Panhandle Field fight shifts into district courts

Senior Staff Writer The Panhandle Field fight will move into state district court in Pampa Thursday morning when Dorchester Gas Producing Company will argue that it can't get a fair trial in Pampa in a lawsuit that the major company filed nst an independent oil producer associated parties.

Ironically, an independent oil company has made an offer to buy out the Dorchester Corp.

Dorchester, allied with other major oil and gas companies, is waging war against independent oilmen over the rights to produce from the local field's

On Monday, Damson Oil Corp., a New York - based independent oil and gas company, announced that it had purchased 94 1 percent of the outstanding stock in the Dorchester Gas Corp.

Damson's $361.6 million bid for Dorchester will expire at midnight EST on Friday. The offer amounts to $22.50 per share for 16.1 million shares of common stock

"I don't know. There's a lot of curiosity amongst our crew." Jerry Courtney, of Clarendon, a lawyer for the independents, remarked about the takeover's possible effect on Dorchester's lawsuit.

The independent company's buy - out would give it control of a company that has filed about 40 district - court lawsuits, including the suit set for a Pampa hearing Thursday, against independent oil producers in Carson and Gray Counties.

Dorchester's hearing for a change of venue is scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. Thursday in 223rd District Court. The major company has asked the court to move the trial of its suit from Pampa to Dorchester is suing the Amarillo based Harlow Corporation and associated parties.

The suit, which was filed July 13, 1982, has been set for trial on April 30.

Dorchester claims it can't get a fair trial in Pampa because of the local citizens' bias in favor of the independents.

223rd District Judge Don Cain has excused himself from hearing the case, which was assigned to 100th District Judge Robert Montgomery.

Dorchester asked Cain to excuse himself, saying it was "unfair for the court to have to rule on issues affecting the economic well being of a vast majority of the populace."

The major company claims the independent has produced natural gas that belongs to Dorchester in a 49,000 acre section of land in Carson and Gray Counties

The major company wants a permanent injunction prohibiting the independent company from producing any gas whatsoever out of the formation. The company also seeks to be paid for gas produced by the independent in the

Dorchester claims Harlow has clouded its title to the natural gas under the contested acreage

"Plaintiff is entitled to recover the fair market value of such gas,' Dorchester's petition says.

Harlow has countersued. The independent said it acquired "farmout" oil rights under the plot in dispute. Harlow says it has produced oil and casinghead gas to which it is entitled under the oil lease agreement and the Texas Railroad Commission's drilling

Harlow says Dorchester's action has clouded the independent's title to the oil and casinghead gas

In addition to other independents and individuals named as parties with Harlow, some of the Panhandle's most prominent names are listed as intervenors on behalf of the

The lawsuits in the state district courts amount to one of three fronts on which Dorchester and other major companies are waging war against the independents.

Groom not happy with panel ideas

GROOM - School trustees are not happy with recommendations made by the Texas Select Committee on Public Education, although they would be willing to adopt an all-day kindergarten.

The board members looked over the committee's list of proposed changes for public schools. The proposals include an all-day kindergarten, dropping state funding for vocational programs, lengthening the school day and school year, testing and training for instructors, as well as several changes in state funding and administration

Trustees declared that many of SCOPE's proposals would tighten state control and weaken local districts. They disagreed with proposals to appoint State Board of Education members, to have the University Interscholastic League under the state board's control and to ut state funding for vocational

Board members reluctantly agreed with a proposal to adopt an all-day kindergarten. Trustees felt it would help the average daily attendance and ease mid-day transportation

Trustees also accepted a bid from IBM for personal computers at a cost approximately $24.790 Superintendent Rex Peeples told the board members that the school is considering eight computers. The State Board of Education has mandated that schools have a computer literacy requirement for junior high school students.

"We should be able to have it set up and ready to go by the start of school in the fall." Peeples said, expressing the possibility of having a computer program for adults.

Also, Groom trustees changed the cheerleader eligibility policy to allow a student to be on the squad for a third year if she is chosen head cheerleader

New board member Bud Fields and incumbent Louis Ruthart were sworn in and Roman Friemel was chosen board president for another year.

Mobeetie appoints two city aldermen

MOBEETIE - After waiting through a municipal election with only one candidate and numerous write-ins. Mobeetie city officials elected Greg Estes and Dale Hathaway as city aldermen.

Estes and Hathaway were sworn in at a special meeting Tuesday night after current council members sifted through some 12 write-in names for the position. Incumbent council member Don Moore was the only candidate to file in the election. Voters were to decide on three council members and a mayor

According to a Mobeetie city secretary, Estes received 11 write-in votes and Hathaway had five votes in the election. However, since neither one received 51 percent of the total vote, the council had to decide on the pners, she explained he council members will decide on a mayor at their regular meeting Thursday night. The new mayor and Moore will be sworn in at that meeting. The secretary said that the council will go through a list of candidates before choosing the mayor. There were nine different write-in candidates for the position.

The Mobeetie School Board will also meet Thursday to canvass the results of its election and to select new board officers. The school trustees will also open bids on a new computer system for the school. New curriculum guidlines approved by the Texas Legislature require computer literacy for all junior high school age students.

Both thumbs up after Mondale's Pennsylvania win

Hart's hopes lie in West as Mondale extends lead another industrial state victory in Pennsylvania, Walter F. Mondale is pulling away from Gary Hart at the midpoint of the Democratic presidential race, but the Colorado senator says the second half of the nomination race is "very, very favorable to my candidacy.

Mondale's solid win in the Pennsylvania primary moved him halfway down the road to the 1,967 delegates needed to secure the Democratic presidential nomination

"I am not the front-runner." Mondale insisted. But he added, "I think now I've got a chance, just a chance" to wrap up the nomination before the Democratic convention convenes in San Francisco on July 16.

With another outpouring of black votes, the Rev. Jesse Jackson carried Philadelphia and said, "Our campaign maintains momentum.

With 86 percent of the precincts reporting, the Pennsylvania totals

Mondale 612,276 or 46 percent Hart 457,115 or 34 percent

Jackson 234,591 or 18 percent Mondale picked up 124 delegates in Pennsylvania, compared to 16 for Hart. Four delegates were uncommitted and three went to other candidates.

Candidates' Scorecard ere is a breakdown of the preference of delegates selected or allocated thus far to the Democratic Convention

Mondale	1,035.8
Hart	575
Jackson	152.2
Other	77
Uncommitted	251

Total Delegates	3,933

Twenty-five delegates races were left undecided early today when election officials in Philadelphia stopped counting for the night Mondale's near sweep of the delegates, pushed his national total to 1.035.8. Hart now has 574 and Jackson 151.2, while 252 are uncommitted and 78 remain pledged to candidates no longer

The battleground moves West into Hart's turf this weekend with Democratic caucuses in Arizona

We are headed into our territory folks." Hart told supporters in Denver, his hometown

Mondale and Jackson planned to campaign in Arizona today

Coming on the heels of earlier wins in Illinois and New York, Mondale's Pennsylvania triumph widened his delegate lead and restored an air of inevitability to his candidacy.

For Hart, the Pennsylvania vote blurred the memory of the heady days after the senator rolled to victories in New Hampshire, Maine and Vermont and seemed on the verge of knocking Mondale out of the race.

But with that winter slide still a vivid memory. Mondale remained unwilling to claim victory

Asked if he thought Hart should withdraw, the former vice president said: "By no means is he out of this race. Nearly 50 percent of the delegates Hart heartily agreed. He predicted the race would be decided in San Francisco and said, "I believe that I will have a majority of the School board names Kendall athletics head

Staff Writer

The board of trustees of the Pampa Independent School District accepted the resignation of Pampa High School Athletic Director Bill Balcolm Tuesday night and named John Kendall, head football coach, as new athletic director.

Balcolm's resignation becomes effective April 15. Balcolm, who has been serving as assistant football coach, said he plans to be working for a company here out of Oklahoma City while looking for a coaching position elsewhere

Garland Nichols, head basketball coach, was named as assistant athletic director. Kendall will continue as head football coach. Kendall's and Nichols' athletic director positions will be effective April 16.

The school board also accepted the resignations of three other teachers, all effective May 26. They are Donna Turner, tennis coach and teacher: Lynn M. Papso, Pampa Middle School history teacher, and Carmen V. Ward, PMS Special Education instructor. Lundelle Hatcher PMS rea teacher, will retire effective May 16.

Granted leaves of absences were Julie Murray, effective April 30; and Joyce Creed, PMS English and English as a second language instructor, and Janis Spearman, Horace Mann Elementary School fourth grade teacher, both effective Aug. 20.

Hired for employment were Alexandria Jean Rekkas, Travis Elementary School third grade teacher, and Elizabeth Tally, Mann third grade teacher, who is returning from a leave of absence. Their employment will become effective Aug.

Board members canvassed election results from Saturday's voting and confirmed the re-election of trustees Wallace Birkes, Place 1; Darville Orr, Place 2, and Dr. Robert Lyle, Place 3. They were administered the oath of office by Phil Vanderpool, local attorney and former school board

Following the canvassing of election results, the board elected new officers. They are Mary Braswell, president; Ken Fields, vice president, and Jerry Carlson, secretary Birkes, who served as board president for the past year, was presented a plaque in appreciation for his service. He thanked the board members for their service in the past year. "And I want the next year to be even better." he said.

In other business, the trustees accepted the offer of Citizens Bank and Trust Co. to replace the scoreboard in the McNeely Field House at Pampa High School at an estimated cost of between $4,000 and $5,000

Supt. James Trusty said the new scoreboard would be placed on the wall at the south end of the court, similar to the current one. He noted there were problems in seeing the board because of restricted vision at the south end of the seating sections, but those problems only exist when the house is full.

Trusty said plans had been considered for using a hanging scoreboard above the center of the court, but that would create additional problems. The existing speakers at court center would have to be moved. creating sound problems; there is the problem of possible damage if the scoreboard were hit during volleyball games, and players would tend to look up at the hanging board during a game, distracting their attention.

City delays giving its support for new state taxes

By LARRY HOLLIS Staff Writer

Pampa city commissioners Tuesday morning considered a resolution sponsored by the Texas Municipal League supporting increased state highway funding, passage of a Pothole Bill and increased highway user charges, but delayed action to allow for further study.

The resolution "would put the city on record as favoring" development of additional revenue sources for road and highway programs for already existing paved streets, City Manager Mack Wofford said

The additional funds "could be very, very beneficial to us" in street maintenance programs, Wofford said. He estimated the city could receive about $200,000 a year under proposed programs.

The city manager explained the Pothole Bill, rejected in the last session of the Legislature, is a priority of the TML. He said the bill and other proposals may be put before a possible special session this year. Commissioners agreed additional funds would be helpful, but they wanted time to study the TML resolution in detail before taking any action on it.

The commission also delayed taking any action on a recommendation from the City Traffic Commission concerning the installation of a traffic light at the intersection of 23rd Ave. and Public Works Director Allyn Moore said the commission members had suggested using the hanging light removed from the intersection of 23rd and Perryton Parkway for installation of a new traffic light system there. Moore said he would prefer the city undertake a study to determine the need for a traffic light at the location and then consider installation of a more permanent light. Wofford said the hanging light does not meet new standards for traffic lights. The commissioners authorized Wofford and Moore to give further study to the matter.

Pampa Police Department Chief J. J. Ryzman reported on the activities, operations and programs of the department in a continuing series of reports from department heads.

Chief Ryzman said the department is making some headway in combating drug dealing and usage "We're doing a pretty good job, but we're only touching a little bit" of what needs to be done to fully attack the problem, he said.

Questioned by Commissioner E. L. 'Smiley' Henderson, Ryzman said the major problem in dealing with drug matters is a lack of manpower. Police officers and detectives have regular assignments, with none assigned only to drug matters, he said. Undercover agents have made some progress, but the problem requires more personnel to receive fulltime attention, he said.

He said police officials provide drug awareness programs to groups to help educate the public on the problems of drug usage. In addition, undercover work has led to some arrests, including that of nine suspects last week.

In other department matters. Ryzman noted the school liason officer has been visiting schools to discuss bicycle safety, deliver warnings on child molestors and take fingerprints under the Identakid program. In the Indentakid program, fingerprints are Republican-controlled Senate is overwhelmingly on record against use of CIA funds to mine Nicaraguan harbors, a compromise Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is confident will stop the mining The Reagan administration agreed to the non-binding measure Tuesday in return for Kennedy's agreement to defer a proposal condemning a State Department move to keep U.S. Central American policies out of the World Court for two years.

The compromise passed the Senate 84-12, with the backing of 42 Democrats and 42 Republicans, including Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr.

An aide said Baker proposed the compromise to the White House, which "sent word it would have no problem if this passed." Baker then outlined it at a meeting of Republican senators.

Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., said, "I think they (the administration) are trying to liquidate the political damage. The thing is not working so they want to get over with it. .

Further evidence of congressional displeasure came from Republican Senator Barry Goldwater, even though he voted against the anti-mining resolution. He accused the White House of neglecting its duty to inform

Showroom windows shot out in local businesses

Someone in Pampa apparently gets a kick out of shooting out plate glass windows with a pellet gun. Pampa police surmised, as the calls from damaged businesses mounted this

A vandal or vandals armed with a pellet gun apparently drove around Pampa Tuesday night and shot out windows at random, Police Chief J.J. Ryzman reported Expensive showroom windows at Culberson - Stowers Chevrolet, 805 N. Hobart; Texas Furniture Co., 210 N. Cuyler; and Nicky Britten Pontiac, 833 W. Foster; were targets of the hit - and run vandals. Der Launder, 715 N. Hobart; and the Pampa Travel Center, 1617 N. Hobart; also called police this morning to report windows shot with a pellet gun.

from the shooting spree will total $5,000. Ryzman said. He said the showroom windows at the car dealerships cost about $500 to $600 each. Five of the valuable windows were ruined at Culberson - Stowers, and the vandals ruined three at Nicky Britten Pontiac. Texas Furniture Co. reported 11 of its windows were shot full of holes.

The chief said vandals who get a thrill from shooting windows surface from time to time. About three years ago, shooters ruined dozens of car windows in Pampa, he said.

Police had no suspects this morning in connection with the major of $8,108.50 from Western Fence Co. of Amarillo for construction of a fence at the new M. K. Brown Swimming Pool. Moore said the fence will be about 754 linear feet, most of it chain link with a small portion in wood.

In other business, commissioners adopted on first reading an ordinance permitting zoning change from agriculture to commercial for Block 1, Medi Park North; approved salari changes for March and approved accounts payable.

Commissioners Henderson and David McDaniel suggested the commission should have a print-out monthly on a basic financial statement. They recommended the city manager provide a summary showing revenues received, budgeted figures and total expenditures compared to the budget for the year to date.

"I think that would be of interest to us," McDaniel said

Commissioners Bob Curry and Clyde Carruth said they sometimes have problems identifying items in the accounts payable list with specific budgeted items.

Henderson said the city sometimes receives requests requiring additional spending not alloted in the budget and questioned how the commission would know if additional revenues are available to take care of the requests.

Wofford said his office prepares such figures monthly and could provide the commissioners with a summary sheet with the necessary information.

TEXAS/REGIONAL

Texas has off-the-bookseconomy

AUSTIN (AP) - Texas has an underground, off-the-books economy which may generate as much as $38 llion a year, according to the state nptroller's office.

n an article in the April issue of Fiscal Notes, published by the comptroller, researcher Bruce Wright says the underground economy includes unreported moonlighting, pocketing unreported tips, dealing in cash, skimming cash off the top and keeping two sets of books.

However, Wright says, the state's tax receipts likely are less affected than those in other states.

"Texas tax receipts probably suffer less from the underground economy because of Texas' low tax burden, because there is no state income tax and because of strong enforcement of state tax laws," he said.

"Texas government is largely funded by sales taxes which are widely popular taxes ... The sales tax burden is additionally lightened by dozens of exemptions, so the incentive to cheat on Texas state taxes is much less than in many other states," Wright added.

Nationwide, the underground economy has been estimated at $500 billion annually and is reported to be growing faster than the gross national

Wright notes that much of the activity is thought to be concentrated among self-employed entrepreneurs and small businessmen, not because they are more dishonest but because the tax system provides more chances for them to get away with tax evasion.

Wage earners, whose income is reported to tax authorities, have much less opportunity to evade taxes, he said. Also able to engage in the underground economy are those who supplement

'Cash is the common denominator of underground enterprise. Small businesses and professionals that deal in cash can evade the taxman in a number of ways," he said.

Cash can be used to pay employers and suppliers off the books. Cash can be skimmed off the top of receipts.

Wright said the size of the underground economy in Texas never has been formally estimated. Projecting national estimates onto the Texas gross state product, he said, 'produces a rough estimate that ranges from about 25 billion to $38 billion

He said the Texas underground economy has several components.

One is the 2,000-mile border with Mexico, which Wright said "must account for a major portion of the estimated $20 billion generated off the books each year by illegal immigrants.

Assistant District Attorney Rusty Hardin Tuesday disputed statements by Constable Ed "Tracy" Maxon, who blamed William F. Wortham Jr. for helping seal his doom.

Wortham, 63, was shot to death April 4 when he walked outside his southwest Houston house to help a lawman subdue a robbery suspect.

Maxon said Wortham inadvertently distracted Deputy Clyde Phillips, who was arresting a teen-ager for attempting to steal Wortham's Cadillac

The suspect took advantage of the distraction to grab the deputy's gun and fire the shot which killed Wortham,

But Hardin and a relative of Wortham's who tried to save the dying man disputed that version of the slaying Tuesday

'The onlyithing I'm taking issue with is the constable's characterization it was a textbook arrest and statements made which somehow made the victim responsible for what happened." Hardin said during a court hearing. "The defendant was responsible."

State District Judge Allen Stilley denied bond for James Edward Gerry, charged with capital murder in the slaying.

Maxon described the incident as "a classic textbook arrest until (Wortham) walked up behind (Phillips).'

"If that was a textbook arrest, I hope other law enforcement agencies don't have the same textbook, "Hardin said.

Hardin said Wortham was still inside his house when Phillips and the would-be robber began struggling. He said Phillips had attempted to arrest Gerry after seeing him in Wortham's car, which had been "hot wired" and

"The constable had one handcuff on him, a struggle began and (Wortham) came out to aid the constable." Hardin Wortham's son-in-law, Mike Belt, 30, who was on the scene shortly after the shooting, also said he does not believe that Wortham distracted Phillips during a routine arrest.

Belt, who lives next door to Wortham, said Wortham's wife, Helen, called him 'seconds after the shooting" and he was in the driveway at Wortham's side within two minutes.

Belt said he never heard Phillips express any notion that Wortham distracted him.

Wortham was still alive, Belt said, and he and Phillips were providing emergency care.

"He kept saving over and over. 'I should have put him down on the ground, I should have put him down on the ground." Belt said. "He must have told the supervisor that six times.

ury questioning resumes today Questioning was expected to resume

SHERMAN, Texas (AP) - Attorneys expect to take two to three weeks to sift through a pool of about 200 prospective jurors in the trial of a man charged with killing four men at an ultralight aircraft hangar last year.

Prospective veniremen in the capital murder trial of Lester Leroy Bower Jr. were let go early Tuesday, the first day of questioning, because the presiding judge received word that his mother

State District Judge R.C. Vaughan recessed juror questioning shortly before 3 p.m. Tuesday, after being told about the condition of his mother, Anna R. Vaughan, who is suffering from congenital heart disease, a courthouse at 9 a.m. today.

Bower, 36, has remained in the Grayson County Jail in lieu of $400,000 bond since his arrest in January.

Bob G. Tate, 51, a Denison building contractor; Philip Good, 29, a Grayson County jailer; Jerry Brown, 52, a Sherman interior designer; and Ronald Mayes, 39, a former Sherman police officer, were found shot to death Oct. 8. 1983, in the hangar on Tate's ranch north of Sherman.

All four had been shot twice in the head. Three of the bodies were found rolled up in a carpet. Mayes was found sprawled near a door, authorities said. Police said an ultralight aircraft was missing from the hangar. Relatives said the men had gone to the ranch to meet a potential buyer for the aircraft.

A search of Bower's garage turned up a pair of ultralight aircraft wheels inscribed with the name "Tate." investigators said.

Bower told lawmen that he had called Good to discuss the sale of an ultralight. Buckner has said that his client is innocent and that he believes more than one person committed the murders.

Investigators have declined to comment on a motive in the killings.

In February, Vaughan issued a gagorder to participants in the case, forbidding them from talking to reporters in an effort to avoid prejudicing potential jurors.

Texas glowing in wake of success of Oscar-winning films

HOUSTON (AP) — This year's Academy Awards had a definite Texas flavor and the makers of two films nominated for best picture are already at work on projects they'd like to see continue that trend.

"Texas films won seven of eight (top) awards." Texas Film Commission Director Joel Smith boasted Tuesday, declaring it was a "good day" for celebrating.

Terms of Endearment," filmed in Houston and written by Texan Larry McMurtry, won the Oscar for best picture. Shirley MacLaine captured the Best Actress prize and Jack Nicholson took Best Supporting Actor. The film also won the directing and screenplay adaptation Oscars for James L. Brooks.

"Tender Mercies," written and co-produced by Texan Horton Foote and shot entirely in Texas, won the Best Actor Oscar for Robert Duvall and original screenplay award for Foote.

"The interesting thing is that two of the guys instrumental in making pictures you're seeing made in Texas - Foote and Martin Jurow (who co-produced "Terms") - are starting other pictures." Smith said.

Minister leaving post to teach at seminary

HOUSTON (AP) - The Rev. Kenneth Chafin, who has spearheaded a battle against an ultra-conservative wing of the Southern Baptist Church, says he will leave his position at a 6.800-member church to teach at a Kentucky seminary.

Chafin announced Sunday he will preach his last sermon at South Main Baptist Church June 3. He has been pastor of the In the fall, he will assume the Carl Bates Chair of Christian and taught at Southern Seminary and Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth. But he gained notoriety as a leader of the moderate element of the Southern Baptist Convention, frequently and sharply criticizing the conservative wing of the 14 million-member years, headed the Baptists' national evangelism programs

Preaching at Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Kv Chafin ran clergy seminars for the Rev. Billy Graham for 15

Chafin once characterized the Rev. W.A. Criswell, pastor of First Baptist Church of Dallas, as "senile" and derided the Rev. Bailey Smith of Del City, Okla., for saying "God almighty does not hear the prayers of a Jew.'

But most of the intradenominational squabbling centered on inerrancy — the belief that every word of the Bible is literally true. The more liberal side in the dispute contends inerrancy is used merely as a rallying cry for what Chafin called "a naked ruthless search for personal power" over the church's boards

On Monday, Chafin said he has gotten a "peek" at the list of board nominees drawn by conservatives to be presented at the denomination's June convention in Kansas City and called it 'the worst thing I've ever seen."

Chafin, twice an unsuccessful candidate for convention president, disputed suggestions that he is out of touch with the denomination's mainstream

Inaction better than tax hike

It is likely that Congress and the administration will trade fusillades and do nothing about the size of the budget this year. Although concern about the size of the federal deficit is legitimate, perhaps it would be the best bet for beleaguered taxpayers if nothing is done.

The administration and Senate Republicans have a plan, of course. So do House Democrats. It should not be surprising that the major feature both plans have in common is higher taxes. If the two sides get together. taxpayers will be subjected to the fourth major tax increase in two years.

It should be noted that all the spending reductions that have been proposed are not reductions from present levels of spending, but reductions from the president's original budget proposals, which contained significant increases in all categories. We're really not talking, then, about reducing government spending, but about reducing the rate of proposed increases in government spending.

These piddling reductions are accompanied by proposed tax increases.

The Republicans want to raise about $45 billion by "closing loopholes." Their proposals would mean higher taxes for reas-estate buyers, small businesses, telephone users, energy-insulation consumers—have we missed anybody? The Democrats are after about $50 billion, with a concentrantion of most of the above, plus scaling back scheduled inheritance-tax reductions—hitting small farm owners hardest

A little recent history is in order.

In 1982, the administration endorsed the hilariously misnamed Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act. It amounted to about $100 billion in higher taxes. The promised three-for-one spending reductions never materialized. The deficit got bigger. The president's credibility diminished.

In a special session in December, 1982, the dministration went for the nickel-a gallon gasoline tay amied directly at the middle class. It was for "job creation." remember?

Last winter the president fought for higher Social Security taxes—again targeted directly at the working and middle classes

If President Reagan agrees to carry the water for the big spenders and go for year another "bipartisan" tax increase, what will remain of his conservative image?

The imperative is to cut spending—really cut it. That's not likely in an election year. Voters who deplore big spending in general by want their own little subsidy preserved are as much to blame for that as spinless politicians.

If the politicians won't reduce spending, however, they might at least spare us another tax increase

Oil merger debate demagoguery.

The Senate debate over imposing a moratorium on oil mergers petered out with surprising speed. For days Capitol Hill has been alight with righteous rhetoric about the oil - soaked malefactors who were somehow getting at the consumer by merging their companies - Gulf and Socal, Texaco and Getty, Mobil and Superior

One thing was plain to the senators: these were horrid goings - on. The mergers would waste capital that might otherwise have gone into finding new energy supplies. The consumer would pay the bill.

Congress had to Do Something to avert disaster; namely, impose a moratorium on mergers. First, there was to be retrospective moratorium; then it turned out that only additional mergers would be disallowed. As things finally turned out. there will be no moratorium, period. The senators sidestepped the whole issue, electing merely to "study" recent oil mergers and determine their probable

Why not? Such a study will have no more purpose than the debate that provoked it.

The debate came about because of all the ink that multibillion - dollar mergers were getting in the press. The political reflex in such cases is Pavlovian: when in doubt, berate "Big Oil."

This comes easily enough to Ohio's Howard Metzenbaum, who made a fortune in parking lots before turning on the industry that makes all the gasoline that propels all the cars he used to park. But even fairly conservative Republicans, like Warren Rudman of New Hampshire, and at least one oil - state senator, Bennett Johnston of Louisiana, got in on the act.

As Sen. John Tower of Texas, sparring with the moratorium supporters, noted astutely: "This is a media play, and members know that any time they want good press they can kick the oil companies.'

What grounds had the moratorium crowd for supposing that mergers would, as they said, harm oil exploration? No grounds. A merger is merely a transfer of resources from one set of hands to another. If exploration is truly an appealing investment option, exploration there will be - no matter who winds up with the money.

The trouble with exploration - it continues to drop, mergers or no - is the economic climate. Oil and especially gas are in temporary surplus. One ironic reason for this is government policy: federal controls on natural gas prices have actually driven up gas prices - and driven off users able to switch to fuel oil.

Meanwhile federal tax policy, as economist Robert Samuelson has noted in NEWSWEEK, skews corporate policy - not just oil - company policy - in the direction of growth and debt. If the government quit taxing corporate income, corporations would work harder to generate income. Oil companies which have to pay "windfall are doubly victimized by the present state of affairs.

If Congress really wanted to increase the oil industry's viability, it would lower its taxes and liberate natural gas prices (oil price controls were lifted in January 1981).

Ah, but no. Big Oil is too much the folklore villain for that. The tradition of stomping on the oil companies goes back at least to the onset of the energy crisis, when so otherwise estimable a senator as Scoop Jackson shook his finger at ten oil company presidents, implying they had cooked up the whole

There should be a sort of Keeley cure for politicians who, whenever the talk turns to oil companies, contract a burning thirst, reach uncontrollably for a bottle of Old Demagoguery, then belt down three or four slugs as the TV cameras churn. There 'should be' a cure, we say. On the recent evidence, nobody has devised one yet

I happened to be sitting across the aisle on an airplane the other day from the consumer's friend, Ralph Nader, the nation's toughest customer.

We didn't get that deep into consumerism, although he did mention there are some realy weird things to be found in hot dogs these days, but Ralph did mention something that has been bugging him in the political arena recently.

"Have you noticed," he asked with furrowed brow, "that Nixon is starting to make another comeback?" I had noticed a little resurgence. He's doing some political analyzing for television and an interview here and an interview there, but Tricky Dickie always was a hard dog to keep under the porch, during even the worst times of his

"He made a speech to a very high - powered group of businessmen the other day - a group everybody wants a chance to talk to - and I heard he got eight standing ovations," Nader whispered across the table.

EDITOR'S NOTE-The Pampa News will publish the Lewis about the apparent change in attitude toward the once something like that happen to a nice man like Jimmy Carter?

I admit Jimmy Carter had his problems as our president, but who has sat in that office who hasn't? And was he really all that bad? He didn't lead us into any wars, his administration certainly wasn't corrupt, and he at least kept Ted Kennedy in the Senate. We certainly owe for that, at least.

If we can come to grips with forgiving Nixon, can't we at least begin to cast aside any ill will toward Jimmy Carter? The big question during the race for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination is will the voters hold it against Walter Mondale that he was Jimmy Carter's vice president? Carter doesn't have leprosy, for goodness' sake. Considering some of the cronies our current president has, how could we look down our noses at Mondale's association with a God fearing son of the land like Jimmy Carter?

We can't blame our most recent ex - president for every bad thing that happened during his administration, but we do. We love a scapegoat.

I don't see eye - to - eye with Jimmy Carter politically, either, but I certainly would drink from his glass and not feel I was going to get some sort of disease.

I think the voters basically didn't cotton to Carter because This bit of news doesn't al ne on its face - besides, we've he smiled a lot and spoke with a soft, high - pitched voice, and always been a forgiving sor. of people - but the more I thought we got the idea he was somehow weak. And when he went one - on - one with Ronald Reagan, who knows television like Carter knows peanuts, Carter looked like even more of a pansy.

But I wonder. What if there hadn't been that sandstorm on the Iranian desert that morning, and Jimmy Carter had pulled off a daring rescue of the hostage? Would we have thought him

No, he would have been a hero, and he still would ! president, and hot dog Gary Hart still would be a mere figmer of his own imagination

Reagan takes credit for auto recovery

CLAYCOMO, Mo. (AP) -President Reagan, calling attention to the economic recovery, today told workers at a newly-thriving auto plant, "You're getting lean and mean and ready to face the challenge of the future."

In a trip the White House insisted was official business and not political, Reagan took credit for the domestic auto industry's recent upturn and declared it symbolic of the wider economic recovery since he took office three years ago

"Each of you can rightly take pride in helping make us all that we are and all we can be," he said. "Only a few years ago, this industry and

In response to problems, Reagan said, "We charted a new course to rebuild America from the bottom up. We knew government had to get its own house in order ... We also knew it wouldn't be easy. Both the economy and the auto industry were in recession - the culmination of years of overtaxing, overspending and overpromising by those who claimed they could spend your earnings better than you

Third Fort Worth-area student is found dead

WHITE SETTLEMENT, Texas (AP) - A 17-year-old high school junior found dead in the bathtub of his home is the third student suspected of killing himself in Tarrant County this week, authorities said.

Larry Chapman, described as a quiet teen-ager who juggled his position as manager of the Brewer High School basketball team with an after-school job at a grocery store, was discovered dead at 9:55 a.m. Monday

Chapman had cut his right wrist and inner elbow with a straight-edge razor and shot himself in the mouth with a 12-gauge shotgun, said White Settlement police Lt. L.W. Terry.

Two suicide notes were found near the bathroom, Terry said. He declined to reveal ontents, but said one was headed with a 8:52 a.m. Monday.

Pending an autopsy report by the Tarrant County medical examiner, the death has been ruled an apparent suicide, Terry said.

Chapman was the third Tarrant County youth who may have killed himself this week,

Autopsies on the bodies of Neil Risinger, 16, and Christopher Clower, 17, were co Tuesday, but a spokesman for the Tarrant County medical examiner said results were not yet complete.

Two surveyors found the boys, described by friends as inseparable, in the cab of a pickup truck about 1:30 p.m. Monday, police said, in a grassy field in southeast Arlington. a suburb midway between Dallas and Fort Worth. Each had been shot once in the forehead

Indeed, if he hopes to win the nomination, Hart must do more than simply "do better." He must win big repeatedly in the closing two months of the primary season. In Pennsylvania, Mondale clobbered Hart in the battle for its prize of 172 pledged delegates, which were selected in a second-stage of voting apart from the presidential preference contest.

That gave Mondale more than 1,000 delegates, well over the halfway mark to the 1.967 votes he needs to win at the national convention in San Francisco in July.

More than 2,100 of the delegates have already been chosen or allocated. That leaves 1,817 delegates yet to be chosen; another 248 are chosen but currently uncommitted.

Financial institutions scramble for 1983 retirement funds

By CHET CURRIER AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Brokers, banks and other financial institutions are putting in their last-minute pitches right now for 1983 individual retirement accounts.

As the clock runs down on the April 16 deadline for filing federal income tax returns, they mounted expensive promotional campaigns.

Actually, that deadline can be put off until August if you file for an automatic four-month extension for filing, and are eligible to do so, as most people are. But with an extension, you put off claiming any refund you might have coming from the Internal Revenue Service.

As all the promotions are at pains to point out, taxpayers who earned money from a job in 1983 have only until their filing deadline to make a deductible contribution to an IRA for the year. It can be as much as $2,000 for an individual, $2,250 for a family in which only one spouse works, and $4,000 for two-income couples.

It's evident that many people this year, as usual, have put off settling their tax accounts until the last minute.

This is the second time around for financial-services firms in the early-April IRA promotional blitz. A year ago, they were concentrating on new accounts, since 1982 was the first tax year in which eligibility for IRAs was extended to all working Americans keep their existing accounts, and to woo business away from the competition.

This time, they're still bidding for IRA

Some savers, meanwhile, are beginning to get a new perspective on their IRAs as the money in them starts to accumulate. A two-income family in which both spouses have already made the maximum contributions for 1982 through 1984 has $12,000 in IRA money, plus whatever the contributions have already earned.

This situation helps heighten awareness of some of the lesser-known flexible features of IRA investing. You can move an account from one investment to another, or one institution to another, and you can spread your contributions around in as many places as you want.

As IRA savers study the results to date of an account opened a year or more ago, they may also come to a clearer realization that an IRA is not just an April tax break, but a long-term, tax-deferred savings and investment program that benefits from regular attention.

As they consider shifting their accounts. however, they may also come up against early withdrawal penalties, exit fees or other charges imposed by the institution where they began their IRAs. Such niceties can be overlooked when an account is opened in

Financial experts say that is one of many reasons why it makes sense to carry out, or at least plan, IRA strategies well in advance of the cutoff date. Making investment decisions is tough enough, they note, without having to do it on deadline first-timers. But they are also working to Parents sue hospital in abduction

Girl missing where most wanted man last seen

TORRANCE, Calif. (AP) - A race car driver on the FBI's Ten Most Wanted List because he is suspected in six abductions and one murder was sighted here on the same day that a teen-age girl vanished on her way to a job interview, authorities

Christopher Bernard Wilder, 39, an Australian native who is the object of a nationwide manhunt, was seen at a motel in this Los Angeles suburb on April 3 and 4, FBI agent John Hoos said Tuesday in

The 16-year-old Torrance girl, whose name was not immediately released, has been missing since April 4, police Lt. Robert Armstrong said.

"As soon as I saw that flier (with the missing girl's picture), I got a terrible pinking feeling, Armstrong said. "I hope I'm wrong."

FBI agents have tracked Wilder from Florida through Texas, Colorado and Arizona to Las Vegas. Nev., and now to this town 15 miles south of downtown Los Angeles.

In several cities, young women have disappeared the same day Wilder was seen, and he has been charged in the abduction of a Florida State University student and in the murder of an Oklahoma City woman whose body was found in Kansas, authorities said.

The Torrance girl "had called her boyfriend and said something about going to school and after school she had some kind of job interview." Armstrong said.

"She mentioned Del Amo center," Armstrong said. He said Wilder likes to "get girls out of shopping centers, indicate he's a photographer and that the girl is beautiful and he'd like to take her picture.'

Four indicted on conspiracy to smuggle children

LAREDO, Texas (AP) - An alleged conspiracy to smuggle two Mexican children into the United States and place them for adoption in return for money resulted in the indictments of four women. federal officials said.

San Juana "Cuca" Martinez-Lopez, Celestina 'Celina'' Rios-Rivera, Juanita Melendez-Calderon of Laredo and Nelda Karen Colwell of Salt Lake City, Utah, were indicted on five counts of conspiracy to smuggle undocumented children for purposes of placing them up for adoption, U.S. Attorney David Alvarez said Tuesday.

Ms. Martinez-Lopez and Ms. Rios-Rivera were charged on two counts with transportation of illegal aliens, Alvarez said.

Ms. Melendez-Calderon was indicted on two counts of producing false indentification documents. Ms. Martinez-Lopez and Ms. Colwell were charged with aiding, abetting, counseling, commanding, inducing and procurring the violations by Ms. Melendez-Calderon, according to the indictment.

Alvarez said the women were being sought by authorities Tuesday night. Prosecutors say the alleged conspiracy involved the four woman and that authorities believe Ms.

Martinez-Lopez headed the operation in Laredo. Alvarez said both of the babies, a boy and a girl.

He said when people think of economically epressed border areas, Brownsville, Laredo and El Paso - all of which are trying to recover from the U.S. recession and Mexican peso devaluations - readily come to mind.

Maverick County's unemployment rate, however, always has been higher than that of Laredo and Webb County, usually considered the nation's highest

In December, Maverick County's unemployment rate was 32.9 percent, compared to Laredo's 21.8 percent for the same period, according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Even at Webb County's unemployment peak, it did not compare with Maverick County's. In March 1983, Webb County, with a population of 99,000, had 28.9 percent unemployment rate. Maverick County, with a population of about $30,000, recorded 42.3 percent unemployment rate.

"I think the (recognition for Laredo) is because it once had a big Air Force base and presidents have visited down there," Montalvo said

Like the other border cities, Eagle Pass suffered a double punch about two years ago during the United States' economic recession and the Mexican peso devaluation.

Today, the communities are using various tactics to attract industry to boost their economies.

The federal government, through grants from the Small Business Administration and other agencies, has made it attractive for new industries to relocate to the border towns.

Several Eagle Pass leaders have formed the Maverick County Development Corp., whose main purpose is to attract new businesses. Eagle Pass has offered to sell land inexpensively, to help revitalize the town to its state two years ago. So far, the corporation has managed to get Winnebago and American Arms Inc. to look at the town.

In 1982, Eagle Pass was enjoying its biggest boom, supported by trade from Mexicans in neighboring Piedras Negras. New home construction was at its peak. Downtown retail sales were high and the town was expanding to the east. The recession had not affected Texas vet.

Then the Mexican government announced a peso devaluation, with subsequent ones imminent. The effects of those devaluations and the onslaught of the U.S. recession were devastating. Numerous Eagle Pass merchants, no longer getting Mexican pesos, were forced out of business.

People were left without jobs and many had to find other ways of supporting themselves. One of those was Rolando Perez, the current manager of the city's chamber of commerce. 'People had to change skills to something else," said Perez, whose home construction business folded. "Most of the businesses that went under were small ones that didn't have the capital to survive something like this." He said those fortunate to have a job suffered reduced wages and benefits. 'When the devaluation hit, (Mexicans) who were spending money here weren't able to spend it anymore," Perez said. "They had to stop and re-adjust their finances. You don't have to be a businessman to see you have to wait and see how much you have to spend.

Eagle Pass and Piedras Negras slowly are recovering and trying to attract new business to the area. But the towns have virtually little different to offer companies that other depressed areas haven't offered, except their people.

The year of triumph for Sweden's 'Demon Director'

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) - Film and stage director Ingmar Bergman, whose in fantasy, and by the powers of the "Fanny and Alexander" won four 1984 Academy Awards, has long enjoyed a reputation as Scandinavia's most acclaimed cultural personality and as a favorite of the global intellectual elite.

"Fanny and Alexander," the 65-year-old director's self-proclaimed grand finale as a film maker, won Bergman his third Oscar for best foreign film, as well as taking awards for best cinematography, best art direction and best costume design.

It was nominated but came up short in two other categories: best director (Bergman) and best original screenplay (Bergman

Bergman is best known to American audiences for a series of masterpieces he created in the late 1950s and early 1960s: "The Seventh Seal," "Wild Strawberries," "The Virgin Spring" and "Through a Glass, Darkly." The last two won Oscars as best foreign film.

In addition to that, he won the Irving Thalberg Academy Award in 1970 for consistently high production standards.

Besides the Academy Awards, Bergman has already had his share of triumph in 1984. Last month, Bergman the stage director returned to the same Stockholm stage which tax police dragged him from eight years ago. The incident over alleged tax evasion by his production company led to a nervous breakdown for Bergman and artistic exile in Munich, West Germany

Bergman returned with a highly personal version of Shakespeare's "King Lear" that was hailed by domestic and international critics. Joseph Papp, the New York theater impresario who himself has staged two versions of the tragedy, called it "the best 'Lear' I've ever seen.

"Fanny and Alexander," a smash success since it opened in Stockholm in December 1982, is an extravagant three-hour-plus portrait of the Swedish upper class in the pre-World War I years. It also is a powerful achievement in which Bergman finally seemed to cleanse himself of what he has called a traumatic childhood.

The $4 million production - the biggest project in the history of Swedish cinema — is about 10-year-old Alexander and his 8-year-old sister Fanny. They are mentally and physically abused by their stepfather, the local bishop, whom their mother marries after the death of their father.

The shy and weak Alexander takes refuge supernatural he takes a hideous revenge on his tormentor. Despite its macabre episodes, critics generally considered the film an upbeat crowning of a career consisting mostly of deeply pessimistic works.

"Fanny and Alexander" also gave Bergman universal domestic acclaim from politically minded Swedish critics who haven't always cared for his introverted Freudian themes. The film was awarded a Golden Globe from Hollywood's foreign correspondents as the best foreign film of 1983. New York's film critics named it "Film of the Year 1983." American writer-director Lawrence

Kasdan, another nominee in the best screenplay category for the "The Big Chill," said before Monday night's ceremonies that he was convinced Bergman would win. "Of course he will win, but I'm honored to be nominated in the same category as him, Kasdan said in a Swedish newspaper interview. "After all, it was Bergman's work that started off my interest in film. Bergman did not appear at the ceremony in person but received special permission from the Academy of Motion Picture of Arts and Sciences to send his fifth wife Ingrid, who is also his business manager Jorn Donner, the film's Finnish executive producer, was present, along with winning cinematographer Sven Nykvist and art director Anna Asp. Nykvist also won an Oscar for working with Bergman in the 1973 film "Cries and Whispers." In accepting the 1984 cinematography Oscar on Monday, Nykvist said that "I want to thank the man with whom I've had the good fortune to work with for 25 years and 22 pictures, Ingmar Bergman." Said Mrs. Bergman: "I'm going to hurry to

Ingmar and tell him about the warm and wonderful reception you have given his

The shy, sensitive Bergman rarely gives interviews. Nevertheless, the limelight has shone increasingly on him over the past 40 years.

The director, whose Lutheran priest father was preacher to the Swedish royal court, has spoken publicly of a traumatic childhood as a sickly boy: of frequent canings and humiliations, but also of a deep love for his mother and his refuge in fantasy and taste for the macabre.

Pampans to star in local dinner theatre production

Four Pampa residents are to be among the cast members of Burns. He acted in 10 Pampa High School productions and place in the Pampa Fine Art Association's Halloween window Act I's dinner theatre production, "A Thousand Clowns" directed by Pampan Clark Grundler.

The play runs from April 12 through April 14 in the Coronado inn Starlight Room. The buffet begins at 6:30 p.m., with the curtain rising at 8 p.m. For reservations, call 665 - 4334.

Ronnie Holmes, Gary Kelton, Michael Dunn and Dee Joiner, along with Randy Carter and Marilyn Mize comprise the cast of the comedy.

Holmes is no stranger to the Act I theatre group, having played minor roles in their first two productions. This is to be his first starring role with this group as he plays Murray made guest appearances after graduation. His roles include Professor Kokintz in "The Mouse That Roared," Henry in "The Fantastiks," plus roles in "The Night Thoreau Spent In Jail" and "The Golden Grotto."

He and his wife, Sharon, have one son, Jordan, 3. Holmes also enjoys record collecting and following his "beloved" Baltimore Orioles.

Michael Dunn is the 12 - year - old son of Jerry and Clare Dunn of Pampa. He attends sixth grade classes at Pampa Middle School. He plays the trombone, draws and plays sports, especially little league baseball and basketball. He won first painting contest.

The role of Nick Burns is Dunn's first major acting role. No doubt he caught the "acting fever" while helping his mother with her lines as Dr. Wyatt in "Witness for the Prosecution" Act I's most recent production, and watching the rehearsal process while she served as assistant director and stage manager. His father works for Cabot and his brothr, Bobby, is eight years old.

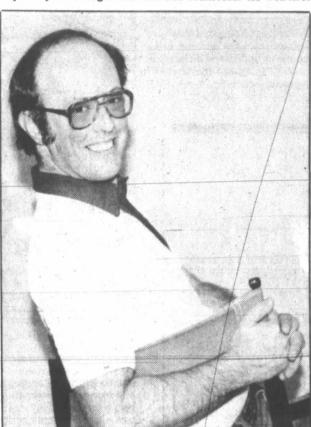

Dee Joiner, Albert Admundson in the play, has appeared in a number of productions including Beverly and Banjo in "Man Who Came to Dinner" and the doctor in "Anybody Out There."

He also performed as the police chief in "The Visit" and as Gucci in Act I's "Plaza Suite". Although born in Grogen Joiner attended Pampa High School. He enjoys water snow skiing and is employed with Cabot Gas Processing and

Gary Kelton, who will play Leo Herman in A Thousand Clowns, holds a speech and theatre degree from Angelo State University. For three years he played starring and supporting roles, including "Eeyor" the donkey in a reader's theatre production of "House at Pooh Corner. "Type casting" Kelton said his instructor told him. This Chinese market is not for the squeamish

CANTON, China (AP) - In northern China, people say "the Cantonese will eat anything" and if the Qingping market is anything to go by, they're right.

Turtles with yellow heads for 3 yuan ($1.50), dried rats, poisonous snakes, owls and quail - all can be found in the crowded lanes of the sometimes gruesome outdoor market near the Pearl River.

On one recent weekend, a visitor saw peasants selling 3-foot-high stacks of yellowing tobacco leaves for those who roll their own. Other merchants displayed mountain-shaped heaps of fresh ginger and traditional Chinese medicines including deer antler, black fungus and and not for the squeamish.

Even the most respectable restaurants in Canton have dog meat on their menu often called "fragrant meat" - and both freshly slaughtered and roast dog is "warming" food, especially healthy in the winter months. The colorful-sounding Cantonese dish, "struggle of

Qingping is one of the biggest of Canton's 20 "free" markets, at which peasants from the fertile subtropical countryside and other vendors can buy and sell as they please, provided they obtain a license which costs less than a dollar. "Before 1979 this was not allowed because during the Cultural Revolution, such markets were considered capitalism," a city official explained.

Thanks to the reforms introduced by Deng

In Mexico, "picante" means hot and spicy. In San Antonio it refers to a spicy blend of garden - fresh flavors found in a popular sauce with authentic Mexican taste. A standby for eggs prepared makes a lively flavor difference in standard egg recipes when substituted for all or part of the liquid or used as a topping. For instant Huevos Rancheros, a Southwestern menu favorite, simply pour picante sauce into the skillet in which you've fried or poached eggs to warm it through before spooning on top.

Fire and Ice Eggs combines eggs with bacon, cheese and rice in a satisfying casserole that's a snap to fix. The "fire" of picante sauce any style, picante sauce and the "ice" of dairy sour cream provide the palate pleasing contrast so typical of Tex - Mex specialties. Bake until the eggs are done as you like them.

> Whether you call it quiche. egg and cheese pie or custard tart, this popular dish is "easier than pie" to prepare and ideal for brunch, lunch or supper. Picante Quiche quickly combines cheese, eggs, half and half and picante sauce to bake without fuss in a convenient frozen pie crust. As the heart - flavored quiche bakes, an easy topping tomato is simmered for spooning over individual servings.

FIRE & ICE EGGS 5 strips bacon, cut into 1-inch pieces 3 c. hot cooked rice 11/2 c. shredded Colby. cheddar or Monterey Jack cheese

1/2 c. dairy sour cream ¼ c. picante sauce 1/2 t. salt

5 eggs Cook bacon until crisp; drain well. Combine rice, 1 cup of the cheese, sour cream, picante sauce and salt; mix well. Spoon into 8 inch square baking dish. Make five deep indentations with the back of a spoon in the rice mixture. Drop an egg into each indentation. Arrange bacon around eggs and sprinkle with remaining ½ cup cheese. Bake at 350 degrees F. for 30 to 35 minutes or until eggs are cooked to desired doneness. Serve with additional picante sauce. Makes five servings.

PICANTE QUICHE 1 c. shredded Monterey Jack cheese 2 T. flour 1 c. picante sauce

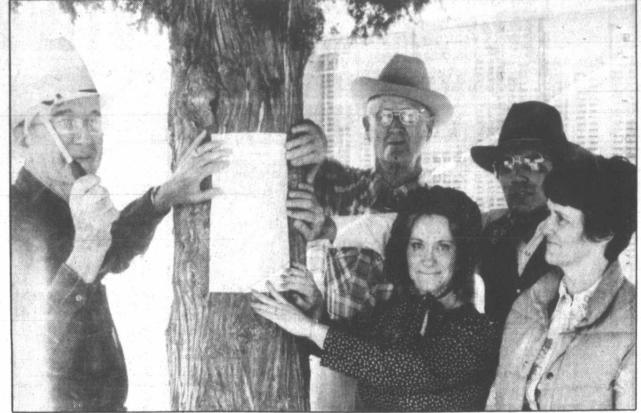

1/2 c. half and half ½ c. chopped red or green pepper 4 strips bacon, cooked and crumbled 3 eggs, beaten Dash salt and pepper

1 (9-inch) frozen pie shell 1 small tomato, chopped Toss cheese with flour in large bowl. Add 1-3rd cup of the picante sauce, half and half, red pepper, bacon, eggs, salt and pepper; mix well. Pour into pie shell. Bake at 350 degrees F. for 35 to 40 minutes or until set. Remove from oven; let stand 10 minutes. While quiche stands, heat remaining picante sauce with tomato in small saucepan. Serve sauce over

When brown sugar cakes into a lump and won't crum ble, put it and a piece of fresh white bread in a sealed container and let sit for 24 hours. The bread will humidify the sugar and it will be as good as new. Or, you can put the brown sugar (box and all) in a slow oven for a while, and it will sof ten up nicely.

AP Wine and Food Writer

As the popularity of Europe's table wines continues to shift rom the traditional vineyards, Portugal, long known mainly or its rose wines, is making a strong showing elsewhere.

'We now rank fifth in world popularity," I was told by Dr. amilio Martins de Oliveira, national director of the ortuguese Trade Commission in the United States

Oliveira, whose family has owned vineyards in Portugal for generations, noted the sudden rise in popularity of vinho erde, which means young wine.

With a relatively low 9 percent alcoholic content, this wine has fewer calories than most table wines, and its slight natural fervescence makes it a refreshing warm weather drink, Vinho verde used to be relatively unknown in this country. but tourists began returning with glowing accounts, and its sales began to pick up.

Dear Abby

Abused daughter fears her father's revenge

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 21-year-old mother of three. My father started to abuse me sexually when I was 8, and he kept on until I was 14. I finally couldn't take it anymore, so I went to the police and my father was sent to prison

Now that he's out, he wants to see me. He wrote a letter saying that everything that happened was my fault, but now he's changed. I wrote back and told him that every thing that happened was not my fault, it was his fault because an 8-year-old girl doesn't know enough about life to throw herself at a man-especially her own father. I also told him he was not welcome here and I never wanted to see him again.

Abby, he knows where I live and I'm afraid he will come after me for revenge. I have no phone, and if he ever came here and broke into my house, I'd be helpless. He's a mean and violent man.

I went to the district attorney and told him my story, and he said there was nothing he could do unless my father made the first move. What should I do?

SCARED STIFF

DEAR SCARED: Unfortunately, the district attorney is correct. You may feel threatened, but unless your father actually threatens you, there is nothing you can do. You may be overreacting. If your father really wanted to get revenge, he wouldn't have written to say that he wanted to see you; he would have visited by now.

If you can possibly afford a telephone, get one so that you can call for help in case of an emergency. If you live alone with your children, consider getting a boarder. A dog would also offer protection. You might want to take a course in self-defense.

If there's a women's group in your area, or a family crisis-intervention group, appeal to it for

EMOTIONALLY YOURS

DEAR YOURS: Not as usual as it is for a wife to cry in the doctor's waiting room fearing she's pregnant (again).

DEAR ABBY: I am an inmate in a federal prison, presently serving two life sentences for bank robbery and murder (two unrelated crimes). I am an artist, I write poetry and prose, and I'm also an

'A' student in college correspondence courses. I have no family to write to. Could you please tell me how to get pen pals?

DEAR NO. 23536: Your prison chaplain can give you the names of organizations that provide that the figure go to 400,000 cases by 1985," said Oliveira.

It is said that no table wine equals the roses of Portugal in popularity. These wines have a great following in this country because they are refreshing and go with almost any dish. They can be drunk throughout the meal with fish, meat, fruit and cheese. Simply chill the bottle and serve.

In fact, the rose's popularity has overshadowed some excellent red wines that Portugal produces. The country has 875,000 acres of vineyards under cultivation.

The wines include a red vinho verde which is one of the few reds of the world which goes well chilled, especially in hot weather. Other noted reds come from the provinces of Douro, where the vineyards grow on terraces hewn out of slate and granite, and Cartaxo, where the grapes flourish in the sandy imestone soil and moderate temperatures.

Oregano, for centuries a favorite ingredient in Mediterranean dishes, became popular in the United States following World War II.

Soldiers who passed through southern Italy brought home a taste for the herb. American tourists in Italy later discovered oregano in such dishes as beef braciola: stuffed beef rolls in tomato sauce well-seasoned with oregano

Youngsters look to future

WASHINGTON (AP) —
There won't be a shortfall of scientists either on earth or in outer space in the next century, a survey of some of the nation's most promising future scientists — the 40 national winners in the 43rd annual Westinghouse Science Talent Search — indicates.

The high school seniors from 19 states, ranging in age from 16 to 18, all plan to pursue scientific careers after college. They met here recently to share $89,500 in scholarships and cash awards in the competition administered by Science Service and funded by the Westinghouse Electric Corp.

Nearly 60 percent agreed that science education is getting better. Many expressed the belief that an increasing number of students would turn to scientific careers because of expanding employment opportunities, changing high school curricula and greater cooperation and encouragement from educators and working scientists.

Young enough and talented enough to consider future scientific careers either on earth or in outer space, what are their preferences?

14 cups well-stirred all-

purpose flour
¼ cup wheat germ
2 teaspoons baking powder
Salt to taste
½ of a ¼-pound stick butter
1-3rd cup sugar
1 large egg

Two ripe bananas (each 6 ounces)
Stir together flour, wheat germ, baking powder and salt. Cream butter and sugar; beat in egg. Peel and finely mash bananas — there should be 1 cup; add to creamed mixture with flour, stir only until dry ingredients are moistened. Turn into a greased 8 by 4 by 3-inch loaf pan. earth preferable for some, such as Margaret Meng, 17, Columbia, Md. She echoed the views of several others when she said, "Only on earth would I be able to actually see the immediate and future problems of society and help improve living conditions in the world."

Her winning project in biochemistry related to cardiovascular disease and earned her a $500 cash award. After graduation from Centennial High School in Ellicott City, Ms. Meng plans to study electrical engineering at Stanford University.

"We ought to straighten things out here before we fly misguided into another universe," said Christopher Montanaro, the winner of the top $12,000 scholarship for a project in molecular genetics.

A student at Oxford Hills High School in South Paris, Maine, Montanaro has won several math awards and is also an outstanding jazz musician. He plans to continue studying molecular biology and mathematics at either Brown University or Haverford College.

It's strictly a career on earth, too, for Mark Hamburg, 17, Midland, Mich., who said, "I happen to be quite fond of the natural environment"

The winner of a $5,000 scholarship for a computer science project, he is planning to become a research scientist after graduation from the H.H. Dow High School and further college studies at the University of Rochester. First in his class, Hamburg is active in school dramatic productions, the International Affairs Club and the National Honor Society.

Helping others also matters to those who prefer working in outer space. So does the challenge of opening new scientific frontiers.

"Given the weightless environment of outer space, new therapeutic drugs can be produced inexpensively which will benefit the people down on earth," said Sandy

Chang, 17, winner of the second-place $10,000 scholarship for a project in astronomy and a student at the Bronx High School of Science in New York City.

A basketball and swimming enthusiast, Chang plans to major in the biological sciences for a career in research after study at Yale University.

The research opportunities available in outer space appealed to the students who hoped to spend part of their careers investigating them. Another student put it differently.

"I wouldn't mind commuting," said Jessica Riskin, 16, Stuyvesant High School, New York City, and the winner of a ninth-place $5,000 scholarship for a project in plasma physics.

"One needs to have an external perspective to study and understand the Earth well. I would like to travel into outer space not only to see and discover new things but also to view both the old and the new in a new way," she said.

Ms. Riskin plans to study physics and literature at Harvard and hopes to become a theoretical physicist.

For Albert Chew, 17, Carl Junction, Mo., it won't make any difference where he works. "I feel that eventually man has to search frontiers beyond the earth to accommodate for our planet's increasing population and decreasing natural resources," Chew said.

He received a $500 cash award for his bacteriology entry. After graduation from Carl Junction Sr. High School, he plans to study for a career as a biotechnologist and microbiologist.

It doesn't matter either to Micah Sageev, 17, Amherst, N.Y., who received $500 for a winning project in mathematics.

HAS LYING D TO ORM

DALLAS (AP) - He was a human computer for the Navy in World War II and the Korean War. He has written 15 books and a newspaper column that has been published in more than 300 newspapers

But Dallas resident Oswald Jacoby is probably best known for an accomplishment no one else has come close to matching. He has won more North American bridge championships - 43 - than

In February, Jacoby was honored for his bridge skills by Jaime Ortiz-Patino, president of the World Bridge Federation Jacoby, 81, was named an "honorary international grand master. Two other renowned bridge players - Charles Goren and Waldemar Von Zewitz - also were honored at the event, held at The Mansion.

"Ossie is one of the greatest bridge players in the world, possibly the greatest," says ridge historian and author Alfred Sheinwold, whose column appears in The Dallas Morning News. Sheinwold has known Jacoby for more than 50 years.

Jacoby's latest achievement came a few days before his 81st birthday in December, when he won the National Seniors Championship in Miami. The victory made him the only person to win national championships in each of the past seven decades.

"It was the most popular bridge victory in history," Sheinwold said. "Everybody started to cheer as they heard

Ossie won. Jacoby won his first national championship in 1929. In 1935, he won his first world championship, when his team beat the French team. His influence has been felt in the bridge world ever Jacoby plays like he talks - machine-gun fast.

"He has a magnificent technique," Sheinwold says. "He's a marvelous psychologist. He's good at so many things that go into being a bridge player.

Jacoby also is an expert at backgammon. In 1973, at age 70, he won the world backgammon championship. He has written books on both backgammon and canasta, a once-popular game that no longer is played widely; the canasta book was the best-selling non-fiction book of 1949.

"Canasta was ruined by amateurs," Jacoby days. "Everybody wanted to play by their own rules."

He's also excellent at gin rummy, poker, chess and checkers. But bridge holds the most interest for him.

"It's one of the most fascinating games there is," he says. "It gives you a chance to play with a partner, to learn bidding and the play of the cards. I've learned more than anybody else, but I haven't learned everything there is to learn about bridge."

Jacoby says he turned into a professional bridge player quite by accident. When he was growing up in Brooklyn, his father taught him numerous card games. But Jacoby was primarily interested in mathematics. Family honor (and a cousin who won the Navy Cross) convinced him to lie about his age and enlist in the Navy en he was 15. World War I ended two months later. So Jacoby then followed his first

By GLENNA WHITLEY - love - mathematics - to Columbia University.

"At college, we played bridge for a little money at the fraternity house," Jacoby says. "By the time I was 18, I'd learned to play pretty good bridge."

He stuck to mathematics, though, and at age 21, he became the youngest actuary in the country, calculating statistical risks and premiums for insurance.

In 1929, on a tour of the western United States in search of a solvent insurance company to buy, Jacoby ran into George Reith, who was organizing the first contract bridge pair tournament. Reith, a bridge legend. needed a partner. Jacoby played with him, and they won the tournament.

Jacoby was hooked Though he spent the next 60 years as an actuary, bridge was his major avocation.

In 1932, he was visiting Dallas to lecture on bridge when he was introduced to Mary Zita McHale, who was swinging a racquet at the now-defunct Dallas Lawn Tennis Club. He met her on Monday, proposed on Tuesday, and they married the next Monday.

"She didn't play bridge, by the way," Jacoby says, "but she learned fast. We've had 51 good married years, going on - one for every card in the

The couple took up permanent residence in Dallas in 1936, where they have lived since - when they're not traveling around the world for bridge.

Jacoby's short-lived military career picked up again in the 1940s. While he was playing in the North American championships, word came of the attack on Pearl Harbor. That afternoon, he abandoned the Navy. His assignment? "Ossie was a sort of human computer," Sheinwold says. 'He was immensely helpful to the Navy breaking codes. He did he same thing in Korea." He also worked on the first Univac computers, becoming a computer expert game and re-enlisted in the

After returning from Korea in the early 1950s, Sheinwold says, Jacoby found that bridge rival Charles Goren had overtaken him in the race for master points, which are awarded to bridge players by the American Contract Bridge League.

Jacoby fought back, and 'he overtook Goren," Sheinwold says. "He became the first player to get over 10,000 master points, which at the time was like breaking the sound barrier.

Jacoby remembers returning to Washington from Korea in 1953 and meeting a fellow naval officer, who invited him to play bridge at the White House. Jacoby ended up playing with President Dwight Eisenhower and Supreme Court Chief Justice Fred Vinson. He also has played with the Duchess of Windsor

"I won $10 from the president." Jacoby says. "And he paid up. When you play with royalty, they never pay up.

Joe Morgan is taking final shot

PHOENIX, Ariz. (NEA) If it weren't for tennis, Joe Morgan probably wouldn't be playing baseball t the age of 40 for a million cks a year.

We're not talking about the therapeutic effects of the net game on a quadragenarian body, although no doubt they're positive.

It's just that when Joe built himself a lavish home high in the Oakland hills overlooking San Francisco Bay, he also put in a tennis court. And on that tennis court he frequently trades forehands and backhands with Roy Eisenhardt.

Eisenhardt happens to be the operational owner of the Oakland A's.

After Morgan had announced his retirement from baseball last fall, following his World Series appearance with the Philadelphia Phillies, the A's owner asked him if he'd reconsider. Joe gave him a flat no.

"But a week later." recalls Joe, "we were playing tennis at my place and afterward we were having a beer, and he asked me again.

This time, Joe hesitated. His wife, Gloria, and his daughters, Lisa and Angela. had already told him they didn't want him to quit - if he were going to be in Oakland for the summer. He was also negotiating to buy a couple of businesses in his home city, and a public posture as second baseman for the Oakland A's wouldn't hurt either.

'So I started thinking about it," muses Joe, "Is it good for you?

"I talked to Roy again. I didn't want to be in a situation, I told him, where I was going to be carrying the whole load again.'

Not even for a million bucks a year. Joe had been traded from the San Francisco Giants to the Phillies for the 1983 season. Though his role in getting the Phillies to the World Series was gratifying - he hit .337 in September to spur them down the stretch - it was also trying. During the early summer, he kept pulling leg muscles from the strain of playing every day.

JOE MORGAN, 40, obtained by the Oakland A's from the Philadelphia Phillies, says he can still play. "If I'm healthy, nothing's bothering me, I can go out there continually," says Morgan. "I will play a lot of games."

"Pat Corrales's job was on the line," says Joe, "and to be honest, I feel a loyalty to the manager. He asked me to play, and I did the best I could, but I kept getting hurt."

Morgan had the temerity to say that he couldn't go on like this, that he needed a week off. The Phillies' brass insinuated that he was malingering. And delivered what sounded like an ultimatum - play or else.

Morgan responded with that brilliant closing burst to the regular season and creditable post-season play. "I told people before the World Series," he says,

"Look, for a week at a time, I can play as well as I ever played. But for 10 days, I

So in agreeing to join the A's for his 20th full season as a major-league second some stipulations - he should play maybe four times a week and see how it goes. Also, he should assume a leadership role, in the community as well as in the dugout and on the field. "I've talked to Roy and Steve (Boros, manager)," he notes. "At this time of my life, I don't need any misunderstandings. I feel I can help some of the young guys, and that's their feeling, too.

"I was fortunate to play with Nellie Fox, Eddie Kasko, Joe Gaines - guys like that - when I was 19 years old and who taught me things that it took other guys five years to learn. I want to be able to pass some of those things on.'

Still, he was reminded, the A's aren't exactly paying him a cool million to transmit information.

"That's a good point," he nods. "I agree. I'm going to play. If I'm healthy, nothing's bothering me, I can go out there continually

But when I'm hurt, I have to take time to get well. Whereas when I was young, I could really play right through it. Half of me at that time was still good enough to do the job. Now half of me is not. Now I have to have 90 per cent of me to do the job I want. I will play a lot of games, but I don't like to put numbers

There are some numbers pertinent to this future Hall of Famer.

Going into 1984, he had 262 career home runs four away from matching Rogers Hornsby's record for the most ever hit by a second baseman. He had 681 career stolen bases, and showed last year that he had lost little of his quickness by stealing 18 bases in 20 attempts. From 1973 through 1977, he won five consecutive Golden Gloves for fielding excellence; he still has fine range. He won National League MVP honors twice, played in seven championship series, four World Series and nine All-Star games

But he doesn't have a figure fetish, like his old Cincinnati teammate and buddy, Pete Rose, who's now pursuing Ty Cobb's base hit record, as a Montreal Expo.

"There's one difference between myself and Pete." says Joe. "He is always so gung ho and driven that he doesn't look at realities some time. He just will not accept the fact that he can't play 162 days in a year.

"He's got to understand no one's going to pay him money knowing that he can't play that many games every

Not unless you play tennis with your future boss and reach an understanding with him. Incidentally, Joe beat Roy Eisenhardt on the court that day up in the Oakland hills.

CINCINNATI (AP) - With his record 4,000th hit just one compact swing away. Montreal Expos left fielder Pete Rose is concentrating on what he considers a loftier goal - winning Rose singled and tripled to drive in three runs Tuesday night in an 8-6 loss to the Cincinnati Reds. Although Rose can become just the second player to reach 4,000 hits today, he said he's more concerned with ending the Expos' three-game losing streak and starting a climb out of the cellar in the National League East.

"I'm really not thinking about it," Rose said of No. 4,000. "I'm swinging good. I'll get my hits. I just hope we

"If I go 0-for-4 tomorrow and we win, I'm not going to cry on the plane on the way home.

A supportive crowd of 17,495 - 13,123 paid chanted "Pete, Pete" whenever Rose came to bat Tuesday and loudly cheered his two hits. Rose, who would like to reach 4,000 in front of the fans who applauded him 16 years as a Cincinnati Red, lined out sharply twice, struck out, singled home a run in the second and got hit No. 3,999 with a two-run triple in the eighth.

Rose's next hit will put him in the company of Ty Cobb in the 4,000-hit category. Rose's main quest is Cobb's all-time hit record of 4,191.

The next single also will give Rose 3,000 in his career. trailing only Cobb's 3,052 singles. He has 711 career doubles - fourth on the all-time list - 130 triples and 158 home runs.

Although he'd love to get No. 4,000 in the same ballpark where he got No. 3,000 and led the "Big Red Machine" to dominance in the 1970s, Rose downplayed the significance of getting 4,000.

'It ain't a record," he said. 'It's a plateau, if you want to call it that Is there any question in anybody's mind that I'm going to get 4,000?"

DALLAS (AP)- He was 20 pounds underweight and looked gaunt. He was winded by a mere two block walk.

Drew Pearson, the greatest receiver in Dallas Cowboy history, was back Tuesday from his tragic ordeal, but he was far from being healed physically or mentally. 'In two or three months I

Richards hasn't lost sight of the Olympic Games

Waco Tribune-Herald has been 28 years since Bob Richards competed in the Olympics, but he has never really been away. He keeps his eye trained on America's Olympic hopefuls, while never losing sight of the athletes who were once his

His friends read like a gold medal roll call - Thane Baker, Al Oerter and Willie Davenport are just a few. Now. Richards has an idea that he wants to introduce to the Olympic Committee. Just thinking about it lights his imagination. "The Olympic torch should be carried across the country by past Olympians," Richard said. "I can't imagine a better way to bring the past and present Olympics together. Just think what a national effect it could have. I know enough former Olympians myself to get it started.'

No, Bob Richards has never really left the Olympics.

Since 1948, Richards' life has revolved around the games. His gold medals in pole vaulting in the 1952 and 1956 Olympics have led to a life of speaking tours. His "motivational speeches" have kept him busy during this Olympic year. In all of them, he recreates a dramatic Olympic event that he has either done or seen. This year, he will probably speak at 100 different events.

When Richards isn't on the road, he is working out in didway Park or at his dway home. He's 58 rs old, but he trains as if he's 30. Workouts include sprints, discus and shot put throws and of course, pole vaulting. A pole vault pit is the most visible sight in his backyard. In a recent pentathlon, Richards set a world record in his age group.

"I still love to compete," Richards said. "I don't think I'll ever get old enough to stop. Recently, I've increased my workouts. I've got a record in the pentathion and now I want one in the decanthlon. I'll try that this

There is also another place Richards wouldn't miss this

Games in Los Angeles Since tool. WACO, Texas (AP) — It 1948, Richards has missed only the 1980 games in Moscow, which America boycotted after Russia's involvememnt in Afghanistan.

Richards is looking to the LA Games with zeal. For him, there is no greater sight than seeing the world's top amateur athletes gather in America for two weeks of heated competition. By comparison, Richards believes every other sporting

"This is the only true world championship," Richards said. "There's magic in the Olympics that nothing else can match. It is still mankind's greatest dream." But Richards also sees the darker side — the pressure countries put on athletes, the highly paid amateurs, the commercialism and the Olympics as a propaganda

"The Olympics have gotton away from the original intentions." Richard said. "It's supposed to be for individuals, not for countries. You always hear so much about winning the Olympics for America or Russia. But you should be cheering for individuals, not how the country is doing. The athletes are what the Olympics are all

"I think it would be a good idea to not even score medals," Richards said. "A medal in the kayak counts the same as one in basketball. That's crazy. You've got so much worldwide competition in a sport like basketball. Some events just don't compare to others, but they still count as much in the final medal totals. Some people are going to be very disappointed when they realize that America just can't dominate the Olympics

In the last several years, Richards believes countries have gotten even further away from the individual emphasis. He traces the beginnings of the Soviet Union's nationalistic fervor to the 1952 Olympics in Helsinki. By 1960, the Russians became a power and began to use the

It's been a great propaganda tool for them. I've gone into Russian headquarters at Olympic games and they've got everything marked to a tee. They know just what they have to do in every event to win the Olympics. "Now, you've got Russian athletes training 12 hours a day." Richards said "How can an amateur compete with that? In my time, I would train three hours a day and that's all you really needed. The competition has really skyrocketed.'

Although Richards won three Olympic medals in pole vaulting, including an American-record two golds. he didn't make any money from endorsements until he gave up his amateur status in 1957. At that time, his $30,000 deal with Wheaties was considered a huge sum. Now, a superstar like Carl Lewis is making over $500,000 a year on endorsements although he is still considered an amateur.

"In my day, if you made 10 cents you were ineligible," Richards said. "Now, you see 'Track and Field News' stating that Lewis is making $20,000 every time he goes to a track meet. And there are a lot of other amateuur athletes making money fromendorsements. Who would have ever imagined that it would come to this point? "In the past, we've always pointed our fingers at the Russians," Richards said. We've always said they are really professionals. Now, it's the Americans who are making all the money, even though we're still called amateurs." Richards doesn't condone the use of steroids and body building drugs, but he sees how athletes could turn to

lot of American athletes are using them. It's already been proven that they can improve your performance. They can eliminate pain. You can train

Amid the current professionalism amateurism controversy. Richards supports an open Olympics, which would allow all competitors. He sees no reason why professionnal athletes in other sports - like Wilie Gaualt of the Chicago Bears and Renaldo Nehemiah of the San Francisco 49ers should be barred from the Olympics.

"Athletes like Gault and Nehemiah should be able to compete," Richard said. "I've always thought that was a crazy rule. You've got pros in the Olympics now anyway.' In recent Olympics, one of the biggest fears has been the threat of terrorism. Political tensions boiled over at the 1972 Summer Games in Munich. Palestinian terrorists broke into the Olympic compound, killed two Israeli coaches and took nine athletes hostage. All nine were killed in an ensuing gunbattle when the terrorists tried to leave the country.

Since Los Angeles is a very populous area supporting a variety of cultures, Richards believes the danger is great. "It will be difficult to stop it from happening," Richards said. "You canot recognize an alien in this society. It's a free society. We're very

"With a billion people watching, the Olympics is a perfect ground for a terrorist," Richards said. "And this year's Olympics is so spread out. There is no way it can have tight security. It seems strange that the original goal of the Olympics was to build world peace, but now it's used for everything except that."

vulnerable.

But despite all the imperfections, Richards also sees the beauty of the Olympics. He's just as content to see a great athlete like Carl Lewis set records as past standouts like Rafer drugs for the body. I know a Richards remembers the Olympic competition and understands what today's > Olympians are going through. 'The beauty of the Olympics is going there and competing," Richards said. "It's a tremendous thing. I base a lot of my speeches on how athletes go to the Olympics. You just can't believe the excitement of being in one.'

> Meanwhile, Richards returns to his speeches and daily workouts. In the last month, Tucson, Little Rock and Philadelphia have been among his stops. Back home, he gets tips from his 17-year-old son, Brandon, on a sport where Richards was the world's most accomplished authority - > pole vaulting. "I know that seems strange, but he knows more about pole vaulting now than I do," Richards said. "Back in my day, we used stiff poles. These aluminum poles make it a completely different sport. It's hard to imagined that guys are going to break 20 feet soon.'

> Periodically, Richards attends master's meets, where his goal this year is to break five world records in his age group. At 5-10, 190 pounds, he isn't far over the weight he carried when he won his last Olympic medal in Melbourne, Australia, in 1956.

> In October, Richards received a prestigious, unexpected honor when he was named one of the 20 charter members of the Olympic Hall of Fame. That put him in such company as Jesse Owens, Mark Spitz and Al Oerter

"It was just an incredible honor," Richards said. And another reason that Richards has never really left the Olympics.

Another record setting Soviet agriculture year is forecast

AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - A new look by the Agriculture Department at the Soviet Union's 1984 harvest prospects points to a possibility of back-to-back bumper yields for the first time in six years.

But the department's Foreign Agricultural Service warned Tuesday that "good spring rains are sorely needed" to help wheat and other winter grain that was planted last fall. Most Soviet grain crops are planted in the spring.

Last year, the Soviet Union produced an estimated 195 million metric tons, the most since the record of 237.4 million tons in 1978, the last of three successive bumper grain

"Overall, prospects for the 1984 winter grain crop remain generally better than a year ago, but potentially serious problems exist in the eastern part of the winter wheat region," the report said.

Although significant rains, the first since early February, fell recently in parts of the eastern Ukraine. North Caucasus and lower Volga Valley, these areas will need optimal precipitation for the remainder of the growing season if the crop is to develop normally."

Since the record 1978 harvest, the Soviet Union has imported huge quantities of foreign grain to offset deficits and to maintain stockpiles. According to the USDA report, those imports total 175 million metric tons over the last five years.

Those imports included a record of 46 million tons in 1981-82 and about 31 million tons expected to be imported in the 1983-84 international marketing year that began last July 1. About 20 million tons is expected to be wheat, 10 million tons of coarse grains such as corn, and one million tons of miscellaneous grains, including rice.

More than 29 million tons of this year's imports have been purchased, the report shid.

"Over the past month, the Soviets contracted for nearly two million tons of U.S. dorn, most for nearby delivery," the report said. "Reportedly, the Soviets also purchased around two million tons of Argentine corn and

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 36.7 bushels of wheat or 39.4 bushels of corn.

The United States sells the Soviets grain through private exporters — under terms of a new five-year grain agreement which took effect last Oct. 1. It requires the Soviet Soviet Union to buy a minimum of nine million tons of wheat and corn annually, with the option of substituting up to 500,000 tons of soybeans for one million tons of wheat and corn. One bushel of soybeans counts as two bushels of

Also, the agreement allows Moscow to buy an additional three million tons of grain - to a total of 12 million tons — without further consultations with the United States.

The report said that purchases so far in 1983-84 have exceeded 10 million tons. including 4.2 million tons of wheat and about 6 million tons of corn. The Soviets also have bought more than 400,000 tons of soybeans the equivalent of 800,000 tons of grain.

Last January, the United States informed Moscow it could buy an additional 10 million tons of wheat and corn under terms of the agreement in 1983-84, making a total of 22 million tons. However, the Soviets have not indicated how much additional grain it might

In 1982-83, the final year of a previous grain agreement with the United States, the Soviet Union was told it could buy up to 23 million metric tons. It actually purchased 13.9 million tons.

WASHINGTON (AP) - New farm legislation just signed into law by President Reagan includes some "major and immediate" changes in farm loan programs handled by the Farmers Home Administration, says the Agriculture Department.

The measure, signed into law by Reagan on Tuesday, extends FmHA benefits to financially stressed farmers who were not able to qualify for them previously, said Charles W. Shuman, administrator of the agency. Shuman said the new law "opens the disaster emergency loan program to qualified farmers in any county bordering a county designated eligible for emergency loans resulting from a natural disaster" after

May 30, 1983. About 1,600 of the nation's 3,000 counties have been so designated, most of them as a result of last year's heat and drought. Shuman said he could not tell at this time how many additional counties will be involved as a result of the new law. Shuman said the measure also expand the time for applications for emergency loans to eight months from the six-month deadline previously in effect. Another provision raises the limit for direct farm operating loans to $200,000 per individual borrower from $100,000 previously, and to $400,000 from $200,000 for guaranteed loans, he said. But this provision will apply only to new loans. The Center for Rural Affairs, Walthill, Neb., contends that the doubling of loan amount "permanently undermines the original purpose of the loan program serving small and modest-sized farmers.'

Board asked to commue death sentence

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) - Prosecutors in Jefferson County have opted to ask a Texas prison agency to commute the death sentence of convicted killer Walter Bell to life in prison rather than retry a 10-year-old capital murder case.

District Attorney James McGrath said in a letter to the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles he was responding to a January order from U.S. District Judge Robert M. Parker

Bell, 29, of Port Arthur, was Bell for Chisum's robbery convicted in the rape and murder of Irene Chisum. She and her husband, Fred, were found slain in the bathroom of their Port Arthur home July 19, 1974.

Bell's conviction was upheld by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, but Parker stayed a December 1981 execution date.

When an appeals court decision made it certain Parker would reverse the conviction, prosecutors tried

De la Madrid to visit Canada

MEXICO CITY (AP) - President Miguel de la Madrid will make an official visit to Canada on May 7-9, the Foreign Ministry announced Tuesday. The visit comes at the invitation of the Canadian dvernment, a statement said.

During his visit, de la Madrid will meet with Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliot Trudeau, other government officials and leaders of the Canadian business and financial community, the Foreign Ministry said. The political turmoil in Central America and the need for greater economic cooperation between Mexico and Canada will receive special attention during the talks, the statement

SAFELY HOME
I am home in heaven, dear ones; All's so happy, all's so bright!
There's perfect joy and beauty
In this everlating light.
All the pain and grief are over,
Every restless lossing passed;
I am now at peace forever,
Safely home in heaven at last.
Did you wonder I so calmly
Trod the Valley of the Shade?
Oh, but Jesus' love illumined
Every dark and fearful glade!
And He came Himself to meet me
On the way so hard to tread;
And with Jesus' arm to lean on,
Could I have one doubt or dread?
Then you must not grieve so sorely,
For I love you dearly still:
Try to look beyond earth's shadows,
Pray to trust our Father's will.
There is work still waiting for you,
So you must not idle stand;
Do your work while life remaineth
You shall rest in Jesus' land.
When that work is all completed,
He will gently call you home;
Oh, the joy to see you come!

PROTESTING FOR ELECTIONS—Some one million Brazilians take part in a protest rally calling on the militariy for direct presidential elections Tuesday near the Candelaria Church in downtown Rio de Janeiro. (AP

Million demonstrate for direct elections

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) - An estimated 1 million demonstrators jammed into the city center for a rally demanding direct presidential elections. An opposition leader called it the largest political protest in Brazil's history.

The rally Tuesday in this city of 5 million was the latest and largest in a series of demonstrations across the country pushing for direct election of the president, which was abolished by the military regime that seized power 20 years

Demonstrators packed the final five blocks of the 12-lane President Vargas Avenue leading to a speaker's platform in front of the Candelaria Roman Catholic church.

State police Col. Vidal da Silveira Barros, in charge of crowd control, estimated the crowd at 1 million and called it "a

The nation's most important elected opposition figures attended the rally, including Leonel Brizola, governor of Rio de Janeiro state, whose administration helped organize the demonstration. He had appeared on television beforehand to promote the rally and arranged free public transportation to the city center

Brizola, a member of the socialist-oriented opposition Democratic Labor Party, called the rally "the biggest political demonstration in Brazilian history.'

At the rally, he declared that Brazilians "want a change of men, of methods and of orientation in this country."

President Joao Figueiredo has said he favors direct elections in the future but has insisted that his immediate successor be chosen by the 686-member electoral college, which is heavily weighted to favor small, rural, pro-government states. Figueiredo is to step down next March following a January presidential election.

Huge signs and pennants proclaiming, "I Want to Vote for President" hung over the speaker's platform. Some people carried signs reading, "Direct Elections Right Now," Shall Overcome," and "The Last One to See a Ballot Box was Grandma.

The throng of protesters, packed shoulder-to-shoulder, stretched as far as the eye could see from the Candelaria church that was the focal point of the rally Brazil's green and yellow flag waved from thousands of hands

People from the Brazilian Amnesty Committee held up silhouettes of missing relatives, some of the 349 people who disappeared or were killed in the most repressive days of the military government.

Reagan notes increased auto industry employment

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan is using the comeback of the recession-battered auto industry to help call attention to the economic recovery that he hopes will lead him into four more years in the White House.

The president of the United Auto Workers Local 249 and others called today's presidential journey to Kansas City, Mo., political, but the White House insisted it was official, meaning the taxpayers would pick up the tab instead of the Reagan-Bush '84 committee.

Reagan scheduled his arrival in time for lunch in the hourly worlers' cafeteria. He planned to sit with production workers and go through the cafeteria line. Roast beef and roast pork

After lunch, the president was touring an assembly line, delivering remarks to the employees, and attending a private meeting with labor-management group called the employee involvement steering committee. "This plant, like a lot of other plants, was in a lot of trouble a few years ago and it's made a remarkable comeback," said Bob Pollock, a Ford regional public relations manager. "This plant is now one of the best plants in the Ford system." In particular, he cited quality workmanship and low absent ee is m The visit fits in with the Reagan team's primary election strategy of letting the Democratic presidential candidates slug it out in public while the president remains "presidential" and aloof from such campaign shenanigans.

But the two-day excursion was occurring the day after the important Pennsylvania primary - a day when the Democratic presidential candidates ordinarily would be getting most of the press attention - and a week before Missouri's April 18 caucuses.

As it happened, former Vice President Walter F. Mondale, one of the Democratic candidates, was planning to tour a Chrysler plant outside St. Louis, Mo., today. It's the same plant Reagan visited a year ago.

William (Pappy) Barker, president of the UAW local in Kansas City, said the president's trip was "just a political move." Barker said he was working for Mondale, and that most of the union members were supporting Mondale. When informed of the criticism, Reagan campaign spokesman John Buckley retorted: "It's certainly legitimate for a president to travel to inspect the results of the successful upturn in the economy, and if this were happening in 1983 instead of 1984 there would be no question that this is an official Reagan chose to visit the Ford Motor Co.'s Claycomo plant as a symbol of the revival of the auto industry in general. Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said in advance that the plant had "registered a remarkable turnaround" from the recession. Pollock said the company has added about 1,000 workers in the past year or so -750 of them in the last few months bringing the total number employed at the plant to 4,500.

Nicaragua thanks Senate, mining criticism builds By The Associated Press body for its opposition to the "undeclared we operation." Operation.

The head of Nicaragua's leftist junta thanked the U.S. Senate for opposing use of CIA funds to mine Nicaraguan ports, and a Soviet diplomat said his country would "certainly consider" any request to clear away the mines.

The Soviet ambassador to the United Nations, at a news conference Tuesday in New York, called the mining operation by U.S.-backed guerrillas "a new chapter in the history of international terrorism."

Later, after the Senate approved a resolution calling for an end to the use of CIA funds to assist in mining Nicaragua's ports, junta coordinator Daniel Ortega thnked the body for its opposition to the "undeclared wr by the United States against Nicaragua."

The Senate approved the non-binding resolution by a vote of 84-12.

However, Ortega appeared doubtful the Senate action would deter the Reagan administration from continuing to back rebel operations "We believe that the chapter on the mining of our ports has not been closed since it is only part of the chain of aggressions by the U.S. administration against our country," Ortega

There has been a stream of criticism from foreign governments since it was reported the United States had a hand in the mining

Britain's Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told Parliament Tuesday her government had "made it very clear to the United States ... that we are against mining the ports of Nicaragua." The issue also was discussed in Canada's House of Commons, and International Trade Minister Gerald Regan said the Canadian government was concerned the mining escalated tensions in the region.

France had earlier offered to help Nicaragua clear the ports.

At least seven ships have been damaged, three small boats sunk, and 15 sailors injured by the mines, which have greatly reduced the

Two rebel groups trying to topple the Sandinista government have said they laid the mines, and this week it was reported the operation was accomplished with CIA assistance, under the guidance of Americans.

However, a Nicaraguan rebel leader declared Tuesday that the United States had no part in the operation

"It wasn't an American action," said Alfonso Robelo, head of the Democratic Revolutionary Alliance, known as ARDE. "Our organization mined the port of Corinto" and also the port at El Bluff, Robelo said from Rome, where he is visiting.

Council sets date for Salvadoran presidential runoff

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) -Salvadoran voters, thousands of whom were unable to vote in last month's presidential election due to bureaucratic bungling, will get another chance May 6, and election officials promise better organization this

The Central Election Council made an official announcement Tuesday night of the date for the runoff between moderate Jose Napoleon Duarte of the Christian Democratic Party and Roberto d'Aubuisson of the ultra-rightist Republican Nationalist OPEN MON.-SAT.

10:00-9:00

In the country's 41/2-year-old civil war, a military spokesman said Tuesday tat government troops killed eight leftist rebels and captured 65 civilians traveling with the insurgents.

Elsewhere in Central America, a bomb damaged the Salvadoran Embassy in Honduras, and the coordinator of Nicaragua's leftist junta praised the U.S. Congress for opposing use of federal funds for the mining of Nicaragua's ports by CIA-aided rebels.

Duarte and d'Aubuisson were forced into a runoff when neither won a majority in the March 25 election, which involved eight candidates. Duarte won 43.4 percent of the vote and d'Aubuisson 29.8 percent

The runoff winner will take office June 1 for a five-year term.

About 1.6 million Salvadorans cast ballots last month, but election officials say confusion over complex voting rules, problems in delivering voting boxes and other foul-ups prevented about 200,000 people from voting.

People were unable to vote in 320 of the 6,800 polling places, election council member Eliseo Rovira said in an interview Tuesday

"The elections were suppose to be fraud proof. Instead, they were voter proof," said one U.S. official after the voting Rovira predicted the runoff will have far fewer problems than the first round of voting.

"We have been accused of mistakes but not of fraud. Whoever wins will be the one who gets the most votes," he said. "The problems were caused by a lack of experience, but we have worked out many of the problems." D'Aubuisson, in a televised speech Monday night, said it is "now or never to save our fatherland," and urged other conservative parties to unite behind him.
