Perot's crusade making enemies of former friends

AUSTIN (AP) — H. Ross Perot's battle to reform public education in Texas is making him enemies among former allies—conservatives.

Perot, who built an image as an ultra-conservative superpatriot with personal crusades against drugs, North Vietnam and the government of Iran, is now drawing flak from the far right.

"I'm disappointed. I think he has sold us a bill of goods," Mel Gabler, a leading conservative force in Texas public education for two decades through his textbook crusades, said of Perot's education reform efforts.

"He (Perot) is going contrary to everything the average parent I know wants," Gabler said. "Very man are disappointed in him."

Gov. Mark White, a Democrat, tapped Perot to head up the Select Committee on Public Education, which studied the state of the schools, drafted sweeping reforms and offered them to the Legislature, which is meeting in special session on the issue.

Perot is advocating higher teacher salaries, more time for study and less for athletics, an appointed state Board of Education, teacher competency testing, basic skills testing for children and other programs expected to cost nearly $1 billion.

The antagonism toward Perot has spread to the most conservative members of the Legislature, the Dallas Times Herald reported Sunday.

"I'm disillusioned with Ross Perot," said Rep. Randy Pennington, R-Houston. "I think Mark White appointed him education czar to pull his political chestnuts out of the fire. He (Perot) said if he didn't get his way, he'd kill the education bill, and it appears to me everyone capitulated to him."

Perot is offering no apologies.

"If you're not looking at it politically, the label is not the issue," Perot said. "The proper course of action is the only issue."

He says the conservative does not belong on much of the work he has done.

"Just look at the record going back to the late '60s," Perot said. "For years I've been putting my time, energy and money into programs for children, into programs for people who needed help."

His education program, conservative parents say, is not help they need.

Parents have been walking the Capitol hallways during the special session to collar lawmakers and explain why they oppose many of the changes Perot wants, especially the optional pre-school program for disadvantaged 4-year-olds.

"For one thing, I believe parenting belongs to parents, not the schools or the state," said Houston parent Kathy Thurston.

Gabler said he and other conservatives understand the concern.

"That's based on the principle of Big Brother government—that government should take care of everything and everybody," Gabler said. "It would be replacing the family as the fundamental unit of society, and on a philosophical basis that is going opposite of our Constitution."

"I can see why so many parents are very concerned about this issue: When is it the schools' function to take care of children? They're supposed to educate," he said.

Perot said he is surprised the pre-school program has drawn so much opposition, especially from middle class parents.

"They're fine people. They're wonderful parents. I wish every child in Texas had parents like these. If they did, we wouldn't need a 4-year-old program," he said.

"But unfortunately, we have children who are street children at 3 and 4. If we don't put these children into an early education center, and get them ready for the first grade, bad things happen when they enter the first grade," he said.

Jackson on way to meet with Duarte

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The Rev. Jesse L. Jackson is heading for El Salvador and a meeting with President Jose Napoleon Duarte to relay a cease-fire overture from leftist guerrillas.

The Democratic presidential candidate was stopping in San Salvador for the Duarte meeting before pushing on with the next leg of his five-day trip to Latin America, a visit to Cuba and a meeting Tuesday with President Fidel Castro.

Jackson met several times on Sunday with four representatives of two Salvadoran guerrilla groups, the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front (FMLN) and the Democratic Revolutionary Front (FDR). Neither Jackson nor rebel spokesman Ruben Zamora would give specifics of the message for Duarte.

"The group has expressed overwhelming willingness to engage in a process of negotiations and dialogue and commitment to a peaceful solution as opposed to a military solution," Jackson said after the meeting in a hotel here.

As in the past, however, the guerrillas rejected a condition for cease-fire talks laid down by Duarte in his June 1 inauguration speech: an end to the fighting in El Salvador.

The rebels responded to that speech by calling for unconditional talks.

Zamora said the guerrillas are prepared to go to San Salvador to discuss a cease-fire. He said Costa Rica has offered its embassy there as a site for negotiations.

Jackson said he talked with a representative of the Duarte government on Sunday. He declined to identify the representative.

As he prepared for the trip, Jackson showed willingness to retract some earlier harsh words about Duarte. He had criticized the Duarte government while the president was visiting the United States as a "puppet regime" manipulated by the Reagan administration.

Discovery's debut delayed for a day

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The shuttle Discovery's back-up computer "hung up" today, forcing NASA to scrub the ship's debut launch just minutes before scheduled liftoff. The problem was reminiscent of one which grounded the first space shuttle for two days in 1981.

"We will scrub for the day," said spokesman Mark Hess at launch control.

A six-person crew was long since aboard the ship when the delay was announced. Among them, America's second space woman and an industry engineer whose "weightless" manufacturing process will produce test quantities of a mystery drug.

The malfunction cropped up about half-an-hour before the scheduled launch time of 8:43 a.m. EDT and NASA engineers attempted to find a solution. With nine minutes before scheduled launch, the countdown clock did not pick up and a delay was announced.

The launch was set back until Tuesday at the earliest. The 1981 delay was for 48 hours and preceded the ship

Columbia's dramatic maiden voyage.

The countdown progressed smoothly overnight and into the terminal countdown phase. But when the crew switched data from their four to a backup machine, launch control noticed an unexplained disparity.

"The backup flight system apparently has stopped, hung-up," said Hess. The backup system would take over flight controls if all four of the shuttle's primary computers failed.

He said launch director Bob Sieck decided to postpone the effort today "because of a lack of confidence that the problem could be resolved in the 43 minute period available" for launching today.

He added: "It appeared it would be a race against the clock. Everybody agreed we would rather wait and fly with a good machine."

The astronauts had been aboard for more than two hours.

Hess said Sieck expressed his regrets to commander Henry Hartsfield and told him he appreciated the crew's patience.

Hess said NASA engineers had detected "an internal problem indicating a possible internal hardware failure."

The mission plans call for the attempted deployment of a military communications satellite the day after launch.

The release will follow three incidents in which satellites deployed by shuttle crews were propelled into worthless orbits after their attached rockets failed. Another failure could prompt customers to shift their payloads to expendable rockets like the Ariane used by the European Space Agency.

"Naturally, with the upper stage failures we've had, we'll be watching this closely," said Jesse Moore, acting director of the shuttle program.

During their week in space, the Discovery crew will snap thousands of Earth photos with a mapping camera and erect a 10-story-tall solar sail to test a device that may one day convert the sun's rays to electricity to power space stations or shuttle missions.

Discovery's commander, 50-year-old Henry Hartsfield, was pilot aboard Columbia on its fourth flight two years ago.

City to act on tax collection contract

Pampa city commissioners will hear a presentation concerning a tax collection contract between the City of Pampa and the Gray County Appraisal District and take action on the contract during its regular meeting at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday.

The commission also will consider a resolution designating Public Works Director Allyn Moore as city engineer and city traffic engineer.

In other business, the commissioners will hear a presentation by the Pampa Softball Association on transfer of funds collected from fees for the construction of a restroom and concession facility at Hobart Street Park.

The commission also will consider approval of an amendment to the overtime policy as prescribed in the Personnel Policy of the city.

Other items will include a staff report on progress of the current street maintenance program, the receiving of a gift for the M. K. Brown Auditorium from the Gray County 80th Birthday Celebration Committee and a report from the M. K. Brown Advisory Board.

In other business, commissioners will consider approval of final plat for a part of the south half of Section 94, Block 3, IG&N RRC Survey, for a subdivision and payment of accounts payable.

Public cooperation a major key to cleanup effort, officials say

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Public awareness and voluntary cooperation are major keys in cleaning up trash and litter problems and eliminating unsightly areas in Pampa, city officials and Clean Pampa, Inc., members have indicated.

The city needs the cooperation of the public to aid in enforcement of ordinances and to get evidence against violators of trash, weeds and nuisance ordinances. Public Works Director Allyn Moore said.

Moore said city officials cannot catch every violation leading to unsightly trash accumulations, objectionable growths of weeds or dangerous junked cars and delapidated buildings.

People noticing such violations should contact city officials, Moore said. But in addition to making the city aware of such problems, more cooperation is needed to strengthen enforcement efforts, he said.

It is not enough for the city to be informed about such things as a person dumping trash in the alley, for example, he pointed out. To enforce ordinances, the city needs evidence against violators.

And too often, a person will call in with a complaint but will be unwilling to sign an official complaint or to go to court to give evidence against a violator, Moore said. Witnesses often are needed to provide more direct evidence than the city can obtain, he said.

But even if a person isn't willing to go to court, he still can let the city know of existing problems that need to be corrected, he said. Many problems can be taken care of after violators are contacted by city officials, usually without court action.

"People should call and complain," said Dolores Spurrier, coordinator for Clean Pampa, Inc., a new organization formed to help eliminate trash and littering problems in the city.

Without complaints from the public, trash and litter problems will just continue, she said.

People having complaints against neighbors, businesses and other places creating dangerous and unsightly trash and junk accumulations can call the city, she said, or they can call her. Sometimes complaints aren't made to the right department, she said. Spurrier said she would be willing to help people insure complaints reach the proper personnel who can handle the situation.

Spurrier can be contacted at 665-7079.

Moore said people need to realize some time may be needed after a complaint is received to get the violation corrected. The city does have other things going on, he said, and it may take awhile to contact the violators and allow them time to correct the problem.

Also, problems may come up in enforcement because of the ordinances themselves. It's not always enough just to have a complaint made, Moore explained. The matter has to be checked to determine an actual violation exists, and then procedures have to be followed properly to insure the violation is corrected.

Often direct evidence is required to determine who is causing the violation. Sometimes that requires eyewitnesses, and that is when other people can be of assistance to the city, he said.

But many, if not most, problems could be eliminated if people exercised more voluntary cooperation themselves to be aware of problems they could be creating and take care of their own trash, litter and junk situations, both Moore and Spurrier said.

The city provides dumpsters for homes and businesses to aid in the collecting of waste and trash. But problems often arise because people don't always use them properly.

DWI trial requests not increasing yet

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

Staying sober behind the wheel for less than 10 years after a drunk-driving conviction won't save a person from mandatory jail time and the loss of his driver's license on the next go-round, a local judge said about Texas' DWI laws that went into effect on January 1.

Those mandatory sentences for successful probationers who backslide and drink down the road will result in a larger number of jury trials here, but not until 1986, Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy said.

The state's stricter drunk-driving laws won't create more jury trials here until some current first-time offenders finish a usual two years probation and later find out that they still face mandatory jail time and license suspension for another conviction, even up to 10 years after the previous offense, according to Kennedy.

The county judge said the expected increase in demands for jury trials in DWI cases won't start until people face a subsequent offense after their release from probation granted under the new laws.

"We know it's coming," Kennedy said.

Those already arrested more than once under the new laws haven't had time to complete the usual probation for the earlier offense and have been jailed for violating that probation, he explained. Subsequent arrests are cause to revoke probation, the judge said. Probation violators usually aren't prosecuted for the later offenses, so the law hasn't been tested to see whether more defendants will demand jury trials, he said.

Under the old standards, a person who served out his probation for drunken driving had the conviction wiped out for the purposes of prosecution and sentencing in later offenses, the judge said.

"It would be a matter of record, but he would not have the conviction," Kennedy said.

Now, though, any DWI conviction stays on the books for 10 years for the purpose of prosecution and sentencing in subsequent offenses, he said.

The expected howling for jury trial in DWI cases will come from defendants who avoided jail and completed probation the first time but face another prosecution and mandatory terms within the unforgiving, 10-year period, the judge explained.

Under the new laws, a person convicted of drunk driving for the second time must spend at least three days in jail.

Dear Abby Reckless teen-agers don't always get a second chance

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: On May 20, two wonderful 17-year-old boys from our school, both fine athletes, were on their way to a party. They were speeding on an unfamiliar road, missed a turn and were killed in a terrible accident.

I cannot describe the grief that this small town is feeling. It's the first time I've ever seen grown men cry. Both boys who died were to have graduated on May 26.

Almost every year you have run the column titled, "Please, God, I'm Only 17." It's too late for these two boys who died in Caldwell, Ohio, on May 20, but it's not too late for others. Please give it another run.

TRACY IN CALDWELL
DEAR TRACY: Here it is. Let's hope it helps:

PLEASE, GOD, I'M ONLY 17

The day I died was an ordinary school day. How I wish I had taken the bus! But I was too cool for the bus. I remember how I wheeled the car out of Mom. "Special favor," I pleaded. "All the kids drive." When the 2:50 bell rang, I threw all my books in the locker. I was free until 8:40 tomorrow morning! I ran to the parking lot, excited at the thought of driving a car and being my own boss. Free!

It doesn't matter how the accident happened. I was goofing off—going too fast. Taking crazy chances. But I was enjoying my freedom and having fun. The last thing I remember was passing an old lady who seemed to be going awfully slow. I heard a deafening crash and felt a terrible jolt. Glass and steel flew everywhere. My whole body seemed to be turning inside out. I heard myself scream.

Suddenly I awakened; it was very quiet. A police officer was standing over me. Then I saw a doctor. My body was mangled. I was saturated with blood. Pieces of jagged glass were sticking out all over. Strange that I couldn't feel anything.

Hey, don't pull that sheet over my head! I can't be dead. I'm only 17. I've got a date tonight. I'm supposed to grow up and have a wonderful life. I haven't lived yet. I can't be dead.

Later I was placed in a drawer.

My folks had to identify me. Why did they have to see me like this? Why did I have to look at Mom's eyes when she faced the most terrible ordeal of her life? Dad suddenly looked like an old man. He told the man in charge, "Yes, he is my son."

The funeral was a weird experience. I saw all my relatives and friends walk toward the casket. They passed by, one by one, and looked at me with the saddest eyes I've ever seen. Some of my buddies were crying. A few of the girls touched my hand and sobbed as they walked away.

Please ... somebody ... wake me up! Get me out of here! I can't bear to see my mom and dad so broken up. My grandparents are so racked with grief they can hardly walk. My brother and sisters are like zombies. They move like robots. In a daze, everybody! No one can believe this. And I can't believe it, either.

Please don't bury me! I'm not dead! I have a lot of living to do! I want to laugh and run again. I want to sing and dance. Please don't put me in the ground. I promise if you give me just one more chance, God, I'll be the most careful driver in the whole world. All I want is one more chance.

Please, God, I'm only 17!

DEAR ABBY: I am engaged to a lovely woman, but we may have a problem.

When her phone rings and I am present, she says, "I can't talk to you now, I have company"—never "My fiancée is here."

She says the callers are old boy-friends who just call to talk to her. Someone who has known her longer than I have told me that she used to be a call girl, so I asked her if it was true. She didn't give me a straight answer, she just smiled.

Now I'm beginning to wonder. Abby, do call girls ever marry?

PERPLEXED IN MUKWONAGO, WIS.

DEAR PERPLEXED: Yes. Many do, just as do many of the men who have called them. If you suspect that your fiancée is still in business, ask her again, and don't take a smile for an answer.

For many people, summertime means vacation time and a chance to get away—whether to the beach, the mountains, foreign destinations or even a visit to relatives. If you're pregnant and planning a summer trip, here are some common sense guidelines that might make your trip a little more enjoyable.

If possible, the most comfortable time for a woman to travel when she's pregnant is in the fourth through the sixth months. By then she will have gotten over many of the symptoms of early pregnancy—fatigue, morning sickness—and have seen her doctor several times. In the last three months, many women become uncomfortable with their weight gain, frequent urination, decreased energy and perhaps swollen feet. Because due dates are only estimates of the baby's arrival, many doctors will suggest that their patients stick close to home for the last month or so.

The first vacation plan you should make is to check with your doctor. He or she will know your medical background and how your pregnancy is progressing and may have some suggestions as to how to make your trip more comfortable. Also, check with your doctor about any medication that you may take during the vacation, such as motion sickness, anti-diarrheal, and allergy medicine. It's not wise to take any medication during pregnancy without checking with your physician first.

Where you plan to go and what you plan to do should depend a great deal on how you're feeling. Five countries in seven days is too much when you're pregnant. But anything from camping to sightseeing is fine as long as you don't get overtired.

continue to eat right, and have some time to relax. And don't forget to pack comfortable clothes, low-heeled shoes, and sunscreen for pregnancy-sensitive skin.

Keep your pregnancy in mind when you're planning how to get to your vacation. If you're traveling by car, frequent rest stops are necessary to stretch your legs and use the bathroom. Although a seatbelt may seem awkward for long trips, it reduces substantially the chances of you and your unborn baby getting hurt in an accident.

Flying may be a good idea for far away vacations, since it reduces the time traveling on planes, as well as buses and trains, try to get an aisle seat so you can get up and move around and have easy access to the bathroom.

If you're planning a trip overseas, you might want to ask your doctor about a particular health risk. Luckily, most countries do not require any special vaccinations which may not be safe during pregnancy. If you have a specific medical problem you may wish to get a copy of your medical records to take with you.

The most important thing to remember about a summer vacation is to relax and enjoy yourself. A trip away from stress and worry of everyday life is the most important part of your summer vacation.

Single, free copies of "Hin for the Pregnant Traveler" are available by sending stamped, self-addressed business size envelope along with the name of the book to The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists Resource Center, 600 Maryland Ave SW, Washington, DC 20024.

Program stresses seatbelt safety

In Texas last year, 78 children ages 0 - 4 died as passengers in motor vehicle accidents. Another 6,603 were injured - many seriously.

Texas leads the nation with these grim statistics. Yet in some areas of the state, as few as 4 percent of children ride in car safety seats.

National studies indicate that the death and injury rate for children in motor vehicle accidents would be 70 to 90 percent less if all children were properly restrained in car seats.

Because so many Texas children are killed or hurt in motor vehicle accidents, and because so few parents take advantage of the protection offered by car safety seats, the Texas Department of Health, in cooperation with the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation, is starting a statewide campaign to promote the use of the safety seats.

The TDH's Child Passenger

Safety Program is providing general information about the seats as well as educational materials explaining how to buy or borrow child safety seats and how to properly install and use them.

John Snider, coordinator of the program at TDH headquarters in Austin, said, "We are just beginning to gear up this program statewide. If our model program in the Dallas - Fort Worth area is as successful as we expect, our statewide campaign will be intensified."

The model program in the Dallas - Fort Worth area is meant to demonstrate that the deaths and injuries of children in motor vehicle accidents will decrease with better availability and wider use of child safety seats, Snider said.

The statewide program includes a telephone hotline. Information, in English and Spanish, on projects which loan or sell safety seats at reduced prices is available through the hotline. In addition, callers may order educational materials, also in English and Spanish.

The hotline number is 1-800-252-8255. It is manned weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

(For more information, contact John Snider, Public Health Promotion Division, Texas Department of Health, 1100 West 49th Street, Austin, TX 78756. Phone: 512-458-7405).

Sunburn strikes again

SKILLMAN, N.J. (AP) Medical research indicates over exposure to the sun may cause aging, wrinkling of the skin and skin cancer, according to Dr. Frank Krakowski.

Krakowski, medical director for Johnson & Johnson, says the need to protect your skin from the ultraviolet rays of the sun begins the day you are born. He says there are several things that can be done to protect yourself.

"Avoid direct exposure to the sun," says Krakowski, "especially between the hours of 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. when the rays are most intense. Be sure to protect yourself of hazy days because damaging ultraviolet light penetrates the clouds. And wearing loose, light colored clothing may help some."

Understand menopause

Many women approach menopause with feelings of uncertainty or even fear, but this need not be the case.

How the woman goes through this stage of life depends mainly on her body's hormone balance and her understanding and feelings about this period, says the Texas Medical Association.

Menopause, the permanent end to menstruation, is the last of a series of changes a woman's body goes through from her late 30s to the mid 40s. These changes, called the climacteric, are the body's slowdown of its reproductive functions.

Many of the normal signs of aging are part of the climacteric and are due to the gradual increase in estrogen produced by the ovaries. Estrogen is the female hormone necessary for reproduction.

Most women stop menstruating between ages 45 and 55. For up to two years before menopause, the woman can have signs that it is approaching. Her period can vary in length and amount of bleeding, and it can skip a few months. When she has not had a period for six months or so, she has probably reached menopause.

Common side effects include hot flashes, sweating, and vaginal and urinary irritation. A major side effect of menopause, a bone disease called osteoporosis, takes several years to develop but can be stopped or prevented through estrogen replacement.

Hot flashes and sweating seem to happen most frequently at night, which can cause sleeplessness and fatigue. While hot flashes eventually go away, a few women have such severe problems with them that they may need short-term therapy.

Vaginal and urinary irritation results from tissues becoming thinner and losing their moisture and elasticity. Vaginal dryness is a problem during intercourse, but a water soluble lubricant can help.

Dwight Stones goes up and over

Stones soars to record Some favorites second best in Olympic Trials

LOS ANGELES (AP) — High jumper Dwight Stones, dwelling in the shadows of his sport in recent times, soared back into prominence, and a couple of America's premier runners wound up second best at the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials drew to a dramatic close.

Stones, an ebullient 30-year-old who admits he relishes the limelight, capped a well-planned comeback when he cleared an American record 7 feet, 8 inches in the high jump final Sunday night at the Los Angeles Coliseum.

Meanwhile, Mary Decker and Steve Scott, who've dominated the U.S. men's and women's 1,500 meters, each failed to win their events.

Unheralded Ruty Wysocki, with a time of 4 minutes, 00.18 seconds, handed Decker her first defeat in four years, and Jim Spivey overtook Scott to win the men's final in 3:36.43.

During a busy finish to the eight-day trials at the site of the upcoming Olympic track and field competition, Carol Lewis won the women's long jump at 22-7/8 to join her brother, Carl, on the U.S. squad; Doug Padilla took the men's 5,000 meters in 13:26.34; and Leslie Deniz won the women's discus with a throw of 202-7.

Stones, the two-time Olympic bronze medalist, had brazenly predicted he would better the American mark of 7-7/8 set by Tyke Peacock last year, and, after requiring just one attempt at each of the lower heights, he cleared the record height on his second try.

"I had been doing my underground routine," said Stones, who has competed infrequently recently. "And when I went 7-7 (in a high-jump competition he organized at nearby Ambassador College prior to the start of the Trials), I knew I was ready."

"When I came out here, I wanted to have that look on my face that the other guys would know they were jumping for the other two spots on the team.... I think I still have that old killer instinct."

Stones added that he did precisely what he had planned, commenting, "I didn't want to miss at any of the lower heights. I didn't want my friends and family who were in the stands to be biting their nails wondering whether it was going to make the team or not."

Stones, who missed three times after having the bar raised to 7-9/8, hadn't improved his personal best in the past eight years before he hit the American record jump. He said he particularly wanted to do well because, although he plans to compete some after the Games, "This is it for me."

Doug Nordquist, a distant cousin of Stones and a Washington State graduate, came up with his best effort ever to finish second at 7-7, while Milton Goode got the third and final Olympic berth with a height of 7-5/8. Peacock, who suffered a slight foot injury during an early jump, cleared just 7-3.

Decker, hardly downcast at her runner-up finish (4:00.04), said it was actually to her benefit.

Kite reaches goal with Atlanta title

ATLANTA (AP) — Tom Kite says he'll leave the rating of golfers to others — the fans and the media.

"I'm an awfully good player, but I'm certainly not ready to put myself in the great category," Kite said Sunday after claiming the $72,000 first prize in the $400,000 Georgia-Pacific Atlanta Golf Classic.

"I don't know that I'm a better player today than I was three days ago," Kite said after accomplishing one of his goals — winning two titles in the same season.

A winner of the Doral-Eastern Open earlier in the year, he became only the third two-time winner of the season with Sunday's victory.

"Believe me, it's a nice situation," Kite said after his closing 67 that left him with a 19-under-par 269 total on the 7,018-yard, par 72 Atlanta Country Club course.

"It's sometime I felt I should have done for the last two or three years. It seems like I struggle and struggle and finally win one. Hopefully this won't be the last one this year."

Kite made it look like a Sunday afternoon stroll, building a one-shot advantage at the start of the day into a five-shot victory over Don Pooley, who closed at 71-274 to finish in the runner-up slot for the third time in the last five Atlanta events.

"He deserved it," Pooley said. "I was never able to put any pressure on him."

Pooley, down three shots with three to play, three-putted the par-3 16th, missing a four-foot par putt.

"That was it," he said. "I really needed to make birdie on 16 to have a chance."

Pooley called Kite "probably the most consistent player out here on tour. He's starting to win more tournaments now. He was never in serious trouble."

Prohibitive Wimbledon favorite

Martina seeks place in history

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — This year's All-England championships celebrate 100 years of women's tennis at Wimbledon and Martina Navratilova wants to be remembered as the greatest woman player of the last century.

Navratilova, going for a third successive singles title, is such an outstanding favorite that one British bookmaker is not even issuing odds on the women's tournament.

The only bet is whom she will beat in the final.

"Martina is not unbeatable but she's not far from it. Nobody else can play that way," said America's Kathy Jordan after her 6-4, 6-1 defeat by the Czech-born naturalized American in the final of the Eastbourne tournament on Saturday, the last Wimbledon warm-up event for women.

Navratilova is not expected to open her bid at Wimbledon until the second day of the tournament, Tuesday, traditionally reserved for the women.

Opening up on center court today was defending men's champion and No. 1 seed John McEnroe against Australia's Paul McNamee.

At the same time on court one, No. 2 seed Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia met Dick Stockton of the United States, to be followed by Jimmy Connors' match against fellow American Lloyd Bourne.

Just like Alice Marble in 1939, Maureen Connolly in 1953 and Margaret Court-Smith in 1970, Navratilova dominates women's tennis and has lost only one match in each of the past two years.

Earlier this month, she became only the third woman and the fifth player of all time to win the Grand Slam of tennis — consecutive victories in the world's four major tournaments — and she has not been beaten by her great rival, Chris Evert Lloyd, since the Australian championships in 1982.

When Maud Watson became the first women's singles winner at Wimbledon in 1884, there were only 12 other players in the draw and her reward was a silver flower basket.

By contrast, the powerful, aggressive Navratilova already has earned over $8 million from the game, more than any other woman in history.

In her first-round match here, she faces fellow American "Peanut" Louie, runnerup in the junior event seven years ago, and is scheduled to meet her regular doubles partner Pam Shriver in the semifinals if the draw holds true.

Shriver, like Jordan, is a tall serve and volleyer and one of only a handful of players expected to mount any serious challenge to Navratilova's title on the fast grass courts.

Britain's Jo Durie has had a poor season but is another player in the serve and volley mould. She took a set off Navratilova in the quarter-finals of the Australian Open last year and led 3-1 in the final set before losing.

"She is playing so well that most of the other girls are afraid of her," Durie said at a recent press conference. "It's logical she is a red-hot favorite. Baseline players have little chance but she does not like players who attack her. The most important factor is that you must think you can beat her."

Overstreet death stuns teammates

WINONA, Texas (AP) — Miami Dolphins players and coaches reacted with shock to the news that running back David Overstreet died in an auto crash, the third tragic death in the National Football League team in the past four years.

Overstreet, a running back preparing for his second season with the Dolphins, was killed here Sunday when his car went out of control, crashed into gasoline pumps at a service station and exploded.

The vehicle burst into flames, instantly killing Overstreet, according to state Trooper Joe Abernathy. No other injuries were reported.

The 25-year-old Texas native apparently fell asleep while passing through here on the way to his nearby hometown of Big Sandy at about 6 a.m. CDT, said Abernathy.

Overstreet is the third Dolphin to die in the offseason in the past four years.

Linebacker Rusty Chambers died in auto accident in 1981 and linebacker Larry Gordon suffered a heart attack while jogging last summer. Gordon died one year ago Monday.

"I can't remember any team having three losses like this in three years. The only PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Situations requiring a team effort today should work out well for you and the other partner concerned. Forgo behaving too independently.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Strive for continuity and consistency today. If you do things in fits and starts you will do only a portion of what you are capable of producing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You should be rather lucky today in social situations and dealings with friends. However, your good fortune may not extend to financial realms.
