'Massacre' in Brooklyn

Three women, seven children are shot to death

NEW YORK (AP) - A baker who followed a screaming neighbor to his apartment found a "massacre" of three women and seven children — all shot in the head and showing no signs of panic - while an unhurt toddler sat crying among the bodies, police said

It was believed to be the largest mass slaying in the city's history, authorities

"Six of the victims, at least, were sitting in chairs," Deputy Police Commissioner Patrick Murphy said Sunday night. "There appear to be no signs of panic. There appears to be no disruption.'

Murphy and other police officials said they had not established a motive for the slayings and knew of no suspects. No drugs or signs of forced entry were found, and the 10 victims remained unidentified early today. 'We don't think they were all early teens. The man who discovered the bodies described as the common-law husband of one of the victims, voluntarily came to police headquarters for questioning early today but was not considered a suspect, LeSchack said. The man was

Police today were combing rooftops and searching the neighborhood for other clues, LeSchack added.

Mayor Edward Koch, who arrived for a brief tour of the house with city Medical Examiner Elliot Gross, appeared grim and shaken when he emerged. ''Obviously, it's a massacre," he said

Gross declined to discuss his preliminary observations, except to say that all 10 people had died of gunshot wounds to the head. He said autopsies were to be conducted today.

Inspector Robert Burke said police were first notified of the deaths Sunday night by Carmine Rossi, owner of the Rossi Bread Bakery next door to the victims' apartment house. Rossi said he was in his bakery when a man went into the two-story brick building and emerged screaming Rossi said the man, who said he lived in the house, asked if he was a police officer. He accompanied the man to the house, where "there were bodies all over the place," he said.

"I came to a small bed. A young girl was dead in the bed," Rossi recalled later. "Then I went to the living room. There were about seven people in the living room on couches. All dead, shot in the head. Then in the kitchen, a couple more people, the same way.

Burke said the victims' bodies were in three different rooms of the first-floor flat, which sits in the middle of a mostly commercial block in a quiet, working-class Brooklyn neighborhood. The second-floor bodies were found, he said.

The victims probably had been dead for about six hours when they were found, Burke said. Rossi said the man who led him to the bodies told him he had left the house at 1:30 p.m. and had not been back until he found the bodies.

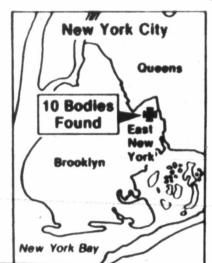

Rossi said he found the only survivor, a 2-year-old girl, inside the house and brought her back to the bakery. She was later taken to Baptist Medical Center for examination and then to police headquarters not far from the slaving scene.

Burke, a 28-year police veteran, said the crime was the city's largest mass slaying that he could recall, and other police officials agreed. Six people were shot to death in a Harlem apartment in 1979 in what police said was a drug-related mass murder

Police sealed off the block where the crime occurred, and dozens of onlookers gathered outside to gaze for hours at the cluster of activity around the house. As midnight approached, the crowd remained in a driving, cold rain to see the bodies removed.

Neighbors described the victims as 'quiet'' people who had moved into the house just two months earlier. They said they knew little else of them, not even their names

One woman, Eduarda Sanchez, said she had lived in the flat until two months ago, when she moved out and the newcomers moved in. But she said she knew nothing about them.

"I thought this was a nice neighborhood, once upon a time," said Delia Veronica, a neighbor. "It's very shocking. I can't imagine who would do something as horrible as this. Why

Alfredo Gomez, who lives across the street, said he believed that one of the two families in the two-story house was from Colombia and the other from Puerto Rico, but he was unsure which lived on which floor. Other neighbors said the victims were Hispanic.

Hart, Jackson nab weekend victories

Associated Press Writer

Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson are looking to Missouri's caucuses this week after winning weekend contests in Arizona and South Carolina, while Walter Mondale takes a rest from the Democratic presidential campaign still holding a comfortable delegate lead.

Hart was heading to St. Louis and Jefferson City, Mo., today from California, where he spent the weekend raising money and savoring a win over

Mondale in Arizona's caucuses. "It's been a rough couple of weeks but I think things look better now particularly here in the West." he said in Beverly Hills, Calif. "We won that state pretty decisively

Jackson planned a trip to Missouri. too, after a rally Sunday afternoon in Washington, D.C., that drew 10,000 people. Missouri Democrats caucus Wednesday to choose 75 national convention delegates in the only such contest scheduled this week

Jackson gained a victory Saturday in his native South Carolina, winning 34.4 percent of the vote at the state's Democratic convention. That will yield him 17 of the state's national convention delegates, compared with 12 uncommitted and six each for Mondale and Hart. who already has one more South Carolina delegate - former presidential hopeful Sen. Ernest Hollings

The black civil rights leader told the Washington gathering that while he may not win the nomination, his campaign — and the huge black vote it is turning out - will have an effect in November's elections.

"We are not measured by whether we get there - just so we are going in the right direction," he said.

Jackson said he had already won 15 congressional districts in the primaries, indicating minority candidates can win House seats there

"We may or may not change the face of the White House," he said. "But we will change the face of the U.S. Congress. It will never be the same again.

Hart, who is trying to recover after successive losses to Mondale in Illinois. New York and Pennsylvania, won 17 delegates Saturday in Arizona, while Mondale won 15 and Jackson one. With 99 percent of the vote counted, Hart had 45 percent to Mondale's 40 percent and Jackson's 13 percent.

Despite the narrow edge in delegates won, Hart called Arizona a "clear and decisive victory.

*State abandons plan for W. Texas dump constructing barriers to prevent leakage has led state officials to abandon the idea of locating a low-level nuclear waste dump in far West Texas, the head of the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority

Rick Jacobi said his agency would formally announce today that it has 'given up' on the idea of putting the first state-run dump site on land owned by the University of Texas in Hudspeth Course, about 100 miles southeast of El Paso.

Jacobi said a South Texas site is still under consideration and agency officials planned to study other possible sites, including one on state-owned land Brewster County

Authority officials had pushed for the Hudspeth County site despite strong sition from local residents, who hired engineering consultants to help prove their claims that the dump would be dangerous.

Under a federal law passed in 1980. all states have until 1986 to form regional compacts to handle their wastes. Those which do not could be required to accept wastes from other

Jacobi said Saturday that the authority has determined it would be too expensive to build the man-made barriers needed to guarantee that radioactivity could not leak from the

"Without expensive engineered barriers," a dump located above the porous land of Hudspeth County wouldn't work, Jacobi said.

Two UT consultants reported last month that a Hudspeth County dump would endanger ground-water supplies for area farms and towns. One consultant said any radioactivity washed from the site would "head downhill" toward Dell City and Sierra Blanca, the Hudspeth County seat

The authority is considering only one other site, located near Asherton in South Texas. However, the site has been opposed vigorously by neighboring landowners, including former Gov. Dolph Briscoe and the Roman Catholic Church.

Jacobi said the agency, which has an option until Aug. 31 to buy the Asherton-area site, would look for willing sellers elsewhere in Texas because state law requires the agency to have at least two sites from which to choose a dump location According to Jacobi, a landowner with property in Garza and Borden counties has offered sites to the agency and Land Commissioner Garry Mauro has agreed to let agency officials investigate the prospects of building a site on state-owned land in Brewster

Panel initiates drive to acquire emergency generators for city

By LARRY HOLLIS Staff Writer

Members of the Fire Prevention and Safety Committee of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce have initiated steps towards acquiring generators for emergency use for Pampa radio stations and City Hall in case of power outage during severe weather periods.

Committee representatives will meet with the Chamber board of directors to discuss plans to raise funds for the purchase and installation of the three emergency power use generators. Total estimated cost for the project is about $36,000, according to Chamber Manager Floyd Sackett and committee member Donnie Clemmer

The project calls for the installation of generators at the two radio studios and the bottom floor of City Hall and the laying of connecting lines between the two studios and their radio towers.

The systems are designed to provide power to the radio stations and the City Hall in the event of a power failure during an emergency situation, such as a tornado strike

The police station and Emergency Operations Center (EOC), both located at City Hall, would need the power to disseminate information to the public and coordinate operations of emergency personnel. The radio stations would be able to continue broadcasting information to the public. The committee decided to undertake the project after a letter written by W J. Orr called attention to the lack of emergency power systems by local radio stations. Orr, who attended the committee meeting last week, noted the failure of power to the stations could severely weaken the possibility of giving warnings to the public during severe weather situations.

Committee members noted problems occurring during the power outages on April 7 and particularly the blizzard on Feb. 25, when radio stations were off the air because of the lack of emergency power back-up systems.

The need to provide such power to disseminate information to city and county residents should be a matter of public concern, members said

With the availability of such systems. the stations, in cooperation with the EOC, could let the public know if the power failure was due to severe weather problems, an approaching tornado or mechanical problems. If severe weather was present, the stations could continue to broadcast to people having transistor radios. Members suggested residents should consider having battery-powered transister radios in their homes, businesses, schools, churches and other places to be used in such instances.

The fund raising activity, if undertaken, will concentrate on industries, businesses, foundations and area residents since the project is one of importance to Pampa, outlying commerical areas and residents of the surrounding area.

In related matters, Shirley Muns, assistant coordinator of the Office of Emergency Management (Civil Defense), said people need to be more aware of problems with telephone lines during emergency situations. In severe weather or power outage situations, people should use phones only when necessary, she said. The phone system could shut down from overload if 25 to 30 percent of the phones were in use during an emergency, she said. This nearly happened during the February blizzard, when hundreds of people were calling the police station and other places to get information.

The use of the emergency generators to power the radio stations during a power outage would alleviate the situation, since people could get information from radio broadcasts, she

In other matters, committee members discussed the possibility of compiling a list of safety programs that could be presented to industries, businesses, civic groups and other organizations J. D. Ray, co-chairman, suggested the Chamber could serve as a central bureau to contact firms and groups which have safety programs, speakers, films and materials which could be used by others. Members also discussed plans for working with the city in its upcom Clean Up - Paint Up - Fix Up campaign providing Summer Safety Tips for local news media and obtaining personnel from the Farm Bureau to visit area schools and civic groups for nonstrations during Fire Prevention Week in October.

Court to rule on PAC spending

Court today agreed to decide whether political action committees may spend unlimited amounts of money to back a presidential candidate

But the court left unclear whether it will decide the issue in time for this year's campaign, in which conservative groups are planning to spend as much as $20 million to help President Reagan get re-elected

The justices said they will study the federal law limiting any political committee's spending to $1,000 for a presidential candidate whose campaign is publicly financed.

The court, however, did not answer a special request that it consider the case quickly, and decide it by July.

A three-judge federal court struck down the law as unconstitutional last Dec 13. ruling that it violates decide a separate issue connected with the federal Presidential Election Campaign Fund Act - whether all voters have a right to sue other private parties over alleged violations of the

The controversy acted on today began last May 16 when the Democratic Party, the Democratic National Committee and Edward Mezvinsky, chairman of the Pennsylvania Democratic State Committee, sued two conservative political action committees.

The suit accused the National Conservative Political Action Committee (NCPAC) and the Fund For A Conservative Majority with planning to violate the $1,000 spending limit.

In a later suit, the Federal Election Commission accused the political committees of the same thing.

Houston bribery convictions upheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today left intact the federal convictions of two Houston men convicted in connection with a 1979 bribe of a city councilman.

The court, without comment, rejected arguments aimed at overturning the convictions of John Garrett and L.G. Moore, along with the five-year probationary sentences and $10,000 fines they drew

A federal jury in Houston found that the two men offered a bribe to Houston city councilman Jim Westmoreland for his recommendation and vote in awarding a contract of group insurance for the city's public employees

Garrett was the president of Richmond Road Engineering in Houston, and a commissioner of the Port of Houston. Moore was a regional director of the International Union of Operating Engineers. The two men actually made the bribe company supposedly based in Beverly Hills, Calif. - they had been caught in a "sting" operation that grew from the federal government's Louisiana-based Brilab investigation into official

Their federal prosecution was based on a telephone call Moore placed to an undercover federal agent in Beverly Hills on Dec. 27, 1979. The two men were prosecuted under the Travel Act, which outlaws the use of "any facility in interstate or foreign commerce" to 'further any unlawful activity.'

Appeals for the Garrett and Moore contended that the one phone call was not enough of a basis for a prosecution under the federal law

Eds: These cases are Garrett vs. U.S., 83-1226; and Moore vs. U.S., part of the reforms enacted by Congress following Watergate-related revelations of widespread campaign fund-raising abuses Congress created the FEC in 1975 to oversee the election reforms it sought The general constitutionality of those reforms was upheld by the Supreme Court in 1976. But a three-judge federal court in Philadelphia ruled for the political committees on the specific spending-limit issue.

The campaign fund act essentially bars presidential candidates opting to accept public money, financed by the voluntary taxpayer check-off system, from accepting private contributions.

Individual citizens not tied to the candidate's official, or "authorized" campaign committee may spend as much as they want to support him, but the law imposes the $1,000 limit on political committees not tied to the

In 1980, conservative political action committees spent more than $10 million, mostly for advertising, in support of Reagan. Total political committee spending in support of then-President Jimmy Carter's re-election bid was less than $30,000. The $1,000 limit was not enforced during the 1980 election-

DAILY RECORD Two U.S. diplomats die in African bomb blast

WINDHOEK, South-West Africa (AP) - Two U.S. officials monitoring South Africa's troop withdrawal from Angola were killed when a bomb blast shattered a gasoline station that has been a past target of guerrillas fighting for independence.

The two, en route to a briefing on troop withdrawal arrangements, were killed Sunday 25 miles from the Angolan border when the bomb exploded at the station where they had stopped to service their car.

Two other people, both from the South African-ruled territory, also died, the South African government said.

South African Foreign Minister R.F. Botha identified the American victims as Dennis Keogh, director of the U.S. diplomatic office monitoring the troop withdrawal agreement, and military attache Lt. Col. Ken Crabtree.

No one claimed responsibility immediately for the blast.

The South African administrator-general of the territory, Wille van Niekerk, blamed the explosion on the South-West Africa People's Organization, which has 17 years in the territory it calls Namibia. The blast was in an area where SWAPO has been most active.

"At a time when virtually everyone in southern Africa is working toward peace, SWAPO still clings to a barbaric preference for senseless violence," van Niekerk said.

Botha sent a message to U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz expressing South Africa's "shock and deep regret" over the deaths of the two Americans

"It is bitterly ironic that these officers, who were so closely involved in the search for peace in southern Africa, should have become the victims of the very cycle of violence which we are trying to end," Botha said in a message to the families of the victims. "Let me assure you that our prayers will be with you and your families.

Reports from witnesses at the gas station said one American was killed instantly by the bomb and the second died while being treated for burns.

Officials said they had not determined what type of explosive was used or how it was set off.

Program administrator Larry Strange stresses that the rules require a participant to have a sound business plan before any money changes hands.

"This is not an agriculture welfare program. This is a business deal. Just because somebody has a dream to be involved in agriculture doesn't mean he'll qualify. I have no problems with dreams, but it has to be coupled with a good business plan," Strange said.

'This is not a program for speculators. If you're going to buy the land, you're going to work it. If you buy it, you'd better be out there on the Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower notes that the costs of entering agriculture today are extremely high and that the average age of Texas farmers is 52.

"With fewer young people able to take their place, the family farm system itself has become an endangered species," he says.

Under the program, the agriculture department will guarantee up to 90 percent of a loan for the purchase of land for a family farm or ranch. Loans won't be guaranteed to to make improvements on land already owned, to purchase equipment or livestock, or to provide operating refinance an existing real estate deal.

With about $40 million in guarantees available the first year, Strange said he hopes the department can back between 150 and 175 deals.

So far, several hundred Texans have inquired about the program, and a number of lenders also have expressed interest, Strange said.

He said he expects applications from lease operators who have farmed for years but been unable to buy their own land; younger people buying out fathers or grandfathers to keep farms in the family; recent agricultural college graduates who want to get into the business but don't have much capital; tenant farmers and people with new ideas.

While many applicants will want to start traditional operations such as wheat, cotton or cattle, Strange said there are few restrictions about what sort of operation will qualify. The main requirement is that an applicant show officials and lenders that he has a plan for making a profit.

"In addition to supporting the classic agricultural operations, we are looking for people with innovative ideas. If you can grow it - if it's fish or fowl or vines or tropical foliage plants or vegetables or whatever - we're interested," he

"If you want to raise rabbits for domestic consumption, fine. If you want to raise crawfish for export, fine. If you want to raise frogs for frogs legs, fine. If you want to raise grapes and produce Texas wine, fine.

"But you're going to have to prove that it is workable. The test will be a little more difficult for these (innovations) because we just don't have that much history on frog leg production. We know a lot about what it takes to make wheat happen.

There are no rules about how much land can be bought, either, although Strange says advise a conservative approach. "If you think you can handle 800 acres, try 400."

Eligibility rules say people seeking the guarantees must be credit-worthy U.S. citizens and Texas residents with a net worth of less than $100,000 excluding their homes. They must have education, training or experience in farming or ranching, and they must intend to use the land they buy for their primary occupation.

Applicants also must present a projected profit and loss statement for two years to demonstrate their ability to repay the proposed loan and either have the necessary equipment and operating capital or a line of credit to run the proposed farm.

"We're trying to take a very hard look at the applicant on the front end to make sure he has a sufficient chance of making it in agriculture today — which is a damn tough business," Strange

'He has to understand his responsibilities, that he must make the payments on time." It will be up to an applicant to work with lenders, making the best deal he can, Strange said. But the department guarantee will remove much of the risk

'We're giving them a guarantee that takes away 90 percent of their risk exposure. If the borrower puts down the other 10 percent, that's 100 percent coverage.

Strange said he hopes lenders will offer favorable interest rates to participants in the guarantee program. The department will establish ceilings for fixed and variable-rate loans, he

The agriculture department's experts will work with participants to help them manage their finances. Strange said, although they won't interfere with a farmer's operations as long as he keeps up with the payments.

Freed professor to return home

HOUSTON (AP) — An American professor freed from Beirut terrorists after two months in captivity is sick but planning to come to the United States soon, says his son, a student at Rice University.

Chris Regier, 19, said he was glad but not surprised Sunday to learn of the release of his father, Frank Regier. The electrical engineering professor at Beirut's American University was abducted from his home Feb. 10 by three

"Wow — that's good," Chris Regier said upon learning from an Associated Press reporter his father had been freed: His 50-year-old father appeared at a news conference at the home of Nabih Berri, leader of the Shiite Moslem militia Amal.

The elder Regier gave no details of his release, saying only that Amal fighters had freed him from his captors by Chris Regier said his brother, Terry, of Mountainview, Calif., had reached their parents by telephone and learned

"Apparently all I can tell you is my dad has a fever and is resting." Chris Regier said. He said he believed the illness was "minor" and said his father had spent much of his captivity "tied to a bed."

He also said his father is planning to come to the United States "in a couple of weeks," probably for the summer. "I can't say that I blame him," he said.

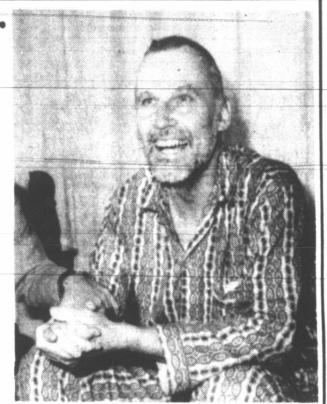

He said he had remained optimistic throughout the last two months

There've been all sorts of rumors, none of them bad," ris Regier said. "I'm not really surprised that he's free.

Chris Regier said that during his father's captivity his mother, Mary, a native of Lebanon who also teaches at American University, had "talked to some bigwig in the militia who said he heard he (Regier) was fine and somewhere out in the Bekaa (Valley). But you can't really put too much faith in that." In fact, the elder Regier said at his press conference that although he was blindfolded for much of his captivity, he believed he was held in west Beirut because he could hear weapons fire

The Rice student predicted shortly after his father's capture that the abductors would not kill Frank Regier. "They probably just wanted to scare all the Americans into getting out of the country and he happened to be there," Chris Regier said. He said he and his mother talked shortly after the kidnapping and "pretty much agreed that was probably the case or they would have just killed him," rather than taking him alive.

Terrorists in Beirut have attacked two other school officials. American University President Malcolm Kerr was assassinated in January. Previous President David Dodge was kidnapped in 1982 and imprisoned in Iran.

More recently, William Buckley, an U.S. Embassy political officer, and Jeremy Levin, Beirut bureau chief of the American Cable News Network have been abducted Buckley was kidnapped March 16 as he left his home for work, and Levin has been missing since March 7.

Lubbock bank to reopen

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - A Dimmitt investor planned today to reopen the Security National Bank, which federal officials closed after citing a bad loan portfolio for the bank's insolvency.

Bill Loyd, whose family's $3.45 million bid for the bank was accepted Friday afternoon by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., said the bank would reopen as City Bank and business would remain substantially the same.

However, the new owners did not purchase any of Security National's commerical loans or new construction, which are now controlled by the FDIC.

The bank was ordered closed Friday by acting U.S. Comptroller of Currency H. Joe Selby, who appointed the FDIC as receiver to liquidate the bank's the bank's deposits and assets, including the present building, furniture, fixtures, equipment, cash, bonds and consumer installment loans, FDIC senior liquidation specialist

Arthur Lorentzen, who spent the weekend supervising the ownership transaction, estimated the bank's deposits at $52 million. Selby said Friday the bank had experienced substantial deterioration in the quality of its loan portfolio over the past few years and was unable to remedy its problems. The bank's losses finally exhausted its capital funds, causing its insolvency, Selby said.

Some of the bad loans were commercial loans for energy projects,

Loyd, who will serve as board chairman and president, said commercial loans will be reviewed for possible purchase from the FDIC and the owners later may negotiate for a new building that Security National had planned to move into, Loyd said.

Mike Klein, general contractor for the new complex, said he finished construction on Feb. 27 and did not know anything else about the plans for the building.

Loyd said he had no plans to change any of the bank's personnel. Douglas Boren, who had been president of Security National, will be employed as a consultant, Loyd said.

A locket is a unique form of sentimental jewelry. Those containing portraits or another item of personal significance are treasured by those who receive them. The great age of lockets was during the nineteenth century. In the sentimental jewelry of the early Victorian period, they had a popular role as containers for the locks of hair and little medallions of hair-work which ere worn almost universally. Lockets containing a minia-ture painting of the fiance were worn by girls after their en-gagements, while small lockets were worn by children. In the 1870s a locket became a fashionable necessity intended for photographs and were some-times extremely heavy. The

New idea about U.S. commitments

There are compelling reasons for those concerned about a realistic, affordable U.S. defense posture to be cheered at a recent proposal from Tom Adams, prime minister of Barbados

Adams has called for the creation of a regional defense force for the Eastern Caribbean, Based in Barbados, it would maintain small garrisons on at least two other islands. U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz has endorsed the plan, pledging support from the United States to arm and train the force.

The fact that the U.S. feels impelled to provide weapons and training whenever asked is somewhat troubling. What's significant about Adams' proposal, however, is that it originated in the Caribbean, and the intention is that control over the force would rest with the Caribbean countries themselves. This is an important break from the usual pattern of defense alliances since World War II.

Such agreements as NATO, CENTO and SEATO were billed as mutual defense pacts, but for the most part they have been one-sided arrangements in which your friendly neighborhood superpower, the United States, pledged military intervention if another country were attacked or subverted.

The pattern has continued with United States initiatives like the Rapid Deployment Force, which would theoretically spread arms over troubled oil in the Middle East, and the short-lived Jordanian strike force.

On paper, at least, the United States is committed to defending more than 40 nations around the world. It would be impossible to honor all those commitments at the same time. Their very existence in a nuclear age increases the danger that the United States will be drawn into regional conflicts that could escalate into nuclear

A common factor in U.S. government commitments seems to be a desire to exercise control over the defense of other countries. That very/insistence could undermine the emergence of independent regional alliances in Persian Gulf and Southeast Asia.

People have grown so accustomed to thinking of the world being divided into two superpowers and their allies that the idea of genuinely independent regional alliances seems a little strange. Nevertheless, a good case can be made that this would be a safer world if all countires took self-defense seriously, cooperated with their neighbors when interests didn't coincide and didan't waste too much time worrrying about how to intervene in distant

The fact that Caribbean nations are thinking about regional defense, and that the United States is willing to cooperate without demanding a controlling "senior partner" interest may not mean that a serious re-evaluation of the post-World Ward II pattern of commitments is under way. Such rethinking is long overdue, however. The present system is too expensive and too dangerous.

Press' day of reckoning comin

NEW YORK (NEA) - The National News Council has voted to dissolve, and with its passing goes what was probably the last serious hope of avoiding a bone-crunching collision between the forces of decency in this country and the strutting hit men of attack-journalism.

The council was launched with foundation money in 1973, among other things to hear grievances against the media. After listening to both sides of a controversy, the council's dozen or so members (half of them journalists) would issue an opinion as to whether the complaint was "warranted" or unwarranted." If warranted, there was no penalty other than the publicity, which was usually minimal; but the media have thin skins where their own actions are in issue, and the council's findings were not wholly without effect. I served on the council, first as its token conservative and then as one of a doughty band of two or three (out of 15), from 1973 to 1981. Most of the liberals on it were open to a certain amount of persuasion, or at least of compromise; but the habit of genuflecting at every mention of the First Amendment was hard to break, and made it well-nigh impossible for the council to engage in robust criticism of the politically motivated and highly tendentious "investigative reporting" that has characterized the liberal pooh-bahs of the Washington press

From the outset, however, it was apparent that powerful elements in the media were in no mood to brook even such gentle criticism as the NNC was ready to indulge in. There were honorable exceptions: notably, the CBS television network, which manfully accepted and fully reported council findings against it, and the Gannett newspaper chain, whose associated foundation contributed valuable financial support. But the opposition was led by the mighty New York Times (of which it was once said that "for the Times to criticize itself would be ontologically inconceivable"). Punch Sulzberger and Abe Rosenthal got to the point where they buried reports of the council's findings back in the shipping news, and seldom bothered to answer its letters at all.

So gradually the National News Council was ignored and starved out of existence. Significantly, however, such has not been the fate of Accuracy In Media, a combative and forthrightly conservative critic of the liberal media, which was founded in 1971 by Reed Irvine. Financed by the dues and contributions of private citizens, AIM's semimonthly "AIM Report" has become a valuable mechanism - and since the demise of the NNC just about the only one - for nailing leftist propaganda masquerading as "news." Pretty clearly, there is a powerful longing in this country for effective ways of hitting back at the burgeoning power and pretensions of the media.

Confronted with the charge of liberal bias, the media's worst offenders turn curiously silent. If they respond at all, it is usually to remark that their conservative critics are making the ancient mistake of "killing the messenger" i.e., taking out on the media the displeasure they feel at news that doesn't suit them.

But that hardly explains the performance of the TV networks in (for example) the 525 news programs they aired in the second half of 1983. These were monitored by the Institute for Applied Economics, which identified 104 "economic stories of an in-depth or interpretative nature." Of these 104, about 95 percent involved statistics that were "positive," in the sense that they reflected the nationwide economic recovery then under way. And yet, according to the institute, 'about 85 percent" of the stories were "primarily negative," obscuring or minimizing the good news. This was accomplished by such tactics as outright omission, selective emphasis, misrepresentation, imbalancing of "experts," etc. Is it any wonder that, after a performance like that, many people are in a mood to kill the messenger?

The importance of a free press is too obvious to require extended commentary. But thanks to technology, among other things, the media have become much too powerful, too chesty, too opinionated, and too far from the mainsprings of American thought to be allowed to get away any longer with the argument that "There's nobody here but us chickens."

See you later, gentlemen. As the First Tempter said to Thomas Becket in Eliot's "Murder in the Cathedral": " leave you to the pleasures of your higher vices, which will have to be paid for at higher prices."

When it comes to mergers of giant corporations, it's the little things, and not the big ones that can make the deal fall

A few weeks ago the Simon Steel Company decided to merge with Garfunkel Oil and Gas. The lawyers for both sides, plus their investment bankers, as well as Simon and Garfunkel were seated at the long conference table going over the last - minute

The lawyer for Garfunkel said, "Then it is agreed, that Simon will pay $1 billion in cash for Garfunkel as chief executive officer. Each will receive $1 million a year in salary, have his own company plane, the use of the Simon Company's 150 - foot yacht, and equal shares in the 17 - room Garfunkel company duck hunting retreat in Canada

"Further, Simon and Garfunkel will each have a corner penthouse office in the Garfunkel Tower building in Greenwich, Conn., which will be renamed the Simon and options on 500,000 shares of new stock, at a price no higher than $20, although we expect it to come out at $45. Are there any questions?"

Simon said, "I have one. Where is my parking spot?

All the investment bankers and lawyers started to get nervous.

Garfunkel replied, "Your parking spot will be right next to mine the lot. Simon said, "As Chairman of the board

I'm entitled to the No. 1 parking place.' Garfunkel said, "I can't give you my parking spot. I have 3,000 employees, and if you park in my place they will think I'm second man in the new company. I built this

NFL hasn't gone far enough

EDITOR'S NOTE—The Pampa News is publishing the Lewis Grizzard column on a trial basis for several weeks. At the end of the trial period, we will ask readers whether they prefer the Grizzard column or the column written by Art Buchwalk and let your opionion determine which we publish You may have heard the National Football League has banned high - fives and sack dancing beginning next season. A high - five is where a group of grown men jump into the air and slap one another's extended palms as a means of celebrating a well - played play.

A sack dance, meanwhile, is where a defending player sacks (tackles) the other team's quarterback behind the line of scrimmage. In his jubilation, the defending player then dances about the field in the manner of a recently beheaded chicken. Whether or not this sort of strange behavior may be traced to the increase of cocaine usage by NFL players should be debated by those more knowledgeable of the pro game than

However, I must say that banning high - fiving and sack dancing is not the place for the NFL to stop in its never - ending vigil to improve its games and its image.

I would agree the NFL rules committee to also take steps to remove other aspects of pro football that may someday be the ruin of the sport and turn us all into, God forbid, soccer fans. Here are some of my suggestions:

1. The phrase "you know" should be banned from all players' vocabularies. (A player who has no vocabulary and grunts as a means of communication would not be simply grunts as a means of c affected by this rule, of course.)

interviews are held. In practically all these interviews, the boy gets more long winded every season, you know. players drop in "you know" about every third word, as in, We, you know, really, you know, think the Cowboys, you know, have a fine, you know, team, you know. We know. We know.

2. No player may be allowed to hold up his index finger to a sideline camera after he has just scored a touchdown and say,

Most players make quite enough money to call their mothers on the telephone like the rest of us. (Players who are broke because they spent all their money buying cocaine may be excused from this rule one time, but one time only.)

3. Phyllis George should be banned from taking part in any sort of football broadcast. She doesn't know anything about the game, and she giggles too much.

Irv Cross should be fined every time he smiles. There is nothing funny about pro football when you consider how much money is bet on it by honest, hard - working Americans each week. Why can't Irv Cross scowl like Jimmy The Greek?

As for Howard Cosell, every time he uses a word none of the rest of us has never heard before, Mark Gastineau should be allowed to sack dance on his head.

4. Lewd movements by NFL cheerleaders wearing skimpy uniforns should not be tolerated, for it is impossible to keep up with the down and yardage while watching NFL cheerleaders bump and grind on the side lines.

5. Roughing foreign - born placekickers should not only be allowed, it should be encouraged. We have enough trouble with our loose immigration laws as it is. 6. All NFL dressing room telephones should have non - listed

During the course of a season, thousands of player telephone numbers so President Reagan can't call. The old (c) 1984, The Register and Tribune Syndicate Inc.

Youthful victim led to cornering of mass killer

PENN YAN, N.Y. (AP) - Despite near-fatal stab wounds, a 16-year-old girl provided "very thorough" information that was crucial to cornering Christopher Wilder, whose nationwide spree of terror ended with his shooting death in a scuffle with police, a sheriff says.

Within two hours of Dawnette Sue Wilt's arrival at Soldiers and Sailors Hospital here, "we were sure Wilder was the man we were looking for." Yates County Sheriff Jan S. Scofield said

Miss Wilt, of Dyer, Ind., was found walking along a road Thursday after being abducted from an Indiana shopping mall, driven across country, then stabbed and left for dead.

'She described him," Scofield said at a news conference. three escaped "She described a vehicle that was involved within a relatively short period of time, and through working very closely with ordeal. the FBI, we had confirmed that it was Wilder that we were looking for.

'If we hadn't had the break with her in this case, I firmly believé that Mr. Wilder would still be alive," Scofield said. Miss Wilt, abducted April 10 from a Merrillville, Ind., shopping mall, was described by her father. David, as 'progressing quite nicely." The hospital listed her in stable Wilder's body will be returned to Boynton Beach on Tuesday or Wednesday at the request of his younger brother, Steven, said Robert Moore, owner of the Newman Funeral Home in Colebrook, N.H.

Wilder died when two bullets from his own .357-Magnum revolver ripped through his heart during a struggle with a state trooper, who was wounded. Although official records list Wilder's death as "accidental," authorities say they may never know whether he intended to shoot himself or the trooper, or whether the gun went off by mistake.

Escapee dies in shootout

- An Arizona prison escapee was killed in a gun battle as he tried to flee a crowded restaurant, and authorities were trying to determine if a police officer who came on the scene had mistakenly wounded an FBI agent and a woman bystander.

Robert Vance Latimer, a fugitive from an Arizona prison where he was serving 15 years for armed robbery and kidnapping, was also wanted for shooting an FBI agent last month in a Virginia shopping mall where a fellow escapee was wounded.

Ten to 20 shots were fired in the shootout Sunday, and ballistics tests were ordered to determine whether a police officer had mistakenly wounded FBI agent Ben Purser and a woman whose Purser, 37, and Susan Wright of Chattanooga underwent surgery at Memorial Hospital in Nashville and were listed in stable condition early today, nursing supervisor Marion Ayers said.

Authorities said the incident began when Latimer, 25, had a meal in a McDonald's restaurant at a shopping mall in Goodlettsville shortly before 1 p.m., after having asked two strangers to drive to a post office and bring him some letters.

He then apparently slipped out à side entrance, eluding a plainclothes FBI agent waiting for him in a car

As Latimer tried to force his way into a car containing Ms. Wright and another, unidentified woman, Purser tackled him and the two scuffled on the highway, said Capt. Sherman Nickens of the Metro Nashville homicide

A Goodlettsville officer who happened on the struggle may have shot Purser by mistake, Nickens said.

"From the start to finish, there was anywhere from 10 to 20 shots probably fired." Pope said

On Jan 23, Latimer and Kenneth J., Lundien, 27, escaped from the Virginia State Prison in Florence, Ariz., where Lundien was robbery and kidnapping

The two were confronted by FBI agents March 8 at the Springfield Mall in Springfield, Va., and a shootout ensued in which FBI agent Carl Swanson and Lundien were wounded.

Both convicts escaped from the shopping center.

Police said Latimer ran from the mall. commandeered a car but was soon caught in snowbound traffic. He then abandoned the vehicle, went to a nearby home and talked his way inside. He tied up the resident and stole his car, police said.

Lundien was arrested March 10 in New York City for carrying a concealed weapon and jumping a subway turnstile.

Dear Abby

Upbeat chapter begins in boy's tragic story

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: This letter appeared in my column on July 28, 1975:

DEAR ABBY: I am a physician. About 72 hours ago, a previously healthy, beautiful, 16-month-old child was brought to our department with obvious burns around his lips and mouth.

Only a few hours before, while visiting his grandparents, he discovered a bottle of lye and ingested only one mouthful. Fourteen doctors and dozens of nurses and operating personnel have been involved in the three operations that this child has already undergone.

The boy is now in our intensive-care unit, his eyes held shut with plastic tape, his breathing controlled by a machine and his life supported by tubes placed in his neck, chest, abdomen, penis, arms and legs. All of his esophagus and most of his stomach were destroyed by the lye and had to be surgically removed. If he lives, he will have to be fed through a hole in his abdomen for months.

Abby, please ask your readers to inspect their kitchens, bathrooms, basements and garages, and to place all dangerous chemicals outside the reach of small children. And ask them to pass the word on to their friends and neighbors who may not have children but who occasionally have young visitors.

This type of needless suffering and death to small children can be stopped today without spending one penny for research or donations.

I hope you will consider this worthy of your column, which is probably read by more people than any other. ARNOLD E. KATZ, M.D., IOWA CITY, IOWA

DEAR DR. KATZ: Worthy? If only one letter makes my column today, this will be it.

Readers, please place all detergents, bleaches, cleaning fluid, paint, polish, rat poison, drain cleaner and pills (including aspirin and iodine) under lock and key today!

And today, I received this one:

DEAR ABBY: Do you remember the letter you printed in 1975 about a 16-month-old boy who had swallowed a mouthful of lye? Dr. Arnold E. Katz sent it to you hoping you would publish it as a warning to all who may have a child in their care.

Well, the boy's name is Michael, and I am his mother. I wrote to you a year later to tell you that our son had survived but we were still facing a long hard battle.

Michael is 10 years old now, and he's had so many operations we've almost lost count. He's doing fourthgrade work but had to be taught at home.

On Jan. 10, Michael was in surgery again for 10 hours. Dr. William Panje and his team of doctors at the University Hospital in Iowa City did a super job. Eight days later my husband and I brought Michael home. No one knew if the operation would be successful, but we were all hoping. You see, since his accident, Michael had been unable to swallow. He had to be fed through a tube in his stomach.

On Feb. 27, Michael took a gulp of soda pop, and it actually went down his throat and into his stomach!

He said, "Mom, it's gone! It's gone!" I told him to take a smaller sip to see if he could swallow again, and sure enough he could.

It's been a long 8 1/2 years, Abby, but as of today Michael is actually eating and swallowing food. We can hardly believe it.

The tube through which he had been fed was removed from his stomach yesterday, and I wanted you to be one of the first to know that our son is normal again! This fall he will be able to ride the bus and go to school for the first time in his life. I am enclosing a picture of Michael. Thank you for

BETTY (MRS. EUGENE) STRIEGEL, LISBON, IOWA

DEAR MRS. STRIEGEL: Thank you from the bottom of my heart for wanting to share your joy with me. I know that my readers will rejoice with me on learning the wonderful news.

How I wish I could publish Michael's picture. His large blue eyes, pink cheeks and warm smile reveal an exceptionally beautiful and courageous child. May he and his family know only good fortune from this day on.

Growing Up to do when a child lies or steals

"Did you steal that?" asked the mother "No, I didn't," replied the child.

In reality, the child HAD stolen the candy. Now to the guilt of stealing, he has added the guilt of lying about it.

Parents don't like to admit - or even think - that their school - age children have lied or stolen. Call it "human nature" or call it "growing up" - but be aware that lying and stealing are much more common among young children than parents want to believe, says Growing Up, the child development newsletter about school - age children.

Given that these behaviors are likely to occur, what can a parent do when confronted with the fact that a child has told a

It's best to avoid the extremes of irrational overconcern ("My child is a budding criminal") or apathy ("So what?") Treat the occasion, instead, as a valuable opportunity to teach a lesson about moral behavior.

For example, let's say you've almost reached home after an exhausting afternoon of shopping. You notice that your child has a bar of candy that you didn't pay for, and you know he didn't have any money to pay for it, either

Instead of accusing him ("You stole that!") give him a chance to confess ("Where did you get that candy bar?").

Then, even though it may be a nuisance to turn the car around and go back to the store, do so. The effort will teach the child an important lesson.

A child learns nothing about honesty from a parent who is too apathetic or embarrassed to go back to the store. He learns an entirely different lesson from a parent who takes him right back to the cashier or manager to return the ill - gotten goods and tell them the truth about what he did

If the child doesn't have to go back to the store, he learns that, apart from a brief scolding, the consequences of lying and stealing are not very great.

The child who has to return the stolen object and tell the truth learns about personal responsibility, discovers an inner sense of satisfaction that comes from being honest, and leaves the store with the good feeling of having done the right thing.

filing federal tax returns passes at midnight Monday, you'll only have to work another 15 days to pay off your U.S., state and local tax obligations for the year. If every penny earned so far this year had been earmarked for taxes, your "Tax Freedom Day" would come May 1, the same date as in 1983. But because this is leap year, if you are average, you'll have to work 122 days to pay your taxes, compared with 121 days last year.

Tax Freedom Day is the Tax Foundation's way of dramatizing the impact of taxes on American workers and families. With this year's announcement comes word that 1984 will be the first year ever for total tax liabilities to pass the $1 trillion mark.

"Worth noting in terms of the annual date of Tax Freedom Day in recent years is that the day moved earlier in the year in 1982 for the first time since 1975," the foundation reported. "It was earlier still in 1983 " and the WASHINGTON (AP) - By foundation credited the the time the deadline for across-the-board cuts in federal tax rates that were enacted in 1981.

> Although the federal government took back part of that tax cut with selective tax increases in 1982 and 1983, the foundation says, you can blame state, city and county officials for the extra day of work for the tax collector this

The foundation's calculations assume that individuals pay all taxes, even those assessed on corporations. To determine the average, the organization simply divides the total tax collections among the nation's workers.

If you prefer to think of your tax obligations as a share of your eight-hour workday, you're putting in 2 hours and 40 minutes a day for the government this year. That's one minute more than in 1983. Federal taxes require 1 hour and 43 minutes each day; states and local governments take 57 minutes himself as a besieged president, misunderstood and maligned. On Lincoln's Birthday in 1968, at the Lincoln Memorial, Johnson compared his ordeal in Vietnam with Lincoln's in the Civil War.

Congress gets Reagan blame

Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) Lyndon B. Johnson saw

But even in his bleakest days in coping with dissent. riot and rebellion, LBJ didn't go as far as Ronald Reagan did in his suggestions that Congress has a duty to hush up and go along once a president has sent troops into a dangerous place.

Reagan said at his news conference on April 4 that members of Congress "must take a responsibility" for a loss of American credibility suffered when Marines were withdrawn from Lebanon and their peacekeeping mission He said congressional attack. Before then, Congress gave Reagan almost a free hand in Lebanon, just as it has given him most of what he wanted in military spending and in cutting taxes. Reagan's complaint was no off-hand comment, laid down under the pressure of coming up with a quick answer to a tough question on television. Rather, it represents an administration policy.

On March 1. Secretary of State George P. Shultz told a Senate subcommittee that congressional debate on the U.S. presence in Lebanon 'just totally took the rug out from under U.S. interests. He said the debate led Syria to doubt American resolve.

And the day after Reagan's news conference, an official who under the ground rules could only be identified as "a senior administration official" briefed reporters. He said criticism should be restricted to private meetings with the president, letters to him and closed forums. OP O' TEXAS COUNSELING CENTER Dave Brummett, Counselor

Democratic National Convention begins on May 5 with more than 6,600 Saturday night meetings where secret ballots are eschewed and admission is by ticket

It all seems logical to Dwayne Holman, who runs Walter Mondale's campaign here. It is a system, he says, that rewards those who actively work in Democratic Party politics and excludes those only willing to cast a quick primary ballot and go home. "When you get ready to elect a pope, you don't campaign with the Baptists." Holman says. U.S. Rep. Martin Frost of Dallas, chairman of the Gary Hart campaign in Texas, favors a primary but says the vagaries of the convention system work for both sides.

"Neither side has an advantage in this situation. It's like a football game in bad weather, it rains on both teams," he said The precinct conventions convene at 7:15 p.m., starting the three-level system that leads to the state's 200-delegate delegation to the San Francisco national convention.

TO PARTICIPATE at your precinct convention, where you will sign in for the candidate of your choice - or as an "uncommitted" - you first must vote in the Democratic primary earlier that day. Your voter registration card, stamped "Voted Democratic Primary" is your entry ticket.

"It's really not very confusing," says Texas Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle of Sherman, a Mondale backer. "You can make it complex if you wish. But we've only been doing precinct conventions for the past 100 years."

Precinct conventions send delegates to county (or in large conventions send delegates to the state convention. The state convention sends them to San Francisco for the Democratic National Convention

TEXAS WILL SEND 200 delegates to San Francisco. One hundred sixteen come from the conventions. The rest will be party and elected Democratic officials who get automatic berths due to their positions.

The convention system sparks something of an invisible campaign, rendering useless much of the usual political paraphernalia. The conventions probably won't attract mass participation, so not much mass media advertising is needed, campaign officials say.

"People like to put out yard signs," said Holman, "but they don't have a lot of significance in caucuses.'

Campaign officials for all candidates "are going to hear constant complaints that there aren't enough bumper stickers," he said.

THE BIG-DOLLAR EFFORT will be in phone banks volunteer or paid workers calling potential convention-goers. Frost said the goal of dialing for Democrats is to find your backers and make sure they save that Saturday night for the precinct conventions. What you do is work the regular Democratic primary voters. You work them very hard by phoning them and mailing them," he said.

Although Slagle contends the convention system is a century old in Texas, there were slight aberrations in the most recent two presidential years. In 1976, there was direct, on-the-ballot, election of delegates.

In 1980, there was a beauty contest primary that had nothing to do with delegate selection. Slagle said the non-binding primary included "a certain amount of fraud." "People think they participated" by voting in the primary.

he said. A precinct convention "damned sure is more honest. THE CONVENTIONAL WISDOM about the conventions is that Mondale, as favorite of party regulars, has an advantage But Frost is quick to reel off a list of county party officials backing Hart.

"We have a number of people who played active roles in the party. Granted, we don't have the top leaders," he said. Slagle said there's a benefit in the conventions for all the candidates - a slight slowing in the breakneck pace of primary season.

'You beat the candidates plum to death' with months of primaries, he said. "Those guys look like they 've been through 15 rounds with the heavyweight champion.

But if the system is nice to candidates, it's somewhat unfair to voters, according to Gov. Mark White and others. "It's a little difficult to ask someone to go twice to participate. And it's really ridiculous to think all of them are going to go at 7 o'clock to vote and then participate. What a

NEW YORK (AP) annual day of reckoning with Uncle Sam amid more than the usual amount of confusion this year.

After numerous efforts at "reform" in the past decade. the national system for collecting taxes remains under siege

The symptoms are numerous and, by most experts' diagnosis, severe. For one, there is the much-publicized federal budget deficit.

For another, even with a recent drive to crack down on deadbeats, the amount of income taxes that is legally owed but doesn't get paid keeps growing. By official calculations, it is close to $100 billion. By unofficial estimates, it is much more that that

There were tax bills in 1981, 1982 and 1983. Congress is partway through producing a 1984 tax bill, and analysts are already busy trying to assess what a 1985 tax bill will probably contain.

As numerous commentators have observed, the problem is not that Americans have developed a sudden aversion to paying taxes. The typical citizen was never fond of parting with the money.

Rather, some say, it is that people lost respect for the tax system seeing it as hopelessly convoluted, unfair and impossible to enforce.

'The tax code is too complicated, has too many serious about bona fide tax has chosen in the past to use doubts about whether everybody is carrying his or her proper share of the tax burden." Business Week magazine declared in an editorial. The government has been working to develop more sophisticated methods of assuring compliance with the rules. But it is hard to find anyone in the private sector who thinks the answer to the underlying problems lies solely in mustering up a tougher force of tax police.

Instead, many people think the country is ready to get that vision a reality are already in the legislative hoppers in Washington, Much more talk doubtless will be heard about tax reform in the remainder of the current political campaign, and after the election is settled.

But as flawed as the present system may be, the politics of changing it radically still promise to be complex and difficult. One of the main reasons for the many intricacies of the tax code is that the government many Americans became properly outraged upon learning that our government had just paid a portion of Poland's debt to American banks. Poland was then using martial law to crack Polish heads. Even so, we delivered $71 million in her behalf in February 1982, and we have supplied numerous additional bailouts as she continued to default. As of this date, U.S. taxpayers have furnished $1.4 billion that Poland could not - or would not - repay. And this sum will increase as portions of the original loan come due in 1985.

It was during the temporary furor created by the Polish bailout that Congress showed its supposed toughness by legislating a monthly State Department review of our situation with the Warsaw regime. As a result, each month sees a State Department certification assure Congress that "it is in the national interest" to bail out Poland even further. What this farce really demonstrates is the tremendous clout possessed by the big American banks.

Commodity Credit Corporation In 1979, the Commodity Credit Corporation was authorized to start this program. To date, thirty-five nations have purchased American agricultural products with money borrowed from U.S. banks (Chase Manhattan, Citibank, Bank of America, First National of Chicago, First Wisconsin National, et al.) and guaranteed by the C.C.C. It is reasonable to assume that none of these banks would provide such loans if the U.S. government were not guaranteeing repayment. As one Agriculture Department official described the process to us: "If the bank holding the guarantee does not get its money on schedule, its officials come to us. After we pay the bank, the loan becomes a receivable for us and we begin negotiations with the borrowing government for payment." He then admitted that negotiations with Poland

Press last month noted that similar payments totalling $431 million had been made during 1983 in behalf of Brazil, Rumania, Peru and Morocco. Here again, foreign nations got the money, the banks got refunded, and the American taxpayers got stuck with the bill. These debts have been rescheduled over the next five years. Your guess is as good as ours as to whether they will ever be paid.

Staggering Figures

But the transactions involving the various deadbeats just noted are not the end of the story. A total of eight reschedulings involving payments by the U.S. government of over $2 billion have already been made. Those beyond the one to Poland and the four mentioned previously include a second loan payment for tumania and two others to Sudan.

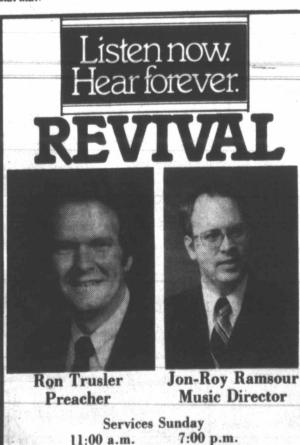

During the six years that this program has been in existence, the Commodity Credit Corporation has co-signed loans totalling more than $10 billion. Twenty percent of this amount is already in arrears and a large part of it has not even come due for repayment. The only risktaker continues to be America's hard-pressed

Objections Galuze

The objections to this program are easy to catalog. Financing Red regimes such as Poland and Rumania is indefensible. Guaranteeing more loans to a heavily indebted nation like Brazil cannot be justified. And if the program's backers seek to rationalize it as "helping" America's farmers, then will we also help automakers, lumbermen and others?

The most compelling objection is that government has no business providing loan guarantees. That the program is a flop is no surprise. If it held any potential for success, government guarantees would have never had to be started in the first place. 45 1984 The John Birch Society Features

Masters Crenshaw's first major title

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Ben Crenshaw knew he his tee shot in the water and took a double bogey. Tom Kite, the third-round leader who was two sewed up - and so did the massive gallery surrounding the 18th green at Augusta National.

The thunderous ovation came in waves as the popular Texan prepared to put the finishing touches on a closing 68 that left him with an 11-under-par 277 total and the coveted Masters title.

"I honestly didn't know where I was," Crenshaw

"Coming up 18 I had so much support. It was incredible. I just didn't want to let those people

They had been with him all the way on the treacherous back side of this famous course built by Bobby Jones.

The cheers started at the 10th hole where he rolled in a monstrous, breaking 60-foot putt for his third straight birdie - one that gave him a three-shot lead.

He bogeyed the 11th, but then came back with a 12-foot birdie putt on the 155-yard, par-3 12th - a hole that took out the only two players with a realistic chance.

Larry Nelson, the U.S. Open champion who had

Tom Kite, the third-round leader who was two back at the time, also found the water, and made triple bogey. There was a sense that this tournament was over. that the only person who could beat Crenshaw was Crenshaw.

He didn't let it happen. He saved par with a 20-footer on No. 14 and then applied the clincher, a 15-foot birdie putt on the 15th that built the lead to four shots. The ovations at each hole continued to grow.

They were the type that had been reserved for two legends in Masters lore - for the popularity of Arnold Palmer during his heyday and for the respect for the brilliant play of Jack Nicklaus, the only five-time winner of this prestigious event.

Tom Watson, a two-time Masters winner, made two birdies over the last three holes to claim second place at 69-279, but he really never was in the title

David Edwards and Gil Morgan shared the low round of the final day with 67s, and were deadlocked in third place at 280.

Nelson was next at 70-281 and Kite had a 75, closed the gap to one with a birdie on 11, knocked falling into a four-way tie at 282 with Ronnie Black.

"I haven't been through this before," Crenshaw said. "It's a feeling of relief more than anything. There's no question I've put pressure on myself to win the important tournaments."

He narrowly missed a major title in 1981 when he lost the PGA championship in a playoff with

"Today was just my day," he said. "I was determined. I tried to hit the fairways and the greens, and I did a darn good job of it."

Easy pickings.

Don't be so sure. It can be capricious. And on Sunday, this innocent-looking bit of Georgia real estate, tucked at the end of the course in a spot called Amen Corner, merely decided the 48th Masters

Amen, indeed. The corner consists of Nos. 11, 12 and 13, a treacherous turn that has torpedoed its share of golfers. The scenery is spectacular there. The challenge of the holes can be just as awesome.

Of the three holes, No. 12 would seem the simplest, despite the brook that guards the hole. But it has claimed victims before and on Sunday, it happened again.

Halfway through the final round of the Masters, eight players were separated by just four shots and it seemed like a cavalry charge to the treasured green jacket was inevitable

No. 12 changed all that. Approaching that hole Ben Crenshaw had just come off a bogey, falling back to 10 strokes under par for the tournament. More importantly, he was caught in a crowd.

Larry Nelson, hungering for the recognition he never got as last year's U.S. Open champion, was coming off a birdie at No. 11 and sitting one stroke behind Crenshaw at nine-under for the tournament.

Another stroke back was Tom Kite, Crenshaw's old University of Texas teammate, and like Gentle Ben, chasing after his first major title.

Then came No. 12. Nelson was the first to "Number 12 is one of the hardest par threes under pressure," he said. "Hit it over the green and there's no telling what you'll score there Six, seven, eight."

Nelson settled for a double-bogey five after hitting his ball into the water. But he escaped cheaply when you consider what happened to Kite there. Like Nelson, Kite's ball wound up wet. The eventual price was a triple-bogey six that rolled him back from a challenging eight-under to a more mortal five-under.

"I made one costly error, one bad swing that nailed

"I've played it well before. I remember being in the water only one other time in an early round. It was not as costly as today."

To complicate matters even more for Nelson and Kite, Crenshaw birdied No. 12 when he got there. From a narrow one-stroke lead over Nelson, the hole swung him four strokes in front. He coasted the rest of the way.

"I'm proud of my shot at 12." he said. "I confess, I pushed it a little bit but when I saw it in the air. I knew it was a good shot. I struck it solidly and I was determined to make the putt."

Quisenberry, who set a major league record with 45 saves in 1983, had earned a save in each of his previous four appearances with the Kansas City Royals this sesson. He relieved rookie Bret Saberhagen on Sunday to start the eighth inning.

Fingers, who came into the season with the all-time save record of 301, had earned his first save in nearly two years for Milwaukee the night before. Apparently on the road back from arm surgery. Fingers took over from Mike Caldwell with one out in the eighth inning.

When Fingers came to the mound, the Brewers had a 3-2 lead, and he made it stand up with 1 2-3 innings of one-hit relief, striking out three of the six batters he faced. He hadn't had a save since Aug. 27, 1982. Now, he had two in two days.

"I'm not 100 percent of what I was," said the tall right-hander with the ebar mustache. "The fastball is about five miles slower, but my forkball is working. I've worked on it for four or five years now, and I can finally throw strikes."

The Brewers took the lead with two runs off Quisenberry in the eighth inning. Ted mons drove in a run with single, and Dion James had sacrifice fly. Two walks by berry, one intentional, aided the Milwaukee rally.

"I know I'm going to blow some games, and this is the first one of the year,' berry said. "That's the first time I can ever Astros third baseman Phil Garner feels like his team is getting on the right track after another slow start.

Houston won only one of its first seven games, but has a three-game winning streak under its belt now.

Garner's bases-loaded, ninth-inning single is partly responsible, since it lifted the Astros to a 6-5 triumph over the Cincinnati Reds Sunday afternoon.

"These are the kinds of games that give us momentum," Garner said. 'We won 1-0 the other night, had a free-swinging game last night (a 9-1 win Saturday) and came back and won this one."

It required extraordinary comeback effort to keep the winning streak alive against the Reds. Trailing 5-1 after 71/2 innings, the Astros scored four runs in the bottom of the eighth to tie the game, and Garner's one-out single in the ninth did

The script is almost the same as last vear's campaign, when the Astros lost their first nine games, but surged back to finish

British prime minister in toughest labor fight

LONDON (AP) - Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is locked in her toughest bout yet with organized labor in the form of a five-week-old coal miners' strike that now threatens to shut down the industry completely.

With the government determined to close unprofitable mines and the union refusing to yield, both sides are settling in for a long siege

At stake for the Conservative prime minister is the momentum of her efforts to streamline Britain's state-run industries

At stake for the miners is the future of one of Britain's traditional heavy industries and also the direction of a national trade union movement traditionally spearheaded by

"The stage is now set for the most decisive test of Mrs. Thatcher's second administration," said The Sunday Times of London in an editorial.

The final elements of the confrontation fell into place last week.

On Thursday, with the strike already in its fifth week and three-quarters of Britain's 176 mines idle, leaders of the National Union of Mineworkers rejected calls by moderate miners for a ballot of the 183,000 miners.

Instead, militant union president Arthur Scargill won a call for a conference to amend the union by-laws to cut the majority needed on a strike vote from 55 percent to 50 percent. ne move virtually guaranteed him an all-out stoppage

With the initiative swinging to Scargill's radicals, a poll taken for Independent Television showed 55 percent of miners backing a strike compared with 33 against and the rest unsure. A poll in The Sunday Times showed even more widespread support: 68 percent in favor, 26 percent against and 6 percent undecided.

The plan to close between 20 and 25 mines and eliminate 20,000 jobs was developed by Ian MacGregor, a Scottish-born American industrialist appointed by Mrs. hatcher to head the state-owned National Coal Board.

MacGregor says the jobs would be eliminated through retirement, transfer and voluntary acceptance of generous severance pay. But the plan is troubling to an industry whose workforce already has shrunk by some 60,000 from its 1979 level of 232,500 miners.

After the plan was announced in February. militant miners in Yorkshire, in northern England, and Scotland struck. They then began shutting down the rest of the country through the time-honored - and illegal -British method of sending out "flying pickets" to other coal fields.

Pro- and anti-strike miners clashed on the picket line and police battled to keep order. Scores were injured, nearly 1,000 arrested and one miner died. Only a nationwide police mobilization stopped the flying pickets and

But government hopes that the strike would fizzle out were dashed by Thursday's union don't thin we can drifting into a national strike now." said Sid Vincent, leader of the anti-strike Lancashire-area miners

Stoudt performance leads Stallions

AP Sports Writer Cliff Stoudt's appearance at the Pontiac Silverdome as quarterback of the Birmingham Stallions was quite a contrast to his last previous visit as a member of the Pittsburgh

Stoudt had a miserable game last Thanksgiving as the Steelers lost 45-3 to the Detroit Lions, but on Sunday he helped the Stallions win their seventh straight game, 28-17 over Michigan, the defending United States Football League champions

'My trip to Detroit last time was pretty low," said Stoudt, who completed 15 of 24 passes for 133 yards and two touchdowns in the victory over the Panthers. "It was a rotten way to spend a holiday. But that 's in the past now.'

Elsewhere in the USFL Sunday, the Arizona Wranglers quarter. swamped the New Jersey Generals 20-3 and the Philadelphia Stars bombed the Chicago Blitz 41-7.

On Saturday, Oklahoma edged Washington 20-16, Los Angles beat Memphis 23-17 in overtime, Denver topped Pittsburgh 31-21 and San Antonio blanked Jacksonville 20-0

Houston will play at Oakland and Tampa Bay will be at New Orleans in tonight's games. Stoudt got plenty of help from former Buffalo Bill Joe Division with Philadelphia.

rushed three yards for another score and finished with 116 yards on 20 carries

'Cribbs is the key to our offense.' Stoudt said. "He takes the pressure off us. He just does a lot of things well. He's an All-Pro player. He has the ability to break it any time."

Despite Birmingham's lofty 7-1 record under Coach Rollie Dotsch, Stoudt's statistics are undistinguished. He has completed less than 52 percent of his passes, has thrown for an average of only 144 yards per game and has only seven touchdown passes in eight outings.

"Rollie's system doesn't need a quarterback to throw for 300 yards every week," Stoudt said. "We want to play the way Green Bay and Miami did (in the 1960s and '70s). You play hard, possess the football and win.

Michigan, 6-2, playing without star receiver Anthony Carter, who has a broken left arm, took a 7-0 lead before a home crowd of 42,665 on a 38-yard pass play from quarterback Bobby Hebert to Derek Holloway. But Cribbs' two touchdowns before Kevin Long, who used to play for the New York Jets when they were coached by Walt Michaels, rushed for 123 yards and two touchdowns in leading the Arizona over Michaels' current team, New Jersey.

Stars 41, Blitz 7 Philadelphia won easily at home before 17,417 fans, scoring four touchdowns before the game was nine minutes old and 31 points in the first period.

Linebacker Sam Mills set up two touchdowns and a field goal with two interceptions and a fumble recovery, and the Stars also intercepted two other passes and recovered another fumble, the latter being returned 35 yards for a touchdown by defensive back Scott Woerner. The Stars are 7-1, while the Blitz fell to 2-6.

Saturday's Games

Oklahoma improved its record to 6-2 by winning its third straight game and keeping Washington winless. Quarterback Doug Williams, who hit 24 of 44 passes for 334 yards, passed eight yards to Ron Wheeler with 57 seconds left for the Outlaws' winning touchdown, climaxing a 93-yard drive. Williams finished with 24 of 44 passes for 333 yards.

Steve Young, Los Angeles' rookie quarterback, won his first game in three starts when he scored on a 1-yard plunge in overtime for the home-field victory over Memphis. Tony Zendejas of the Express sent the game into overtime with a 27-yard field goal with one second left in regulation. Young completed 22 of 34 passes for 358 yards

Scott Stamper ran 19 times for 96 yards, including a 26-yard touchdown jaunt, as San Antonio won only its second game and scored its most points of the season in shutting out the Jacksonville.

Denver rallied from a 21-0 deficit at Pittsburgh to boost its Pacific Division-leading record to 7-1. Quarterback Bob Gagliano came off the bench in the third quarter for the Gold to pass for two touchdowns and run for a two-point conversion

Boston's 88th

BOSTON (AP) - Britain's Geoff Smith and New Zealand's Allison Roe, each needing a solid performance to impress their respective Olympic team selectors, were the favorites in today's 88th Boston Marathon, a race which appears to be in trouble after this year. The choice of Smith as the men's first-place finisher appeared clear-cut He entered the race with the best time, 2 hours, 9 minutes. 8 seconds — the fastest ever by a first-time marathoner - in finishing second in last year's New York

He was the only runner in the expected field of 6,800 here with a clocking under 2:10.

He is a world-class 10,000-meter runner, ranking No. 2 in the world in 1981

He was in extremely fit condition, having put in long, hard training, averaging between 120 and 130 miles per week, over the past few months. And he was a man with a mission — to secure a place on the three-man British Olympic marathon team, which will be named May 15, two days after the London Marathon. Roe's role as the women's favorite was not as certain. True, she was the only former Boston winner in the field, winning in 1981 in a then-women's course record 2:26:46. True, she also won the New York City Marathon in 1981 including a hamstring that has been nagging at her for in a then-world best 2:25:29. And, she was ranked No. 1 in the world in 1981. But since then, she has been beset with injuries, more than two years and which she reinjured Feb. 1.

A number of seldom-used players posted career highs Sunday, but nowhere was depth more in evidence than in Boston, where the Celtics improved their league-best record to 62-20 with a 118-111 victory over the New Jersey

"It was a good tuneup for both clubs before entering the playoffs," Coach Stan Albeck said. "Down the stretch, the Celtics were able to execute and accomplish the things they wanted to accomplish.'

"Today, I just wanted to get the momentum going for the playoffs,'' said Buck Williams, who led the Nets with 25 points and 14 rebounds. "Our franchise is more stable this year and this should help us in the playoffs."
