Preacher opposes Mobeetie's 'satanic' school play

BY JEFF LANGLEY Senior Staff Writer

WHEELER - Demons could possess Mobeetie High School students if they put on a scheduled production of the play "After Midnight Before Dawn," the Rev. Ricky Pfeil has warned.

Pfeil, a fundamentalist Wheeler preacher who has drawn nationwide attention with his protests against 'R' rated movies, has begun a campaign against the play, now in rehearsal at Mobeetie high. He said the devil himself may take control of the Mobeetie students' minds, if the show isn't canceled.

"It can start with nightmares, depression, frustration, and could lead to demon possession. Pfeil said about the possible fate awaiting the Mobeetie

High School players.

Mobeetie school principal W.F. Howard Jr. called Pfeil's latest protest a ridiculous misinterpretation of an innocent, one - act, UIL contest play.

Howard said the play, which Mobeetie students will present in a University Interscholastic League contest later this month in Wheeler, was approved for school productions by the UIL. Superintendent Bob Mickey also approved the Mobeetie school show, Howard said. And outside of the Rev. Pfeil, "No criticism has been made of the play," he added.

But the Panhandle's most famous, or infamous, protesting preacher warned of dangerous consequences of the school play. Pfeil has protested the scheduled show in broadcasts during his daily, AM radio show and in a news release sent to the media

The play uses occultic terms and witchcraft ritual, incantations and Satanic dancing," Pfeil's news release says

The play ends with (the student actors) reciting 'The Lord's Prayer' backwards, which is witchcraft style," it says "the promotion of witchcraft and satanism in public schools needs to be exposed.

Pfeil told the Pampa News today he became interested in the Mobeetie play about two weeks ago when a resident there sent him a copy of it. He said he read it, became alarmed, and phoned Superintendent Mickey to set up a meeting

Pfeil said Mickey was only interested in finding out who gave the preacher the copy of the play. He said the superintendent refused to discuss the play and "hung up on me."

Howard said Mickey was out of town today and unavailable for comment.

The school principal said the play, set in 17th - Century England, recaps the whole issue of persecution over witchcraft. In the play, six prisoners await execution after being accused of practicing witchcraft. Howard said the plot of the play is similar to the situation in this country, such as the Salem witch trials, when people could be accused and put to death for witchcraft.

"You can read anything you want into it. He has misinterpreted it. Some of the preachers here read it, and they didn't interpret it that way. It's none of his business." Howard said "It's been approved by the UIL. We haven't violated any law," the principal said.

He said the Mobeetie speech students will present the play in the Mobeetie school auditorium later this month. Then, on March 13, the students will present the play at the Wheeler High School in the UIL competition.

"I'll be there," Pfeil said, adding that a public appeal is the only protest he plans at this time.

The preacher said his concern is for the Mobeetie students He also said it angers him that students in public schools can put on a play about the

Gemayel seeking to deal with Syria

By FAROUK NASSAR Associated Press Writer

Lebanese President Amin Gemayel remained in Damascus today to confer again with Syrian President Hafez Assad, but Lebanon's state radio said the two leaders already had agreed on a process to cancel the troop withdrawal pact between Lebanon and Israel.

Assad, who has supported Druse and Moslem rebels in their fight against Gemayel. led a red-carpet welcome for the Lebanese president Wednesday at Damascuse airport The men met twice during the afternon but neither side issued a statement on the talks, which could determine the future of Lebanon's government

Lebanese state radio and Beirut newspapers did not spell out details of the reported process for scrapping the troop withdrawal pact, as Syria has demanded. But the reports today said the Gemayel-Assad accord was a prelude to a new cease-fire in Lebanon's civil war, fresh reconciliation talks between Moslem and Christian factions and formation of a national coalition cabinet

The Soviet Union, meanwhile, vetoed a U.N. Security Council resolution which would have replaced the multinational force in Lebanon with U.N. peacekeeping troops, and U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger visited Marines on ships off the Beirut coast.

In Beirut, a car bomb exploded Wednesday evening outside a 12-story apartment building near the state television station in the Moslem sector Police said three civilians were killed and 34 were hospitalized with injuries

Police said today that six more people were killed and 30 wounded in fighting during the night between the army and anti-government militiamen Fires were reported throughout the city and a small bomb went off at International College, an American-run high school, but no injuries were reported there.

Syria has some 30,000 troops in Lebanon and is supporting the Druse and Shiite Moslem insurgents who have driven Gemayel's army out of west

Beirut and much of the area to the south

Gemayel has offered to meet Syria's demand that he scrap the May 1983 pact with Israel, which called for both Syria and Israel to withdraw their troops from Lebanon simultaneously. But Syria has rejected his conditions and Gemayel's right-wing Christian backers are pressing him to maintain the accord

Gemayel is offering reforms that would give Moslems, a majority in Lebanon, an equal share of power with the Christians

Gemayel also hopes to get a commitment for Syria to withdraw its troops from northern and eastern Lebanon if he cancels the accord with Israel, said one source, who declined to be identified.

Gemayel's visit to Syria is his first since he took office on Sept. 23, 1982. A diplomatic source in Washington said Gemayel turned to Syria after the United States last week rejected his plea for additional air and naval firepower against the rebels.

Six states darkened by outage

By CAROLYN SKORNECK Associated Press Writer

Traffic lights went out, movie theaters scrapped showings and restaurants had to serve cheese and crackers by candlelight when a blackout hit parts of six Western states for up to 21/2 hours, putting 3 million utility customers in the dark.

authorities said Officials today were trying to determine what caused a major north-south power transmission line to fail Wednesday night in northern California, darkening parts of California, Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico. Utah and Texas

The 500-kilovolt Pacific Gas & Electric Co. power line went out at 5:43 - . p.m. PST. affecting a huge. interconnecting power grid. While lights in some cities flickered for just a few minutes, electricity in other places was not restored until 8.05 p.m.

EL PASO, Texas (AP) - The failure of a major transmission line left most of El Paso County's 480,000 residents without power for a short time, officials say.

Scott Ehret, a spokesman for El Paso Electric Co., said the checkerboard pattern of outages began at about 6.45 p.m. MST Wednesday and lasted for up to an hour

He said there was no evidence the El Paso outage was related to Iraq claims seven Iranian ships are sunk in gulf

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) - Iraq said today that its air and naval forces sank seven Iranian ships in the northeast corner of the Persian Gulf, and Iran said it advanced deeper into Iraq with a new ground offensive

Baghdad Radio, monitored in Nicosia, said the sinking of the seven Iranian "naval targets" vessels was part of the Iraqi blockade of Iranian ports which was declared Monday, the same day Iraq reported attacking the Iranian oil terminal of Kharg Island

The radio announcement did not say what sort of vessels were attacked today, but said they were sailing north toward the port of Bandar Khomeini. Iran issued no statement on the Iraqi claims, although on Wednesday it had criticized the presence in the gulf of U.S. warships, which are intended to prevent Iran from trying to blockade

the critical oil route through the Strait of Hormuz

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency reported today that advancing Iranian troops seized a strategic bridge in the Talaygadim-Nashwa area east of Iraqi oil port of Basra during fighting overnight

By midmorning, the Iranians were erecting a prefabricated bridge over a 50-yard-wide canal south of Tanaya.

IRNA said

Earlier today, an Iraqi military spokesman speaking over Baghdad Radio said Iran attacked Wednesday night east of of Basra and established footholds along the front line of Iraqi defenses

The spokesman said members of Iraq's 3rd Army Corps, assigned to protect the city, were besieging the attackers

Both sides claimed they had inflicted heavy casualties on their foes. Iraq reported shooting down two Iranian jets. Iran said it downed one Iraqi plane

Iraq said on Monday that 30,000 Iranian troops had been killed in a three-day battle. On Wednesday, Iraq said 5,462 more had been killed on Tuesday

City okays issuance of bonds

By LARRY HOLLIS Staff Writer

Meeting in special sessions Wednesday evening and this morning. Pampa city commissioners passed an ordinance permitting the issuance of more than $1 million in general obligation refunding bonds.

Proceeds from the Series 1984 bonds of $1.324.000 will be used to refund the $864,000 certificates of obligation, Series 1981, and the $460,000 certificates of obligation, Series 1982. The 1981 and 1982 bonds were delivered on an installment basis to finance street and drainage improvements in connection with the widening of Hwy. 70. These certificates are currently held by First National Bank and Citizens Bank and Trust Co., both of Pampa.

The new bonds will be sold through Schneider, Bernet and Hickman, Inc. of Dallas, who are serving as underwriters for the issuance of the bonds

Before passing the ordinance on first reading last night, commissioners approved a resolution authorizing the funding of claims and accounts from the previous series of bonds into certificates of obligation. The change was deemed necessary because of new federal laws regarding the issuance of city bonds.

Commissioners also adopted a resolution authorizing American National Bank of Austin to serve as registrar and paying agent for the new series. New laws require a registrar to keep a list of registered owners of bonds. The agent has to be a member of the Federal Reserve Center The bank will receive a fee of $500 for the first year and $250 for each succeeding year as agent for the city bonds. ANB had the lowest fee of banks contacted by Schneider, Bernet and Hickman.

The new bonds will be sold in $5,000 denominations. A representative of SB&H reported the two local banks have already agreed to purchase nearly $1 million of the new series.

Payments for paying off the new series will remain the same as already budgeted by the city, requiring no increase in payments. The city also will not need to have any increase in the ad valorem tax rate to pay off the bonds and interest.

ILY RECORD Revived candidate Hart sets his sight on South

By WILLIAM M. WELCH Associated Press Writer

Gary Hart, trying to capitalize on his New Hampshire victory, heads south today seeking delegates as Walter Mondale challenged him to campaign head-to-head in the region where the next big round of Democratic presidential primaries loom.

Hart was making a quick tour of Alabama, Georgia and Florida, three of the states holding primaries on Super Tuesday, March 13, and where he has trailed the former vice president in local polls.

Mondale, holding the organizational edge in the South, campaigned in Dixie a day ahead of Hart. And struggling to regain his front-runner's title, Mondale threw down a challenge to Hart to battle him for the region's convention delegates.

"I challenge Mr. Hart to bring his campaign to the whole South," Mondale said in Atlanta. "I challenge him to amongst themselves. "That'll stir things up," said Reagan. Reagan-Bush campaign spokesman John Buckley said, however, he thought Mondale was still in a strong position.

Meanwhile, the field of Democratic candidates began shrinking in the cold light of New Hampshire's numbers.

California Sen. Alan Cranston announced he was dropping out of the campaign after finishing seventh in the eight-man race, with just 2 percent of the vote, and eighth-place finisher Reubin Askew of Florida said he would decide by Friday whether to continue. "I know when to dream and when to count votes," Cranston said.

Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina, who finished sixth, planned to withdraw too, his campaign money drying up, said a campaign aide who refused to be named. Other candidates looked to the next round

> Ohio Sen. John Glenn returned to Washington to regroup after his third-place finish in New Hampshire and planned a southern campaign swing, too, including stops in Montgomery and Auburn, Ala.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson also looked south, campaigning in Mississippi and calling his fourth-place finish in New Hampshire a victory of sorts. In Hattiesburg, he called his showing "a high moment in American and black history."

Former Sen. George McGovern pinned his hopes on Massachusetts, the only state he carried as the 1972 nominee and where the Democratic primary is also on Super Tuesday. If he finishes worse than second there, he said, "you'll see the most graceful exit you've ever seen in a long time."

Pfeil's crusade against the restricted movies brought the attention of the national news media. Last Friday, Pfeil appeared live on the ABC news program "Nightline." He was interviewed by Ted Koppel on the program, which also aired a segment recapping the dispute between the preacher and Nall. The Los Angeles Times, Variety, and the TV show 'Entertainment Tonight," have also featured stories on the Wheeler movie dispute. The CBS news program "60 Minutes," has also begun the initial work of producing a segment on the story for that program.

"Only in America could something like this take place. Only the American economic system allows people a second chance," Braniff president William Slattery said at Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport Braniff collapsed in 1982 under a $1 billion debt. The nation's eighth largest airline reorganized in bankruptcy court and resumed service as a carrier one-third its previous size with significantly lower cost.

Braniff officials said the first flight pushed off from the gate about 10 minutes late because flight attendants couldn't get reporters off the aircraft. "We have to prove ourselves 152 times today." Slattery said. Braniff executives staged a ribbon-cutting in the jetway leading to Flight 200 to New Orleans, which was scheduled to depart at 6:50 a m crov:d of several hundred people, most of them either employees or passengers, cheered as the boarding announcement for the inaugural flight was made Retired pilot Glenn Shoop was instrumental in putting Braniff back in" the air, but he's an unlikely savior. He's not wealthy enough to pump millions into a failed airline, not expertly trained in business or bankruptcy, not a lawyer and not even looking for work. Yet when Braniff took off today and resumed service after its two-year grounding. Shoop was sitting on the board of directors.

"How could I feel any better? Somebody will probably have to pull me down off cloud nine," Shoop said on the eve of Braniff's first flight since 1982.

It was Shoop and his friends who, when Braniff International Corp. appeared to be headed towards liquidation, piqued the interest of Hyatt Corp. President Jay Pritzker and his family

Hyatt's $70 million infusion led Braniff out of bankruptcy and made possible Flight 200

It was Shoop and his friends who drafted a business plan for a revived Braniff. The plan called for 30 airplanes and 2,200 employees serving 20 cities. Braniff's route system calls for 19 stops with 30 Boeing 727-200 aircraft and 2,200 employees.

"We were so naive that we thought it could be done," Shoop said Wednesday. "We put together an operating plan ourselves and oddly enough, that's the plan that's being put into effect. Jack Murdock, the pilot of Fligh lost his job after 27 years with Braniff but worked tirelessly with Shoop to resurrect the airline.

grounded in bankruptcy court.

Although travel agents have reported encouraging bookings for the slimmed-down airline, Braniff will face the unfriendly skies of the crowded and competitive Dallas-Fort Worth market. dominated by giant American Airlines

Shoop, ever confident, says American will be responding to Braniff. "The is the new way to run an airline -American is going to find that out," he said.

Braniff's start is the largest one-day startup in airline history.

The flights were the first for the airline since May 12, 1982, when the company called home its fleet and shut down, filing for bankruptcy protection the next day with debts of $1 billion. The airline and its 8,000 employees became the first victims of the Airline Deregulation Act of 1978, which cleared the way for more competition and fare wars.

Autry hopes life will be spared

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) - Death Row inmate James David Autry, who lay strapped to a gurney with needles in his arms for 90 minutes last October. says he still hopes his life will be spared so he doesn't have to go through the ordeal again.

"I haven't given up. I still believe I have a chance." said Autry who has been ordered put to death by lethal injection before sunrise March 14.

The 29-year-old inmate was sentenced to death for the April 1980 slaying of a Port Arthur convenience store clerk.

He was strapped to a gurney with intravenous needles in both arms when U.S. Supreme Court "Justice. Byron White granted a reprieve less than 30 minutes before Autry was to be executed at 12:01 a.m. Oct. 5.

Facing that prospect again, Autry on Wednesday described his feelings. "It's more of a dread this time. It was all fear last time," he said.

The March 14 execution date is the fourth one given Autry. He was granted stays from the three previous dates.

Autry, nicknamed "Cowboy" by fellow inmates, is the first of four Texas death row inmates scheduled to die within an 18-day period in March. Autry's attorney. Stefan Presser, claiming it would be cruel and unusual punishment to make the inmate endure the agony again.

An attorney for the Autry's mother, Shirley Stucker of Florence, Colo., is asking the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles to recommend that Texas Gov. Mark White commute the sentence to life in prison.

Autry said he has written a letter to the parole board.

"I told them I want to live. I love my family very much and they love me We've become closer in the past year. I don't want to be taken from them," he said

His narrow brush with execution. Autry said, has affected his feeling toward life and toward the death sentence.

"That just made me want to live that much more. And it made me think that the public doesn't really know what executions are," Autry said. If this execution is to be carried out, Autry said he wants it to be televised.

"If you read about it in the newspaper, it really doesn't sink in," he said. "The polls show that the majority of the people favor the death penalty. If they want the death penalty, they should not be opposed to watching it."

The Texas Board of Corrections said it will consider whether to allow cameras into the death chamber on

"He knows there a real

March 12, less than 48 hours before Autry is to be killed.

But Autry said he doubts that the execution will be televised.

"I don't believe they will allow the cameras in there. They don't want people to know what really happens in there. They can do what they want to if there are no cameras," he said.

Autry appeared calm and relaxed during an interview at the Ellis Unit of the Texas Department of Corrections. but he admitted that he was nervous.

"I believed in God before all this happened, but now it's even stronger. It helps keep me calm and helps keep me hoping." Autry said.

Autry said he believes his case has been hurt largely by the prosecutors' claim that he killed store clerk Shirley Drouet rather than pay for a six-pack of beer. He said that the prosecutors have never been able to prove their claim.

Autry maintains he never fired the shots that killed Mrs. Drouet and a former Catholic priest, and which permanently crippled a Greek sailor. But he said he is sorry that it happened.

"Everyone says it's bad to say you're sorry because it makes it look like you are guilty," he said. "I'm innocent, but I'm still sorry it happened. I'm sorry to see anybody get killed.

EL PASO, Texas (AP) -Officials say a government helicopter's flight over the El Paso area has failed to detect radioactive pellets that might have been brought into the country from a Juarez junkyard.

Federal, Texas and New Mexico officials said at a news conference Wednesday that the aerial survey began earlier in the day

The pinhead-sized pellets came from a cancer. treatment machine stored in a Juarez hospital warehouse since 1977. In November, a hospital electrician broke open the machine, stole a 44-pound, steel-and-lead cylinder that contained a capsule of cobalt 60 pellets and sold it to a junkvard for $10. authorities said

The pellets were accidentally mixed with scrap metal at the junkyard. David Lacker, head of the Bureau of Radiation Control. at the Texas Department of Health, said Mexican officials found a few of the pellets on a highway between Juarez and Chihuahua City, about 220 miles to the south. He said health officials fear the pellets might have adhered to the tires of a car and been carried away. The helicopter will prepare

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its bles-sings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and dropped by 2.5 percentage points, the best sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consis- job performance of any U.S. economic tent with the coveting commandment.

Lebanon lessons don't come easily

The U.S. government seems determined not to view its Lebanon experience as something from which lessons might be learned.

The war-torn country is in shambles, and many of the inhabitants, justly or not, blame the United States. The Marines have withdrawn to ships offshore. The government the United States supported in on-again-off-again fashion may soon collapse.

Has the White House thought that using Marines to bring sweetness and order in a land of a thousand factions is not a prudent use of U.S. power? Has anybody considered that the Middle East, a land of ancient and bitter rivalries, is not a place likely to yield easily to yet another call from the United States to put aside all those hatreds and sit down to negotiate?

To the contrary. The president says the retreat is not really a retreat and we're still bullheadedly determined as ever to make those folks listen to reason.

To demonstrate the U.S. commitment to peace, we lavish weapons on Jordan and listen politely while Jordan's Hussein and Egypt's Mubarak say the key is to negotiate with the Palestine Liberation Organization. That would predictably make the Israelis, justifiably or not, more nervous than usual.

Is this the way to defuse tensions?

Would it be an unendurable loss of face to admit that the U.S. government has not demonstrated the magic touch required to impose peace on the Middle East? The more it involves itself in local disputes, the less credibility it has as an "honest broker" rather than as a participant in the feud?

Isn't it time to totally withdraw from the fray to contemplate the lessons of the past, to give those in the region the chance to come to a settlement themselves without direct U.S. intervention.

Of course it is. But we learn these hard lessons slowly, and, it seems, only with the unnecessary cost of American lives.

Warren T. Brookes Reason for the U.S. jobs boom

Economic forecasters have made so many mistakes these past four years, it's always nice to report someone who got it right.

On March 27, 1983, this column reported that an economic forecast model prepared by two Ohio University economists, Richard Vedder and Lowell Gallaway, predicted that we were headed for "a major jobs boom." "Since that column appeared, U.S. employment has risen by more than four million jobs, and unemployment has recovery

This "jobs boom" surprised all of the major economic forecasting services, including even those few "supply - side" services that correctly predicted the rise in the nation's Gross National Product.

The only economists I know who were NOT surprised are Vedder and Gallaway. who in Dec. 1982 produced a 30 - page monograph for the Joint Economic Committee of Congress (JEC) under the forbidding title "The Natural Rate of Unemployment.

In this monograph they present a rather simple "supply - side" incentivist model of how the job market works. They argue that when labor costs are rising more slowly than the combination of prices and productivity (otherwise known as "final sales") employers will naturally have an incentive to hire more people to increase profits still more. But, when labor costs begin outpacing final sales, employers have no choice but to lay people off, and recession occurs

The model shows that whenever the gap between unit labor costs and the combination of the Consumer Price Index (CPI) and productivity is "favorable" (labor costs rising slower than final sales) you can expect solid employment growth, to the degree of the gap. When the gap disappears, you are at "equilibrium" or the "natural rate of unemployment." And when it turns unfavorable (labor costs rising faster than sales), you are headed for recession and higher unemployment.

During the last two quarters of 1982, this "gap" suddenly turned moure favorable than it had been since 1976, and it continued to get more favorable throughout 1983 - and the job market boomed right along with it.

Indeed, the gap was more favorable last year than any time since 1965, with the "final sales" growth rate at more than 7 percent, while unit labor costs rose only 2.4 percent for the year and 3.5 percent the last quarter

This means that the U.S. economy could generate another four million jobs during 1984 - bringing the unemployment rate by October - November down to as low as 6.5 -6.8 percent

In fact, Wayne Ayres, macro - forecaster for the (First National) Bank of Boston, and no wild - eyed supply - side dreamer, told us that the Bank is forecasting four million new jobs in 1984. "I admit," he told us, "this makes our own unemployment projection for the last quarter of 7.5 percent seem to negative, but it all depends on what happens to the labor force, and how many new workers will be attracted by the strong recovery.

As this column noted in October 1981, one of the things that would help reduce unemployment is the declining growth rate in the population, and the labor force - which last year grew only 1.3 million, the smallest increase since 1964.

Even if the labor force grows by 1.5 million in 1984, another four million job growth year would bring unemployment down to 6.5 percent by year - end.

Perhaps the most heartening aspect of the employment boom we are now experiencing is that it totally refutes those central planning naysayers who have been telling us that the U.S. economy can't produce new jobs anymore, without massive central planning and government credit ("Industrial Policy").

As Peter Ducker reminded us in a brilliant article in the January 24 Wall Street Journal ("Why America's Got So Many Jobs"): "The U.S. economy now has about 10 million more jobs than even the optimists predicted 15 years ago. In Japan, jobs these past ten years have grown about 10 percent, only half the U.S. rate (21 percent.) In Western Europe there are now three million fewer jobs than there were in 1974.'

Indeed, in the decades since 1971 the U.S. has created four times as many new jobs as Western Europe and Japan combined.

Why? Drucker says it's because "For about 10 years now ... nearly all job creation has been in small and medium - sized businesses, and practically all of it entrepreneurial and innovative businesses." In contrast, the Fortune 500 have lost around 3 million jobs during the past five years, Drucker notes.

Thus, the darlings of the supply - siders, the small and innovative businesses, have given us our job boom - and, with the right taxation and monetary policies, they will keep on doing it.

Today in History

Today is Thursday, March 1st, the 61st day of 1984. There are 305 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On March 1st, 1932, the infant son of famed aviator Charles Lindbergh was kidnapped from his home near Hopewell, N.J. On this date:

In 1792, it became law that the president pro tempore of the Senate and the speaker of the House, in that order, would follow the vice president in the line of succession. In 1912, Capt. Albert Berry made the first parachute jump from an airplane, at an altitude of 15,000 feet over St. Louis. In 1952, Nancy Davis married Ronald Reagan. In 1954, three Puerto Rican nationalists, firing wildly in the House of Representatives, wounded five congressmen

In 1961, President John Kennedy established the Peace Corps.

In 1967, New York Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, accused of misconduct, was denied his seat in the 90th Congress.

And in 1969, a New Orleans jury acquitted businessman Clay Shaw of conspiring to assassinate President Kennedy.

Ten years ago: A federal grand jury in Washington indicted seven former Nixon aides, including H.R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman and John Mitchell, on charges of covering up the Watergate scandal.

Government by bureaucracy

As our country's secretary of Agriculture, Earl Butz, said his greatest surprise was the discovery of what a "nothing job" he had. He discovered that the most powerful man in the department was not the secretary but an un - named GS 12 buried in the bowels of the department, who writes the language in paragraph 3, subsection C. That language becomes law

Thus in one year, for every new law passed by Congress, unelected bureaucrats turned out 18 new regulations with the force of law

Respected researchers Lichter and Rothman have looked inside the bureaucracy, have interviewed hundreds of administrators of government agencies. Whatever you do next election day, civil service protected bureaucrats will continue to "run the govenrment.

How? Top - level bureaucrats are overwhelmingly white, male, educated, well -off -- and liberal Ninety percent of our nation's general public claims some religious affiliation Among bureaucrats only 64 percent.

Tweny - one percent of the American public is left - of - center politically; 56 percent of the bureaucrats. And in the activist agencies - EPA, OSHA, EEOC - 63 percent

They supported Humphrey in '68, 2 - to - 1.

In 1972, two of three supported McGovern. They went 2 - to - 1 for Carter in '76. So, however conservative the commander in - chief may be, the troops are marching to a different drummer

But this is interesting: When asked specific questions such as.

Is private enterprise fair to workers? Should American move toward socialism? Should there be more government regulation of business?

Should government take over large corporations?

Should people with more ability earn more?

In their answers to these philosophical questions the bureaucrats were less liberal - were more supportive of American society · as is - than were leading journalists surveyed earlier.

Among today's activist bureaucrats 53 percent would give blacks preference in hiring. Only 40 percent would do the same for women

Most bureaucrats believe that our country is most influenced, instead, by intellectuals.

The bureaucracy, entrenched as it is, can be altered only by attrition and . replacement. Four years from now our government might more nearly reflect the philosophy of its leader.

It doesn't now (c) 1984, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

William Rusher ander of a Salvadoran patriot

NEW YORK (NEA) - El Salvador will be holding national Nicaragua, Cuba and Soviet Union are doing their level best to reduce the country to a shambles. The circumstances are not, therefore, exactly auspicious.

The two leading candidates for the presidency are former President Jose Napoleon Duarte, who might be called broadly "liberal" in American terms, and the distinctly more conservative Roberto d' Aubuisson, who had been speaker of the Constituent Assembly before becoming a presidential candidate. As far as an outsider can tell, the election could go either way Presumably, the U.S. would support a Salvadoran government led by either man, assuming (as seems likely) that the election is reasonably fair. D'Aubuisson, however, would first have to contend with one of the most virulent and systematically orchestrated smear campaigns that has ever been waged in this country against a foreign leader friendly to the U.S. It is high time to nip that campaign in the bud.

The man behind it is Robert White, a former Foreign Service officer who was Jimmy Carter's ambassador to El Salvador. In the course of that assignment - during which, you will recall, the situation in El Salvador slid from bad to worse -White developed a truly formidable hatred of d'Aubuisson, whose unpardonable sin it was to be more anti - leftist than Carter and White deemed necessary. Ultimately, the ambassador was describing d'Aubuisson, for quotation, as a "pathological killer" and the man behind the 1980 assassination of Archbishop Oscar Romero.

One of the first acts of the Reagan administration was to fire

White, who has since made a cottage industry out of going elections in March. even though leftist guerrillas backed by around the U.S. bad - mouthing d'Aubuisson and denouncing the Reagan policy toward El Salvador in general. The voters of El Salvador, meanwhile, demonstrated that they disagreed with White's opinion of d'Aubuison by voting, in notably free elections in 1982, to give a majority of the seats in their Constituent Assembly to a coalition of conservative parties that (as aforesaid) elected d'Aubuisson as its speaker.

That, however, didn't stop White, who in fact seems to be stepping up his attacks on d'Aubuisson as El Salvador's presidential election approaches.

I had occasion to question White recently on a television panel program, and as a former practicing attorney I could admire the skill with which he avoided saying anything that might expose him to a libel suit by d'Aubuisson. Being a "public figure" if there ever was one, d'Aubuisson would be required, under the prevailing Sullivan rule, to prove not only that White's charges are false but that White knew them to be false. When I invited him to make his accusation about d'Aubuisson's responsibility for the death of Archbishop Romero on the air, where it would not be protected by the congressional immunity that had cloaked his recent testimony before a House subcommittee, White deftely sidestepped: he had studied the evidence, he replied, and it seemed to him to leave room for no other conclusion than that d'Aubuisson was responsible. (Thus setting up a well - nigh unassailable Sullivan defense.)

Actually, White's "evidence" against d'Aubuisson is a tissue of baloney, if I may coin a phrase. He tells of meetings at which eyewitnesses claim to have watched d'Aubuisson plan the Romero assassination and various other "death squad" activities. When asked who these "eyewitnesses" are, however. White claims that he dare not identify them. because, you see, they are still in El Salvador, and their lives would be forfeit if they were named. (One would think that the high cause of thwarting d'Aubuisson would justify one of them coming to the U.S. and backing up White's charges, but none has done so.)

No wonder the Democrat - controlled House Intelligence Committee, as well as such pillars of the liberal media as The New Republic and NBC News, and even d' Aubuisson's rival for the presidency, Duarte have all studied White's "compelling" evidence and rejected it. D'Aubuisson, whose party has lost three of its deputies in the Constituent Assembly to left - wing death squads, and who has taken bullets in his own body for daring to defend the right, is a Salvadoran patriot. White is simply an embittered and vindictive man at the end of a botched career.

WILL NOT RUN-Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau says "No. I won't run again" as he leaves Parliament Hill in Ottawa Wednesday night. Earlier in the day Trudeau announced his decision to resign as leader of the Liberal Party of Canada, (AP Laserphoto)

Canadian prime minister to quit

OTTAWA (AP) - Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau. who rode to power 16 years ago on a wave of "Trudeaumania" and dominated Canadian politics even as his popularity waned, is stepping down.

Trudeau, 64, said Wednesday he will resign as soon as his Liberal Party can choose a new leader, probably in June. The new party leader will become prime minister automatically but will have to call nationwide elections by next February Trudeau's resignation had been expected for weeks mostly because his standing in the polls is so low that political analysts believe he could not win another election: Still, the suddenness of the announcement came as a surprise.

Meeting reporters outside his office. Trudeau said he made his decision during "a great walk in the snow" Tuesday night during Ottawa's heaviest blizzard in years, followed by 11/2 hours in the sauna.

"I listened to my heart and saw if there were any signs in my destiny in the sky and there were none; there were just snowflakes," Trudeau said.

Asked why he chose the day for his announcement, the prime minister replied, "Well, because it is a good day, it is the first day of the rest of my life."

Trudeau, a lawyer, essayist and world traveler, won election to Parliament in 1965. He became justice minister in 1967, and was noted for eccentric habits such as wearing sandals and an Ascot tie into the House of Commons.

He was picked as Liberal Party leader in April 1968, taking over as prime minister from Lester B. Pearson. He immediately called an election and won on a surge of "Trudeaumania" assisted by a charismatic campaign style tossing off witty remarks and kissing dozens of women at each stop.

Trudeau was re-elected in 1972 and 1974, defeated in 1979. then made a stunning return in 1980 after the Progressive Conservative government of Joe Clark stumbled. His tenure as prime minister is longer than that of any other current leader of a major Western nation.

Large oil supplies should defuse Iran's cutoff threat

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Large emergency supplies of oil an interruption than in 1979. and spare production capacity should keep the world calm in the face of Iran's threatened cutoff of oil shipments from the Persian Gulf, government and corporate officials say.

Iran has threatened to halt shipping out of the gulf if Iraq, its enemy in a 42-month war, interferes with its oil exports.

If that happens, the potential for an upset of oil supplies "is pretty high," Energy Secretary Donald P. Hodel said Wednesday. "But for many different levels of interruption, we and our allies are in pretty good shape."

The optimism is tempered by concern over the escalation of the war between Iran and Iraq in and near the Persian Gulf. More than 8 million barrels of oil flow through the Persian Gulf daily, supplying half of Japan's and a third of Western Europe's oil needs

Tanker traffic heading for Saudi Arabia, Kuwait or other oil-producing nations on the western and southern sides of the gulf easily could be imperiled, the experts said.

And panic buying could send oil prices skyrocketing, they said.

Iraq claimed Monday that it had bombed Kharg Island. Iran's main oil export terminal, on the eastern side of the gulf. Although no damage was confirmed, the report sent a brief spasm of concern through the oil markets because of the Iranian threat to block the gulf.

"There's no reason to panic," an unidentified official of a major U.S. oil company told the Los Angeles Times on Wednesday. "The world is in much better shape to cope with Oil-producing nations outside the gulf region could increase their output by an additional 3.5 million barrels daily, said the official, who was not identified.

Virtually no replacement oil was available in 1979, when the Iranian revolution wiped out that country's oil exports. removing 5 percent of the total supply from the world market. The experts say as long as governments and consumers avoid panic buying, the world can avoid the surges in oil prices that accompanied the 1973 oil embargo against the United States and the 1979 Iranian revolution.

For consumers, oil supplies are ample for an emergency, the experts said. They estimate that government-controlled oil reserves in the consuming nations would last for 260 days if there were a 10 percent curtailment of supplies.

"Energy trends are much more favorable today." with the demand for oil rising slowly as the world moves out of a deep recession, said Daniel Yergin, president of Cambridge Energy Research Associates.

In 1973 and 1979, oil demand throughout the world was risig rapidly

American vulnerability has lessened dramatically, because U.S. oil consumption is far below the 1973 and 1979 levels

Also. Mexico has replaced Saudi Arabia as the United States' leading foreign supplier. The Persian Gulf furnishes only about 500,000 barrels of the daily U.S. consumption of approximately 15 million barrels.

In contrast, in 1979 the region furnished 2.2 million barrels daily of a total U.S. consumption of 18 million barrels.

The strategic petroleum reserve, just getting started in 1979, now has enough oil stored in Texas and Louisiana salt cayerns to replace all of the country's Persian Gulf imports for nearly three years, unidentified officials told the Times

The United States would use this reserve during any supply interruption to calm the markets and keep prices from soaring. The reserve oil would be made available promptly through a public auction, Hodel said in a Washington interview with the newspaper.

This country would not protect only itself if Europe and Japan lost vitally needed supplies from the Persian Gulf. Under an agreement with other members of the International Energy Award - a group of energy-consuming industrial countries - such an emergency could trigger oil-sharing if a member country lost more than 7 percent of its oil supplies.

Sheriff Humpy to be resentenced HOUSTON (AP) - A former sheriff convicted of torturing jail inmates to gain confessions was expected to be resentenced today after undergoing a psychiatric examination.

The hearing for James C. "Humpy' Parker was originally scheduled for Tuesday. The meeting was reset for today when Dr. Victor Elion, a psychiatrist who was to testify, failed to appear, officials said. Parker was convicted of conspiring to deprive jail inmates of their civil rights and of two counts of wrongly depriving inmates of their liberty. He was sentenced to 10 years in prison and fined $12,000 pending the outcome of the esting

Parker has been held at a psychiatric facility in Springfield, Mo., since his original sentencing

At Parker's sentencing Oct. 25, U.S.

District Judge James DeAnda ordered Parker to undergo a 90-day psychiatric examination. Two of Parker's former deputies in San Jacinto County, a rural area about 50 miles northeast of Houston, were convicted of violating inmates' civil rights and sentenced to prison terms.

'The operation down there would embarrass the dictator of a primitive country." DeAnda said at Parker's October sentencing.

Parker and his deputies, Carl Lee and Floyd Parker, were convicted in the water torture of several jail inmates.

Witnesses testified the lawmen handcuffed them to chairs, covered their faces with towels, then poured water into the towels until the inmates begged for mercy. Two men testified they confessed to crimes they did not commit because of the torture.

Hazardous waste task force named

AUSTIN (AP) - Gov. Mark White has given a 30-member special group the task of finding a safe. land-based means of treating and disposing of hazardous waste.

The creation of the Task Force on Hazardous Waste Management was announced Wednesday at a news conference

"I am hopeful that a dialogue between all interests in the hazardous waste debate will produce new efforts to find safe, land-based technologies for recycling, treating and disposing of hazardous wastes." White said.

Max Sherman, dean of the LBJ School of Public Affairs and a former state senator. was named chairman.

White said the group would include representatives from large chemical and electronics companies, environmental groups and hazardous waste disposal firms as well as members of the banking, engineering, public health and legal professions.

White directed the task force to focus on four major areas:

- Siting of waste handling storage and disposal facilities - Financial responsibility for hazardous waste during and after disposal. - Feasible waste stream reductions and dispposal and recycling options. Enforcement of regulations governing the management of hazardous waste

Sherman said the group probably will be divided into four subcommittees or work group

Those appointed included Damon L. Engle, Dickinson; Dr Carmault Jackson Jr. Antonio; Frank McBee, Austin: C.H. "Chuck" Rivers, Deer Park; Karen Shewbart, Freeport; Richard D. Stewart, La Porte; Bruce F. McCall, San Antonio; Homer C. Wilson, Dallas; Dr. Rusty Raines, Cleburne;

Firefighter dies from burns

DALLAS (AP) - The Irving Fire Department has lost a firefighter in the line of duty for the first time in 30 years.

James Presnall, 31, died Tuesday of injuries he suffered Monday morning while fighting a fire at an apartment complex. He suffered second- and third-degree burns over 65 percent of his body when a roof of an apartment collapsed on him

"I think we're all aware this can happen, but maybe we're all thinking it will happen to someone else, ' said Assistant Fire: Chief Jimmy Epperson.

The fire started in a complex that was under construction. It began in a chimney where workers had built a fire to keep warm

The network has been a "a cooperative venture," Paur says. 'No single institution had to make a single large investment.' Other cooperative networks are scattered across the country, while some of the nation's biggest banks, such as New York's Citibank, have their own systems.

Pulse's members range from Houston's multibillion-dollar Interfirst banking organization to new charter banks with assets of just a few million dollars.

"A financial institution with one ATM would pay Pulse initially $1,200," Paur says. "After the first fee, they annually are required to pay $200 to belong to the program and pay any transaction fees."

All transactions with a Pulse card are funnelled to a computer in Houston.

Transaction fees - the cost of the electronic switching equipment - may or may not be passed along to the oard user. depending on the philosophy of the user's bank, savings and loan or credit union

Pulse was born in August 1981 after the Texas Legislature cleared the way for such non-profit organizations. Since its first transaction in March 1982, it has processed more than 12 million transactions and hopes to be making 1.3 million a month by the middle of this year.

"Twelve hundred ATMs and one million transactions are milestones not only for Pulse but for all Texas financial institutions." Paur says.

The nationwide study, released by the Urban Institute, said San Antonio recorded the second-highest increase in average income among blacks in major metropolitan areas during the 1970s

Only Houston's blacks made better economic strides during the last decade, with their average income going up about 165 percent, according to the study's author, Thomas Muller of Los Angeles.

The study, based on census and national labor statistics, was commissioned to determine if the steady stream of illegal Mexican aliens into the United States has affected the availability of jobs to other minorities, Muller said.

The results indicated that most Mexican immigrants take low-paying jobs that require little English language skill, and do not compete with most other workers seeking employment, he said. But Calvert and other black leaders in San Antonio disputed that finding

DEAR ABBY: You are mistaken when you say that if a man forces his wife to have sex with him he is guilty of rape. He should not have to "force" her; the Bible says it is a wife's duty to submit to her husband.

A wife who isn't willing to submit to her husband should not have gotten married in the first place. It is little enough to pay for the protection, security and lifelong partnership the marriage license provides.

Most women should take a good, long look at themselves after about 10 years of marriage, and thank God their husbands still feel like having sex with them at all! If they've had one or more children, they're probably 20 to 30 pounds heavier than when they married. Who wants to make love to a blob?

Let's face it, Abby. Women probably invented marriage because what they have to sell fades fast, and they know they had better market it before it spoils. FED UP IN SMITHTOWN, N.Y.

DEAR FED UP: If you are married, my condolences to your wife. And if you're single, please stay that way.

DEAR ABBY: Don't be so quick to condemn the husband who came home reeking of another woman's perfume. He was not necessarily guilty of fooling around with another woman.

I also came home "reeking" of perfume, and I had not been with another woman. However, I had been in a department store to buy a Valentine's Day gift for my wife, when a pretty girl sprayed me (without my permission) with some new fragrance she was trying to promote. Sign me .

takes a look at volunteers Author

Anyone who has ever lived in a small town knows that volunteer organizations, such as fire departments and ambulance services, are always in need of funds. Recently I heard a joke which gives a fresh, but timely, look at the problem

"It seems there was a Texas oil millionaire who struck another deep well but, to his horror, when the well blew it caught on fire and began burning out of control. He called on that famous fire fighter, Red Adair, to contain the blaze.

"The oilman, in his desperation, decided to call the local volunteer fire department. Sure enough, in a couple of minutes he heard the sirens, so he stepped onto donation to the volunteer the road in order to wave down the fire truck. "Much to his surprise, the truck roared by him, and went to within 20 feet of the fire. The volunteer firemen jumped out and quickly extinguished the flames. "The astonished oilman ran to the fire chief, thanked him profusely, and handed him several thousand dollars as a

"And what are you going to do with all that cash?' asked the grateful millionaire. 'Well,' the fire chief brakes on the fire truck fixed!

While not addressed quite so bluntly, that was the main question we tried to answer in recent group sessions with our customers. These "focus group" meetings were held to give us a better idea of what people perceive to be strengths of our company.

We also asked for, and received, commentary on our weaknesses as seen by these customers.

Good service - particularly its dependability and reliability was by far the main strength cited in these sessions.

Here are some of the comments made by our customers. "We couldn't survive without the phone service. I have to have my telephone for communications. If you have an emergency or a fire, you need it. I could live without the service, but I wouldn't want to. It is a big part of everybody's life.

It's dependable

"I would stress the dependability. I would point out to consumers being able to rely on your telephone for just about anything: your business, your home life, your social life.

"I'd say they have good service. Their phones work, and you can depend on the calls. If you have any repair work, if gets done.'

"I've called to ask questions about rates and bills, and the people I've spoken to have been very polite and willing to answer all my questions."

"The phone company is every day coming up with more efficient ways of doing things, or better ways.

"I think the strength of the telephone company is that they have been more economical as compared to other items in your household budget. They have not gone up proportionately as much. That has been a tremendous asset for the lower income people."

Rate increases in line

"In relationship to every other company's rate increases. they're in line. The regulated companies have more trouble than the unregulated companies because they have to go beg almost to get a nickel and unregulated companies don't." "Compared to what other lot of comparison shopping through the phone book. I make the telephone work for me.

"You pay for contact with most of the world. You can use the phone to talk to anybody about anything, check on relatives. children, and you don't have to worry about it. It always works. What value would you put on that? A call to poison control when your child just drank a glass of bleach. What do you do? What's the value of that?"

"I like the bills because they come with a return envelope. It's one less address you have to write out and one less envelope you have to work up."

"I think the size of the company and the fact that it has been such a good company for people to work for has been a real asset here.

Divestiture confusion

Some customers did tell us they were still confused and uncertain about our separation from AT&T. Here are some of the comments about life after divestiture:

"I feel uneasy about it. I don't really understand what is actually happening and how it is going to affect me. I really can't say anything about it because I really don't know.

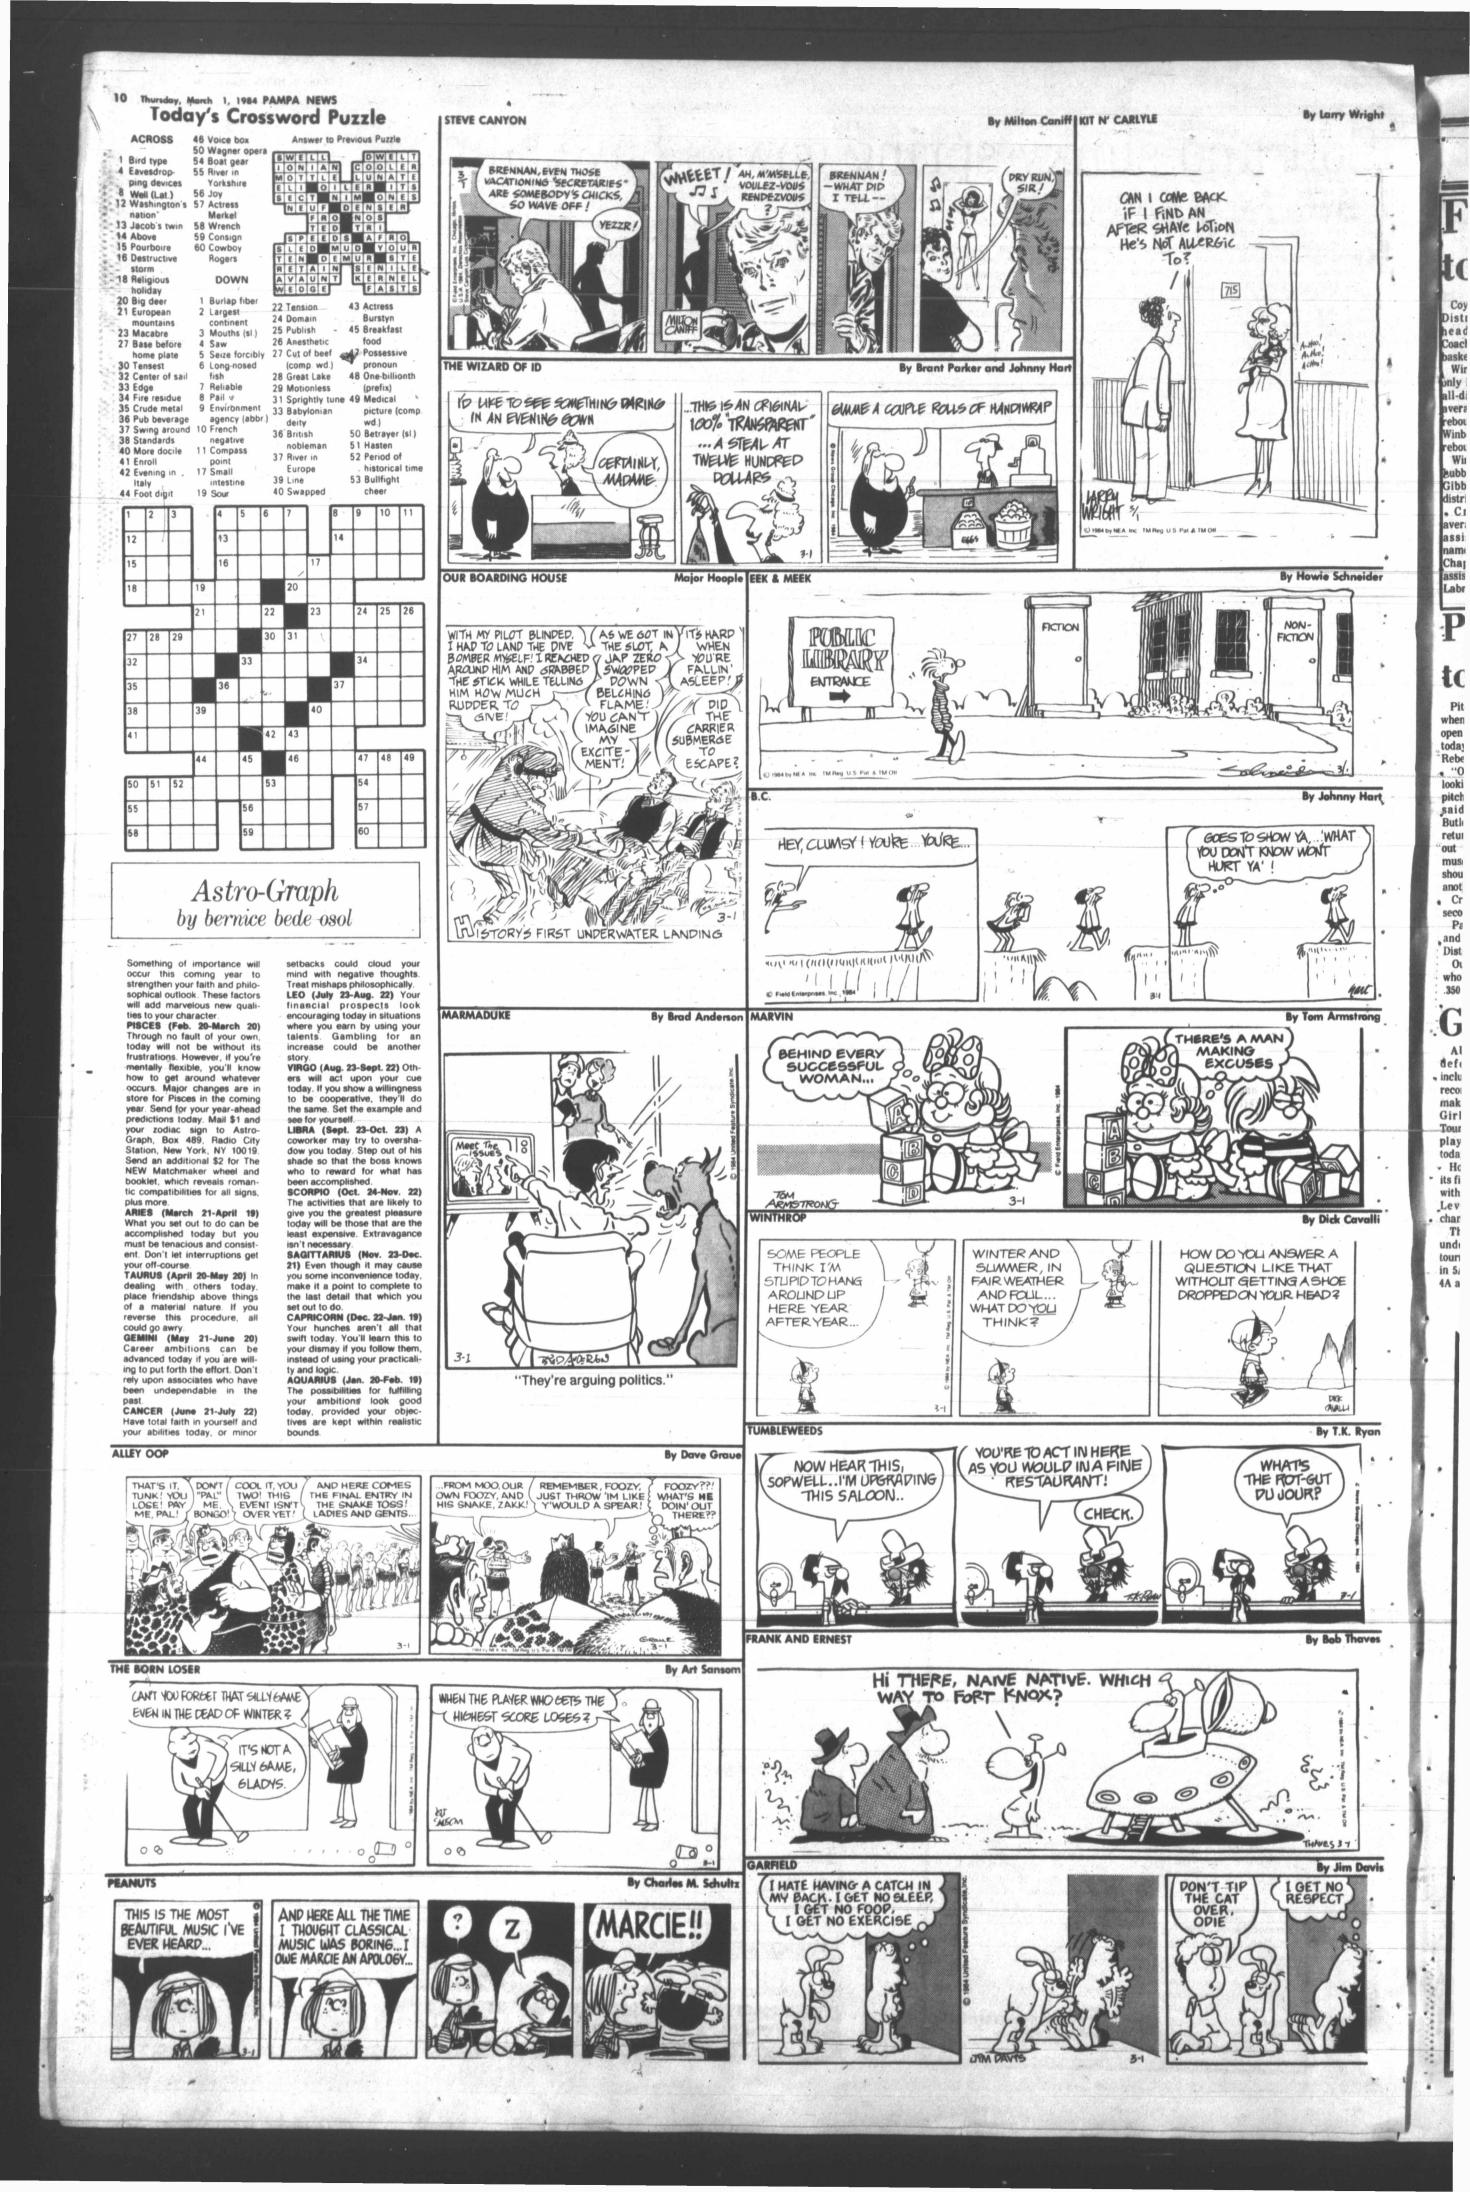

"We will be able to tell shortly how well Southwestern Bell Telephone will do on its own - whether in the coming years it is going to fall on its face or lay an egg. Or spread its wings and fly.

Well, the breakup has come and gone and I can assure you Southwestern Bell Telephone isn't laying any eggs. Our service in Texas has never been better. And we're going to work hard to keep it the best there is. How about you? What do you think is good about Southwestern Bell Telephone? What faults do you find with us? I'd like to hear from you either way - just drop me a line at the address below.

Prison's interim director retires

AUSTIN (AP.) - Dan McKaskle will remain for the time being as acting director of the Texas Department of Corrections

That wouldn't have been news, except that McKaskle announced his retirement on Wednesday.

After a three-hour, private meeting with Gov. Mark White, McKaskle said he had changed his mind about leaving the TDC, but he was vague about whether he wants to be named permanent director of Texas' huge prison system.

"I reconsidered after talking to the governor and the board" of corrections. McKaskle said after the session in White's office.

White and McKaskle, who was placed in charge of the prison system when W J. Estelle resigned after 11 years as director, said the change of heart came after the board promised to give McKaskle more help in Huntsville.

"We just talked about some different adjustments in operations." McKaskle said. "I'm not at liberty to talk about those. We talked about some personnel, just in different areas of the department.

Earlier Wednesday, McKaskle had issued a statement announcing his retirement and said he would be gone in 60 to 90 days. After pulling down that statement, he offered a confusing assessment of whether he wants to be named permanent director

"Well, I'm reconsidering my position. I'm not undecided We had a long talk in there this afternoon. There's just a lot of things to try to digest in a short period of time." he told reporters.

Board member Harry Whittington of Austin said he For supplies and deliveries call Theda Wallin 665-8336. considers McKaskle a candidate for the permanent position, although McKaskle has not applied for it.

During a break in the meeting, White told reporters, "Red McKaskle is going to stay on and will be continuing as the acting director for an indeterminate period of time in the future. I'm very pleased at that, to put aside any rumors to the contrary

But McKaskle's retirement decision was not a rumor. It came in a statement he issued through TDC's press office in Huntsville

Prison spokesman Rick Hartley said that McKaskle told Board of Corrections Chairman Robert Gunn of Wichita Falls that he planned to retire but "did not agree to a specific date of separation McKaskle said he hopes to complete his work within 60 to 90 days," Hartley said.

This has been one of the most difficult decisions I have ever made." McKaskle said in the prepared statement announcing his retirement. "I feel that now is the time for me to retire. I am studying several possibilities regarding future employment

White said he was sympathetic to McKaskle's retirement impulse

'Anybody given all the responsibilities laid on his shoulders over the past couple of months would feel a little bit lonely from time to time," said White. "They're in there now making sure he has the additional personnel he needs to do the job that he wants to do.

BOSTON (AP) - House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. says he intends to seek a final two-year term, but would consider resigning from Congress early to be ambassador to Ireland or a cabinet secretary in a Democratic administration.

"He's always had the dream of someday ending his career as ambassador to Ireland, perhaps," O'Neill's press secretary. Christopher Matthews, said Wednesday night. "The key element is that he intends to serve one more term

O'Neill discussed his future in interviews published today by The Boston Globe and The New York Times. He told the Globe, "I will probably hang it up" after another two years as speaker and representative of the Cambridge district.

Saying he considered H-15 himself more liberal than most of his colleagues. O'Neill said he thought he should be succeeded as speaker by House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, because he might be "more in tune with the Democratic members of the House than I am.

An early supporter of the presidential candidacy of Walter Mondale. O'Neill said he wasn't sure what he'd do if Mondale was elected. He said he might be available for a presidential appointment "in a Mondale cabinet or possibly as ambassador to Ireland."
