School panel won't change reform rules

AUSTIN (AP) — New rules concerning social promotions, extracurricular activities and unexcused absences in Texas schools have received a preliminary approval from a State Board of Education committee but the board will have a final say next Saturday.

Jack Strong, Longview, chairman of the Committee on Students, who disagreed with a number of the decisions made Sunday by his committee said he would carry his appeal to the full 15-member appointed board on Dec. 8.

Strong, a former state senator, said he would stress the need for more local control and propose that participation in out-of-class activities be based on weekly grades, not a six-week average.

"What you are doing is prolonging the discussions on our interpretations of the school reform legislation," said Charles Duncan, Houston, a former U.S. cabinet member and member of the Select Committee on Public Education which drafted the bill passed in a summer special session.

In October, Duncan led a majority of the 15-member State Board of Education in defeating Strong's proposal that would allow high school athletes and others in extracurricular activities to make up failing grades without being suspended from their outside-class activities.

SUNDAY'S COMMITTEE sessions follow a 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. public hearing Saturday on the proposed rules at which almost 200 witnesses testified.

At the beginning of the Sunday committee meeting, interim Commissioner of Education W.N. Kirby advised Strong's six-member committee to "resist the temptation to write any rules" concerning a limit of five unexcused absences per semester as provided by the Legislature. He also said the committee should steer clear of instances where the law "is clear but having an unforeseen result," or "loopholing" such as the requirement that students must have a 70 passing grade in all courses to take part in athletics and other extracurricular activities.

Kirby also recommended that many of the proposals concerning promotions be shelved until the Texas Education Agency could get more input from local school districts.

Committee action at the unusual Sunday morning session included:

— Social promotions: Provide that local school boards be allowed to set policy on grade levels for health, fine arts and physical education. Students in language arts, mathematics science- and social studies must have a grade average of 70 in order to be promoted. Efforts to require failing students to attend special tutorial classes was deleted from the committee recommendation.

— Student Absences: The legislative requirement that no student will get credit for a course if he has more than five days of unexcused absences was retained. A provision that would allow failing students to make up unexcused absences by work done at a rate of 150 percent was deleted from the recommendation. The committee retained a provision that local school trustees could approve shortening class periods not less than six times a year for school-sponsored activities such as pep rallies.

— Extracurricular activities: School districts cannot schedule or permit students to be absent from class more than 10 times during the 175-day school year. The five extra days, in addition to the five absences granted all students, could be provided by a local school board to take part in University Interscholastic League activities.

By a 4-2 vote, the committee approved a change that those taking part in athletics and other extracurricular activities must have a grade average of 70 for each six weeks, not for the entire school year.

Strong argued this meant a student could make "As" for three semesters but if they failed the fourth, they could not take part in out-of-class activities.

"I don't think we have the latitude to change it," said Volly Bastine, Houston. "That's what the law says."

Mauro to discuss fencing Canadian River property

Garry Mauro, commissioner of the General Land Office, will discuss the fencing of property around the Canadian River at a special Chamber of Commerce luncheon Tuesday.

Sponsored by the Legislative Affairs Committee, the luncheon will begin at 11:45 a.m. in the Starlight Room of Coronado Inn.

Mauro became the 28th commissioner of the state land office on Jan. 3, 1983, with the responsibilities of managing the 22.5 million acres of public land. His office is second only to the state Comptroller's Office in the amount of revenue generated by a state agency.

In his first year in office, money generated from state lands provided $500 annually for each public school student from the state Permanent School Fund.

Mauro has been credited with changing the agency to an aggressive management style that has both saved tax dollars and earned money for the state. Under his administration, the Land Office has begun a thorough review of all state leases.

The state has already received several million dollars in settlements from two oil companies who were failing to meet the terms of their leases.

Mauro also has instigated a pilot field audit program to insure Texas is receiving its fair share of the revenue from the leasing of public lands. He is also credited with improving cash management techniques to increase state-earned interest by several million dollars each year.

The Veterans Land Program, which Mauro presides over as chairman, also has benefitted. When he took over as commissioner, there was a backlog of 14,000 veterans waiting for loan applications, with processing of the loans taking up to a year and a half.

Now there is no longer a waiting list and loans are processed within 90 days.

Mauro also has instituted the Texas Veterans Housing Assistance Program, with 70 percent of the voters approving funding for the program. Veterans now can apply for a low-interest loan of up to $20,000 toward the purchase of a home.

Another of his new programs is the Texas Natural Heritage Program. Its staff inventories the state's vast biological resources and compiles the information centrally for easy access. The program is designed to facilitate economic development while identifying and protecting environmentally sensitive areas.

Mauro also has changed the agency's Records Division, which houses thousands of rare historical documents. He has brought in a professional archivist to organize and preserve the documents for easy public access.

His improvements in the General Land Office have earned Mauro the acknowledgement of many groups and organizations across the state. The Texas Jaycees named him one of the five Outstanding Young Texans of 1983.

A native Texan, Mauro attended Texas A&M University, graduating in 1970. He then entered the University of Texas Law School, graduating in 1974.

State Rep. Foster Whaley will introduce Mauro at the luncheon.

Between the hours of 1 and 7 a.m. Oct. 23, 1984, unknown persons entered and burglarized several businesses in South Pampa. Police investigation has determined that these burglaries are related and possibly committed by the same persons.

Burglarized were Ruby's Drive-In, 709 S. Gray; Little Mint Lounge, 714 S. Gray; and the Busy Bee Cafe, 410 W. Maple. Coin-operated machines were burglarized, food and cigarettes were taken. Estimated loss at the three business is $1,500.

Crime Stoppers will pay up to $500 for anyone giving information leading to the arrest and indictment of the persons responsible for these burglaries. Anyone with information about this crime or any other crime can report it and remain anonymous by calling 669-2222.

New drug may combat many diseases

DALLAS (AP) — A drug that has been called a "wonder drug" for the way it fights the body's mechanism to reject transplanted organs may also be helpful in the treatment of multiple sclerosis, arthritis, diabetes and other diseases, scientists say.

The University of Texas Health Science Center in Dallas, along with a dozen other medical centers, will begin researching the effect that the drug, cyclosporin, has in treating immune system illnesses, the Dallas Times Herald reported today.

"We know it works in transplants," said Dr. David Winter, director of medical research at New Jersey's Sandoz Laboratories, the firm which manufactures the drug. "If it does work in others we may have just inadvertently hit upon an unusual compound that will make a major difference in medical therapy."

The diseases to be studied include juvenile diabetes, multiple sclerosis and rheumatoid arthritis, ailments which result when the body's immune system malfunctions, destroying cells and tissues.

Forty patients in Dallas will be treated with cyclosporin, said Dr. Richard Tindall, the neurologist heading the study at the University of Texas Health Science Center.

Panhandle Field cooperation necessary, attorney says

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

A renewed spirit of cooperation is needed to settle disputes over oil and gas rights in the Panhandle Field, says Amarillo lawyer Pat Long.

Addressing the annual officers election banquet of the Texas Panhandle Chapter of the American Petroleum Institute at Pamcel Hall Saturday night, Long said, "It's a sad time when the parties can't get together" and instead the matters between oil and gas men in the area have to be sent to Washington, D.C., for settlement.

Long, who represents the Harrington Foundation as intervenors for the Harlow Corp. in its lawsuits with Dorchester Gas Producing Co., said oil and gas businesses used to work among themselves to settle disputes and reach agreements.

BUT NOW A situation of increasing lawsuits in recent weeks "has made this entire field into a state of chaos," with the majors filing suits against independents and independents filing countersuits, he said.

The matters should have been solved at the local level or at least within the state, under the rulings and regulations of the Texas Railroad Commission (TRC), he said. Now both the majors and the independents are facing federal interference in what should have remained a states right matter, he claimed.

"Unfortunately, the fight was taken to Washington, the most political of all places," Long said. He referred to the cases pending before the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC).

Saying he would "try not to be an advocate for either side," Long discussed the issues involved in the Panhandle Field fight, basically a dispute over who has the rights to casinghead gas.

Though matters in the past couple of years have centered over claims to casinghead gas, the issues "extend far beyond the Panhandle Field," he claimed.

THE BATTLE SHOULD not be seen as just between the majors and the independents, he said. Instead, the disputes concern a wide range of matters, including field rules established by the TRC, the need for clarification of definitions and statutes, the use of liquid separators and the matter of states rights, he suggested.

Long indicated the disputes have arisen from the unusual geological qualities of the field, which had unusually abnormal low pressures for the oil and gas when the field was first discovered.

After a TRC hearing in the 1930's on field rules revealed a number of the formations and strata in the field had basically the same pressure, the state agency ruled the field to be a common reservoir, Long explained.

"We're still fighting today over what the effect of that order is," Long stated.

The TRC established oil and gas ratios in 1935 in attempts to classify wells as oil producing or gas producing, he noted. Under other rules, the agency further established rules allowing one oil well per 10 acres but only one gas well per 640 acres.

An additional factor, arising somewhat from the classification of the field as a common reservoir, has been the production of oil and gas from the same formations, Long explained. Adding to the confusion has been the very frequent aspect in the field of having oil and gas rights "farmed out separately," he said.

ALSO CAUSING PROBLEMS has been the increased value attached to casinghead gas in the market, with the so-called natural gas taking a secondary position to casinghead gas, he said.

Under established rules, natural gas wells are "held back" because of established allowables permitted in production. "Oil wells (the main source of casinghead gas) basically have no allowable," Long said.

The current disputes arose from the use of separators to turn gas into liquids, he explained. Many field operators have claimed the resulting liquids to be crude oil, which they have used to maintain their oil-gas ratios to keep their oil well classifications.

Responding to a request from TUCO, Inc., the TRC initially approved the use of refrigeration units and other separators, without placing any limits on their use. But the agency reserved the right to change its mind if other operators complained, said Long, who had represented TUCO.

Basically feeling the field rules had been changed, several majors instituted complaints before the agency and through the courts.

DESPITE THE HARDSHIPS and hard feelings developing, the main purpose of the majors initially had aimed at clarifying the field rules, the agency's definitions of gas and oil and the system for classifying wells, Long explained.

The TRC has conducted a number of hearings in the past two years, but "there's still no ruling yet," Long said.

"We all knew it wouldn't come out before the election" because the pending decision has become "a politically sensitive issue," he stated.

But other issues have been added to the disputes, further complicating matters, he said. One of the major issues has been federal regulations concerning the dedication of gas to specific markets and the establishment of pricing controls.

This has involved the federal government in matters that should have been left to the states, Long claimed.

"Once dedicated, always dedicated," Long said. "Once the feds get hold, they never let go, just like the tax man."

OTHER ISSUES INVOLVE old contracts separating oil and gas rights - do they extend to casinghead gas? - and their effect on lease titles; the overlapping of well perforations in different strata, the oil-gas ratios, the different acreage allotments for oil and gas wells and definitions for casinghead gas, crude oil and other matters, Long explained.

Turning away from the former practice of settling such disputes among the parties involved, now the majors and independents are fighting in other areas - the court houses, the TRC and FERC, Long stated.

"The controversy has escalated," he declared with the independents, investors and landowners facing economic hardships.

"A conscientious effort to defuse this situation" is needed now "to keep the feds out" of the state's business, he advised.

No recession seen in near future

WASHINGTON (AP) — No new recession is looming in the first part of next year, but a downturn could well arrive toward the end of 1985 or the start of the following year, a national group of business economists said today.

Their views, tabulated in a new forecast survey, are less optimistic than those of Reagan administration officials who are projecting steady economic growth for years to come. However, the survey also shows no sign that business analysts are greatly upset by recently negative government economic reports. Talk of a new business downturn has increased in the light of a rash of such negative reports, including one showing a drastic third-quarter slowing in overall economic growth and another showing the third decline in five months for the government's main economic forecasting gauge.

However, today's release covering the new quarterly forecast survey of the National Association of Business Economists quoted association president Ben E. Laden as saying:

"The message from the forecast is clear: The slowdown is not the beginning of a recession."

Gas leak kills more than 200

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — More than 200 people were killed and several thousand became ill when they inhaled poisonous cyanide gas which leaked from a Union Carbide insecticide plant in central India, the United News of India reported today.

The news agency said its correspondents counted about 200 bodies in several hospitals in Bhopal, the capital of Madhya Pradesh state, about 370 miles south of New Delhi. Several thousand people were taken unconscious to hospitals, UNI said.

Miller heads local API chapter

The Texas Panhandle Chapter of the American Petroleum Institute elected new officers during its 52nd annual banquet Saturday night at Pammel Hall.

Tom Miller, Texaco employee, was named chairman. He had served in the past year as first vice chairman for the area association.

Other officers elected by acclamation include Jerry Reno, with Phillips in Borger, first vice chairman; Joe Curtis, Exxcel, second vice chairman; and Charles Howell, Northern Natural Gas Pipeline, third vice chairman.

Harold Cochran, Amoco, was named treasurer. Serving as secretary will be Gary Stinnett, Texaco.

Guest speaker was Pat Long, Amarillo attorney. He discussed issues in the current ongoing battles over oil and gas rights in the Panhandle Field. (See related story page 1)

Presiding at the meeting was Skip Armin, outgoing chairman, who noted the annual banquet has been held continuously since 1932.

Armin discussed the accomplishments of the chapter during the past year. The annual golf tournament raised funds to provide three $1,000 scholarships, three for $750 and four for $500. The chapter has given more than $37,000 in scholarships to area students, Armin said.

Chapter members also have provided civic projects, including keeping old Texas Railroad Commission reports for the area, helping local Desk and Derrick clubs teach college level petroleum courses and assisting with career days at Pampa and Borger schools, he said.

The chapter currently has 296 members, Armin said.

John Anderson, Advisory Committee chairman, presented the slate of officers for election. He also presented service awards of merit to Armin and outgoing secretary - treasurer Jim Felts for their service in the past year.

Mayor Calvin Whatley, special guest at the banquet, presented a Top of Texan certificate to Anderson, who is being transferred to Tulsa, Okla., as a result of the recent merger of Texaco and Getty Oil.

Whatley said Anderson had been "an influential citizen and person" in community activities in Pampa during his years here with Getty. He presented the certificate, signed by Whatley and Pampa Chamber of Commerce President Claude Cone, to Anderson "on behalf of the citizens of Pampa" with "our sincere appreciation."

Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan delivered the invocation for the banquet, attended by approximately 125 persons.

City commission sets special meet

Pampa city commissioners will have a special called meeting at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday at City Hall.

The commission will consider action to adopt a resolution to assign an amount of bond ceiling to the Amarillo Health Facilities Corporation.

The resolution concerns the issuance of health facilities bonds from AHFC to finance construction of a new medical facility in Pampa, previously approved by the commission.

In other matters, commissioners will meet in an executive session to discuss personnel matters.

School trustees to consider budget change on Tuesday

Trustees of the Pampa Independent School District will consider an amendment to the 1984-1985 budget during their regular meeting at 5 p.m. Tuesday at the Carver Educational Service Center.

According to Jerry Haralson, business manager, the amendment is necessary because of increased emphasis on state compulsory education in the current school year funding.

The budget figures will be increased by approximately $6,800 to cover expenditures of the state compensatory education funds.

In other business, the board members will consider awarding bids for sound equipment for the Pampa High School auditorium and for classroom furniture and equipment.

The trustees also have scheduled two possible executive sessions to consider purchase of property and personnel matters.

Israelis' plans could help remote arid land

DALLAS (AP) — Irrigation methods used successfully in Israel could make dry West Texas land blossom, Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro has been told.

Mauro is to decide this week whether to proceed with recommendations from two Israeli scientists who suggested setting up demonstration farms, spokesman Mike Connolly said.

The Israelis, David Ityel and Moshe Fink, are employed by the Israel's state-owned water company, Tahal.

Their report was based on visits last month to state-owned land in far West Texas.

"The Israelis submitted a very optimistic report," Connolly told

The Dallas Mornings News. "We want to move quickly but not hastily."

The Israelis recommended two sites, one in El County and the other in Reeves County, as demonstration farms. The scientists also viewed sites in Hudspeth and Culberson counties.

Connolly said that Ityel and Fink did not conduct on-site experiments, but simply viewed the sites after visiting Austin to research the land's geology and other features.

The state owns 22 million acres of land, some of it with oil and gas rights, the income from which is dedicated to state universities. But 1 million acres of land west of the Pecos River have no petroleum and produce less than $3 a year in grazing lease income. One-fifth of that acreage produces no income at all because of lack of water.

"Our first goal is to make land more valuable so we can make a bigger rent and more money for the school fund," Connolly said. "Second, by taking a look at advanced water management techniques, we put a little spotlight statewide on the need to better manage water."

Parts of Israel and West Texas are similar in that they average less than 12 inches of rain a year and underground water supplies can be salty.

The land commissioner's office financed the $14,000 expense of the Israeli's preliminary report.

White delays extradition request

DALLAS (AP) — Alabama's attorney general — not Texas Gov. Mark White — is delaying extradition proceedings for a Dallas-area condominium developer accused of fraud, an aide to White says.

Montgomery County prosecutors have tried for nine months to extradite developer Clifford Ray Sinclair, a White campaign contributor, The Dallas Morning News reported Sunday.

But Press Secretary Ann Arnold told The Associated Press Sunday that the governor was awaiting word from Alabama's attorney general as to whether there was a serious intent to prosecute Clifford.

"I don't think there would be any delay (in approving the extradition) once he got an affirmative response," said Ms. Arnold, who characterized the case as "unusual," since the request had been rejected by a previous governor.

The News reported last December that Sinclair was wanted by Alabama officials on charges of theft by fraud during the time in which he was coordinating loans to fund condominium projects near Lake Ray Hubbard, east of Dallas.

Investors in the project told the newspaper that the developer solicited campaign contributions for White at a December 1982 breakfast in Garland.

The News said a total of $65,000 was raised, but Ms. Arnold said the actual amount directly contributed by Sinclair was only $500.

She also denied that the money had anything to do with delaying the extradition.

"Certainly not," she said, adding, "Contributions are never considered in any way in any business of the governor's office — and certainly not in extradition," she said.

In addition to the Alabama charges, Sinclair is the focus of a probe by state and federal authorities who have been investigating his role in condominium development in eastern Dallas County, where more than $500 million in questionable loans led to the glut of condominiums and the collapse of a Empire Savings and Loan Association, which was declared insolvent, the newspaper reported.

In Alabama, Sinclair is charged in a 24-count indictment that alleges that almost $4,000 in advance fees was collected in 1977 from Alabama residents who were told that the money would cover expenses of locating loans. The service was to be provided by Sinclair's Diversified Financial and Management Services, based in Plano, where he then lived, The News reported.

Ms. Arnold said Alabama's original extradition request was denied by then-Gov. Dolph Briscoe in 1978 and that the case is now six years old.

In 1978, Briscoe wrote to Alabama officials that "Mr. Sinclair had not misled any citizen of the state of Alabama and had engaged in a legitimate loan brokerage operation."

Alabama officials did not dismiss the charges after Briscoe denied the request and on March 2 of this year, Alabama Gov. George Wallace signed a second extradition request.

Ms. Arnold said the delay in Sinclair's case is "not unusual." She said that cases in previous years had been pending longer than Sinclair's, but the newspaper reported that records in the governor's office criminal justice division show that the developer's is the oldest of the cases filed in 1984 that are still awaiting the governor's signature.

Lewis: didn't know horse racing fund raiser for him

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Texas House Speaker Gib Lewis angrily denies a lobbyist's claim that Lewis attended a fund-raising luncheon sponsored by backers of legalized horse race gambling.

The lunch was held three weeks before the speaker's announcement that he was "warming up" to pari-mutuel betting, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Sunday.

The newspaper quoted Lewis as telling them he was unaware the event was a fund-raiser or that it had anything to do with horse racing.

"...There was no fund-raiser held with that intent with my knowledge," Lewis said when asked about the luncheon, the newspaper reported.

However, Dick Ingram, recently hired by the Texas Horse Racing Association as a lobbyist, said Friday that he and fellow racing lobbyist Ricky Knox put on the Nov. 8 event at Austin's La Mansion Hotel.

Of 30 people invited, 24 attended, Ingram said.

"We asked them to bring $1,000 per person. Some brought less, some brought more. We raised $24,000 to $28,000," Ingram told the newspaper.

Guests included members of the horse racing board and their guests, Ingram said.

"We did it very openly as people interested in horse racing who put it on. It was fairly well apparent," Ingram said.

The lobbyist said he made a 5-minute talk about the benefits of horse race betting to the Texas economy and that Lewis spoke for about 30 seconds. "He said, 'Thank you. I think you've got some valid arguments, and I'll take a long hard look at it. I think we rang some tunes in his ears.'"

Lewis angrily denied being feted to a fund-raiser by horse-racing interests, the newspaper said.

Lewis said he remembers only "having lunch with a bunch of business people" who were in town to attend a fund-raiser for Lieutenant Gov. Bill Hobby that same day.

"It was not a fund-raiser by the horse racing people. If Dickie (Ingram) told you that, he was wrong. If that was perceived as a horse racing luncheon, I guess you could say it was a banking luncheon or a construction luncheon because people were there from those interests, too," Lewis told the newspaper.

Before the luncheon, Ingram said, he and Knox asked for contributions to Lewis' speakership campaign fund. They asked people to write personal checks rather than draw on political action committee accounts, he said. This is because state law forbids political action groups to donate to speaker races.

Tower touted as governor candidate

DALLAS (AP) — Top Texas Republicans already are planning their 1986 statewide campaign — and they want John Tower at the top of the ticket.

Tower, retiring after nearly 24 years in the U.S. Senate, bid goodbye Saturday to GOP officials. And he repeated his vow not to run again for public office.

"If the president should ask me to perform some public service, I'd feel a strong obligation to do it," Tower said. But as for mounting a gubernatorial campaign, Tower told GOP leaders in Austin, "I ain't running." The Dallas Morning News reported.

That, however, doesn't convince some party leaders.

"John Tower may think he's through with public service, but I don't believe it," Tower's successor, Phil Gramm, told members of the State Republican Executive Committee, which met to assess last month's election.

Gramm pledged his support, even in a contested primary, if Tower can be persuaded to run for governor in two years.

"John Tower is going to come to miss being involved in fighting for the things that he's believed in all his life," Gramm said. "And when you have deep convictions as our senior senator does, you're not content to simply watch others carry the ball."

However, although Tower said he would eagerly consider any offer that President Reagan might extend, he seemed adamant about his retirement from elective office.

"I intend to be politically active, but I do not intend to run for office again," Tower added.

At least a half-dozen other

Republicans are considered possible gubernatorial candidates, including former Dallas Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach, Dallas computer magnate H. Ross Perot, state GOP chairman George Strake, Amarillo oilman T. Boone Pickens, and Houston attorney Jack M. Rains.

When he steps down from the Senate next month, Tower has said he will teach political science at Southern Methodist University.

While encouraging Tower to run for governor in 1986, Gramm had no such urgings for any GOP hopefuls for lieutenant general.

"I've always worked well with Bill Hobby, and I don't encourage anybody to run against him," Gramm said, calling Hobby a fine public servant.

Gramm also suggested that Republicans in the Texas House of Representatives forget about trying to organize their own minority, despite gaining 15 representatives in the General Election to become a 52-seat bloc in the 150-member lower chamber.

Newspaper a teaching aid

Did you ever stop to ponder on the great learning opportunities the daily newspaper has for our children?

Many of us frequently read it and toss it aside without taking full advantage of all the learning that a newspaper offers the young people. The newspaper has something in it for everyone and can be used to supplement every subject from reading readiness to health.

Although the following ideas are not original, they will help you get your children hooked on the newspaper:

—Help your children read about famous people in the newspaper, such as politicians, athletes and actors. Your child might try keeping a scrapbook about famous people in the newspaper by clipping pictures and articles.

—Young people in your family would enjoy finding pictures of special days and pasting them in scrapbook to make a holiday or special day coloring book. This activity is great for developing oral language.

—Comic strips are great to help children develop their skills in sequence and story telling. If you will cut the panels apart and mix them up, your child can place them in correct order and tell the story.

—Children enjoy collecting articles from the newspaper that take place in various parts of the state, nation or world. Use a map and attach the article to its location on the map.

—Have your child clip a movie ad that is of interest. Discuss the rating, such as "G" or "PG" before deciding whether your child should see the movie. If the movie is based on a book, your child might be encouraged to get the book from the library and read the book in addition to seeing the movie, and compare the book version with the movie version.

—If your child loves to cook, recipes are great for helping them follow printed directions. Let your child buy the ingredients and see what the recipe costs. This would be great for children to learn math, reading to follow directions, nutrition and health. Supervision may be needed. These kinds of practical applications of skills are worth the mess they create.

—If your child is learning the alphabet, let him or her cut out words in the headline and start with a certain letter of the alphabet. The child would enjoy pasting them in alphabetical order on butcher paper.

—Frequently classified ads have abbreviated forms of familiar words. Encourage your child to make a list of these abbreviations and then try to figure out the words from the context of the ads. Using context clues is one of the most used reading skills, so you will be reinforcing two important reading skills - abbreviations and context skills.

—If your first or second grader is learning vowels, help him or her find words such as "long - A" words. You can do this with any vowel principle.

—As you and your children use the newspaper you will think of other ideas for making good use of the newspaper. Be sure you teach your child to pick up the mess.

The newspaper can have great influence on adults and children. Because reading is of such high priority in our schools, the newspaper is a great resource for helping children practice reading skills at home.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Back to gold standard?

Unfortunately most of us have very short memories, even about important subjects - such as money and interest rates. Otherwise we would be clamoring for relief from the present incredible combination of relatively low inflation at 4 percent, and interest rates of 10 - to - 13 percent.

There is, after all, only one reason for such seriously high "real" interest rates - and that is the use of fiat or paper money with no other backing, and no intrinsic value of its own.

For most of U.S. history, our money was based on relatively fixed amounts of gold and silver, and our interest rates reflected only a very small "inflation premium" - and until the 1970s these rates rarely exceeded 3 - 5 percent. From 1945 to 1965, for example, the interest rate on three - month Treasury bills averaged 2.4 percent, and the prime rate averaged 3.2 percent. From the late 19th century until 1933, states, municipalities, and even some utilities, could sell 100 - year bonds at 1 - 2 percent interest rates!

The reason for all of this, of course, is that under a monetary "rule," such as gold, or silver, or the gold - linked Bretton Woods Agreement, inflation was low to nonexistent.

At last summer's Dartmouth Conference on Alternative Monetary Regimes, Prof. J. Huston McCulloch of Ohio State outlined on the blackboard the basic wholesale price index from 1790 to 1983. Until 1933, the line was essentially LEVEL, gyrating up and down, but always returning to the same level.

McCulloch said, "Please note that the wholesale price index was 28 in 1833, 28 again in 1862, and 28 again in 1880, 1914, and 1933. That represents 100 YEARS of long - term price stability all under a basic gold - standard regime."

By contrast, since 1933 when we abandoned the gold standard, and especially since 1971 when we severed the final international link to gold, the wholesale price index simply shoots straight up, right off McCulloch's chalkboard chart, reaching 285 in 1983 - ten times it's 100 - year average under gold.

Does this mean that under gold there was no inflation or price instability? No. Indeed, because of fluctuations in the production of gold itself, there were periods of surprisingly rapid inflation - but almost always followed by periods of sometimes painful deflation.

As the distinguished monetarist Anna Schwartz told the Dartmouth Conference, "The gold standard did not provide short - term or long - term price stability, but it did provide long - term price predictability." In other words, under gold, prices would rise and fall, but would always tend to revert to the mean value.

Dr. Schwartz said, "However imperfect the record of price behavior under the gold standard, in its favor, inflation rates were never as high and variable as in the post - World War II period."

"Moreover, because the gold standard promoted long - term price predictability, it provided incentives...to make long - term private contracts (bonds, investments, etc.) which are vital for the efficient operation of a market economy."

Schwartz shows that under the gold standard from 1879 - 1913, before the advent of the Federal Reserve, the average annual rate of wholesale - price inflation in the U.S. was 0.1 percent per year compared with 2.8 percent from 1946 - 1979 and 9.2 percent from 1971 - 1981. In other words, the further our money departed from gold and silver, the higher the inflation rates soared.

While Dr. Schwartz, who collaborated with Milton Friedman in his Nobel - prize - winning research on monetarism, is no public fan of the gold standard. Her 47 - page Dartmouth analysis concludes that the record of the gold standard is "respectable."

She also admits that "the record under the present regime of discretionary fiat money has been one of high and variable inflation and interest rates, low productivity growth, and unstable foreign exchange rates."

She also admits the "fundamental hurdle to a successful return to the gold standard is the resistance of political authorities and modern democracies to precommitment and to forswearing of discretion." In short, strong political leadership - and fiscal discipline.

But as the Dartmouth Conference also demonstrated, it also required overcoming the institutional bias of the economics and "risk - management" professions.

As Chase Manhattan economist Dick Zecher told the conference, "The high - risk environment of a fiat (paper) money system has created a whole new structure of financial instruments and institutions designed to manage this risk."

"So," he said, "the only real problem with going back to a gold standard is how do you get there from here? How do you overcome the institutional inertia of the risk management and discretionary policy bureaucracies (i.e. the Federal Reserve) that it would destroy?"

Thus, just as the tax lawyers and accountants are bucking tax reform, the "risk - managers" are fighting monetary reform.

Some 'mandates' don't last long

Now that the orgy of election celebrations is behind us, life goes on. Has anything changed?

Ronald Reagan has a mandate, some pundits tell us, but a mandate for what? For his promise to cut taxes and whack away at the federal bureaucracy?

There were those who told us Reagan had a mandate in 1980. They say the voters agreed with his promises to cut taxes and whack away at the federal bureaucracy. What happened? Income tax rates were reduced, then some other taxes were increased. The federal bureaucracy grew.

Is Reagan's win this time a mandate for his rhetoric or his actions, or is it simply a reaffirmation that he is a popular person, just like the winner of your grade-school class presidency.

Possibly neither. Perhaps in this presidential election those who voted did so for themselves. The economy has improved, the sense of the possible has been restored and, for many, life is comfortable. The Mondale message of doom and gloom—higher taxes and nuclear war—didn't stand a chance against a feeling for comfort and control.

But problems remain. Even without Mondale to increase government spending programs, the federal deficit remains a threat to the good feelings people have for a resurgent economy. Will Reagan take the next four years and whack away at the government's wasteful spending?

Will he—mindful that he does not have to face the voters in four years—take the initiative to put a cap on the pork barrel? Or will he—mindful of congressional elections in two years—continue the compromises of his first term that sabotaged his rhetoric? Politics, after all, is the art of compromise, an art that it necessarily in direct conflict with efficiency.

Reagan remains committed to a strong defense, but will he in this term draw a line far short of a blank check for the Pentagon? Or will he, as opponents charge, use developments in the Middle East and Central America to buttress ever-increasing demands for defense spending?

Only time will tell what Nov. 6's events have wrought. But there is this sobering reminder from the history of elections past: the last two presidents to roll up huge popular and electoral margins similar to those of Reagan were Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon.

Today in History

Today is Monday, Dec. 3, the 338th day of 1984. There are 28 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On Dec. 3, 1967, a team of surgeons in Cape Town, South Africa, headed by Dr. Christiaan Barnard performed the first human heart transplant. Louis Washkansky received the heart of a young woman who had died in an auto accident. He lived 18 days.

On this date:
Ten years ago: Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., entered a hospital after his fellow Democrats took steps to remove him as chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee. The effort to oust Mills came in the wake of the congressman's public association with a strip-tease dancer, Fanne Foxe.

Five years ago: Eleven young people were trampled to death when thousands of rock fans rushed the doors of Riverfront Coliseum in Cincinnati to get into a concert by the British group The Who.

One year ago: A tentative agreement was reached to end a month-long strike by Greyhound employees.

Paul Harvey

Too few and far between

It may say 'LADIES' or it may say 'WOMEN' in any of three languages. Or it might include a line drawing of a skirted figure, thus to communicate in any language.

But whatever it says on the door it is likely to be an Olympic distance beyond the evermore convenient 'MEN'S ROOM.'

Why?

Because more architects are men, utterly oblivious to the singularity of female physiology. Whole cities have been constructed by men smart enough to span the sky with a bowstring truss, yet too dumb to know that women have to stop and go more often.

The problems are two: physiological makeup and makeup. A woman also needs a place to primp.

Presently there is a widespread whispered protest against those public buildings where the powder rooms are too few and too far.

Women are telling women which theatres are "not worth the wait."

From Chicago's cavernous Arie Crown Theatre there is no relief. The lobby line is longer than the intermission and the only optional comfort station is in a restaurant a city block away.

Either way, twenty - to - one, you'll never make it.

Chicago's Auditorium Theatre, on the other hand, offers more stalls - but at the bottom end of an endless marble staircase.

Women are subtly voting a preference in restaurants based more on their restrooms than on their kitchens.

The Ladies Room off the Drake lobby in Chicago is duly noted as properly equipped and maintained.

Perhaps nowhere are Chicago and visiting women more dehumanized than by the smelly, primitive, wholesale plumbing at Wrigley Field. Any woman knows pregnant women who have had to stop going to church in the third month because they can't make it up the stairs and down the hall to the single stall lav.

Women in ski lodges, motivated to militancy have been known to "take over" post guards and use for themselves an unoccupied Men's Room as well as their own overcrowded one.

Granted, adequate public washrooms neat and functional, are costly. But it pays.

The fashionable Scottsdale, Ariz., outdoor shopping mall suffered diminished traffic until merchants demanded the city provide convenient, clean public restrooms.

After which traffic measurably increased.

What irony, that it was women who brought indoor plumbing to the America frontier - yet here and now they are relegated to the way - out - house again--

All dressed up with no place to go.

Responsibility of business

SPRING, Texas (NEA) - Twenty-five years ago, Edward Mason, then dean of Harvard University's business school, propounded this perplexing question:

"If the Constitution were to be rewritten today, how would rights and duties be redefined, what role would be assigned to the business corporation and what limitations imposed?"

Two years ago, hundreds of business, government and academic leaders gathered here to discuss and debate that question at a three-day Woodlands Conference on Sustainable Societies on the future role of the corporation in the nation and the world.

Now, the most provocative contributions to that conference are available in newly published book that advances a compelling case for enhanced social responsibility on the part of the business community.

"A number of business leaders appear to be deeply committed as individuals to seeking solutions for the global problems arising out of the world's finite resource base," Robert S. Stecker, an assistant vice president of American Telephone & Telegraph, noted in a paper presented at the conference.

"But, with rare exceptions, the massive talent and monetary resources of corporate America have been involved only in very incidental ways," he added.

"What will be needed," suggested Stecker, "is a new definition of the legal entity called a corporation to include a requirement for active support of and resource allocation to the long-term goals of society."

What he and other conference participants alluded to is a radical departure from contemporary practice because it is likely to involve mandatory federal chartering and government oversight of corporate behavior.

There is, however, no justification for assuming that the Constitution authorizes laissez-faire economics. Indeed, that document specifically grants to Congress the power "to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several states."

Moreover, until the beginning of the 19th century, the issuance of a corporate charter routinely required passage of special authorizing legislation in many states.

Today, however, the conventional wisdom embraced by many business executives holds that a corporation's only obligation to society is to generate increasing profits for itself.

"Put bluntly - and perhaps too harshly - that means that in theory corporate greed results in the national or societal interest," Arthur S. Miller, a widely respected constitutional lawyer, suggested in a conference paper.

"With enormous assets, often running into tens of billions of dollars, (corporations) are concentrations of economic and therefore political power not before known in human history," added Miller.

"They clearly have a responsibility to those over whose lives they exert enormous influence - employees, customers, suppliers, shareholders and others."

"Because private industry has been so associated with material progress and because rapid material growth is seen by many to be in conflict with the sustainable society concept, business is frequently looked on publicly more as part of the problem than as part of the solution," acknowledged S. Bruce Smart, chairman of The Continental Group, Inc.

Dear Abby

Readers say it's time to shut the door on trick-or-treaters

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Shame on you. Your campaign to abolish the tradition of trick or treat on Halloween is unreal. Why deny children the fun of dressing up in costumes and going from door to door to show off and collect a few treats just because a few rowdies have abused the custom?

I usually agree with you, Abby, but this time I think you were wrong to suggest ending a cherished tradition that is second only to Christmas for some children. Please let us know how the voting went.

LOVES CHILDREN
IN MILWAUKEE

DEAR LOVES: My readers voted 500-to-1 to abolish trick or treat.

Please understand, I see nothing wrong with dressing children (under 12) in costumes and sending them around the neighborhood to show off and collect a modest treat, but trick or treat has escalated to extortion by teen-age hoodlums. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Congratulations for having the courage to suggest that trick or treat be abolished.

I refuse to spend my retirement money for candy or anything else kids don't need.

I'm no Scrooge, but each year on Halloween, I turn off my lights and hide upstairs, reading by flashlight until the dread hours of trick or treat are over.

W.K.H., LEXINGTON, KY.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for condemning trick or treat. It's high time somebody did.

A few years ago I opened my door to a band of trick-or-treaters and gave them some good apples. They took them, threw them on my lawn and started to threaten me, so I quickly shut the door and called the sheriff. I was told, "It's only a game. It's Halloween!"

The next morning my lovely white brick wall had been spray-painted red and my windows had been pelted with eggs. When I told my neighbors I was outraged, they said I was "un-American."

Please run that column every year, Abby.

S.M.F. IN COLORADO

DEAR ABBY: Bravo for you! It's time someone suggested calling a halt to trick or treat. As an older person living on a fixed income, I can't afford to buy candy for kids who throw it in the street because it's not the kind they like. (One band of fully grown hoodlums demanded menacingly, "Never mind the candy, let's have some money!")

My neighbor (another elderly woman) handed out homemade cookies, only to find her lawn was covered with them the next morning.

DISGUSTED IN IOWA

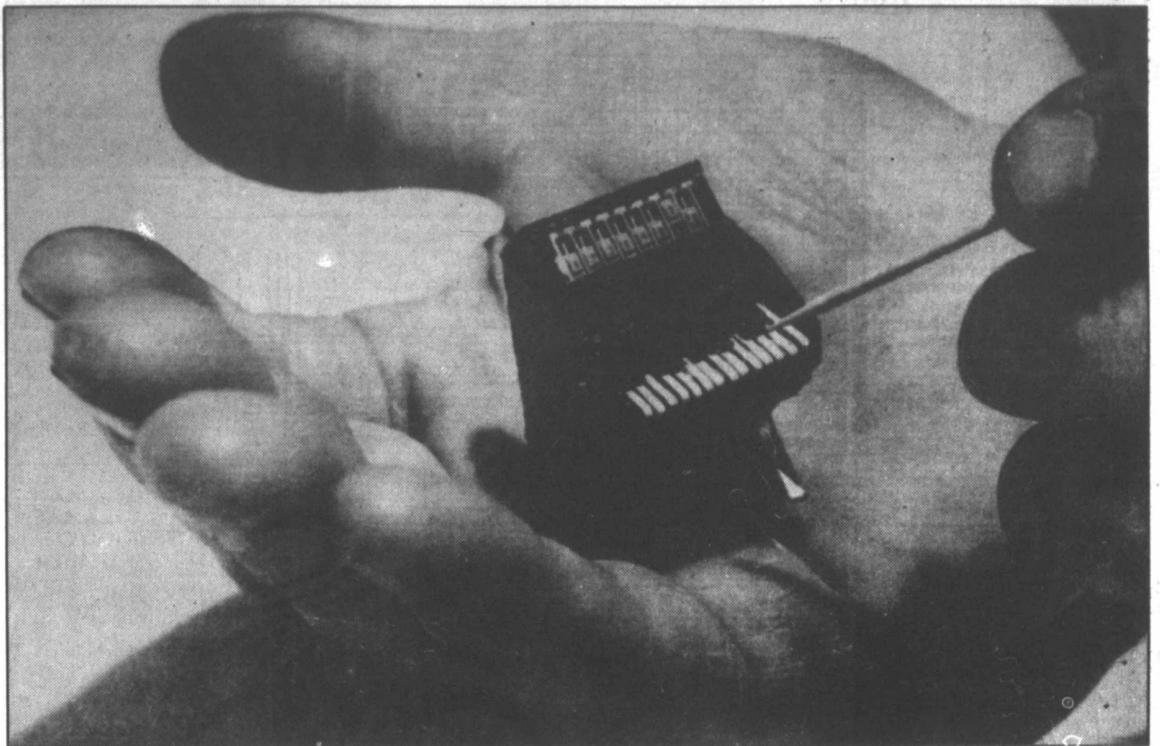

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I agree that trick or treat should be abolished. When our children were small, we followed the crowd and went along with it. When they came home after touring the neighborhood, there would be squabbles over which sibling had the better "haul." Much of what they brought home gathered dust until Christmas. Then it was thrown out.

Each year Halloween grew increasingly repugnant to us. As you say, "It's legalized blackmail"—a poor concept to instill in children. Finally after several years of dreading Oct. 31, I thought, "Why should I go against my principles to follow the sheep?" So, instead, on Halloween we took our children to a restaurant for a festive dinner.

They never felt deprived, and I hope they respect us for holding out against a bad custom. It's a shame more parents don't put down a firm foot and behave like responsible guardians.

House inspection washes out

DEAR BRUCE WILLIAMS: Several months ago we purchased our first home, and after hearing your views on the subject, we hired an engineer to inspect it.

He inspected almost 300 items — if his list could be believed — and told us that the purchase was perfectly OK. Last week the furniture in our bedroom was ruined, absolutely ruined, and I'm sick. It was ruined because the roof leaks, and leaks badly.

It's apparent that the roof has been leaking for at least a year because of the discoloration in the wood around the leak. What can we do? — H.L., Durham, N.C.

DEAR H.L.: One of the reasons you use an inspector is to determine if the home is worth purchasing and I applaud the decision.

I may not agree with your choice, but let's face it, all of us make mistakes in hiring professionals. It may also be that he is a perfectly competent professional that made a mistake on this occasion.

In any event, he should be liable for his errors. He is the expert and you paid him as an expert. He told you there was no leak and, in fact, there was a leak at the time of his inspection.

I would consult with him and see what his opinion is, or what action he's prepared to take. If he says, "too bad," then it is time to see your attorney and start an action against him for professional error.

If everything is as you described it, there's little doubt that he'll be obliged to make up your losses.

DEAR BRUCE WILLIAMS: My brother promised our mother shortly before she died that he would act as her co-executor along with me. After he agreed to this, we were named as co-executors in her will.

Well, my mother passed away recently and my brother says he doesn't want to be bothered. Can he do that? Since he was named co-executor of the will, can he just say, "I don't want to be bothered" and leave it all on me? — D.K., Ann Arbor, Mich.

DEAR D.K.: He can. A will is a meaningless document until after the testator dies. Your brother was named your co-executor, but until your mother died there was no appointment.

Once he accepts the office, he must carry out your mother's wishes in accord with the laws of the state where your mother lived. But there is no obligation on his part to accept the appointment. He can just walk away. Frankly, if your brother doesn't want to do the job, it may be just as well. You, in turn, can be the sole executor of your mother's estate.

You really don't need a lawyer if it's a modest-sized estate. You might want to talk to an attorney and say, "I want some advice and will pay for it, but I'll do the leg work and the running around." That way, you can keep expenses to a minimum.

Wacky SWC season leaves four in bowls

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

University of Houston Coach Bill Yeoman no longer had to avoid thinking about being in the Cotton Bowl.

The Cougars are in the Cotton Bowl, the Texas Longhorns are in the Freedom Bowl, Southern Methodist is off to the Aloha Bowl and Texas Christian will go to the Bluebonnet.

After one of the wackiest Southwest Conference seasons on record, everybody has a place to go.

The Cougars, who will face Heisman Trophy winner Doug Flutie and his Boston College teammates in the New Year's Day Classic, just took a round-about way of getting there.

"I don't think there's any question this team has overcome more adversity than any other I've had," Yeoman said following a regular season ending 38-26 victory over Rice.

"The kids have worked hard and just gotten better and better and it's all a matter of frame of mind. Until your head is right, you don't have a snowball's chance in a hot place."

While the Cougars were winning a trip to the Cotton Bowl and a share of the SWC title for the fourth time since joining the SWC nine years ago, Texas A&M continued the upset flavor of the season with a 37-12 victory over 13th ranked Texas and Southern Methodist defeated Nevada-Las Vegas 38-21.

The Aggies, closing out with a 6-5 record, stuffed Texas' offensive ground game, holding the Horns to 80 yards.

"Give the credit to the coaches," defensive end Rod Saddler said. "They told us that Texas cannot run the football on us if we play our game and they were right. The coaches had us prepared for the game. All we had to do was go out and play hard."

Houston's Raymond Tate capped a 205-yard rushing performance with a 72-yard touchdown run late in the game to go with runs of 1 and 27 yards for the Cougars.

"We've been standing around all season waiting for Raymond Tate to run like that," Yeoman said. "The big plays started coming when Raymond Tate started running faster."

Houston and Southern Methodist share the title with 6-2 records but the Cougars are the Cotton Bowl hosts by virtue of a 29-20 victory over the Mustangs.

Houston captured SWC titles in 1976 and 1979 and won it outright in 1978 and in each case they had to defeated the Owls to advance.

Rice ended its season with a 1-10 record and extended its SWC losing string to 25 in a row.

The Cougars finished the regular season at 7-4. Texas will be taking a two-game losing streak into the Freedom Bowl.

"We're going to get ourselves together, get jacked up, practice hard," Texas Coach Fred Akers said.

Texas, which lost to Baylor 24-10 last Saturday, was hoping to rebound but A&M quarterback Craig Stump threw two touchdown passes, Anthony Trone scored on runs of 2 and 3 yards and Eric Franklin kicked three field goals in the A&M upset.

"This was the greatest win we have had at Texas A&M," Coach Jackie Sherrill said. "There were a lot of people who jumped ship this year. The media did, some of the fans did, and some of the former students did. But a lot of people knew this wasn't a sinking ship and we proved it last week and tonight."

Freedom Bowl Director Tom Starr denied Texas' loss had tainted the post-season contest.

"Any time a first year bowl can get teams the caliber of Texas and Iowa, it's great for our bowl," Starr said. "I do feel sorry for the Texas seniors because I know the Cotton Bowl is the epitome of Southwest Conference football."

Marino's record, Raiders' victory

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Dan Marino grabbed the record. The Los Angeles Raiders grabbed the game.

The defending Super Bowl champions responded to playing a first-class opponent as they usually do — with timely defense and superb offense. The Raiders used three touchdown runs by Marcus Allen and a pair of Mike Haynes interceptions, including one he ran back 97 yards for a score, to outlast the Miami Dolphins 45-34 Sunday.

It was the fifth time in as many tries that a Tom Flores-coached Raider team has beaten a Don Shula-led Miami squad.

Marino threw four touchdown passes for Miami, which had been 6-0 at home, to set a National Football League mark for TD tosses in one season with 40. But his two mistakes which Haynes returned for a total of 151 yards and Allen's skills were too much for the Dolphins, now 12-2.

If the Raiders manage a victory or tie in either of their two remaining games — against Detroit and Pittsburgh — they'll earn at least a wild-card berth.

Dallas and the New York Giants climbed back into a deadlock with Washington for the NFC East lead at 9-5. The Cowboys blitzed Philadelphia 26-10 and the Giants beat their local rivals, the Jets, 20-10. The Redskins had outscored Minnesota 31-18 Thursday night.

Seattle and Denver took opposite routes to clinching playoff berths Sunday. The Seahawks, now tied with Miami for the AFC's best record after belting Detroit 38-17, lead the Broncos by a game in the West. Denver was upset by Kansas City 16-13 but sneaked into at least a wild-card spot when New England was beaten 33-10 by St. Louis.

The Patriots can only make the playoffs by winning their last two games while the Raiders lose their final two.

The AFC Central tightened up because of a pair of overtime contests. Houston edged Pittsburgh 23-20 and Cincinnati beat Cleveland 20-17. The 7-7 Steelers lead the Bengals by one game.

The Los Angeles Rams remained in the NFC wild-card hunt with a 34-21 verdict over New Orleans. San Francisco, which already has clinched the NFC West and the best overall record in the conference, finished off a perfect road season with a 35-17 win at Atlanta.

Elsewhere Sunday, it was Buffalo 21, Indianapolis 15 and Green Bay 27, Tampa Bay 14.

Tonight, Chicago — the NFC Central champion — is at San Diego.

Cowboys 26, Eagles 10
Tony Dorsett gained 110 yards despite suffering a slight concussion to go over 1,000 yards for the seventh time in eight years. The Cowboys' defense kept them on top as QB Danny White suffered through an 8-for-25 performance with five interceptions.

Oilers 23, Steelers 20
Joe Cooper's 30-yard field goal

6:53 into overtime as Houston handed Pittsburgh its first overtime loss ever. The Steelers are 5-1-1 in OT.

Seahawks 38, Lions 17

Dave Krieg threw a club-record five touchdown passes to lead Seattle to its eighth consecutive victory. If the Seahawks win their final two games — against Kansas City and Denver — they will be the AFC West champs.

Cardinals 33, Patriots 10

St. Louis stopped making turnovers — it had 19 in the last four games — and forced a key fumble by Craig James that linebacker Thomas Howard ran in for a touchdown in the first period.

Ottis Anderson rushed for 136 yards to pace the Cardinals, 8-6 and one game in back of the pack in the NFC East.

Harvesters capture consolation crown

ROSWELL, N.M. — Rodney Young scored 27 points to lead Pampa to a 51-43 comeback win over Los Cruces, N.M. Saturday night to take home the consolation trophy in the Roswell Invitational Tournament.

The Harvesters had lost to Palo Duro in Thursday's opening round, but bounced back to defeat Roswell Junior Varsity Friday night in the loser's bracket.

Pampa fell behind 20-12 in the first quarter, but thanks to the hot shooting of the 6-2 Young the Harvesters rallied to knot the score at 26-all at halftime. Young scored 19 points in the first half, missing only one shot from the floor. He ended up hitting 13 of 16 field goal attempts.

A basket by Jeff Gaines and a foul shot by Paul Simpson gave the Harvesters their first lead, 29-26, at the 4:02 mark of the third quarter. The Harvesters never trailed again and led by as many as 11 points in the fourth quarter.

Mark Appadaco was high scorer for the losers with 17 points.

Also scoring for Pampa were Jeff Gaines with nine points, Simpson, five; Richard Rogers and Petey Davis, four each, and Dunivan Lewis, two.

Young and Gaines had 11 rebounds apiece as the Harvesters owned a 34-29 advantage on the boards.

Pampa, now 4-2 on the season, plays at Garden City, Kans. tonight. Los Cruces drops to 1-2 on the season.

Jayvees win Borger title

BORGER — The Pampa Jayvee junior varsity won the championship of the Borger Jayvee tournament with a 51-50 victory over the host Borger team Saturday night.

Matt Martindale had 16 points, Mike Lynn 10 and Lonnie Miller turned in a strong rebounding effort in the championship game.

Borger won the tournament opener Friday by defeating Dumas 54-52. Lynn had 14 points in that game.

The victory boosts the local Jayvees' record to 4-2 for the season. They play in Garden City, Kan., tonight, then will be hosts for the Pampa Jayvee tournament this weekend.

WAITING FOR ACTION—Chicago Teachers Union member Raymond Holland waits for the union's House of Delegates meeting to begin Sunday. The delegates voted to reject the Board of Education's lastest offer. The union began striking at 7 this morning, idling 430,000 students. An estimated 28,000 teachers and 12,000 non-teaching members are on strike. (AP Laserphoto)

Strike closes schools

CHICAGO (AP) — The nation's third-largest public school system ground to a halt today, its 430,000 students told to stay home until further notice after the union representing 40,000 teachers and other school employees called a strike. Talks broke down early Sunday morning despite a Board of Education offer that satisfied one of the union's most pressing demands, on medical insurance. Other major issues in the dispute are pay and the school board's cost-cutting plans. Negotiations were set to resume at 1 p.m. today, and Board President George Munoz said, "We are determined to work for a speedy resolution of this matter." Munoz declined to respond to questions about the strike. "All Chicago public schools are closed until further notice," Orpen Bryan, a deputy schools superintendent, said at a news conference Sunday night as the board drew up contingency plans for the strike. Chicago Teachers Union President Jacqueline Vaughn said the strike would begin at 7 a.m. by 28,000 teachers and 12,000 non-teaching union members, and would last at least through Tuesday, regardless of whether a settlement were reached today. Meanwhile, the Board of Education, Chicago Parks District and other groups set up contingency programs. Police gang crimes officers planned longer shifts to deal with the mass of idled students. The school board began setting up instructional programming for students of all grades over a public radio station beginning Tuesday, Bryan said. Students were given homework Friday and told to take their textbooks home in anticipation of a strike, he said. The Chicago Park District announced Sunday that hours at 117 of its parks would be extended to provide activities for idle school children. Democratic state Rep.-elect Juan Soliz set up a learning center for about 1,000 students and a group called New World Christian Ministries said it would begin offering alternative programs. "It's a tragic situation and the blame lies squarely on the backs of the members of the Chicago Board of Education," Ms. Vaughn said after a meeting of the union's House of Delegates.

Casey reportedly okayed the Nicaraguan psy-war program

WASHINGTON (AP) — The decision to hire a psychological warfare expert who wrote a controversial manual for Nicaraguan rebels emerged from a mid-1983 meeting of senior CIA officials, including Director William J. Casey, according to U.S. government officials. But the officials said the initial decision by senior officers is not examined in a still-secret CIA inspector general's report that recommended disciplining six mid-level agency officials, some of whom claimed they were being made "scapegoats." The government officials also said that investigations into the manual have found no evidence that Casey or other top CIA officers specifically ordered that a booklet be written or knew about its advice on how to use violence to "neutralize" Nicaraguan government officials. The officials spoke only on condition that they not be identified by name. But one official said some of the punished CIA officials contended the manual reflected a "command-and-control problem" and that some blame should fall on the "people who recruited (the expert) and dispatched him" without adequate guidance. According to that view, the decision to conduct a psychological warfare program represented a poorly designed, high-level order given to an overzealous operative to carry out, the official said.

The inspector general's report, however, concluded that mid-level officials were to blame for failing to properly supervise the psychological warfare expert, known by his pseudonym John Kirkpatrick, and production of the 90-page manual, entitled "Psychological Operations in Guerrilla War." After being recruited during the summer of 1983, Kirkpatrick wrote the manual in October of last year. Besides the "neutralize" section, the original version called for hiring professional criminals to carry out "selective jobs," creating a "martyr" for the cause, and coercing Nicaraguans into carrying out rebel assignments. The House Intelligence Committee has scheduled a hearing Tuesday on whether the manual violated a presidential executive order barring U.S. involvement in assassinations or a 1982 law prohibiting the CIA from trying to overthrow the leftist Nicaraguan government. Four government officials, who discussed the steps that led up to Kirkpatrick's hiring, said the decision came out of a June 1983 meeting in Tegucigalpa, Honduras. None of the high-level officials reportedly involved in the decision to hire a psychological warfare expert was disciplined, and CIA spokesman George Lauder said none of them would comment publicly
