Emergency warning system fund drive launched

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Mayor Calvin Whatley issued a proclamation today designating this week as Pampa Emergency System Fund Week, kicking off a drive to raise funds to insure operations of the local radio stations and the Emergency Operations Center during emergency disaster situations.

Sponsored by the local Office of Emergency Management (Civil Defense), the fund drive is aimed at raising money to install back-up generators and power lines for the radio stations and City Hall to be used in the event of electrical power failure during severe weather conditions.

The drive was spurred by a letter dated March 12 from W. J. Orr, comptroller at Ingersoll-Rand, addressed to the Fire Prevention and Safety Committee of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce.

Orr referred to the tornado scare of May 19, 1982, noting he and others had huddled in a shelter, listening to Darrell Sehorn of KGRO describing the approaching tornado funnels. "His voice became our link with the outside world as he broadcasted safety precautions and advised listeners of the tornado activity."

However, after much thought about the situation, Orr wrote, "My understanding is that neither of the local radio stations has a combined emergency generator-studio facility which would function in the event of a power failure."

"I am further advised that the studios are connected to their transmitters via telephone lines and that the communications could be interrupted due to telephone lines being down, even if there were no power failure."

He added, "Our vulnerability is obvious. This absence of a facility to emergency broadcast severely weakens and possibly precludes giving the public an early warning which is the number one priority."

Meeting with OEM and city officials to discuss the situation, members of the Fire Prevention and Safety Committee decided efforts should be undertaken as a civic action to insure early warning communications would be available for city and area residents.

The OEM, with Steve Vaughn as coordinator, has established a goal of $45,000 to purchase generators, switches and lines and to install the equipment to strengthen the city's capability of providing warning to area residents in the event of severe weather and tornadoes.

Vaughn said the main power lines to the city are located southwest of Pampa, where electrical power lines feed the system from the Amarillo area. A tornado approaching Pampa from the southwest, where it is most likely to originate, could knock out the power lines and put the radio stations off the air.

"The warning system is jeopardized because of the power lines coming in from Amarillo," Vaughn stated.

The power failure could also severely hamper the efforts of the EOC at City Hall, preventing communication to citizens via KGRO-KOMX and KSNZ. In addition, the warning sirens could not be sounded, Vaughn noted.

The OEM, working in conjunction with the Chamber committee, initiated the plan to purchase generators and supporting equipment for the two radio stations and to provide hook-ups for City Hall as a civic undertaking.

OEM officials have said it would not be right to expect the media to put out the large expenses necessary to purchase the generators and other equipment needed for emergency power use.

With the project as a public project through the OEM and the city government, however, government surplus generators can be obtained at greatly reduced costs of about $1,000 each instead of $14,000 to $15,000 each.

The equipment would become the property of the city, but the radio stations would provide maintenance of the systems once installed and would be expected to insure they would remain in proper operating condition.

Mayor Whatley explained the city cannot use tax money to help private enterprise concerns, but they can assign the generators and supporting systems for use by the radio stations in the public interest.

Vaughn said the emergency back-up generators and lines would provide added protection for city and area residents in the event of tornadoes and severe weather.

If electrical power goes out, there would be no radio broadcasts, no sirens and no cable television broadcasts, Vaughn explained. Residents would be left with only the use of public address systems from police cars, a not-too-effective warning system, he said.

The new generator system "would probably be the best thing we can do for

Salvadorans flood polls

Rebels fail to disrupt presidential runoff election

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of Salvadorans streamed to the polls for a runoff presidential election largely free of rebel disruption and of the bureaucratic bungling that marred the first round.

Sunday's runoff matched Jose Napoleon Duarte, a moderate Christian Democrat, against Roberto d'Aubuisson, candidate of the ultra-right Republican Nationalist Alliance.

The Central Election Council said unofficial results might be available sometime today, but that it would be about a week before the final tally is released.

Representatives of both parties said returns they had compiled showed their candidate leading with 55 percent of the vote.

A survey of voters leaving the polls gave Duarte 54 percent of the vote against 46 percent for d'Aubuisson. The poll had a 4 percent margin of error, said a spokesman for the Miami-based Spanish International Network, which released the survey based on interviews with 2,800 voters.

Officials said they had eliminated many of the snags which prevented some 200,000 of the eligible 1.8 million voters from casting ballots in the initial round March 25. Initial reports indicated about 1.6 million people voted Sunday, compared with 1.2 million in March, officials said.

Leftist rebels staged scattered raids but stopped few people from voting, authorities said.

"The voting went well," said Eliseo Rovira of the Central Election Council. "It was not nearly so bad as in March."

In March, ballot boxes arrived late at many polling stations, voters were confused over where they were supposed to cast ballots and the electoral registry had numerous errors.

Eight candidates from moderate to far-right parties competed in the first round. Duarte took 43.4 percent of the votes in that election, with d'Aubuisson winning 29.7 percent. Since neither won 50 percent, a runoff was required.

Duarte proposes a national conciliation, including talks with rebels, to end a 4½-year-old civil war. D'Aubuisson says the guerrillas must be crushed militarily. D'Aubuisson is said to have links to the death squads, but that has not been proven and he denies it.

Officially, the U.S. government has taken a neutral stance in the election, but members of Congress and the Reagan administration have indicated a victory by d'Aubuisson would jeopardize the chances of additional U.S. military aid being approved for El Salvador.

Leftists boycotted both elections, dismissing them as a farce and saying the only way to hold a fair vote is by negotiating a share of power first.

Rebels blew up power lines Sunday, blacking out a large part of the country. They also dug trenches in a few highways and burned ballots in three small towns in Chalatenango and San Miguel provinces.

But threats to mine the main highways and "fight the army in the streets" never materialized. The biggest clash was in the country's third-largest city of San Miguel, about 85 miles east of San Salvador.

Snipers opened fire from a bell tower of a Roman Catholic cathedral and a theater at dawn. The fighting left 15 guerrillas and four soldiers dead, said Lt. Col. Domingo Monterrosa, troop commander in eastern El Salvador. Two demolition experts were killed by a bomb planted by rebels.

An army tank retrieved voting materials from a besieged building where they were stored.

PAMPA CRIME STOPPERS

Between the late evening hours of Tuesday, April 10, and Wednesday, April 11, an unknown person or persons apparently traveled about Pampa, randomly firing numerous

BB or pellet type projectiles into the storefront windows of several businesses located along North Cuyler, West Foster, North Ward and North Hobart streets, causing an estimated $6,500 in damage.

Crimestopper of Pampa will pay $500 for the arrest and indictment of the person or persons responsible for this willful destruction of property.

If you have information about this crime or any other crime, you can report it and remain anonymous by calling 669-2222.

Hance credits aliens issue for surprise showing

AUSTIN (AP) — U.S. Rep. Kent Hance says his strong opposition to granting amnesty for illegal aliens helped him lead the way into a runoff election for the Democratic U.S. Senate nomination.

"The issue we really stressed was jobs," he said Sunday. "That was stressed as the amnesty issue. If you look at the studies that show 65 Americans lose their jobs out of every 100 undocumented workers that come in, this is a concern."

Hance was the top vote-getter in the primary election Saturday — barely. The margin between the Lubbock native, state Sen. Lloyd Doggett and former U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger was one of the closest ever. Krueger, who had been considered the favorite, said he probably would seek a recount if he finished third.

Walter F. Mondale overwhelmed Sen. Gary Hart in the Texas Democratic precinct caucuses, and Republican U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm swamped three opponents to win the GOP Senate nomination without a runoff.

President Reagan, unopposed on the nonbinding Republican primary ballot, got 97 percent to 3 percent uncommitted.

"If I'm not in the runoff, I will ask for a recount," Krueger said early Sunday. Aides later said he had not decided whether to request the recount.

With all precincts reporting, the secretary of state's office showed Hance with 455,768 votes, or 31.23 percent, Doggett with 454,807 votes, or 31.16 percent, and Krueger with 454,497 votes, or 31.14 percent.

The News Election Service said Hance had received 456,417 to Doggett's 453,848. Krueger was 173 votes behind Doggett at 453,375.

There were some upsets in other state races Saturday, including the District 7 State Board of Education race, in which board chairman Joe Kelly Butler of Houston was defeated by Mary Bishop.

Nine-term Congressman Abraham "Chick" Kazen lost to former Bexar County Judge Albert Bustamante, who said his victory was due to "a coalition of business people, labor people, people from all walks of life." Kazen was the only incumbent congressman to be defeated.

U.S. Rep. Charles Wilson of Lufkin, in what he called the toughest race of his 12-year congressional career, bested four challengers and will face Republican Louis Dugas in November.

After an acrimonious fight, Supreme Court Justice C.L.

Ray won renomination by soundly defeating Fort Worth lawyer Shelby Sharpe.

John Hill, the unsuccessful Democratic gubernatorial candidate in 1978, got the party's nomination for Supreme Court chief justice. By an 81 percent to 15 percent margin, Hill swamped Justice Sears McGee, who charged that Hill was "really running for governor" again, an allegation Hill denied. McGee will keep his seat on the nine-member court.

State Democratic Party officials on Sunday continued to tabulate the results from the more than 6,000 precinct caucuses, the first step in determining the allocation of 169 of Texas' 200 delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

Figures from about 60 percent of the caucuses gave Mondale 21,407 of the precinct delegates elected Saturday for 50 percent. Hart had 11,572 for 27 percent.

Street repair report expected

Pampa city commissioners will hear a progress report concerning the street maintenance program at its regular meeting at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday.

The plan approved earlier by the commission calls for patching work and filling in chuckholes throughout the city, with sealcoating of streets in both north sections of the city.

Lewis Construction Co. of Pampa has already begun repair work on the streets.

Mrs. Margie Gray, Gray County tax assessor-collector, will discuss the possibility of the county office taking over tax collection services for the city.

In other action, the commission will hear a request from representatives of Sawatzky Concrete Building Co. for a variance from driveway and sidewalk construction requirements at 100 and 101 N. Naida. The National Bank of Commerce will request a variance from regulations concerning sign placement on N. Hobart Street.

Kelly Engineering and developers of the Chaumont Addition will present a report concerning construction of service to the addition.

Commissioners will consider three ordinances: second reading of an ordinance to amend Section 14 of the Subdivision Ordinance No. 839 on industrial and commercial subdivisions, second reading of an ordinance amending ordinances on coin-operated machines; and first reading of an ordinance granting an easement to the First Baptist Church in Block 10 of the West End Addition.

Long dry spell hurts West Texas farmers

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — West Texas farmers and ranchers say that a two-year drought has cost them nearly $1 billion and the problem could get worse if the region's rich topsoil continues to erode.

"Out here, we're just sitting on our tractors gripping the steering wheel," Lubbock County Extension Agent Randy Upshaw told the Dallas Times Herald. "And waiting for rain."

Half of Texas' 186,000 farm and ranch families are already in financial trouble after five years of the worst agricultural recession since the 1930s. And more than half of Farmers Home Administration loans in state are considered delinquent.

Agricultural officials said a third dry and barren year lies ahead in western sections of the state and much of South and Central Texas. Another summer of drought could force significant numbers of farmers over the financial edge into bankruptcy, economists said.

Rainfall in April, customarily the state's third wettest month, fell behind normal.

In some cases, only one-fourth of normal precipitation has fallen this year. Dry winds are carrying away millions of acres of topsoil.

"Once you begin forecasting beyond five to seven days, you don't do much better than you would flipping a coin," said George Bomar, a meteorologist with the Texas Department of Water Resources.

Last fall, the drought caused at least $500 million in damage to 30 counties in the Trans Pecos area, which runs south of a line from El Paso to Midland.

Officials said the losses contributed to the state's declining net farm income, which totaled about $800 million last year, compared with $42 billion in 1979.

Fred Lundgren, special assistant to Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, said the drought by now has probably cost West Texas twice its 1983 losses, or about $1 billion.

He said 82 West Texas counties are eligible for federal disaster loans, available in areas where at least one-third of agricultural production was wiped out.

"Farmers are deep into their second year of drought... (and) Texas has had some of the most severe wind damage of any of the Great Plains states," said Claiborn Crain, agriculture coordinator with the Texas Office of State-Federal Relations in Washington, D.C.

The USDA Soil Conservation Service reports that 1.3 million acres of Texas land was damaged by wind erosion in January and February, the most recent months for which figures were available. During 1983, 1.8 million acres were damaged during the entire year.

"We need a good 2- to 3-inch rain to straighten up this area a bit," said James Mitchell, a Lubbock area cotton farmer. "Everybody's hurting and they really need to make a crop."

Southeast pounded by thunderstorms

By The Associated Press
 Violent thunderstorms marched eastward today from the Mississippi Valley to the Atlantic shore after producing tornadoes, high winds, hail and drenching rains that left two people dead, including a woman drowned when her car was swamped in downtown Nashville, Tenn.
 The sweeping line of thundershowers spun off funnel clouds that prompted the National Weather Service to post tornado watches in Arkansas, Missouri, Louisiana, Tennessee and Kentucky.
 "The storm has the strength to produce tornadoes... the forecasters are watching those areas quite closely," weather service spokesman Harry Gordon said today.
 Flash flood warnings were in effect today in parts of Missouri, Arkansas, Kentucky, West Virginia, South Carolina and Tennessee.
 Elsewhere, rain and wet snow blanketed the northern border of the Nebraska Panhandle into southwest South Dakota, with snow falling in the South Dakota Black Hills.

The National Guard was activated overnight in Tennessee in response to flash flooding that closed U.S. 231 and at least three other major roadways. Thunderstorms poured 2½ inches of water on Nashville in a three-hour period Sunday afternoon.
 Storm-induced flooding Sunday killed 85-year-old Euylla-M. Chrismon, who drowned when her car was swamped on U.S. 70 in Nashville. Police found her body in the back seat of her car after water 5 feet high swept over vehicles in Nashville.

 About 120 miles to the west, a McKenzie, Tenn., city employee drowned when he fell in rushing water while trying to clear a culvert of debris.
 Floyd Lee, 39, was sucked through the culvert. His brother-in-law, Gordon Beebe, jumped in to save Lee and was also swept away. Beebe was rescued and taken to McKenzie Hospital where he was listed in satisfactory condition.

Groom school board to meet

GROOM — Junior high and high school students may not have to take annual physicals if trustees of the Groom Independent School District approve a change in the examination policy.
 Groom ISD superintendent Rex Peoples said that in the past, students in grades seven through 12 had to take annual physical examinations for physical education classes. Board members will discuss an option to require the physicals in the seventh and ninth grades during their 8 p.m. Tuesday meeting in the school superintendent's office.

 The board will also discuss what types of summer maintenance will be needed this year and discuss hiring an additional summer maintenance employee. They will discuss annual administrative contracts with the Regional Education Service Center and will hear business reports.

Fund drive launched

ourselves," since the possibility of power failure "is something we face everyday," he added.
 He referred to the February blizzard which resulted in power line failures, causing the radio stations to be off the air for about five hours. Hundreds of citizens called the police station to get information, creating the possibility of loss of telephone lines from an overload.
 The situation could have been alleviated with the use of an emergency power back-up system, he said.
 "If we can get this done, then we've done about all we can do as a community" to provide an effective warning system, Vaughn said.
 But he added the system should not be perceived as infallible, since a tornado could come in the middle of the night, hindering getting warning to area residents. And other factors could interfere despite the best precautions.
 In addition, citizens should realize that for the system to be of benefit to them, they should take some responsibility for themselves, said Donnie Clemmer, public information director for KGRO. The system is no good unless citizens listen to the radio.

 OEM officials and Chamber committee members emphasized area residents should have a battery-operated transistor radio available and kept in working condition.
 The drive has gained the support of the Chamber of Commerce and city and county officials.
 Vaughn stressed the system is not designed strictly as a warning for only Pampa. The OEM operates throughout the county, and the radio stations cover Gray County and other surrounding areas from Groom, White Deer and Skellytown to the west to Wheeler, Canadian, Miami, McLean, Lefors and other areas to the east.
 Chamber Manager Floyd Sackett said, "They (the other towns and residents in the country) are going to be benefactors, too" of the warning system.

 Local radios can contact the surrounding areas better than the television stations from Amarillo, since they are more interested in the area and able to provide more interruptions for weather news. Also, the radio stations can be picked up on transistor radios, while television would be unavailable in a power failure.
 "Pampa's a community of proud citizens," he added. He said he expected many citizens to be willing to see this as a local project, "to take of this ourselves" without government assistance or increased taxes.
 "Pampa's a great town for people to give" for worthwhile projects, Mayor Whatley said.
 The tax-deductible contributions can be mailed to Pampa Emergency Warning System Fund, P.O. Box 1942, Pampa, TX 79065.

Weather focus

REGIONAL FORECASTS
By The Associated Press
 North Texas: Mostly cloudy and cooler with widely scattered thundershowers east this afternoon and early tonight. Clouds decreasing from the west, clearing everywhere but east tonight. ## Settlement is reached in Agent Orange case

NEW YORK (AP) — A tentative settlement has been reached between seven chemical companies and 15,000 Vietnam veterans in a mammoth lawsuit in which the veterans sought to prove injuries from exposure to Agent Orange. Lawyers for both sides said today.
 The settlement was reached as jury selection was to begin in U.S. District Court. The lawyers said the chemical companies have agreed to pay $180 million into special bank accounts for the plaintiffs.
 U.S. District Judge Jack B. Weinstein has yet to approve the settlement, but the attorneys said that the judge is expected to appoint two officers to coordinate the payments, which are expected to amount to $250 million with interest.

 David Dean, the chief attorney for the veterans, said that any of the veterans who had submitted claims will be eligible to receive payments based on the severity of the individual case. He said that unborn offspring of the veterans will also be covered.
 No information was immediately available as to how the payments will be divided among the seven chemical companies.

 R.W. Charlton, public affairs director for Dow Chemical Co., one of the defendants, would not comment on specifics of the settlement but confirmed that one had been reached.
 Dean said the agreement came at 4 a.m. today, after lawyers for both sides worked through the weekend on Weinstein's orders.
 According to terms of the agreement, the chemical companies do not acknowledge any liability for the injuries, which veterans said resulted from exposure to Agent Orange.

Democrats give Hill a new political life

SINGLE MOTHER ADOPTS—Lois Givens combs the hair of her adopted daughter Robin. Miss Givens, 41, adopted the four-year-old in March. (AP Laserphoto)

DALLAS (AP) — Justice C.L. Ray said Democrats renominated him for the Supreme Court because his challenger went too far in the unusually bitter primary campaign for a judicial seat.

"When you start running a negative campaign, you have to be careful. There's an undefined line you can't cross and he crossed it," said Ray.

But Shelby Sharpe of Fort Worth was not apologetic for the acrimonious duel that he credited with generating interest in the Supreme Court race.

"For many reasons, we felt the incumbent judge had to have an active opposition. With our supporters' help, he got just that," said Sharpe, after he congratulated Ray on his victory.

Republicans gave State Board of Education Chairman Joe Kelly Butler a pink slip in his effort to win re-election, but Democrats gave former secretary of state and attorney general John Hill a new political life.

Hill, whose last campaign resulted in a loss to Republican Bill Clements in the 1978 gubernatorial race, got 81 percent of the vote in Saturday's primary to easily defeat Justice Sears McGee.

"I am certainly grateful for the vote of confidence," said Hill. "I hope it represents an expression on the part of the public of confidence in my experience and my platform."

"This is absolutely the highest service I could possibly perform for the people of this state. I want to improve the court system and I will dedicate myself to that task," said Hill, rejecting claims by McGee that his race was just a prelude to another gubernatorial bid.

In November, Hill will face John Bates of Waco, who ran uncontested in the Republican primary. McGee did not step down from his seat to run for chief justice slot left vacant by Jack Pope and will return to the court.

Ray got about 56 percent of the vote to 29 percent for Sharpe and 15 percent for a third candidate, Texas S. Ward of El Paso.

During the campaign, both Ray and Sharpe invoked the name of Don Yarbrough, who was elected to the court in 1976 and later sent to prison for perjury. Most political observers attributed Yarbrough's win to confusion among voters who thought they were voting for another Houston lawyer with the same name.

Ray said if voters weren't careful, "they could wind up with another Don Yarbrough." His campaign administrators said he did not mean to imply that Sharpe might end up in prison, only that Sharpe was an unknown.

Sharpe, meanwhile, used Yarbrough as an example of why he thinks judges should be appointed, not elected. Ray supports election of judges.

Sharpe attacked what he called Ray's "really questionable ethics," including, he said, improper contacts with lawyers with cases pending at the Supreme Court.

In the Republican primary for the state education board place from District 7, controversial chairman

Butler lost to Mary Bishop, who got about 57 percent of the vote. Butler, of Houston, has been a staunch defender of the board, which has come under heavy attack by H. Ross Perot, chairman of the Select Committee on Public Education.

Democrats picked five nominees for the state board. But in races for the court of criminal appeals, the Democrats picked one nominee and sent two other races into runoffs.

Supreme Court Justice Franklin Spears, a Democrat, was unopposed for re-election.

The Court of Criminal Appeals races included a scramble among Democratic candidates for one vacancy, since Justice Wendell Odum did not seek re-election. There were no Republican candidates.

In the Democratic contest, Bill White of San Antonio got 34 percent of the vote to win a place in a runoff election with Thomas B. Thorpe of Dallas, who trailed with 16 percent. Kerry Fitzgerald of Dallas had 14 percent of the vote. George Ellis of Houston had 10 percent. William Phillips had 10 percent. Walter Boyd of Houston 9 percent and Harry Heard of Longview 6 percent.

Justice Bill Davis, who faced three Democratic challengers, will face Roy E. Greenwood of Austin in a runoff for the nomination.

Davis had 39 percent of the vote. Greenwood trailed with 24 percent. George Martinez had 22 percent and Buddy Stevens of Arlington had almost 14 percent. No GOP lawyers entered the race.

Court of Criminal Appeals Justice Sam Houston Clinton won the nomination to seek re-election, getting 69 percent of the vote to 31 percent for his Democratic challenger, State District Judge Oliver Kitzman of Brookshire.

Virgil Mulanax of Gilmer was unopposed for the Republican nomination in that race.

The only contestants in the Railroad Commission race were incumbent Democrat Mack Wallace and Republican John Thomas Henderson of Austin.

In the contested State Board of Education races, incumbent Wayne Frederick was nominated, getting 56 percent of the vote to 44 percent for challenger Bernard Packard in District 2.

Johnnie C. Carpenter won the nomination in District 12, collecting 70 percent of the vote to 30 percent for Glenn Kroh.

Ruthie Jackson beat Jim Hollingsworth in District 24, getting 72 percent of the vote to 28 percent.

Has a tangled, knotted gold chain ever made you feel that it might be easier to toss out the chain instead of tackling the tangle? Close the clasp to prevent the tangle from getting worse. Place the chain on a hard, flat surface, such as a table or desk, and spread the links out. Using pins, very sharp pencils or a pair of tweezers, loosen the knot by gently prying apart the outer edges of the tangle. Untangle the links very carefully and patiently while holding the chain flat on the table with your fingers. Do not lift the chain off the surface to prevent tightening the knot. If the knot does not loosen, try lubricating the links with oil.

Hart campaign could be near end, Texas chairman says

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Gary Hart, the loser in a state his backers said he "needed," has vowed to stay in the Democratic presidential nomination chase to the end, despite an increasing string of losses.

"The issue is not who wins states, but who wins delegates," Hart said Sunday in response to Walter Mondale's strong showing in the Texas caucuses.

With reports complete from about 61 percent of the more than 6,000 Texas precinct caucuses, the Democratic Party said Mondale had drawn 50 percent of the support. Hart had 27 percent and the Rev. Jesse Jackson picked up 16.4 percent. The uncommitted total was 6.5 percent.

In the non-binding Texas Republican presidential primary, President Reagan won 97 percent of the vote to 3 percent uncommitted.

At a Washington news conference, Hart was asked if there was any scenario that would drive him from the race before the Democratic National Convention.

"None," he replied.

But his Texas campaign chairman said the Saturday night defeat in Texas put Hart near the end of the line.

"My own view is that it will be very difficult now for him, having lost Texas, to win the nomination," said U.S. Rep. Martin Frost of Dallas. "This was a real victory, a significant victory by (former) Vice President Mondale."

Hart "clearly needed to win Texas," Frost said. "You can't put any other kind of face on the situation here. This was a state that should have been good for him — a western state where he was right on the issues that affected our state. He didn't win."

Hart's demise could come Tuesday in the Midwest, Frost said. Losses in both Indiana and Ohio would mean "it will be time for the party to unite and be concerned about the fall," he said.

Jim Quackenbush, Mondale's southern strategist, said the Texas caucuses should give Mondale about 161 of the state's 200 delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

Single parent enjoys her role

TEMPLE, Texas (AP) — Most people call Lois Givens "Mother," but 4-year-old Robin now calls her "Mother."

On March 16, Miss Givens legally adopted Robin, her foster daughter for more than two years. Although Miss Givens, 41, has never married, being a foster mother — and now an adoptive mother — is something she recommends to other singles.

"She didn't plan to adopt at first, but things have worked out."

"I had reached the point in my life where I wanted to do something meaningful," she said.

When first approached with the foster-parent idea by a friend who was a social worker, Miss Givens balked.

"But then she (the social worker) told me that 65 percent of all kids now are raised by one parent. I thought I'd try being a foster parent for a year," Miss Givens said. In 1980 she became Bell County's only unmarried foster parent.

Four years later, she adopted Robin, who now celebrates two special days: her birthday on Oct. 31 and her adoption day.

Wearing a crisp blue-and-white ruffled dress, she appeared before the judge at the Bell County courthouse.

"And the judge told me congratulations," Robin said. She also got presents.

Robin was Miss Givens' second foster child. A boy, now 10, lived with her for 3½ years and is now living at a special ranch where he can get help for his learning problems.

Robin had been taken from her natural parents and sent to live with Miss Givens in April 1982. The foster son had been living in the Givens home since 1980. Robin and the boy, although not related by blood, called each other "brother" and "sister," and he still considers the Givens home as his home.

When Robin's natural parents gave up their legal rights, Miss Givens had to make a decision — and Robin going to another family would have been too devastating for both of them.

"By this time we had a good relationship," she said. "I didn't start being a foster mother with the intention to adopt." Miss Givens applied for adoption, and six months of legal work and reference-checking began.

"Actually it wasn't that much of a decision to adopt," Miss Givens said. "I had already invested two years of my life in Robin."

While Robin was a foster child, Department of Human Resources paid $6 daily, "enough to take care of day-care," but now that Robin is legally her daughter, Miss Givens pays for everything.

Robin attends a day-care center while Miss Givens works as director of medical records and quality assurance at Scott and White Memorial Hospital.

Motherhood had forced her to juggle her schedule and priorities. "It's hard to think about not being spontaneous," she said. Miss Givens still has thoughts of "now it's all me who's responsible."

Robin has "changed my whole perspective on things," she said, adding that having children "has lifted me up."

Woman stunt pilot is killed in crash at fair

LA MARQUE, Texas (AP) — Federal Aviation Administration investigators Sunday were trying to determine the cause of a crash in which a woman pilot was killed while performing aerobatic stunts at the Galveston County Fair and Rodeo, police said.

Norma Diane Fray, 34, of Alvin, was killed Saturday when her single-engine plane crashed into a wooded area before she finished a series of spins that were part of her aerobatic routine, police said.

Mrs. Fray's husband, Michael, who was to fly last in the show, was at a crop-dusting airstrip several miles away awaiting his turn when the accident occurred.

La Marque Police Sgt. W. E. Bird said the plane nearly hit electrical wires before it went down about 1,000 yards from the rodeo site.

"I'm just happy it didn't go down over a bunch of people," Bird said, referring to the 200 to 300 spectators at the event.

Because there was no fire and the plane went down in a wooded area, most spectators were not aware of the accident, Bird said. Noise from fair rides blocked the sound of the crash, although some witnesses reported hearing the engine of the plane cough before it went down, he said.

Witnesses said the plane, painted a bright red, white and blue and emblazoned with stars, had just finished a multiple roll, went into a hard left spin at low altitude and hit a tree at about a 45-degree angle.

Jerry Williams, a family friend who saw the accident, said no one could be certain of the cause.

"The first thing I said when I saw she was too low was, 'Oh my God, she's not going to make it. Somebody get a fire bottle,'" he said.

He said Michael Fray rushed to the park after the accident and left with the couple's 17-year-old son without seeing the scene of the crash.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

CBO unfair on 'fairness' issue

Americans should be alert to the statistical con games being played by supposedly non-partisan federal bureaucracies—like the Congressional Budget Office (CBO).

We recently published an analysis of actual 1982 IRS tax collection data showing conclusively that the share of taxes being paid by the rich (over $100,000) had risen 15 percent in the first year of the Reagan tax cut—while that paid by those under $20,000 had dropped 10 percent. This IRS analysis was so contrary to public perceptions, it resulted in a supportive April 11 Wall Street Journal lead editorial. But, in the meantime, on April 3, CBO published a study that seemed to contradict the IRS data used in our and the Journal's columns.

As the New York Times headlined the CBO story, "Study finds poor lost money as rich gained." An accompanying table showed that, while all households had a net gain of $820 from the Reagan tax and budget cut program, those with incomes below $10,000 lost $390, while those with incomes above $80,000 gained $8,270. Readers began a barrage of letters accusing us of "deliberate lying" or worse. Nearly all included clippings of the CBO news story, along with shredded pieces of our column. The problem is: the CBO study is so statistically falwed it constitutes deliberate, partisan disinformation on the part of the CBO. Strong words, but we can prove them.

First, the IRS' analysis dealt only with the tax-cut issue with no discussion of the budget cuts. Secondly, the IRS analysis used only "hard" numbers of actual taxes collected by income class. The CBO study by its own admission used totally "soft" and "projected" numbers based on hypothetical assumptions, and it deliberately ignored the actual change of behavior that the Reagan tax cuts produced in 1982. To show you how important this "omission" was, the IRS data for 1982 showed that, despite the fact that in absolute dollars the tax cuts were obviously worth more to the rich (who pay more taxes to start with) than to the poor, the net effect of lowering tax rates was to lure money out of tax shelters into the productive economy. The number of millionaires (persons with adjusted gross income above $1 million) filing returns jumped from 5,283 in 1981 to 8,203 in 1982, and the taxes they actually paid jumped 42 percent from $4.9 billion in 1981 to $6.9 billion in 1982.

In fact, the IRS data showed that in 1982, despite the fact that the rich had received a 24-percent reduction in the top marginal tax rate on unearned income, from 70 to 50 percent, the actual revenues collected from those with incomes above $100,000 rose 13 percent; the actual revenues collected from those with incomes below $20,000 declined 12 percent.

The CBO study in its own words totally ignored these actual "dynamic" or "incentive" effects: "These revenue estimates (in the CBO report) are static estimates; they are based on the somewhat arbitrary assumption that such changes in the tax codes (tax cuts) do not have significant effects on general taxpayer behavior, or otherwise in the economy at large...The assumptions limit the value of these revenue estimates for assessing the ultimate effect of such fiscal policy initiatives."

In fact, they make this study worthless. For the layman, the CBO is admitting that its entire study was not based on actual history of what happened in 1982, or under prior 1963-65 broad-based tax cuts, but on a totally theoretical analysis of what the law would produce. When we confronted the CBI study's author, Paul Cullinan, he readily admitted, "Yes, this is essentially a hypothetical analysis. Since we were projecting data into the future, we, of course, had no hard data to work with."

Then we asked, "But, you must have known what the 1982 actual IRS data showed, didn't you?"

"Yes, we did," he admitted, somewhat grudgingly. Yet, on page 3 of his report, he writes, "Data that would permit analysis of these economic (incentive) benefits do not exist." In fact, they do.

Cullinan also readily admitted that the actual 1982 data "differed substantially" from the conclusions of his CBO study. So we asked, "Why didn't you include in your report the actual 1982 IRS data, and state up front that the actual experience was different from what your hypothetical study showed?" Cullinan said he didn't think it would be appropriate to mix the IRS analysis with the CBO projection. "We just didn't consider it. There was no basis for comparison."

What makes this egregious is that in the CBO analysis, we find that CBO economists assumed that the 1982 tax cut would make no difference in the distribution of the tax burden. Since this assumption is so completely and devastatingly destroyed by the actual IRS data, the whole CBO study was mere statistical grabage and should never have been released.

For too long CBO has been used by the Democrats for partisan politics. Under its first director, liberal Alice Rivlin, it routinely attacked every conservative economic analysis. This study proves the need for a serious housecleaning of the remnants of Rivlin's leftover politicans.

Brookes writes a column on economics for the Boston Globe.

How you're paying for birth control

How are your tax dollars being spent?

Would you believe to provide free contraceptives to Peace Corps volunteers—because it is more cost-effective than flying pregnant volunteers home for convenience abortions?

This report comes courtesy of The Washington Times, which says the agency has spent more than $300,000 to help more than 200 pregnant volunteers obtain abortions during the past three years. Peace Corps policy is to pay air fare and per diem expenses of volunteers seeking abortions after becoming pregnant overseas.

The agency's new emphasis on preventing unwanted pregnancies before they start is documented in a recent Peace Corps directive. In addition to providing birth control pills and devices free of charge, the corps also provides family-planning advice and training in the use of contraceptives.

The directive, issued by Peace Corps Director Loret Ruppe, instructs nurses overseas to "provide counseling to all pregnant volunteers who elected to return to the U.S. for abortions to ensure they have the opportunity to review all of their options, including adoption."

After their abortions, volunteers are given "additional training in family planning and contraception," and nurses are instructed to "ensure that these volunteers have selected a birth control method, are trained in its use, and provided with contraceptives," the directive stated.

Is there no limit to the beneficence of government? Is there nothing for which the individual himself, or herself, is to be responsible?

Gosh. What a marvelous institution is government. A chicken in every pot—and birth control too.

'War Eagle' tie was appropriate

Tom first met blue-eyed Mary nearly 40 years ago. They were both students from Auburn University.

They eventually married and started a family. Two daughters came, then a son, and then another daughter.

The family settled in a small Alabama town where Tom began a successful business. Mary took care of the kids. She never finished her work toward a degree at Auburn. Maybe one day, when the kids were grown, she could go back to school.

Three of Tom and Mary's children wound up getting degrees from Auburn, and the family became totally devoted to the school, especially its football program.

Mary might have been the biggest War Eagle fan in the entire family. She snipped headlines about her beloved team out of the papers and taped them to her refrigerator.

Auburn had been down a few years, but the War Eagles came back last season, won the Southeastern Conference championship and beat Michigan in the Sugar Bowl.

Mary was looking forward to next year when Auburn might even win a national championship.

Meanwhile, the kids grew up and all moved out, and Mary, already busy in the community with three Girl Scout troops under her wing at once, decided to go back to school.

I talked to her a few weeks back. "School's so hard when you get as old as I am," she said with a laugh.

But she wanted that degree. She was deep into her studies at a local Alabama college, competing with students half her age.

Her kids were proud of her. Her grades were high.

Then it came on so suddenly. One day, Mary was bounding with energy and enthusiasm. The next day she was in a hospital with a heart attack. She was only 57.

The family was concerned, but the doctors first said that after possible surgery, she likely would recover.

But Mary didn't recover. After a week in the hospital, she died.

I am a friend of the family. I went to the funeral. The family, including two grandchildren, sat down in the front of the church, holding each other against their grief.

The preacher talked about how much Mary loved her family, but how she also was her own person.

"Completing her education was so important to her," he said.

He also talked about Mary's love for one particular institution.

"She was fanatical," said the preacher, in a kind way, and the family even broke into smiles when they remembered their mother's loyalty to Auburn.

Later, when the family and friends went back home, I noticed Mary's refrigerator was covered with clippings from Auburn's successful 1983 season.

One other thing I noticed, too. When they rolled Mary's casket out of the church, the family walked out behind it. Tom, her husband, held to one of his daughters who was crying.

I couldn't help but notice the tie he had chose to wear to his wife's funeral. It was a big tie, bright orange. On the front, in blue script, were the words, "War Eagle."

"At first," one of the children would tell me later, "we couldn't believe Daddy was wearing his War Eagle tie to Mama's funeral. But, then, it just sort of made sense somehow." Yes, it did. Yes it did.

The well-off paid most taxes

With April behind us, the IRS is sorting through the last of the estimated 96-million income tax returns Americans filed for 1983. The take for the U.S. treasury is an estimated $300 billion—hardly what you'd call pocket change.

And contrary to what the liberal champions of the "oppressed" repeatedly tell us, the wealthy—with all their so-called tax avoidance schemes—were struck with the lion's share of the tax bill.

Recent analyses by U.S. News & World Report and Boston economic analyst Warren Brookes show that the relatively few wealthy people in the U.S. pay the bulk of all taxes—both as a percentage of income and in real dollars. And, Brookes has shown, cuts in the tax rate actually increase the amount paid by those in the upper-income brackets.

For instance, last year, some 1.5-million taxpayers who earned over $75,000 filed tax returns for 1982. Yet, those 1.5-million taxpayers paid 23 percent of the total revenue collected by the IRS. In the middle-income brackets, those earning $20,000 to $75,000—34-million taxpayers, paid 62 percent of the revenue collected.

The dollar figures are even more revealing. In real terms, the one-and-a-half million upper-income taxpayers paid $63.8 billion in taxes. The approximately 59-million taxpayers earning less than $20,000 a year, on the other hand, paid less than $42 billion in taxes. Moreover, the roughly 8,200 millionaires who filed in 1983 handed over as much to the feds as did the 34-million wage earners who earned less than $10,000. Is that catering to the rich?

Tax-and-spend liberals like to cite data showing that the U.S. has the second lowest tax rate of any industrial nation in the world, second only to Japan. With a 31-percent average tax burden (as a share of total domestic output), the U.S. looks pretty attractive to those paying 44 percent in France, 40 percent in Britain, and 37 percent in West Germany.

Unfortunately, these figures only take federal taxes into consideration. When one includes city, county and state income taxes, as well as sales and excise taxes, we find that U.S. working people face one of the highest tax burdens in the world. And the wealthier one is the more one pays.

Feulner is president of The Heritage Foundation, a Washington-based conservative think tank.

Woman's Health

How safe is ultrasound?

By Luella Klein, M.D.,
President, The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists

Recently, there has been a lot of attention focused on the use of ultrasound during pregnancy. A few months ago, a group of leading experts on ultrasound decided that after 25 years of use in this country, there was no scientific evidence that ultrasound harms either the mother or the fetus.

Before ultrasound was invented, doctors were forced to use x-rays if they needed to see what was happening with the developing fetus. Now, physicians can use high frequency sound waves to take a moving picture of the fetus in the womb to help them and you learn a tremendous amount about the health of your unborn child. Since medical procedures are not done routinely unless there is some benefit, the panel of experts found no reason to screen all pregnant women routinely with ultrasound.

We use ultrasound to determine the age and size of the fetus, if it is growing and developing on schedule, and to see if there is more than one. Ultrasound can be used from early in pregnancy to diagnose problems in the mother or fetus into labor to check the baby's well-being and position. It is used during and after childbirth to monitor the placenta.

If you have some medical condition that may or may not be related to pregnancy, such as diabetes or high blood pressure, your doctor may use ultrasound to make sure that your baby's development is not being affected. Certain tests during pregnancy, such as amniocentesis for birth defects, are made safer by the use of ultrasound.

However, if you are under 35, healthy with no continuing medical problems, and having a normal pregnancy, your doctor may not feel that an ultrasound is necessary. Ultrasound should not be performed just to get a "picture" of the baby nor to determine the baby's sex.

The ultrasound examination is simple and painless. You will be asked to drink fluids before the examination because a full bladder helps the operator locate the other organs. Pressure from your full bladder should be the only discomfort you feel.

As your abdomen will be exposed during the procedure, you might want to wear a two-piece outfit. You will lie down on an examining table, and the operator will put some oil or lubricating jelly on your skin to let the scanner move more smoothly across your stomach. As the scanner is moved up and down and back and forth across your abdomen, images will show up on a television-like screen. Although the black and white images may seem quite fuzzy to you, the operator can point out such details as outline of a head or a limb.

If you have any concerns about the safety of ultrasound, you should discuss them with your physician. Be reassured, however, that in almost 25 years of use, ultrasound has not been known to harm any mothers or children.

Single, free copies of "Ultrasound Exams in OB-GYN" are available by sending a stamped, self-addressed, business-size envelope along with the name of the booklet to: The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, Resource Center, 600 Maryland Ave., SW, Washington, D.C., 20024.

Gena on Genealogy

Family registry keeps in touch

Editor's note: Because of a delay in the mail, we did not receive Gena's column in time to be published last Friday. We are running that column today, and will continue to run her columns on Friday as usual. We regret any inconvenience to our readers.

By GENA WALLS

Are you willing to share genealogical information with other enthusiasts? Are you actively doing research and would like another source of possible material? If the answer to these questions is "yes", you will be interested in a new service of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. The church's genealogical department has begun a new "Family Registry" service to help genealogists coordinate their efforts.

The Family Registry is a no-cost way to find out what other genealogists are doing and to let others know about your own research. In this way, time and expense can be saved by sharing and coordinating the work and often leads to more accurate records.

The service is free; however, if you register you are expected to respond to inquiries you receive and to coordinate research when possible. When enough material is received microfiche copies of the data and an index of the registry will be made available at the church libraries.

Individuals may write the main library in Salt Lake City, Utah, with requests for information from the registry. The inquiry is also free. A registration form may be obtained by writing: Genealogical Department - Family Registry, Fourth Floor, West Wing, 50 E. North Temple Street, Salt Lake City, Utah, 84150. Send your information in as soon as possible so it can be included in the filming now and will probably be released by mid-year.

Summer vacations are a good time to check court house records for vital statistics. Many people look for marriages and wills but forget to check the land records. Often this has been the source of proof of parentage and where the person was from. It might be the move prior to this particular purchase if not the birth place and can give clues as to what direction to take in order to continue. Make the trip complete by checking with the local library and or genealogical - historical society for other researchers on the same lineage. If you have genealogical queries or information about family reunions or other family items to pass on you can write to Gena at Rt. 2, Box 505, Lot 26, Gonzales, La., 70737.

Dear Abby

Mother's young lover one son too many

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 29-year-old divorced mother of two boys. I own my own home and am presently involved with a 20-year-old man. We've been living together for two years. It was my idea that he move in. He wanted to marry me, but I hesitated because of one failed marriage.

He's very intelligent, responsible for his age and is great with my kids, but he shows his immaturity by constantly flirting and collecting girls' phone numbers.

Last week I wasn't feeling very well so I came home early. I let myself in, and when I went into our bedroom I found him in bed with a young girl. (Both our pictures had been turned facedown on the dresser!) The girl said she was sorry — she didn't know he was "married" and she had just met him an hour ago! I told him to pack his clothes and get out.

He's been gone a week and wants to come back. This is not the first time something like this has happened. He lies and can't be trusted. Do you think the difference in our ages has anything to do with this? I miss him. Should I take him back? He's good in bed.

CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: He should be good in bed. He's probably had a lot of practice. I think the difference in your ages has a lot to do with it. He's still a little boy who needs mothering. You need a man, not another son. Don't let him come back. He's using you.

***

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 33-year-old single woman who has chosen to remain childless even if I decide to marry.

Needless to say, many people (including my mom) make me feel guilty about my decision. They say that one day when I'm old and alone, I will regret not having children and grandchildren.

Sorry, I just can't buy that line of thinking. How can I shut people up when they start harping on this subject? It's beginning to get on my nerves.

NO KIDS, THANK YOU

DEAR NO KIDS: First, nobody can make you feel guilty. If you feel guilty, it's because you choose to. You can't shut people up, but you can abruptly change the subject, tune the bores out or absent yourself from their company.

***

DEAR ABBY: "Mrs. D., Libertyville, Ill.," wrote: "I've enjoyed your column for many years. It was so witty, with just the right answers to some very real problems. Will you please return to those days and skip all the lectures and sermons you've been running of late? Also, please let the Food and Drug Administration buy space in the newspapers and medical journals to warn people about combining drugs with certain foods."

Abby, I think Mrs. D. is out of line. Be that as it may, when Fiorello La Guardia was mayor of New York City, he hung above his desk at City Hall this pronouncement by Abraham Lincoln:

"If I were to try to read, much less answer, all the attacks made on me, this shop might as well be closed for any other business. I do the very best I know how — the very best I can, and I mean to keep doing so until the end. If the end brings me out all right, what is said against me won't amount to anything. If the end brings me out wrong, 10 angels swearing I was right would make no difference."

Children and music get together early

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — When is a child ready to take up the formal study of a musical instrument? "There's no correct chronological age," says Richard Grunow, assistant professor of music education at the University of Rochester's Eastman School of Music.

But, Grunow adds, there is a correct "musical age" — when a child is able to sing in tune and maintain a consistent tempo with his body. Before that stage is reached, Grunow urges parents "to sing with their children and expose them to a wide variety of music." Most children are ready to study an instrument by fourth or fifth grade and often much earlier.

NUMB ARMS, LEGS

Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others. Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

- (1) Paresthesias (see above)
- (2) Headaches
- (3) Painful joints
- (4) Numbness in the arms or hands
- (5) Loss of sleep
- (6) Stiffness in the neck
- (7) Pain between the shoulders
- (8) Stiffness of pain in lower back
- (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals...call for in-Depth consultation in Layman's terms.

Several interesting proposals for joint ventures may be brought to you this coming year. Their chances for success will depend upon the caliber of persons involved.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Try to be unbiased when dealing with persons of whom you're not too fond. Spiteful actions on your part will boomerang. The Matchmaker wheel reveals your compatibility to all signs, as well as showing you to which signs you are best suited romantically. Get yours by mailing $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Tasks you usually handle rather easily could prove difficult today, especially if you're working in conjunction with ineffective aides.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Spending to impress acquaintances is foolish today. Don't rush to pick up the check if everyone has already agreed to pay for his or her share.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Although your motives are laudable regarding your objectives for today, you must be careful that the tactics you use aren't self-defeating.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be careful today that you don't say things out of anger that you shouldn't. If you do, you could have great difficulty removing your foot from your mouth.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be both prudent and guarded in money matters today, especially if you're doing business with persons in whom you don't have complete faith.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your pride is your Achilles' heel today. Don't treat situations where others only mildly disagree with you as serious affronts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're the type who usually shows an eagerness to help others. Today, uncharacteristically, you could turn your back on those who need you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Beware of tendencies to split hairs today for others, as well as for yourself. This could cause serious complications if something of value is at stake.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) To be effective today, you must be single-minded. If you attempt one thing while your thoughts are on another, you're apt to fail.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You're not likely to be an efficient worker today if you have persons peering over your shoulder. Try to do your job free from supervision.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be patient in your financial and commercial affairs today. If you take erratic action to spur things, it could be more detrimental than helpful.

Rookie mistake hurts Dallas chances

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

With the score tied and Dallas controlling the ball in the final seconds, Mavericks Coach Dick Motta looked on in dismay at what was happening in front of him.

A golden opportunity to win the game and deadlock the best-of-seven National Basketball Association playoff series with the Los Angeles Lakers was dribbled away by rookie guard Derek Harper, who thought the Mavericks were ahead. Instead, the game went into overtime and the Lakers took a 3-1 series lead with a 122-115 victory Sunday.

"When I saw Derek backing up it hit me that he doesn't know the score or the time," Motta said. "I wanted to tackle him. It was just unfortunate. I feel sorry for him."

"I thought we were ahead 109-108," said a crestfallen Harper. "It was a mistake. I was upset about it. I feel bad but I'll get over it."

"I always preach time and score," added Motta. "It's a heavy burden and an unfortunate thing to happen to a young player like that."

"I thought he had lost his mind," Los Angeles center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar said of Harper.

In other playoff games Sunday, Phoenix took a 3-1 lead over Utah with a 111-110 overtime victory and New York beat Boston 118-113 to even their series 2-2. New Jersey beat Milwaukee 106-99 Saturday for a 2-2 deadlock in their second-round matchup.

The Lakers were thrilled to get out of Dallas with a split of the two games and a commanding lead in the series.

"Every time we play at Reunion, it's a barnburner," Coach Pat Riley said of the Mavericks' home arena. "I can only think of one game here in three years where we didn't go into overtime or the final buzzer. We'd like to close it out (in Game 5) Tuesday. This team is very dangerous."

"It's very tough down here and we're happy to go home," added Earvin "Magic" Johnson, who had 14 points and 14 assists for the Lakers.

Bob McAdoo came off the bench to contribute two steals and six points in overtime as the Lakers outscored Dallas 14-7.

Abdul-Jabbar was high for the Lakers with 33 points, which pushed him past John Havlicek and into second place in NBA playoff scoring.

Knicks 118, Celtics 113

Bernard King scored 43 points, his fifth time over the 40-point mark in nine playoff games, to lift New York to its second home playoff victory after two losses in Boston.

King hit 17 of 25 shots from the floor and was a royal thorn in the Celtics' side all day, scoring 14, seven, 11 and 11 points in each successive quarter. In the second period, he sat out five minutes because of foul trouble.

Tigers come off ropes to get past Cleveland

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

For a while, it looked as if the Cleveland Indians had the Detroit Tigers on the ropes.

The way the Tigers are playing this year, however, you can't count them out of any game.

Losing by five runs midway through Sunday's game, and trailing 5-1 going into the eighth inning, the Tigers rallied to tie it. Four innings later, they pulled out a 6-5, 12-inning victory to stretch their 1984 road record to an incredible 11-0.

"I can't say it was inevitable, but once we got the adrenalin flowing, we knew we had a good chance," said Dave Bergman, who doubled and scored the winning run in the 12th.

The victory improved the American League East leaders' record to 22-4, best in the major leagues.

In other AL action, Toronto edged Kansas City 2-1; Boston turned back Chicago 3-1; Minnesota defeated Oakland 4-3; New York whipped Milwaukee 8-4 in 10 innings; Baltimore stopped Texas 6-1 and Seattle beat California 3-1.

Bergman's sinking line drive leading off the 12th inning hit off the glove of Cleveland left fielder Otis Nixon and bounded away, allowing Bergman to reach second.

Tom Brookens sacrificed a hit to third, and Lou Whitaker then stroked a game-winning single to center, making a loser of Cleveland's fifth pitcher, Ernie Camacho, 0-2.

Bergman, who was battling the flu, said he was unsure when he hit the ball whether or not it would fall in.

"Once you hit a ball, you can't guide it," he said. "I was just lucky the ball fell in and I got to second base."

Aurelio Lopez, 3-0, was the winner, pitching two scoreless innings.

Cleveland starter Bert Blyleven pitched 7 1/3 innings and struck out seven to give him 2,542 strikeouts for his career, moving him into the 15th spot on the all-time list, 39 behind Bob Feller.

Orlando 6, Rangers 1
Cal Ripken, Jr., hit for the cycle and Mike Boddicker pitched a five-hitter as Baltimore defeated Texas at Arlington Stadium.

Boddicker, 2-3, pitched his second complete game of the season while Frank Tanana, 2-4, took the loss.

Ripken tripled in the third inning, singled in the fifth, doubled in the seventh and homered in the ninth, his ninth of the year. The Orioles' shortstop knocked in two runs and scored twice in his 4-for-5 performance.

Blue Jays 2, Royals 1

Cliff Johnson's tie-breaking single in the ninth inning scored Jesse Barfield from second and lifted Toronto over Kansas City. Barfield started the ninth with a double high off the left field wall at Toronto's Exhibition Stadium against Kansas City starter Larry Gura, 4-1.

The Blue Jays had taken a 1-0 lead on Alfredo Griffin's RBI triple in the fifth, but the Royals tied it in the seventh on Steve Balboni's run-producing double.

Yankees 8, Brewers 4

In Milwaukee, Andre Robertson's tie-breaking double triggered a four-run uprising in the 10th inning as New York beat Milwaukee and snapped a five-game losing streak.

Steve Kemp led off the 10th with a double off reliever Pete Ladd, 2-1. One out later, Robertson doubled to knock in Kemp, snapping a 4-4 tie, and Willie Randolph followed with an RBI single.

Another Yankee run scored on an error by center fielder Bobby Clark, and Ken Griffey singled in the fourth run of the inning, capping a 20-hit Yankee attack.

Padres' hurler makes foes ill

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Eric Show is sick, and it's contagious.

He's making the San Diego Padres' opponents sick, too. Show, fighting a weeklong bout with a flu virus, became the National League's first five-game winner Sunday, working seven innings and driving in two runs as San Diego beat the Chicago Cubs 8-5.

"I came down with it before my last start, and I've really been feeling bad," Show said. "I wasn't real strong."

Show's previous start came last Tuesday in a 3-2 victory over Atlanta. The Padres right-hander has won three in a row, sustaining his last loss, 8-2, on April 20 to the Los Angeles Dodgers' Fernando Valenzuela.

Show allowed six hits, walked three and struck out three before he left for a pinch hitter in the eighth. Rich Gossage pitched the final two innings as the Padres ended a three-game losing streak.

Leon Durham's two-run homer gave the Cubs a first-inning lead. But Show singled home two runs in the second, and the Padres scored three more in the third with the help of a wild pitch by Dick Ruthven and an error by Cub third baseman Richie Hebner.

Alan Wiggins added a pair of RBI with an eighth-inning single.

"Durham was my only real trouble," Show said. "He's hot, and when he's hot, he'll murder your mistakes and get hits on your good pitches. I threw him a slider that didn't break in the first inning."

Elsewhere, Houston clobbered New York 10-1. Cincinnati defeated Philadelphia 5-3 and San Francisco edged St. Louis 3-2. In a pair of doubleheaders, Atlanta swept Montreal, 2-0 and 9-8, and Los Angeles split with Pittsburgh, winning the opener 6-4 in 10 innings and losing the nightcap 2-1.

Astros 10, Mets 1

The Astros scored eight runs in the third inning as an anticipated strikeout duel between Nolan Ryan and Mets rookie Dwight Gooden fizzled early. Ryan pitched his first complete game, a six-hitter, but Gooden lasted only 2 1/3 innings after giving up eight runs on six hits.

Phil Garner and Mark Bailey had two RBI each in the big inning, and Craig Reynolds and Jerry Mumphrey added two RBI apiece in the game. Reynolds had three hits, including a double.

Ryan, 2-2, struck out seven and walked two. Gooden, 2-2, had struck out 10 men in seven innings in each of his previous two starts.

"Gooden's got good stuff," Ryan said, "but today he was having trouble with his control."

Reds 5, Phillies 3

Dave Parker drove in two runs, including one with a broken-bat single that snapped a 3-3 tie in the eighth inning, enabling Cincinnati to beat Philadelphia. Parker's second RBI scored Gary Redus, who had singled, stole second and moved to third on a passed ball. Redus has 14 stolen bases in 14 attempts.

Giants 3, Cardinals 2

Dusty Baker's seventh-inning triple drove in the winning run as the Giants swept the Cardinals in St. Louis for the first time since 1966. Jack Clark, who had homered and hit a sacrifice fly, started the seventh with a single and scored from first on Baker's hit.

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Cale Yarborough, running out of gas, charged past Harry Gant on the last lap and held off the second-place car by one car length to win Sunday's Winston 500 Grand National stock car race.

FLOWERY BRANCH, Ga. (AP) — Darin Braasfield won the Dier Coke Trans Am in a Sports Car Club of America race at Road Atlanta Sunday and his DeAtley Chevrolet teammate David Hobbs came in third.

But a third member of the DeAtley team, Willy Ribbs, resigned before the race after getting in a fight with the eventual second-place finisher, Bob Lokenberg.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) —

Top-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd easily defeated No. 2 seed Andrea Jaeger 6-3, 6-0 to win the South African Women's Open Tennis Tournament Sunday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Danie Visser of South Africa raced through Nigeria's Ndaka Odior 4-0, 4-3 Sunday to open the $500,000 Mercedes Tournament of Champions at the famed West Side Tennis Club in Forest Hills.

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — Tom Watson shot a five-under-par 67 and scored a five-stroke victory Sunday in the MONY Tournament of Champions.

Bruce Lietzke claimed second with a 68 for 279. It was another three shots back to Steve Baltesteros of Spain.

Giant oil field is discovered off Alaskan coast, Shell says

HOUSTON (AP) — Shell Oil Co. has found a giant oil field in the Beaufort Sea that company officials say is one of the country's most promising oil prospects.

The Seal Island prospect located off the Alaskan coast contains at least enough oil for 100 million barrels a day, company officials said, qualifying it as what industry experts term a "giant" field.

The discovery well is located in the Beaufort Sea, 50 miles east of a dry hole drilled on the Mukluk prospect and five miles off the northern coast of Alaska, officials told the Houston Chronicle in an article published Sunday.

The prospect is the first Beaufort Sea discovery to be declared commercial, a term used in the industry to refer to a field that can be drilled profitably at current market prices.

Industry experts consider the Beaufort Sea one of the most promising oil and gas exploration frontiers in the country.

Only one-half of 1 percent of 40,000 wells drilled during the American oil industry's 125-year history are what experts call giants, fields that contain the equivalent of at least 100 million barrels of recoverable oil or natural gas.

The field is located about 12 miles northwest of the Prudhoe Bay oil field, the largest oil field in the nation and one of the world's 10 largest.

R.H. Howard, general manager of Shell's

Rocky Mountain and Pacific divisions, said he doesn't expect the Seal Island prospect to match Prudhoe Bay's holdings.

The field also underlies leases owned by Amoco Production Co., Amerada Hess Corp. and Texas Eastern Exploration Co.

Howard said production may begin in eight to 10 years, but declined to estimate the cost of developing the find.

Expenses for the discovery well total $23 million so far, company officials said. Other exploratory costs, including $32 million to build a gravel island and $122.6 million to lease eight blocks.

Initial tests by Shell showed oil flowing at rates between 600 and 5,000 barrels a day.

M.C. Forrest, exploration manager for Shell's Pacific frontier division, said it's "very rare" to drill a well that flows 5,000 barrels of oil a day.

"We know we have a good well," Forrest said. "This is the best well I have ever drilled, a world-class well. We don't know yet if it's a world-class field."

Seal Island is 12 miles northwest of the TransAlaska Pipeline System's first pump station, but the pipeline needed to connect it to the system must be built in waters that are covered by ice much of the year.

The gravel island was built in late 1981 and early 1982 using 700,000 cubic yards of gravel transported over a nine-foot thick ice road. About one-fourth of the 12.4 mile road lay on ice floating over water.

The presidency has changed

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — If Harry Truman were in the White House in 1984 instead of in 1948, would he be the same kind of president?

An interesting question to ponder on the 100th anniversary of Truman's birth, Tuesday, May 8.

Somehow, the presidency has changed vastly since it fell unexpectedly on the vice president on April 12, 1945, like "two planets and the whole constellation."

The huge White House bureaucracy wasn't there in Truman's time.

"The Buck Stops Here," said the sign on his desk. It had no place else to go. The presidency pretty much started and stopped with him. When he wanted something done, he told the appropriate Cabinet secretary to do it.

Those days, the presidency wasn't an institution, churning up option papers for the chairman of the board.

It was a man, sitting behind a desk, at work.

He read from dawn and into the night. He saw a parade of visitors. In and out of his office they streamed. He used people to learn what was going on. He picked their brains. He wanted his people to fight issues out in front of him, then he made the decision.

Memos in the Truman Library on the minutiae of government still bear HST's hand-written margin notes, showing he read them.

When Truman was president, he used to give reporters his own briefings on the federal budgets he sent to Congress.

"He knew the workings of the government intimately," says Monte Poen, a historian at Northern Arizona University. "He knew the budget of the United States practically by heart."

When Gerald R. Ford was president, he had to be a "priest shortage" burden churches.

DALLAS (AP) — The number of Catholics has increased in recent years, but the number of priests has not and that is putting a burden on Texas priests, many of whom rely on volunteers and deacons to help them carry on their work.

"Usually I'm expected to be in three or four places at any time, and people don't realize the time constraints," said the Rev. Donald Zimmerman, pastor of St. Monica's Catholic Church in Dallas.

Zimmerman, 37, has discovered that fewer young men are joining the seminary, while the number of Catholics is increasing.

Nationwide, the Catholic population rose from 47.9 million in 1970 to 52.1 million in 1983 while the number of priests dropped from 59,192 to 57,870.

The Southwest seems to be one of the hardest hit as Catholics from the north join immigrants from Mexico to swell the population, the Dallas Times Herald reported Sunday.

In Texas, where the Catholic population jumped more than 300,000 between 1980 and 1981, the typical priest serves 65 percent more people than the national average of one priest to every 900 parishioners.

Peace march is canceled

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanon's first major peace march was canceled by Christian and Moslem organizers who feared attacks by militiamen.

Instead of the thousands expected to rally, a single teen-age boy stood in the combat zone with a misspelled sign reading "Peace Now."

Despite the setback to the peace movement, a compromise reportedly was developing to break a deadlock over forming a coalition Cabinet to seek an end to the civil war. An aide to Nabih Berri said Sunday the Shiite Moslem leader "responded positively" to talks with Prime Minister Rashid Karami and might agree to join the new government.

Berri, leader of the main Shiite militia, has refused to take a post Karami offered him in the 10-member Cabinet announced last week.

The marchers intended to gather Sunday at the "green line" which separates Christian east Beirut from the mostly Moslem west.

They planned to uncover a marble plaque saying "No to War. Yes to Life."

SOUTH SEAS GREETING—Pope John Paul II is presented a shell necklace by a tattooed tribeswoman on his arrival in Port Moresby Monday afternoon.

Pope at Port Moresby

PORT MORESBY, Papua New Guinea (AP) — Pope John Paul II landed in this South Pacific capital city today and was greeted by tribal dancers, 5,000 faithful and a bagpipe band.

The pontiff stepped down from the papal DC-10 and kissed the ground as a 21-gun salute boomed over the airport, a former World War II fighter base. The band played the Vatican and Papua New Guinea anthems.

Beside the plane, dancers wearing feathers and pig tusks chanted a traditional welcome as drumbeats sounded.

After greeting Prime Minister Michael Somare and Papua New Guinea's governor-general, Sir Kingsford Dibela, the pontiff made a short speech in English and repeated it in Motu and Pidgin, the two most common languages in this diverse Melanesian society.

He told the crowd in front of the terminal in the humid, overcast late afternoon that he had been "nurturing in my heart a particular desire" to visit this island, a former colony at various times of Britain, Germany and Australia. Roman Catholics are the religious largest group in Papua New Guinea, comprising one-third of the 3 million inhabitants.

After his address, the pope walked in front of the cheering, waving crowd. Four children presented him with a garland of tropical flowers.

The pope arrived from Seoul, South Korea, where a youth brandishing a toy pistol caused an assassination scare Sunday by charging at his motorcade. The youth was quickly apprehended and the pope was not aware of the incident when it occurred.

Police identified the man as Lee Joon-kyu, 23, a student at a Seoul university, and said he had a three-year history of mental instability. He was taken to a hospital, placed under police guard and scheduled to undergo psychiatric examination, police said.

Police Supt. Choi Jae-sam quoted Lee as saying he wanted to "surprise the pope for the sake of fun" and that he "could not understand what all the fuss is about."

Later in Seoul, the pope canonized 103 martyrs, including Korea's first saints, as 800,000 people watched. The canonization of 93 Korean and 10 French martyrs was the first such ceremony outside the Vatican since the 13th century.

The Vatican said the pope intended it as a "personal tribute" to the world's fastest growing Roman Catholic church. The church, which has been gaining members at an annual rate of nearly 10 percent for three decades, has 1.7 million adherents among South Korea's 40 million people.

The pope will visit the neighboring Solomon Islands on Wednesday, and that country has virtually sealed off its borders in preparation for the visit. All but the Vatican press corps are barred from entering the country to cover the pope's activities.

The pope leaves for Bangkok Thursday for the next stop on his 11-day Asia pilgrimage.

Different points of view

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — With million-dollar incomes now common among corporate chief executives, a furor has developed on the factory floor, where workers ask whether the old boy is really worth it.

And some in the executive suite are wondering the same thing. A great many of them are today asking the very same questions as those on the factory floor. And some have been asking them for years.

There are, as always, at least two sides and two million opinions in the controversy, but one of the relatively unpublicized viewpoints has been that of other officials in the executive suite who think like factory workers.

More than a decade ago, for example, Courtney Brown, a retired educator, expressed his distress over what he considered excessive top-level incomes, which then were "only" in the mid-six figures.

Much of his concern was about the impact such high dollar figures had on the ordinary working person who, he said, could only be demoralized by the contrast with his or her own condition.

At the time, Brown sat on at least four blue-chip corporate boards.

More recently, the former president of a large publishing company, who asked to remain anonymous, expressed his own concern, not so much at the size of salaries but of the bonuses that accompanied them.

Many bonuses, he said, are related to improvements in shareholder equity or stock price. And, he continued, "it is very unlikely that one person, even a chief executive, could make immediate and substantial changes in either."

In fact, he contended, it frequently happens that a chief executive officer, rather than being the catalyst of an improvement, is the beneficiary of his predecessor's hard work or the fickleness of the economic cycle.

Most executives, however, seem reluctant to go on record with their questions. And some even decline to use their names in discussing the issue.

One who does offer his name is J.B. Fuqua, head of Fuqua Industries, whose 1983 income reached $2.1 million — $600,000 of which he declined to take — as the result of bonuses related to shareholder equity and stock price.

Panamanian candidates claiming slim leads

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Panamanians held their first direct presidential election in 16 years, choosing between a military-backed economist and an ex-president ousted three times by the armed forces. Both claimed today to have slim leads.

Arnulfo Arias Madrid, 82, candidate of a coalition led by his own Authentic Panamanian Party and by Christian Democrats, was matched Sunday against Nicolas Ardito-Barietta, 45, an economist supported by the official Revolutionary Democratic Party and the military.

Election officials declared a recess late Sunday night without counting any votes. They said they would resume their activities this morning and expected to have official results by late today.

Both Arias and Ardito-Barietta said their own unofficial tallying showed them narrowly ahead.

Each candidate is considered friendly to the United States, which has more than 9,000 military personnel here, and each has pledged not to change the status of U.S. armed forces installations.

There were no reports of violence in Sunday's balloting. Election officials had said they expected a turnout of between 700,000 and 900,000 voters.

Arias, a fierce critic of the military, has been ousted by the military each of the three times he was elected to the presidency. The last time, in 1968, he was in office only 11 days before the military toppled him.
