

Unemployment drop another indicator of strong local economy

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

Pampa's unemployment rate dropped half a percentage point in the latest reporting period, another indication of a strong local economy.

The unemployment in Pampa for the month of April declined to an even four percent, down from 4.5 percent in March. Charles Vance, manager of the Texas Employment Commission's Pampa office, reported.

Vance said the April figures for all of Gray County, which the office received earlier this month (reporting of the local rate lags one month behind state and national figures), also showed a half-percent decline. The April unemployment rate for the entire county was calculated at 4.1 percent, down from 4.6 percent in March.

"This is the lowest figure we've had all year," Vance said about the April rate.

The decline in the unemployment rate supports other statistics indicating that the local economy remains healthy in 1984. Retail sales in the Pampa area for the year, and local building permits and oil and gas drilling activities in the first five months of this year have just about matched the totals reported in the same portion of 1983.

Retail sales in Pampa through May 20 were up 7.52 percent over the same period last year, according to figures compiled by the state comptroller.

Building permits issued by the city had shown an increase for the year, until last month. Building permits issued in May 1983 reflected valuations of more than $5 million. The valuation of construction in May this year fell to just over $1.3 million, reversing an upward trend shown each month since January. That one-month building boom last year put the overall valuation of construction for the first five months of this year about $2.7 million behind the total reported in the same period in 1983.

The number of intentions to drill oil and gas wells filed through May this year have just about matched the total recorded for Gray County in the same five months of 1983.

Gray County drilling intentions through May totaled 72, compared with 79 filed through May 1983, according to Doris Harrison with the Oil & Gas Reporting Service.

"Gray County is in the business of completing a lot of wells," Harrison said, adding that new drilling activity may increase after those existing wells are completed.

However, this year's drilling activity in the 26-county area, in which many Gray County firms have an interest, has run well ahead of the totals reported in the first five months of 1983, she said.

Through May this year, a total of 719 intentions to drill were filed in the 26 counties of the Panhandle, compared with just 566 filed in the same five months of 1983.

City petitioned on driveway pipes issue

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

A group of citizens presented a petition to the Pampa City Commission this morning asking the city to stop its removal of driveway pipes and to restore those it has already removed.

Mayor Calvin Whatley said he was permitting the group to meet with commissioners for discussion of the situation even though no action could be taken on the matter today. The request from the group had not been made in time for it to be put on the official agenda.

Mayor Whatley, in opening remarks, said it "is good for us to get together" to discuss both sides of the issue.

James Weatherly, 2011 Coffee, said, "We have been given several excuses" for the removal of the driveway pipes near the curbs and gutters of the streets.

He said the removal of the pipes will cause more street damage "than the pipes ever did."

Weatherly said he was told the pipes were a hindrance to proper drainage. "But it's not so," he said, claiming water is still standing in the streets from recent rains.

He also objected to claims the pipes hindered the use of snow removal equipment. He said he had seen such equipment used on his street only three or four times in the 35 years he's been there.

Weatherly also opposed the extra expense which would be required by homeowners to replace the section of the driveways broken up for the removal of the pipes.

Floye Christensen, 2014 Coffee, said, "We're butting our head against a concrete wall" in trying to deal with the city on the matter.

She also said drainage problems haven't improved with the removal of the pipes. She also claimed to have problems with her car hitting bottom now when she uses the driveway.

Christensen also objected to claims the city would have to face liability problems. "It's as far fetched" that the city will be liable for damages for vehicles hitting the humps over the pipes as for someone slipping on snow and ice covered driveways, he said.

She also presented an estimate of costs she claimed will be needed to replace the driveway, saying it would cost $400 just to repair the section broken out for the pipe, with $1,200 to replace other sections of the driveway.

Dick Brown said the pipes had not caused any damages to his car. "It (his driveway pipe) has never been complained about until I got a notice the other day" on the city's removal project.

Public Works Director Allyn Moore, designated as city engineer and city traffic engineer by the commission this morning, discussed his reasons for the removal of the pipes.

Moore said many of the pipes have become clogged with litter swept into them by water in the streets. Others have become rusted out and collapsed.

He said problems occur with street cleaning and snow removal equipment because the machines have to swerve around the humps, leaving piles of debris around the pipes. "It works against street cleaning efforts," he said.

Moore said there are holes in the pavement "all over town" where water runs out around clogged pipes.

"Much of the damage we're repairing can be traced to that caused by the pipes," he stated.

"We cannot get our machinery in there by the gutters to work properly" because of having to work around the pipes, he said.

Refuting Weatherly's and Christensen's claims about the city's liability, Moore said legal trends taking place in other parts of the country indicate courts are holding the city liable to damages arising from such problems they allow to exist in city streets.

He said the pipes had been installed in the past without a permitting ordinance from the city. He said this could result in legal problems if liability questions ever arose.

Moore said some drainage problems will exist because of curb and gutter problems not related to the pipes. He said he was devising some plan to eliminate such drainage problems in addition to the removal of the pipes.

The commission took no action on the petition today. Mayor Whatley said the group can approach the commission to seek to put the item on the agenda at their next meeting.

Weatherly picked up the petition after the meeting adjourned, saying he would rather have it to present at a time when any action on it could be considered.

Discovery flight aborted with four seconds to go

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The once-delayed debut of space shuttle Discovery was aborted on Monday just seconds before liftoff when computers detected a bad fuel valve and stopped the engine firing sequence.

It was one of the most agonizing scrubs in U.S. space history, coming just four seconds before liftoff.

Two of the ship's three engines flashed to life but were shut down by a computer which detected something amiss in the 120 milliseconds before the last engine kicked in. The engine — No. 1 in the NASA designbook — was borrowed earlier this month from sister ship Challenger, but the fuel valve apparently was located on No. 3.

Both engines have flown flawlessly in previous shuttle missions.

Discovery's six-person crew was safe and there was no physical damage to the new spaceship, NASA said.

"We had a clear go and we were well underway," when the last engine did not kick in, said operations director Thomas Utsman.

Terry White, at Mission Control in Houston, explained the problem: "No start on (engine) No. 1." An analysis later indicated that computers detected the valve problem and directed No. 1 not to fire.

"I feel it's in the several days category," Utsman said of the delay before attempting another launch.

There was no connection to Monday's delay, caused by a computer malfunction. The errant computer was replaced and operating properly when the engine problem occurred just seconds before 8:43 a.m. EDT.

The launch was postponed indefinitely while NASA technicians attempt to discover what went wrong with engine No. 1. Due to launch pad damage from the two engines firing for three seconds, delay would be a minimum of 48 hours. But no one seemed optimistic about that.

Not since the Gemini program of the 1960s has an American craft come so agonizingly close to liftoff only to be aborted. Gemini 6 in 1965 shut down two seconds before liftoff after burning for one second.

The engines — the most complicated ever devised — are designed to fire seven seconds before liftoff enabling the ship to build up full thrust before steel holdown pins are blown to release the shuttle.

Engine trouble plagued Discovery — third ship in NASA's fleet — earlier this month. No. 1 had to be replaced with an engine from sister ship Challenger after a fuel cell heat shield became loose. That caused a three-day delay in the original, June 22, launch date.

The shuttle engines were the source of tremendous technological problems during the shuttle's development, but they never failed in any of the shuttle program's first 11 flights.

The space agency's only concern before the shutdown was with the fog that obscured Discovery's launch pad at Kennedy Space Center.

Analysis of the engine problem was put off until the ship's half-million gallons of liquid fuel was pumped back into its holding tank and the astronauts safely away. The crew left the ship about 45 minutes after the abort, looking resigned to delay.

Discovery's commander is Henry Hartsfield, who was pilot of the shuttle's fourth flight aboard Columbia. His all-rookie crew includes Judy Resnik, the second woman to fly on a U.S. spaceship, and Charles Walker, the McDonnell Douglas engineer. The others are pilot Michael Coats and mission specialists Steve Hawley and Richard Mullane.

The engines begin their fire 120 milliseconds apart and the one that failed was to have been third in that series.

The balky engine had flown twice before, on the last two shuttle missions, and was second most "experienced" of the three, with 29 minutes of firing time. Main shuttle engines are used for nine minutes before the ship reaches orbit.

Mondale, Hart making peace

NEW YORK (AP) — Walter F. Mondale and Gary Hart began a political summit meeting today.

There were indications that the Democratic Party is moving toward a peaceful nominating convention in San Francisco and a united front in the campaign against President Reagan this fall.

The meeting was held at the upper East side townhouse of Arthur Krim, a Mondale supporter.

Aides to both candidates said there were no plans to discuss the possibility that Hart might be chosen by Mondale as his vice presidential running mate.

They did talk about compromises under which Hart dropped potential challenges to Mondale delegates at the Democratic convention and Mondale accepted proposed changes in the Democratic party's rules for selecting the 1988 presidential nominee.

With the agreement brokered by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., the two Democratic presidential rivals moved significantly closer to one another Monday, although Hart said he will continue to seek the nomination.

Before their meeting, Mondale said he and Hart agreed that the agenda would not include a discussion of Hart's possible selection as Mondale's vice presidential running mate.

Arriving in New York late Monday, Mondale was asked what he and Hart would say about the sometimes bitter exchanges they had during their televised debate before the New York primary. He grinned and said, "We'll get around to that."

The Mondale-Hart agreement followed several days of delicate negotiations in which Kennedy, a presidential contender in 1980 when Mondale was vice president, played a personal mediating role from Mondale's home in North Oaks, Minn.

Kennedy helped negotiate the agreement during a two-day trip to Minnesota where, as expected, he warmly endorsed Mondale for president.

In a letter to Charles T. Manatt, the party chairman, Hart agreed Monday that he would wage no challenge either in the party's rules committee or the convention to so-called "tainted delegates" committed to Mondale.

Jesse calls for better relations with Cuba

HAVANA (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, welcomed here by President Fidel Castro, declared the United States and Cuba must forgive each other for decades of hostility, "redeem each other and move on."

The Democratic presidential candidate received a ceremonial greeting from Castro when he arrived Monday at Jose Marti Airport from El Salvador on his five-day visit to Latin America. He planned some sightseeing before a scheduled 3½-hour talk with the Communist leader.

Castro told reporters at the airport that Jackson's visit might "possibly" lessen strains between Cuba and the United States.

"I invited him out of our friendship to the United States," Castro said through an interpreter. "He honors us with his visit."

Jackson called for an end to 25 years of enmity between the two nations.

"We must forgive each other," he said. "We must redeem each other and move on. We must give peace a chance. Together, our nations have the capacity to bring peace in this hemisphere."

Jackson attended a folk festival Monday night at the National Theater of Cuba and later told reporters his discussion with Castro would take in not only Cuban-American tensions but a wide range of Latin American concerns.

"In the course of our dialogue, we will talk about human rights and political prisoners," Jackson said. "We will be talking about the divisions in El Salvador and Honduras and what's happening in Nicaragua."

Cuba and the United States have been at odds since 1959, when Castro and his supporters deposed dictator Fulgencio Batista. Diplomatic relations were broken in 1961, when a CIA-backed force of 1,400 Cuban exiles was defeated in an invasion attempt at the Bay of Pigs.

Recent American presidents have accused Castro of sending troops and advisers abroad to act as surrogates for the Soviet Union. The Reagan administration says they are now stationed in 12 countries. It also criticized the Cubans for encouraging revolutionary movements in Central America and alleged human rights violations.

A longstanding U.S. trade embargo against Cuba remains in effect.

Jackson was touring Havana before his talk with Castro.

NY first state to pass law mandating use of seat belts

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Gov. Mario Cuomo is expected to decide "fairly quickly" whether to sign a bill approved by the state Senate and give New York the first law in the nation requiring the use of seat belts in automobiles.

Supporters say the bill approved Monday by a 38-22 vote will save at least 400 lives annually in the state. Opponents call it an intrusion by government into the lives of individuals.

A similar measure passed the Assembly last week by an 82-60 margin.

The vote Monday sent the legislation to Cuomo, on record favoring the concept.

Cuomo spokesman Gary Fryer said moments after the Senate vote that he expected the governor would act "fairly quickly."

While no state in the nation currently has a mandatory seat belt use law, such laws are in force in more than 30 countries. Several other states are considering similar legislation.

Following the Senate's action, the bill's chief sponsor, Senate Transportation Committee Chairman Norman Levy received a congratulatory telephone call from U.S. Transportation Secretary

Elizabeth Dole.

The mandatory seat belt legislation has the support of the nation's automobile manufacturers, who are hoping that Mrs. Dole will decide next month that air bags won't have to be installed in cars to be sold in states with such laws.

Supporters of New York's seat belt bill claim it could save 400 to 500 lives annually and prevent up to 14,000 serious injuries a year. They also have said $530 million would be saved annually in terms of lower medical costs and fewer work hours lost.

Opponents say it smacks of more government intrusion, likening it to "Big Brother" in George Orwell's novel, "Nineteen Eighty-Four."

"Russia is another country that has a mandatory seat belt law," declared an opponent of the legislation, state Sen. Hugh Farley. "I can't think of a single issue which has so offended my district."

Farley's complaints echoed those of many other legislators representing upstate areas where cars are considered a necessity.

"It's an issue I think will be highly resented in the coming election," noted Sen. James Donovan. All 211 seats in the Legislature are up for grabs in November.

Speaker warns businessmen against 'liberal' Texas courts

BY LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Texas businessmen need to become more involved in the election of state judges to reverse trends toward liberal justices who are making too many decisions against business, advised Gerald Dorsey, vice president and general counsel for the Texas Business Association.

Speaking this morning at an Eggs and Issues breakfast sponsored by the Legislative Affairs Committee of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, Dorsey said a continuing liberal Texas Supreme Court "will cost us more" than any legislative action.

"We now have a very liberal Supreme Court," he said. He said the balance in January will be six liberals and three conservatives on the state court.

The liberal or "progressive" justices tend to rule against businesses in areas such as workman's compensation cases, Dorsey claimed.

He cited a recent case in which the Supreme Court approved a suit against an engineering firm for liability in deaths caused by a drunk employee the firm had sent home from work. Family members of persons killed in a car accident involving the employee filed suit against the company, claiming it was liable because the employee was sent home instead of kept at work.

"It's going to be a field day" for plaintiff lawyers because of the decision, Dorsey said.

Dorsey said the coverage of workman's compensation is being expanded by court rulings beyond the scope of the original legislation. He said claims for death benefits are being filed for such causes as heart attacks, shootings, stabbings, strokes, suicides and other events not directly job related.

And the courts are likely to uphold many of the claims, he said.

"In the past, the enemy has not been organized labor," he said. Organized labor has been too weak politically in Texas, he said. Instead, plaintiff lawyers have become a force against businesses and their insurance firms.

Plaintiff lawyers are very involved politically and contribute funds to elect judges and justices favorable to plaintiff suits, he said.

Most businessmen have not paid much attention to state judge elections, he said. "How ignorant we have been" in not getting more involved in electing more conservative judges, he said.

Judges can legislate by interpreting the laws, he said. And too many decisions have been going against business in recent decades, he claimed.

In other areas, Dorsey said the business outlook "is not as bright as in the past... But we still have a lot to be proud of."

Revenue in the state had been growing at 14 to 15 percent yearly, but now the growth is only about 9 percent a year, Dorsey said.

"The state is facing some hard times," he said, but Texas is still in much better shape than most other states.

Dorsey referred to the education reforms and highway funding changes being considered by the current special session of the state Legislature.

"They're going to be costly changes," he said, with tax increases needed to fund them.

Dorsey said likely tax increases will come in motor fuel taxes, the so-called "sin tax" on cigarettes and liquor, and an increase in the state sales tax.

"The sales tax is just honeycombed with exemptions," due to special interest groups, he said.

The sales tax is the state's largest source of revenue, producing about $4 billion a year, he said. Dorsey said he expects the Legislature to eliminate a lot of the exemptions and raise the tax by half a cent to a cent.

Solar firms ask for regulations

AUSTIN (AP) — Officials of a half dozen solar energy businesses in Austin are proposing a city code to regulate the installation of solar water and space heating equipment.

The code would make solar power more attractive by ensuring the equipment was installed properly and would also help control shoddy companies that could give the emerging industry a bad name, proponents of the regulations say.

Industry officials said they would offer a draft of the proposed code to the City Council this week.

"If the projections (about solar power) are correct, we are going to be sitting in a million-dollar industry here in a few years," said Chris Higgs, president of WEBA TEXSUN.

"If we don't regulate now when the industry is gearing up, we are going to have a great deal of difficulty later," Higgs said.

The proposed code describes the kinds of materials and equipment to be used and prescribes how they are to be installed.

Under the proposal, a permit would be needed from the city to install a solar water or space heater. Installers would have to be licensed and bonded. Work would have to be inspected by the city.

Higgs said the code being proposed would be the most stringent in the country.

The code could add between $100 and $300 to the cost of a solar system installation, Higgs said. However, he said, he believes the added costs would be worthwhile.

The code does not seek to regulate the practices companies use to sell solar energy equipment. It also doesn't attempt to lock new businesses out of the Austin market, Higgs said.

"But we don't need shoddy equipment being installed here and we don't want it to be a now-you-see-me, now-you-don't business," he said.

The code also would help elevate the business to the status of other building trades, such as electricians, said Paul Balmuth, solar division manager for Austin Sun Rae Corp.

"Since solar is becoming more and more important to the mainstream building industry here, the code is in everybody's best interest," Balmuth said.

Warren Cole, president of Cole Solar Systems Inc., said the proposed code would adopt recently developed international standards as its foundation and include a section with requirements specific to Austin.

U.S., Soviet Union will revive environment exchange program

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union have agreed to revive a scientific exchange program on the environment, he said of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency said today.

EPA chief William D. Ruckelshaus said the U.S. and Soviet delegations attending an environmental conference in Munich met Monday night and agreed to revitalize the exchange.

The 1972 agreement provided for exchanging information and research on environmental problems, such as acid rain and toxic substances, Ruckelshaus said The Associated Press.

He said there had been four meetings of American and Soviet scientists under the agreement in the 1970s, but the exchange has lain dormant for several years.

Ruckelshaus said he thought the last time there had been a meeting under the agreement was in 1979. He said a date has not yet been set for the next meeting.

The Americans knew the Soviets wanted to revive the arrangement and Ruckelshaus said he got the go-ahead on the project from President Reagan before heading to the Multilateral Conference on the Environment.

Ruckelshaus said there were four Americans and four Soviets at the Monday night meeting, and that the session lasted several hours. The Soviet delegation is led by Yuri A. Israel, head of Moscow's state committee on the environment.

When approached by an Associated Press reporter, Israel said he did not want to make any comments until Wednesday.

Ruckelshaus said reviving the environmental exchange should benefit the United States.

"The more exchange there is, the more we can build up a sense of good will, and we can learn from each other," he said.

Ruckelshaus described the overall East-West atmosphere at the 31-nation Munich congress as positive.

"Certainly our conversations have been very friendly," he said.

However, representatives of the United States and Soviet Union clashed Monday at the conference, when the Soviets and three of their allies brought up the subject of the arms race, saying it is damaging to the environment.

Ruckelshaus said the United States was ready to resume nuclear arms talks with the Soviet Union at any time in a proper forum.

Brooks drug procedures reviewed

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — An eight-member Air Force management review team has begun an inspection of procedures in the Brooks Air Force Base Drug Abuse Detection Laboratory, which processes thousands of tests annually to screen drug abuse among military personnel, a base official said today.

The team is reviewing the internal chain of custody for lab samples, the handling of evidence in legal matters and storage of samples and results, said the public affairs official, who declined to be identified.

The inspection comes in the midst of controversy about the drug-use detection laboratory.

A military judge ruled Saturday base command interfered with evidence-gathering by lawyers for soldiers accused of drug use. In an earlier case, another judge threw out drug charges against two other soldiers because Brooks officials allegedly exerted undue influence on lab workers.

indicated drug use, and nearly 3,000 soldiers were discharged on drug-related offenses between September 1982 and October 1983.

The management team arrived at Brooks June 15 and is expected to stay at least 30 days, officials said.

In a statement issued from the Pentagon Friday, Air Force officials said, "Recently, the laboratory has experienced a tremendous administrative burden due to increased requirements on lab personnel to testify in court and to provide information to various scientific review groups and the news media."

"The review team will help the lab alleviate this burden and minimize the possibility of administrative or procedural errors," the statement said.

"The team will review such management practices as the internal chain of custody for lab samples, procedures for providing evidence in legal matters and storage of samples and results," the statement said.

In his Saturday ruling, Judge Advocate Maj. Robert Gibson said supervisors at the Brooks lab denied evidence to defense lawyers. But he said attorneys for two soldiers from Castle Air Force Base in Merced, Calif., had not been denied such information.

The ruling came in the court martial of Staff Sgts. Henry Warden, 29, of San Antonio, and Leonard Baltimore, 32, of Cheyenne, Wyo. Both are charged with marijuana use.

In an earlier case, Lt. Col. Barton Spillman, a military judge, ruled Brooks officials exerted improper influence on lab workers. He also dismissed drug charges against two sergeants from Patrick Air Force Base in Florida.

During testimony in the Warden-Baltimore case last week, workers in the Brooks lab said they were demoted for complaining about sloppy lab procedures. One witness, a former chief of quality control, testified he kept an "out-of-control file" on urine tests that showed false-positives.

But the lab commander countered that many workers were reassigned because of burnout or personal reasons. He also said the so-called "out-of-control file" was an attempt to cover up mistakes of lab workers.

Senate doesn't want dump site

AUSTIN (AP) — After several lawmakers said there are good reasons against disposing of high-level nuclear wastes in West Texas, the Senate passed a resolution telling the federal government that it must look elsewhere for its dump sites.

"Our answer is no, no, no, when it comes to locating a nuclear waste site here," said Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, co-sponsor of the resolution.

"With this resolution, we are saying to the (U.S.) Department of Energy, 'Look elsewhere,'" he said Monday.

At present, the Department of Energy has chosen two sites in Texas among five nationwide as possible locations for a high-level repository for nuclear waste matter.

"Right now, we stand a two-in-five chance of having them choose Texas," Doggett said.

"We're speaking about high-level nuclear waste. That's the really hot stuff," added Sen. John Traeger, D-Seguin.

Federal law allows governors and state legislatures to veto putting a nuclear dump in their states within 60 days of the president recommending a location to Congress.

The Senate's resolution, adopted without opposition and sent to the House for action, would exercise that veto and empower the lieutenant governor and House speaker to register the veto if the Legislature isn't in session when a presidential decision is made.

It also orders the Texas Water Commission to deny the Department of Energy permission to drill a test shaft needed before locating a dump site, and it orders other state agencies "to protect the environment and the rights of property owners."

Sen. John Montfort, D-Lubbock, a co-sponsor of the resolution, said he was disturbed by two factors — the government's lack of ability to deal safely with nuclear waste and locating a dump near the Ogallala aquifer, a major underground water source and the nation's largest freshwater aquifer.

"I just don't think they've developed the expertise to handle it," Montfort said.

The Senate resolution laid out numerous reasons against locating a waste site in Texas.

"The technology to be used for the proposed repository has never been tested" and the DOE "cannot assure safe containment of extremely hazardous nuclear wastes that will remain radioactive for thousands of years," it said.

The Deaf Smith and Swisher county sites are among the state's top agricultural areas, and several other agricultural businesses are located in the region.

The resolution said construction of a nuclear dump would threaten the region's water supply by putting radioactive waste beneath the Ogallala and Santa Rosa aquifers.

It also said the area could be a future energy source, so oil and gas drilling there might disrupt a nuclear waste site if one were located there.

Inmates testify Spence said he killed three teen-aged girls

WACO, Texas (AP) — A five-time Texas prison inmate testified that capital murder defendant David Wayne Spence admitted killing three teen-agers, including two girls, but did not confess to authorities because "dead people couldn't talk."

Jessie Ivy, who is currently serving a 35-year sentence for aggravated robbery, told a state district court jury Monday that Spence told him he and Gilbert Melendez, also charged with murder, took turns raping the girls, while forcing the third teen-ager to watch. Ivy said Spence told him he then killed all three.

"He said that he was guilty, but that dead people couldn't talk," said Ivy, who has been convicted of forgery, burglary and armed robbery.

Spence, 25, is accused of the slayings of two Waxahachie girls, Raylene Rice and Jill Montgomery, and a Waco teen-ager, Kenneth Franks. Spence is on trial only in Ms. Montgomery's slaying.

Ivy, 37, who has served prison terms since he was 17, said he spoke with Spence while the pair were confined in the Texas Department of Corrections' Eastham Unit in Lovelady.

Spence was worried that he had left bite marks on the girls' bodies that could be traced back to him, Ivy testified.

Dr. Homer Campbell, a forensic dental specialist from Albuquerque, N.M., is expected to testify today or Wednesday that he can link bite marks detected on the female victims' bodies with Spence's dental pattern.

Daryl Beckham, a former jail inmate who said he has been paroled from a five-year sentence for forgery, testified that Spence took credit for the triple slayings at a park near Lake Waco on July 13, 1982.

Beckham said that during a December 1982 conversation with Spence in the McLennan County Jail, where both men were being held, the defendant told him that "he was the one who did it and that he was afraid that the police were going to find out about it."

Spence said that Muneer Mohammad Deeb, also charged with capital murder in the slayings, told him that Franks had "moved in on him and was trying to take over his woman," according to Beckham's testimony.

A prisoner who often gave legal help to fellow inmates at the Texas Department of Corrections Eastham Unit testified that Spence approached him for legal advice.

Robert Snelson, who has been imprisoned four times on burglary convictions, said he asked Spence what kind of evidence investigators had against him.

Spence told him authorities were empty-handed but that he feared Gilbert Melendez, who also has been charged with the murders, would "smitch" on him, Snelson testified.

Deeb's former girlfriend, Gayle Kelly, earlier testified that Deeb had taken out an insurance policy in her name. An insurance agent testified that Deeb had made himself the beneficiary of the policy.

Spence said that Deeb told him that "he wanted something done about it and that he wanted them (Franks and Ms. Kelly) killed," Beckham testified.

Prosecutors contend that the killers mistook Ms. Montgomery for Ms. Kelly.

Beckham also testified that Spence said "a Mexican guy named Gilbert" had "helped him tie them (the victims) up," but that Spence had killed them.

Spence said he stabbed the girls in an effort to get them to stop "screaming and squirming" and forced Franks to watch as he sexually abused them with a wooden stick, according to Beckham.

Beckham said that Spence told him that Deeb instructed him "to dump" the bodies in the park.

Spence was indicted in November 1983 along with Deeb, 25, Melendez, 29, and Anthony Melendez, 25.

House-Senate negotiators go back to work on school bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislators went back to work on an education bill today after a late-night session that ended with a day-ending show of temper.

House and Senate negotiators working out differences in their two bills reached agreement on some major issues Monday, but left others — including school finance — unresolved.

The meeting ended Monday night when Senate Education Committee Chairman Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, became upset with House Education Committee Chairman Bill Haley, D-Center.

Haley, chairman of the conference committee, refused to recognize El Paso Sen. Tati Santisteban's motion to quit for the night. Parker, who had folded his jacket over his arm and seemed ready to leave, complained to Haley, saying:

"The Senate conferees are ready to go (home for the night) and you're being an----- about it and you're about to lose me."

After a brief recess, Haley decided to continue the meeting today.

The bill worked out by the 10-member conference committee must win approval in the House and Senate. Here are some of the agreements reached Monday:

- School districts must offer pre-kindergarten programs for educationally deprived 4-year-olds under certain conditions.
- Classes cannot begin until Sept. 1, starting in 1985.
- Students must pass all courses in order to participate in extracurricular activities.
- High school seniors must pass a test to get a diploma.
- The State Board of Education will review rules passed by the University Interscholastic League.
- Schools must offer tutoring sessions.
- Reduced teacher-student ratios for lower grades.

Among the unresolved issues are:

- Funding public schools.
- Teacher competency tests.
- A teacher career ladder, and teacher pay.
- Specifics about how the temporary elected State Board of Education should be structured.

"Time is running out on us as we all know," said Speaker Gib Lewis, who was confident the conferees would succeed.

Lewis said House and Senate members are looking for a reduced bottom line on the bill — which would be funded by a tax bill to be debated in the House later this week.

Police still baffled by killings

HOUSTON (AP) — After the gruesome discovery of an elderly couple's bodies cut in pieces and stuffed in a refrigerator, officers wanted to question the couple's son, Charles Frederick Rogers.

But Rogers, 43 at the time, who lived an obscure life in his parents' home, disappeared after the June 23, 1965 killings and no one has seen him since.

There has been no sign of the former Shell Oil Co. employee since that night, when police officer C.M. Bullock, called to the house by a worried relative, opened a refrigerator door to find the remains of an 81-year-old man and a 79-year-old woman.

"It just looked like a bunch of meat," said Bullock, now a captain with the Houston police department. "I didn't know immediately what it was."

"Just as I was closing the door, I saw the heads through the clear glass of the vegetable bin."

Police found traces of blood on the bathroom and kitchen floors and on the steps leading up to the tiny upstairs bedroom where Rogers lived.

A bloodstained hammer which had apparently been used to kill Fred C. Rogers also was found. Fragments of a bullet were found in Edwina Rogers' brain.

Neighbors complained two days later of a foul odor in the neighborhood. A check of sewers revealed various body parts, police said.

Capt. L.D. Morrison Jr., head of the Houston police department's homicide division at the time of the killings, said investigators have no evidence implicating the son but officers believe what the younger Rogers knows "may shed some light on this case."

Officers found a keyhole saw, a straight razor and a .22-caliber pistol in Charles Rogers' room. Lab tests

Police chorus draws praise, jeers

DALLAS (AP) — They're four typical choirboys. In fact, some of the 21 members of the newly-formed Dallas Police Choir have been described as "pretty tough officers."

But once the jokes are over and the laughter dies, people listen.

"They can't believe we're that good," said group coordinator, Gene Hagen.

"When they first hear us, they sit around and laugh and say, 'These guys are gonna make fools of themselves.' Within three minutes, you could hear a pin drop and they're standing there with their mouths hanging open," Hagen said.

Nevertheless, choir members have had to bear the brunt of sharp criticism — mostly from fellow officers — who can't reconcile the idea of singing with that of a police badge. The critics gripe that the chorus is creating an image they'd rather live without.

"Come on Choirboys? Give me a break," one arson investigator, who asked not to be identified, told the Dallas Times Herald. "We're trying to convey a rough-and-tough image. I mean, it's a sweet idea, but the Police Department is not supposed to be sweet."

But Police Chief Billy Prince, a big choir fan, shrugs off the criticism, arguing that the choir has been a boost to the department's civic image.

"I know some of the guys in the choir, and believe me, they're pretty tough officers," Prince said. "When I first saw them, I saw some in there that I thought to myself, 'He's in the choir.'"

"But really, they're all trained police officers and are out there every night putting their lives on the line with all the rustle-tussle on the streets," the chief said.

The choir was organized by Dick Hickman, the president of the Dallas Police Association, who wanted a group of officers to go Christmas caroling. It was kept alive by officer Dan Whittington, who once co-directed a local barbershop quartet.

"With over 2,000 personnel in the department, I thought there surely must be enough people for at least the nucleus of a choir," said Whittington, who now is the group's director.

The choir has sung at City Hall, at funerals and at luncheons, and plans to sing downtown during the noon lunch hour on July 2. Another engagement is scheduled for a Fourth of July festival at the Cotton Bowl.

Prince said he's proud of the group.

Sheriff surprised by parade following acquittal by jury

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Walker County Sheriff Darrell White was surprised and happy that a parade was held in his honor following his acquittal of federal perjury charges.

But he's also disappointed in the system that put him through the ordeal.

"I had to go before a grand jury with no knowledge why I was there," White said Monday. "They told me I was not a target of the investigation. You had one group indict me and another turned me loose. So I guess I'm a little confused."

White paraded in a 14-car motorcade and waved his ever-present white cowboy hat to supporters after being found innocent of federal perjury charges last Thursday.

White had been charged with lying twice to a grand jury and once to a trial jury by denying he took part in the torturing of jail inmate Vernell Harkless in 1976.

Jurors deliberated 10 hours over two days before deciding White was innocent of the charges.

But county residents turned out in a show of support for White.

Mercedes Shoemaker and Joel Martinez came to the downtown motorcade Friday carrying a sign reading, "Darrell Country."

"If Darrell says a rooster will pull a train, then you better hitch it up," Mrs. Shoemaker said.

Harkless testified White was present while other lawmen handcuffed him to a chair, placed a towel over his nose and mouth and poured water into it until he began to suffocate. The group was seeking a confession to a burglary.

Harkless said White watched some of the episode, then hit him with a towel hard enough to break the skin.

"I certainly did appreciate what all my people did for me," White said. "I was kind of surprised to find they wanted to have a parade. It's good to get back up here with the good solid people that I was raised with."

Former San Jacinto County Sheriff James C. "Humpty" Parker supported Harkless' testimony, as did former San Jacinto Deputy Greg Magee.

Parker is serving a five-year prison term for conspiring to torture jail inmates as well as a 10-year civil rights sentence imposed in connection with a scheme to stop drivers at random on a federal highway and rob them of money and drugs.

White's supporters have raised $52,000 to help pay for his legal fees through months of raffles, barbecues and solicitations.

Even a conviction would not have shaken the faith

many residents have in the 57-year-old White.

"Some people feel that if that did happen and Darrell did it, there must have been some reason for him to do it," said Troy Allen, director of safety for Louisiana Pacific Corp. in Huntsville.

"I have no doubt we would have followed him through the entire appeals process, to the Supreme Court if necessary," Allen said.

Negotiations suspended by Bell Helicopter

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Bell Helicopter-Textron has halted contract talks with more 3,000 employees who are working without labor contracts, a Bell spokesman says.

Bell spokesman Marty Reisch told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram Monday the company will not enter into further negotiations with about 750 unionized clerks, stenographers and other white-collar workers as well as 2,500 blue-collar workers.

Some members of United Auto Workers Local 218, the union representing the blue-collar workers, staged a series of brief walkouts last week, apparently to protest Bell's get-tough labor policy.

Members of UAW Local 317, which represents the clerical employees, rejected the company's offer of a three-year contract Sunday.

All the union workers were said to be on the job Monday.

In a letter dated June 15 and obtained by the Star-Telegram Monday, Bell said there would be "no further negotiations relative to the substance" of the offer the company made to Local 218 June 10.

"This was and is the company's best and final offer," the letter continued.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

The real villains seldom criticized

A news story the other day told of the horrendous inflation tearing at Argentina. It is running at 500 percent annually, and businessmen don't accept checks after noon on Friday because they wouldn't clear until the following Monday, costing them two days' interest.

The country's economic problems began under Juan Peron decades ago when he began huge social programs and nationalization of major industries.

Buying a house or even a car has become only a dream for most Argentines, citizens of a land where, on one recent day, one million of their pesos were worth $1.68 in American money. Such inflations mean vast numbers of people live on the edge of self-sufficiency, their ability to be independent robbed by their government's monetary instability.

Interestingly, you hardly ever hear the "progressive" clergy who decide what is politically moral and immoral describe the nationalization of industries or the initiation of major social programs as being immoral. Yet look where they have brought Argentina.

Our more worldly clergy seldom describe such works of bad government as high inflation of high taxation as moral problems at all, despite the havoc they work. These devils are ever ready to describe helping the poor as a moral priority, but letting people help themselves doesn't seem so attractive a cause.

Yet it is, simply, immoral that the schemes of politicians eat up the hard-earned wages—and dreams—of people who do their best to care for themselves.

It is unlikely that any politician has the important answers. The politicians "serve" us best when they serve least, getting out of the way of the people and letting the people's own energies prevail.

We wonder, however, since the political clergy are so eager to discover sinners in the field of secular politics, that big government and its destructive schemes seem so exempt from criticism.

Even as Germany is trying to agree on a "deficit reduction" plan of $140 - 180 billion over three years, President Reagan may be heading for a pleasant "deficit surprise" in September.

If the present trends (through the first eight months of the 1984 Oct - May fiscal year) continue, the 1984 total deficit could be as much as $30 - 40 billion less than forecast. And the 1985 deficit could be as much as $70 billion less.

Even though the May figures, coming out this week, will show a modest "blip" away from this trend, caused by back-loading June tax refunds into May data, Treasury sources say that the underlying downward trend has improved in every month, including May.

Instead of the $193 billion deficit forecast for 1984 (including so-called "off-budget" items) the actual budget numbers through May suggest a deficit of between $154 and $164 billion or $29 - 39 billion less than forecast, and $53 billion less than 1983.

As Richard Rahn, Chief Economist for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce told a Congressional Joint Economic Committee hearing on June 12, "The deficit is currently running at a $160 - billion rate, and will be running at $130 billion by September."

The sole reason for this substantial deficit improvement is a much faster growing economy which, on the one hand is generating a husky - 12 percent growth in tax receipts, while holding spending growth down to only 3 percent.

Were this favorable trend to continue for another year, the FY 1985 budget deficit could actually fall below $120 billion - or $70 billion below what most forecasts now suggest.

The big reductions in 1984 spending are coming from lower farm subsidies ($9 billion), sharply lower unemployment compensation ($9 billion), a much slower growth in both defense spending ($14 billion) and in human services ($5 billion), and David Stockman's successful efforts to cut the "off-budget" deficit by $6.7 billion.

If these eight - month trends hold up, President Reagan would be able to issue, in September, sharply lowered 1984 - 85 deficit numbers that will not only help him politically, but should prove to be a tonic for the stock and bond markets, and lower interest rates.

It would also vindicate Reagan's resistance to higher taxes, arguing that economic growth would cut the red ink faster. His view is supported by the actual history of Senator Robert Dole's so-called 1982 "Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act" (TEFRA).

That $93 - billion tax increase was sold on the basis that Congress would match every dollar in new taxes with three dollars in spending cuts (which they never did) - and that the combined package would reduce the deficit by a whopping $100 billion over three years, and a huge $229 billion over five years.

In July 1982, Dole was telling the country that under TEFRA the deficit in 1983 would be $115 billion, and in the 1984 $93 Billion.

Instead, the deficits were nearly double those levels, as the heavy hand of the Federal Reserve raised them far faster than any "deficit reduction plans" could compensate for.

As Georgetown University economist Paul Craig Roberts has detailed in his book, "The Supply - Side Revolution (Harvard University Press), within less than six weeks after TEFRA was signed into law, the three - year deficit projections soared from Bob Dole's rosy $282 billion (with TEFRA) to $576 billion - nearly $200 billion HIGHER than the Congressional Budget Office had projected before TEFRA. Dole's so-called "deficit reduction" had doubled deficit forecasts.

Amazingly, Congress is about to repeat that Dole - ful mistake: Even as the Japanese - who already save three times as much as we do - are increasing their exemptions for savers, Congress plans to repeal the 15 - percent net interest exclusion. To cut deficits?

Even as Germany, France and Britain are talking tax cuts to spur investment, and to catch up to the U.S. tax - cut driven capital spending boom (with a 35 - percent investment increase last year, and similar growth happening this year) Congress will delay the expanding of business personal property (computers, machinery, etc.).

Most troubling of all is Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker's apparent determination to slow down the very recovery that is now reducing the deficits - by using high interest rates deliberately to blackmail Congress into damaging new tax programs.

Well, in January 1981, the deficit was only $58 billion, but the prime rate was 21.5 percent, and T - Bills were 16 percent in a stagnant economy. Today the deficit is $160 billion, but the prime rate is down to 12 percent in a roaring economic recovery.

In fact, outgoing presidential economic adviser, Martin Feldstein, and his senior staff economist Jeffrey Frankel, in two separate studies (1973 and 1983), could find "no link at all between high deficits and high interest rates." Congress and the Fed should heed that research, and let the recovery cut the deficit.

Today in History

Today is Tuesday, June 26, the 178th day of 1984. There are 188 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 26, 1945, the charter of the United Nations was signed by 50 countries in San Francisco.

On this date:
In 1959, President Eisenhower joined Queen Elizabeth in ceremonies officially opening the St. Lawrence Seaway.

In 1963, President John F. Kennedy closed out a visit to West Germany with a stopover in West Berlin, where his famous declaration: "Ich bin ein Berliner (I am a Berliner)."

Ten years ago: NATO leaders meeting in Brussels signed a declaration aimed at resolving internal differences.

Five years ago: The Census Bureau reported an increase in the number of Americans choosing to live alone and a spectacular rise in the number of unmarried couples living together.

One year ago: Secretary of State George Shultz criticized the Soviet Union for rejecting an American "interim solution" concerning medium-range missiles in Europe.

Today's birthdays: Actress Eleanor Parker is 62. Singer Billy Davis is 44.

Thought for today: "The United Nations was set up not to get us to heaven, but only to save us from hell." - Sir Winston Churchill, British statesman (1874-1965).

How Christians resolve disputes

Our courts of law are jammed with a jillion trivial lawsuits. Legal fees are such that frequently the winners lose. Legal insurance ends up costing everybody.

A lot of the people suing people are Christians who'd ought to know better. Scripture admonishes Christians to resolve their own disputes. Once in Corinthians and twice in Matthew, Christians are commanded to settle disputes outside the courtroom.

Matthew 18 specifies precisely how.

Now a Christian Conciliation Service, based in Albuquerque, is affiliated with the 4,000 member Christian Legal Society of Oak Park, Ill.

Disputes involving Christians are brought before a team of volunteer peacemakers - typically a lawyer, a pastor and a lay person with some expertise in the area of dispute.

The procedure is largely informal. It places less emphasis on "rights" and on "technicalities" and more emphasis on reconciling differences, healing hurt feelings.

Director Laury Eck of the Christian Conciliation Service says sometimes an offended party will lay aside his "legal rights" for the sake of a "right relationship."

He will seek reconciliation rather than revenge, restoration rather than retribution.

Most of the disputes thus resolved involved marital settlements, child - custody, family or neighbor conflicts, real - estate disagreements, landlord - tenant problems, merchant - customer relations, some criminal matters.

The parties sign a mediation contract and the courts stand behind it. Where reconciliation does not occur, arbitration is used - and the decision of the arbiters is legally binding.

Ninety - five percent of the persons who filed lawsuits before trying this Christian Conciliation Service - return to court only to ask that their cases be dismissed.

Four years old, the CCS has centers now in a dozen cities with 30 others planned.

Mr. Eck says, "Fighting someone in the courts for three or four years, exchanging vicious charges and countercharges, while spending $100 a hour for an attorney, seldom makes anyone happy."

Frequently, CCS is able to resolve a conflict with a few phone calls.

Many marriages headed for a bitter court fight are reestablished in the relaxed atmosphere of a CCS hearing.

For centuries men have piled laws on laws complicating the "basic ten." This is an effort to uncomplicate human relationships, to re - teach: "Do unto others..."

Why do we need zoos anyway?

It is time for every city in the country that has a zoo to ask itself if it wouldn't be better to take the animals back to wherever they came from and close down the zoo forever.

Atlanta Zoo, aptly described as a "death row for animals," is getting a lot of bad publicity after the discovery of the deplorable conditions at the zoo that apparently have led to the untimely passing of more than a half - dozen of its inhabitants.

But what do we need with anybody's zoo anymore? This isn't 1930 when there was no television. Want to see wild animals? Fine. All you have to do is find out what channel Marlin Perkins and "Wild Kingdom" are on these days, and watch Marlin get up to his ears in everything from water buffalo to duckbill platypuses.

The issue is a simple one: Where does it say that humans have the right to take an animal out of the wild and cage it just so some kid can walk by the cage and say, "Look, Mommy, at the funny monkey!"? Even pampered home pets hate to be locked up.

My dog is still a puppy. You name it, he chews on it. I can't leave him alone in my house when I'm away, so I went to a lot of trouble and expense buying him a pen. He hates that pen. I have to drag him inside it. When I close the gate, he gives me a mournful look. There is nothing sadder than the sad eyes of a puppy.

What do I do? Let him roam outside while I'm away? He might get hit by a car. Should I give him the run of the house? He might chew up the television.

I am still wavering about what to do. I want my dog to be safe and I don't want him to reduce my house to a gnawed shambles, but I also don't want to look at those eyes when I put him in his pen, either.

It was a raccoon that first made me aware of the fact it was a rotten thing to cage an animal.

A man in my hometown had a raccoon named Sam. I never did find out how he captured the raccoon, but he put it in a small cage in his back yard.

"Want to see my coon?" the man asked a group of small boys who were passing his house one day.

The man took the boys into his backyard and there was Sam in his cage, walking back and forth from one end of the cage to the other.

He never stopped walking back and forth for a single moment. He would go to one side and sniff and then to the other side and sniff again. Sam was looking for a way out.

He never gave up, did Sam. A year later he was still pacing back and forth in his cage, still searching for that tiny opening through which he might make his escape.

And then one day, the man went to his cage to feed Sam and Sam was gone. Somebody had cut a hole in the cage and had given the raccoon his long - awaited chance at freedom.

The man never did find out who let his raccoon go, and my lips will remain sealed forever.

Close the zoos. Free the animals. The woods and jungles never stop calling them home.

US, Nicaragua meet at Mexican resort

MANZANILLO, Mexico (AP) — Representatives from the United States and Nicaragua's leftist government met in this Pacific coast resort in what Nicaragua called an effort to normalize tense relations between the two countries.

The participants made no public comment on the talks, which began Monday at an exclusive seaside club protected by dozens of armed guards and a Mexican navy patrol boat.

However, the Nicaraguan Foreign Ministry in Managua issued a statement saying the meeting "shows good will on the part of Nicaragua, which is trying with all its might to normalize relations with the government of the United States."

The meeting coincided with a vote by the U.S. Senate to shelve the Reagan administration's request for $21 million for covert operations in Nicaragua. A compromise $1.4 billion emergency spending bill was sent to the House for expected approval after the Republican-controlled Senate reversed itself late Monday and voted 88 to 11 to delete any reference to U.S. funds or Nicaraguan rebels.

Participating in the Manzanillo talks were Harry Shlaudeman, the U.S. special envoy for Central America, and Victor Hugo Tinoco, vice foreign minister of Nicaragua, according to U.S., Mexican and Nicaraguan officials.

Mexican Foreign Minister Bernardo Sepulveda greeted the American and Nicaraguan officials in the afternoon but left an hour later, the Mexican government news service Notimex reported.

In Nicaragua, a source at the U.S. Embassy in Managua said, "Possibly the conversations will extend until Tuesday (today), if something positive comes out of the first meeting."

The meeting was planned after Secretary of State George P. Shultz made a surprise visit to Nicaragua on June 1 and met with Daniel Ortega, coordinator of the ruling Sandinista junta.

Mosquito season is off to a spotty start

NEW YORK (AP) — The world's fair has an unplanned attraction this year: few mosquitoes in a summer that is bringing a bumper crop to some other parts of the nation.

The annual onslaught of mosquitoes is sparing New Orleans while making spotty attacks elsewhere. Residents of Minneapolis and St. Paul should also have an easy summer, for example, while those in New York and Fort Wayne, Ind., will slap themselves more than usual.

"Some parts of the country have a lot of rain. That means there's going to be a lot of mosquitoes in that area, especially in the areas where we don't have any established control agencies," said Gilbert Challet, president of the American Mosquito Control Association.

Rainfall (and flooding in some areas) provides the standing water mosquito eggs need to hatch. A tin can, an old tire or a cow's hoofprint holds all the water eggs need, even if they've spent the winter in hibernation.

"That's why we can get instant mosquitoes," said Jimmy Olson, an entomology professor at Texas A&M University. "Add water and bam, you've got them."

Mosquito control teams have been spraying by air and ground, and even throwing out briquette-like chunks of hormone to keep the mosquito infestation down. The city-county health department of Kansas City, Kan., has been urging residents to get rid of standing water.

New York City crews recently started spreading a bacterium in uninhabited marsh and wetlands to kill larvae. "Because of the heavy rain and heat we are going to have a very severe mosquito season," said Randy Dupree, the city's assistant commissioner of health for pest control.

In Fort Wayne, Ind., the mosquito population is running "extremely high," said Michael Beard, operations supervisor of the mosquito control division of the Fort Wayne-Allen County Board of Health.

"The people are telling us they've never seen them this bad," said Beard, whose office had gotten 120 complaints this month. "They're telling us they have to choose between getting mosquito bites and mowing their grass in the evenings."

Cool weather in early May kept mosquitoes hidden but still breeding, he said. "You have maybe several hatches that held back and did not go out and seek blood meals until it warmed up a bit, and then we had a very large hatch," he said.

In southeastern Pennsylvania, Ron Kliniowski was still waiting for his first mosquito complaint of the year. Despite heavy rains in the late spring, an abrupt heat wave probably evaporated the standing water mosquitoes need to hatch, said the mosquito control specialist for the state Department of Environmental Resources.

But with most mosquitoes normally hatching in July and August, he said, it's too early to tell what the season will bring.

Tobacco, yes, garlic, no, to keep the mosquitoes away

NEW YORK (AP) — The best way to avoid getting bitten by mosquitoes is to stay indoors, says a man with 30 years in the mosquito control business.

But if you must face the pests on their own turf, other precautions will help, says George Carmichael, director of mosquito control in New Orleans.

One is wearing light-colored clothing with long sleeves, leaving as little skin exposed as possible. It's better to wear two thin layers of clothing than one thick layer. A mosquito can still bite, but as the layers rub against each other they push the insect's blood-sucking nose around, and the insect will pull back.

Standard mosquito repellent works fine for a couple hours at a time, Carmichael said. And tobacco smoke from a pipe works as well as any other smoke. But he hasn't heard any evidence supporting the supposed benefits of eating garlic, unless it disperses human crowds that attract mosquitoes.

Devices that attract mosquitoes with light and then electrocute them may be satisfying to listen to, but Carmichael says they do little to protect a patio. The problem is some mosquitoes don't fly directly to their doom. "They will kind of amble along to the light, and if you happen to be between them and the light, they stop and take a blood fill on the way," he said.

His less-than-serious recommendation for the zapping devices: "We suggest you get your neighbor one and let him put it on his patio and draw mosquitoes over to his place."

Jimmy Olson, entomology professor at Texas A&M

University, suggests mixing citronella oil into torches burned outdoors. Any outdoor lighting should be yellow, which attracts mosquitoes less than other colors, he said.

The point of all this is to evade the female mosquito, which looks for blood to digest so it can nourish its eggs. Attracted by such things as light-dark contrasts, carbon dioxide given off by animals, and maybe body warmth and odors, the mosquito need tap only a tiny capillary to get a good meal.

Approval is sought for new long distance plan

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utilities Commission is being asked to approve an AT&T Communications' plan for discount long distance calling within Texas that would charge a fixed monthly rate for an hour of night and weekend telephone calls.

The plan, similar to a national billing plan AT&T intends to offer Texas customers beginning Aug. 1, also would provide greater discounts for night and weekend calling beyond the hour. AT&T said in filing its request with the PUC on Monday.

Latin debtor nations say prime rate rise means major burden

By The Associated Press
Latin American nations that owe billions of dollars to foreign lenders were confronted today with hundreds of millions in additional debts because of the latest rise in the prime interest rate charged by U.S. banks.

The foreign minister of Chile, whose $20 billion debt is modest compared with sums owed by some neighbors, said time will come when "no country will be able to pay its debt."

Many of the debtor countries are trying to carry out austerity programs designed to help them repay some of what they owe and in approval from the International Monetary Fund loans to pay off interest. Last week in Cartagena, Colombia, representatives from 11 Latin American nations issued a document calling for "a drastic and immediate reduction" in interest rates charged by foreign lenders.

In Mexico City, the official news agency Notimex quoted Treasury Secretary Jesus Silva Herzog as saying the rate increase announced Monday could be considered a reprisal for the Cartagena declaration. Mexico's $87 billion foreign debt is the second largest after Brazil's.

Tandy predicts reduced earnings

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Tandy Corp., citing "disappointing sales," announced Monday that it expects a dip in its fourth-quarter earnings.

The announcement accompanied heavy trading of the company's stock, which experienced a sharp decline in price.

Tandy officials said earnings for the quarter ending June 30 are expected to range from 60 cents to 65 cents per share, compared to 71 cents for the same quarter in 1983.

For the fiscal year ending June 30, earnings are expected to range from $2.75 to $2.80 per share, compared to $2.67 for 1983, officials said.

John V. Roach, Tandy's chairman and chief executive officer, said product shortages "due to shifts in product mix and component availability" and increased competition in the microcomputer business had been factors in the predicted decline.

It is estimated that every one-point rise in the U.S. prime rate causes a $2.5 billion increase annually in the interest costs paid by poor nations. Thus, the new increase — from 12.5 percent to 13 percent — means $1.25 billion more in Third World interest costs annually.

Brazil's government, whose $100 billion debt is the largest owed by a developing nation, "is examining the subject and its implications," said a Foreign Ministry spokesman Monday night in response to the increase.

The spokesman said the government was "very concerned" about the consequences of the increase in the prime rate, which is what U.S. banks charge to their preferred customers.

Wall Street analysts said the boost was needed to offset the higher price U.S. banks have had to pay to attract funds.

In Venezuela, Finance Minister Manuel Azpurua echoed remarks made in Brazil, saying the increase "is of great concern, because it supposes a greater weight, a greater burden of debt service for all the Latin American economies."

Venezuela's foreign debt of $35 billion is the fourth largest in Latin America.

Comma does make a difference

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Writing a national political platform isn't a whole lot different than crafting legislation on Capitol Hill. The players are often the same and the process is just as hectic.

Dozens of members of Congress will be delegates at next month's Democratic National Convention and about 20 of them serve on the Platform Committee.

Recent sessions of the panel have taken on the flavor of congressional committee meetings — not only because of the large number of Congress members and the type of work involved, but also because some of the sessions have actually been held in committee rooms. That was to accommodate members who needed to rush back and forth to the House and Senate floors for votes.

On one such voting trip, the Mondale campaign lost a comma from the Democratic platform — an important comma, as it turned out.

The first draft of the platform contained a section on affirmative action programs dealing with racial quotas. It stated: "The Democratic Party opposes quotas, which are inconsistent with the principles of our country." That was the language Walter F. Mondale's lieutenants wanted in the platform.

But Mondale's top representative on the platform committee, Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., and his House colleagues had to leave the room for a vote.

While he was gone, the non-congressional members on the committee voted to remove the comma after delegates for the Rev. Jesse Jackson argued that sometimes quotas are beneficial in reversing the longtime effects of discrimination.

With the comma removed, the sentence read: "The Democratic Party opposes quotas which are inconsistent..." That meant the party was about to go on record for the first time in support of quotas so long as they weren't "inconsistent" with U.S. principles; a distortion of the sentence's original meaning.

CITIES SERVICE OIL AND GAS CORPORATION

Panhandle East and West Gathering System
Gray County

It has come to Cities Service Oil and Gas Corporation's attention that some residences are receiving natural gas through unauthorized connections, or "tapping," onto the field gas pipeline serving the Panhandle East and West Gathering System. The residue pipeline system is not designed for safe use by residential owners. The gas is extremely hazardous for residential use since it is not odorized, and it may be subject to explosion and/or fire due to possible loss of pressure.

Cities Service Oil and Gas Corporation will not accept liability for personal injury, death or property damage that may result from any unauthorized use of this natural gas. For the safety of those unauthorized users, and the public in general, we ask that action be taken immediately to disconnect any such gas pipeline connections and that all future tapping cease. Any failure to immediately disconnect unauthorized pipeline connections serving residences or other buildings will result in Cities Service taking whatever action is necessary, including legal action, to protect and retain Cities Service's property and to eliminate the safety hazard created.

First Hispanic mayor of Pecos says timing was right for him

PECOS, Texas (AP) — When Frank Sanchez was elected mayor of this 103-year-old oil-and-ranching community in April, he became one of only a handful of Hispanics holding similar positions throughout the country.

His victory over the incumbent mayor — a member of a prominent long-time Pecos family — surprised even him, but Sanchez attributes his success to an increased knowledge among Mexican-Americans about how to win in politics.

"When I won, I was a little surprised," Sanchez said recently. "I was Hispanic and young — by far the youngest (person to run for mayor) in recent years in Pecos and some of the old aristocratic folks here were skeptical of me."

But, the 35-year-old Pecos native said, "I was really organized and that's what it takes — especially for Hispanics."

Mexican-Americans traditionally have been unorganized politically, Sanchez said.

"But in the past two or three years, we've really learned and I think you'll see many more Hispanics becoming elected officials in the very near future, especially in West Texas," which has a large Hispanic population, he said.

Sanchez, a supervising caseworker for the Texas Department of Human Resources, won the mayor's seat in Pecos, where more than 60 percent of the population is Hispanic, by defeating incumbent mayor Bill Hubbs by 149 votes.

He never had held an elected office before, but twice had unsuccessfully sought a seat on the city council.

Humane Society rates nation's zoo conditions

NEW YORK (AP) — Where monkeys climb on ropes and trees, where they poke around a naturalistic setting for food and hide occasionally from visitors, the Humane Society sees signs of a good zoo.

Where animals live among litter, where the grounds are unkempt and visitors don't learn much, a zoo association executive sees trouble.

And where a coin-operated machine gives moldy feed for the animals, where animals have too little room to move about and children are bitten by a bear or a fox, a zoo is breaking federal law. Officials may shut it down or impose a fine.

America's zoos have problems. But in an industry that gets high marks for self-regulation, most do a good job, observers say, and the much-publicized troubles of the Atlanta Zoo are an aberration.

That zoo came under investigation by a county grand jury, the city, federal inspectors and the Humane Society of the United States for possible mismanagement and animal mistreatment.

Incidents include the deaths of animals, including an elephant in a traveling circus, a lion and tiger that had advanced cancer, and two Kodiak bears that were shipped to a North Carolina buffalo ranch.

After finding substandard animal exhibits and inadequate records, the American Association of Zoological Parks and Aquariums, which represents about 175 zoos and aquariums in the United States and Canada, suspended the zoo's membership.

That step, unprecedented in the group's 60-year history, signals that the zoo "is not professionally operated" and should make other zoos reluctant to lend it animals, said Robert Wagner, executive director of the association.

Atlanta's situation is "very, very, very unique," Wagner said.

Other observers agreed. "At the present time it's probably unique," said Max Heppner, spokesman for the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service of the federal Agriculture Department, which regulates animal care in zoos. Nancy Blaney of the Humane Society of the United States found it "hard to believe that a municipal zoo the size of Atlanta has been able to sink this far. It's not something we really would expect to find again."

Terry Maple, named interim zoo director by Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young after the controversy surfaced, said he would not downplay the problem at the zoo but believes "it is a recent phenomenon."

"I don't think people ought to talk about it as a house of horrors," Maple, former deputy director of the Audubon Zoo in New Orleans, said at a news conference earlier this month.

Steps have been taken to improve veterinary care. Young has made available $400,000 from the city budget for immediate improvements and city officials have begun work on a long-term operations plan.

Of the 400 public and private American zoos the society has ranked for treatment of animals and cultural value, most are either very good or working to get that way, Ms. Blaney said.

Most federal concern is with small private zoos, like roadside attractions or shopping-mall menageries, Heppner said.

Wagner expects about 90 percent of his organization's members to achieve accreditation.

Wagner and Ms. Blaney said zoos for many years had been going beyond mere exhibition, moving into education, research and breeding.

"They're growing up in a lot of ways. They're realizing they're not really entertainment centers," Ms. Blaney said. "The entertainment is becoming more of a byproduct of the more important functions."

Zoos "have to be giving something back to the animals they're keeping," she said, and that means not only good care but an effort to educate people about problems animals face in the wild.

The society distinguishes between zoological parks and what it calls menageries, which it defines as a random collection of animals maintained in an amateur fashion.

Animals are generally treated worse in menageries, Ms. Blaney said. Menageries make up the society's "10 Worst Zoos" list, which names roadside attractions in Florida and New Jersey as well as the large zoo in Atlanta.

America's best zoos, Ms. Blaney said, include the Bronx Zoo, the Brookfield Zoo in Chicago, National Zoo in Washington, D.C., the Point Defiance Zoo in Tacoma, Wash., and a small zoo in Salisbury, Md.

A good zoo leaves visitors with more positive feelings than bad feelings, Ms. Blaney said, and "you'll feel you learned something."

Wagner has another test to tell if a zoo is in trouble. "The quickest and easiest way for the general public to tell is if the zoological facility becomes tattered, and the grounds are not neat and clean, and they do not have a thrust in terms of an educational program, if the exhibit signs are shoddy and the animal enclosures are not orderly, neat and clean."

Even the best zoos generally have something wrong, like a dirty seal pond or a rusty cage with a jagged edge that could cut an animal, federal inspectors, who show up unannounced one to four times a year, give zoos time to correct whatever problems they find, Heppner said.

If an inspector sees that an owner can't afford to take proper care of the animals, he may also suggest selling some animals or getting out of the business, Heppner said.

Zoos that resist making improvements are subject to fines and forced closings. In the past year, federal

Warm water makes smolts grow fast

IRRIGON, Ore. (AP) — Steelhead smolts have been growing like tumbleweeds in the small, experimental hatchery built here in 1980.

According to Jim Lauman of the state Department of Fish and Wildlife in La Grande, warm well water gets the credit.

In Irrigon's 58-degree well water, fish grow faster than they do in cool streams. Irrigon's warm groundwater "allows us to get those fish to the right size in one year rather than two years," he said.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is following through on those promising results by building a full-fledged, $5.9 million hatchery complex on the Columbia River west of Irrigon.

This fall, smolts will be stocked in a first set of rearing ponds. Deadline to finish the entire complex is September 1985. The pilot hatchery will be dismantled after the first rearing ponds are built.

Irrigon is one of 11 hatcheries being built by the federal government as part of a program to compensate for fish loss caused by dams on the lower Snake River in southeast Washington. The Irrigon hatchery will be managed by the state Department of Fish and Wildlife.

Smolts at Irrigon will be started at the Wallowa Fish Hatchery near Enterprise and taken to Irrigon for rearing. A large shipment of fish will arrive each June.

After 10 or 11 months, the six- to eight-inch fish will be returned to Wallowa County to begin the long swim to the Pacific.

When finished in 1985, the Irrigon hatchery will supply the Grande Ronde and Imnaha river systems with about 13 million steelhead smolts a year.

Results can vary widely, from fewer than 1 percent at some inland stations to 10 percent on coastal river stations.

"We suspect it's going to be reasonably good," said Lauman. "By releasing fish into the stream, we've been able to establish a pretty healthy run back to Wallowa."

Dear Abby Explanation 'For the birds' may ruffle a few feathers

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: A bird lover wrote: "I love birds, and for many years now I have been offended by the expression 'For the birds.' When people want to express a negative opinion of something, they say, 'That's for the birds.' Where did that disparaging expression originate?"

DEAR ABBY: The expression "For the birds" came from an old joke that's been around for at least 50 years. It goes like this: Two squirrels were making love in a tree. They became quite rambunctious, and the female fell to the ground. The male scampered down the tree and ran to the side of his fallen lover, asking, "Are you all right?"

The dazed squirrel replied, "I'm all right. But I learned one thing... making love in the trees is strictly for the birds."
L.B. SMITH, BIGELOW, MINN.

DEAR ABBY: The saying "For the birds" originated with flight instructors. When a student would do something foolhardy or unsafe in the air, the instructor would say, "That kind of flying is for the birds!" This is one way of saying that birds were created to fly naturally, men were not, so they had better not try anything too fancy.
PILOT'S WIFE

DEAR ABBY: If you have ever tried to sit in Pittsburgh's pigeon-infested Market Square, where a flock of misguided bird lovers go to coddle and feed those stinking, parasitic, disease carriers, you would understand what we mean when we say something is "for the birds."
WORTH SEYMOUR, SEWICKLEY, PA.

DEAR ABBY: When we were kids, there were many horse-drawn delivery wagons on our streets—the iceman, milkman, breadman, etc., and it was a common sight to see sparrows gleaming the undigested kernels of grain from the piles of horse droppings. Naturally we concluded that the birds had to be quite desperate to seek such foul rations, so whenever anyone wanted to put something down and couldn't use the vulgar four-letter word for horse manure, he'd say, "That's (beep) for the birds," hence the expression "It's for the birds."
YOU ASKED FOR IT IN SALT SPRINGS, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: Originally, the expression was "...for the small brown birds," and referred to the close relationship of horses and sparrows. They are the only two that can live as cheaply as one.
EDWIN IN HONOLULU

DEAR ABBY: In GI language, "It's for the birds" meant "Save the horse (bleep) for the birds," or "That horse (bleep) is strictly for the birds."
Explanation: Horse droppings contain undigested grain that birds feast upon.
The idea is nicely expressed in an old Arab saying: "If you feed the sparrows, you must first feed the horses."

Diligence cures many air conditioning woes

PITTSBURGH — Your room air conditioner is designed to operate efficiently and effectively. When it doesn't chances are you have failed to follow the manufacturer's use and care guide, or have overlooked a number of simple reasons such as a dirty filter, an improperly set switch of a faulty house fuse.

This observation is from Janet K. Felmeth, director of the White Westinghouse-Kelvinator Company Home Economics Institute.

"Most room air conditioner problems can be handled by the owner without resorting to unnecessary and sometimes costly service calls.

"Over the years, we've observed the most frequent problems reported by consumers and found that most of them could be handled easily by the user," she reports.

A common problem is failure of the unit to cool properly, she explains. "More often than not, this problem can be traced to a dirty filter, evaporator, or condenser; or to blockage of the air path by furniture or draperies; or even low voltage due to use of a long extension cord. In the latter instance, it's best to have an electrician install an outlet at or near the unit," she advises.

Sometimes the fault lies in the simple fact that the air conditioner is not large enough to cool the area in which it is installed. She suggests that the only way to avoid this mistake is to deal with a knowledgeable dealer and explain at the outset exactly the size and sun exposure of the room, what you expect the unit to do, and then buy the size model the dealer recommends.

Many of the operating problems reported by consumers involve blown fuses, tripped circuit breakers, short cycling, or freeze-up. Tripped breakers and blown fuses usually are caused by excessive load on the circuit serving the air conditioner. The only solution is to reduce the load by turning off other appliances or devices on the circuit, or to relocate the unit's power source to another circuit.

Short cycling is often caused by a blocked air intake or discharge, usually by furniture, draperies or even closed louvers, which can direct the cold air back to the unit and influence the thermostat reading. Freeze up occurs if the filter is dirty and blocks the flow of air, or when the outside temperature is acutely cool.

A recurring problem reported by room air conditioner users is unfamiliar sounds and noises. Mrs. Felmeth says that the problem is often with the way the unit is installed. You should carefully check with both the inside and outside areas around the windows to make certain that there is no looseness or vibration of metal against metal or window framing material. She observes that most units today feature low noise levels, but a light sleeper might get a good night's rest by simply lowering the fan speed, thereby reducing air movement and fan sound.

"Of course maximum fan speed and air flow creates a higher sound level," she explains.

Finally, she urges people to familiarize themselves with the manufacturer's operating manual.

"Before making a call for service, read the expert advice contained in the guide. If your air conditioner is under warranty, a charge will be made for an unnecessary service call unless the problem is related to failure due to defects in workmanship or materials... and it seldom is," she said.

Steve Martin chosen Boys State delegate

Steve Martin, the 17-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Martin of Miami, recently represented Pulaski Post No. 106 at the American Legion Boys State.

Steve flew from Amarillo to Austin along with 51 Boys State representatives from throughout the Panhandle.

Boys State, a creation of Texas Legion Posts, gives boys who have completed their junior year in high school the opportunity to participate in the fundamentals of the election process.

The 1984 Boys State was the largest recorded with more than 900 young men arriving at the University of Texas at Austin campus. Boys State is a mythical state in which cities are named and nominations are made for the various governmental offices from mayor to governor.

Governor Mark White addressed the citizens of Boys State in the Capitol on the final day of the event, stressing to them the importance of education and leadership.

Shade from sun cools mobile home

COLLEGE STATION — Having a cooler mobile home is mostly a matter of keeping the sun off of it. Dr. Jane Berry, Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service housing specialist, says there are several ways to reduce, shade or deflect sun rays from a manufactured home.

"Ideally, the home should be positioned so the long sides face north and south," she says. "Then less of the home is exposed to the hot afternoon sun in the west."

Some homes also can be placed so large shade trees block out some sun. Trees or other kinds of overhead protection can cut energy costs by one-half, reports Berry.

If you can't shade the roof of your mobile home, try cooling it with water, suggests the specialist. A simple device made of perforated plastic pipe and a thermostatic timer will spray the roof of the mobile home with water when it goes above a set temperature and then shut off the water when the temperature goes down. These devices can be made by a do-it-yourselfer or purchased through mobile home catalogs, she adds.

To shade the sides of the home, install arbors and trellises for vining plants, Berry says. These plants will be most effective on east- and west-facing walls where the summer sun is intense.

Keep the sun away from windows too, advises the specialist. "Awnings are best," she says because they keep the sun from even striking the windows. "A less-effective option is to use light-colored or reflective drapes, or a reflective film adhered to the glass."

Using electrical appliances sparingly can help mobile homes stay cooler, notes Berry. Electrical appliances and lights add heat to the home, so shut them off when not in use. Save heat-producing activities, like washing clothes or baking, for early morning or late evening, she adds.

Cutting back on air conditioner use will also save cooling costs, Berry says. If security precautions allow it, she suggests turning off the air conditioner and opening windows when going out for several hours. Most mobile homes can be cooled quickly when residents return, she explains.

Substituting fans for air conditioning can also save money. On cool nights, use a large capacity window fan to pull air through the entire mobile home.

Berry says newer mobile homes have energy saving features.

Proper planting could produce lower power

When it comes to growing flowers, success is not a matter of luck. It results from simply taking a few easy steps along the way.

When problems occur, it's usually because the flowers have been planted in the wrong place, or they're the wrong flowers for the right place. Soil conditions, light and shade and water run-off are the sorts of environmental considerations which must be taken into account. The flowers in store from the nursery are well worth a bit of time and effort spent in getting information on those subjects before the planting begins.

Don't be stingy in your planting. Flower seeds or seedling plants are quite expensive. So be bountiful in your selections to assure making a real impact on the landscape.

Keep in mind that the shade of flowers is seen indoors as well as outdoors. If there isn't room — and proper growing conditions — for displays outside.

The nursery where you choose the flowers you want will be able to answer questions you might have and provide advice for your object if you wish.

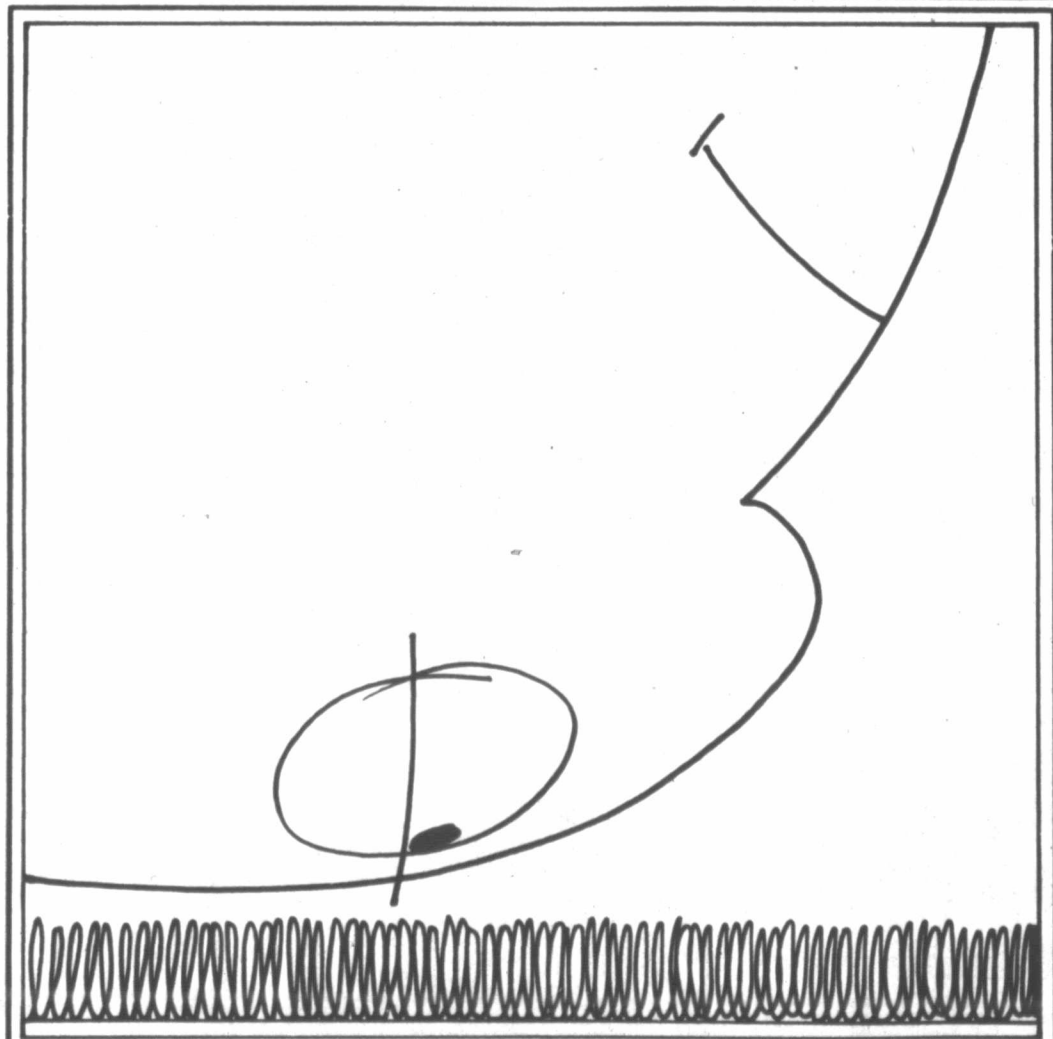

This is the right time of year to plant many perennials and annuals, so get started now. Remember, you do have a green thumb.

Gray County 4-H members celebrate spring fashions

Gray County 4-H Club members showed what they have in store for summer at the Gray County Clothing celebration Friday at First Christian Church.

The youths, ranging in age from 9 to 19, modeled their home-made garments which ranged from school clothes and sportswear to formal evening clothes to swimming suits and pajamas. The students competed in three divisions — Junior, Intermediate and Senior — with four categories in each division. The four categories were non-tailored day wear, tailored daywear, evening and specialty wear and active sportswear.

The entries were judged on modeling and construction of garment. Stacie McDonald of the Extra Terrific (E.T.) 4-H Club took top honors in the Senior (ages 14-19) division and was presented a sewing machine. Wearing a blue blazer and skirt set, she was also named best model in the Senior Division.

Also in the senior division, Jana Eppison of the 4-H Club modeled a yellow short tennis suit while Top Of Texas 4-Her Renee Alexander modeled a short pajama outfit. The girls will represent Gray County in District 4-H competition in Canyon later this summer.

The Intermediate (age 12-13) Division featured the only boy in the spring show. Modeling a kelly green tennis warm-up suit, Jeffrey Lane of the E.T. club took the top honor in the active sportswear category and will go on to district competition. Lane was one of the first boys to pierce this almost all-girl contest.

"We've had one boy before," said Gray County extension agent Donna Brauchi, but it's been a while ago.

Sherri McDonald of the E.T. Club was named best model of the Intermediate Division.

Heather Kludt, also of E.T., will go on to district competition in this category. Karen Anderson of the E.T. Club was named alternate in the category.

Kelly Harris, who qualified for the Intermediate division by being born two days too late for the Junior Division, will represent the county in the Intermediate Evening wear category. She made a pink evening gown. Gwen Hokit of E.T. was alternate. Becky Reed of E.T. will represent the county in the Intermediate tailored daywear division.

In the Junior (age 9-11) Division, Tamara Lane of E.T. was named best model and will represent the evening and specialty wear category at district. Amy Alexander of Gold Star Club was alternate. They modeled nightgowns.

Alicia Webb of E.T. won the Outstanding first year student award and will represent the county in the non-tailored daywear category. Shawn Hunter will be alternate. In the sportswear category, Monica Hokit will go to district while Kilyn Shelton is alternate.

Moffet sets record in 100-meter breaststroke

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — John Moffet's world-record performance in the men's 100-meter breaststroke gave him a spot on the U.S. Olympic swimming team. Only slightly less in importance was an end to a string of second-place finishes to perennial rival Steve Lundquist.

"Sure it was frustrating," the 19-year-old Stanford University junior said of his five-year pursuit of Lundquist, whose year-old world record he broke during Monday's opening round of the Olympic Trials. "But now, if I'm the favorite, that's fine with me."

Moffet and Lundquist qualified for next month's Olympic Games at Los Angeles with their 1-2 finish on Monday, the first of six days of competition at the Indiana University Natatorium. Moffet had a time of 1:47.72, 2.13 seconds, while Lundquist was clocked at 1:52.16. The previous world record was 1:52.28, set by Lundquist at last summer's Pan American Games in Venezuela.

"It was kind of nice having something physical in front of me. It was something to go for," said Moffet, who had never beaten Lundquist in that event in a major meet. "But I didn't look at him as a goal. I tried to think of where I wanted to be myself. My goal was to be myself. My goal was to be myself."

Lundquist suffered a shoulder injury in a water skiing accident last summer. Only four events were contested on Monday. Today's schedule included the men's 100 butterfly and 400 individual medley, and the women's 200 freestyle and 200 breaststroke.

Mike Heath, who set an American record of 1:48.58 in the men's 200 freestyle preliminaries Monday morning, lowered his own record in the finals with a time of 1:47.92. The world record of 1:47.55 was set two weeks ago by West Germany's Michael Gross.

The second U.S. Olympic spot in the 200 freestyle went to Jeff Floot, 24, of Sacramento, Calif., who finished with a time of 1:49.70.

Tracy Caulkins of Nashville, Tenn., who hopes to qualify for six individual events and two Olympic relays, easily won the women's 400 individual medley. Her time of 4:41.72 was far ahead of the other Olympic qualifier, Sue Heon of Clarks Summit, Pa., who finished with a time of 4:46.37.

Caulkins was entered in today's 200 breaststroke.

Nancy Hogshead, 22, of Jacksonville, Fla., won Monday's 100 freestyle in 56.03 seconds and made the Olympic team along with 16-year-old Carrie Steineiser of Saratoga, Calif.

Texas League roundup

By The Associated Press Johnny Walker doubled home the winning run in the bottom of the 10th inning as the San Antonio Dodgers took a 12-11 Texas League victory over the Beaumont Golden Gators.

In other Texas League action Monday night, Jackson edged Shreveport, 5-4, El Paso slipped past Midland, 7-6, and Arkansas whipped Tulsa, 7-4.

Walker's 11th inning heroics ended a game that saw the two teams use 11 pitchers between them and the lead change hands several times.

San Antonio held a 6-1 lead after four innings, but Beaumont battled back to take a 9-8 lead after the eighth inning. San Antonio scored twice in the top of the ninth to take an 11-9 lead, but the Gators came back with two runs on a single by Pat Casey to tie the game and send it into extra innings.

Ralph Bryant had a one-out single in the 10th inning. Larry See singled, sending Bryant to third. Bryant was then thrown out at the plate when Todd Gauntlett reached on a fielder's choice. With See at second and Gauntlett on first, Walker ended the game with a double, sending home See with the final run.

See was 3-5 for San Antonio and Joe Vavra was 2-4 for the Dodgers. Jeff Ronk was 1-3 for Beaumont.

Jody Johnston, 1-0, was the winning pitcher. Bill Long, normally a starter, came on in relief and was the loser. He is 9-2.

Dave Cochrane had a solo homer in the seventh inning to boost the Jackson Mets to a 5-4 victory over the Shreveport Captains.

Billy Beane also had a solo homer for Jackson.

C.L. Penigar had a two-run homer for the Captains in the second inning.

Cochrane's homer gave the Mets a 5-3 lead, but Shreveport tried to come back in the bottom of the ninth when they loaded the bases and scored a run on a walk. But the rally ended to the pitcher.

Al Pedrique was 2-2 for Jackson and Penigar was 2-3 for Shreveport with 3 RBIs.

Bill Fultz, 6-1, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Brian Murtha, 0-1.

Mike Felder reached first on a fielder's choice, stole second and scored on a single by Dave Klipstein to give the El Paso Diablos a 7-6 victory over the Midland Cubs.

Felder's score came with the game tied, 6-6, in the eighth inning.

The winning pitcher was Paul Hartzell, 1-1. The loser was Ron Kaufman, 1-1.

The Arkansas Travelers took advantage of six Tulsa errors to defeat the Drillers, 7-4.

The game was tied at 4-4 in the seventh inning when what started out as a bunt by Eddie Tanner turned into a bases-clearing hit. Gotay Mills had walked and Tanner was trying to bunt him to second. Pitcher Billie Taylor threw the ball into right field and Mills scored.

McEnroe win Wimbledon openers

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — In sharp contrast with last year's tournament, when a host of seeds went tumbling out on opening day, this year's Wimbledon tennis championships began much kinder to the top players.

Just one seed was tripped up in Monday's first-round matches — No. 10 Anders Jarryd of Sweden, felled by Scott Davis of Santa Monica, Calif.

Form appeared in little danger today. The women's competition — celebrating its centenary — was to take Center Court with Martina Navratilova opening defense of her title against Peanut Louie, the 23-year-old right-hander from San Francisco.

The British bookies have made Navratilova, the French Open and Grand Slam champion, the most prohibitive favorite since World War II to regain her crown — and begin her quest for yet another Grand Slam collection of Wimbledon, the U.S., Australian and French titles.

Perhaps the only extraordinary development took place off court, when top seed and defending champ John McEnroe called an official of the All-England Lawn Tennis club "very nice" and then declared to reporters that from now on, he was going to "let my racket do the talking."

The kind words were for Buzzer Hadingham, chairman of the All-England club, who had just written a letter to the fiery New Yorker's father promising no "witch hunt" at Wimbledon over John's notorious tantrums at line calls.

McEnroe certainly gave no cause for any Monday as he bested Paul McNamee 6-4, 6-4, 6-7, 6-1.

But afterward, McEnroe refused to appear at the obligatory postmatch news conference until the television cameras were switched off. He explained that at a previous news conference, a British TV reporter had purposely tried to stir him up and then aired his responses out of context. The club said it "expects to resolve the matter in the near future."

As to his match with McNamee, McEnroe said there were "a few bad line calls, but it was not in my best interest to say anything at the present time."

But there was a word of warning: "I have no idea if I'll continue to hold back."

As McEnroe was dismissing McNamee on Center Court, next door at No. 1 Court, Ivan Lendl was having a tougher time against Dick Stockton, the veteran doubles player who has not been playing much singles of late.

His grass-court game still not completely in tune after defeating McEnroe on clay two weeks ago to win the French Open, Lendl double-faulted to give Stockton the fourth set, then

Bird named most valuable

MALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Maurice Podoloff, one of three Boston Celtics of the past, was named the league's most valuable player trophy. Now a name in the present will join Larry Bird, the main cog in Boston's drive to a 15th world championship. Monday took place alongside other events in Celtic history by naming Maurice Podoloff Trophy the league's best player for 1983-84.

Podoloff compiled 52 first-place votes from a panel of 76 sportswriters and broadcasters who regularly cover the NBA, the 6-foot-9 forward also became only the third non-center to earn the MVP award in the past 25 years.

Trailing Bird in the balloting were New York Knick forward Bernard King, who had 11 first-place votes, and guard Earvin "Magic" Johnson of the Los Angeles Lakers with five first-place votes. Bird, who had finished second in the MVP balloting the last three seasons, received a total of 652 points. King had 373 points and Johnson 305.

Bird accepted the honor here Monday night during the league's annual awards banquet.

Pintor announces retirement

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government news service Notimex said World Boxing Council bantam weight champion Guadalupe Pintor announced Monday his retirement from the ring.

Pintor is making the announcement, Pintor cited difficulties in losing weight.

Notimex reported.

Pintor said he would execute himself to training boxer. Notimex reported. The news service reported he would work along with his manager Arturo Hernandez.

Notimex said the announcement of Pintor's retirement was "surprising."

"I love very much I workout the gymnasium. I can't get lost to 54 kilograms (118.8 lbs), and if I couldn't do that then I certainly won't be able to weigh-in at the 53 kilogram division limit of 53 lbs (117.4 lbs)."

Pintor's retirement is definite and I am not thinking of returning to the ring as a center," Notimex quoted Pintor as saying "Since my wife, my parents and my children have asked me to retire, I have decided to do it, since it doesn't make any sense to expose myself to the accidents that can happen in this sport." Notimex quoted the ex-champ as saying "The money I have made has been a lot and I have invested most of it in real estate, so I'll be able to take care of my family in a stable way," the news service quoted him as saying.

Pintor is 29 years old and has been fighting for 16 years of his life. Notimex reported. His professional records is 50 victories and six defeats, the news agency reported.

He is considered a champion in retirement because, when the opportunity presented itself, he was not able to defend his title, Notimex reported.

He could not fight at the time because he was suffering the effects of a highway accident, the news service reported.

Rangers edge Angels

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP)— It's the American League West, but it's sometimes called the "American League Worst." Only four games separate the seven teams from top to bottom and the first place team is only game above .500.

So it's no surprise that literally anything can happen in a division like that. Such as the last place Texas Rangers holding a 4-0 margin over the first place California Angels after their first four meetings of the season.

The fourth victory came Monday night, a 5-4 victory that took 11 innings.

The Rangers had a miserable start this season, but they swept a three-game series in California last week and took the opener of a three-game series here Monday night.

"We don't ever think about anybody else," said Rangers Manager Doug Rader. "We're just fighting our own war. We don't give the other team a thought."

"We may not be as talented as the other teams, but we've got heart," said Rangers third baseman Buddy Bell.

"After a rough start like we had, to come together and play like this is just outstanding," said Texas first baseman Pete O'Brien, who went 4-6 at the plate and had the game winning hit in the 11th inning. Bell had a single, a triple and hit a game tying homer in the seventh inning for the Rangers. It was Bell's third homer of the year.

"It's unreal, isn't it," said Rader. "O'Brien had an unbelievable effort tonight and Buddy Bell battled his tail off that last at bat."

In his last 31 games, O'Brien has hit .407 with 17 doubles, four homers and 25 RBIs.

O'Brien ended the game in the 11th by singling home Gary Ward, who had also singled and advanced on a groundout by Bell and a single by Larry Parrish.

Dave Schmidt, 2-3 took the victory in relief. He went four innings, giving up three hits, no runs, no walks. He struck out two.

California reliever Doug Corbett, 2-1, was the loser.

The Angels opened the scoring in the third when Rod Carew slugged a two-run double to left, scoring Dick Schofield and Gary Pettis, who had walked and singled, respectively.

Bell brought Texas within one in the third when he tripled off the left field wall and scored on a wild pitch.

The Rangers scored two to go ahead, 3-2, in the fourth on a Curtis Wilkerson single and run-scoring doubles by Ward and Parrish.

National League roundup

Mets move into NL East lead

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

An impatient Keith Hernandez couldn't find a pitch to his liking, so after fouling off eight offerings from Jim Kern he simply lashed the ball the other way.

It carried farther than anyone would imagine, considering Hernandez is not known as an opposite-field power hitter, and came to rest beyond the left-field wall for a three-run, fourth-inning homer that propelled the New York Mets into an 8-1 lead Monday night.

They parlayed that into a 10-5 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies to move into a one-game lead in the National League East race.

"It wasn't the pitch I wanted," Hernandez explained, noting that Philadelphia's Veterans Stadium is an inviting hitter's park. In most other parks it would have been a sacrifice fly, he figured.

"I'm hitting consistently now like I did when I had my good years in 1979, 1980 and 1981," said Hernandez, who also doubled and scored three runs. "Also, it helps when the No. 1 (Wally Backman) and No. 2 (Mookie Wilson) men are getting on base."

Hernandez, who shared the NL Most Valuable Player Award with Willie Stargell in 1979, finished the night hitting .307 with 35 runs batted in. He has 13 RBI in his last 14 games and is 11 for 22 in his last six games.

"He's simply been outstanding," said Mets Manager Dave Johnson. "He's just a quality hitter. When he's swinging good nobody hits better."

Elsewhere, San Diego shelled Los Angeles 9-4, Pittsburgh blanked Chicago 3-0, St. Louis edged Montreal 5-4, Cincinnati shaded San Francisco 2-1 and Atlanta and Houston split a doubleheader, with the Astros winning the opener 8-5 and the Braves taking the nightcap 6-4.

The Mets took a 2-0 lead in the second when Mike Fitzgerald singled and, after two strikeouts, winning pitcher Ron Darling singled and moved to second when left fielder Jeff Stone bobbled the ball. Fitzgerald, who had advanced to third, scored when catcher Ozzie Virgil dropped the relay throw for another error. Darling moved to third and scored on Backman's single.

They made it 4-0 in the third on the double by Hernandez, two walks, and a bases-loaded, two-run single by Ron Gardenhire.

After the Phillies picked up a run in the third on a single by Stone and Von Hayes' double, the Mets added four more to decide the issue.

Phillies' Manager Paul Owens described the game as

"another one I wouldn't write home about."

Starter Charles Hudson, 7-5, lasted only three innings.

The victory was the fifth straight victory for Darling, 8-3, who became the first Met pitcher to accomplish that since Jerry Koosman in 1976. Padres 9, Dodgers 4.

Carmelo Martinez, Terry Kennedy and Graig Nettles homered to lead a 19-hit assault by visiting San Diego that snapped a four-game Los Angeles winning streak.

Tim Lollar, 7-5, got the victory as the Padres won their third straight game to extend their NL West lead to four games over Atlanta. The Dodgers fell 5 1/2 games behind in losing to San Diego for just the third time in nine meetings this season.

"Last year we beat them 12 out of 18, but when it was all over with, they were ten games ahead of us in the standings," Padre Manager Dick Williams said. "It's what you do over the 162-game haul that counts."

Pat Zachry, 4-2, relieved starter Rick Honeycutt in the fifth inning and gave up Martinez's ninth homer, a three-run shot. Nettles' homer, a two-run blast in the seventh, was his 11th. Kennedy hit his seventh leading off the fourth.

Pirates 3, Cubs 0
Ailing Bill Madlock slugged a pair of solo home runs and Jose DeLeon, 5-4, hurled a four-hit shutout while fanning nine Chicago batters. Madlock, facing elbow surgery at the end of the season, connected twice off Chuck Rainey, 5-7.

"I never try for home runs in this ballpark, and that's why I'm successful in Wrigley Field," said Madlock, a four-time batting champion who entered the game hitting .251 with just one home run.

Astros 8-4, Braves 5-6

Catcher Mark Bailey cracked two home runs and drove in the game-winning run with a grounder as Houston extended Atlanta's losing streak to five in the first game.

Mike LaCoss, 2-0, pitched five innings to win the opener. Frank DiPino halted an eighth-inning rally by the Braves to collect his eighth save. Len Barker, 6-7, took the loss.

Rick Mahler, 6-2, scattered four hits over 7 1/3 innings and walked just one batter in pitching the Braves to victory in the nightcap with Donnie Moore collecting his fifth save.

Bruce Benedict keyed the decisive five-run second inning with a two-run double. Dale Murphy hit his 17th homer for Atlanta, while Terry Puhl belted his first for Houston. Mike Madden, 2-3, was the loser.

Gamblers rout Showboats, 37-3

HOUSTON (AP)— The Houston Gamblers learned that they can't win by tossing their United States Football League division title on the field.

The Gamblers, remembering a week ago when they narrowly beat the underdog San Antonio Gunslingers, stunned Memphis with a 17-point first quarter Monday night and rolled to a regular-season ending 37-3 victory.

"We didn't have a good game last week so we wanted to look good tonight and get ready for the playoffs," said running back Todd Fowler, who scored twice in the rout.

The victory sends the Gamblers into Sunday's first round of the USFL playoffs with a seven-game winning streak, a 13-5 record and plenty of momentum.

The Gamblers will host the Arizona Wranglers in the Astrodome Sunday in a first round matchup.

"We're excited," Gamblers Coach Jack Pardee said. "In six days we'll have a real battle in the Astrodome against the Arizona Wranglers. We're not in awe of them but we have respect for them."

"We have a week to work and I'll be surprised if we're not tuned up and ready. They've played the best football in the USFL for the past five weeks."

Fowler plunged one yard, Kelly tossed a 21-yard touchdown pass to Scott McGhee and Toni Fritsch kicked the first of three field goals for a 17-0 first quarter lead from which the Showboats never recovered.

Record-breaking quarterback Jim Kelly retired to the sidelines for much of the second half.

"We wanted to keep the momentum," Kelly said. "We need all the help we can go into the playoffs."

Fowler dove two yards in the second quarter for a 24-0 halftime lead. Rookie Gerald McNeil returned a punt 43 yards for a third quarter touchdown and Fritsch added 37 and 29-yard field goals in the fourth quarter.

The Showboats, finishing their season with a 7-11 record, averted a shutout with six seconds to play of Alan Duncan's 18-yard field goal.

"Their defense has improved," said Memphis quarterback Mike Kelley. "They're not giving up as many points and it looks like they've had some change in their personnel."

Showboat Coach Pepper Rodgers said last week's loss lingered.

"We were very tired tonight," Rodgers said. "We played hard last week in our game against Birmingham and we just didn't have much left tonight."

Officer never wears a police uniform

By JOHN WATKINS
Odessa American

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — His unkempt hair, casual clothing and sturdy build cause him to blend with hundreds of other West Texans.

But then that's what he wants — never to stand out.

Jack White actually is wearing his "uniform" as an undercover officer in Odessa Police Department's narcotics division.

But White said there is one outfit he doesn't wear to work — a police uniform.

Narcotics agents no longer necessarily grow long hair and go barefoot as they did in the late 1960s and early '70s. Lt. Jerry Smith, head of the Narcotic Division, said recently.

"Now, they are as likely to be wearing a suit as a baseball cap or a western hat," he said.

White, who uses an assumed name when working undercover, has been an Odessa narcotics agent for 3½ years. The work, he said, is exciting, varied and satisfying.

"Each deal is different," the 28-year-old White said recently, adding that the job is satisfying "when a citizen calls in and tells you about their problem, and you can do something about it."

Often, the police department receives anonymous tips from people who "don't want to get any more involved than that. They've got families," and are disturbed about drugs in their neighborhoods, White said.

An undercover officer occasionally may be isolated from friends and family, Smith said.

"In the nature of the work, you can't associate with friends," he noted.

Smith said undercover officers experience isolation most often when they are in "deep cover," which involves the officer not going to the police station for weeks or even months.

Undercover agents can visit their families, Smith said. But with the exception of the police officer assigned as the undercover agent's contact, all other police associations are discouraged, he said.

While White finds his work satisfying, not all officers share his affection for undercover work, Smith noted.

He said undercover agents are not allowed "to tell your spouse what you are doing." Also, Smith said, more than a few don't like the long hours and the tedious work, such as surveillance.

Department volunteers are screened to insure their work won't hamper their personal lives beyond reason, Smith added.

Most undercover work takes a day or two, he said, but an investigator in "deep cover" for a month or more can sometimes cause the arrest of as many as 40 suspects.

Undercover work, like other police work, also can be dangerous, Smith said.

That danger was demonstrated last December when two narcotics officers were wounded during a shootout at an Odessa motel.

The officers were attempting to arrest a man during the completion of a sale of alleged cocaine to an undercover policeman, according to reports.

However, said White, patrolmen face as much danger as undercover police.

"We know what we're getting into, whereas it happens like that (snap of the fingers) for them (patrolman)," he said.

"We can plan our backup," White added. "They're out there in that car all alone."

Undercover work gets particularly hazardous "when the bust is going down and they (suspects) realize what is happening," White said.

Smith noted, "You're dealing with people of drugs," and some of them carry guns.

Cocaine and methamphetamine users become paranoid with drug use, and "somebody may have shot enough dope or snorted enough coke" to make it unsafe to be in their vicinity when they have a weapon — "because of the paranoia," Smith said.

Sometimes the job is tedious, Smith noted.

"If circumstances say you have to stay in the motel with this crook while the other crook goes and gets the dope, you stay," he said, even if a drug deal takes more than a day.

White said some drug deals happen in a very "cloak and dagger" fashion.

"I think some of them like that," he said.

White said some drug dealers' paranoia causes them to identify contacts as policemen when they actually are not.

In most instances, having a suspect think he is dealing with a cop merely means a deal won't get through and an arrest won't happen, he said. White said he has been recognized only once.

ing yacht a problem

(AP) — Clark guards would go ahead and shut down the highway until it passed," he said.

The trip through Mexico covered only 150 miles, he said, but took four days. The movers began each day at 4 a.m. and didn't stop until dark.

"They had to stop every 90 minutes so the tires could cool down. Even so, they blew out 15 of the 20 tires they started out with," Gray said.

The boat was guarded around the clock, but Gray said he took extra precautions to prevent vandalism. For example, although the boat's 125-pound bronze propellers were shined to look like gold, Gray had them painted dull brown to avoid "attracting the wrong kind of attention."

Since the boat had to take narrow, winding roads and was exposed to desert sands and temperatures of more than 120 degrees, insuring Mariner's Lady also took special precautions.

Gray said no American insurance company would accept the risk.

Going it alone in the Old Dominion

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — You have to hand it to Edythe Harrison. She got what she went after. Some say she got it because nobody else would take it. Edythe Harrison says that's poppycock.

"What I did took planning," she says. "I saw a year ago that was happening and went to work. Just because others didn't see it doesn't mean I won by default. They backed off when they discovered the grass roots support in Virginia belonged to Edie Harrison. That's why nobody would challenge me."

What Mrs. Harrison won, however she won it, was the Democratic nomination to run for the U.S. Senate. Her opponent will be the incumbent Republican, John Warner. Most Virginians know who John Warner is. He used to be married to Elizabeth Taylor. But who is Edythe Harrison?

They know her around Norfolk well enough. She moved here years ago from Michigan, as a 21-year-old bride, and has been on the go ever since, ringing doorbells, telephoning, going around town in one cause or another in a car with EDIE license plates. Her husband, Stanley, is a Norfolk real estate investor.

"I'm a professional volunteer," she said. Just so. She fought for integrated schools, voting rights, health issues, women's issues. She raised money to found the Virginia Opera Association. She also served a term in the Legislature and generally got on the nerves of the Old Dominion's more establishment-type politicians.

But this time she's in a statewide race. Nobody has to tell her she will be tough.

Warner is on a ticket headed by a president regarded as popular in Virginia, a state that hasn't voted for a Democrat for president since 1964 or a Democrat for senator since 1966 and has never, in its entire history, elected a woman to statewide office.

There's more. Warner, a wealthy man himself, had already raised $1.4 million for the campaign before he knew who his opponent would be or even whether he would have one.

When Gov. Charles Robb, titular head of the state Democratic party, tried to recruit prominent Virginia Democrats to take Warner on, six of them, in turn, said no. Nobody asked Mrs. Harrison. "I'm not one of the boys," she said.

"But since when," she said, dark eyes flashing, black eyebrows lifted, chin tilted, "should somebody have to ask permission to run for the United States Senate?"

Sipping coffee with this feisty lady, in the book-lined study of her home in a leafy Norfolk neighborhood, it is transparent that "can't" is not in her vocabulary. That also, it seems, was the governor's conclusion. He had tried to talk her out of running, he said, but "she refused to take no for an answer."

So he went ahead and endorsed her, at the state convention, not only after there was nobody left to oppose her. At this point in a Democratic convention — it is practically a parliamentary requirement — there occurs the ritual singing of the party's unifying anthem, "Happy Days Are Here Again." This time, the candidate had to stand up and lead the singing herself.

All this underwhelming support has left Mrs. Harrison with a problem. Money. It is considered essential in a political campaign, and at least a show of enthusiasm by political leftists is considered helpful in raising it.

Ex-civil rights commissioners criticize Reagan administration

WASHINGTON (P) — A citizens panel that includes six former civil rights commissioners to-day accused the Reagan administration of a "concerted attack" on affirmative action programs that promote minority hiring.

The private Citizens Commission on Civil Rights concluded in an 184-page report that the administration has tried to dismantle the legal apparatus for enforcing affirmative action goals.

The study called on Reagan to "re-examine the opposition of his administration to the affirmative action policies developed and implemented by his five predecessors."

The Justice Department, the report said, should stop trying to overturn court decisions that sanction numerical hiring plans intended to remedy job discrimination.

"The administration has launched a concerted attack on affirmative action remedies in the courts and has sought to weaken regulations governing the use of goals and timetables," the report said.

At the Justice Department, spokesman Mark Sheehan said officials hadn't seen the report and therefore wouldn't comment upon it. But President Reagan, speaking to black appointees in his administration, said Monday: "Contrary to a lot of demagoguery that we're hearing, our administration has moved with vigor and vision in the area of civil rights enforcement."

The 2-year-old citizens' panel is chaired by Arthur S. Flemming, who was fired by Reagan in 1982 as chairman of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights. The other former U.S. civil rights commissioners in the group are: St. Louis lawyer Frankie M. Freeman, former U.S. Solicitor General Erwin N. Griswold, Notre Dame President Theodore Hesburgh, Manuel Ruiz and Rabbi Murray Saltzman.

Members also include former Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., former Labor Secretary Ray Marshall and Eleanor Holmes Norton, former chairwoman of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. The group also includes Elliot L. Richardson, a Cabinet member in the Nixon administration who is running for Senate in Massachusetts.

The report expressed concern that "the utility of affirmative action as a remedial tool is being undermined by attacks on the concept by the Reagan administration and by the administration's failure to enforce laws and policies developed by preceding administrations and upheld by the courts."

Although the report notes the opposition to affirmative action is in the name of promoting a "color-blind" society, the administration is really "promoting political and ideological goals," said William L. Taylor, the panel's executive secretary.

"I think the political goals are to demonstrate to whites that they are on their side," he said.

The administration has weakened affirmative action "by decreasing budgets and enforcement activities and by failing to foster stability in leadership of the agencies which implement the policy," according to the report.

Reagan, in his remarks Monday, said that "under our administration, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission is collecting record amounts of back pay. And since we took office, the percentage of minorities and women service as military officers or holding white collar jobs has risen."
