Jackson, Castro announce release

Castro announces release

Jackson coming home with 22 freed prisoners

HAVANA (AP) — Cuban President Fidel Castro announced today the release of 22 Americans from prisons here after meeting for more than eight hours with Democratic presidential contender Jesse L. Jackson.

Jackson and Castro began their talks in mid-afternoon Tuesday and continued on past midnight.

At a 12:20 a.m. EDT joint news conference, Jackson said the 22 Americans represent most of the U.S. citizens held in Cuban jails. He said they would accompany him when he returns to the United States on Thursday after a visit to Nicaragua.

The head of the U.S. interest section in Havana, John Ferch, told reporters earlier that 29 Americans are imprisoned in Cuba.

Castro said those being freed represented every American held in Cuba except those imprisoned for hijackings.

The Cuban leader also agreed to permit the departure of Andres Vargas Gomez, identified by Cuban authorities as a CIA operative. He is a former prisoner who was let out of jail in an amnesty in the late 1970s but detained in Cuba.

The names of those to be released were not immediately available.

Asked if he were troubled because many of those being freed were alleged to be involved in narcotics trafficking, Jackson said that "the real point is to bring American citizens back."

"Whatever their case may be, they should be subjected to a judicial process," he said. "I should not make the judgment and the press should not hold a trial."

Asked about Central America, Castro told the news conference through an interpreter that there are no Cuban troops in Nicaragua or elsewhere in the region.

"We have no troops to withdraw from Nicaragua and no troops in Nicaragua," Castro said. He said that the Cubans scattered across the hemisphere are civilian advisers, doctors and teachers.

Castro said he favored a suggestion from Jackson that the United States and Cuba exchange ambassadors if the Reagan administration is willing. That would require re-establishing formal diplomatic relations broken in 1961.

Jackson said he invited Castro to visit the United States. But the Cuban leader made no commitment to accept the offer, which would involve diplomatic complications.

Castro, at the urging of Jackson, also agreed to proceed with talks with the United States on immigration matters.

$1.35 billion hike proposed

House to hear from taxpayers

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas House members should find out today what the taxpayer thinks about a $1.35 billion tax package proposed to pay for public school reforms and highway improvements.

Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen, introduced the tax measure in the House Tuesday and Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, filed the same bill in the Senate.

One of the first provisions scheduled in the public hearing before the House Ways and Means Committee would do away with the special bank stocks tax and put banks under the state franchise tax, with the proceeds reimbursed to local governments.

Schlueter said he hoped to have the bill ready for House debate by Thursday, or Friday at the latest.

Jones set Senate committee hearings on his bill Thursday and Friday. Senators cannot vote on a tax bill until, and if, it passes the House first.

Schlueter told a news conference Tuesday the package was designed to take care of the three-year cost of the teachers pay raise and school improvements, as well as about $400 million for highway improvements.

Parts of the bill would raise existing taxes but not the state sales tax. However much of the measure is devoted to erasing present exemptions to the state sales tax.

The tax proposals include:

- Doubling the state gasoline tax to 20 cents a gallon.
- Increasing the motor vehicle sales and rental tax from 4 to 5 percent.
- Increasing liquor taxes 20 percent.
- Lowering the mixed beverage tax from 10 to 8 percent and putting highballs under the sales tax. Schlueter said this would result in increased revenue for city and county governments.
- Increasing the state franchise tax from $4.25 to $5.25 per $1,000 of taxable capital.
- Increasing motor vehicle registration fees $25 over three years, with a $12.50 increase the first year.

- Repealing the exemption on first-year insurance premiums.
- Raising hotel and motel taxes from 3 to 4 percent.

The bill would eliminate sales tax exemptions on computer software, advertising in newspapers, on radio and television and billboards, amusement admissions, cable TV, personal services, auto parking and storage, and home fertilizer.

The bill would remove exemptions for food products, including ice cream and other frozen desserts, doughnuts, cakes and pastries.

It also would place all tobacco products under the sales tax. Schlueter said presently all tobacco products are under the special tobacco tax except snuff, which is under the sales tax.

The tobacco tax on cigarettes would be increased one cent a pack and would be dedicated to cancer research.

Schlueter said state fees for amusement machines would be doubled and all telephone operations, including new long distance companies, would be brought under the current 4 percent gross receipts tax that telephone companies pay.

A separate part of the bill would increase tuition at state colleges and universities. Schlueter said it has been the legislative concept to increase tuition so it would be at least 15 percent of the cost per student. He said tuition today represents less than 4 percent of the cost. His bill would provide a 2 percent increase in tuition a year until it reaches 15 percent of the cost.

Medical school tuition would be increased to pay for 10 percent of the cost of the education.

Schlueter said he decided not to include doctor and lawyer fees under the sales tax because those are considered necessities, like food and medicine. Funeral services also are exempted.

He said he was sure amendments would be offered on the floor to include those services under the sales tax.

City postpones action on tax collection plan

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

City commissioners delayed action Tuesday on a contract with the Gray County Appraisal District for tax collections until further negotiations are completed with the Pampa Independent School District.

The school district has been handling collection of city property taxes but recently decided to contract the duties with the appraisal district.

City Manager Mack Wofford said the contract had been generally agreed upon, but there are no completed plans on the sharing of costs between the city and the PISD. He said two alternatives are being considered, with the city favoring one plan and the school district the other.

Wofford said while either plan would create a reduction of costs for the city, one would save even more money.

City Attorney Don Lane said negotiations were still continuing. He expects a compromise will be reached soon.

Commissioners postponed any action on the contract until its next meeting on July 10.

Fund transfer delayed

The commission also delayed approval of a request for transfer of funds made by the Pampa Softball Association for use in the construction of a concession-restroom facility at Hobart Street Park.

David Callison, city personnel director, said the league had collected additional fees this year in anticipation of the construction of the 25 by 40 foot building. The city decided not to proceed with construction this year after bids went over the expected cost estimates.

Bill Harris, representing the players association, said the costs would be "considerably more" than had been expected.

He said the association was asking the city to make the funds collected from the fees available to the association so it could proceed to find a contractor who could build the facility. The association would then deed the building to the city.

Harris said there were problems in getting bids because the building will be located on city property and asked the commission to authorize the association to seek a contractor.

"What we're asking is an opportunity to find a contractor," Harris said. "I think it (the new facility) would enhance Hobart Street Park."

He asked that since the association would be paying for the facility, it should be only for the association's use, not available for general public use and closed when not in use by the association.

Mayor Calvin Whatley mentioned the number of reunions, picnics and other activities held at the park and asked Harris, "What would they use?"

"They can use the old one (restroom facility) currently there," Harris said, admitting it was in bad shape.

Lane said there were some legal aspects to be considered, including liability of construction costs if the association started building the facility and then ran out of funds.

He suggested the commission could authorize a letter of intent, specifying that the completed building would accrue to the city and that the city would not be under any contractual obligations since the association is not an agent of the city.

The commissioners authorized Lane to draw up such a letter and delayed action on the request until their next meeting.

The commission approved a resolution designating Public Works Director Allyn Moore as city engineer and city traffic engineer.

Wofford said Moore had been hired with the understanding he would be named city engineer. Moore has a degree in public engineering.

Wofford said Moore has been registered as a public engineer in other states and recently had qualified for registration in Texas.

He said the positions were needed since some city ordinances require action by an authorized city engineer or city traffic engineer.

Overtime policy studied

Callison presented a proposed amendment to the city's overtime policy as prescribed in the Personnel Policy of the city.

Callison said the amendment would authorize supervisory and management personnel to collect overtime for work done outside normal hours in certain situations.

Commissioner Bob Curry said he disagreed with the idea. Management personnel are hired on a salary basis, not an hourly wage basis, with the understanding that "he is expected to get the job done no matter how much time is required," Curry said.

Wofford explained that what's happening is some foremen and workers collecting overtime are ending up with more pay for the month than their superintendents or managers because "the pay difference is not always that much." Curry said maybe adjustments should be made in the salary scale. He moved the matter should get further study during upcoming budget planning for the next fiscal year.

The commission tabled Callison's recommendation and approved Curry's motion to further review the salary scale for management personnel.

In other matters, Forrest Cloyd, technician with the Engineering Department, reported street repairs in the north section have been completed. Sealcoating operations will begin on July 9, he said.

He said repair operations have moved into the south sections of the city. But repairs in the northern sections have cost about $60,000 more than expected, he said, indicating the city may not be able to take care of all repairs in the south sections.

"It's costing taxpayers more the longer we put off fixing these streets," Mayor Whatley said. He said the city needs to find money to "get it all done as soon as we can."

He said he wants the city to find money in next year's budget to sealcoat the rest of the city. The city is

Approval of drinking age bill expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 21-year-old national drinking age bill is headed back to the House, where quick action could help it become law in time to give the nation a symbolic warning about drunken driving before the Fourth of July weekend.

The measure, which passed the Senate 81-16 Tuesday night, would not take effect for two years. But Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., said it could send an immediate message that the nation is cracking down on drunken drivers.

"It would be symbolic if, before we have a big roaring holiday, we have this in everybody's mind," she told a post-vote news conference.

The House also passed a "minimum 21" bill June 7, but must now decide whether to accept a Senate-added incentive program for states that enact automatic jail terms and fines for convicted drunken drivers.

Rep. James J. Howard, D-N.J., the bill's chief House sponsor, said he would have to study the Senate version before recommending a position to the House.

But he added, "The chances are very good that we will have a 21 year old minimum drinking age pass the House again before the July 4 break" — which begins Friday.

President Reagan said he supports the bill even though he normally doesn't like the federal government telling states what to do.

He said the measure would combat the "national tragedy" of highway deaths, caused in part by young people who cross state lines to buy liquor they cannot get in their own states.

Sen. Frank R. Lautenberg, D-N.J., the chief Senate sponsor, said the penalty period would begin Oct. 1, 1986, and last for two years. A state would lose 5 percent of its allocation the first year of the penalty period and 10 percent the second year.

House approves bill overturning court's ruling on discrimination

WASHINGTON (AP) — Buoyed by an overwhelming House vote, supporters of the major civil rights bill of 1984 say they are optimistic it will win Senate approval over the opposition of conservatives and the Reagan administration.

The bill's supporters say the measure reaffirms longstanding congressional intent that federal money should be cut off to all parts of an institution that discriminates on the basis of sex, race, age or physical handicap.

"The radical right will be isolated," predicts Ralph Neas, executive director of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, a coalition of 165 organizations.

He made the comment Tuesday night after the House voted 375-32 for legislation that would overturn the Supreme Court's controversial Grove City College ruling last February.

In a decision hailed by the administration, the court said that if a segment of an institution was discriminating, federal assistance should be denied only to that part, not the entire institution.

Reps. Paul Simon, D-Ill., and Don Edwards, D-Calif., the bill's floor managers, said that although the measure faces problems in the Senate, the size of the House vote should boost its chances.

Republicans, however, muddied the waters somewhat by getting the Democratic-dominated House to add an amendment that for the first time would grant basic anti-bias protections to employees of Congress and the federal courts.

Neas said he expects opponents to wage a "stall strategy" and then a filibuster in the Senate, where a similar bill has 62 co-sponsors, including Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn. But he predicted that in the end conservatives would be defeated, as they have been on other civil rights proposals during the Reagan administration.

The Senate bill currently is awaiting action by the Labor and Human Resources Committee, chaired by Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, who has vowed to "fight it with everything I've got."

Edwards said the Republican move to protect legislative and judicial employees was ordered by the White House in an effort to scuttle the legislation.

After first saying that the language "threatens" the bill's chances in the Senate, he said the Republican amendment was "not very substantive" and by itself would probably cause few, if any, problems.

The amendment's sponsor, Rep. Steve Bartlett, R-Texas, denied that the administration was behind the language. He said the amendment was a "significant step forward" because congressional and judicial workers are not covered by anti-discrimination laws.

Exchange set Thursday

Israel, Syrian to swap prisoners

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Syria and Israel have agreed to exchange war prisoners. Syria's official news agency reported today. The exchange reportedly will include more than 290 Syrian prisoners.

Syria holds six Israeli prisoners, but the number of Israelis to be freed was not disclosed. The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv today declined to comment on the reported exchange.

The news agency SANA said the swap would take place Thursday near the southern Syrian frontline town of Kuneitra, provincial capital of the occupied Golan Heights which Israel annexed in December 1981. The area is a buffer zone controlled by the United Nations.

The agency said an exchange agreement was worked out by negotiators from the International Committee of the Red Cross during several months of bargaining.

About 290 Syrian prisoners taken in the 1982 Lebanon war will be freed and an undisclosed number of bodies returned, SANA said.

Twenty-one Syrian civilians also will be exchanged, the agency said. Among them are 13 Golan Heights residents held by the Israelis for alleged guerrilla activities, SANA said.

Syria holds at least three Israeli soldiers taken prisoner since the 1982 Israeli invasion of Lebanon. Israel has said five other Israeli troops were missing and unaccounted for.

In addition, three employees of Israel's liaison office in Lebanon have been held by Syria since they were captured May 1 north of Beirut, the Lebanese capital.

Last November, Israel released more than 4,500 Palestinians and Lebanese in exchange for Palestinian groups' setting free six Israeli soldiers.

Syria has had troops in northern and eastern Lebanon since the 1975-1976 Lebanese civil war. Israel has occupied southern Lebanon since June 1982.

'Aggressive management' of state land to continue, Mauro says

Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro Tuesday said when his office drilled an oil well earlier this year it was simply protecting the interests of the state and not going into competition with private enterprise.

Mauro said the action was part of the "aggressive management" of Texas' public lands he has instituted—a practice he said could help solve the state's financial problems.

Mauro was in Pampa for an address to the Desk and Derrick Club Tuesday night.

When the General Land Office drilled the well on a lease in Duval County, some oilmen were critical and called it an act of socialism.

Mauro, however, said the lease on the tract called for a well to be drilled every 90 days. Since the state had not sold the lease when the 90 days expired, it had no choice but to drill the well, Mauro indicated.

"If we had allowed the lease to lapse, it would have gone back to court and our attorneys say we would never have gotten it back again," Mauro said.

Mauro said his policies have raised an additional $11.4 million in revenue for the state during his first year in office.

"That is revenue that doesn't cost the taxpayer a penny," he said.

Among the policy changes Mauro said he has instituted were the first-ever audit of all wells on state land, changes in mineral leasing procedures and rejection of bids on offshore leases when he felt the bids were too low.

Mauro said the well-by-well audit has yielded an additional $7.8 million in underpaid or back royalties; leasing procedure changes increased the average price per acre from $120 to $217; and in one case rejection of offshore bids brought in an additional $2 million when the bids were resubmitted.

Noting that Texas is the only state with its own public lands, Mauro said those lands produced over $400 million in revenue last year. "My job is to see the state gets every penny it has coming" from the 16,000 oil and gas wells located on state land, he said.

Revenue from the state's oil and gas leases are dedicated to the Permanent University Fund and the Public School Fund.

Mauro's office also administers the Texas veterans loan program, which provides low-cost home and land loans. He is proud of the fact that the office has made 5,000 home loans to veterans in the past year since the housing program was enacted into law—a program for which Mauro lobbied vigorously. He said in addition to enabling veterans to buy homes, the program has created 48,000 jobs in Texas.

"I have the best job in Texas," Mauro said, "making loans to veterans and making money for school children."

sealcoating about two-fifths of the streets this year. Whatley said the other three-fifths should be sealcoated next year instead of delaying the projects further than they have been.

Wofford said the commission and citizens need to realize "the work won't last forever," referring to current street maintenance projects. A "significant expense" will be needed every year for maintenance "to keep the streets up," he said.

But he agreed sealcoating of the asphalt streets would greatly cut down on maintenance costs.

Cloyd estimated about $750,000 will be needed for sealcoating the remainder of the city.

In other action, the commission accepted a gift of a bronze cast from the Pampa - Gray County 80th Birthday Celebration Committee for display at the M. K. Brown Auditorium.

Mrs. Clotilde Thompson, representing the committee, said funds left over from the celebration were used to purchase a 24-inch bronze casting entitled "Taming the Mustang" from local sculptor Gerald Sanders.

Thompson said Sanders is a professional sculptor whose work has won him awards and acclaim in America and overseas. He is best known locally for his bronze of "The Lineman," featured on the Bell Telephone directories about two years ago, she said.

The committee also is providing money towards the purchase of a pedestal for the bronze piece, she said.

The acceptance of the cast was recommended by the Fine Arts Committee for the auditorium.

Brewy Steele, chairman of the M. K. Brown Auditorium Advisory Board, discussed a report submitted to the commission concerning policies and recommendations for the auditorium.

He referred specifically to the use of fire lanes in front of the building, saying people have generally ignored the designation.

Steele said the lanes were "planned as a safety measure" and "not intended as a parking area." He said parking in the lanes could create problems if the building ever had to be evacuated in case of a fire. He asked the city to find a means of keeping the fire lanes open.

Wofford said enforcing fire lanes would be a matter the city engineer could now do.

Whatley praised the work of the committee and recommended the acceptance of the report.

Commissioner E. L. "Smiley" Henderson said the city "had long been negligent" in taking as much care as could have been done for some facilities. He said the city should be more responsible in taking care of such facilities provided it as the auditorium and the public library.

The commission accepted the report.

Moore said he had already met with the auditorium custodian and agreed "to start moving quickly" to take care of matters. He said there were no serious problems now, but some repainting and wall settling problems will need to be considered in the future.

In other action, the commission approved the final plat request by E. M. "Bob" Keller for a subdivision northeast of the city and okayed accounts payable.

Church worker gets probation

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A federal judge today sentenced Colorado church worker Stacey Lynn Merkt to a 90-day suspended sentence and placed her on two years probation.

Ms. Merkt, 29, of Colorado Springs, Colo., was found guilty May 14 on three counts of conspiring to transport, transporting and aiding and abetting illegal Salvadoran aliens around Border Patrol checkpoints on a rural highway to San Antonio. It was the first conviction of a U.S. citizen connected with a nationwide movement providing sanctuary to undocumented Salvadorans.

About 100 of Ms. Merkt's supporters who packed the courtroom demonstrated peacefully outside the courthouse.

Ms. Merkt spoke for about 10 minutes before the sentencing telling U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela that pre-sentencing reports he had received were "a little bit sterile so I wanted to give you a window into me."

"I am a lover of life... I have a deep respect for this land and everything on it," she said.

Vela wished her well and told her that violating the law was not the way to go.

"I'm no celebrity and I'm no martyr and I'm certainly no criminal," she said. "You and me, we both stand for justice and we don't take that lightly."

Vela asked her if she was going to violate the law again and she said, "I have no plans to violate the law."

She faced up to 15 years in jail and a $9,000 fine.

Ms. Merkt is a member of a loose-knit network of church and lay workers providing assistance to Salvadorans.

The so-called underground railroad workers maintain that assisting Salvadorans is legal under the federal Refugee Act of 1980 and United Nations protocol.

They say Salvadorans, fleeing a violent, civil-war torn homeland, are political, not economic refugees as the government contends. And, they add, helping Salvadorans refugees is one way of expressing their opposition to U.S. involvement in El Salvador.

During Ms. Merkt's trial, defense attorneys called a series of religious workers, including the Bishop of Brownsville, who testified that he believed protecting refugees is a religious right and duty.

Ms. Merkt was arrested Feb. 17 on a rural South Texas highway near Hebronville in the company of the two Salvadoran adults and one infant, an American nun and a Dallas Times Herald. Border Patrol agents stopped their diocese-owned car and arrested the group just before dawn.

The nun, Sister Dianne Muhlenkamp, a Catholic school principal from Fort Wayne, Ind., received one year's probation under a plea-bargain agreement with U.S. attorneys.

The case against the reporter, Jack Fischer, was never presented to the grand jury. Fischer was on assignment writing a story on the sanctuary movement.

Since her conviction, Ms. Merkt has continued working with refugees at the Casa Oscar Romero refugee halfway house.

The director of the house, Jack Elder, is scheduled to stand trial in August on charges of transporting three undocumented Salvadoran aliens.

Plans upset parents' groups

AUSTIN (AP) — A group of parents, unhappy over plans by Gov. Mark White and the Legislature to have the State Board of Education appointed, says it has gotten a cold shoulder from lawmakers.

"They are not listening to us," said Robin Lewis of Dallas, a member of the group Traditional Families in Texas.

"They have deliberately taken education out of the hands of the people. Their basic attitude is that the people are not capable of making decisions for themselves," Mrs. Lewis said.

Her group and others identifying themselves as pro-family organizations, staged a rally on the Statehouse steps Tuesday to protest legislative moves toward abolishing the elected state board of education and some other proposed changes.

As about 250 people gathered for the rally, a House-Senate conference committee worked on the school reform bill sought by White.

Lawmakers have agreed to replace, at least temporarily, the elected 27-member State Board of Education with a panel appointed by the governor.

Mrs. Lewis said she had been to the Capitol before for an earlier demonstration and to talk with lawmakers, but wasn't happy with the response she got.

"Last week, I got up here and I was a concerned parent. This week, I'm an angry parent. We have asked our legislators to vote for an elected board and they have completely ignored us," she said.

"We don't have any malice. But we're going to go in and say, if you can't represent us then you don't need to be our (elected) representative. We do have a voice, and that's at the voting booths in November."

Noting that school spending takes up $8 billion in tax money every two years, Mrs. Lewis and others said the elected board should be kept so education will be responsive to the people.

White has said a smaller, appointed board would be more accountable to the governor and therefore more likely to take action on reform.

"How can you say that cutting the board down to a smaller number and not even electing them is making them more accountable?" asked Buddy

Hicks of Leander.

"When you give more power to the bureaucrats and take power from the people, it creates more problems. It does not solve anything," Hicks said.

While saying the groups believe teachers deserve pay raises, a major element in the reform legislation, Hicks said the groups also favor a back-to-basics approach stressing reading, writing and arithmetic.

He said teacher competency testing is needed to make certain those in the profession are capable of doing the job.

Also organizing the rally were Parents Perogative, the Texas Eagle Forum and Taxpayers for Educational Excellence. Hicks and Mrs. Lewis said demonstrators would lobby lawmakers, trying to get them to change their minds.

Although the House and Senate have passed two bills on school reform and the conference committee was nearly done with a final plan, Hicks said, "The process is not over. We need to be persistent. We're not going to give up and we're not going to go away."

Money question remains for committee

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislative negotiators today were to work on the only unresolved issue in the education reform package — how to get more money to poor school districts without hurting other schools.

The House-Senate conference committee, which began its work Sunday, planned to take a final vote today, sending its product back to the two chambers for approval.

Money questions promise to be the stickiest, but one conference committee member said an agreement will be reached.

"The differences are really of degree and not concept," said Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan.

The conference committee wrapped up the rest of the bill Tuesday by voting to abolish the elected 27-member State Board of Education as soon as the governor appoints members of a new, smaller board.

"If we can get it done next week, I'd like to see it done," said Hurst Rep. Charles Evans, a conference committee member.

The plan calls for a 15-member board appointed by the governor. In 1988, the board would revert to an elected panel.

While the conference committee worked on the education package, House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Stan Schlueter of Killen introduced a tax bill to raise more than $1 billion annually for education reform and highway improvements.

Center Rep. Bill Haley, conference committee chairman, said with agreement near on the school bill, the tax measure becomes the crucial question.

"We have done something meaningful for the little children of the state of Texas. This is a great day in the history of this state," he said Tuesday.

"And it will be a greater day tomorrow when we come up with the money to pay for it."

Also Tuesday, the committee worked out a plan that would force teachers and administrators to pass a competency test within the next two years.

Students training to be teachers would have to take a test before getting their first job.

The test is intended as a measure of a teacher's knowledge about basic skills in his or her field. John Cole of the Texas Federation of Teachers said there is no test that can determine who is a good teacher, but a basic skills test can weed out the bad.

"Teachers will take a test if that's what we have to do to demonstrate our competency and move this education reform issue forward," he said.

Mike Morrow of the Association of Texas Professional Educators said, "We can live with it."

The committee also approved a teacher career ladder system that offers pay raises as rewards for teachers who earn advanced degrees or show great skill in the classroom.

Parents sue blood center

DALLAS (AP) — The parents of a 2-year-old boy are suing the Dallas Blood Center, claiming their son contracted acquired immune deficiency syndrome and died after receiving blood transfusions supplied by the center.

David and Denise Witherspoon filed suit in state district court here Monday saying the center failed to test blood properly, screen donors and warn users of the risk of contracting AIDS.

The suit accuses the blood center of violating the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices and Consumer Protection act by selling blood that was "defective and dangerous."

But the center's director said that the child could not have contracted AIDS from the donated blood. He said the donor whose blood was given to James Witherspoon did not appear to have the disease.

"We know who gave the blood, but the donor does not appear to have the AIDS syndrome," said Dr. James Wheeler. "The donor is in no known risk group."

Wheeler said the center will be able to prove that the child did not die of "transfusionally related AIDS."

The boy was given blood transfusions in the intensive care unit of Parkland Memorial Hospital after his premature birth on Oct. 28, 1981.

He later was readmitted to the hospital several times with pneumonia and a cytomegalovirus infection, illnesses that usually afflict AIDS victims. He died on Feb. 6.

"We are going to prove that those things they are stating about the Dallas Blood Center are not true," Wheeler said. "The screening programs at Dallas Blood Center are the same as they are at any federally licensed blood bank."

Wheeler said blood banks ask donors questions designed to identify a risk of AIDS, but not tested.

"We don't test specifically for AIDS in any donor," Wheeler said. "Nobody has that test yet," he said.

Former federal prosecutor testifies in trial

WACO, Texas (AP) — The former assistant U.S. attorney who narrowly missed being gunned down in his San Antonio neighborhood in 1978, has taken the stand in Waco to describe the details of the six-year-old incident.

James Kerr, during two hours of testimony Tuesday in the federal trial of James R. Kearns, told jurors of his split-second reaction after seeing the barrel of a gun sticking out from the rear of a van.

"The minute I saw the weapon, with the line of work I'm in, I assumed what was happening and I spent my time hitting the floor," said Kerr, who no longer lives in Texas.

Kerr said he ducked under the dashboard of his luxury sedan just before a flurry of 20 bullets obliterated his windshield.

The former prosecutor, known for his zealous pursuit of narcotics and organized crime cases, received only minor cuts on his head and hands from shards of flying glass. The shattered windshield of his car was entered into evidence Tuesday.

Kerr left San Antonio shortly after the incident and now works as an administrative law judge in an undisclosed location.

Prosecutors say Kearns was hired to murder the prosecutor by Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra, whose drug trafficking was being investigated by a task force headed by Kerr.

Chagra, who pleaded guilty to the crime last month in a bargain with the government, has been listed as a possible prosecution witness.

The two-count indictment charges Kearns with conspiracy to murder Kerr and with using a 30-caliber carbine rifle to assault Kerr.

A jury of eight women and six men, including two alternates, were seated Tuesday. The trial was moved to Waco by U.S. District Judge William S. Sessions of San Antonio, who is hearing the case.

Kerr said he was driving from his home in the Alamo Heights section of San Antonio to a nearby restaurant when a green van pulled in front of his car, blocking the intersection. Seconds later, he said, he saw the barrel of a gun poking out of the van's rear window.

The bullets hitting his car "sounded like a cannon or a loud crash," he said.

Kerr was accompanied to Waco's federal building Tuesday by a bodyguard.

During cross-examination, defense attorney Craig Mehrens asked Kerr about the description of his assailant in November 1978, pointing out that the former prosecutor had been unable to identify the gunman.

'Sharpstown'-type bills proposed

AUSTIN (AP) — A state senator has asked whether the time is right to revive legislation similar to controversial proposals that surfaced during the Sharpstown government scandal of the 1970s.

The scandal, revolving around the Sharpstown State Bank and a stock fraud case, wrecked political careers, destroyed reputations and led to legislative reforms that are still in place.

On Tuesday, Sen. O.H. "Ike" Harris, R-Dallas, asked Ruben Johnson, chairman of the board of United Bank of Austin, if he thought Texas was "far enough away from Sharpstown" to permit state-chartered insurance corporations to insure state bank deposits.

Johnson, a new appointee to the Finance Commission, replied, "That was a damn good idea and probably should be considered right now."

Harris, a member of the Senate Nominations Subcommittee, which reviewed Johnson's appointment, suggested that the commission consider proposing such a bill during the 1985 Legislature.

"It would be better emanating from them (the commission) than the way it came up before," Harris said.

In 1969 Houston promoter Frank Sharp sought passage of two deposit insurance bills, which cleared a special legislative session but were vetoed by Gov. Preston Smith after the banking industry intervened.

The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission in 1971 asserted that the bills' purpose was to enable Sharpstown State Bank — now defunct — to evade regulation by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. by providing an alternate insurer for its deposits.

In 1973, however, the House General Investigating Committee issued a report saying evidence from all sources except Sharp indicated that the bills were "intended for the protection of bank depositors, in addition to that offered" by the FDIC "and not in lieu of" federal protection.

Nevertheless, former Speaker Gus Mutscher, former Rep. Tommy Shannon, D-Fort Worth, and Mutscher aide Rush McGinty had already been convicted in Abilene of conspiracy to accept a bribe from Sharp.

Sharp allegedly provided the three with Sharpstown bank loans to buy stock in National Bankers Life Insurance Co. as an inducement to pass the deposit insurance bills.

Teen-ager accused of setting fire to stepfather placed on probation

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — A 14-year-old Abilene boy, who allegedly helped his mother and his sister plan the burning death of his father, has been sentenced to one year's probation.

Nick Eugene Oates, 38, died April 12, after police said he was doused with gasoline and set afire as he slept in his west Abilene home.

The youth's mother, Cheryl Kay Oates, 38, told police the fire culminated a two-day family argument and that her children had been physically and verbally abused by Oates for several years.

Mrs. Oates and her older daughter by a previous marriage, Robin Renee Elliott, 17, have been charged with murder in connection with the death, and are scheduled to go to trial July 18. They are free on $10,000 bond.

Investigators said the burning was planned over a four-hour period.

In a hearing last Friday, which was closed to the public, the boy was ordered to continue counseling as a term of his probation. Taylor County Juvenile Judge James McMillon said Monday.

McMillon said he would allow the youth to remain in the custody of an older sister, who was not involved in the death, and with whom the youth has been staying since shortly after the March 25 incident.

The youth's attorney, Gerald Brantley, said that the youth entered a simple "no contest" to allegations that he "engaged in delinquent conduct" and admitted no specific charges regarding the fire death.

The boy was tried as a juvenile, since he is under 15 and too young to be certified to stand trial as an adult.

Oates died at a Lubbock hospital on April 12, more than two weeks after the incident.

Maximum punishment, or "rehabilitation" under juvenile law, would be commitment to the Texas Youth Council for an indefinite period. The TYC could send a juvenile back home after a few days or keep him or her until the youth's 18th birthday.

Assistant District Attorney Mark Heidenheimer represented the state, and attorney Gerald Brantley represented the juvenile at the hearing. Heidenheimer is vacationing in Europe, and Brantley said attorneys were ordered by McMillon not to discuss what happened in the Friday hearing, which was closed to the public.

Assistant Chief Juvenile Probation Officer Mike Cotten said the "standard, one-year probation, subject to extension and/or modification" was agreed to by the parties. He said the youth had been on "intensive supervision" since March and has been "no problem whatsoever."

Another bad case of summit fever

Judging by the persistence of the questioning at President Reagan's last press conference, many folks in the "national" media are in the throes of another bout with Summit Fever.

This affliction, characterized by an apparent belief that the only alternative to thermonuclear war next week is for an American president and a Soviet premier to sit down and exchange meaningless platitudes, has occurred before. Rational explanations have been sought without much success. It appears to be a fad, with about as much serious meaning as a desire to dye your hair green.

The symptoms, however, couldn't be missed. There were grown men and women with some claim to being analysts and student of public policy, in effect repeating the slogan, "Where's the Summit?" Perhaps they had tired of last month's fad, the conversion of the advertising slogan, "Where's the beef?" into a meaningless political slogan but lacked the imagination to do more than substitute a single word.

Lay aside for a moment whether it is seemly to hold any sort of meeting with a regime that is presently peddling lame assurance about the condition of Andrie Sakharov. Concern for the fate of more persecuted individuals or such concepts as human rights in one of the first casualties when Summit Fever hits.

You'd think that somebody would have a memory long enough to recall the noble strides toward peace that emerged from previous summits. Your memory of concrete results is a little dim? Congratulations. One of the characteristics of those afflicted with Summit Fever seems to be the complete loss of memory, coupled with a disinclination to look into the record.

We'd be the last to disagree with the late Winston Churchill, who averred that it's better to jaw-jaw than war-war. The delusion that simply getting two maximum leaders together to jaw-jaw face to face at a highly-publicized meeting will work some wonder, however, is simply inexplicable.

It would be pleasant if peace could be assured by the simple expedient of calling a meeting a summit. Unfortunately, the process is certainly more complex. It is not especially helpful, in venturing toward noble goals, to be burdened with delusions.

It is likely that this outbreak of Summit Fever will pass, though manifestations may persist while the more generalized malady of election fever is upon the body politic. The hope (perhaps vain) is that the delusions fostered will be short-lived.

Little is left of states' rights

Little is left of the venerable 10th Amendment - the states' rights amendment - to the U.S. Constitution save rags and tatters. Even less was left after the U.S. Senate sustained the House's vote in favor of a national legal drinking age.

Here is one of those sorrowful cases where splendid intentions butt heads with shoddy methods. Whoever wonders how Big Government got so all-fired big should wonder no more.

Amending an interstate highway construction bill, the House, on a voice vote, called for cutbacks in highway aid to any state with a drinking age lower than 21.

The redoubtable Candy Lightner, of Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD), had campaigned for the change. Mrs. Lightner is clearly some campaigner. Members of both parties lined up three and four deep to speak for her proposal.

Mrs. Lightner, when she talks of the carnage brought about the lowered drinking age, makes marvelous sense. The 18-year-old drinking age arrived about a decade ago; since then, teen-age tipping, and teen-age highway deaths, have alike risen sharply.

Foes of a higher drinking age, who prevailed only a couple of weeks ago in New York State, deny that such a measure would reduce highway deaths. But common sense is at least as persuasive as statistics. Common sense tells us that whatever is attractive and easy to get will be gotten.

Clearly - at least it seems clear to me - the drinking age should everywhere be raised at 21. But the states, not the federal government, should do the raising.

Let us have a uniform rule - against uniform rules laid down at the national level, save on the most basic, rock-bottom matters, like the constitutional equality of all Americans. If all the states (which used to be called, ho, ho, "the sovereign states") want to act in concord fine; if they don't want to, they should be forced. Such is, or was, the nature of our federal union.

How ironic to think that federal policy helped create precisely the situation Mrs.

Lightner hopes to address with a new federal policy!

The lowering of the drinking age to 18 was a direct consequence of the Federal Be Kind to Teen-Agers Amendment, otherwise known as the 28th Amendment, under which the voting age was lowered to 18. The idea, born of the '60s youth rebellion, was that, if you were old enough to fight, you were, y'know, old enough to vote.

The amendment was proposed by Congress March 23, 1971, and ratified a breathless three months later. State legislators were no slower to sweep away the remaining disabilities of 18-19- and 20-year olds; henceforth these could make binding contracts, serve on juries and get pickled, just like anyone else.

Well, we see where this sort of thing got us, at least with respect to teen-age drinking. Disliking the old policy, we now want a new one, and rightly so. But why a national policy?

Partly, it is said, because of the ease with which drinking teen-agers careen back and forth across state lines. A state with a lower drinking age (e.g., New York) lures teens from adjoining states with a higher age (e.g., New Jersey and Pennsylvania). But the solution isn't a national policy; the solution is for New York to quit stalling and raise the drinking age - if only to protect New Yorkers.

National solutions are the easy way out of predicaments. How much easier to pass one law than 50! But if so, why have states at all? Why tolerate distinctions of any sort?

There is a very good reason for such distinctions. It is that we are a people of wildly diverse needs and objectives. We are a patchwork quilt, not a sober black suit. For Congress to say what goes - as Congress, unrestrained, will gladly do - is in no small way to clobber human freedom and opportunity.

Mr. Jefferson understood the matter profoundly. It's not at all plain that the lawmakers who swarm around modern Washington understand at all.

One giant leap for mankind

The successful test of an anti-ballistic missile against a dummy one in space could not come at a better time for President Reagan's campaign to get more funds for his "Star Wars" program.

It also vindicated the lifetime work of Professor Grindie Grindewald, who was the first to put forward the theory that anything man could put into space he could also shoot down.

Ridiculed in the scientific community for years, Grindewald may now go down in history as the Father of World War III. I found the old man in his home in Falls Church, Va.

He took me into his garage and showed me sketches dating back to 1962 covered with mathematical calculations, and then told me his story.

"After the Soviets launched Sputnik, everyone in America panicked except me. I went to see Kennedy's people in the White House and said, 'There is only one answer to Sputnik. We have to launch a crash program to shoot it down.' They told me the president had a better idea. America would develop satellites of its own, and compete peacefully with the Soviets in space. Space, Kennedy insisted, must not be used as a launching pad for war.

"So he created NASA and sent manned and unmanned satellites into the sky, without giving any thought to their military value. Every time I saw one go up I got sick.

"Pretty soon there were hundreds of satellites swooping around the sky. It made me furious. While other space scientists were working to get more of them into space, I decided to devote my life to shooting them down."

"You were way ahead of your time."

Grindewald said, "First I went to NASA and asked them if they would finance my research. No one would listen to me. They said the space program was man's last chance to improve the quality of life on earth and to unlock the secrets of the universe.

"Then I went to Congress with my dream. I asked them to let me shoot down one communications satellite to prove that it could be done. My timing was off because our astronauts had just landed on the moon and the country was brainwashed into believing this accomplishment was the dawn of a new civilization. I had to laugh.

"What finally saved me was Vladimir Richesky, a Soviet scientist who also had a deep hatred of using space for peaceful purposes. We met at a 'Star Trek' convention at Disneyland and exchanged views. I told him if he would let me steal his anti-satellite weapon plans I could prove the Soviets were going to use space to launch a first-strike attack on the U.S. Then Congress would give me funds to develop my program. In exchange I would let him steal my plans so he could prove to the Kremlin we were working on a top-secret strategy to shoot down their satellites. Then he could get all the rubles he needed from the Kremlin to finance his research.

"He naturally agreed, and now thanks to that meeting the U.S. and U.S.S.R. are on a collision course in space."

"Weren't you afraid of being arrested for exchanging secrets with the Soviets?"

"What secrets? Satellites are sitting ducks. All you have to do is aim a laser beam at one and it goes POOF!"

"You gave the space program a whole new lease on life," I said.

Grindewald said modestly, "I never doubted we could do it. Once I proved the Soviets were up to their ears in space warfare research I had President Reagan's ear."

"What did he say when you showed him your anti-satellite weapons plan?"

"He just smiled and said, 'This is one small step for man and one giant leap for mankind!'"

Labor's endorsement backfired

I haven't had much to say on the Democratic presidential contest.

For one thing, I'm not much for demolition derbies.

And besides, what more can really be said of the contributions being made to the American political process than, "Oy, vey!"

But the dismay of some of Walter Mondale's labor supporters, as reported recently by the Washington Post, requires attention.

It was expected, according to the Post, that the candidate's union ties would become a campaign issue, but one that would be raised by the Republicans after the primaries, not by Democrats during the primaries.

"That's the real tragedy," AFL-CIO spokesman Murray Seeger is quoted as observing. "That's never happened in this party before."

Can Seeger mean it? Can he really be not only surprised that there's been a change but not aware why?

It's all very recent history, the direct result of the decision of the AFL-CIO's leadership to break precedent and bestow its 1984 endorsement on one candidate before the primaries rather than upon whoever emerged with the Democratic nomination.

Predictions were plentiful at the time of how divisive labor's backing could be if it ceased to be a prize almost any serious Democratic candidate could expect to win with the nomination, and which therefore it was in the interest of none to discredit.

Pre-nomination endorsement could make sense only in a no-contest situation, which was never the case this year even though Mondale may have been front-runner by acclamation. In practical politics, even interest groups hedge bets.

But then, this has considerably less to do with practical politics than with a changing economy - and organized labor's difficulties in adjusting to the changes.

The story is in the statistics. The latest of immediate significance came out of the Labor Department recently: More than half of American women are now in the work force.

Another milestone was passed two years ago, when for the first time more Americans were employed in service industries than in the production of goods.

The service sector is adding about half a million jobs a year as manufacturing shrinks. Clerical work has replaced traditional blue-collar work as the largest single occupational category, absorbing almost half of the male work force and two-thirds of the female.

The traditional union movement, of which the AFL-CIO is the largest and most visible component, was the product of and has maintained its base in the very old-line industries that are in decline. Unions have been slow and not notably successful in organizing the areas of greatest employment growth - women, minorities, services, high tech.

Under the heavy hand of old plumber George Meany, there appeared to be little interest within the AFL-CIO in doing so. That changed with the accession of Lane Kirkland to the throne, but the movement forward is still more of a lurch than a stride.

This is the context in which the movement decided to enhance its political clout with a more decisive voice in the party of choice.

Although the union movement still commands immense organizational and financial resources, the decision came out of weakness rather than strength.

It is questionable whether the effort was ever in labor's interests. There's a good chance, even with Mondale successfully nominated, of end up with the opposite of what was sought.

It's all too obvious at this point that it wasn't in the party's interests.

That may be from some points of view a tragedy, but by whose pen?

NASA officials investigate why Discovery's engines shut down

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Attention focused on a 10-inch-long fuel valve as NASA officials tried to determine why a computer cut off Discovery's engines just four nerve-wracking seconds before liftoff, delaying the newest space shuttle's maiden voyage indefinitely.

Only one of three engines fired Tuesday before a sensor indicated a faulty fuel valve and shut down all three in a lightning fast sequence that left the six astronauts strapped atop 500,000 gallons of volatile fuel, ready to escape down a 1,200-foot escape wire.

Repairs were to continue today on tiles that were water-damaged when a fire broke out under Discovery's solid booster rockets, equipment that was damaged as the shuttle shook and strained against its hold-down bolts and other launch pad systems.

NASA officials also planned to examine a 10-inch-long by 5-inch-round valve that controls the flow of fuel into the combustion chamber of engine No. 3, the first in the firing sequence, and to discuss another flight date.

The officials said after the dangerous launch pad abort there is no chance the flight can be reset before next week, and that it may be two or three weeks before another try can be made.

There was not another shuttle flight scheduled until Aug. 29, again with Discovery, and a delay was not expected to have an impact on the timing of future missions.

The astronauts — five men and a woman — were given leave to do as they please until next week.

Mail used to curb counterfeiting

NEW YORK (AP) — Tickets for the concert tour of superstar Michael Jackson and his brothers are being sold only by mail through a New York post office both to guarantee fair distribution and discourage counterfeiting, tour promoters say.

Printing of fake tickets to rock concerts has been widespread in recent years, but the Jackson tour promoters are mounting a determined effort to keep it to a minimum for what is expected to be the hottest concert ticket of the summer.

Beverly Paige, spokeswoman for the tour organizers, declined to outline all the anti-counterfeiting measures being taken, but said the central mail order process will be a big help.

Discovery had started its main engine firing sequence seven seconds before liftoff, to give the powerplants time to reach full power while the shuttle's main computer monitored their operation.

The three engines fire in sequence, igniting 120 milliseconds apart. The computer sensed a faulty valve in No. 3 and swiftly sent the cutoff signal.

Only No. 2 ignited, and that only for three seconds. No. 3 did not build up sufficient pressure, possibly because of the valve, and No. 1 never had a chance to receive an ignition command.

For the six astronauts, the shutdown was a moment of potential danger. Their spaceship was strapped to tanks holding a half-million gallons of fuel and a small fire flared at the base of the shuttle, 147 feet below.

A deluge of water, triggered automatically, quickly extinguished the flames and launch controllers examined fuel tank gauges to make sure levels did not threaten an explosion.

For a time shuttle operations manager Thomas Utsman said launch control considered emergency measures to evacuate the crew, and commander Henry Hartsfield said later: "We were prepared to bail out if necessary."

But the moment of risk passed quickly.

"The crew was not in any danger," Utsman said.

The astronauts left the cabin 45 minutes after the shutdown. On Monday, a backup computer failed and Discovery's debut was delayed just nine minutes before blastoff.

Hartsfield, quoted in a NASA release, said he thought when the engines kicked in that Discovery was finally on its way.

"Almost simultaneously we had an engine alarm," he said. "It was then I knew we were not going anywhere and my major concern was that the solids did not fire." The solids are the solid fuel rockets that help boost the shuttle into space. Once they ignite, there is no stopping them.

Had a major fire started or if fuel tank pressure levels had exceeded safety limits, the crew would have left the ship, crossed a catwalk and climbed into large metal baskets that would have whisked them down a 1,200-foot slide wire.

Prosecutors will ask judge to jail parents of youth

HOUSTON (AP) — A judge must decide whether the parents of a teen-ager accused of murdering a postal carrier should be jailed because they refuse to answer questions from a grand jury, saying their Jewish religion forbids them from testifying against a family member.

Even though they were granted immunity and ordered to testify, Bernard and Odette Port twice have refused to answer the grand jury's questions about the June 7 shooting death of Debora Sue Schatz.

State District Judge William Hatten scheduled a hearing today to determine whether the Ports should be held in contempt and sent to jail.

The Ports' 17-year-old son, David, last week pleaded innocent to murder and waived his right to a grand jury hearing in hopes of keeping his parents from going to jail.

But Assistant District Attorney Jim Lavine said prosecutors are going to proceed with the investigation because they have no other witnesses who could testify to key facts of evidence.

The Ports have said the same protection granted spouses against incriminating each other should be extended to parents and children. They also say the laws of their religion, Judaism, prevent them from testifying against a family member.

Lavine said the Ports' arguments are only a desperate ploy to withhold information the state may need to prosecute their son.

"Their attempt to thwart the investigation and prevent us from finding out the truth is not going to work," he said.

Randy Schaffer, the couple's attorney, said the state could be fishing for facts that could turn the murder charge into a capital murder indictment.

"If they speak, it could mean that the state could kill their son," Schaffer said.

But Lavine said Schaffer's suspicion points to the need for a complete inquiry.

"If that's the way they feel, they may just have made an argument for a grand jury investigation," he said.

Postal authorities said Miss Schatz, 23, disappeared June 7 while helping a co-worker deliver mail in the Ports' affluent west Houston neighborhood. Her delivery truck was found nearby.

On the same afternoon, police say, Mrs. Port returned home to find bullet holes in the stairwell wall of the family's home and blood on some of the steps.

The couple's son was not there and did not return that night. The next morning, the Ports reported him missing.

By then, police using bloodhounds traced Miss Schatz' scent to the Port home, officers said.

Investigators obtained a search warrant and returned to the home, where they said they found bloodstains and bullet holes, and a collection of weapons. Officers said Port gave them a .22-caliber pistol that recently had been fired.

Denial of power line request recommended

AUSTIN (AP) — An administrative law judge for the Public Utility Commission says three utility companies have failed to prove that a high-voltage power line that would cross six counties is completely safe.

Angela Demerle, who heard testimony in the case, recommended Tuesday that the PUC deny the utilities' request for a 400-kilovolt transmission line from six miles north of Huntsville to the South Texas Nuclear Project near Bay City.

A final decision by the three-member PUC in the case has been set for Aug. 16.

Central Power and Light Co., Houston Lighting and Power Co. and Southwestern Electric Power Co. had requested permission to build the 155-mile line at an estimated cost of $141.2 million.

The PUC said the proposed line, encompassing 341,445 acres, would be the first of its kind in Texas.

Part of the proposed line in Grimes and Waller counties touched off a letter-writing campaign by 1,700 people who opposed the project. Much of the opposition to the project was generated by the Rt. Rev. Maurice Benitez of Houston, an Episcopal bishop who noted that the line would cross Camp Allen.

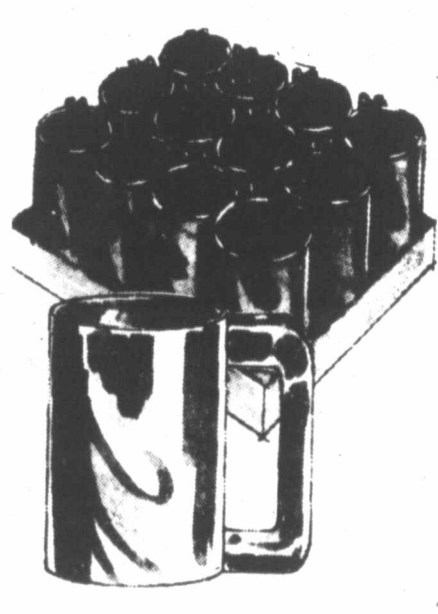

Camp Allen is a camp and conference center of the Episcopal Diocese of Texas. Testimony indicated that more than 12,000 people a year use the camp, including 1,200 to 1,500 children every summer.

In hearings last year, Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, said the issue had "raised real concerns, real anxieties and genuine fear" in his legislative district, "and I don't think the fear is without justification."

"If we err, let's err on the side of the safety of the residents," Caperton said.

Cherbourg honors young American who liberated City Hall 40 years ago

CHERBOURG, France (AP) — Three weeks ago and 50 miles away on the Normandy D-Day beaches, presidents, kings and queens gathered to honor the soldiers who helped liberate France from Nazi occupation 40 years ago.

On Tuesday, in Cherbourg's Place de la Republique, were the city's mayor, a group of veterans and Bill Finley's three sisters.

Sgt. William F. Finley was, in the best sense, an ordinary hero, a Decatur, Ill., boy who joined up at age 17, dashed under fire across Cherbourg's main square and liberated the City Hall on June 26, 1944.

Less than 10 months later, at age 20, he died of wounds in Germany.

Cherbourg's present mayor,

Jean-Pierre Godefroy, is of a generation to whom the war is a dim childhood memory. Yet he said with pride and determination at Tuesday's ceremony: "Our city will always remember those who gave their lives for our freedom."

As Cherbourg thought about what it should do to mark the 40th anniversary of France's liberation from the Nazis, they realized that Finley could be the symbol of the freedom, that through him, the city could thank all those who fought valiantly and died almost unknown to history.

Finley might have remained one of those unknown heroes except for the good memory of Paul Ingouf, a city historian and journalist, who had talked with the American and noted his name, almost correctly, during the days of liberation.

The Decatur Herald and Review carried a story on Cherbourg's search for Finley.

"Until we saw that" article, said Finley's sister, Majorie Lockard, "we had known nothing of what Billy did here."

Mrs. Lockard, from Lexington, Ky., came to the ceremony in front of Cherbourg City Hall. She joined Finley's two other sisters, Jackie Neff and Betty Sims from Decatur, in the brilliant, hot sunshine. Forty years ago, it was drizzling as Finley dashed across the square under German machine gun fire.

On Tuesday, the French Navy Band played rousing airs.

Tax reform panel hears growing support for some form of flat tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — The idea that taxes should be based on ability to pay is becoming a central issue as the government weighs overhaul of the federal income tax.

The 71-year-old system is "progressive," meaning that as income rises, the tax takes an increasingly larger portion of earnings. For example, a family of four with $15,000 in income and average deductions now pays about $900 in tax, or only 10 percent of the tax on a similar family with $60,000 earnings.

"That's too progressive a system," Charis E. Walker, a Washington lobbyist and former deputy treasury secretary, said Tuesday at a Treasury Department hearing on tax overhaul.

On the other hand, Iris Lav, representing the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, said that union opposes any tax that is not based on ability to pay.

"We are very concerned that many simplification proposals would do so at a cost of making it (the present tax system) even more unfair than it is now," she said.

One of the most discussed proposals at the Treasury hearings has been the flat tax, which would, for all practical purposes, end the ability-to-pay feature. After allowing some level of tax-free income to help the poor, a flat tax would mean the same single rate of tax on everybody.

Polls indicate the flat tax is appealing to many people because of the simplicity they perceive in it. But it is unpopular in Congress because it would produce large tax cuts for upper-income people at the expense of those farther down the income scale.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, who chaired Tuesday's hearing, has said a pure flat tax — one that repealed all deductions, exemptions and credits — is a "snare" and a "delusion." However, he added, the department is still weighing the values of some kind of flat tax and will consider it when it makes its report on tax overhaul about Dec. 1.

The seven hearings — the last in the series is scheduled Thursday in Springfield, Ill. — have shown support for a modified flat tax, one that would have only two or three flat rates to replace the present 16 rates. The best known of these is the bill sponsored by Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., and Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., which would retain some of the "progressivity" of the current system.

As many as 80 percent of taxpayers would be taxed at a 14 percent rate. The maximum rate would be cut from 50 percent to 30 percent; it would apply only to couples with incomes above $65,000 and single people above $37,500. In return, most deductions, credits and exemptions now allowed would be repealed; a notable exception is the deduction for home mortgage interest.

Joseph J. Minarik, a former congressional tax analyst now working for the Urban Institute, said the Bradley-Gephardt bill is the fairest overhaul proposal advanced so far because it would not shift the tax burden from one income level to another and would eliminate most of the provisions that allow upper-income investors to avoid tax.

Bradley and Gephardt call their proposal "the fair tax." Minarik said an appearance on the Phil Donohue television show to discuss the bill generated more than 12,000 letters of support. But for that approach there is far from universal support in Congress.

Offshore burning opponents angry

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Officials and environmentalists from Texas and Louisiana have accused the Environmental Protection Agency of luring them to Washington on false pretenses and disregarding public sentiment on the offshore burning of toxic wastes.

Peter Arnow, chief of the Louisiana Attorney General's environmental enforcement division, said Tuesday he traveled thousands of miles at the taxpayer's expense, believing he would have input in "an open process" of creating regulations to control ocean incineration.

"But when I arrived here last night (Monday), I learned they'd already drafted the rules," he said in a telephone interview from Washington.

Brian Berwick of the Texas Attorney General's office said he shared the concerns expressed by Arnow, who obtained the regulations from an EPA staff member. Berwick and a variety of groups from the Rio Grande Valley have been battling the EPA over offshore incineration for a year.

EPA's Stephen Schatzow said the draft regulations now obtained are still open to public input and were drafted by a staff struggling to meet a tight deadline set by EPA Assistant Administrator Jack Ravan. Ravan asked that the new rules be ready to publish in the Federal Register by Aug. 31.

Representatives from New Jersey, Alabama, California, Texas and Louisiana attended the Tuesday meeting with Schatzow, who had invited them to participate in drafting the regulations.

Last month, under continuing public pressure, Ravan denied a request for an incineration permit from Chemical Waste Management Inc. of Oak Brook, Ill., until regulations controlling offshore burns could be written.

Don Reddicliffe, Chemical Waste Management's director of Corporate Affairs, said the company was "specially pleased" by the agency's commitment to "a firm timetable" for developing ocean incineration regulations.

Ravan called for input from "all interested parties" in developing plans for future ocean burns.

The commercial permit Ravan denied would have allowed the Illinois company to burn nearly 80 million gallons of waste on two incineration ships over the next three years.

Ravan also rejected a recommendation from Schatzow that Chemical Waste Management be granted a research permit for test burns of 3.3 million gallons of hazardous waste at a site 195 miles off the coast of Texas.

Environmentalists charged the "research" burns would have allowed the company to get rid of all the polychlorinated biphenyls, or PCBs, the company has stockpiled in Emelle, Ala., in anticipation of receiving the permits. The company had already conducted at least two test burns of PCBs in the Gulf of Mexico.

PCBs are cancer-causing substances found in old electrical equipment.

Arnow said those traveling to Washington had been told no regulations would be drafted before the meeting.

"But they lied and misrepresented the meeting," Arnow said. "The regulations had already been drafted by the time we arrived."

"They have a secret agenda — they're trying to get the Chemical Waste plan through. I hoped we could have a meaningful process of public input here. But I now have my doubts," he said.

Schatzow said Arnow and others attending the meeting will have ample opportunity to comment on the proposed regulations after they are published.

The EPA will be holding a series of public hearings to solicit input, he said.

"I have my marching orders (from Ravan)," Schatzow said. "I think people basically overreacted. The proof is in the pudding and they should wait to see what is published."

Foods for the Fourth of July

Wednesday marks the 209th Anniversary of American Independence and many citizens will honor the Fourth with food and family as well as fireworks.

Today's American food has been influenced by a variety of sources: the bounty of fruits and vegetables, a rich pioneer heritage and a melting-pot of cultures and customs.

Here, we have gathered some of that variety: a fresh vegetable salad "kabob," historic homemade ice cream, beef stew and a quick dip with a Southwestern zest.

This summer, in addition to the customary hot dogs and soft drinks, celebrate the fourth by featuring the diversity of American eating.

Simple snack, quick meal declare independent eating

Busy summer activities often leave little time to cook and even less time for a sit-down dinner.

Dietetic technician Betty Osbin of Pampa has these quick summer ideas for an on-the-run meal and an easy snack.

A spicy meal in itself, Osbin's Whole Meal Dip supplies bits of the four basic food groups. Tortilla chips provide the grain. The spicy green chilies and pimientos are vegetables. Dairy needs come from the cheese while the beef provides the meat.

WHOLE MEAL DIP
2 pounds lean ground beef
2 pounds velveta cheese (cubed) or Cheese Whiz or cheese soup
2 cans chopped green chilies
2 jars pimientos
Jar picante or taco sauce as desired

Brown ground beef until done. Drain off all grease or water that cooks out. Electric skillets work very good.

Turn heat very low and add cheese, chilies and pimiento. Continue to heat until cheese melts. At this point, taste and add the amount of sauce, if any, you would like. I add one-half cup hot picante or taco sauce which makes it only mildly hot.

Serve hot with chips. Leftovers can be frozen and reheated to taste just like fresh made.

For parties, make larger batch and keep in slow cooker to keep warm.

Woman shares Pioneer ice cream recipe

What better way to celebrate Independence Day than with a recipe from America's past.

Pampa dietetic technician Betty Osbin ran across such a recipe recently. It's a smooth home-made ice cream has been in the Sadie Durning family since before 1880.

Back then, the ice cream mixture was poured into heavy wooden barrels.

Families would gather to hand-crank the ice cream until firm. It was a long, muscle-pulling process, but the tasty results were well worth the effort.

Ice cream socials were a popular turn-of-the-century way to meet neighbors. Even with today's humming electric ice cream mixers, the frothy smooth texture of homemade ice cream is still a top summer treat.

ICE CREAM
6 eggs (separated)

Beat whites with one cup sugar until very stiff. Beat yolks with one cup sugar and two tablespoons cornstarch until light and fluffy.

In a large heavy sauce pan, bring two cups water to boil. Fold in egg yolk mixture and continue stirring and cook over low heat for three minutes. Remove from heat and fold in egg white mixture, stirring constantly.

Add two teaspoons vanilla (or more if using artificial vanilla).

Pour into ice cream freezer. Add one pint cream (large can of canned milk will work). Add any fruit desired and finish filling to fill line with milk.

Freeze according to freezer directions.

Hint: Osbin uses table salt when freezing. It makes a smoother quality ice cream and freezes just as easily.

DILL BEEF STEW fills the bill for outdoors eating.

Hearty beef stew good campers' dish

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

A dill-flavored beef stew makes a hearty evening meal for campers or those on a fishing trip. For camping, prepare stew at home, chill in refrigerator and take to campsite in a cooler. Those on a fishing trip can also take a pot of stew with them or make it at the campsite.

Serve with potatoes or rice.

DILL BEEF STEW

1 1/2 pounds cubed boneless chuck
1 tablespoon salad oil
1 medium onion sliced
1/2 pound mushrooms, sliced
1/2 cup chili sauce
1/2 cup water
1/2 cup dill

pickle liquid
1 1/2 teaspoon salt

4 Dash pepper
4 large carrots, cut in 1-inch pieces
3/4 cup sliced dill pickles
2 ribs of celery, sliced

In large skillet, brown beef on all sides in oil; drain off fat. Add onion and cook 1 minute. Stir in mushrooms, chili sauce, water, pickle liquid, salt and pepper. Cover and simmer 30 minutes. Add carrots and cook 20 minutes. Mix in the pickles and celery; cook 10 minutes longer or until meat and vegetables are tender. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 6 servings, about 304 calories per serving. Served with 1/2 cup cooked rice or 1 medium potato adds about 100 calories.

Summer Salad Kabobs are easy to make

Mid-summer salad has twist

Americans have earned a reputation for salad innovation. With a wide assortment of fresh produce available to American cooks and an almost unlimited selection of pourable salad dressings, little wonder we seldom run out of new salad ideas.

Summer Salad Kabobs is a conversation piece recipe that takes advantage of seasonal fresh produce and a reduced calorie dressing. Its cool flavors are ideal for entertaining on a hot Fourth of July.

The salad combines chicken chunks and shrimp threaded on a skewer with corn on the cob pieces, zucchini chunks, mushrooms and cherry tomatoes. The ingredients for the salad can be prepared in advance and waiting in the refrigerator for guests to arrive. A flask of Italian reduced calorie dressing, used as a marinade, compliments the salad ingredients while keeping the calorie count to a minimum.

The kabobs can also be grilled and the dressing used as a brush on marinade.

For an attractive presentation, serve the salad kabobs on a plate or platter lined with fresh spinach leaves. To round out the menu, serve warm pita or herb bread, iced tea and a fresh fruit desert.

SUMMER SALAD KABOBS

1 chicken breast, split, boned, skinned and cooked
1/4 pound cleaned shrimp, cooked
1 ear corn, cooked, cut into 1 1/2 inch pieces
1 zucchini, cut into 1 1/2 inch slices

1 cup mushrooms
1 cup cherry tomatoes
18-oz bottle Italian reduced calorie dressing.
Spinach

Cut chicken into 1 1/2 inch chunks. Pour dressing over chicken, shrimp, corn, zucchini, mushrooms and tomato. Cover; marinate in refrigerator for two hours. Drain, reserving marinade. Arrange chicken shrimp and vegetables on skewers, place kabobs on spinach covered platter. Serve with marinade.

Makes four servings at 133 calories per serving.

Dear Abby

Girl learns painful lesson from boy who lies, cheats

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem I'm hoping you can help me with. I am 13 years old. I was going out with this guy I'll call Paul, then last November we broke up and he started going with this girl I'll call Julie.

I kept going over to Paul's house anyway, and when I did we would make love. He told me that he had never made love to Julie, that he really loved me and wanted me to be his lover, but he couldn't break up with Julie because he didn't want to hurt her. I guess he didn't care how much he hurt me.

Today I found out that all the time he was having sex with me, he was having sex with Julie, too. I still care for him a lot and just can't deal with the fact that he lied to me. What should I do?

BAD EXPERIENCE

DEAR BAD EXPERIENCE: What you should do is forget him. He used you. No experience is "bad" if you learned something from it. Thank God you didn't get pregnant—or contract a venereal disease.

Consider the pain of this humiliating experience as "tuition" in the school of experience, and promise to save yourself for a worthwhile man who cares about you.

***

DEAR ABBY: I am confused about something. I recently gave birth to twins—a boy and a girl. In public, we attract a lot of attention. People ask a lot of questions, especially these two: "Are they boys or girls?" and "Are they identical?"

Even after I tell people the twins are a boy and a girl, I am asked if they're identical.

Abby, obviously, if one is a boy and the other is a girl, they are not identical, but so many people ask, I am beginning to wonder if boy-girl twins can be identical.

Please clear this up for me.

MOTHER OF TWINS

DEAR MOTHER: There are two types of twins—identical and fraternal. Identical twins are the result of one egg that divided into two identical halves.

Fraternal twins are the result of two separate eggs (fertilized at the same time). Boy-girl twins are always fraternal, but not all same-sex twins are identical.

DEAR ABBY: My 21-year-old daughter is getting married in September. She wants her father to walk her down the aisle, but here's the problem.

Three years ago my husband left me for another woman. After we separated, they lived together for two years, and after our divorce was final, they married.

My ex refuses to walk his daughter down the aisle unless he can bring his wife to the wedding. My daughter says if that woman comes to her wedding it will spoil her wedding day.

It would be awkward for me, too, because everybody knows the part she played in our divorce, and there would be a lot of gawking and talking that would take away from the full attention every bride expects on her wedding day. Her father will pay for the wedding, but only if he can walk her down the aisle.

We are at an impasse. What should we do?

UPSET MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: You and your daughter should have the kind of wedding you can afford—even if it's only a few of your nearest and dearest. And tell your ex you will miss him.

Preventing the picnic pests

Don't be bugged by insects at your next picnic. Follow these suggestions for combating picnic pests:

Sites near lakes, ponds, rivers are where insect populations flourish, particularly after a rain. Picnicking in a dry, open area, away from water means fewer insects.

Don't wear perfume, scented hair spray, body lotion, talc.

Ward off mosquitoes and other flying insects with a repellent containing diethyl toluamide. Or try taking 100 milligrams of thiamine (a B complex vitamin) on a daily basis for a few days before and during time spent in buggy areas.

Place domed net covers over your food.

Use pale colored picnic baskets, utensils and table cloths. Bright colors attract bugs.

Eat and store food off the ground, on a table.

Reduce the risk of insect invasion by excluding from your picnics fruits that have a high sugar content (especially grapes and melons).

Windmill owner sells power to local utility

By BILL MCCANN
Austin American-Statesman
SAN MARCOS, Texas (AP) — Ask James Johnson how to pull the plug on the power company, and he will tell you the answer is blowing in the wind.

Sitting in Johnson's yard is a giant machine that generates electricity when the wind blows. Three silver blades, which cut a circle 19 feet in diameter, are perched on a 54-foot-tall steel tower. The blades rotate to turn a turbine that generates electricity for Johnson's home. Behind the blades is a large weather vane that keeps them facing into the wind.

The harder the wind blows, the more power is produced. Sometimes it is enough to make Johnson's electric meter run backwards as excess electricity produced by the wind turbine flows into the lines of the Pedernales Electric Cooperative.

"I don't have a vendetta with the power company," said Johnson, who lives in the Country Estates development off Route 12 west of San Marcos. "I just thought it was time to cut my electricity costs."

A Pedernales official suggested that the wind turbine is an awfully expensive way to reduce an electric bill, however.

The wind turbine is visible for miles and has been catching the attention of passers-by since it was installed in late May, said Johnson. He works out of his home running a firm that builds microwave communication towers.

When the wind isn't blowing, Johnson buys his power from Pedernales. But when the wind is whistling and generating more power than Johnson needs, the extra electricity automatically flows into utility power lines.

Last month Johnson and Pedernales officials signed a contract under which the utility will pay for any surplus power the machine generates. It was the first time the utility made such an arrangement.

Under federal law utilities are required to purchase surplus power from small power producers like Johnson. The price varies, depending on the price of fuel. But for now it should average 3 to 4 cents for every kilowatt-hour of power Johnson sells. That is about half what he pays for power from Pedernales.

Pedernales plans to install a special meter to record the amount of power that goes into its lines, Johnson said. Then, he will be the only customer to get a check each month along with his electric bill.

But for the time being, when excess power flows back to Pedernales, it causes Johnson's electric meter to run backward. This reduces the amount of power that Johnson will be charged for.

"There's no doubt that electricity costs are going to go out of reach before too many years," said Johnson, citing an estimate that the cost to Pedernales customers will increase 77 percent over the next decade. "The more the costs go up, the more my machine will be worth."

But the power savings will not come cheap. The machine and associated equipment cost an estimated $19,000, and qualify him for a $4,000 federal tax credit, Johnson said.

He insists the investment will be worth it, but for now he avoids questions about how long it will take to pay for the machine in power savings. It's going to take a year of operation before anything definite can be determined, he said.

The cooperative plans to monitor the system closely to see how well it works and to identify any safety problems associated with the flow of electricity back into the utility system, said General Manager Bennie Fuelberg.

A number of people have approached the cooperative in the past to inquire about the use of wind power, Fuelberg said. "But when they studied it, they determined it was not a very good deal," Fuelberg said.

Johnson, 60, a retired Air Force chief master sergeant, said he studied wind power for years before deciding to buy a unit made by a Nebraska company called American Energy Savers.

Loafers Glory, Arkansas is place with tangled glory

By DENNIS MONTGOMERY
Associated Press Writer
LOAFERS GLORY, Ark. (AP) — You can't get here from there.

Even if you could, you couldn't be sure you had, and if you did you wouldn't find just a whole lot to do.

Yes, there is a here. In red letters in square B-5 on the 1984 Arkansas Highway Commission map. Two heres, in fact. That's where here is now but not where it was, and no roads go there. Either place.

About the best you can do is make your way to where here used to be and get Charles Young to explain. That's Morning Star, a signless unincorporated wisp of 200 souls on Arkansas 14 in Searcy County where Young and his missus run a grocery. It used to be Loafers Glory, the crown of a hardscrabble ridge suited for little but cattle hardy enough to graze the rock-studded hillside pastures.

"Had to be probably 25 to 30 year ago that they changed the name," Young's wife, Billie, says. "I think the greatest amount of people wished they had left it alone."

Her 53-year-old husband, the closest thing the community has to a mayor, takes a chair beside the cast-iron woodstove. "I guess it was because there were so many loafers here," he says.

"Back then, nobody thought anything about it. There were so many loafers. They sat around and whittled, played dominoes and horseshoes. They didn't have anything else to do so that's what they did."

The loafers once gathered in a shed on Young's property, a place with a roof but, for a long time, no walls. Treadwell's Grocery still sits, though disused, the successor, a small building that bears the legend "Coon Hunters and Domino Players Headquarters."

Vance Hall advances to Pampa Blue, Perryton tournament semi-finals splits senior twinbill

James Bybee pitched a 2-hitter as Vance Hall downed One Bull Ranch, 6-4, Tuesday in the City Little League Tournament. Bybee struck out 11 and also knocked in one of Vance Hall's runs with a fifth-inning single.

Tony Bybee drove in two runs with a double.

For One Bull, Billy Larkin drove in a run with a fifth-inning single.

Heath Summers allowed just three hits for One Bull while striking out 10.

Vance Hall advances into the semi-finals tonight at 7 p.m. against Dean's Pharmacy. The winner goes against Dixie Parts at 7 p.m. Thursday night in the championship round.

Pampa Blue (Energy-Agri) split a doubleheader with Perryton in Babe Ruth Senior League action last weekend.

Pampa won the opener, 14-4, as Wade Howard pitched a 3-hitter and also helped his own cause with a bases-loaded triple. Howard also struck out 11.

Hardin was a perfect 3 of 3 at the plate while Derick Coleman had two hits. Ricky Cloud, Gary Clark, Mike Kilgo and Richard Fishburn had one hit each.

Perryton won the second game, 6-1. Tobi Ritthaler was the losing pitcher.

Cloud and Kilgo had two hits each for Pampa.

Three Senior League games are scheduled Sunday. Pampa Red visits Dumas, Pampa Blue travels to Booker and Pampa Gold hosts Perryton.

Cowboys sign Scott

DALLAS (AP) — Victor Scott has signed a three-year contract with the Dallas Cowboys, team vice president Gil Brandt announced.

Brandt said the defensive back from the University of Colorado, a second-round draft choice, signed the contract late Tuesday.

"He's going to be an excellent player, no doubt," Brandt said.

The signing of Scott left only three Cowboys' draft picks who have not signed, according to team spokesman Greg Aiello.

Aiello said the contract, which was negotiated between Brandt and Scott's agent, Jack Mills, includes a series of one-year contracts.

Aiello would not disclose the terms of the contract.

Scott will likely compete for starting right cornerback position, against veterans Ron Fellows and Rod Hill, Aiello said. The slot was vacated by Dennis Thurman, who held the position for the past three years. Thurman is switching to safety, Aiello said.

The three unsigned draft choices are third-round draft choice Fred Cornwell, a tight end from the University of Southern California; fifth-round pick Steve Pelluer, a quarterback from the University of Washington; and 12th round draftee Carl Lewis. Lewis, a track star who will be competing in this year's Olympics, is currently un-signable, Aiello said.

Aiello said Scott will report to the Dallas Cowboys' training camp July 8th in Thousand Oaks, Calif.

Wade receives standing ovation after first-round Wimbledon win

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — With the women's participation at Wimbledon exactly 100 years old, it was fitting that Virginia Wade should receive a standing ovation for a first-round victory.

Wade, Wimbledon champion in 1977, 38 years old and playing in her 23rd consecutive All England tennis championships — an all-time record — came from behind Tuesday to beat Ann Henricksson of the United States 3-6, 6-3, 6-4. Afterward, she said: "I wasn't all that sharp because I don't play that often. But I was still nervous, just like I always am, and felt very privileged."

While Tuesday was predominantly women's day, the sexes were alternating on the show courts today.

First up on Center Court was Jimmy Connors, the No. 3 men's seed, against Sweden's Stefan Simonsson, followed by Kathy Jordan against Virginia Ruzici.

Martina Navratilova was to meet Amy Holton on Court No. 1 followed by Sweden's Stefan Edberg against Johan Kriek. Ivan Lendl, the No. 2 seed from Czechoslovakia, was to play Derek Tarr of South Africa on Court 2.

Wade has seen more Wimbledon than other player here and will be one of 17 past woman champions parading on the Center Court next Monday in a special centenary celebration.

"Fifteen years ago here, the balls and courts were so fast that people began to enjoy women's tennis."

"Right back when women's tennis first started, we were treated with respect. What has happened more recently is that the respect has turned into real admiration for women's competitiveness and talent," she said.

Two of Wade's contemporaries in her long career have been Billie Jean King — six-time singles titlist here — and defending champion Navratilova.

Asked which of them would win matched at their peak, Wade could not choose.

"It would be a fascinating contest. Billie Jean was such an incredibly tough match player and knew how to play each opponent. Her greatest asset was her ability to get fired up and find cracks in her opponents' armor."

"Martina is simply a superb athlete. She goes and plays her game and does not have to work out what the other person is doing. She's a different animal."

Pam Shriver.

Navratilova's long-time doubles partner — they won the Grand Slam of doubles at the French Open earlier this month — probably knows the Czech-born, naturalized American better than any other player.

"I think if anything I don't hold her in quite the high esteem that other players do 'cause I know her so well," Shriver told reporters.

"My God, in doubles, I've seen her hit some unbelievable shots but I've also seen her hit some unbelievably horrendous shots."

"Maybe the fact that I've seen both sides and beaten her three times before and twice in major titles, means that if I happen to be able to get there, and she's there, I'd love it. I don't think I'd feel bothered by it."

At Olympic Trials

Morales breaks world swim record

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Pablo Morales, like all the other qualifiers, is thrilled at making the U.S. Olympic swimming team. It's just that he doesn't show it.

"This is a stepping stone (to the Olympic Games in Los Angeles). If I appear to be nonchalant, it's just because I'm an easy going person," Morales said, a big grin on his face. "Really, I'm very excited about it."

Morales on Tuesday became the second Stanford University swimmer to shatter a world record in two days of Olympic Trials. Teammate John Moffet set a world mark in the men's 100-meter breaststroke on Monday.

On Tuesday, Morales won the 100-butterfly in world-record time, a third Stanford swimmer, Susan Rapp, set an American record in the women's 200-breaststroke; and a fourth swimmer from Stanford, Jeff Kostoff, beat American record-holder Jesse Vassallo for the top spot in the 400-individual medley.

"We didn't plan it that way," Morales, 19, said of the outstanding performance by Stanford swimmers. "But we hoped it would happen. Hopefully, there will be more."

Morales' winning time of 53.38 seconds broke the American and world record of 53.44 set by Matt Gribble of the University of Miami last August. Gribble, the 1982 world champion who has been slowed by a back injury, finished second to Morales with a time of 54.07.

The top two finishers in each event qualify for the Olympics. Today's schedule included the men's 100-freestyle and 200-backstroke and the women's 400-freestyle and 100-backstroke.

The week-long trials at the Indiana University Natatorium end on Saturday.

Also qualifying on Tuesday for the Olympics Rapp and Kim Rhodenbaugh in the 200-breaststroke; Cynthia Woodhead and Mary Wayte in the 200-freestyle; and Kostoff and Vassallo in the 400-individual medley.

Rapp, who will be 19 next week, was clocked at 2:31.54 to break the former American record of 2:32.41 by Jeanne Childs, who finished fifth. Rhodenbaugh was more than three seconds behind Rapp at 2:34.91.

Kostoff, the American record holder in the 800-freestyle, won the 400-individual medley at 4:21.37. Vassallo, whose American record of 4:20.05 was set six years ago, was clocked at 4:21.48.

Woodhead, whose world record in the 200-freestyle was broken last month by East Germany's Kristin Otto, was timed at 2:00.11, well off her own American mark of 1:58.23. Wayte was second at 2:00.15.

Palmer sets personal mark in javelin toss

Wendell Palmer of Pampa set a personal record in the javelin with a toss of 146 feet during the Masters Track and Field last weekend in Dallas.

Palmer not only won the javelin event, but also won the shot put (41-8) and the discus (160-1).

The 52 year-old Middle school teacher hopes to eventually break the Masters javelin record of 156 feet in the javelin. The world Masters record is 160 feet.

"I need to get back on the weights and do a lot more lifting," Palmer said.

Earlier this month, Palmer broke the Masters world record in the discus with a throw of 160-9. He plans to compete in the National Finals at Eugene, Ore. later this summer.

In last year's Nationals at Houston, Palmer won the discus and took third in the shot, javelin and high jump.

Pampa's Allred wins Amarillo Kiwanis run

Louis Allred of Pampa won the 35-39 age division with a time of 28:11.2 at the Kiwanis run held recently in Amarillo.

Allred was fifth in the overall division, which was won by George Chavez of Cumbari with a time of 26:47.

Cliff McCurdy of Canadian finished second in both the 30-34 age division and the overall division with a time of 26:27.6.

Fred Venal of Pampa was second in the 40-44 age division with a time of 33:14.0.

Teresa Lewis of Amarillo was the overall winner in the women's division with a time of 34:55.2.

Astros crush Braves

ATLANTA (AP) — It took a five-game winning streak to do it, but Joe Niekro has finally squared his record at 7-7 for the Houston Astros. "Sometimes you don't get many runs, but lately I've been getting a lot of runs," Niekro said Tuesday night after the Astros put together a 12-hit attack to crush the Atlanta Braves 10-5. "We're playing good ball," Niekro said. "We don't hit a lot of home runs, but we hit some here."

Supreme Court rules against NCAA, colleges can now bid for TV rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in a decision that could change the television viewing habits of millions of Americans, today broke the National Collegiate Athletic Association's exclusive grip on televised college football games. By a 7-2 vote, the court freed individual colleges to make their own television deals. It ruled that the NCAA's contracts with ABC, CBS and Turner Broadcasting, worth hundreds of millions of dollars, violate federal antitrust law. The ruling appears to invalidate this year's NCAA contracts with the three networks. But further lower court hearings are required to work out the details of the NCAA's curtailed power.

Diablos edge Cubs in Texas League action

By The Associated Press Alan Cartwright tripled home the winning run in the fifth inning as the El Paso Diablos took a 6-5 Texas League baseball victory over the Midland Cubs. In other Texas League action Tuesday night, San Antonio defeated Beaumont, 5-3, and Arkansas beat Tulsa, 6-2. Jackson's scheduled game at Shreveport was postponed because of wet grounds.

Lady pro golfers to return to Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Amy Alcott recalls vividly her last visit to Houston for a Ladies Professional Golf Association event. It was 1978 and she and other touring pros were housed in an out-of-the-way motel. There was a shooting in another room of the motel. "It was the last day of the tournament anyway and that certainly hurried up my packing," Alcott said.

NBA replaces coin flip with lottery

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The National Basketball Association is retiring the 100-year old silver dollar it has been using to determine which team gets the No. 1 pick in its college player draft. The coin flip is being replaced by a seven-team lottery. The switch was approved by the league Tuesday. Commissioner David Stern made the announcement at the conclusion of summer meetings by the Board of Governors, at which the league's only legislative body also adopted several rule changes and endorsed the NBA's position in its dispute with the San Diego-Los Angeles Clippers.

Denny expects to return to Longhorns

AUSTIN (AP) — Third baseman David Denny says he will probably decline an offer from the Oakland A's, who picked him in the 13th round, and play another year for the University of Texas Longhorns. "They offered less than I expected," Denny said. "They've already come back once, and they're still not close. Right now all indications point to me coming back in the fall."

Angels slip by Rangers, 3-2

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — A walk, a stolen base and a single was all it took after the California Angels and Texas Rangers squandered many scoring opportunities before the Angels came out on top, 3-2, in 14 innings. Three times in the latter innings Tuesday night, players advanced to scoring position, but failed to produce. "We've been getting opportunities and having the right men hitting and nothing would happen," said Angels Manager John McNamara.

Kuwait military aid planned, but sale of Stingers rejected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration plans to offer Kuwait as much as $50 million in military assistance to improve its defenses against possible air attacks from Iran, but weapons won't be included, U.S. officials say.

These officials, who insisted on anonymity, said they were not concerned Kuwait decided to shop for weapons in the Soviet Union after being turned down by the United States in a request for Stinger anti-aircraft missiles.

Pentagon spokesman Michael Burch, who declined to disclose the contents or value of the U.S. assistance, said Tuesday that Congress would be notified of the administration's plans later this week.

Other officials, who didn't want to be identified, said the package for Kuwait will include new command and control equipment and improved radar facilities. U.S. training teams will be sent to help teach the Kuwaitis how to use the new equipment.

Because of concern over recent Iranian attacks on oil tankers in the Persian Gulf, the administration had previously agreed to sell 400 Stinger missiles and other air defense equipment to Saudi Arabia.

One aim of the American assistance will be to integrate Kuwait's air defenses with the more sophisticated defenses of neighboring Saudi Arabia.

Burch said last week that some data collected by American AWACS aircraft on the movements of Iranian aircraft was being relayed by Saudi Arabia to the Kuwaitis, with U.S. approval, over a telephone line.

Burch said Tuesday that Kuwait and Saudi Arabia are discussing ways in which the sharing of AWACS data can be improved. "We are willing to help," he said.

While acknowledging that the Kuwaitis are unhappy about the Stinger turn-down, which was disclosed previously, a State Department official said the Kuwaitis lack the technical expertise to make effective use of such missiles. He said the United States would offer to improve the ground control for the air-to-ground I-Hawk missiles that Washington had previously provided.

"I don't think they are pleased, but I think they have understood the reason for the decision — that Stingers are not going to serve their needs at this point," said the official. "Their needs are on a more basic level, facing up to command and control issues."

He said Kuwait is like other Persian Gulf nations, which "want to obtain the best equipment, and the most prestigious equipment they can, without thinking whether they can absorb it effectively."

Israel, concerned that the weapons could fall into hostile hands, has opposed selling Stingers to Kuwait.

Tax bill laden with changes to get into taxpayers' pockets

NEW YORK (AP) — By the standards of recent years, the tax bill that emerged from Congress last weekend is not "major" legislation.

It doesn't call for any increase or cut in basic income tax rates, like the tax-cut measure President Reagan pushed for and won in 1981.

It doesn't make any fundamental change in the tax system, as would other proposals that have been put forward but not yet acted on.

But the bill, expected to get speedy final approval and Reagan's signature soon, is likely to have a widespread impact on the economy and the investment markets. It is heavily laden with changes in the rules that will affect "the pockets of most taxpayers," as the accounting firm of Ernst & Whinney says.

The House-Senate conference committee that shaped the final version of the bill early Saturday morning has finished its work. Vow, accountants and other people who make their living giving tax advice are putting in long hours churning out booklets that explain it, and fielding phone calls from their customers.

You need not expend much sympathy on these toilers, however. The bill falls on them about the same way that a blizzard hits the now-shovel business. It is also required study for people with any significant amount of savings or investments.

The biggest surprise is a reduction in the minimum holding period to qualify for favorable long-term treatment of capital gains on investments like stocks. This period, which was lengthened from six months to 12 in the late 1970s, is to be shortened again to six months, effective for assets bought after last Saturday. Short-term capital gains are taxed as ordinary income, and are subject to rates up to 50 percent. The top rate for long-term gains is 20 percent.

People from Wall Street lobbied for the six-month holding period for several years. They had a clear motive for doing so, since a shorter period naturally tends to increase the amount of potential buying and selling of stock, with a commission to be collected on every trade.

Securities industry leaders also argued that it will contribute to the health of the securities markets, and benefit the U.S. Treasury to boot, by encouraging investors to take more taxable profits — even if some of those profits are taxed at lower rates than previously.

The president of the Securities Industry Association, one trade group pushing for enactment of the six-month period, Edward I. O'Brien, said, "I guess it shows that persistence paid off."

It will probably take some time to gauge the new holding period's impact on the stock market. Half or more of all stock trading in today's market is done by investing institutions like pension funds, which are not subject to the same tax rules that cover individuals.

Technically, the six-month holding period has not been permanently adopted. It is scheduled to revert to 12 months after 1987. But in a country that has enacted sweeping tax legislation almost every year of late, and where preliminary work has already begun on a likely 1985 tax bill, just about all the tax rules are only temporary.

Bus of American students attacked

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain (AP) — While a group of American high school students relaxed in a hotel, their tour bus parked outside was wrecked by fire-bombs, authorities said today. A Basque separatist group claimed responsibility.

The bus was attacked Tuesday after it had brought a group of 34 students and four teachers across the border from France to Spain, the civil governor's office said.

None of the Americans — who are from Spokane, Wash., and Boise, Idaho — was injured, according to the authorities.

San Sebastian is located in the Basque region on Spain's northern coast near the French border. Some of the students are descendants of Basque shepherds who emigrated to Idaho many years ago.

One of the students, who refused to be identified by name, said she saw two or three young men hurl what appeared to be Molotov cocktails into the bus. The bus caught fire immediately and was heavily damaged before firemen arrived, she said.

She said the students were all right and planned to travel to Madrid on Friday to continue their tour.

Chamber, co-op trade charges over REA bill

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Chamber of Commerce has been accused by a prominent co-op leader of attacking legislation that would help relieve the financially beleaguered Rural Electrification Administration. The Reagan administration is also opposing the measure.

Bob Bergland, executive vice president of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association, charged Tuesday that the chamber has "joined ranks with groups identified with the conservative right to back Reagan administration efforts aimed at discrediting the rural electrification program."

"The U.S. Chamber of Commerce is doing the merchants and industries of America's small towns a disservice by lending its voice and communication services to an effort to weaken the rural electrification program," Bergland said.

A spokesman for the chamber said, Bergland's comments did not come as a surprise, considering his position with the co-op group. Bergland was secretary of agriculture in the Carter administration and previously was a three-term Democratic congressman from Minnesota.

The legislation would overhaul operations of the Rural Electrification Administration, an agency of the Agriculture Department that serves as the main financing agency for rural electric and telephone systems.

Under the bill, passed by the House and now before the Senate, repayment of $7.9 billion owed by REA to the U.S. Treasury would be deferred indefinitely. As it now stands, the agency will have to begin repaying those loans in 1993 over a 24-year period. The co-ops that owe money to REA, however, still would have to repay their loans to the agency.

Also, the bill would set variable interest rates for loans. Those now are fixed by law at 5 percent, or 2 percent in "hardship" cases.

The REA was created in 1935 when only 12 percent of the nation's farms had electricity, compared with 99 percent today. Telephones are in 95 percent of farm homes, compared with 36 percent when that program was added in 1949.

Advocates contend that REA's job is not finished and that there is still a large need to maintain and strengthen power and telephone networks.

One version of the bill was approved by the House 283-111 on March 1. The Senate Agriculture Committee endorsed a nearly identical bill on June 7.

Advocates say the measure is needed to keep REA solvent and is part of a long-term federal commitment to help rural American develop its power resources.

Bergland's comments were in a statement sent to the association's member organizations, some 1,000 rural electric systems in 46 states.

The chamber's board of directors earlier this month reaffirmed the business group's opposition to the legislation. It said the REA's revolving fund used to finance loans to electric and telephone borrowers should charge high enough interest rates and arrange repayment schedules so that the need for further federal borrowing is eliminated.
