now, with another big winter wheat harvest on the way, the stockpile is growing again.

Department officials say wheat farmers signed up to take about 20.8 million acres from production this year under the 1984 program.

compared with 28.2 million acres idled in 1983.

According to a USDA analysis following last month's forecast, the 1984 wheat crop could total about 2.55 billion bushels, which would be up from last year's 2.43 billion bushels.

indicated production of winter wheat and average yields in 1984 by major producing states, based on June 1 prospects, included these new estimates:

Arkansas, 60,000,000 bushels and an average yield of 40 bushels per acre; California, 56,900,000 and 74; Colorado, 89,900,000 and 29; Georgia, 35,000,000 and 35; Idaho, 57,270,000 and 69; Illinois, 67,320,000 and 44.

Indiana, 47,940,000 and 47; Kansas, 399,600,000 and 36; Kentucky, 17,500,000 and 35; Michigan, 45,000,000 and 50; Mississippi, 20,125,000 and 35; Missouri, 81,120,000 and 35; Montana, 74,400,000 and 30; Nebraska, 78,200,000 and 34.

Ohio, 51,700,000 and 47; Oklahoma, 180,200,000 and 34; Oregon, 63,240,000 and 62; South Dakota, 47,850,000 and 33; Tennessee, 21,000,000 and 35; Texas, 132,300,000 and 27; and Washington, 165,120,000 and 64.

Direct hit on ICBM

WASHINGTON (AP) — An experimental Army missile scored a direct hit against an incoming dummy warhead 100 miles over the mid-Pacific, military planners say, in what they call a major step forward in defensive weapons development.

It was the first time U.S. missile experts succeeded in a deliberate effort to hit such an incoming target head on. Defense Department officials said Monday. They said three earlier attempts failed and one previous direct hit was "accidental."

Pentagon officials hailed the destruction of the dummy warhead in Sunday's experiment as substantial progress. But they cautioned that far more work would be needed before a defensive system could be put into operation.

"We really tried to hit a bullet with a bullet and it worked," Amoreta Hoerber, deputy assistant secretary of the Army for research and development, told a Pentagon briefing. Hoerber said the success of the Homing Overlay Experiment (HOE) amounted to "a major breakthrough."

In the experiment, the interceptor was fired from Meck Island in the Kwajalein group, the Pentagon said. It said the dummy warhead was fired from a Minuteman intercontinental ballistic missile launched from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif.

Infra-red sensors aboard the interceptor were used to find the warhead, relaying the information to an on-board computer.

The two missiles closed at a combined speed of 20,000 feet a second, the Pentagon said. It said that just before impact, an umbrella-like net aboard the experimental missile opened, exposing "ribs" that were "studded with weights to make impact lethal to an ICBM warhead."

"The shattering collision of the two speeding bodies demolished the target," the Pentagon said.

INTENDS TO REPAY—Argentine Economy Minister Bernardo Grinspun speaks to reporters at a news conference in Buenos Aires Monday where he said relations between his country and the International Monetary Fund were not being broken. Argentina told the IMF that it intends to repay its $43.6 billion foreign debt, but will not jeopardize development by reducing imports (AP Laserphoto)

Argentina tells IMF safeguarding democracy is nation's top priority

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP)—Argentina has appealed to the International Monetary Fund for lower interest rates and extended terms to help it repay a $43.6 billion foreign debt, but it said it must reject demands to avoid raising workers' wages.

"The Argentine Republic will honor its tradition of complying with all its obligations, but this does not mean the adoption of measures that condition its sovereignty in the management of its internal problems," said the letter sent Monday to the IMF in Washington.

Foreign bankers, diplomats and newspapers said the letter of intent was unprecedented in that it had not been approved by the IMF negotiators who spent nearly a month in Buenos Aires talking with Economy Minister Bernardo Grinspun and his aides. IMF approval of Argentina's economic recovery plan is considered a requirement for obtaining a $1.6 billion loan to cover interest payments and for renegotiating the debt terms with about 320 private foreign banks.

In the 20-page letter sent Monday to IMF director Jacques de Larosiere, the government said it would use some of its trade surplus to repay the debt.

"There is no confrontation with creditors nor with the IMF," Grinspun told a news conference. He refused to confirm reports that IMF negotiators did not approve the government's economic strategy.

A reported sticking point has been Argentina's reluctance to sharply reduce its public spending and lower its

Pope begins pastoral visit in Switzerland

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP)—Pope John Paul II arrived today to start a six-day visit to Switzerland, the first major pastoral mission to the Alpine nation since 1418.

The pope, on his 22nd journey abroad during his four-and-a-half year reign, arrived at 8:45 a.m. aboard a special flight at Zurich's Kloten airport.

A delegation led by Bishop Heinrich Schwery, president of the Swiss Bishops' Conference, entered the plane to welcome him and a Swiss military band played the pontifical Mass.

As John Paul descended from the plane under a bright sun, he knelt in his white cassock to kiss the soil of his host country. Organizers had left a small part of the red-carpeted tarmac uncovered for this act, which he has turned into a tradition.

He was then greeted by Swiss President Leon Schlumpf and other government and church officials, conversing alternately in German and French with them.

In a brief welcoming address, Schlumpf said the visit was both a religious and diplomatic event, noting that the pope is a head of state.

In his reply, the pope described his visit as "another station on my pilgrimage" to meet with his flock. He also said he was looking forward to meeting with the representatives of other churches, "our separated brothers."

"Great efforts are still needed to overcome the internal and external divisions" of the church, said the pope, who spoke in all four Swiss national languages, German, French, Italian and Romansh.

He said Switzerland was "particularly linked" to the Holy See because of the Swiss Guards who have acted as protectors of the papacy since the 16th century.

After the arrival ceremony, the pontiff flew to Lugano for the first of several large, outdoor celebrations planned for his visit. He planned to head for Geneva later.

There, he planned a meeting with leaders of the World Council of Churches, made up of Protestant denominations, and a separate meeting with Orthodox Church representatives in nearby Chambesey. He then heads by train to the University of Fribourg.

The pope had intended to visit Switzerland three years ago, but the trip was postponed when he was shot and wounded by would-be assassin Mehmet Ali Agca on May 13, 1981, in St. Peter's Square.

The Swiss appear to be taking no chances with John Paul's safety. Dogs will search buildings for explosives before he enters, planes will not be permitted to fly below 7,500 feet in the areas he is touring, soldiers will reinforce local police units and metal detectors will screen visitors at all the outdoor sites.

Temple assault alienates Sikhs

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—The army's devastating assault on the sacred Golden Temple in Amritsar has alienated virtually all of India's 13 million Sikhs, triggered riots and mutinies by Sikh soldiers and ruined chances for any quick political settlement to the Punjab crisis.

The attack on the temple complex also has strengthened the movement for Khalistan, a separate Sikh state in Punjab, which previously had been supported only by extremists.

But the major military action ordered June 5 by Prime Minister Indira Gandhi appears to have won widespread approval from India's Hindus, who make up 83 percent of the population and had been prime targets of Sikh terrorists in Punjab.

Officials in Amritsar say as many as 2,000 people, including 200 government troops, may have been killed in the attack.

Curfews have been imposed in Punjab and elsewhere to try to prevent a Sikh backlash and more clashes between Sikhs and Hindus.

Sikhs are demanding President Zail Singh, a Sikh, step down from the position to protest the raid, which they consider sacrilege. He earlier had promised to resign if the army entered the temple.

Angry pilgrims step on his portrait, which is now being used as a doormat at some Sikh shrines, called gurdwaras.

"The unnecessary desecration of the Golden Temple complex has incensed virtually every Sikh in the world and all those in India who are not sycophants and careerists," said Khushwant Singh, a noted writer, historian and spokesman for the Sikh community.

"Mrs. Gandhi has deprived herself of any Sikh of any consequence who can talk to her," said the writer, who returned his national award for literature in protest of the raid and is setting up an independent inquiry committee.

The raid "has caused a great divide between Sikhs and Hindus and it will take a long time for the wounds to heal," Singh told The Associated Press.

Backed by tank and rocket fire, 3,000 troops stormed the temple complex on June 5 and 6. Jarnail Singh Bhindranwale, a militant Sikh leader, was killed.

The government said the raid was necessary to clean out 600 terrorists responsible for a reign of terror which had killed hundreds of people in Punjab. Home Secretary M.M.K. Wali claimed the operation had "broken the back of Sikh terrorism."

Six mutinies and 46 soldiers killed

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—The army has crushed mutinies by at least 2,000 Sikh soldiers, killing 46 deserters who were outraged by the government assault on their Golden Temple shrine, military sources said today.

Six mutinies have been reported in eastern, northern and western India since the army assaulted the Golden Temple in Amritsar on June 5.

Military and civilian sources in Amritsar, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the death toll in the temple complex was likely to reach 1,300 and in the district to hit 2,000.

They also said more than 6,500 suspected Sikh militants have been arrested in Punjab since last Monday, including 240 people in pre-dawn raids today. The sources said large quantities of weapons had been seized.

The government said the attack was necessary because Sikh extremists were using their religion's holiest shrine as a base for terrorist raids that had killed 400 people in the past four months.

The Defense Ministry said a Hindu general, a civilian and one pursuing soldier were killed in gunbattles with the Sikh soldiers who tried to get to Punjab, the location of the

Texan's songs win nationwide attention

By JORGE COOPER
Longview News-Journal
LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — Hit songs usually come and go like sunsets, but Texas native Larry Henley wrote a love song that is still glowing three years later.

"The Wind Beneath My Wings" has captivated music fans and singers all over the world, and now the U.S. Olympic Committee is listening closely. Last Monday, Gary Morris' version of Henley's song was voted Song of the Year at the 19th annual Academy of Country Music Awards.

Henley, who lived about four years in Longview in the early '60s, was in town last month to attend his son's graduation from Pine Tree High School. He sat on the edge of the couch in his former wife's home, wearing faded blue jeans, a dark blue sports shirt and tennis shoes. A 46-year-old former pop star of the '60s, Henley's soft eyes, light-colored hair and full, graying beard resemble the features of several singers who record his songs.

In April, Henley was voted Songwriter of the Year by Nashville Songwriters Association International. His songs have been recorded by an extraordinary variety of artists including Willie Nelson, Dolly Parton, Kenny Rogers, Lee Greenwood, Barbra Streisand, Sheena Easton and Gladys Knight & the Pips. Over 30 artists have recorded Henley's "The Wind Beneath My Wings."

"I'm sort of in awe," Henley said in a hushed tone. "It's almost like it belongs to someone else. I can't really identify with it anymore. The ideal situation for a songwriter is to have a song that goes on forever, and hopefully this one will."

The appeal of "The Wind Beneath My Wings" hasn't stopped at jukeboxes and record stores. The song was performed in front of U.S. troops in Lebanon during a Bob Hope special, and an astronaut recently took a recording of the song into space. But the next usage of "The Wind Beneath My Wings" could be the biggest.

"It looks like it might be the U.S. Olympic song, if they decide on an official song," he said. "I think Lou Rawls is promoting himself to be the official singer of the U.S. Olympics, and he's using my song to do it."

The lyrics of "The Wind Beneath My Wings" describe a lover who tells his partner that she is his hero and source of strength. Gladys Knight retitled the song "Hero" in her soulful rendition. Inevitably, sports promoters became attracted to the imagery of the song.

"It's been associated with heroes which is not what I intended," he said. "I think it means something different to everybody who sings it."

"It's just a way of saying 'I love you.' It's the kind of song you could sing to anyone. You could even sing it to your pet."

Henley co-wrote "The Wing

Beneath My Wings" with Jeff Silbar. "He helped me with the music. I wrote all the lyric by myself. I usually always write the lyrics and sometimes the music."

Henley is not new to the spotlight. Twenty years ago, Henley was the singer for the Newbeats, a pop band that shared billings with Marvin Gaye, the Supremes and the Miracles. The band's 1964 hit, "Bread and Butter," was one of the biggest of the year.

slipping past several Beatles songs on the charts.

But Henley tired of touring, and raising a family was something he couldn't do on the road. He settled down, and discovered he had a talent for songwriting.

Sitting in the living room Friday, Henley's former wife Ginger, his 17-year-old son, Jason, and his 14-year-old daughter, Shannon, seemed genuinely fascinated by their father's past.

Frustrated ex-Baptist minister turns Methodist

DALLAS (AP) — The Rev. Martha Gilmore says she left the Baptist ministry and became a Methodist because of a "nagging feeling" the Southern Baptist Convention was going to censure her.

The Rev. Gilmore, 48, became the first woman in the Dallas area ordained a Southern Baptist minister in 1977, but she says she's grown frustrated with a system that ordains women but rarely accepts them as pastors.

So, she left the church of her birth — a decision she called "very, very sad" — and now hopes to lead a church of her own as a Methodist.

Last week, she had her credentials accepted as a minister of the North Texas Methodist Conference. She has been associate director of the intern program at the Methodist-affiliated Perkins School of Theology since her ordination.

She said another reason she made the switch was the urge to preach and had little hope of doing so as a Baptist. United Methodists, by contrast, have more female pastors than any other major denomination.

"If I were to decide I wanted to be a (Baptist) pastor in Dallas County, it would be very difficult," she said in an interview with the Dallas Times Herald. "If I were younger, I'd stay (a Baptist) and see what happened in 20 years. I'm nearing 50 and ... wanted to get on with ministry."

Her husband, former City Councilman Jerry Gilmore, who is now the lay chairman of the Baptist Home Mission Board, will remain at Cliff Temple. Church supporters, he said, are "sad but supportive" of his wife's move.

By leaving, she also bid adieu to friends, family and Sunday school students at Cliff Temple Baptist Church, where she grew up and was baptized, married and ordained.

But she said she was concerned about what actions the national Southern Baptist Convention might take concerning women's ordination when it meets next week in Kansas City.

"I think there will be motions to censure churches that have ordained women," she said. "I had a nagging feeling that I was contributing to Cliff Temple being on the edge of being censured."

Robert McGinnis, executive director of the Dallas Baptist Association, told the Herald he had not been aware of the Rev. Gilmore's decision.

"I don't have anything to say," he said. "Those issues are left to the local church. I just wish her the best."

Dear Abby Fiancee suggests: where there's smoke, there's fire

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Sue (not her real name) and I are engaged to be married. We've gone together for nearly two years and are both in our mid-20s. The other night she said she would like to get me high on pot just to see how it would affect me. I have never even tried pot and I told Sue I had no desire to.

She said she had smoked it occasionally with the guy she went with before she met me, and when she was high on pot, the sex was really terrific—not that she didn't enjoy sex with me, but it was incredible with pot!

I told her I didn't care to smoke pot, and if she did, she had the wrong guy. Abby, Sue had never mentioned pot before, and her sudden interest in it worries me. What do you make of this? And what should I do?

BEWILDERED

DEAR BEWILDERED: Initiate an honest, open discussion with Sue, making it crystal clear that you're not interested in smoking pot.

As Sue said, it may enhance the sexual experience, but hear this: Studies done with male laboratory animals show that the principal chemical in marijuana (THC) lowers the level of testosterone, the principal male sex hormone, decreases sperm count and causes abnormalities in the sperm.

Also, one of the most widely accepted misconceptions about marijuana is that it is not physically or psychologically addictive. Not true. It is.

I don't mean to preach, but people who start using drugs rarely have a prayer.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are very depressed because of our daughter and son-in-law, who are tenants in the two-family house we share.

We have decided to move to Arizona because I've just retired and we want to get away from the cold New England winters. Neither my wife nor I is in the best of health. I told them I am going to sell the house and buy a home in Arizona. I offered to pay them for the wall-to-wall carpeting and other improvements they put into the house.

Well, my Dear Abby, you would not believe the way they took this news! They are upset because they will have to pay higher rent somewhere else, and they haven't spoken to us since.

Do you think we should stay in Connecticut because of them? They both have civil service jobs and are not hurting financially.

RETIRED

DEAR RETIRED: Don't give your selfish daughter and her equally selfish husband a second thought. Head for Arizona with no apologies, and happy retirement.

DEAR ABBY: Re "One Man's Opinion," the man who refused to hire anyone with a beard or droopy mustache:

Listen to this one: My grandson teaches in a Texas high school. Just before Christmas vacation he started to grow a mustache. The principal called him into his office and said, "Mark (not his real name), you know we must be an example to these young kids, so when you return from your vacation I don't want to see any mustache."

Most of the male teachers in that school either smoke or chew snuff. They also murder the King's English with "I seen," "He don't," "Have went," "Me and Joe did this or that," but not a word has ever been said to these teachers concerning their grammar.

Making order out of your chaos

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Cleaning house the way mother did takes about 25 hours a week, says Ann Guilfoyle. But most people today don't have 25 extra hours to devote to the task.

As a single working mother, the New York-based writer certainly did not have the time to spare. As a result, she and her child were, in her words, "living in chaos." She would periodically binge on house cleaning, but on a day-to-day basis, the house was not in good order, she says.

To make life more comfortable, however, the 46-year-old New Yorker decided to change her mode of operating — figuring out what was essential to keep her household going and allowing the rest to slide. She says her efforts resulted in an orderly and comfortable household. They also helped produce a book on the subject which may help others do the same for themselves.

She wrote "Home Free. The No-Nonsense Guide to House Care" to help those who want a smooth-running household with a minimum of attention. Subjects covered include establishing order and priorities and preventive measures that forestall the spread of soil.

According to Ms. Guilfoyle the major pitfall generally is that standards are simply too high. "Many of us still carry around the outdated mores that drove our mothers or grandmothers ... More realistic standards would be based on the limitations of our lives," she said.

"When standards are too high, there is always something more to be done and you're rarely satisfied with what you can actually accomplish," she added.

It takes some discipline to set up a system, but once the framework is established you can relax and let many things drift. Furthermore, the pleasure of a smoothly-running home is also an important motivation to keep the system in operation.

The first step, says Ms. Guilfoyle is expedient compromise. "Decide what's important to you and attend to that. The rest is discretionary."

Based on interviews and research she did for her book, she says an experienced professional house cleaner can thoroughly surface-clean a typical three-bedroom two-bath house in less than four hours, provided the space is picked up in advance.

To work like a pro, decide what you intend to accomplish and in what order the work will be done, then stick to the plan. "Amateurs tend to do a bit more here and there as they go along and drift back and forth from job to job. This slows you down and prevents you from accomplishing the day's goals."

Some tips for streamlining the job include assembling supplies ahead of time. Keep small tools and cleaning supplies in a portable carrier. Start with an easy job; then do the harder jobs in the first half of the cleaning period instead of at the end when you are tired and have lost interest. If two people are cleaning at the same time, work in separate areas, she suggests. Work to a pre-determined deadline, beginning and

Nutrition in dementia topic of meeting

AMARILLO — The Panhandle Plains chapter of the National Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders Association are to meet Thursday, June 14, at 7:30 p.m. at the Texas Tech Health Sciences Center, 1400 Wallace Blvd.

Dr. R.K. (Rod) Albracht, doctor of chiropractics, is to be guest speaker. Dr. Albracht was raised and educated in Amarillo. He began his professional training at Amarillo College and then attended San Jacinto College in Houston. He entered the Texas Chiropractic College in 1966 and took his professional degree in 1970. Dr. Albracht has done graduate work in orthopedics, x-ray, acupuncture and nutrition. He has been practicing in Amarillo for the past 13 years.

Dr. Albracht is to speak on "Nutritional Deficiencies in Dementia."

stopping promptly. Give yourself a reward at the end of the job. It might be watching television, having a friend over, having a special snack, or listening to music.

If you tend to dawdle, set a portable timer at first to help you become aware of how much time is passing.

Try cleaning to music. The right kind can lift your spirits. Ms. Guilfoyle cleans to Russian gypsy music. Her sister is partial to a disco beat.

To make life easier in her own home, Ms. Guilfoyle made some changes in her decorating scheme. She says there are many ways of minimizing maintenance by selecting easy-care decorative objects, colors and materials.

For example, she switched from white walls to a medium gray tone. "In New York, gray is the same color as dirt," she noted. However, it is also a neutral that takes on different characteristics depending on the accessory colors used with it and the quality and amount of light in a room.

Another way to camouflage dirt on walls and eliminate or minimize wall-washing chores is to select a wallpaper with a busy pattern. If white or a pastel color is the only way, then opt for rough textures, if possible. Barn siding and brick painted white both take little maintenance and show few smudges, she said. When using paint, opt for a glossy enamel which is easily washed instead of a flat paint which is not.

Another idea is to look for and obtain help from others. "Older persons who may live nearby often need the money which housework could bring, but are too proud to ask for it," she said. By tactfully asking them, you may find an invaluable resource.

Young women tied at home with young children may benefit from the extra pair of hands, a friendly listening ear and the now-outmoded skills an older person may bring to the house.

"How many people today know how to mend and iron?" she asked.

Although you will prefer to be independent this coming year, much of what you hope to do will require the support of others. Do nothing that could jeopardize helpful alliances.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If too much emphasis is placed on your independence today, it may cause you to fail to cooperate with others in ways that could be mutually beneficial. The areas in which you'll be the luckiest in the year ahead are revealed in your Astro-Graph predictions for the coming year. To get yours, mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Use good judgment in gauging your workload today. If you attempt too much, all of your endeavors could suffer in the process.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Normally you are your own person, but today you could yield to peer pressure and do something your better judgment warns you against doing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Competitive situations must be analyzed realistically today. If you underestimate your opposition, you could come out as an also-ran instead of being first.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Someone who thinks he is always right, but often isn't, may try to coerce you into accepting his ideas today and reject yours, which are better.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're not likely to make a good deal today if you shop with an "I must have it now" attitude. Unrealistic urgency distorts your sense of values.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you and your mate cannot agree upon an important issue today, it may prove helpful to get an objective friend to arbitrate the matter.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Lukewarm interest will not receive your earnest efforts today, in order to be an achiever, you must be properly motivated.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Should you be involved in a competitive social sport today, don't strive to overwhelm your opponent. Play the game for the fun of it.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be careful in career situations today so that you are not manipulated by someone who uses others like pawns in a chess game.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Try not to enter into serious discussions today where you don't know your subject and hope to bluff your way through. It may make you look bad.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Continue to remain watchful and prudent in your financial affairs. Try not to assume any new debts today.

Mussels reluctantly grow pearls

By BILL CRIDER
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Some 250,000 irritated mussels are reluctantly growing a crop of pearls for John Latendresse in unpolluted lakes at secret locations in Louisiana, Texas and Tennessee.

It is the first commercial cultured pearl venture in this country, the result of years of research that started in Tennessee in 1963.

"For security reasons, I can't say where the lakes are," Latendresse says. "Everyone wants to learn our secrets. And we are afraid of losing some of our pearl farms due to toxicity."

What he means is that an unfriendly competitor could dump chemicals into the water and foul up production. Mussels choke in polluted water — one reason 23 species are on the endangered species list.

Latendresse's American Pearl Farms, of Camden, Tenn., looks forward to harvesting pearls by the bushel. He sells most of them at prices ranging from $2 to $150 each.

"We have taken some already — nothing great," says Latendresse. "We sold them to collectors. They were clamoring to buy the first fresh water pearls grown in America."

The 250,000 mussels were gathered from rivers or lakes in Kentucky or Tennessee by scuba divers who work at depths of up to 93 feet.

In the nucleating laboratory in Camden, each mussel chosen to become the "mother" of a pearl is carefully pried open by one of the firm's 41 employees. A tiny bit of matter, either a chunk of meat cut out of a "sacrifice" mussel or a bead of shell, is placed inside.

It takes 10 to 15 minutes.

After that, the mother mussel goes back into the holding trough to rest and recuperate and to be transferred later to a lake.

There the mothers spend the rest of their life, two or three years, suspended on a net, pampered and monitored, doing their best to ease the irritation caused by the foreign material placed within their body by coating it with layers of calcium and lustrous nacre.

In two or three years, each mother mussel has made a pearl, hopefully a nice round one, since they are preferred over the egg shapes, baroques and "sticks."

Latendresse says a harvest is scheduled for fall, with the first major harvest to come in 1986. He says a well-managed farm of 30 surface acres will produce, in two or three years, about 5 million pearls of over two carats each.

Latendresse got most of his techniques from the Japanese, who have done it for a long time. He says the mortality rate, 75 to 80 percent at the start, was down to 7 percent — less than the Japanese rate.

Study program popular

SEARCY, Ark. (AP) — If you have the urge to visit Italy and earn university credit at the same time, Harding University has just the program for you.

Harding's International Study Program in Florence, Italy, begins its fourth year this year. Director Don Shackelford said the program had become so well established that the university had purchased a 16th-century villa just outside Florence.

Shackelford, 49, is a Harding alumnus himself. He came up with the idea after spending 10 years in Florence as a student at the University of Florence and later as director of a Bible school there.

Students who sign up for the program stay in Florence for three months, taking courses in art, music, history, literature and biblical studies. Four days out of the week are spent in the classroom. Shackelford said students can use the remaining three days to go wherever they want.

Shackelford says Florence makes a good location for a study of the humanities. During the Renaissance, the city played host to the likes of Michaelangelo, Leonardo da Vinci and Dante.

"The response has been great," Shackelford said, noting that the course is usually booked up months in advance. He said two professors from Harding accompanied the 30 students who went each semester. The professors change with each group.

Clocksmith believes city underclocked

HOUSTON (AP) — When it comes down to telling the time, the conflict between progress and tradition could be seen as a battle between the forces of the Super Matrix Message Center electronic clock and the physics of the humble pendulum.

And in a city such as Houston, where the past is not as venerated as the future, the battle could be pretty one-sided in favor of the digital age — totally one-sided if it was not for the efforts of one of a dying breed.

Percy Turk, master clocksmith and antique collector, believes Houston is underclocked. And he isn't talking about the plethora of freeway billboard clocks that flash frequently incorrect time and temperature at life in the fast lane.

He is talking about the traditional face-and-hands wind-it-up-to-tell-the-time mechanical clock. To him the only problem with this variety of clock is that in Houston there aren't enough of them.

"We're the Wild West over here," the 50-year plus Houston resident says somewhat ruefully in an effort to explain the phenomenon. It's a cultural thing, he says, with the northeastern section of the country having more clocks because they are a "little bit more cultural than we are over here."

In fact, Turk, the son of an immigrant Polish clocksmith, can count on one hand the number of old-type clocks there are in this city.

When he came to Houston in 1930, the only clock he can remember was the four-faced street clock outside the J. J. Sweeney jewelry store on the corner of Main and Capitol. There wasn't anything extraordinary about the timepiece, Turk says, except that it was "unique in Houston."

That clock, known now as the Sweeney Clock, was donated to the city and, now electrified and still working, stands at the corner of Bagby and Capitol.

There was another clock, says Turk, on the old city hall building which used to stand on what is now Market Square. When fire destroyed that building and it was demolished, a salvage dealer snapped up the grand old clock.

Several years later, Turk says, when the new City Hall was completed and the builders were looking for a clock, they tried to get the old one back from the salvage dealer. "He told them to go to hell," Turk chuckles. The result is that while City Hall does have a large, traditional-but-electric clock on its tower, it's not the old one city officials wanted.

There were other clocks on other buildings many years ago, Turk says, but they have long since been removed.

It was the dearth of clocks in Houston that compelled master clocksmith Turk to inquire about buying an antique, 18-foot tall, four-faced street clock he saw advertised in a collectors' magazine.

When he bought the clock for an undisclosed sum from a Florida man, Turk says, he had no idea where he would put it. But on a trip downtown, he saw the new Republic Bank building under construction and was struck by the traditional and rather classical lines of the skyscraper.

Turk called the building developers and after consulting with architect Phillip Johnson, the clock was placed in the center of the foyer of the newly completed building.

"I did not know what I was going to do with the damned thing," Turk says. "but I was trying to build up our cultural image. That's why I brought this clock here."

The clock he brought to Houston is an original timepiece manufactured in about 1910 by the Seth Thomas Clock Co. in Thomaston, Conn., for the Youmans Jewelry Co. in Waycross, Ga.

That company was billed $540 for the clock and freight and the Seth Thomas company recorded a profit on the deal of $81.

"It is really a museum piece, that clock," Turk says, "and I recognized it."

Can his type of clock survive in the electronic age? Turk would rather not comment directly on that, but says in a round about way that as a craftsman he would "rather rely on a hand-made marine chronometer made 90 to 100 years ago" than on a modern electronic timepiece.

Besides, he says, next to the sun dial, a pendulum clock is one of the earliest methods of keeping time and that to truly understand clocks and time "you have to know the physics of the pendulum."

Why bother, however, when for a mere $7,000 or so a month you can disregard the pendulum and rent your very own Super Matrix Message Center which in addition to telling the time, will keep you up to date on the latest Dow Jones averages, the temperature, the best bargains in grand pianos and where they are serving the cheapest oysters in town?

This type of modern timepiece is manufactured in Houston by the Federal Sign Co. and, according to district manager Stewart Edinger, the company has about 100 such clocks erected at various locations.

The type of clocks, all equipped with the latest in solid state electronics, manufactured by Federal Sign range from the standard time-temperature variety to the top-of-the-line Super Matrix Message Center.

It's winner take all tonight as Celtics meet Lakers

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics have played 104 games this season. The Los Angeles Lakers have played 102. None of that counts anymore.

The National Basketball Association season that began more than seven months ago in mid-fall ends tonight in a late-spring heat wave with the only game that matters.

"One game. We play all year to get here," says Los Angeles' Michael Cooper. "So throw the ball up and let's go for it."

Boston, which never has lost a seventh game of a championship series in six appearances, is host for the winner-take-all finale against Los Angeles, which never has won a seventh game of a championship series in four attempts.

Some Celtics didn't think there'd even be a seventh game.

"We really felt we could finish it today," said Boston's Larry Bird after the Lakers stayed alive by winning Sunday's sixth game, 119-108, in Los Angeles to even the series, 3-3.

"I thought I'd be playing blackjack tonight in Vegas," Celtics' forward Cedric Maxwell said after the loss. "I had all the arrangements made."

The Lakers spoiled those plans.

Tonight, they'll try to become only the fifth team to win an NBA championship series after trailing 3-2 and only the second finalist to knock off Boston, which is 14-1 in title rounds, including 7-0 against the Lakers.

"Everything is there to be had," said Laker Coach Pat Riley. "We have a chance to do something that no one else has done — win a world championship in Boston."

"We're going to win this one for Red Auerbach," Riley said of the Celtic president and general manager.

Throughout the series, Los Angeles has relied on missed Celtic shots and its own defensive rebounds to fuel its devastating fastbreak. Boston has done well when it has shot accurately from outside and dominated the offensive boards.

The Celtics, who had the NBA's best regular-season record, have been nearly unbeatable at home. They are 44-9 this season, including 11-1 in the playoffs, on the famed parquet floor beneath the NBA record of 14 championship banners. They are 2-1 here in this final series.

However, nine of the last 11 NBA crowns have been won on the road, including the 1980 title by the Lakers over Philadelphia and the 1981 championship by the Celtics over Houston.

The Lakers, who had the

Tri-State Rodeo Finals results

Palmer to miss U.S. Open

NEW YORK (AP) — Arnold Palmer knows he's not the same golfer today he was a couple of decades ago, when his dramatic, charismatic style thrust the sport into the public's consciousness.

"I suppose my game is not what it was 10 or 15 or 20 years ago," he said Monday. "My reactions are not as fast. Mostly it's mental concentration."

Palmer offered an example — one that probably cost him a berth in this week's U.S. Open, which begins Thursday at Winged Foot in Mamaroneck, N.Y.

Forced to qualify for the tournament in which he had played every year since 1952, Palmer came up short, shooting a 2-over-par 146 at the Sharon Golf Club in Sharon, Ohio, last Tuesday.

"The last nine holes, I came apart at the seams," Palmer said. "My game is not as good as it once was. Some days, it's just as good. Sometimes, it's better. If any part of my golf game has deteriorated, it's been my short game. I three-putted two greens in a row and I went from qualifying to out of it."

Palmer, 54, said his concentration had been broken on the 12th hole at Sharon when a contact lens slipped in his eye. "I three-putted No. 13," he said.

So, instead of spending the week at Winged Foot, he will attend to "some work I needed to do," play a practice round at Birmingham, Ala., preparing for next month's PGA tournament, and then head home to Latrobe, Pa.

He'll watch the windup of the Open on television. "If it gets hot," he said, "I might go swimming."

Palmer, one of the game's all-time greats, did not question the United States Golf Association requirement that he qualify for this tournament.

"I qualified before," he said. "I have no objection, no disagreement with the USGA. I think if you can't play, you shouldn't play. I missed. I had every opportunity to make it."

Palmer was in town to be honored Monday night by the All American Collegiate Golf

Babe Ruth Roundup

Grant Gamblin pitched a no-hitter as J.T. Richardson blanked Holmes Gift Shoppe, 8-0, Monday in the opening round of the Babe Ruth League baseball tournament.

Gamblin struck out 13 of the 23 batters he faced while walking four.

Gamblin, J.W. Roe, Derick Ryan, Chris Smith and Tommy Bowden led Richardson's hitting attack.

Grant will meet the Cree Company-First National Bank winner Wednesday night.

Grant Supply defeated

Lions Club, 11-5, in the other tourney game.

Winning pitcher was Kelly Loter.

Leading hitters for Grant were David Doke, James Ward, Kenny Steward, John Thomas and Loter.

Vance Vanderburg, Mike Lynn, Kevin McKnight, Mark Gilbert and Brandon Strawn were the best at the plate for the Lions.

Tonight's games has Cree Company going against First National Bank in the first game, followed by Pampa Hardware vs. Grant Supply.

Palmer breaks record in Masters discus toss

Pampa teacher Wendell Palmer threw the discus 168-feet, 9-inches Saturday to set a world record in a Masters track and field meet held last weekend in Mason.

Masters competition is for athletes 50 and above. Palmer's throw, which came on his last try, broke the old mark of 160-9 set by Fortune Gordien in 1975.

"I'm pretty happy about breaking the record," Palmer said. "I'm been after it for the past two years."

Palmer also won the hammer throw, 114-9; shot put, 42-8; and javelin, 138-1.

Tommy Palmer, Palmer's 14-year-old son, competed in a special exhibition meet at Mason. He threw the hammer 71-1 1/2, discus 116-6 and javelin 102-6.

Henderson faces prison sentence

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Thomas "Hollywood" Henderson, the flamboyant former linebacker of the Dallas Cowboys, faces four years and eight months in prison for molesting two teen-age girls, then trying to bribe them not to testify against him.

Henderson, 31, who was sentenced Monday by Superior Court Judge Ernest L. Kelly, pleaded no contest to the charges in April.

A 16-year-old paraplegic testified that Henderson met her and a 17-year-old companion in a liquor store on Nov. 2, 1983, then took them to his apartment, where he assaulted them.

He later gave the girls $500 to either leave the state or change their testimony, prosecutors said.

Gunslingers shoot down Maulers

By EARL BOHN
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Maulers' misery stretched through another game thanks to what San Antonio quarterback Rick Neuheisel calls his team's "rubber band" defense.

"The defense has probably been the main stream of our team the entire year," San Antonio quarterback Rick Neuheisel said after throwing a pair of touchdown passes in a 21-3 victory over the Maulers Monday night.

"They're called the Rubber Band defense because they bend but they don't break," he said.

Pittsburgh had the ball inside the San Antonio 20-yard line six times, including four times in the second quarter. But the Maulers managed only Eric Schubert's 27-yard field goal in losing for the tenth time in their last 11 games.

"We didn't make a break for ourselves tonight, and we didn't get a break," said Pittsburgh Coach Ellis Rainsberger.

Gunslinger defenders, who had not given up more than 94 yards to a single opposing runner, yielded 123 yards to Walter Holman, who ran for injured Heisman Trophy winner Mike Rozier.

"They looked rather porous at times, but then when it got down to where it counted, they shut them down," said Gunslingers Coach Gil Steinke.

"(We) played a lot of pretty games this year, but lost. And then we play as sloppy as we did and we win," he said. "I'm just glad that we won."

San Antonio's record is now 6-10 after the team started its inaugural USFL season 1-6. The Maulers fell to 3-13.

"Tonight we took a giant step backwards," said Pittsburgh quarterback Tom Rozantz.

Jerry Gordon took a few steps toward the sidelines while defensive back Mark Harper was covering him in the endzone, and twice that made a difference for San Antonio. Gordon caught both of Neuheisel's scoring passes.

"Both of them were pretty much the same thing. I just said run for the back flag. I'm going to throw it there and it'll be waiting for you," he said.

"Rick threw both of them perfectly. It's virtually impossible for a defensive back to stop it when it's thrown right," said Gordon, who had his finest USFL game. He caught five passes for 81 yards.

Neuheisel hit Gordon on a 21-yard scoring pass play to give the Gunslingers a 14-3 lead in the second quarter. Gordon pulled in his second touchdown pass on a 12-yard play early in the fourth quarter.

The Gunslingers went ahead to stay on the first series of the game.

Mark Rush took a reverse handoff on the opening kickoff and returned the ball 55 yards to the Maulers' 45-yard line.

San Antonio scored six plays later on Marcus Bonner's 1-yard touchdown dive to take the lead 7-0.

Eric Schubert kicked a 27-yard field goal for Pittsburgh to make it 7-3 after quarterback Tom Rozantz found Jackie Flowers on a 51-yard pass play that put the Maulers on the Gunslingers' 13-yard line.

Holman helped move Pittsburgh 58 yards on the next series, gaining 47 yards on eight carries. But the Gunslingers held at their 13-yard line, where Greg Fields batted down a field goal attempt by Schubert.

Schubert also came up short on a 54-yard field goal attempt that had been set up by Ron Freeman's interception in the closing seconds of the first half.

The Gunslingers choked a Pittsburgh threat late in the fourth quarter when they sacked backup quarterback Glenn Carano from the 8-yard line and recovered his fumble.

Pirates now known as 'Slumber Company'

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer
In Pittsburgh, they once were known as the "Lumber Company," with big hitters like Roberto Clemente. Willie Stargell and Dave Parker.

Now, the Pittsburgh Pirates are being called the "Slumber Company" for those mighty bats have fallen into a deep sleep.

Twice this season, the Pirates have lost six games in a row, and their 22-34 record had them 9½ games back, in last place in the National League East after losing the opener of a three-game series with the New York Mets Monday night.

They are averaging just over three runs a game, putting a tremendous strain on a pitching staff that some consider the best in the league. The Pirates carried a team ERA of 3.11 into their series with the Mets, second best in the League, and their seven starting pitchers — Rick Rhoden, John Candalaria, Larry McWilliams, John Tudor, Jose DeLeon, Lee Tunnell and Don Robinson — had a combined ERA of 2.80.

"In 23 games this season, we've scored two or less runs," Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner says. "Our pitchers haven't had the luxury of making a single mistake. Every pitch could be the ballgame."

Tanner points out that of the 15 non-pitchers on his 25-man roster, going into the Mets series, eight had batting averages under .200, including Dale Berra (.192), Lee Mazzilli (.189), Jim Morrison (.190), Rafael Belliard (.182), Doug Frobel (.146), Brian Harper (.091), Milt May (.115) and Hedi Vargas (.125). The best batting average on the team belonged to a pitcher, Robinson, at .364, and Johnny Ray, at .302, was the only regular hitting above .300.

Bill Madlock, 1983 NL batting champion, was hitting only .262 after missing spring training with an injury. And Jason Thompson, the only real power threat on the team, had three homers.

Yet, Tanner remained the eternal optimist.

"Madlock had no spring training, and it's only been the last five games he's started to swing the bat again," Tanner says. "Jason hasn't been hitting. But there's no reason a lot of our players shouldn't be able to hit up to their abilities."

Adding to the Pirates' problems has been a defense which had committed 53 errors this season, including 13 by shortstop Berra and 10 by third baseman Madlock.

"We have committed more errors in the first third (of the season) than we did last year, but we have the type of ballplayers who I think can improve," Tanner says.

In recent years, Tanner's clubs have tended to be slow starting. Tanner was not particularly worried then; he's not particularly worried now.

Red Sox win on Nichols' homer

By JONATHAN VITTI
Associated Press Writer
Although behind by three runs in the ninth inning, the Boston Red Sox had a backup plan.

Pinch-hitting reserve Reid Nichols, who hadn't been to the plate since May 19, used a borrowed bat from Rick Miller, another reserve, to swat a three-run homer that capped a six-run rally and lifted the Red Sox to a dramatic 9-6 victory Monday night over the New York Yankees.

"Rick and I did our usual thing in the clubhouse, hitting balls of tape to get ready if we were needed in the late innings, but I only had two bats ready because I haven't been playing much," Nichols said.

Nichols, who explained he shaves the handles of his bats, ran the count to 2-2 and then fouled off four consecutive pitches, breaking his second bat on the last with a foul line drive.

Nichols went to the dugout and was handed one of his own bats. He rejected it, though.

"Rick shaves his bats like I do, so I wanted one of his," Nichols said. "Then I got a fast ball up and over the plate. I was hoping I would just hit the ball. I was so excited I don't think I realized that it had gone out until I was rounding third."

"It was exciting, like the World Series or something the way everyone came running out of our dugout. It's been a while, but I really appreciate the opportunity to go up there."

Texas media selects all-tournament teams

AUSTIN (AP) — Three seniors and a freshman who pitched a no-hit game at the state baseball tournament are unanimous choices on the all-tournament teams.

Getting all the votes of media covering the 36th annual tournament Thursday and Friday were pitcher Gary Robertson of Houston Cypress-Fairbanks, first baseman Steve Spear of Austin Westlake, shortstop Tim James of Prosper and Runge freshman Augie Rodriguez, who pitched a no-hitter.

Robertson struck out 13, walked none and gave up only one unearned run in 10 innings.

Rodriguez pitched the first no-hit game in the tournament in 14 years in winning 4-3 over Apple Springs in the Class A semifinals.

Spear had three hits in seven at-bats for Westlake and James, who also won the championship game pitching in relief against Runge, was four for nine and scored five runs.

Junior David Garcia of Odem made the 3A all-tournament team as a pitcher, winning both of his team's games, and also as a third baseman. He was four for 10.

One all-tournament selection, Jon Lee, second baseman for Westlake, played only in the field and never batted.

The team champions were

Freeport Brazoswood in Class 5A, Westlake in 4A, Odem in 3A, Ore City in 2A and Prosper in A.

Here are the all-state tournament teams, by division.

Lendl faces showdown

BRIGHTON, England (AP) — French Open champion Ivan Lendl, who broke his Grand Slam title drought with a stunning five-set victory over John McEnroe in the French Open, may face another showdown with the New Yorker in the Queen's Club grass court tennis championship.

Lendl is seeded second behind McEnroe in the $203,000 tournament, and both players were to begin their bid for the title — held by Jimmy Connors — today.

The 24-year-old Czechoslovak powerhouse was to begin against little-known American Leif Shiras, who is ranked 103 places below him.

McEnroe was to play American Marty Davis while third-seeded Connors faced South African Bernie Mitton.

Play began Monday with sixth-seeded Bill Scanlon of Dallas, ranked 16th in the world, being upset 6-3, 6-4 by South African Danie Visser.

Sweden's Stefan Edberg, who is seeded ninth, also fell 6-7, 7-6, 6-3 to Ramesh Krishnan of India in the tournament, considered a key tuneup for Wimbledon.

Mondale likely to dominate platform

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson have appealed to Democratic platform writers to produce a document of new directions, but drafting sessions are expected to be dominated by supporters of Walter F. Mondale.

The party's platform committee concludes two months of public hearings today, then gets down to actually framing the proposed platform in a four-day session beginning Sunday.

The 15-member drafting committee will be composed of Mondale, Hart and Jackson supporters in roughly the same ratio in which the three have won delegates.

At latest count, Mondale has 1,988 delegates — more than enough for a first-ballot victory at the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco next month — to 1,228 for Hart and 372 for Jackson.

Mondale didn't appear before the panel; he is continuing his vacation on Long Island.

Hart and Jackson, in back-to-back appearances, gave roughly the same message on Monday to the platform committee.

Hart urged the panel to adopt "new departures."

"If we simply think in terms of our own party's past, we will only repeat our own failures."

Number of dead in Iraqi attack rises

By The Associated Press
Iran declared a day of mourning today for 44 people reported killed and 250 wounded in the southern town of Dezful. Both Iran and Iraq said they would refrain from further attacks on civilians.

The agreement proposed by U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar took effect at 4 a.m. today (8 p.m. Monday EDT). It was the first time during the 45-month-old war that Iran had accepted mediation.

But a high-ranking Iranian official said it wouldn't affect the Islamic republic's determination to carry out its war with Iraq on the battlefield.

Foreign ministers of the six-nation Gulf Coordination Council — Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Bahrain, Qatar and Oman — planned to meet in Taif, Saudi Arabia, today to discuss ways to assure a steady supply of oil for world markets in spite of Iraqi and Iranian attacks on Persian Gulf shipping.

The speaker of Iran's Parliament on Monday rejected any peace negotiations with President Saddam Hussein of Iraq. In speech, he said Iraq's Arab supporters expect their ships to be safe in the Persian Gulf as long as Iraq continues to attack oil tankers bound for Iran.

"Our policy is that all ships must pass safely, or those who are in some way a partner in the war and provide help (to Iraq) should not expect to have security," Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency quoted Hashemi Rafsanjani as saying.

Kuwait blamed Iran for a missile attack Sunday on the Kuwaiti tanker Kazima in the southern reaches of the gulf. It was the 42nd ship damaged in the past four months, according to shipping sources in Bahrain. Rafsanjani didn't directly confirm that Iran had attacked the ship, but he implied it. "In any case, the ship has been hit and we usually don't announce details in such cases," he was quoted as saying. "The Iraqis hit (ships) there, others do too."

Rescue workers searched through the rubble of 720 shops and houses in Dezful that were blasted by Iraqi missiles. Tehran Radio said today. The death total rose to 44, and the wounded numbered 250, the radio report said.

Baghdad Radio said the attack on the southern Iranian town was in retaliation for two deaths and 12 other casualties caused by Iranian shelling of five Iraqi border cities on Monday.

Iran and Iraq had agreed Sunday to the moratorium on civilian attacks.

Lebanon's parliament talks peace

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Prime Minister Rashid Karami's coalition government went before Parliament for a crucial vote of confidence today following 12 hours of shelling that police said killed 84 people and wounded 216 in and around the capital.

Fifty-three of Parliament's 90 members showed up for the 11 a.m. session in the no man's land between Christian east and Moslem west Beirut.

The legislators planned to take a roll call vote on the government's plan for ending the nine-year civil war if speakers finish their addresses. Otherwise, the vote would be taken on Wednesday.

Christian and Moslem militia commands accused each other of igniting the bombardment of residential neighborhoods — the heaviest in four months — in an effort to block a vote of confidence on the plan, which is needed to formally install Karami's six-week-old government.

About 60 rounds of machine gun fire cracked in the distance shortly before Speaker Kamel Assad opened the session.

Although he Cabinet includes four political or military leaders of the nation's main militias, none showed up for the session.

Berri had earlier held the Lebanese Forces command responsible for the shelling, charging that Christian President Amin Gemayel and his father, Phalangist Party leader Pierre Gemayel, were unable to rein in the pro-Israeli Christian fighters.
