Gulf war hanging over economic summit meet

LONDON (AP) — Leaders of seven major industrialized nations gathered here today for a three-day economic summit where the issues of war in the Persian Gulf and international politics will vie with financial concerns

President Reagan returned to London Wednesday from commemorations in France of the 40th anniversary of D-Day Joining him at the summit are Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain and leaders of Japan, France, West Germany, Italy and Canada.

The summit formally starts with a reception in 16th-century St James's Palace, hosted by Mrs. Thatcher and the Duke of Kent. The heads of state and government then go to a "working dinner" at Mrs. Thatcher's residence at No. 10 Downing St.

Foreign and finance ministers are also participants in the summit, but they were not invited to the dinner hosted by Mrs. Thatcher

Although the first real business of the meeting begins Friday, with talks at Lancaster House, the working dinners today will set the tone for the 10th such summit. The first was in 1975

Mrs. Thatcher, who has said she wants a "relaxed and informal" but still "workmanlike" summit has decreed that political issues will be discussed over meals and economic concerns at formal sessions.

High U.S. interest rates, the woes of debtor nations, trade protectionism and strategies to nurture economic recovery without encouraging inflation will be high on the list of issues for discussion

Among the subjects which will likely dominate the dinner sessions will be the 45-month-old war between Iraq and Iran, which in recent weeks has broadened to include attacks on oil tankers and other vessels in the Persian Gulf About 20 percent of the non-Communist world's oil is transported through the gulf, and Japan gets two-third of its oil supplies from that region

On Wednesday, leaders of seven Latin American debtor nations attempted to focus major attention at the summit on resolution of the global

A letter calling for action by summit participants was sent to Mrs. Thatcher by leaders of Argentina, Brazil, Colombia, Ecuador, Mexico, Peru and Venezuela, whose combined debt is more than $250 billion, mostly owed to

In a policy statement to West Germany's Parliament on Wednesday. Chancellor Helmut Kohl said the U.S. budget deficit. running at about $200 billion annually, and accompanying high U.S. interest rates were harming other nations' economies and that Reagan's first attempts at remedies are not enough.

Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone of Japan is expected to push for a new round of multinational trade talks to liberalize tariff and quota systems. Japan has a huge trade surplus and has been accused of protectionism.

Mrs. Thatcher has cautioned against expecting "dramatic new initiatives" to come from the summit. "There certainly are not any miracles around." she said

'Tax break' wiped out before becoming law

break for savers is about to be wiped off the books even before it goes into effect - a victim of the battle to reduce the federal deficit

Negotiators from the House and Senate, who are fashioning the tax increase provisions of a package to cut the deficit by between $150 billion and $180 billion over the next three years, voted Wednesday to repeal a law that would allow savers to exempt up to $450 of interest from taxes each

Repeal of that provision, which was enacted in 1981 to encourage savings. would cut the deficit by about $6.9 billion over three years

The House had voted for repeal while the Senate had agreed only to delay the savings incentive three years beyond the scheduled 1985 start The negotiators agreed without debate to wipe the law off the books That was the biggest single tax worth on which agreement was announced a few minutes after the negotiators met for the first time Wednesday

The figure includes $14 billion worth of tax increases that both the House and Senate had agreed on beforehand including extending for two years the 3 percent tax on telephone service that is due to expire next year. The other $16 billion or so is from items on which there were only minor disputes.

The hard work is yet to come. The negotiators must settle such issues as whether to allow the 16-cent-a-pack cigarette tax to drop to 8 cents next year, as the Senate voted, or whether to set it at 12 cents after that, whether the tax on liquor, now a maximum $10.50 a gallon, should be raised to $14.25. as the House voted, or $12.50. as under the Senate bill

The most disputed sections in either bill involve efforts to curb use of tax-exempt bonds for private

Iraq shells three Iranian towns

By The Associated Press

Iraq said its forces attacked three Iranian towns today to retaliate for Iran's shelling of the southern Iraqi port of Basra and three border towns a day earlier. Iran said 15 people were killed in one of the Iranian towns

The Iraqi attacks came a day after a Tehran newspaper said Iran had imposed an "exclusion zone" in the Persian Gulf, within which commercial ships will be searched and Iraq-bound vessels seized

Iraq has declared its own exclusion zone around Iran's main oil terminal on Kharg Island, and Iraqi warplanes have been attacking commercial ships in that zone

Party leaders, allied with Mondale, do not want to hear that "I think it's about time we stopped playing games out there." House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said Wednesday. "It's been all over for some time, to be perfectly truthful. I think we ought to unite on one conviction, that's the defeat of Reagan, and stop attacking each other

O'Neill made clear that he will emphasize party unity at a meeting with Hart today.

But Hart counters with a prediction that public opinion polls will show him to be a more popular candidate against Reagan in the fall

'To win this election, there has to be someone at the top of the ticket who can beat Reagan," Hart said Wednesday.

Indicted county judge maintains he will fight charges of bribery

Jacinto County judge indicted on bribery charges will plead innocent and will not resign his position, his attorney

Kent Morrison was indicted Wednesday on charges accusing him of taking an undisclosed amount of money to win dismissal of two drug charges against a defendant. District Attorney Joe Price said

Price said Morrison, county judge since 1983, is accused of accepting an undisclosed sum of money from Phillip Craig Peterson. 22 directed him not to comment. 'He's going to plead not guilty and he's not going to resign the bench." said defense attorney William G. Rosch III of Houston Each bribery count carries a possible sentence of two to 20 years in prison and a maximum fine of $10,000 Peterson allegedly paid the money to win dismissals of a misdemeanor possession of a controlled substance and a felony possession of methamphetamines charge The misdemeanor charge, filed in

The second count charges that Morrison agreed May 20 to get the felony drug charge dismissed, even though it has been filed in State District Judge Joe Ned Dean's court

Price said he has no evidence suggesting that Dean or any other officials were involved in the alleged incident

The final meeting between Peterson and Morrison was videotaped, and grand jurors viewed the tapes. Price

House okays $34.3 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) - The House has endorsed and sent to the Senate a bill providing $34.2 billion in 1985 for farm and related programs, after accepting a 1 percent across-the-board cut in the measure as a "small step toward fiscal responsibility

Approval came Wednesday on a voice vote after the body accepted the cut offered by Rep Robert Walker, R-Pa. on a vote of 232 to 164

Walker and other House Republicans had argued that no farm program could alleviate the depressed condition of U.S. agriculture as well as cuts in the budget deficit, which has been blamed for high interest rates.

"Many farmers in my area would like to see the government get off their backs." Walker said during debate on the measure. "We add to agriculture's problems every time we pile onto the deficit." he said, calling his amendment "one small step toward fiscal responsibility.

The measure now goes to the Senate. The House turned back other attempts to cut farm funds, including a move to save $24 million by implementing recommendations of commission. It also defeated a try to increase money for research in genetic

The measure includes about $10.9 billion for agriculture programs. including price supports, research. extension services, crop insurance and food inspection. It provides another $4.9 billion for rural development programs such as housing loans, lending for rural water and sewer projects, and money for soil conservation and assistance to rural electric cooperatives

Domestic food programs administered by the Agriculture Department are tabbed at $17 billion. including $10.7 billion for food stamps. The bill also includes $1.3 billion for international food assistance such as the Food for Peace program, and $427 million to fund the Food and Drug Administration and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission

The House exceeded administration requests on items like rural housing and development projects and soil conservation, but made it up by cutting Credit Corporation - which handles price supports — and other areas.

The Reagan administration said the measure was "consistent with the president's objectives." although it was much like the current year's package which Budget Director David Stockman had fought, saying it was full of deceptive gimmicks to make it appear less expensive than it really

The bill's backers, led by House Appropriations Committee Chairman Jamie Whitten. D-Miss., argued that the measure actually came in with a price tag $4 million below the amount requested by the White House. The amount is an increase of $430 million over current spending levels.

But Walker called that contention "a sham" and noted that the bill actually could cost several billion dollars more than Reagan's request because it funds food stamps and nutrition programs for less than a full year. Supplemental appropriations will be needed later to keep the programs from running out of

Official says feds unconcerned about contamination of water saturated by water

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - The director of the state's Waste Programs Office says that federal officials are more interested in disposing of nuclear waste than in protecting ground water from radioactive contamination. They assume every place is OK.

Steve Frishman told those attending the Ogallala Aquifer Symposium II here Wednesday. 'If there is an escape method for nuclear waste, it is water transport Frishman blasted the Department of

Frishman said that only one of the nine remaining sites is in a zone not

The Texas sites being considered are in Deaf Smith and Swisher counties, both in the Ogallala Aquifer. Other sites are in Utah, Washington, Nevada, Mississippi and Louisiana. All but two involve some type of salt formation. But one man who appeared unannounced at the symposium said he opposed the DOE's probe into the Panhandle counties as possible nuclear waste sites They argued that a waste site poses too grave a threat to both the aquifer and the fertile farm lands in the two areas. Any contamination of the aquifer, they say, could kill people and end agriculture in the Panhandle.

Faulkner house damaged by fire

Officials with the Pampa Fire . Department are investigating a morning house fire which gutted two rooms of a residence on N. Faulkner.

Pampa fire fighters responded to the fire at 7:20 a.m. at the home of Georgina Simpson, 417 N. Faulkner. No residents or pets were injured, according to Tom Leggett, arson investigator for the Pampa Fire. , Department

We had one bedroom and the basement involved," the spokesman said, adding that the fire was contained to the two rooms while other rooms had smoke and heat damage.

'It could have easily gotten out of hand and taken the house," Leggett said, noting that two units responded to the fire, which took about an hour to put

He said the Mrs. Simpson had taken her five children to a neighbor's house where she contacted the fire department. Owner of the house is listed as Milton Simpson.

Cause of the fire has not yet been determined, although Leggett said he and fire marshalls were expected to investigate further this afternoon

Lobbyists are fighting to fend off taxes

AUSTIN (AP) - Representatives of industries being eyed for higher taxes lined up to tell a House committee to look elsewhere.

Lawmakers looking for money for education reform are considering killing some of the exemptions. Ways and Means Chairman Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen, said tightening the exemptions is a better idea than adding a penny to the sales tax, as proposed by Gov. Mark White.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock, in a report presented to Schlueter's committee Wednesday, said Texas has more exemptions than most other "Right now we're exempting from the sales tax about $4 billion a year." Bullock said.

The exemptions include services (such as medical and legal), groceries, materials used in manufacturing and other items

Schlueter said he fears a sales tax hike now would be the last step before a state personal income tax. "You do the sales tax now and what's left?" when more money is needed, he said.

Bowling industry officials lined up Wednesday to complain about proposals for additional taxes on

'We don't feel we should pay taxes on what we do for our own pleasure," said Jack Shuffler of Dallas, representing the Texas State Bowling Association. "I don't think recreation should be taxes. It's something people do to relieve tension.

Jimmie Dykes, a Temple bowling alley owner, said higher taxes could kill business.

Drought persists despite heavy rains

By The Associated Press

Weather experts say heavy exas this week will do little to break the drought that has plagued West and

'We're talking about a drought that has been going on for six months and it takes more than a couple of rainfalls of two inches to cure that." said National Weather Service meteorologist Skip Ely of Fort Worth. "Some areas out there need a good 10 inches.

George Bomar, a meterologist with the Texas Department of Water Resources in Austin, said rains this week were scattered but generally unsubstantial

The rains began in West Texas last weekend, shifted to the Rio Grande Valley, then to North Central and Central Texas Tuesday The storms were moving easterly today.

Two inches of rain fell on Midland earlier this week and brought that city up to its normal rainfall amount for the year, but showers didn't amount to as much in other areas of West Texas such as the Davis Mountains, the Pecos River and the Edwards Plateau, Bomar said

The precipitation did little to ease parched conditions in the Big Bend and extreme South Texas from Corpus Christi to Laredo, areas which have been dry for more than a year.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Our opinion

Effect, not intent, all that matters

Congresswoman Rose Mary Oakar of Ohio was highly indignant the other day because someone suggested that if her "comparable worth" bills were approved they could cause reductions in salaries of some blue collar

"Why it says right here," proclaimed Ms. Oakar, waving copies of her proposed laws "that nothing in these bills shall be construed as requiring that anyone's salaries be lowered." As far as she was concerned, that put the matter to rest. Her bills do not require that anyone's salary be reduced, and anyone who even suggested such an eventuality was lying.

But alas, Ms. Oakar makes the same mistake as other politicians who meddle in things that are none of their business by passing laws they consider beneficial to the "public interest." Their "intentions" in proposing the new laws are totally irrelevant. The 'effect" of the law is the only thing that matters and, in most cases, the intent and the effect are completely different.

In case you haven't heard about it. "comparable worth" is the latest bit of lunacy spawned by the country's radical feminists and their followers. It is not to be confused with "comparable pay," a concept that requires the same pay for people doing the same job 'Comparable worth' is a concept that would require the same pay for people doing different jobs if it was determined that the jobs were of equal importance. It is not clear who would make that determination, but Ms. Oakar would like to have agencies of the federal government decide which jobs have comparable worth.

Militant feminists support her efforts because they consider it discriminatory that many jobs traditionally held by women do not command salaries as high as those held by men. For example, secretaries, who are generally female, do not command the same salaries as electricians, who are generally male. In some cases, the feminists might consider this an instance of sexual discrimination

What Ms. Oakar doesn't understand is that if a federal judge or the Labor Department tells a company that those two jobs are of "comparable worth" to the firm and must command the same salaries, the company is not going to raise the secretary's pay to the same level as the electrician. The company, if forced to act, would raise the secretary's salary and lower the electrician's salary so that its total payroll expense for the two positions would remain the same. The result, of course, is that the blue collar electrician would have his pay cut. That's what Ms. Oakar's critics are talking about.

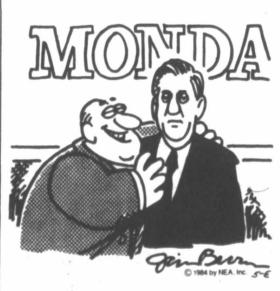

What Ms. Oakar doesn't understand is that private companies have only a certain amount of money to expend on payrolls. She can pass laws until she's blue in the face and she isn't going to increase the amount of money available for salaries.

It is a bit strange that many labor unions are supporting the Oakar proposals. The labor leaders support her bills in hopes of bringing more women into their unions, who would, of course, add to the amount of union dues available to support the labor leaders.

But legislation forcing higher salaries for one segment of the work force is going to cause lower salaries in other segments. Under "comparable worth," which aims at elevating salaries for jobs traditionally held by women. the immediate losers would be the blue collar workers. And if union members allow union leaders to support such radical legislation, they're simply cutting their own

In the long term, the loser would be the entire American economy, which would be faced with the prospect of the federal government deciding which jobholders should receive what pay. Giving that power to an institution so incompetent it can't come within $200 billion of living within its income would be a total, absolute disaster

Myth of the vanishing farmland

By making the environment an undebatable, sacrosanct 'motherhood' issue, our nation is vulnerable to the abuses of unchecked political power by environmental zealots who too easily, too often, substitute propaganda for fact. As evidence, we give you the vaunted environmental myth of "vanishing farmland.

It started in Summer 1980 with a rash of articles in the national establishment press from the New York Times to The Wall Street Journal. Headlines ranged from "The Peril of Vanishing Farmlands" to "Farmland Losses Could End U.S. Food Exports."

The source of these scary stories was a booklet published as part of President Jimmy Carter's Global 2000. Issued by the National Agricultural Land Study (NALS). and using Soil Conservation Service (SCS) data, the booklet announced: "The U.S. has been converting agricultural land to, non agricultural uses at the rate of about 3 million acres per year.. This land has been paved over, built on...converted to non agricultural uses. For practical purposes. the loss of this resource to U.S. agricultural is irreversible.

Fortunately, for the nation, not a word of that statement was true. In fact, when it was written all the responsible evidence by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Economic Research Service (ERS) and Census showed that America was GAINING, not losing, cropland. And, in terms of productivity, the rise in agricultural potential was infinitely greater than the very modest trend in U.S. urbanization.

The official demise of this myth was quietly telegraphed in a little - noted April 5 SCS press release announcing the publication of "The 1982 National Resources Inventory (SCS)...the most exhaustive and extensive survey USDA has ever made...' which showed that "the acreage of cropland INCREASED from 413 - million acres to 421 million acres.

While the release dwelt primarily on a significant decline in losses from soil erosion since 1977, SCS took note, almost as an afterthought, of the following arresting fact: "The SCS report also showed the acreage classified as urban and built - up land was 46.6 million acres in 1982, compared to 64.7 million acres reported in 1977. The 1977 estimate (of urbanization) thus appears to have been markedly overstated

This means that the SCS "overstatement" of urbanization in the 1977 study was at least 45 percent - more than enough to wipe out the entire "vanishing farmland" myth.

This factual admission came as no surprise to University of Maryland economist Julian Simon, author of a must read book, "The Ultimate Resource."

Simon first began exposing the "Globaloney 2000" myth about vanishing farmland when he was at the University of Illinois inn July 1980, when Illinois Governor James Thompson issued a costly executive order "to protect prime farmland.

Prof. Simon publicly pointed out to Thompson an interesting fact: Between 1974 and 1979, the U.S. Census of Agriculture showed that cropland actually harvested in Illinois had RISEN from 21.5 - million acres to 22.8 million, an average annual increase of 262 - thousand acres, compared with Thompson's claimed loss of 10,000 acres a year, based on the 1977 NALS - SCS study.

At the same time, the USDA's own Economic Research Service showed that the same period total harvested cropland in the nation ROSE by more than 8 - million acres.

Suddenly, in 1980 - 81, the USDA was embroiled in a furious inter - departmental feud, between the environmentalists of the NALS and SCS, and the more objective economists and geographers in the Economic Research Service (ERS) and the ERS' H. Thomas Frey looked at the actual hard data of the Census and found that the annual agricultural land loss to urban build. up from 1967 - 77 was less than a milion acres a year, less than a third of the original NALS SCS scare - estimate.

Frey also found that NEW cropland was being created by draining swamps and irrigating deserts at the rate of 1.3 - million acres a year, a net INCREASE in arable cropland of about 400 - thousand acres a year.

Frey concluded in 1980, "We are in no danger of running out of farmland." Distinguished geographer John Fraser Hart said, "Urban encroachment on rural land is not a serious problem in the U.S.'

Why, then was NALS so wrong? Because it relied on unscientific, biased field "studies" by SCS, instead of the more reliable aerial photography and census tract data used by ERS. For example, ERS went back and studied photos of the fifty - three fastest - growing U.S. counties 1960 - 1970, and found that the total rate of urbanized area growth was 23 percent in the decade. Yet the 1980 NALS study said that the nation as a WHOLE urbanized by 47 percent 1967 -1977, more than double the rate of the fastest growing counties during the decade of our fastest urbanization!

Even for the whole nation to have urbanized at the rate of its fastest - growing fifty - three counties, it would only have had to "build up" 428 - thousand acres a year. Yet the NALS study claimed we urbanized in the last decade at 2.9 - million acres a year - seven times as much!

Of course, as we now know, that didn't happen. The USDA is tacitly admitting the NALS - SCS study was a statistical disaster. and that "vanishing farmlands" was another costly "con game" foisted on us by environmental zealots.

Today is Thursday, June 7, the 159th day of 1984. There are 207 days left in the year. Today's highlight in history

On June 7, 1776, Richard Henry Lee of Virginia proposed to the Continental -Congress a resolution calling for a declaration of independence from England. On this date:

In 1968, a grand jury in Los Angeles indicted Sirhan Sirhan for the murder of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

In 1981, Israeli planes destroyed a nuclear power plant in Iraq.

Ten years ago: A federal judge termed "offensive" the rejection by President Nixon of a court-approved procedure for producing White House documents in the Watergate "plumbers" case.

Five years ago: Independent truckers began a wildcat strike to protest fuel prices and supplies.

One year ago: The United States ordered the expulsion of 21 Nicaraguan diplomats and the closing of Nicaragua's six consulates in this country.

Today's birthdays: Actress Jessica Tandy and House Judiciary Chairman Peter Rodino are 75. Former boxing champ Rocky Graziano is 62. Actress Delores Gray is 60. Singer Tom Jones is 44.

Reds right to fear Los Angeles

Since the Soviet Union announced its plans to boycott the ordinary group of terrorists. Olympic Games this summer in Los Angeles, this is as good a time as any to announce that I have the very same intention

Let the Games begin, but count me out, despite the fact that I probably could whine and the boss would send me to Los Angeles on a fat expense account, so long as I turned in copies of the bus ticket.

There are several reasons I don't intend to attend.

I happened to be in Los Angeles several months ago and I picked up a copy of the paper which carried an article that said local rival gangs had met and declared a truce for the coming Good news, yes? Nyet. The reason the gangs had decided to stop fighting each other was so they could pool their rescources and concentrate on mugging tourists attending the Get the picture. I am on my way to see the finals of the 100 - meter rope climb and suddenly I am surrounded by members of the Purple Dragons. In keeping with the Olympic spirit, they have javelins instead of knives.

Olympic authorities promised they would do everything in their power to keep the Russians and others safe while they were in Los Angeles, but the Purple Dragons aren't any Opinions expressed by the signed columnists are their own and may not always be an accurate reflection of the views of this newspaper.

They're so tough they have iron - on tattoos, and in Los Angeles they are playing in their home alley

I am also afraid of Southern California drivers, especially the ones on Wilshire Boulevard who drive two - seater

These people have enormous amounts of money and don't care who or what they smash their spiffy little roadsters into because they have four more at home just like it

Even if I didn't drive in Los Angeles and also avoided getting run over by a cocaine delivery truck. I likely would have to take a taxi. The last time I was in Los Angeles, I had to take a taxi from my hotel to the airport. I knew I was in trouble when I looked inside the taxi and saw a sign that said, "Thank You For Not Screaming. Before we departed, the driver handed me a bullet

"What's this for?" I asked him

"To bite down on when we go through intersections," he answered.

I think the driver was a member of the Purple Dragons gang training for the Olympics. His plan was to drive tourists around Los Angeles during the Games and frighten them into heart attacks and then take their watches and credit cards.

If an earthquake doesn't get you in Los Angeles, then there are the mudslides, and if you avoid those, you still might get involved with some religious cult and spend the rest of your life bugging people at airports.

For the Russians, there is the possible moral corruption they face. Such possibilities do not bother a man of the world like myself, but how are they going to get Russian athletes back to Moscow once they've shared a hot tub with three Hollywood starlets whose idea of a marathon is not something that can be described in a family newspaper?

So for once ol' Ivan and I agree. He's going to keep his Tass out of L.A. this summer and so am I.

- A group of business, labor. government and academic eaders have drawn up an agreement that they say could reverse the 60-year-long downward economic spiral of the nation's smallest state.

The plan, embodied in a 976-page report that took 13 months to prepare. would require the expenditure of $250 million in public /funds over a seven-year period. The public spending, in turn, would generate as much as $500 million in private investment, its backers say.

On Tuesday, voters will decide whether the state should issue $90 million in bonds, the first step in the plan known as the Greenhouse Compact. A positive answer puts the compact's terms into effect: a negative vote ends the

Proponents of the economic revitalization program say they believe the program is the largest ever attempted by a state. The public funds would be used to stimulate new industries, prop up some old ones and attempt to lure business from elsewhere. The compact, which has

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) has a dim economic future. Its aged, low-skill industries will lag behind as neighboring states take advantage of high-technology industries and their better-paying jobs. "If we don't do anything, it's not that everyone's going to be on breadlines three years from now," said Ira C. Magaziner, a 35-year-old business consultant and chief architect of the plan. "But the economy will continue to stagnate overall relative to the rest of the country."

The leaders who developed the compact say the state doesn't generate enough jobs for its youth and turns away industry because it's perceived to have a poor business climate.

In drawing up the plan, the 19-member Strategic Development Commission examined the tax returns of nearly every company in the state and interviewed executives of 500 firms.

State lawmakers have approved the proposals. Gov. Joseph Garrahy, who appointed the commissioners, said he decided not to seek re-election this year so he could oversee passage of the compact. The plan also is backed by The Providence Journal-Bulletin, the state's dominant newspaper. This is a major commitment the people of Rhode Island will be making," said J. Terrence

Murray, the 44-year-old chairman of the commission who is also chairman of the state's largest bank.

Magaziner said the plan is unique because it represents a compromise among the conflicting interests of those who drew it up. Labor leaders, for example, agreed to limit jobless benefits paid to striking workers. Business leaders agreed to give up some tax breaks.

One major goal of the plan is to raise the state's average wage. Rhode Island's per capita income in 1982 was $10,723, which was $384 lower than the national average and $1,365 lower than in neighboring Massachusetts, whose growing high-technology industry is the envy of its New England cousin.

Even more dismal, Rhode Island's factory workers earned an average of $6.68 an hour in 1982 - trailing only Mississippi and North Carolina nation wide.

Rhode Island's economy began to sag when its dominant textile industry began migrating south in the 1920s. Then foreign companies crowding the market for the state's machine tools. And in 1973, the Navy began a pullout that eliminated about 28,000 jobs. 6 percent of the state's economy

The September 1981 agreement allows the Coast Guard to board vessels, interview passengers to determine their status and return them to Haiti if they are found to be "illegal migrants." Simpson said

The Haitians on the sailboat included women and children, said Joe Gibson, another Coast Guard spokesman Visibility was good and the water temperature was about 80 degrees when the vessel overturned. Simpson said He did not know if the wooden boat was still afloat early today.

The Hamilton, a high-endurance cutter that can stay at sea for long periods, was equipped with motorized lifeboats and probably used a rigid-hull rubber boat in its rescue efforts. Simpson said. The cutter also carried a helicopter

Imports, rising interest rates are driving down lumber prices.

HOUSTON (AP) - Canadian imports and increases in interest rates and home mortgage rates have driven down the price of lumber since January, but East Texas lumber mills are still running at full capacity, industry officials say.

Random Lengths, a market newsletter, reports profits have been under pressure since reaching a recent high in January of $272 per thousand board feet for Southern Pine. Quotations are currently at $225.

Industry analysts and executives blame the decline on recent interest rate increases, which are seen as a signal that housing and apartment building will slow down.

The high rates cause wholesale buyers to shy away from holding inventories, says Jon P. Anderson, publisher of Random Lengths, a market newsletter

The price situation also is aggravated by Canadian imports. which have an estimated 30 percent of the U.S. market, executives say.

Bill Hammock, vice president and general manger of Champion International of Huntsville, said it's easy to explain why mills are still running full bore.

We lose less money running than by shutting down," he said. "And we keep the crews together. We're not losing money, but we're not near to the levels (that we) should be." Executives said the industry's outlook is not as bleak as it was three years ago. They also agreed prospects are better in the South than in the Northwest. The current seasonally adjusted annual rate of housing starts is ranging between 1.7 million and 1.9 million units.

Lows reached in 1981 and 1982 were below one million units. 'The shoe is not pinching as bad as it was in 1981 and 1982." Alan Miller, director of public affairs for Temple-Inland Inc.

Cites lung cancer risk of household radiation

BOSTON (AP) - Up to half "radon daughters" radiation which is emitted by soil and construction materials and accumulates in homes, researchers reported

The study, one of two that looked at radiation effects on iron and uranium miners, estimated that several thousand people in the United States each year get lung cancer from radiation-emitting soil, rocks and construction materials.

Conducted in Sweden by Dr. Edward P. Radford, the study examined the long-term health effects of of all lung cancer in radioactive particles given non-smokers may be caused off by the decay of uranium in the environment.

> "A major proportion of the cases of lung cancer observed in non-smokers among the general population may be accounted for by exposure to radon daughters," said the report in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

Based in Diboll, Temple-Inland is the forest products company that Time Inc. spun off to shareholders in January.

"There's still demand consistent with what we produce,"

Miller said. "We're still confident of a good market this year, even with the increase in rates." Industry analysts suggest that the Southern lumber industry is better off than their Northwestern counterparts, which has had some production cutbacks and layoffs. Edwin H. Barron, head of the forest management department of the Texas Forest Service, says many Northwest producers are stuck with huge stocks of high-cost timber, which they contracted to purchase from the government when prices were higher before 1982.

Police arrest man accused of bilking clients

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) - Joel David Nelson, a flamboyant California investment counselor who disappeared with his secretary after allegedly bilking clients of $15 million, was jailed today in lieu of $5 million bond.

Nelson, 49, and Donna Santiago were taken into custody Wednesday without incident at the home they had been sharing for the last 10 months in a middle-class San Antonio neighborhood, FBI agents said

Agents said that Nelson, using another name, had established a business providing maps and other services for tourists.

FBI Special Agent Patrick Cowley said Nelson was indicted Dec. 1, 1982, in Los Angeles on 35 counts in connection with a scheme that allegedly swindled numerous investors out of a total of $15 million.

Federal magistrate Robert B. O'Connor set Cowley's bond at $5 million during an initial appearance Wednesday afternoon. O'Connor also set a removal hearing for June 13.

Nelson was being held in the federal prison at Bastrop. Mrs. Santiago, who was held in the Bexar County Jail, was scheduled for a removal hearing today. Cowley said. Bond of $10,000 has been recommended for Mrs. Santiago, who was arrested on a warrant as a material

The reported sightings ranged from the suburbs of Los Angeles to resort communities in the through college and soon Caribbean, sources close to entered the insurance the investigation told the Los Angeles Times.

Four days after Nelson disappeared, his wife, Maray Ayres Nelson, received a letter that read, in part:

"The next few days will be a terrible time for you ... as you find out the news about me, none of it nice ... I have failed at everything I have done and heve (sic) no way out but to go away and try to pay back all the people that I owe money to ... For the first time I have some one who ... I am in love with.

When Jose Santiago, Mrs. Santiago's husband, got home from work on New Year's Eve, he received a quick call from his wife. "She said, 'Hi, hon," he recalled later. "She said a client had called from New York and she had to go back there. She said she'd be back in five days ... I started looking around the house. I found all her personal possessions gone. Even the pictures."

Hoos said Nelson was indicted on 25 counts of mail fraud and 10 counts of interstate transportation of stolen property.

The maximum penalty for mail fraud is 10 years and a fine of $10,000 on each count. The maximum penalty for been fugitives since interstate transportation is

Reagan needed no rehearsals for economic summit

By MAUREEN SANTINI

AP White House Correspondent LONDON (AP) - In years past, President Reagan held actual rehearsals to prepare for the annual seven-nation economic summit, which begins tonight. With his key advisers sitting around a table, each pretending to be a world leader, the president reportedly would engage in some role-playing to make sure he knew his lines. All that has changed now. With tonight's curtain-raising dinner. Reagan will be greeting government leaders he knows and has dealt with for more than three years. Because these issues are so familiar and this will be his fourth summit, he doesn't really need a whole lot of preparation," said an administration official, who asked to remain anonymous. 'We've had very detailed and extensive briefings ... but we're nowhere like we were, say in Ottawa, where he was completely new to the summit game The Ottawa summit, in 1981, was Reagan's first chance to meet jointly with the leaders of Britain, France, Canada, Japan, West Germany and Italy

The official, who has observed the changes in the president since his first summit, said

"I've seen him become very much at home for Ottawa and then again for Versailles (1982 summit site), where we had all this very elaborate coaching and role modeling and all that stuff." Now, he said, "you just don't need to do that. He knows all the vocabulary and all the terms and all the players. After his personal success at Williamsburg, his credentials as a summiteer are pretty high.

• The official was referring to last year's summit in Williamburg, Va., hosted by Reagan and generally considered a success.

- The official said the rehearsals were held in past years "to give him a more realistic sense of how the issues would come up and how he would have to respond.

The annual summits began 10 years ago in Rambouillet. France, to discuss the results of the rapid increases in the price of oil. Reagan is the third American president to attend these three-day sessions.

The president abandoned the actual pre-summit rehearsal last year, this official said, although he did a lot of studying to make sure he could comfortably carry off his duties as host.

This year, his preparations have included six hours of meetings with Secretary of State George P. Shultz, Treasury Secretary Donald Regan and other advisers.

One such meeting, lasting two hours, centered on all the economic issues that are likely to arise. "The focus is not so much on our positions, which the president knows, but the positions of the other players. There's pretty strong emphasis on that. Things that had evolved over the course of the last year Reagan has also been studying a briefing book compiled for him by the National Security Council staff, with a lot of help from officials at the State and Treasury Departments. The book contains a statement from Shultz, which was described as a "kind of introductory viewpoint." It also gives him "talking points" for when he meets with other leaders.

Dear Abby

Daughter's new beginning also parents' happy ending

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I want to thank you for some advice I read in your column. A young man about to be married was afraid his divorced mother wouldn't attend his wedding if his father was invited. You advised him to invite both parents, and let each parent accept or de-

I was in the same predicament, and I followed that advice. Both parents were invited, and both accepted and came with their respective spouses. Abby, it was the first time my parents had set eyes on each other since their divorce 12 vears before

We wanted to make them as comfortable as possible, so at the wedding dinner we seated them at tables on opposite sides of the room. We also placed them at opposite sides of the receiving line. They were more than civil to each other. This was the first time in 12 years our whole family was together!

At first I was afraid to follow your suggestion because I thought for sure if my mother knew my father was going to be there with his second wife, she would refuse to attend. I was wrong. Everybody came, and it turned out to be the most wonderful day of my life. I will never forget it. Thank you!

NO PROBLEMS HERE

DEAR NO PROBLEMS: The advice applies to all family gatherings. Instead of eliminating one person because he or she doesn't get along with a relative, invite everyone, and let those who don't want to attend stay home. You should not be forced to make a choice. Let them make it.

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago, when I was the mother of a toddler, I read in your column letters from parents who had lost their precious little ones when they, fascinated with the water in the toilet bowl, fell headfirst into the bowl and drowned! It left a chilling impression on me. and I told everyone I knew with small children to keep the toilet lids down and their bathroom doors closed so that wouldn't happen to

Now, the unthinkable has happened to an acquaintance of mine. Her little 2-year-old daughter climbed up on the couch, wrapped the venetian blind cord around her little neck and jumped off the couch. Can you imagine the horror of finding your beloved child hanging by a cord around her neck, blue and virtually lifeless? Fortunately this child survived with minimal damage-if there is such a thing as 'minimal damage" after such a terrible ordeal.

Abby, please, please urge all people who have little ones in their care to secure all such cords, and never place a crib or playpen within reach of any such danger.

It is frightening that I was unaware of the danger of the common toilet bowl, until I read Dear Abby. I hope you will print this because there are many people who read you who might not be aware of how dangerous a drapery or window blind cord can be. Thank you, Abby STILL LEARNING CONFIDENTIAL TO M.L.H.: You are not a "terrible" person. Others share your feelings. Clarence Darrow said it this way: "The first half of our lives are ruined by our parents, and the second half by our children.

Lovely gloves

The new accessory this spring is gloves. Perfect for day or night, this fashion addition is a major look with many outfits this year.

You probably already have a collection of gloves, but for special ones, check out thrift shops or flea markets. For the very daring, try a pair of fingerless gloves for the cocktail hour. They flatter your hands and show off your rings perfectly.

Former Pampan publishes poetry

Janis (Jones) Cunningham, a former Pampa area resident, feelings and my moods." she explained is to be honored on the publication of her poetry book Sunday. June 10, with an autograph party at the Perry Memorial Library in Perryton.

Mrs. Cunningham is to be autographing her book, "Jan's Song" from 3 p.m. until 5 p.m. at the library located at 22 S.E. 5th Ave., Perryton.

"Jan's Song" is a collection of more than 70 poems written during a period covering about 30 years from 1953 until 1983. •Mrs. Cunningham said. Blind for more than 30 years, Mrs. Cunningham found the poems forming in her head. Then when she felt she had finished a poem, she would go to her typewriter and write it down. She describes her poetry as old fashioned rhyming lyrics and meditations on travel, friends and family. "Many of them are concerned with this area - my

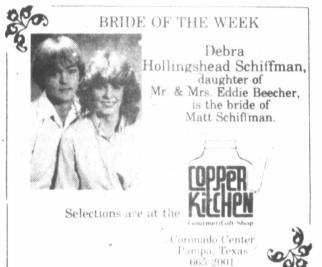

"I tried to keep them as simple as possible. Even a 12 - year old could understand my poems." she said. "But I wrote my poems to please myself. I didn't write them to please anyone else. It takes a lot of courage to do this (have her poetry published). I had planned to do this for a long time, but it wasn't until my husband (George Cunningham) retired that I realized 'It's time

Mrs. Cunningham, the daughter of Moore and Leone Jones of Pampa, enjoys reciting her poetry such as this one:

DO-GOODER Oh, yes, I know that I can't see But, my dear, you can't fool me That you'd rather be With someone else a sippin' tea. Boasting about your kindness to me

"Jan's Song" is available through Perryton Printing in softback form. Mrs. Cunningham credits her husband for giving her the book as a gift and helping her arrange the poems. Beth McDonald helped with the editing, she said.

Mrs. Cunningham also has two sisters in Pampa and the area: Mrs. Jo Lynn Davis of Pampa and Mrs. Joyce Hutsell of

Series even at 2-all

Celtics beat Lakers in overtime

AP Sports Writer

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — "It's turning into the series everyone said it was going to be," said Los Angeles Lakers

Coach Pat Riley. The National Basketball Association title showdown between historic rivals Los Angeles and Boston, which briefly appeared in danger of being dominated by the Lakers, is "turning out" to be well-played, spirited, aggressive - and close

The Celtics, written off by some after a 33-point loss Sunday that gave Los Angeles a 2-1 edge in the best-of-seven series, stormed back to tie the playoffs with a dramatic 129-125 overtime victory Wednesday night at the Lakers' Forum.

"I think it just shows the character of our team," said the Celtics' Larry Bird, whose 29 points included a 15-foot fallaway jumper that snapped a 123-123 tie with 16 seconds left in overtime.

"No matter how far down we are, until we lose that fourth game, we're still in it."

said Bird, who also had a game-high 21 rebounds.

After Bird's basket, which he fired in over the Lakers' Magic Johnson, James Worthy of Los Angeles was fouled and made one of two free throws. The Celtics' Dennis Johnson retaliated by sinking two free throws to put Boston up 127-124 with 10 seconds remaining. M.L. Carr then clinched the victory, the Celtics' second overtime win of the series, by stealing Worthy's inbounds pass and dunking the ball to make it 129-124 with seven seconds left.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar led the Lakers with 32 points, but he fouled out with 16 seconds left in regulation. Despite the fact that Worthy pumped in 10 of his 30 points in the five-minute overtime, the absence of Abdul-Jabbar gave Boston an edge.

"It was a very happy time for me when Kareem fouled out," said Boston Coach K.C. Jones. "But then when I saw what Worthy was doing in overtime, I regretted that Kareem was out.

Five consecutive points by the Celtics in the final 39 seconds of regulation forced the overtime. A three-point play by Boston center Robert Parish, who had 25 points, and then two free throws by Bird with 16 seconds left knotted the game at 113. Jones praised the play of Dennis Johnson, who was coming off two poor games. Johnson scored eight of his 22 points in overtime Wednesday.

"D.J. had a game that helped pull us out of this thing," said Jones, whose club faces the Lakers in Game 5 Friday night in Boston.

The Celtics appeared to lure the Lakers, who prefer to fast break and play finesse basketball, into their more physical style of play.

Heated words were exchanged on a couple of occasions, including once between the usually mild-mannered Abdul-Jabbar and Bird, and a scuffle broke out during the third quarter after Boston's

By ROGER GILLOTT AP Business Writer LOS ANGELES (AP) For nearly two decades. Northern California's Silicon Valley has been perceived as the dominant force in the glamorous high-technology

Now, challenges to that perception are mounted by Southern California high-tech firms, which comprise a bigger chunk of the industry but suffer from a lower profile because they are dispersed.

The idea persists that because Southern California is so splintered, it is not a major high-technology center, and that simply isn't true, says Dr. Steven Panzer, a management consultant who formed a network of chief executives to build a more cohesive and effective high-tech community in Los Angeles and Orange counties.

In addition. San Diego County's Sorrento Valley. which began as a tiny industrial center 25 years ago, has gained a significant foothold in the state's multi-billion-dollar high-tech industry and is undergoing a decade-long expansion designed to quadruple its

However, problems quickly arise when someone tries to pin down the size of the industry in the state - let alone by region - because of disputes over what is and isn't high-tech.

The U.S. Census Bureau. California Department of Finance and Bank of America include aircraft and missiles. Others, such as Stan Levy, a senior economist at the Center for Continuing Study of the California Economy in Palo Alto, argue that high-tech properly should be restricted to computers. communications equipment and electrical components and instruments

The difference is substantial. With aerospace. California's high-tech industry would employ nearly 690.000 people and have sales of about $67 billion a year Without it, the industry would be only two-thirds as large. Either way, the Los Angeles-Orange County megalopolis eclipses Silicon Valley

This was a real eye-opener." Duane Paul. of the Bank of America in Los Angeles, said after compiling regional statistics for The Associated Press. What Paul found - using U.S. Census Bureau data that include aerospace - was that slightly more than two-thirds of the high-tech industry in California is centered in Los Angeles and Orange counties. The Silicon Valley, in Santa Clara County south of San Francisco, has about 25 percent, while San Diego County has a little more than seven percent.

Even after omitting aerospace, Los Angeles and Orange counties retain nearly 52 percent of the industry. while Santa Clara has slightly over 41 percent and San Diego County the rest.

The accepted notion of Silicon Valley's dominance is the target of Panzer's group Southern California Technology Executives Network

Award-winning screenwriter makes Texas films

By JULIA MARTINEZ Associated Press Writer WAXAHACHIE. Texas (AP) - Two-time Academy

Award-winning screenwriter Horton Foote seems a little out of his element in this small Texas town, where he has just finished filming his latest movie. "1918.

But Foote insists, despite his heavy New England accent, that he's a Texan destined to write about Texas. He feels, he says, right at home Foote, acclaimed in 1962 for his Oscar-winning adaptation of "To Kill A Mockingbird," won the Academy Award this year for his screenplay for 'Tender Mercies," which starred Robert Duvall. He breaks into a big grin when the Oscar is mentioned.

"I won once before and I wasn't there," he says. "This time I was there and it makes a big difference because you don't realize how excited that whole area gets.

'You suddenly become a movie fan. You forget that you're competing." he says. 'All the fantasies about Hollywood come to life - the lights, cameras flashing, people screaming when certain people come up.

Foote, 68, says Oscar night was "an old-fashioned spectacle like you thought might have happened when they had premieres back in the old days.

After the ceremonies and a night of partying. Foote hopped a 7 a.m. flight back to Texas.

"I had to get back here because it was our second day of shooting (for "1918") and I wanted to be on the set." he

The movie. a period piece about a Texas family that copes with the ravages of the plague and war, finished shooting in mid-May in Waxahachie. The small town. located 30 miles south of Dallas, is a mere eight miles from the site where "Tender Mercies" was filmed Foote and his Dallas-based crew were in the midst of packing up after 18 months of preparation and filming. As he arrived at the two-story. wood-frame house used in the film, neighbors poured out to greet him with hugs and kisses. He was visibly moved.

"You know. I may never see some of these people again." Foote says after they have gone. "We were like a family for six weeks. I guess it's the curse of the theater.

Foote — a fifth-generation Texan - planned to return to New York after a brief visit to his birthplace of Wharton. Texas, near the Gulf Coast He says he writes better about Texas when he's not there. He lives most of the year in New York and New England.

For "1918." everything down to the last piece of furniture was carefully planned. Foote even shipped his family's cream-colored bedroom set from Wharton

"It was fashionable in those days to paint the furniture light," he says, running his hand over the dresser.

All around there is a sense of a step back in time. The house, built in 1870, is surrounded by a white picket fence. From the front yard, a graveyard is visible at the bottom of the hill. The gravevard town courthouse and two other houses on the street were used in the film

"It's like a 19th century street." Foote says surveying the abundant trees and southern-style dwellings. "I'm sure it's the only one left in America.

"1918" is a film about imagined death and real death. Foote says.

'The imagined death is the fantasy that I'm sure many young men were having during World War I of what would happen if they went overseas - about how they might die." he said. "Also in '1918.' a horrendous flu epidemic began. That was the real death that came in. silently and unobtrusively. It killed more people than the

In 1962, Foote won the Oscar for his second screenplay, "To Kill A Mockingbird," which solidified his status as a screenwriter. Later followed Baby the Rain Must Fall' and "Tomorrow.

Foote today shuns the idea of reviving "Mockingbird," calling it "irrelevant" to 1984.

"It was after all, a Depression-era play," he "Racism is not the Foote said he plans to continue writing screenplays on the order of "Tender Mercies" and "1918" stories he says he was raised on as a southerner. He is scheduled to return to Austin.

'The Governor's Lady," a film about Texas politics.

"It won't be anything sensational, mind you. There won't be any muckraking,' he says. "It's going to be about human beings again and they're in politics too.

'Meaningful' budget data his goal.

CLEVELAND (AP) - Richard G. just provide a different focus. Sheridan founded an agency that helps Ohio and now wants to set up a similar service for local officials as well as ordinary citizens.

Sheridan, now on the faculty at Cleveland any level of government of necessity works closely with budget officials.

"That's because there is power in the budget document. It's more than a collection of numbers. It can be a statement of policy. It can be a public relations tool," he said.

A problem in city and county governments is that the budget is written by the mayor or city manager, or commissioners, while the citizens the budget is meant to serve often struggle to understand it, Sheridan says.

"What we're going to try to do is come up with a 'Citizens' Budget' that would permit a city to recast a budget in a form that might be more meaningful," Sheridan says.

"State statutes pretty well dictate a lot of government finance. the procedures for the budget, particularly the state's accounting system," he says. state-mandated accounting system. It would governments.

Sheridan estimates it would take about a legislators understand their state's budget year to design a citizens' budget and make it available to municipal and county governments. He is directing a Fiscal Futures Service at Cleveland State and is State University, says the chief executive at introducing it to fiscal officers and elected officials throughout the state. He said the aim of the service was to gather economic and social information for people who need it.

Sheridan set up the Ohio Legislative Budget office, an arm of the Ohio General Assembly, in 1973 to help lawmakers understand fiscal matters and the state's budget. He came to Cleveland State in,
