

Witnesses claim Pampa partial to independents

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

A change-of-venue hearing to decide the Dorchester Corporation's claim that it can't get a fair trial here in a lawsuit against an independent oil producer began Thursday with the testimony of area residents, including local "working people."

Most of the residents who testified under subpoena from Dorchester agreed that the major company would find it difficult or impossible to find a fair and impartial jury in Pampa.

The witnesses said the overwhelming support in Pampa for independent oil producers would prevent Dorchester from finding an impartial jury.

Dorchester is suing the Amarillo-based Harlow Corporation and associated parties over the rights to produce petroleum products in a 49,000-acre section of land in Gray and Carson Counties.

Dorchester wants the trial of the lawsuit moved from Pampa to Amarillo.

The major company claims the "gas rights" in the section and wants the state court to prohibit the independent driller from producing "any gas whatsoever" out of four wells the small company has in place on the same patch of ground.

Harlow contends it owns the "oil rights" on the section. The small company says the substances produced from its wells include crude oil and "casinghead gas."

Dorchester alleges the independent's wells have "clouded the title" to the major company's gas rights. Harlow has countersued, alleging Dorchester has "clouded the title" to the independent's oil rights.

The issue parallels a larger dispute over what should be legally classified as "oil" and "gas" between major oil and gas companies and independent producers operating in the Texas Panhandle Field. The outcome could decide who will produce the remaining oil and gas in the reservoir, which has an estimated worth of $27 billion.

The independents holding oil rights claim they pump out the field's crude oil, liquid petroleum products and accompanying natural gas.

The major companies holding the gas rights claim that nearly everything left in the field is dry gas and should be classified as gas.

Dorchester and other major companies are battling the independents on three fronts: before the state district courts, the Texas Railroad Commission and the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission in Washington.

In its motion to move the trial of the lawsuit against Harlow, Dorchester lawyers painted the suit as part of the overall battle, the "global issue" of major companies versus the independents.

Lawyers for Harlow argued that the suit involves only one "title dispute" in connection with that independent company's four wells in the disputed territory. The specific issues of the Pampa lawsuit don't encompass the broader fight over the field's reserves, Harlow's attorney's argued Thursday.

The suit should be considered in the broader sense, Dorchester contends, because Pampa residents who see it that way will unfairly side with the independent company.

Local residents realize that their jobs could be at stake in any unfavorable ruling against an independent, Dorchester contends in the motion to move the trial.

Harlow is an Amarillo-based firm, and Pampa's economy isn't involved in the suit, the independent claims in its assertion that Dorchester could get a fair trial here. The independent's lawyers also pointed out many local residents depend on the major companies for their jobs.

The first witness called by Dorchester testified the major company probably couldn't get a fair trial here.

Senate joins House in increasing taxes

No action taken to reduce spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate approved $48 billion in tax increases today, capping a week of congressional action to cut federal budget deficits by raising taxes on many people rather than reducing government payments to a few special interests.

Bleary-eyed senators voted 76-5 to endorse the tax measure at the end of a 19-hour session. The Senate then joined the House in adjourning for a recess until after Easter.

The legislation would raise revenues $48 billion over the next three years. The House passed a similar $49 billion measure on Wednesday.

Negotiators from both chambers will work out a compromise version of the measure later. But since the Senate measure is being folded into a larger omnibus deficit-reduction package, it is unclear how and when such a compromise will be reached.

Drafting a compromise is weeks away because the House and Senate also want to settle on significant reductions in federal spending that, with the tax increases, would cut record budget deficits by up to $150 billion to $200 billion over the next three years. During that same period, the deficits are expected to total between $500 billion and $700 billion.

Major provisions of the Senate bill that affect individuals include:

—An extension through 1987 of the 3 percent excise tax on local and long distance telephone service that otherwise would expire after 1985.

—Raising the liquor tax of $10.50 per proof gallon to $12.50. Beer and wine would not be affected.

—Ending in 1988 the practice by which a taxpayer could avoid taxation on up to $450 of interest earned each year.

—Dropping from four years to three years the period over which couples and individuals could "income average," or cut their taxes by averaging current earnings against those of the preceding years.

The other deficit-reduction move in Congress this week was House approval Thursday of a bill to cut federal spending by almost $4 billion over three years. However, that measure was passed 261-152 only after the rejection of a provision that would have limited the fees paid to doctors treating Medicare hospital patients. The provision would have saved nearly another $1 billion.

"All we are asking today is that doctors accept their fair share of some of the burden," Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said during debate on the measure.

The provision, reducing the overall value of the bill by about 20 percent, was rejected simply by voice vote.

It was an example of how difficult Congress is finding it to take election-year action to reduce government payments to well organized groups.

Another example came earlier in the week when President Reagan signed into law a measure he hailed as the "first installment of the deficit down payment" he and members of Congress have called for.

Pageant operators warned about killer

Former race car driver may attract victims with promise of modeling jobs

PENN YAN, N.Y. (AP) — The nationwide hunt for murder-kidnap suspect Christopher Wilder focused on upstate New York today, where the former racing driver is suspected of killing a 33-year-old woman and stabbing a teen-ager before pushing her out of his car.

A state police spokesman in Albany said troopers were on "maximum alert" and local police were checking motels for signs of the man named in warrants for three murders, four disappearances and one kidnapping on a trail that leads from the East Coast to California and back.

Beauty pageant operators nationwide have been warned at the FBI's request to be alert for the 39-year-old Wilder, whom agents say preys on attractive young women with promises of modeling for photographs.

Wilder, who is from Australia, allegedly abducted 16-year-old Dawnette Sue Wilt of Dyer, Ind., at gunpoint from an Indiana shopping mall earlier this week, the FBI said Thursday.

A motorist found Miss Wilt walking in central New York State along a rural road near Penn Yan on Thursday, the Yates County sheriff's department said. She had surgery for several stab wounds and was in guarded condition at Soldiers and Sailors Hospital.

A young woman with Wilder when Miss Wilt was kidnapped was believed to be a California teen-ager last seen April 4 in a shopping center.

Three hours after Miss Wilt was found, a deliveryman 20 miles away found the body of Beth S. Dodge, 33, behind a hill in the town of Victor. The Monroe County medical examiner said she had been killed at about noon with one shot in the back of the head.

"There was no sign of violence," said state Trooper Michael Poisson. "There was no sign of a struggle."

A maroon Mercury Cougar that Wilder had been driving was found three miles away Thursday night. Wilder is now believed to be driving Ms. Dodge's car, a 1982 gold-colored Pontiac Trans-Am, state police said.

State police across western New York were looking for the car, bearing New York license plate number 290SKW.

The FBI considers the latest development in Wilder's flight across the United States "solid enough so we're very concerned." FBI agent Philip D. Smith told a news conference in Buffalo on Thursday "It's a very good chance this could be Christopher Wilder."

Smith said Wilder had been "definitely and positively identified as the individual that abducted a young lady and was responsible for her being placed in Penn Yan."

In Atlantic City, N.J., the executive director of the Miss America Pageant said he wrote at the FBI's request to officials of the state contest warning them to be aware of Wilder's "modus operandi."

Albert A. Marks Jr. said in his letter that Wilder was known to "offer to photograph, for any number of reasons, attractive young women, notably at pageants, aspiring models, fashion shows and similar operations." He urged the state pageant officials to contact the FBI for additional wanted posters.

Local district feels state's values high

BY CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

Property values set by state appraisers do not accurately reflect the area's economic condition, said Charles Buzzard, chief appraiser of the Gray County Appraisal District.

According to Buzzard, values set by the State Property Tax Board were higher than what the county had determined.

He sent the state board a 51-page protest listing discrepancies made on property in the Grandview-Hopkins, Allanreed and Lefors school districts. He will make an oral presentation before the board Monday in Austin, discussing discrepancies in the McLean and Pampa districts.

Buzzard added that he has no problem with the overall finding of the state appraisers, who set the average property appraisal at 82 percent of the market value.

"Our goal was to have it at 80 to 85 percent," he said, adding that property appraisals for agriculture, multi-family dwellings, utilities and oil and gas were accurate.

But there were discrepancies in such individual areas as single-family units, commercial and business, farming improvements and vacant lots.

Buzzard observed that the state based its findings on values in the south parts of the state where "the economy is better."

In McLean, for example, the completion of I-40 this summer could have a detrimental effect on property value at this former tourist stop. McLean is one of the last spots on the interstate that is not completed.

"Property values are going to be hurt when I-40 is completed," Buzzard said. "So we're looking at land value decreasing some next year."

In Pampa, Buzzard said he found "several errors in computing value on such commercial property as Celanese and Ingersoll-Rand. In one instance, he said, the state computed the square footage of asphalt, not the building area.

Jennifer real big surprise

ERIE, Pa. (AP) — "We just came here to have a baby, not set a record," said the surprised father of a 17-pound, 3-ounce newborn daughter who may be the largest infant ever born in Pennsylvania.

"We knew it was going to be big, but had no idea it was going to be this big," said 29-year-old Dorothy Himes, mother of 24-inch-long Jennifer. Both were in excellent condition today at Saint Vincent Health Center, where hospital spokeswoman Jane Anderson said Jennifer broke the hospital's record for birth weight.

Ms. Anderson said she suspected the baby would also prove to break the statewide record, but added that a three-day search of all Pennsylvania birth certificates would have to be completed to be sure.

The Guinness Book of World Records lists the largest surviving babies from normal parents as two 22-pound, 8-ounce boys. One was born in Italy in September 1955, the other in South Africa in May 1982.

Diverted Challenger home safe after opening new era in space

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Challenger's astronauts, diverted from a Florida landing by bad weather, swooped out of orbit and glided to Earth today on a California desert lakebed after a weeklong mission that saved a derelict satellite and opened an era of spacecraft servicing.

Commander Robert Crippen and pilot Dick Scobee guided the 96-ton shuttle to a touchdown at 16 minutes after sunrise, 5:38 a.m. PST, and rolled to a stop on the hard-packed sand. Only a few spectators were on hand because of the late decision to shift the landing to Edwards, where eight of the first 10 shuttle missions also ended.

The shuttle was over the Indian Ocean in its 167th orbit when Crippen and Scobee triggered its orbital engines for four minutes. That slowed the speed by 313 mph, enough to start its hourlong plunge on a supersonic glide over the Pacific Ocean and into Edwards in the Mojave Desert.

Challenger's five crewmen — who dubbed themselves the "Ace Satellite Repair Co." for their fix of the Solar Max spacecraft — had planned to land at their home port of Cape Canaveral after a 3-million-mile journey. They were just 10 minutes from firing the braking rockets when a weather plane reported low clouds and rain moving over the Kennedy Space Center runway there.

NASA, which brought the shuttle down in Florida for the first time last February, prefers landing there because of the time and money it saves preparing for future flights.

But after realizing that the Florida weather was only going to get worse, Mission Control waved the astronauts off.

The other crewmen are mission specialist Terry Hart and spacewalkers George Wilson and James van Hoften.

A batch of firsts and bests were logged during the mission: Highest shuttle orbit, 310 miles; longest manned space walk, seven hours seven minutes; first shuttle rendezvous, capture, repair and re-deployment of a satellite; first operational use of the rocket-powered backpack.

The astronauts headed home one day late because of problems snaring the disabled Solar Max satellite. But Challenger's empty cargo hold testified to the twin successes in delivering one satellite and repairing another.

After fixing and returning to orbit the Solar Max satellite, the space travelers appeared on television Thursday wearing T-shirts proclaiming: "Ace Satellite Repair Co." Said commander Crippen: "We pick up, repair and deliver."

"Spacecraft servicing is something that's here to stay," he added.

The delivery part of the mission came last Saturday, when Hart guided the shuttle's 50-foot arm to a bus-size satellite in the cargo bay and put it overboard for recovery in 10 months by another crew.

Mobeetie delays computer bids

MOBEETIE — In an effort to get the most out of a warranty, Mobeetie school officials will delay awarding bids on a computer system until the beginning of the next school year, superintendent Bob Mickey said Friday.

The Mobeetie school board was to have opened and awarded bids on a school computer system at its regular meeting Thursday night, but chose to wait until later in the summer, after a computer classroom is built.

The classroom will be a 20 x 25 foot addition to the home economics classroom.

"We're going to wait until about August and watch prices," Mickey said. "That way we can get full use of a 90-day warranty. We hope to have the classroom finished by August 1."

"I feel we can save money by doing it later, because the computer prices are so competitive," Mickey reasoned.

After pouring through seven bids for construction of the computer classroom, trustees approved the low bid from Mobeetie builder C.W. Burch.

Mickey noted that the bids varied from $17,045 to $7,900.

In other business, Mobeetie trustees voiced their disapproval of recommendations made by the Texas Select Committee on Public Education. Area school boards were sent a letter from the Texas Association of Community Schools asking them to comment on the controversial proposals made by the committee that was headed by electronics magnate H. Ross Perot.

Mickey reported that among the SCOPE proposals the Mobeetie board members particularly disagreed with were to cut funding for vocational programs, lengthening the school day and year, pre-kindergarten schooling and a statewide achievement test for students.

Trustees also hired two Oklahomans to teaching positions. Debra Finstenwald was hired to teach social studies and to coach some girls' sports and Rolonda Meadows was hired to teach secondary science. Both are graduates of Southwestern Oklahoma State University.

No action was taken on building housing for teachers, although trustees talked about faculty housing with two contractors at the meeting.

In other business, trustees re-employed the Region XVI Co-op program, hired faculty aids and canvassed results of the Saturday school board election.

Incumbents Glen D. Hodges and James Batton re-assumed their positions on the board. Mickey added that the current board officers — president Hodges, vice president Paul Hathaway and secretary Batton — will serve another term.

Ninth arrest made in drug investigation

Authorities arrested the ninth suspect in connection with a three-month undercover drug investigation in Pampa resulting in charges against the nine suspects.

Lyndel Ray Laycock, Jr., of 1925 N. Banks was arrested at 3 p.m. Thursday by Pampa policeman Terry Cox on a warrant on a charge of unlawful delivery of a controlled substance.

He was arraigned on the charge before Justice of the Peace Margie Prestidge, who set bond at $20,000. He was released from the Gray County Jail after posting bond yesterday afternoon.

Six other suspects in the drug investigation were arrested the evening of April 4 and the morning of April 5 in Pampa. Four men were charged with the unlawful delivery of marijuana and two men were charged with the unlawful delivery of a controlled substance.

Another male suspect from Borger was arrested by Hutchinson County authorities April 4 and charged with the unlawful delivery of marijuana. A Skellytown woman was arrested by Carson County authorities on April 5 and charged with the unlawful delivery of a controlled substance.

All the arrests were the results of the Pampa drug investigations, Pampa Police Chief J. J. Ryzman said. The investigations were made in connection with the sale of illegal drugs, all felony offenses.

Chief Ryzman reported last week that Pampa officers had purchased small amounts of drugs from the suspects in the first three months of this year. The undercover purchases involved a total of about $1,000 worth of drugs, he said April 4 when the roundup of the suspects began.

He also said the investigations netted "a large amount of intelligence about suppliers of drugs" in the area.

Drug education film available from DATE

A 28-minute, 16mm color film entitled "Sons and Daughters, Drugs and Booze" has been purchased for use by organizations in the area by Drug and Alcohol Total Education (DATE) task force to combat drug abuse through education.

"We feel that every parent and grandparent in the area should see this film," stated Joe Van Zandt, president of DATE.

The film is available to organizations free of charge. Reservations may be made by calling the Gray County Extension Office, 669-7429.

The short movie describes the parent's role in taking action to prevent drug abuse. Parents can also learn how to help children who have already begun the use of drugs, Van Zandt said.

Mobeetie beaten out

MOBEETIE — After a month of practice and high hopes, Mobeetie High School student actors were beaten out of one-act play competition Thursday at the regional one-act play contest at Levelland.

Set during the witch trials in the Seventeenth Century, the play, "After Midnight, Before Dawn," deals with four prisoners who are duped into committing their souls to the devil.

Student player Diane Moffett was named to the Regional All-Star Cast for her portrayal of one of four fated prisoners. Tina Densberger received honorable mention for her performance as a fellow prisoner who refused to make such a commitment.

Candidates rally slated at Mobeetie

MOBEETIE — Residents will have the chance to meet candidates for county and state offices at a special rally 7 p.m. Saturday at Mobeetie High School gymnasium.

The rally, sponsored by the Mobeetie Volunteer Fire Department, will feature candidates for Wheeler county offices as well as state representative J.W. (Buck) Buchanan of Dumas.

Each candidate attending the rally will be given five minutes to speak, according to department spokesman Gary May. He added that a bake sale will follow the rally "so that the people can get to know the candidates."

"I feel we had a pretty good response," he said. "This is the first time the fire department has sponsored it. The last time we had a rally like this in Mobeetie was in 1976."

Lefors trustees purchase two buses

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer
Members of the board of trustees of the Lefors Independent School District decided to order two new 15-passenger buses and canvassed election results at their regular meeting Thursday night at Lefors High School.

The new buses will be van-conversion types, more feasible for use on routes outside of the city, Supt. Jimmy Collins said. Auxiliary heaters will be required as additional equipment.

The order will be sent to the State Board of Education, which will take bids for the buses. The new vehicles should be ready for school use next November, Supt. Collins said.

The school district had ordered four buses earlier, but two were not accepted because they were not deemed suitable for route needs. The budgeted money left over from not purchasing those two buses will be used toward purchase of the 15-passenger buses.

Board members canvassed election results from Saturday's voting and confirmed the election of Harry Youngblood and incumbent Garrell Robertson as school trustees. They were administered the oath of office by Collins.

Elected as officers of the board were Walter Jackson, president; Gene Gee, vice president, and Eugene Finney, secretary.

In other action, the board authorized Collins to proceed with ordering jerseys, pants and other items for the football program and arranging to get helmets reconditioned for the 1984-1985 school year. The costs will be paid out of the 1984-1985 budget after delivery of the items in the fall.

The board set a tentative date of April 30 to interview candidates for the position of head football coach. Trustees discussed seeking a new instructor for the driver's education program. Lefors High School Principal Allen Jenkins, who has taught the program for the past several years, indicated he would prefer not to teach the course to allow more time for his duties as principal.

Collins reported a new school board policy manual and two student handbooks are being compiled. The materials will be presented for readings in May and June, with adoption scheduled for July.

Jenkins reported the seniors are planning a trip to Amarillo for their class activity. Plans call for visiting Wonderland Amusement Park at Thompson park, eating at a restaurant and a shopping spree. The activity will be paid out of Senior Class funds, using money left over after graduation expenses are deducted.

The board will have a special meeting April 26 to discuss bids for construction of the new elementary school building.

"It would be very difficult," said Mary Myatt, a Pampa secretary. The issues involved in the war between majors and independents are "pretty well known," by local residents, she said. "I don't think a lay jury could draw all the fine lines."

Under cross-examination, though, Myatt admitted that likely there are some Gray County residents who aren't familiar with the dispute.

Asked whether either side would get unfair treatment from a Pampa jury, Myatt replied, "I don't think so."

"Pampa would definitely be called an oil and gas community," said Danny Conklin, a petroleum geologist from Amarillo.

"I think it would be very difficult, very improbable," Conklin speculated about Dorchester's chances for an impartial jury.

He said the dispute "has bloomed to such a furor that it affects a lot of lives."

Under subpoena to bring "all articles concerning the issue of the major oil companies vs. the independents" which have appeared in the Pampa News during the past two years, Pampa News reporter Jeff Langley testified next.

Articles published in the newspaper about the dispute, including one that declared the story the biggest of 1983, were entered into evidence to try and show the scope of pre-trial publicity about the case.

Langley's testimony pointed out that The Pampa News hasn't taken an editorial stance favoring either side, and that news articles have attempted to show both sides of the dispute. The importance of independent producers to the local economy was pointed out in the newspaper articles, according to his testimony.

Langley offered no opinion about whether Dorchester could pick an impartial jury and said that problems in jury selection in previous Pampa trials, both criminal and civil cases, had been overcome to the satisfaction of the district judge. Jim Furness, of Amarillo, former manager of the Pampa Country Club, said he doubts Dorchester could get a fair trial in Pampa.

"I wouldn't think they'd be able to get one," Furness said. "Everything is oil and gas related."

"My feeling is that they would side with the independents, because of the effect it would have on this town," he said.

Furness said the dispute is often discussed by local individuals and groups. He told about attending a past Rotary Club meeting in Pampa, where independent oilman Wallace Bruce presented a program outlining the independents' point of view.

Lynn McCoy, a Pampa candy salesman and route driver, said local opinion favoring independents, his own included, would prevent Dorchester from getting an impartial jury.

"If the majors win, the drilling would shut down and the roughnecks would be out of work. I hear it every day," McCoy said.

"I'm for the independents. If the majors win, and the independents lose, there goes the economy back down," he added.

Michael Alvus, a Pampa carpenter, agreed with McCoy. "Generally most favor the independents. I favor the independents," Alvus said.

"I don't think they can get a fair and impartial jury in Pampa," he said.

"If the oilfield doesn't work, we don't work. I couldn't serve as a juror because I already have my opinion," Alvus added.

Dorchester's next witness, Pampa mailman Jerry Hildenbrand, echoed the comments.

"It don't think you could (find an impartial jury), really...it would put a lot of people out of work," Hildenbrand said.

"It all boils down to: 'Whose ox is being gored at the time?'" he said.

Resolutions rebuff president

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is firmly on record against CIA-backed mining of Nicaraguan harbors, a group of House Democrats is demanding an investigation of U.S. policy in Central America, and President Reagan must wait for a decision on emergency military aid to El Salvador.

This was the situation today as the House started an 11-day recess and the Senate also prepared to take time off for Easter after a week in which Reagan's program to stem communism in Central America suffered unprecedented reverses.

The Democrat-led House passed, 281-111 Thursday night, a non-binding resolution calling for an end to the spending of U.S. funds to help rebels against Nicaragua's leftist government lay mines in the seaports of the Central American country.

The Republican-dominated Senate approved a resolution to the same effect by a vote of 84-12 Tuesday. Administration officials say privately that the mining had already been stopped and will probably not be stopped.

The administration says its program of undercover aid to Nicaraguan rebels is aimed at stopping Cubans from funneling Soviet and Cuban arms to leftist guerrillas in El Salvador, not overthrowing Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

Special session in May or June expected by Lewis and Hobby

AUSTIN (AP) — House Speaker Gib Lewis says a special session of the Legislature to deal with education appears likely, but that Gov. Mark White must tell lawmakers what reforms are needed.

An aide to White said he is preparing to do so.

Lewis and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said Thursday they expect the session to convene in late May or early June to consider a package of education reforms that will cost about $1.6 billion.

However, Lewis said it would be fruitless to for White to call the session unless there is substantial agreement among lawmakers as to what action should be taken.

"I think it will be the final decision of the governor to come forward with what education package he wants and for him to make the recommendations of what should be taxed to raise that revenue," Lewis said.

"If you can't get a consensus of the House and Senate, I think it would be foolish to call the Legislature into session and not have them act on anything."

But Lewis said he was 90 percent certain a special session will be called.

Before calling the session, the governor is awaiting the final report of the Select Committee on Public Education, due before the end of April, said Ann Arnold, White's press secretary.

She noted that White said previously that he has had a tax increase proposal ready for some time, adding that the governor also wants a consensus among lawmakers.

"I think we're very optimistic (of that)," she said.

Hobby said he expected the education legislation would follow "the general thrust" of recommendations made by the Select Committee, headed by H. Ross Perot of Dallas.

Hobby said the legislation would include teacher pay raises and equalizing state aid to local school districts, adding that, "I think you're looking at a three-year total of about $1.6 billion or $1.7 billion (cost)."

Grand jury returns murder indictments in slavery case

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) — Arrest warrants were pending today for people named in six murder indictments returned after witnesses said they were forced to burn the body of a drifter who was tortured repeatedly with cattle prods, a prosecutor said.

The indictments were issued Thursday by a Kerr County grand jury in connection with an investigation into allegations that hitchhikers were held captive and forced to perform slave labor at a Hill Country ranch, District Attorney Ron Sutton said.

Sutton refused to reveal those named in the indictments, saying he was acting on a request by State District Judge Murray V. Jordan, who asked that the defendants not be revealed until arrest warrants could be issued today.

The prosecutor also declined to say if those indicted included three members of a ranching family charged with holding six drifters captive.

Investigators say Walter Wesley Ellebracht Sr., his son Walter Wesley Ellebracht Jr. and his daughter-in-law, Joyce Ellebracht, picked up hitchhikers along the interstate and forced them to work by using cattle prods and chaining them to trees.

The Ellebrachts remained jailed today in lieu of $100,000 bond each on aggravated kidnapping charges.

One of the Ellebrachts once laughed as he tortured a drifter with a cattle prod and even tape-recorded the man's screams, one of the hitchhikers told investigators.

The body of the drifter, who called himself Anthony Bates, was then doused with gasoline and cremated, according to statements filed in state court Wednesday.

Bates was shocked "on 20 or 30 different occasions, each session lasting about one or two hours," according to a statement by Mark Allen Hamilton.

"Two of these sessions were tape-recorded by (Wesley Ellebracht) Junior," Hamilton said. "Bates was shocked on various parts of his body, including his genitals and his tongue. Eventually, Bates became very weak and died."

Hamilton said the man was tortured because he was considered to be not a productive enough worker on the ranch, located about 20 miles northwest of Kerrville in Mountain Home.

Forensic anthropologists with the Texas Department of Public Safety are trying to determine whether charred bone fragments discovered on the ranch are human.

Kerr County Sheriff Cliff Greeson had said he would open a murder investigation if the bones are of human origin.

Sutton said late Thursday that test results had not been received. Asked if a murder charge would stand up without the results, he said, "Obviously, the grand jury was satisfied."

Six drifters rescued from the ranch on April 5 — five men and a woman — are being held in seclusion as material witnesses to the case.

Among the statements filed Wednesday were allegations that:

— The drifters were buzzed with cattle prods if they did not work fast enough.

— Workers were forced to sign suicide notes and documents stating that they were well-treated and well-paid.

Builders inform Reagan interest rates haunting housing recovery

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — President Reagan came prepared to take credit for a boom in housing, a bellwether of the economy that is at its healthiest in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

But as soon as he finished his opening remarks Thursday to a panel of representatives from the housing industry, the president found that prosperity has produced pessimism.

Of the 12 panelists who met with Reagan, 11 expressed concern about rising interest rates. Many linked the increases to the federal deficit and many predicted a downturn in their industry by the end of this year. One predicted the downturn could result in a turnaround for Reagan at the November polls.

"I think 1985 is a year of risk," said Mark Carlson, executive vice president of the National Association of Realtors, at a panel session before the president arrived.

"We've had 18 good months," said James A. Rankin, representing the National Council of Housing Industry. "The question facing us is, will the housing recovery be aborted by high interest rates brought on by the deficit."

"President Carter didn't listen to us before the 1980 election that without a good, strong housing industry, the president could not be re-elected," he said.

"This uptick in interest rates is something of a real threat that makes my knees tremble even more than appearing before the president of the United States," said Paul Prior, president of the National League of Savings Institutions.

When Reagan arrived, he took credit for the recovery.

"The strength surging through your industry and the rest of the economy is no accident," Reagan said in his opening remarks before the panel.

He said that when the Carter administration took over, the prime rate was 7 percent. Four years later, it was 21 1/2 percent, he said.

The decline of the prime rate from 18 percent down to 13 1/2 percent during his administration meant a $225 a month savings for homebuyers, Reagan said.

"One of the strangest things to me is listening to people suggest that we should be frightened because the economy is growing too fast, that too many people are finding jobs and this will push up interest rates," Reagan said. "No one will ever convince me that economic growth is bad. It's good for everybody, especially the homebuilding industry."

David Smith, vice president and secretary of National Home Builders, told Reagan that housing starts in 1983 were up 60 percent over the previous year and were expected to increase even more in 1984.

He told Reagan the recovery "represents a major triumph for your administration."

"But the recovery, Mr. President, has reached a critical turning point," he said.

"Builders are the ones out in front of this economic recovery," Smith said. "They are taking the risks. Builders are the ones who live and die on the ups and downs of interest rates. And interest rates, Mr. President, are rising."

Smith told Reagan that "builders view the deficit as the single greatest threat to the nation's economic recovery."

Reagan said there never should have been a deficit, but that higher interest rates were a result of the economic boom — "more market for the money than there is money."

"I think that there is more that they (deficits) contribute to the pessimism of the marketplace that would account for the interest rates than having any direct tie," he said.

Reagan said he had told the panel "to look at everything."

Patient from convicted doctor's clinic dies

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A doctor convicted last year of drowning a 6-month-old female fetus at his abortion clinic appeared before a county grand jury after a patient from his clinic died at a hospital, but his attorney says he told the panel "nothing."

Three subpoenas for Dr. Raymond Showery and for records from his El Paso Southside Family Planning clinic were issued Thursday morning, according to lawyer Michael Gibson. A subpoena for an employee of the clinic, Carmen Ayala, also was issued, Gibson said.

Showery appeared before the grand jury for about five minutes, Gibson said. But the doctor pleaded the Fifth Amendment, Gibson said.

Gibson filed a motion to quash the subpoenas with State District Judge Jerry Woodard. The judge had not ruled on the motion by late Thursday.

Gibson said he did not know why his client was asked to appear before the grand jury and District Attorney Steve Simmons would not comment on the issue.

But according to police reports, a 28-year-old El Paso woman died at Providence Memorial Hospital Wednesday night after being admitted to the hospital's emergency room from Showery's clinic.

The death report on Mikey Apodaca, a divorced mother of four, said she was brought into the hospital at 5:35 p.m. from the Southside Family Planning clinic and was bleeding extensively from the vagina.

Doctors at the hospital performed unsuccessful surgery on Mrs. Apodaca, according to the death report.

She was pronounced dead at 7:15 p.m. by assistant medical examiner Manny Diaz. The cause of death was listed as hypovolemic shock or loss of blood.

An autopsy performed on Mrs. Apodaca's body Thursday revealed her uterus was torn, according to county medical examiner Dr. Juan Contin.

He said it appeared Mrs. Apodaca was in the process of having a medical procedure performed, "which I assume was an abortion" when she started bleeding.

He said no fetus or baby was found in her body.

Showery was convicted in September 1983 of drowning a 6-month-old female fetus during a 1979 abortion at his clinic, which then was called the Family Hospital.

He was sentenced to 15 years in prison by the same jury that convicted him of killing the fetus, which never was found.

The murder conviction without a corpse was believed to be the nation's first against a physician, according to Assistant District Attorney Carol Pennock.

Showery remains free on bond pending an appeal of the conviction.

Gibson said he would not let Showery speak with reporters, who filled the courtroom hallways while the grand jury met. The doctor, dressed in a beige sports jacket, brown pants and white shirt with a blue tie, appeared calm and even joked with reporters while he waited outside the courtroom for more than two hours.

No indictments were issued against Showery, according to Gibson.

He said the grand jury was waiting to recall Showery for testimony until after Woodard ruled on his motion to quash the subpoenas.

The grand jury's term was to expire next Tuesday but Simmons said it asked to extend its term by 90 days, a request that was granted.

Mrs. Ayala testified before the panel for about 90 minutes.

Gibson also would not comment on the death of Mrs. Apodaca.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

'Bad commission' attracts criticism

When President Reagan tried to replace three members of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights last summer with more conservative members, congressional supporters of the commission screamed foul, arguing that such a move by Reagan would destroy the independence from external influence the commission was supposed to enjoy.

A prolonged battle followed, resulting in a compromise that saved the commission from possible extinction and reconstituted it with new members, appointed by the administration and Congress.

Now it seems the new commission has become a mite too independent for some congressional leaders who once strongly supported it.

Specifically, leaders of the black, Hispanic and women's caucuses in the House of Representatives are urging that all funding for the commission be cut off, which, in effect, would mean the end of the commission.

While we support their recommendations wholeheartedly, we cannot fail to note the exquisite irony of it all.

The reconstituted commission's chief sin, in the eyes of the congressional leaders, has been its unwillingness to blindly endorse the sacred cows of quotas, busing and "affirmative action," long past the time when equating civil rights with such heavy-handed government intrusions has been discredited even by the groups those "remedies" are supposed to help. (It's much easier these days to find a black "leader" who supports busing than a black parent of school-age children.)

So the caucus leaders, who found the commission suitably independent when it was supporting their agenda of government activism, wish to dismantle the commission now that it wants to take a critical look at what such activism has wrought. (The commission, for example, has suggested that enforcing quotas for some minorities has created a "new class of victims" among other groups that are not so politically favored.)

Does this sound like the old playground complaint that if you won't play by our rules, we'll take our ball home?

Well, so be it. When the compromise that saved the commission was hammered out in January, we commented that the cause of advancing individual rights would have been better served if the panel had been allowed to expire. We continue to believe that, even though the old commission is marginally less objectional than the old.

"Civil rights" are no more than individual rights, the birthright of each human being. They are not favors to be dispensed or taken away by governments. Government attempts to enforce "civil rights" almost always mean pitting groups of individuals against each other in competition for political favors, and violating the rights of the losers.

Opinion polls get a bad rap

WASHINGTON (NEA) - As in recent election years, it's become fashionable this year to criticize public opinion polls as unreliable indicators of voter sentiment - but the facts don't support that popular notion.

The record shows that voter surveys not only have been generally reliable this year, but also have identified in advance the two most surprising and significant developments in the contest for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The surge of voter support for Sen. Gery Hart, D-Colo., immediately before the New Hampshire primary.

The failure of Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, to become a major contender.

Hart's emergence as a serious challenger to former Vice President Walter Mondale was tracked with amazing precision by the only poll that has attempted to seriously gauge public opinion on a daily basis in states holding primaries and caucuses.

That survey, conducted by the Washington Post and ABC News, showed Mondale's lead over Hart being relentlessly narrowed in the week immediately preceding the Feb. 29 New Hampshire primary.

On the Sunday prior to the election, Hart surged ahead by 3 percentage points. On Monday, the day before the election, Hart's lead increased to 8 percentage points.

Hart won the election by 11 percentage points, a figure entirely consistent with the trend identified in the poll. The public, however, was never told about this survey, presumably because its sponsors were uneasy about predicting an upset victory or "dark horse" Hart in a crucial primary.

There was ample justification for that nervousness, because the television networks have been repeatedly criticized for prematurely disclosing the results of "exit-polls" on Election Day.

Although the New Hampshire survey wasn't an exit poll, if ABC had announced it, the network would have been in the tenuous position of proclaiming an upset on the eve of the New Hampshire primary - before the polls even opened.

Wary of that dicey situation, the poll's sponsors chose to combine four days' survey results into a "rolling average" (an acceptable practice) and reported only the 30 - 30 tie produced by that consolidation technique.

The notion that Hart enjoyed latent yet massive popular support in New Hampshire or any other state and that surveys failed to discern it in late 1983 or early 1984 (before the voting began) is flawed and cannot withstand critical examination.

Except for the small number of political "junkies," voters generally don't focus attention on campaigns until the days and weeks immediately before the election.

More important and immediate concerns - fixing the family car, helping the kids with their homework, scraping together enough money for next month's mortgage payment - rightfully take precedence over analyzing candidates' quirky personalities and shifting policies in preparation for a distant election.

If approached by pollsters months before an election and pressed to name a favorite candidate, voters typically name a political celebrity with whom they're comfortable - but that's hardly a binding commitment.

Glenn long has been a celebrity and the conventional wisdom prior to this year's voting held that he would be a major challenger to Mondale. Even a casual perusal of the early survey data showed, however, that he wasn't capturing the public's imagination.

Three separate Gallup Polls conducted in January and February showed Mondale leading Glenn by 2 - 1 margins among Democrats produced a 3 - 1 margin in Mondale's favor.

The bottom line: Opinion polling remains an art rather than a science, but it can produce amazingly accurate results and hardly deserves the uninformed criticism it has been receiving this year.

Today in History

Today is Friday, April 13, the 104th day of 1984. There are 262 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On April 13, 1743, the third president of the United States and the author of the Declaration of Independence, Thomas Jefferson, was born in what is now Albemarle County, Va.

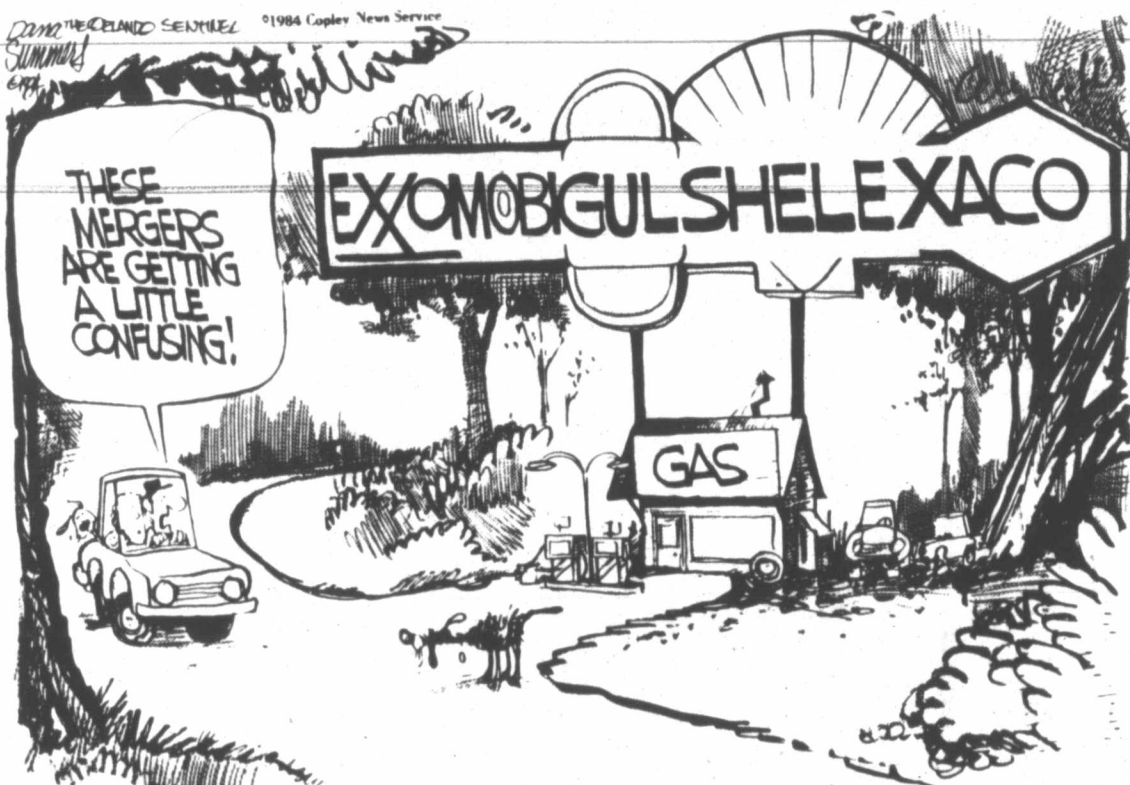

On this date: Ten years ago: Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan warned Lebanon to police Arab guerrilla groups in its territory, or Israel would continue punitive raids.

Five years ago: The final process to bring Pennsylvania's Three Mile Island nuclear power plant to a safe, cold shutdown was started.

One year ago: Unemployed Pennsylvania steelworker Ronald Bricker, who had given President Reagan his resume, got a job at an electronics store through Reagan's intervention.

Today's birthdays: Former Minnesota Gov. Harold Stassen is 77 years old. Atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair is 65. Actor Lyle Waggoner is 49. Composer Bill Conti is 42. And actor Ricky Schroder is 14.

Thought for today: "When angry, count ten before you speak; if very angry, a hundred." - Thomas Jefferson (1743-1826).

Art Buchwald

Degradation in eye of beholder

I am always leery of anyone who starts messing around with the First Amendment, whether it be textbook censors in Texas, or militant women libbers in Minnesota.

Recently some women in Minneapolis managed to get a city ordinance passed banning "pornography" and making those who sold it or exhibited it subject to lawsuits. Their argument was that pornography degrades women and deprives them of their civil rights.

Fortunately the bill was vetoed by the mayor.

I say fortunately because once you start down the road of making booksellers liable for what they sell you run into the problem of where degradation stops and mind-boggling romance takes over. (For further evidence see your favorite soap opera.)

The hottest item in the publishing business these days is the paperback "romance novel." They sell in the millions and purveyors of these kinds of books will tell you they are almost all bought by women.

I don't know if they degrade women or not, but all of the romance novels require men to "sweep women off their feet" and aggressively persuade the heroine, against her better judgment, to allow her blood to say "yes" when her head says "no."

A recent paperback published by Putnam's titled "The Romance Writers' Phrase Book," by Jean Kent & Candace Shelton, arrived on my desk while I was thinking about the Minneapolis ordinance.

It provides 3,000 descriptive "tags" that people writing romance novels could use to jazz up their writing.

Here are a few examples that could be considered degrading to women, but are very helpful in appealing to that large female audience which eats the romance novel up like peanuts. It couldn't include the ones that are inappropriate for a family newspaper.

"It was flesh against flesh, man against woman."

"She shattered into a million glowing stars."

"She lay drowned in a floodtide of the liberation of her mind and body."

"While he would be merely filling a moment of physical desire, she would be allowing him to tear apart her soul."

"She yielded to the searing need which had been building for months."

"Her body began to vibrate with liquid fire."

"She kissed him with a hunger that belied her outward calm."

"She buried her face against the corded muscles of his chest."

"Her knees were weakened by the quivering of her limbs."

"In her haste to reassure him she went too far."

I guess you have the idea.

If the Minneapolis ordinance had gone into effect the sellers of romance novels would be in the same jeopardy as those who handle the raunchy magazines and books usually sealed in cellophane.

No matter how noble their cause the women of Minneapolis can't use civil rights as a reason for stopping someone from publishing books about sex.

The reason is quite simple. One woman's pornography is another woman's fantasy.

I am absolutely against degrading the American woman. At the same time, as a First Amendment buff, I feel her civil rights are far more threatened by city ordinances than by "degrading" books that could possibly help her have a nice day.

Getting drunk and roasting pigs

EDITOR'S NOTE—The Pampa News will publish the Lewis Grizzard column on a trial basis for several weeks. At the end of the trial period, we will ask readers whether they prefer the Grizzard column or the column written by Art Buchwald and let your opinion determine which we publish on a regular basis.

There is all sorts of concern these days over what effect television exit polls and early projections of winners by the networks have on the voters and on elections themselves.

I share this concern. I believe in the First Amendment and the public's right to know just as much as the next person, but what about the right to throw a party on election night?

Election night parties are a tradition in this country. They are as old as elections themselves.

Andrew Jackson threw great election parties. Everybody got drunk and roasted a pig. I would wager Dolly Madison could throw an election night shindig herself, and the very name "party" is so much a part of our political system.

They didn't call it the Whig "Association" and they don't call it the Republican "League" or the Democratic "Group." We always have used the word "party" to indicate a group with the same political leanings.

But let me ask you, me fellow Americans, what kind of election party can you have when you know who won before the beer even gets cold?

About opinions

The views expressed in the opinion column on this page are those of The Pampa News or Freedom Newspapers.

Opinions expressed by the signed columnists are their own and may not always be an accurate reflection of the views of this newspaper.

This very thing happened to me in the last election, when Jimmy Carter lost to Ronald Reagan.

I had a great party planned at my house. I asked everyone over at 7 in the evening.

The guests were going to have a few drinks, and then I was going to grill hamburgers. I don't know how to roast a pig. I had red, white and blue bunting in the den, and I borrowed a couple of television sets so we could tune in every network.

I even had separate rooms for Republicans and Democrats. The Republicans were going to be served a delicate white wine, while the Democrats were going to guzzle beer. Undecided were to be in a third room trying to figure out what they wanted to drink.

The party turned out to be a disaster because nobody bothered to show up.

First, I got a call from McHenry, a staunch Carter supporter.

"I'm not coming to your party," he said.

I asked him why not.

"Because how can I get into a partying mood when my candidate has already lost?"

"But it's only 4 o'clock, I on the West Coast," I protested.

"How do you know your candidate is going to lose?"

"Just heard the early projections from Roger Mudd," he said.

"It's Reagan in a landslide. I'm going to stay home and drink bolshermakers."

A few minutes later, Feltingham, a Republican, rang.

"Going to have to duck out on your party tonight," he said.

"You've already heard the results, too?" I asked.

"It's Reagan in a landslide," he answered. "The wife and I have decided to go to the club to celebrate."

I grilled hamburgers alone and turned in early, cursing Roger Mudd until I fell asleep.

I say let's ban any announcement of who is going to win an election until election night parties at least have a chance to get started.

Ten o'clock would be fine. That way, the guests would have had time to get well into the sauce and the coals would be just about right for the meat.

Remember, getting drunk and roasting pigs is one of the things that made this country great in the first place.

Nun is challenging American way of business

By STEVE SCHLATHER

San Antonio Light
BOERNE, Texas (AP) — Sister Susan Mika wants to challenge the American way of doing business.

As executive director of the Texas Coalition for Responsible Investment (CRI), Sister Mika leads the efforts of 13 Catholic religious orders that try to pressure corporations to stop what the religious groups believe to be unethical practices.

In its first two years, CRI has instigated a stockholder resolution to stop construction of the South Texas Nuclear Plant, investigated the health of workers in Hanes factories and researched American companies' use of foreign-based factories.

"Some people feel women religious (nuns) should not be involved in all these things," Sister Mika said. "But if we're not raising these questions, there's not going to be anybody raising them." Opposition to STNP has been the coalition's most visible issue.

Last year, CRI worked with the Sisters of the Sorrowful Mother, a Wisconsin religious order that owns stock in Houston Industries.

Houston Industries is the parent company of Houston Lighting and Power, the managing partner for the troubled nuclear plant.

The Sorrowful Mother sisters prepared a resolution asking for a halt in work on STNP pending an independent review of the much-delayed project.

Sister Mika said almost 7.4 percent of the votes in last May's stockholders meeting supported the resolution, a figure she calls "fantastic" for a first effort at questioning management on its own turf.

More importantly, the vote met the government's requirement of at least 3 percent for allowing a question to be raised again. The Sorrowful Mothers, together with the Christian Brothers of St. Louis, are asking this May's meeting for outright cancellation of the plant.

Now the religious groups have won credibility and respect from the management of Houston Industries, Sister Mika said.

The 35-year-old Benedictine nun said the company sent only two representatives last year for a meeting in New York to discuss their resolution.

But this year, five company officials, including board Chairman Don Jordan, met with the CRI delegation and provided a tour of the plant.

Sister Mika said that management wants the religious orders to withdraw their resolution to avoid more negative publicity for the plant.

"We asked a lot of questions and saw a lot of red tags (that indicate work that needs to be re-inspected or re-done). And we're going ahead with our resolution," the nun said.

Sister Mika said her group questions the safety of the nuclear plant, its escalating cost and plans for disposal of nuclear waste. She became particularly incensed when an HL&P official suggested putting high-level nuclear waste into space.

"I wrote to him that we do not see space as the ultimate garbage frontier," she said.

The oldest of nine children,

Sister Mika was born in Fort Lee, Va., into a military family. Her father drew duties in Texas, Louisiana, Japan and France before settling in San Antonio.

She first got interested in becoming a nun during an earlier stint in this city when she attended eighth grade at St. Benedict's School.

"I liked how the sisters went about things. They did things in a quiet way, but they were very dedicated," she said.

While her family was stationed in France, Sister Mika came to Boerne to attend St. Albert Hall, then a Benedictine school for girls exploring the religious life. She entered the convent after graduation from St. Albert's and took final vows in 1970.

Most of her ministry has been centered on parochial schools, teaching at Holy Spirit and St. Benedict's and serving as principal at the latter school.

Punishment phase set for Lucas

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — The jurors who convicted Henry Lee Lucas of capital murder return to court today to determine if the self-styled mass killer deserves death or life in prison.

Prosecutors indicated they would hear evidence of four other alleged Lucas slayings during the punishment phase.

The panel of eight women and eight men ruled Thursday he strangled, raped and robbed a young unidentified hitchhiker in October 1979 and dumped her body in a culvert near Georgetown.

Jurors faced their final decision today and they had but two options: assess Lucas life in prison or death by lethal injection.

Lucas, 47, who says he's killed 360 people, previously received a life sentence and a 75-year prison term for two other Texas murders.

At last count, he had been charged with 17 murders in Texas and five other states.

Chief prosecutor Ed Walsh of Georgetown said he was more relieved than surprised by the guilty verdict but added that the most important task was today's punishment stage.

"We intend ... to convince the jury that Lucas needs and deserves the death penalty," he said.

His prosecutorial colleague, Ken Anderson, said the death penalty would protect society from "the likes of Henry Lee Lucas."

The central issue, said Anderson, is the "continuing danger" Lucas constitutes to society. He noted that "even his own psychiatrists testified he was dangerous."

"Anybody can see he's dangerous," he said.

The jury got the case Wednesday night and deliberated more than nine hours over a two-day period before it rendered its verdict Thursday.

Defense attorneys conceded that the longer the deliberations continued the better the chances for acquittal. But it was not to be.

"We're not surprised but we are disappointed," said Max Parker, one of Lucas' three lawyers.

Parker McCullough, another defense attorney, said there were some "strong points for appeal" and quoted Lucas as saying:

"I brought this on myself and I'll live with myself. I gave them this one."

The defense insisted from the outset that were it not for a series of statements Lucas gave investigators, the state would have had no case at all.

Though Lucas later repudiated his "confessions," prosecutors used the videotaped interviews to mount a devastating case for their capital murder charges.

Anderson, in his closing argument, called the strategy the "insane alibi" defense.

The jury apparently believed him.

FIELD HOSPITAL—Israeli para-medics work under floodlights by the side of the highway as they tend hostages wounded in a bus hijacking. A woman hostage and the four hijackers reportedly were killed and seven other hostages were injured when soldiers stormed the bus. (AP Laserphoto)

Commandos end ordeal in 15 seconds

EDITOR'S NOTE: Max Nash, an Associated Press photographer, witnessed the Israeli commando assault on the hijacked bus from a vantage point about 250 yards away.

By MAX NASH
Associated Press Writer
DIR AL BALAH, Occupied Gaza Strip (AP) — In about 15 seconds before dawn today, Israeli commandos ended a 10-hour ordeal.

Firing assault rifles and tossing stun grenades, the troops stormed a red-and-white bus that had been hijacked in the Mediterranean coastal city of Ashdod, freeing about two dozen hostages.

The specially trained soldiers charged from the buses at the side of the road and scaled the sides of the bus to get in through the windows. They forced open the door.

Passengers flattened themselves on the floor of the bus. After the brief crackle of rifle fire, they streamed outside.

A female passenger and all four hijackers were killed in the assault, Israeli army radio reported.

Seven other passengers were injured.

"Well done, well done," shouted a white-haired man in his 50s as he emerged from the bus. He kissed and hugged the soldiers.

The bus had been hijacked by four men, said to be in their teens and early 20s, who demanded the release of 500 guerrillas held in Israeli jails and safe passage to Egypt for themselves.

It broke through two roadblocks before sharpshooters shot out the tires and disabled the vehicle here, 10 miles north of the Egyptian border.

The bus was stopped in the grass on the right hand side of the four-lane highway in open country near the Dir Al Balah Palestinian refugee camp. It was illuminated by a single spotlight.

Passengers freed as Israeli troops storm hijacked bus

EDITOR'S NOTE — The following story was submitted to the Israeli military censor, who ordered deletion of some material.

DIR AL BALAH, Occupied Gaza Strip (AP) — Israeli troops today stormed a bus hijacked by four Arab terrorists and freed about two dozen passengers who had been threatened by a bomb during their 10-hour ordeal, Israeli military officials said.

A female passenger and all four hijackers were killed in a fierce pre-dawn assault on the bus that lasted only seconds, Israeli Army radio reported.

The military identified the slain woman as an Israeli soldier, and it said seven other passengers were wounded.

The Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a Marxist wing of the Palestine Liberation Organization, issued a statement in Damascus, Syria, claiming responsibility for the attack. It added: "The forthcoming days will see a number of spectacular operations in the occupied territories."

The red-and-white bus, carrying 35 passengers, was hijacked near the Mediterranean coast city of Ashdod. About nine of the passengers escaped before the bus was disabled 10 miles north of the Egyptian border by army sharpshooters who shot the tires out.

From there, authorities negotiated for hours with the terrorists, who demanded the release of 500 guerrillas held in Israeli jails and safe passage to Egypt for themselves, said Defense Minister Moshe Arens, who watched the rescue mission from the scene.

"They had a bomb they threatened to explode, but we managed to take control before they had a chance to detonate it," Arens told Israel radio.

The hijackers also were armed with bottles of acid, knives and a grenade, officials said. Passenger Esther Ziv said one threatened repeatedly to kill everyone aboard.

"We will kill all of you on the bus. We are starting to fight today. Everyone on the bus will die," Ms. Ziv quoted the hijacker as saying.

Thinking of luck

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Whenever the calendar comes up "Fri 13," a lot of people spend some time thinking about luck.

For example, would it be tempting fate, and the auditors of the Internal Revenue Service, to send off your income tax return on Friday the 13th?

Searching for four-leaf clovers, or shying away from black cats, has become a bit passe. But luck can still call the turn in many money matters. For instance, even if your tax return is a white-glove-clean document, free of the slightest hint of an exaggerated deduction, you'd probably prefer the IRS didn't pick it out for examination.

"No one wants to be audited," observes Prentice-Hall, a publisher of tax information. "An IRS audit can be both costly and time-consuming, and it very rarely turns out to your advantage."

The odds against being audited are slim — about 49-1, on average. Last year, less than 2 percent of returns filed were audited.

Tax advisers say your individual probability of being audited varies. For one thing, the larger your income, the greater the chance the IRS radar will home in your return. The experts also say you can inadvertently raise a red flag when you file by taking unusual or exceptionally large writeoffs, or even by messing up the arithmetic.

However, since the IRS says it randomly selects thousands of returns each year for auditing, in an effort to keep the general public honest, every taxpayer is still subject to the luck of the draw.

People who invest — or try to predict the future course of the economy, interest rates and stock prices — need luck too.

Raymond F. DeVoe Jr., who makes his living analyzing the economy and the markets for the firm of Legg Mason Wood Walker Inc., has developed a list of laws that apply to the writing of research reports.

Musical scheduled at First Christian Church

The Joy Singers and Praise Choirs of the First Christian Church, 18th and Nelson Sts., will present the musical "Vinegar Boy" at the 10:50 a.m. worship service for Palm Sunday services.

The production will be under the direction of Rev. Paul M. Ragle, assisted by Stacey Cates.

"Vinegar Boy" is an Easter story set in the time of Christ, telling the story of a child abandoned by his parents because of a terrible birthmark on his face. The young boy is taken to the Roman garrison of Pontius Pilate by the commissary steward, Nicholas.

As the story begins, Vinegar Boy takes a jug of vinegar mixed with myrrh to the Crucifixion hill to relieve the pain of those who are dying, a daily chore for him. On the day in the film, the chore interferes with his plans to have his birthmark removed by the Man of Miracles, Jesus of Nazareth.

In the story that follows, the familiar Easter story is interwoven with the concept of self-acceptance and God's love for people as they are.

The church also will have its traditional Maundy Thursday worship service at 7 p.m. Thursday. Dr. Bill R. Boswell will conduct the service, assisted by Rev. Ragle and Mrs. Price T. (Carolyn) Smith.

The Chancel Choir will perform special music for the service.

The public is invited to attend both services in observance of the Easter season.

Revival at Hobart Baptist

Hobart Baptist Church, 1100 W. Crawford, will have special revival services Sunday through Friday.

Preacher for the services will be Ron Trusler. Music director will be Jon-Roy Ramsour.

Services will be held at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. Sunday, with evening services at 7:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. A noon meal and service will be held from noon to 1 p.m. daily after Sunday.

A nursery will be provided.

The public is invited to attend, Pastor Haskell Wilson said.

Lenten services next week at St. Paul United Methodist

St. Paul United Methodist Church, 511 N. Hobart, will be having Lenten services Sunday through Thursday. Services will be at 6 p.m. Sunday and at 7 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

Rev. Royce Womack and Rev. L. V. Grace will be leading the services. Rev. Womack will be showing slides of the Holy Land taken by him and his wife in January. Rev. Grace will have a message each evening on one of the "Seven Last Words" spoken by Christ on the cross.

The special services will conclude with the Maundy Thursday Communion.

There will be congregational singing and special music at each service, with Jerry Lane leading the music.

The public is invited to attend the special services.

Special day at St. Mark CME

A special Women and Men's Day is scheduled for Sunday at St. Mark Christian Methodist Episcopal Church, 408 Elm, at 3 p.m.

Guest speaker for the special service will be Rev. G. R. Patterson, former presiding elder of the district.

The public is invited to attend.

No one knows how He looked

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

He "was made like his brethren in every respect," the book of Hebrews says of Jesus, that special man whose entry into Jerusalem for his last earthly week is celebrated by Christians this Sunday.

But just what he looked like has remained a question ever since, although countless concepts of his appearance have been produced in paintings, icons and sculpture.

Most every major art museum includes some of those portrayals by renowned artists through the centuries. The efforts still go on.

"He had no form or comeliness that we should look at him," says Scriptural prophecy in Isaiah 53, regarded by Christians as referring to him. "and no beauty that we should desire him."

He was "a man of sorrow, acquainted with grief."

The classic paintings generally convey that aspect, in direct or indirect ways, depicting him as he taught, sat with his apostles at the Last Supper, in his death on the cross, even in his resurrection.

One of the most widely popular of the paintings, Warner Sallman's "Head of Christ," was the subject recently of a 60th anniversary exhibit in Northbrook, Ill., where Sallman's widow, Ruth, resides.

Millions of reproductions of that painting, showing a gentle, serene face with blue eyes and light hair, adorn walls of many homes, hospitals, churches and offices around the world.

Sallman, whose painting often is criticized as too blandly pleasant and Anglo-Saxon, did it for a Christian magazine cover in 1924. He related how he had trouble deciding how to do it, but inspiration came to him and he got up and swiftly executed it.

A new painting of the face, widely reproduced lately in the religious press, has been turned out by British artist Curtis Hooper, drawing on indications from a man-size figure on the ancient and mystifying Shroud of Turin.

Scientists who have examined it so far remain baffled by the cause of the image, although some conclude that the cloth wrapped the body of Christ in burial, his imprint left on it at his resurrection.

Hooper, who spent seven years in research, analyzing enhanced photographs of the image and consulting with specialists to produce his work, says he believes it is the most accurate depiction yet of Jesus' countenance.

It shows a short-bearded man, his dark hair down to his shoulders, with deeply perceptive, dark brown eyes.

A reproduction was carried in Life magazine recently, and it since has appeared in the fortnightly, Christianity Today, in the national Catholic weekly, Our Sunday Visitor, and other religious publications.

Religious Roundup

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Delegates to the assembly of the Lutheran Church of Sweden voted overwhelmingly to insist that bishops not ordain priests opposed to the ordination of women. However, seven of Sweden's 13 bishops opposed the action, and the church's primate, Archbishop Bertil Werkstrom of Uppsala, questioned the assembly's right to make such a decision.

WACO, Texas (AP) — After recinding an outright ban of such displays, Baylor University's president has appealed to men students to remove from their dormitory rooms any lewd posters of women or promoting drugs or alcoholic beverages.

"I am now appealing to your basic goodness and your desire, I believe, to always take the high road in life, and to not adorn your walls with unseemly posters of this sort," Herbert H. Reynolds said in requests sent to men's dormitories.

Earlier this year, Reynolds had revoked a ban imposed without his knowledge by Baylor's dean. He says the Southern Baptist institution has consistently opposed drinking and photographs demeaning women, but that requesting adherence to that policy is "more effective than an unenforceable edict."

"We can't search ever dorm room every day," he adds.

John Doe?

During the last war Kilroy was the name of the man who had been there. John Doe, the encyclopedia tells us, is the name used in legal documents to describe a person whose real name is unknown.

You do not know the name of this darling baby, and his name may be unknown to us, but in his eyes dwell love and trust. His eyes are like doe-eyes. Yet the male deer is a young buck, rather than a doe, and he is known for his swift running and his ability to jump to high places.

Our prayer for this young man is this:

May the Lord strengthen and establish you. Then as Isaiah says in the 6th verse of the 33rd Chapter, wisdom and knowledge shall be the stability of thy times, and strength of salvation: the fear of the Lord is his treasure."

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Dear Abby

Will neutered dog lose spark along with bite?

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Regarding your St. Valentine's Day column: You wrote, "Be a sweetheart—spay your dog, neuter your cat, etc."

I realize that you are all for spaying and neutering dogs and cats because there are too many starving animals in the world, but I hate to do this to our dog, "Rocky." He's a 2-year-old male, and we've heard if we neuter him he'll get fat and lose his playful personality. Also, isn't it cruel to deprive a dog of sex after he's already experienced it?

Will it ruin Rocky as a watchdog? Rocky isn't vicious—he just barks at strange noises and people he doesn't know. We like that because we feel safe when he barks. Rocky also has a very playful personality, and we don't want him turned into a fat, lazy, eating and sleeping machine.

Are we right or wrong about these fears?
UNSURE ABOUT ROCKY

DEAR UNSURE: My chief veterinarian consultant, Dr. James J. Isaacs of Encino, Calif., says: "It's not true that dogs will become fat as a result of having been neutered or spayed. Animals, like humans, need proper diet and exercise to stay lean and healthy."

"(Incidentally, spaying a female reduces her chances of uterine infections or breast cancer.)

"Because a spayed or neutered guard dog will have fewer distractions, it will be a better guard dog. (A male dog that doesn't have sex on his mind will not be roaming around seeking females 'in season' nor will he get into fights with competitive males over females.)

"Does it change a dog's personality? Only for the better."

DEAR ABBY: My husband demanded that I change from a male doctor to a female doctor. He said he didn't want another male ogling my naked body.

I changed doctors to please my husband. Recently we were divorced. I am now living with my female doctor, and we couldn't be happier!

IT TAKES ONE TO KNOW ONE

DEAR ABBY: I was married last October. At present I am legally separated from my husband. Should I send thank-you notes for the wedding gifts? If you think I should, is it necessary to mention the legal separation? (It may end in divorce, but what if it doesn't?) If you think thank-you notes are in order, how should they be signed?

My husband and I aren't even on speaking terms, so I can't talk it over with him. Thanks for any help you can give me. Have a nice day.

UNDECIDED IN WINNETKA, ILL.

DEAR UNDECIDED: Thank-you notes are not only in order, they are overdue. Inasmuch as the wedding gifts belong to both you and your husband, he is equally responsible for acknowledging them, so ask him (in a letter, since you aren't on speaking terms) to acknowledge the gifts from his relatives and special friends and you will take care of yours. You may be reconciled with him, so don't mention your legal separation in the thank-you notes.

Four Pampa women chosen for 'Notable Women of Texas'

Four Pampa women have been accepted for inclusion in the first edition of "Notable Women of Texas," a book recognizing the merit and providing biographical information about the leading women of the state.

Helen Hogan, Georgia Mack, Vickie Moose and Lilith Brainard are the four women of Pampa to be included in the book.

Women invited to be included in the volume are selected for their achievements and their contributions to their communities.

Each biography is to present a record of family background, education, career and civic, political and social activities.

Gena on Genealogy

By GENA WALLS

Often the only source to prove death is the tombstone and it is considered to be accurate. Many cemeteries have a listing of some sort and can help locate family plots when individual spaces are not marked. Try writing a letter in care of the custodian of the cemetery giving as many details as you can. Also ask for a description of the tombstone with the data.

You might discover a type of fraternal marker that could be a missing link to other information. If you know the church cemetery, the pastor might be able to help, either in location or by referring you to a member of the church.

I recently located a cemetery listing in Mississippi by writing the local postmaster and requesting assistance in delivery of the letter. I wrote a letter to the pastor, in care of the church, sealed and stamped it and then wrote a note to the postmaster explaining the contents of the letter and giving the general location of the church. The letter was delivered and six weeks later I received an answer with a name of a church member researching the same lineage.

Think about your particular problem and different avenues that might solve it. Don't be afraid to try something different. Remember to include that self-addressed, stamped envelope. And be patient—usually you receive an answer.

Are you searching for relatives in Florida? Settlers from Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina settled the middle section of Florida about 1820. Later, between 1845 to 1860, most of the people who came to East Florida had lived in Georgia, Alabama and both Carolinas. The 1860 census shows that 22 percent of the population had come from Georgia, with 11 percent from South Carolina and five percent from North Carolina. Florida's early population was predominantly Spanish; however, many of the settlers were of Irish ancestry, moving down from the other states.

Trevino gains mastery of Masters

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — The lush fairways and the undulating greens of the Augusta National Golf Course have always been something of a house of horrors for happy-go-lucky Lee Trevino. There was a time, in fact, when he simply wouldn't play the course or its fabled Masters Tournament. The past traumas had been that disturbing. "Every year here seemed to be on the negative side," he said. "I'd drive through the gate on to Magnolia Drive and I'd go into a spasm. I'd bogey a hole and say to the course, 'You whipped me, let me out of here.'"

For a few years, Trevino stayed away from this tournament, figuring he could get along quite nicely without it. For its part, the Masters survived his absence as well. Trevino still declines to use the locker room in the clubhouse. He changes shoes in his car. "I still don't like it all that much," he said of Augusta.

It was a talk with his friend Jack Nicklaus that swayed him into coming back here and Claudia Trevino convinced her husband that he even could conquer the course. That's what he did in Thursday's opening round, shooting a 4-under-par 68 — his best ever at Augusta and one stroke behind leader Ben Crenshaw. "Jack told me it doesn't make any difference whether you play good or bad at the Masters, your presence should be there," Trevino said. "He didn't say it, but the gist was I owe it to golf to play here. Augusta doesn't need me. I need Augusta."

Then, two weeks ago, Trevino shot 14 under par for the last three rounds of the Tournament Players Championship and finished second. "I got the biggest check I ever got, $86,400," he said. "That's a lot of peso beans."

He also got a transfusion of confidence from his wife, who told him if he could do that at the TPC, he could play winning golf anywhere, including Augusta. "My second wife," Trevino explained. "Same first name as my ex. We didn't have to buy new towels or sheets. We're even using the same check book."

Trevino prepared for the Masters in typical carefree Trevino fashion. "I went to a friend's farm and watched them milk 200 cows yesterday. We also chased a peacock and tried to get him to open his tail."

And practice, Lee? What about practice? "I played nine holes," he said. "They said to be off the course at 2 and it was 1:15."

Rules and regulations. There are plenty of them here and some of them don't thrill Trevino. "It's opened up a little more but people still walk around here afraid to say hello. It's a golf tournament. You're supposed to have a good time."

Among his gripes is the prize money. "I don't think we play for enough," he said. "I haven't seen their books but they must make plenty."

It was suggested that Augusta officials use the tournament's ample income to keep the course in top shape. "I'll show you courses that are kept just as nice as this one for $400,000," he said. "You think they make more than that here? They make $400,000 on the beer here."

So Trevino came in cold on Thursday with a minimum of practice time behind him as he stepped up to the first tee. He shot three straight birdies. "Man, I was hot. I wanted to play through. Let me through the next group."

Masters decorum doesn't allow that sort of thing so Trevino simply continued through the round, adding four more birds to balance three bogeys. It was an all together positive experience at a place where he has not always flourished.

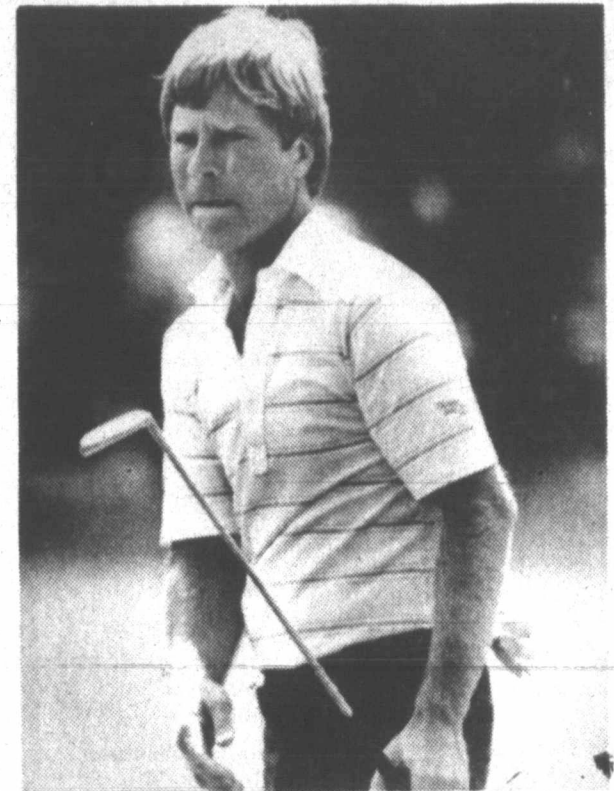

Crenshaw leads Masters tourney

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Ben Crenshaw played better than anyone else in the first round of the Masters — yet the easy-going Texan felt his score was not as good as it should have been. "I could have easily shot two to three shots better," he said after a 5-under-par 67 Thursday gave him a one-shot lead over Lee Trevino in the 48th edition of this storied golf tournament. "I missed some makeable putts," he said. "The putts were good angles to make putts, too, and that's what leaves me a little perplexed."

It's also a little unusual for Crenshaw, generally considered to be one of the better putters on tour. "My putter hasn't been that sharp this year," he said. His previous best opening round in the Masters was a 70 in 1976 when he went on to the first of his two second-place finishes. He also was second last year. Trevino's 68 was his best score ever on the

6,905-yard, par 72 Augusta National Golf Club course, a layout he has insisted really doesn't suit his game. It left him in a jovial mood. "I'm putting extremely well," he said. "Today I made 'em all, and if it keeps going, I wear a 42 short, but I'll take a 46 long."

Hal Sutton, last year's Player of the Year and the reigning PGA champion, and Larry Nelson, the 1983 U.S. Open champion, also had their problems. Sutton had a 74 and Nelson a 76. Billy Casper, the 52-year-old veteran playing in his 28th consecutive Masters, appeared to be in the hunt for the lead. He was at 4-under through 14 holes before taking a bogey on 15 and a round-destroying quadruple-bogey seven on the 18th where he played games between a bunker on one side of the green and water on the other. Another veteran, four-time winner Arnold Palmer, had a 77.

Late inning surge lifts Padres past Braves

SAN DIEGO (AP) — After 38 seasons in baseball, Dick Williams has learned that there are times when it pays to keep his mouth shut. One of those occasions arose Thursday night when the San Diego manager sent righthander Ed Whitson to the mound to face the Atlanta Braves. Whitson allowed only five hits in seven innings as the Padres dumped the Braves 6-1 in the only National League game of the night. "This is the first time he's ever beaten the Braves (in five decisions), but I didn't want to tell him that,"

Williams said. "Last year, they hit .350 something against him and I didn't want to tell him that, either."

Whitson, 1-0, and Atlanta starter Pete Falcone, 0-2, hooked up in a pitcher's duel for seven innings before the Padres broke loose. Two Atlanta errors gave the Padres a run in the first, but Atlanta tied it in the fifth on Gerald Perry's double and a single by Bruce Benedict. Whitson was heading for the showers when outfielder Kevin McReynolds blasted Falcone's first pitch in the seventh for a home run and a 2-1 lead. Luis Salazar then single, moved to second on a sacrifice and scored on Garry Templeton's single for a 3-1 San Diego edge. San Diego clinched its seventh victory in eight games with a three-run eighth highlighted by Terry Kennedy's two-run double. "When McReynolds hit one out, I said, 'Oh, thank you. This is a big moment for me,'" said Whitson, who said he'd never started a season with a victory. "It gives me a lot of confidence," he said. "The first one is always a big one."

"I thought he was excellent," said Williams.

"He changed speeds well. He'll win if he does that."

The victory gave San Diego a surprising three-game lead over runner-up Cincinnati in the NL West.

"Well, you've got to make hay in your own park," said Williams, whose club has yet to hit the road. "If you don't, you're a pretender and not a contender, and we're a contender."

Atlanta Manager Joe Torre thinks his Braves, runner-up to Los Angeles in the division race last season, will be contenders as soon as the offense comes to life.

Oilers switch Matthews to center position

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers offensive lineman Bruce Matthews, the team's No. 1 draft pick last season, came to camp as a tackle, played the season as a guard and now is being considered as a starting center.

New Oilers Coach Hugh Campbell, recognizing Matthews' versatility, worked Matthews at center in the first of two mini-camps he plans prior to preseason training. Campbell liked the experiment as far as it went, but the final decision won't come until the team reports to Angelo State University for preseason drills in July. "You can't find the answer in a mini-camp," Campbell said after watching his new team for three days. "But you can see if somebody is capable of handling the ball to the quarterback or not. And what I've seen so far, Bruce is capable of it."

Oiler offensive line coach Bill Walsh made certain Matthews understood his latest assignment before returning home to Los Angeles. Walsh handed Matthews a football. "It's the first time I've ever got a ball without paying," Matthews said. "I enjoy playing guard, but I can get excited about playing center too. I just want to play."

Matthews would be replacing incumbent David Carter, who has been the starting center since the third game of the 1981 season when he replaced Carl Mauck. He hasn't missed a game since and isn't automatically being sidelined now. "I'm happier with David Carter than before I saw him in this mini-camp," Campbell said. "He's a little bit of a leader. He has some spirit. I like that. It's going to be hard for David Carter to get beat out — but then again anything is possible."

Walsh says Matthews' only major adjustment will be the center snap. "There's a lot a center has to do but he can't forget to deliver the ball to the quarterback," Walsh said. "Center has become a vital position. It's covered 90 per cent of the time with the 3-4 defense."

Cross... Going to Southwestern.

Cross signs grid letter with Southwestern

Pampa's Devin Cross, District 1-4A's leading punter the past two seasons, has signed a football letter of intent to attend Southwestern University in Weatherford, Okla. "Devin has great possibilities," said Pampa Head Coach John Kendall, who coached Cross the past two years. "He's one of the better punters and kickers I've ever coached. I feel he definitely won't have any problems making it."

Cross had other offers, Kendall said, but Southwestern was his top choice because punter Otis Birdsong of the St. Louis Cardinals in the National Football League went to school there. "Birdsong was the top college punter in the nation and made all-pro last season, so I think that's one thing that convinced Devin to go there," Kendall added. Kendall said Southwestern is a member of the Oklahoma Collegiate Conference and perennially fields strong football teams. Cross averaged 40.6 yards per punt in 1982 and 39.1 last season. He also possesses a strong arm and played quarterback when called upon. "Devin has been an important part of our kicking game the past two years," Kendall said. "He's won some games for us and kept us in some games the past two years. He always seems to place the ball well on punts and gives the punt coverage team plenty of time to cover the ball."

Cross' punt average slipped some last season, but the 185-pounder was forced to kick into the wind more often than in '82. He was still productive in other areas, kicking three field goals and eleven extra points. Kendall fondly recalls the outstanding game Cross had against Levelland in the district opener last season. Cross' field goal with 39 seconds to go gave Pampa a 3-0 homecoming win over Levelland last season. His 74-yard punt down to the Levelland one helped set up the field goal on Pampa's next possession. "It was a great game for Devin," Kendall added. Cross is also an outstanding baseball player and has been instrumental in the Harvesters' fast start this spring. He carries a .455 batting average with two homers and a team-leading eight runs batted in. Cross also has a 2-1 won-lost record, six saves and a 2.09 earned run average as a pitcher. He's struck out 35 and walked just 13 batters. Cross threw a three-hitter and hit a home run in Pampa's 6-2 win over Levelland last Tuesday. "Devin is a good athlete," Pampa Coach Billy Butler said. "He would be good at just about anything he tries."

Tigers beat Texas, streak continues

DETROIT (AP) — Promises, promises, promises.

The Tigers promise they will lose a game and Detroit shortstop Alan Trammell promises he won't hit 400.

They're probably correct on all counts.

After the Tigers' 9-4 victory over the Texas Rangers on Thursday, however, the streak was at a club-record seven and counting and Trammell was hitting a lousy .423 with two home runs, three RBI and five stolen bases.

"It's too early," Trammell said with surprise after being told what his batting average was. "I'm not a cold weather player."

Trammell, who bats second in the Tigers' order behind

Lou Whitaker, said he thinks he's getting better pitches to hit this season because of the solid lineup behind him.

"They can't afford to have Lou and I get on base because our big hitters are coming up," Trammell said. "Their eyes light up in that situation. I know I've never had any home runs this early in the season."

Trammell, Chet Lemon and Whitaker hit home runs and Jack Morris chalked up his third straight triumph.

The best previous start in the Tigers' 84-year history was 6-0 in 1911.

"The record speaks for itself, we're hot," Morris said. "We want eight now. We're playing again Friday. We want to win that one, too."

Morris, in his first start since his no-hitter last Saturday in Chicago, yielded a single to leadoff hitter Mickey Rivers on a 2-2 pitch, one minute into the game.

"I got kind of lucky," Rivers said. "(But), I was pretty sure he wasn't going to pitch another no-hitter."

Morris allowed seven hits, struck out two and walked one in seven innings. He got relief help from Aurelio Lopez and Willie Hernandez.

"I didn't have the greatest stuff today," Morris said, laughing. "But, I'm a crafty son of a gun with six runs out there. A good pitcher is supposed to win on the day when he doesn't have his best stuff."

Trammell walked in the first inning, went to third on a single by Barbaro Garbey and scored on a two-out single by Larry Herndon. Frank Tanana, 0-1, then walked Chet Lemon to load the bases and Rod Allen singled Garbey home.

In the fourth inning, Trammell singled, Garbey walked and Lance Parrish singled to make it 3-0. Trammell hit his second homer of the year, a solo shot, in the sixth. Then Garbey singled, Herndon was safe on an error by shortstop Curtis Wilkerson and Lemon belted his second homer to give Detroit a 7-1 lead.

"Every time we get an inning going, we just can't seem to bunch 'em up," Texas Manager Doug Rader moaned. "When you're playing a good ball club, they don't fall. That's part of life."

Swim classes to be offered at Youth Center

Registration for swim classes at the Pampa Youth Center will be held April 20-21, beginning at 9 a.m.

Classes will begin in early May and will run throughout the summer. Classes are $20 apiece for adults and children.

All classes will be two days a week for a three-week period. All lessons will be one hour long except for Introduction to Water and Pre-Beginner classes, which will last for one-half hour.

The Youth Center is making plans for an aquatic program for individuals with arthritis. The program will consist of 20 minutes of exercises in the pool (waist-deep water) and 10 minutes in the whirlpool.

Linda Longo, a certified lifeguard who also gives private swim lessons, will be the instructor.

For more information, call the Youth Center at 665-0748.

Listed below are the various swim classes to be offered:

Introduction to Water— For children 6 months of age and up. Introduces the child to water in the parent's presence. A parent is required to be in the pool during the lesson.

Pre-Beginner— This class is set up for children who are ready for beginners, but they can not touch the bottom of the pool. Mother or father is required to be present.

Beginner— Teaches children the 4 basic strokes and introduces the children to the diving board.

Intermediate— Practice and review of the 4 basic strokes with some additional emphasis of low and high diving board utilization.

Advanced— This class is for perfecting swimming strokes. Diving with style is emphasized and swimming for distance is concentration on.

Adult-Beginner— Same as the Beginner class mentioned above as it teaches the 4 basic strokes. For adults only.

Adult-Advance Beginner— Reviewing and practicing the 4 basic strokes with an emphasis on perfecting style and working on distance (laps of pool).

Aquatic Aerobic Class— Aerobic exercises in the water with frequent checks of pulse and cooling down periods.

Expanded playoffs begin Sunday for NBA

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The National Basketball Association's 38th regular season ends Sunday, a prelude to a championship playoff with the biggest field ever but dominated by perennial powers.

Boston, Los Angeles and Philadelphia, titlists the past three seasons, take the top records into the playoffs, although the defending-champion 76ers fell nearly 20 wins short of their spectacular 68-victory regular season in 1982-83.

The NBA Board of Governors decided last summer to expand the playoffs from 12 teams to 16. So the four division champions will have to play a first-round best-of-5 series, which open Tuesday, rather than receive a bye.

As the weekend of the season approached, Boston and Los Angeles had clinched the Atlantic and Pacific division titles, while Utah and Dallas battled for Midwest crown and Detroit and Milwaukee for the Central championship.

The eight Eastern Conference playoff qualifiers — Boston, Philadelphia, Milwaukee, Detroit, New York, New Jersey, Atlanta and Washington — were decided, while Golden State, Kansas City and San Antonio fought for the last Western Conference spot.

Los Angeles, Portland, Seattle, Utah, Dallas, Denver and Phoenix had clinched berths in the West.

Utah, with a 30-52 record the previous season, and Dallas, an expansion team in only its fourth year, were the surprise teams in the NBA. Both were led by high-scoring forwards, Adrian Dantley of the Jazz and Mark Aguirre of the Mavericks.

Like their two teams, who exchanged the lead in the division, the pair fought all season for the NBA's scoring championship. Both hovered near the 30 points-per-game level, with Dantley, who played only 22 games the previous season because of a fractured wrist, holding a slight edge.

The Celtics, who finished far behind Philadelphia in the division race the previous season, reached the 60-victory plateau behind the new coach, K.C. Jones, a guard on many of Boston's championship teams.

Jones, one of nine head coaches in their first season with a new team, slackened the reins held tight by the previous coach, Bill Fitch. The Celtics also benefitted from the acquisition of defense-minded guard Dennis Johnson and the continued frontcourt brilliance of Larry Bird, Robert Parish and Kevin McHale.

The 76ers didn't win 50 games until they already had lost 28, a far cry from the previous season when they started 50-7. Nagging injuries and decreased production from three-time Most Valuable Player Moses Malone, who leads the league in rebounding but has averaged two points and two rebounds less per game than a year ago, were blamed for the subpar record, still third-best in the NBA.

Los Angeles coasted to the best record in the Western Conference. The Lakers, league champions in 1980 and 1982, had a season that was spiced by center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's chase for the all-time NBA scoring record.

He finally passed Wilt Chamberlain's mark of 31,419 points on April 5 against Utah. Ironically, the game was played in Las Vegas, Nev., where Abdul-Jabbar had never before played a professional game.

The Lakers also got superb play from 6-foot-9 guard Earvin "Magic" Johnson, who challenged Kevin Porter's record average of 13.4 assists per game. In every game until Feb. 29, Johnson had at least 10 assists.

Elsewhere, Ralph Sampson was the most heralded rookie in the league since Bill Walton and he justified most of the plaudits, averaging more than 20 points and 11 rebounds per game. His team, the Houston Rockets, more than doubled its previous-season victory total of 14, but they still were one of the worst teams in the league.

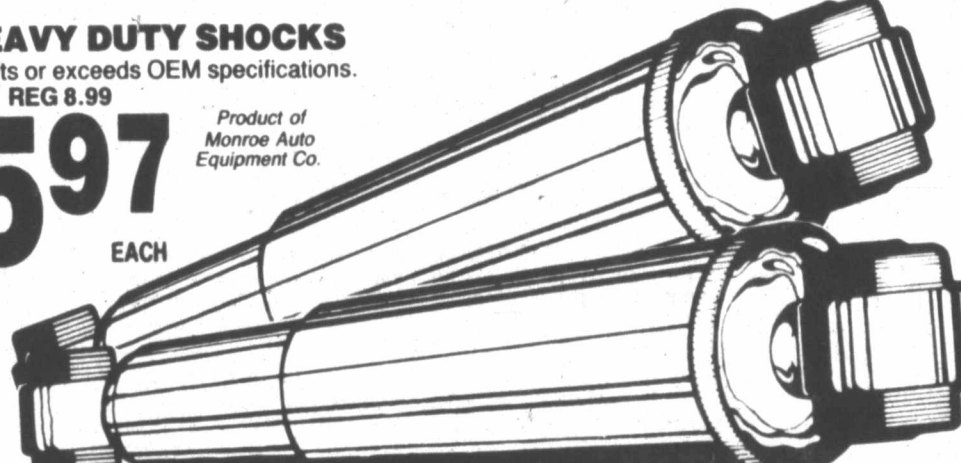

Off the court, David Stern took over as NBA commissioner in place of the retiring Lawrence O'Brien.

A league lockout of officials lasted for the first quarter of the season. A contract agreement ended the labor dispute, with the most experienced referees getting a salary increase from $65,000 to $90,000 by the end of the three-year term.

Things that you are anxious to accumulate for yourself will be easier to come by this year. However, you must be careful that you are neither too wasteful nor too complacent.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If an agreement you recently negotiated isn't working out as well as you hoped it would, this is a good time to try to make some adjustments. Want to find out to whom you're best suited romantically? Send for your Matchmaker set by mailing $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. It reveals compatibilities for all signs.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't let conditions overwhelm you today. By the same token, don't treat serious matters frivolously, especially if others are depending on you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Sincerity will earn you the respect of your peers today. Flattery won't. It's best to say nothing rather than to lavishly praise the undeserving.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You'll have no trouble getting advice today, but what others have to offer might not solve your particular problem. Sit through their suggestions.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You'd better take your tasks as seriously as your boss does today, or else he or she might have a few choice words about your value to the company.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Do not treat your budget today as a scrap of paper that can be ignored. Resources that you waste now may be needed later.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) In competitive involvements today, don't count too heavily on what you think is your ace in the hole. It may be easily trumped.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) In a commercial situation today you may go in at a disadvantage. However, don't toss in the towel. Just when you think all is lost, you could win.

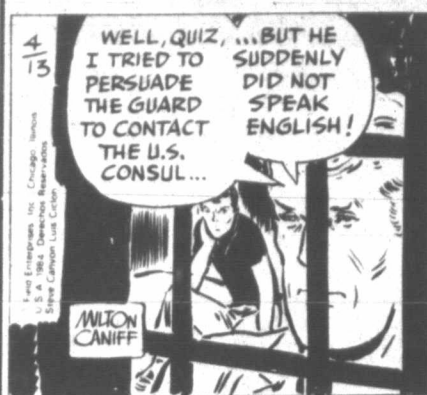

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Today, don't impulsively jump into a situation that could cost you money, even though it may come highly recommended by a friend. Instead, sleep on it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Underplay your accomplishments rather than exaggerate them if you are engaged in conversations today with persons you know are telling tall tales.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be sure to double check any mental work that you do today, because there is a possibility of oversights. Mistakes can be rectified now, but not later.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Beware of temptations today to pin your hopes on rose-colored projections. Be realistic in your expectations and you won't be disappointed.

TRYING TO GO TO CHINA—Three-year-old Kerry McKinney and her doll pause to look at a painting of a dragon and a panda on the side of a building in downtown Mount Pleasant. Couple finds answer to high electricity bills is windmill SANGER, Texas (AP) — The answer to high utility bills is blowing in the wind for Bruce and Lois McDougal of Sanger.

They installed a 100-foot windmill tower in their back yard this winter and have been producing electricity ever since.

"Soon as the wind hits eight miles per hour it starts making electricity," said McDougal, whose interest in wind power began 10 years ago.

At the top of the tower is a 10-foot long tailpiece and three, 11½-foot blades that create a 24-foot arc.

It is designed much like the "old-fashioned windmills of long ago," he said, and can withstand winds up to 125 mph. However, when winds reach 40 mph the tail piece moves it out of direct winds so it doesn't blow apart.

It is a 10-kilowatt windmill, but the wind must be blowing at 22 mph for it to produce that amount of kilowatts an hour, he said.

Though the tower, Denton County's first electric-producing windmill, cost him more than $19,000, McDougal said it should pay for itself within five years.

"If you have a $200-or-more bill a month then you are definitely in the market for a windmill," he said. "That's when it will pay off. These things have a 30-year guarantee to them."

Not only do the McDougals conserve energy by using the wind, they also have a solar-powered heating system that provides 75 percent of their hot water and 50 percent of their heat, he said.

McDougal designed the solar system and a friend improved it before the installation.

"I'm really concerned about waste," he said. "The American people are the champions of waste. This is a real throwaway society."

McDougal said the price of electricity probably will double during the next few years, increasing the value of his windmill.

"The wind and sun are about as free as you can get after you invest to get it set up," he said. "I'd rather utilize them than use up all of our natural gas. It's going to be great 10 years from now because they (manufacturers) will be able to make 15- and 20-kilowatt hour (windmills)."

They live in a 4,000-square-foot house. During the 1983 December cold spell when similar houses were using more energy, the McDougals had a relatively inexpensive utility bill.

The McDougals believe in wind power so strongly that they have become windmill distributors.

"A lot of people could benefit from windmills," he said. "I already have 10 people who want to buy them, but the company has had so many orders lately that they're behind in making them."

McDougal said wind power is an economically sound idea that will take hold as utility rates increase.

Mount Pleasant high school choir seeks funds for trip

By BOB RUNYON
Mount Pleasant Daily Tribune

MOUNT PLEASANT, Texas (AP) — Until recently, the ride down Mount Pleasant's main drag hasn't been anything out of the ordinary. There's always been hamburger joints, car washes, real estate offices and the square. On the square, the Titus County courthouse is surrounded by a variety of businesses. The town's main banks are in the immediate vicinity.

It wasn't any different than in a hundred other small Texas towns.

Until now. Traffic going through downtown has slowed somewhat in recent weeks, people driving past usually take a few extra seconds to take in the Panda and Dragon on the corner of 2nd and Madison.

The Panda and Dragon aren't real, just images painted in a mural on the side of a business announcing that the Mount Pleasant High School Choir is going to The People's Republic of China. Or at least, they are trying to get there.

Back in November, Choir Director Mike Templeton appeared before the school board to ask if his group could make its annual trip to a more exotic land than might be usual. Last year it was St. Louis, the year before Tennessee. Now, they wanted to visit the Middle Kingdom.

"It (the invitation) was a very shocking thing," Templeton said. "But I feel like we deserved it. We've earned it."

Templeton's group is probably more well known outside of the Mount Pleasant area, where they've performed to rave reviews by top music educators around the state. At the Texas Music Educators Convention in Fort Worth recently, the MPHS Choir was among the elite of the state chosen to perform.

Templeton believes in his choir and points to other values the singers bring to the community other than those of entertainment.

"Our recording from the TMEC shows the educational value of what we do," he said. "We sing in German, Latin and Italian. Many people in the state feel we are leaders in performing music from the 16th century. I believe the invitation (to China) came because of our educational abilities."

Things began in October, 1983 when Templeton received a letter from Dr. Joseph H. Bellamah, president of International Music Tours. The letter said the selection of the group was predicated on a strong recommendation by Dr. Gary Ebensberger, director of Choral Activities at the University of Texas at Arlington.

Templeton took time to consider the invitation, then began discussing the matter with the directors of the Choir Boosters, a parents organization. Finally the matter was brought to the school board.

"By the time we got to the school board, people were talking about it all over town. I didn't have any negative feelings about what the board would decide, but I wasn't totally confident."

The board, after some discussion, did agree that the choir could go to China, but said no funds would be forthcoming from the Mount Pleasant Independent School District for the adventure.

Though some weren't thrilled with the school board's attitude, townspeople set about the awesome task of trying to find $114,000 that would be needed. They turned for help to Nancy Chambers, who immediately got the ball rolling.

"It sounded like a lot of money," she said. "But I felt like we could raise a big part of it. Then we could find someone to help make up the difference."

Chambers corresponded with the Westlake Symphonic band of Austin, also making a China trip in June. The Austin group had been faced with raising $190,000 for its trip, but had the added advantage of more time ... 12 months more time.

Still, with only a few projects such as car washes, valentine promotions and other events, the MPHS Choir's China Fund has grown to almost $70,000 in just four months.

"That was beyond my expectations," Chambers said. "When we started, I truly felt that the people of Mount Pleasant would produce. This trip is a once in a lifetime opportunity for those kids that we just couldn't afford to pass up."

The community began donating money just after the school board approved the trip. Titus County Sheriff John Moss and his office put on a fundraiser that collected several thousand dollars. Area banks got on the bandwagon and chipped in cash.

A new anthem for Australia

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — Australia has abolished "God Save The Queen" as the national anthem and replaced it with an unsexist version of "Advance Australia Fair."

The news of the change was announced Wednesday by an exuberant Prime Minister Bob Hawke, who heard the song sung at a ceremony in Sydney.

Hawke said he got so carried away with the "beautiful rendition" that he revealed to the audience that the Cabinet decided this week to make "Advance Australia Fair" the anthem.

In the future, "God Save The Queen" will be played only as a royal anthem when the queen is present, he said.

"Advance Australia Fair" will be slightly changed to eliminate sexist language.

Harbor mining reported halted

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — A top Nicaraguan military official says mining of the nation's harbors by U.S.-backed rebels appears to have ended, since no port traffic has been disrupted for two weeks.

In Panama, a spokesman for a Nicaraguan rebel group claimed his forces overran a major town in southern Nicaragua on Thursday, killing 150 of the leftist government's troops, as well as a Cuban commander who was carrying a Panamanian passport.

That clash was the latest in a series of guerrilla attacks that Nicaraguan Interior Minister Tomas Borge called "the biggest offensive since the triumph of the revolution" in 1979. At a news conference Thursday, Borge said the Sandinista government was engaged in a "war against imperialism."

Borge also said 219 government soldiers had been killed and 204 wounded by rebels in the past month.

Earlier Thursday, Nicaraguan Army Chief of Staff Joaquin Cuadr Llanoy gave a rundown of mine explosions reported in Nicaraguan waters in the past month and said it appeared the U.S.-directed mining operation had been halted.

Cuadra said that of 18 mines that had unloaded at Atlantic and Pacific ports, seven damaged commercial ships and wounded a total of 10 sailors. The other 11 mines were activated by the Nicaraguan navy to clear the harbors.

"The possibility that mines remain is very remote, because they would have exploded already with the passing of ships," Cuadra said. Adding "no new mines have exploded."

"But we can't rule out future mining, considering the prepotency of Mr. Reagan," he said.

The last vessel to be damaged by a mine was the Japanese freighter Taushiro Mahuru, which hit a mine March 30 at El Bluff, an Atlantic port. The other harbors where mines exploded were Puerto Sandino and Corinto on the Pacific coast.

CIA officials in Washington said the mining operation was completed early this month, adding they doubted new mines would be placed because of the international furor that followed disclosure of the American involvement.

Late Thursday, the U.S. House joined the Senate in approving a non-binding resolution condemning the American role in the mining.

The House vote was 281-111.

Paul, Hance receive conservatives endorsements

AUSTIN (AP) — The Young Conservatives of Texas, saying the recent economic recovery proves that conservative political philosophies work, have endorsed Republican Ron Paul and Democrat Kent Hance in the race for the U.S. Senate.

Paul, a U.S. House member, told the group that decisions made by the House and Senate over that six-year term will determine the nation's direction more than at almost any time in the country's history.

"The American people will have to make some hard decisions in the next few years. During the next six years, we will see decisions made that will have a fundamental impact on the course this nation takes," Paul said.

Paul received the Young Conservatives' endorsement over three other GOP candidates, front-running U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm, Rob Mosbacher and Henry C. Grover.

In the six-man Democratic Senate race, the group backed U.S. Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock over Bob Krueger, state Sen. Lloyd Doggett, David Young, Bob Sullivan and Harley Schlanger.

At stake is the Senate seat being vacated by incumbent Republican John Tower.

Bill McGlashen, 24, of Houston, vice president of the group, said conservatives will use this election year to tell the public why they are better off under a conservative administration.

"The traditional conservative philosophy of limited government and a free and open market, having finally been given a chance to prove itself, has been a success," McGlashen said. "The corner has been turned on the liberal welfare state."

Saying he expects to emerge from the May 5 primary in a runoff election with Gramm, Paul said the front-runner's greatest liability is that "he is part of the system."

Although Paul, of Lake Jackson, has served in the House with Gramm, he said he has remained independent.

Gramm, who entered the House in 1981 as a Democrat, was later disciplined by the Democratic majority and stripped of his seat on the powerful House appropriations committee because of his support of many of President Reagan's economic proposals.

Gramm resigned his seat in early 1983 and won the seat as a Republican in a special election.

Besides the Senate endorsements, the Young Conservatives backed several congressional candidates: Democrats Mitchell Hickman in the 2nd District, Charles Stenholm in the 17th District and Abraham Kazen in the 23rd District, and Republicans Joe Barton in the 6th District, Jim Mahan in the 9th District, Mac Sweeney in the 14th District, Ron Fleming in the 19th District and Robert Burk in the 24th District.

The group also endorsed Texas Supreme Court candidates Sears McGee and Shelby Sharpe, both Democrats, and a number of candidates for the Legislature.

In other political news: — U.S. Senate candidate Bob Krueger said his two main opponents, Kent Hance and Lloyd Doggett, are being disloyal to the Democratic Party.

Krueger criticized Hance for describing his views as close to those of incumbent Sen. John Tower, a Republican who's not seeking re-election.

He criticized Doggett for statements that were "incorrect and disrespectful of Democratic Sen. Lloyd Bentsen" because Doggett said Texas haven't had a full-time senator in Washington since Ralph Yarborough was defeated by Bentsen in 1970.

— Texas Supreme Court candidate Shelby Sharpe said he returned a $50 contribution from a Tyler lawyer who represents South Texas rancher Clinton Manges in a case before the high court. Sharpe is challenging incumbent C.L. Ray in the Democratic primary.

Hart vows to make U.S. more secure in energy

HOUSTON (AP) — Gary Hart kicked off his campaign in Texas by telling supporters the United States must return to an issue which dominated the 1970s by devising a policy to meet its energy needs.

Hart appeared Thursday at a fund-raiser and a dinner honoring a Harris County Democratic party official. He said Texas could "be a turnaround state in the nomination process."

Hart said the nation is risking catastrophe by ignoring its energy problems.

He charged Walter Mondale, his chief opponent for the Democratic presidential nomination, and the Reagan administration have failed to deal with the issue.

"Given the energy resources God has given this great nation... it would be a tragedy to lose the life of one young American fighting for someone else's oil," Hart told a group of about 600 supporters at a fund-raiser.

Hart attended a tribute to John Odum, chairman of the Democratic Party in Harris County, later Thursday evening. He told reporters beforehand, "I have yet to say unalterably that we're going to win here, although I have some instincts which I'll keep to myself."

Shortly after a brief speech to the group, Hart was to fly to Phoenix Thursday night.

The visit marked the kick-off of Hart's campaign in Texas. The state primary is May 5.

Hart charged that Mondale, has failed to offer his party original concepts during the campaign.

"My principal opponent seem to have only one idea — to attack all of my ideas," Hart said.

Hart's chief fund-raiser in Texas, James Calaway, said the fund-raiser Thursday evening had raised at least $125,000 for the campaign.

Calaway formerly worked in the same capacity for the John Glenn campaign in Texas.

Calaway said he began working for Hart "because Glenn lost. I think Gary Hart has the best chance of beating Ronald Reagan of the candidates that are left."

Hart said in his speech one strength of his campaign has been the ability to pick up the support of candidates dropping out of the race.

Hart said the nation is in a state of flux.

"In periods of change and transition, the people of America have always turned to the Democratic Party," he said. He cited the elections of Franklin Roosevelt during the Depression and John Kennedy during the Cold War.

Earlier in the day, Hart told a crowd gathered at a farm outside Kansas City he would "be tougher than anybody we have had, than maybe Harry Truman" in dealing with the Japanese regarding their restrictive trade policies.
