By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Pampa continued to show an increase in its local sales for the year as measured by its reported sales tax collections to the State Comptroller's Office.

According to Comptroller Bob Bullock, Pampa received a check this month for $118,904.27 in sales tax payments based on sales made in August and reported to the Comptroller by Sept. 20.

The latest figures represent about a $47,000 increase over sales tax payments for collections in August, 1983.

Total payments to the city for the year to date are $1,282,385.63, a 13.91 percent increase over payments in the comparable period last year. Last month Pampa had registered a 10.38 percent increase.

Bullock has sent October checks totaling $58.2 million in local tax payments to the 990 cities levying the one-percent local sales tax.

"So far this year, these payments are running better than 16 percent ahead of last year, and most Texas cities can expect even bigger checks for the rest of 1984," Bullock said.

The Comptroller explained next month's checks will reflect payments from sales tax permit holders who report quarterly. The December checks will reflect the first increases from new goods and services taxed for the first time beginning Oct. 2 under new tax legislation passed this summer.

Another Gray County city showed an increase, though total payments to date are still in the negative column compared to last year. McLean received a check this month for $1,761.32, about $700 more than the $1,065.75 received in October last year.

Total yearly payments to date are $18,492.85, a 5.16 percent decline from the $19,499.46 sent from the state for the first eight months of 1983. Last month McLean was showing a 9.23 percent decrease from last year.

Lefors dropped into the negative column again after showing a 7.05 percent hike last month. The city received no check this month; it had received a payment of $579.95 last October.

Yearly payments to date total

$4,563.79, a 5.77 percent drop from the $4,843.05 recorded in the same 1983 period.

Three Carson County cities all showed increases this month for both monthly and yearly total payments.

Bullock sent Groom an October check for $1,622.78, more than double the $749.52 it had received in October of last year. Total yearly

City 'reluctantly' okays gas hike

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Following lengthy discussion, Pampa city commissioners today gave first approval to an ordinance permitting a rate increase by Energas for domestic and commercial customers.

In a compromise reached in negotiations between Energas and a steering committee from the West Texas City Plant System, Energas has requested a 4.3 percent rate hike.

The new rate is due to become effective Nov. 1.

The company had originally asked for a 7.7 percent increase for the 63 cities served by the WTSPS, including Pampa. Energas claimed it was losing approximately $8.9 million in revenue because of insufficient pricing.

Under the new rate proposal, Energas will generate about an additional $5 million in the coming year.

Commissioner David McDaniel seconded "with reluctance" the motion by Commissioner E. L. "Smiley" Henderson to approve the ordinance adopting the rate on first reading.

McDaniel said he had felt "awfully limited" in his knowledge of the processes and procedures by which Energas had reached its rate increase requests. He said he did not question the negotiations leading to the revised rate structure, but he felt more specific information should be available.

"I feel like I'm groping in the dark here" in trying to understand the matters involved in the decision, he said. McDaniel stated he had thought he would get "more than just a letter" from the steering committee announcing the compromise.

Henderson said the commissioners had been invited to attend the committee meetings.

"Quite frankly, I wished I had attended" the meetings, McDaniel said.

Henderson said the commission should trust the judgments of the professionals involved in the negotiations. "I feel justified in accepting their recommendations," he said.

Commissioner Clyde Carruth questioned the price structures presented by Energas. He also questioned the low amount Energas has paid over the years for the gas franchise in the city, saying that since the company is going to be getting more money from the city and other customers, it should increase the amount paid for the franchise.

But he joined the other commissioners in approving the new rate.

In other matters, the commission approved an agreement for consulting services with Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and Co. for seeking applicants for the city manager position left vacant by the recent resignation of B. M. "Mack" Wofford.

Reading a news release, Mayor Calvin Whatley said the city would be using a "search group" from the firm "to locate proper applicants to be interviewed" by the commission.

"Peat, Marwick and Mitchell is the seventh largest accounting firm in the nation with offices in a large number of cities," Mayor Whatley said. "Some offices, such as the Dallas office, have a search group to locate applicants to be interviewed for certain professional positions."

The mayor said a member of the search group will visit with the commission "to determine attributes of the applicant to fit our particular situation. With their information on city managers in Texas and surrounding states, they will review a large number of applicants, then narrow the list down to five or six who they believe will fit our needs."

The "select group" of applicants will visit Pampa to be interviewed by the commission, Whatley said.

The mayor said the fee for this service will vary, depending on time expended and the travel expenses of applicants coming to Pampa.

"We do not want expediency to cloud our vision; however, we will move as rapidly as seems wise," Whatley said. He said the firm expects to complete the service within 90 days.

"In using this service, we believe we can employ the best individual possible for the position, and we will not have the expense of your commissioners making trips to various cities to interview applicants," he added.

Henderson said the service would permit the benefit of use of professionals and would save time for the city.

Gramm sets sights on landslide victory in Texas Panhandle

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

Congressman Phil Gramm knew he already had support when he brought his U.S. Senate campaign to conservative Pampa Monday, but he wanted to boost his lead even more.

"You know I'm going to win in the Panhandle, and the president is going to win in the Panhandle," Gramm told area Republicans who packed the opening of the Gray County GOP headquarters at the corner of Ballard and Kingsmill streets. But, he added, he needs all the votes here he can get so that he can build a majority throughout the state and defeat Democratic candidate Lloyd Doggett.

After spending the morning in El Paso refuting Doggett's claims that he's against Social Security and charging that the Austin Democrat receives contributions from unions, gay groups and anti-defense groups that are "alien to the thinking of Texans," Gramm continued comparing himself with Doggett at the Pampa rally.

"I am not going to vote to have a tax increase," he told the group. "I am in favor of a balanced budget amendment. But when the Texas Legislature passed a resolution calling for a balanced budget, Doggett voted against it."

"They want more spending," he said of Doggett and his fellow Democrats.

"When we voted on the Grenada rescue (in early 1983) even Walter Mondale was on our side," he said, adding that Doggett opposed the mission.

Another split Gramm noted was the Texas Water Development plan, which Gramm said he supported.

"I live in College Station, which is surrounded by the Brazos and the Navosta Rivers. I didn't need the water," he said, adding that he felt other parts of the state needed the help.

"I believe in voluntary prayer in school. My opponent is opposed to voluntary prayer and to voluntary silent prayer," Gramm said. "I believe in family values. Doggett is seeking support of gay and lesbian activists."

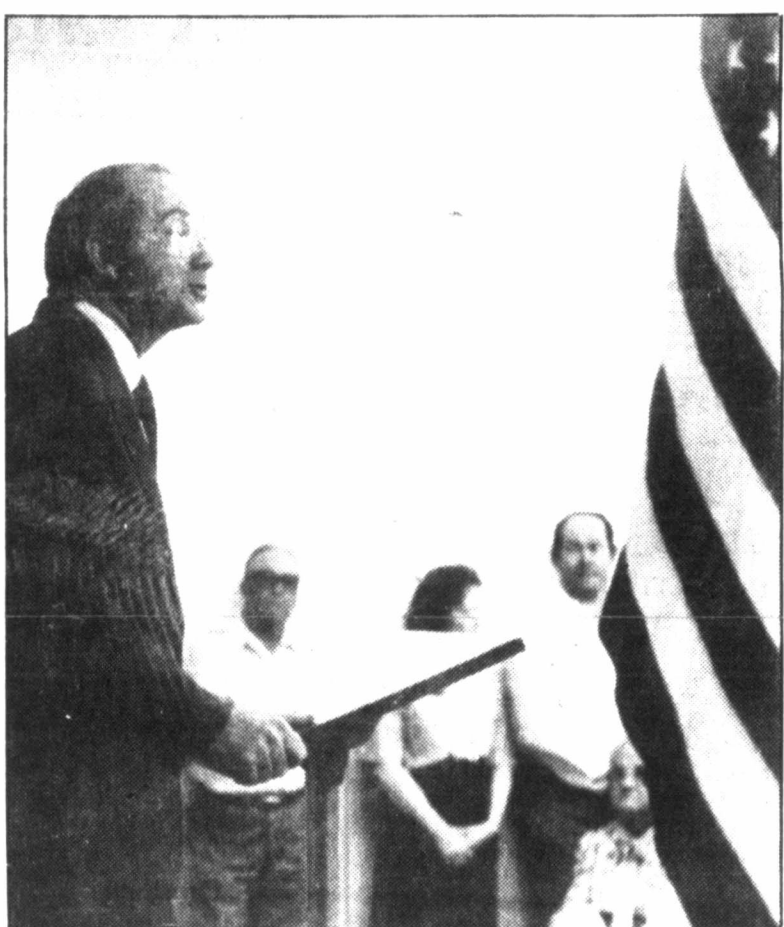

Speaking to the group that was dominated by older residents, Gramm stood by his claim that he will not support Social Security cuts.

"In the Democratic primary, my opponent said Bob Kreuger was against Social Security. He said Kent Hance was against social security. Now he says I'm against Social Security," Gramm said, focusing sentiment to his aging mother. "I am never going to let anyone take that check away from my mama."

A former Democrat, Gramm spoke of his re-election to his congressional seat after he switched parties in 1982. He won without a runoff over a large field of candidates by garnering 124 votes over the needed 50 percent.

"If 62 people had voted differently, then Tip O'Neill (the House Speaker who often was at odds with Gramm) would be a young, virile and happy man."

He encouraged his Republican supporters to seek votes from independent voters and Democrats — even "Yellow Dog Democrats."

"You know what a Yellow Dog Democrat is. That's someone who would vote for a Democrat even if he was a yellow dog," Gramm drawled, exhorting the campaigners not to discount such seemingly firm votes. "It's better to be a Yellow Dog Democrat than a Yellow Doggett Democrat."

The Panhandle Republicans greeted Gramm in the middle of a drizzly downpour Monday afternoon. But inside, it was hot and stuffy as supporters packed the GOP offices to hear the former Democrat speak.

U.S. Congressional candidate Beau Boulter was scheduled to speak after Gramm, but he could not make it. In his place was his wife, Rosemary, who told the group "Phil Gramm is one of the greatest arguments to vote for Beau."

She said that Gramm was willing to stick to his convictions when he switched parties in 1982 in the midst of a dispute between the Republican White House and the Democratic Congress on economic policies.

Gramm and Boulter were introduced by County Judge Carl Kennedy, the only Republican holding office in Gray County. He said the crowd was "representative of the good

Miami changes its evaluation criteria

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

MIAMI — Teachers are not best judged by their tone of voice and ability to maintain proper classroom heat, light and ventilation, most educators would agree.

But that was part of the teacher evaluation used by Miami Independent School District until Monday when school officials adopted a new plan.

Miami Principal Phil Barefield requested the new policy because he feels the old policy, which was adopted before he was hired in 1981, uses unnecessary criteria.

"So many of the items made on this evaluation don't address teacher performance," he said. "I found that I wasn't recommending teachers highly, even though they scored high on the exam."

Although the old policy evaluated teachers on class planning, student behavior, relationships with students, administrators and patrons, and ethics, there were items Barefield felt were not relevant. Such criteria included seating and housekeeping, current and interesting displays, calling in to release substitutes on time, controlling speed of voice for clarity and emphasis and regulating voice volume.

He said that while classroom atmosphere, appearance and voice are important, there are other guidelines for judging a teacher.

Miami teachers seem to agree with Barefield's conclusion. He said that he showed the teachers the old evaluation form, plus three others, and asked for their opinion. The teachers preferred a form incorporated by the Texas Association of School Boards which evaluates the teachers on planning, instruction, discipline, administrative ability, and professionalism.

"The TASB evaluation was clearly the top choice," he said. "It addresses more clearly what goes on in the classroom."

Superintendent Bill Vestal also praised the TASB, noting that the form has a four stage rating scale. A four rating is consistently superior, three is satisfactory, two is adequate and one is unsatisfactory. Other evaluations have only three rating stages, he said.

Barefield said that stiffer teaching requirements adopted this year by the Texas Legislature will mean tougher teacher evaluation.

"Teacher evaluation is changing this year," he said. "For one thing, the people evaluating are going to have to have additional training."

The principal also told the trustees that they would have to adjust their policy on special education (learning handicapped) students who are beginning to take regular classes. New state guidelines requires students to master certain "essential elements" in their classes. Similar policies apply to the special ed students in two ways, he said.

"In a regular classroom, the student can work on his ability level or we have to adjust his evaluation to reflect lower capabilities," he explained.

As an example, Barefield mentioned a biology student who consistently makes low grades. If the student is evaluated as a special ed student, the classroom requirements for that student would be adjusted accordingly.

Miami school snow days will be moved from March 11-12 to March 14-15 to allow for changes in dates for the Pampa Livestock Show, school officials decided. The spring break corresponds with the Houston Livestock Show.

School officials agreed to pay the tuition for a student taking classes at Pampa College of Hairdressing through the Vocational Education program. They also discovered that the Canadian School District will no longer pay tuition for students living in Canadian who attend Miami schools.

School officials also agreed to seek bids on the same type of bus they've been buying, a van conversion with a Ford or Chevy Chassis, 30 gallon tank and power brakes. The only difference would be the location of the spare tire. Trustees do not want the tire mounted in the back.

They renewed their membership in the Panhandle Area Association of School Administrators and tabled action on salary deductions for tax sheltered investments.

Jurors named in marathon session

By JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

Court officials worked well into the night Monday to seat a jury in the murder trial of Richard Lee Schreckhise, 20, formerly of 916 S. Nelson.

Testimony was scheduled to begin at 1:15 p.m. today before 31st District Judge Grainger McIlhenny.

The eight-man, four-woman jury panel was sworn in at 11:35 p.m. Monday, after about nine hours of questioning by lawyers.

Schreckhise is accused of the April 15 shooting death of a co-worker, Aaron Wade Lewis, 22, 124 N. Nelson.

District Clerk Mary Clark said that Monday's marathon session in picking a jury was the latest in her six years with the office.

After part of the panel summoned for jury duty was dismissed, defense lawyer John Warner and Assistant District Attorney David Hamilton questioned the remaining 52 prospective jurors in groups of 12.

Pre-trial matters were heard Monday morning. Judge McIlhenny denied a motion to dismiss the case for a claimed violation of the defendant's right to a speedy trial. The judge granted a motion to prohibit the introduction of tests related to hair samples.

The murder victim, the stepson of a Pampa police officer, was "generally involved" in drugs and was suspected of being a police informant, Warner claimed.

The defense has said that someone else killed Lewis because the victim had "snitched" to police about drug cases.

On April 27, a ranchhand found the murder victim's badly decomposed body stuffed in the trunk of the victim's car. The car had been abandoned in a dry creek bed on the Frank Carter Ranch, about 10 miles southeast of Pampa.

Schreckhise was arrested at his father's home near Clarksville, Ark., three days after the body was found.

Hamilton has said the suspect set a fatal trap for his co-worker at the V.E. Wagner Well Service Co.

The prosecutor previously said that Schreckhise asked the victim to come to his home on South

Nelson. He invited the man inside, he said. The men argued about the sale of a waterbed and other matters, Hamilton has said.

A fight started, and the suspect whipped out a .22-caliber pistol, the state has charged. Schreckhise shot Lewis in the side, then placed the gun behind his ear and blasted him in the head, the state alleges.

The suspect left the body on the floor of his home and went to get help in loading the murdered man into the car, the prosecutor has said. Schreckhise recruited a helper at a Pampa truck stop, Hamilton said.

The man who reportedly helped load the body has cooperated with authorities and is expected to testify in the trial, according to the prosecutor.

Sheriff Rufe Jordan has said the men were once close friends.

Lefors will continue efforts for long-range water project

By LARRY HOLLIS
 Staff Writer

LEFORS - Lefors city council members authorized Mayor Ben White to pursue further plans for developing a long-range water project during their regular meeting Monday night.

The city had applied for a Texas Community Development Program grant earlier this year. Its water project made the top 10 for the Panhandle area, but it was edged out as the available money ran out before the city's project was reached on the list.

Mayor White said there is a good possibility a revised project could be submitted again next year and stand a good chance of being selected for a grant.

Council members noted new wells need to be obtained to insure continued adequate supplies for future needs for the city.

The mayor said current wells could be depleted of the fresher, purer supplies from upper layer water formations in several years. Then the wells would have to be drilled into the deeper layers which contain more salts, he said.

The water in the deeper formations would be "okay to use for watering" purposes and such, but "you probably wouldn't want to drink it," Mayor White said.

Mayor White also discussed the possibility of having the next pit at the city's landfill dug out with one end sloped. This would permit residents to drive down into the pit and unload their trash, allowing the trash to be covered in a more orderly manner. Other council members generally approved the idea.

Councilman Walter Elliott said there are problems at the landfill with residents dumping barrels, water heaters, stoves and other similar items. He said such items shouldn't be placed in the pits since it creates problems in covering the material.

Councilman John Ashford suggested residents should be informed such items are not allowed to be dumped at the landfill. Councilmen agreed the materials brought to the landfill for dumping should be checked to prohibit such items.

City Secretary Yvonne Pittman reported Dickey, Cory and Co. were finalizing the city audit and preparing forms to be used in formalizing a city budget.

Council members discussed payment of delinquent utility bills by residents. Councilman Wendell Akins said the city needs to work with those who definitely are having financial problems in meeting their bills.

Councilwoman Betty Hannon agreed, mentioning specific cases. But she said efforts should be made more strongly in a few instances to collect from those able to pay. Pittman said most delinquent customers have paid their bills or made arrangements to make partial payments.

In other matters, council members discussed the grading of streets. Mike Steele, city employee, said some streets needed dirt to be hauled in to permit a better packed surface. Some streets have been graded to the point where the surface level is reaching below manhole covers, he noted.

Akins brought up the matter of problems with the use of three-wheelers on city streets again. Though some progress has been made, he said more efforts need to be made to alleviate the problem.

The mayor reported a recent inspection by the Railroad Commission resulted in a generally good report for the city's gas system, though some minor problems still exist.

In other business, the council approved payment of bills.

Open House at fire station

Local residents are invited to visit the Central Fire Station Wednesday during an open house held in observance of Fire Prevention Week.

Tom Leggett, arson investigator with the city fire marshal's office, said the fire station will be open to the public from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Visitors can tour the station, visit with the firemen and view the fire trucks and other equipment.

Coffee and doughnuts will be available.

The open house is one of the activities being conducted by the firemen and fire marshal office personnel this week.

Fireman Calvin Farmer will be visiting schools to discuss fire prevention with students. Leggett and fireman Rusty Horton will be presenting programs at various civic clubs.

Leggett and Floyd Steele, assistant fire marshal, will be conducting practice fire drills at schools.

The Panhandle Fire Fighters Association will be holding a zone meeting in Pampa Saturday, with pumper races and water polo events scheduled for public viewing at 2 p.m. on the north side of the Pampa Mall, according to Assistant Fire Chief J. D. Ray.

Congress returns in effort to pass spending legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Like students facing an endless school year, unhappy legislators who would rather be home campaigning were returning instead to Capitol Hill today to continue an election-year session they had hoped would adjourn last week.

Members of the House and Senate faced a midnight deadline, again, for approving legislation to keep most of the government operating and avoid a replay of last week's partial shutdown of federal offices that idled about 500,000 workers.

Congressional negotiators, who have been trying to work out a compromise spending package to provide about $470 billion for the remainder of the fiscal year that began Oct. 1, stalemated at the end of last week over space weapons the Pentagon wants and aid for Nicaraguan rebels.

When it became clear last Friday that the long-term bill could not be passed quickly, Congress passed a stopgap measure that expires at midnight tonight. It was the third such interim measure in a week that Congress had to enact because of the problems in passing a long-term money bill.

Meanwhile, the Senate was trying to complete action on a House-passed bill adding another $250 billion to the government's borrowing authority — lifting the line of credit to $1,823 trillion.

The legislation boosting the national debt limit stalled last week after senators decided the "must" legislation was a good place to attach pet projects that had little chance of being enacted otherwise.

Still awaiting action were at least two major amendments. One would authorize only enough credit to last through next April 15 and freeze all federal spending for a year to allow Congress to decide on a strategy for shrinking budget deficits.

A second amendment would give the real estate industry a major tax break by repealing tighter new rules on interest that were enacted less than three months ago.

The impasse in negotiations on the compromise money bill — a version of which already has passed the House and Senate — is complicated by the insistence of some legislators on new water-development projects opposed by the Reagan administration.

Water shortage persists despite coastal area rainfall

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Despite three days of rain that temporarily relieved a 19-month-long drought, this parched coastal city continues to suffer under a severe water shortage with no relief in sight.

Isolated heavy rains expected to continue for the rest of the week will help ease drought conditions that worsened over the long hot summer months, said Fred Roush, forecaster at the National Weather Service in Corpus Christi.

"But it will have no significant effect on the water shortage," Roush said. "Not for the foreseeable future."

The weather service recorded .56 inch of rain at 5 p.m. at the Corpus Christi Airport Monday, with isolated rainfall in various locations around the area.

After a weekend taste of rain, Corpus Christi water officials said they are keeping their fingers crossed for more precipitation to relieve the long drought that has forced the coastal city to ration water.

Roush said the outlook is for isolated heavy rains through the remainder of the week, but probably not sustained enough to make a big difference.

"We're getting into a situation where it's going to take a long-term period of above-normal rainfall to end the water shortage," he said.

A line of thunderstorms with wind gusts up to 53 miles per hour passed through Corpus Christi on Sunday, toppling a motor home and downing power lines but doing little to relieve drought conditions in the watershed north of town, officials said.

"Some of the heaviest rains fell along the coast and east of the watershed," said Paul Werner, Corpus Christi water superintendent.

"There were no large amounts of beneficial runoff in the watershed, but we're still under pretty heavy clouds and if there's anymore rain, it could help," he said.

Choke Canyon Reservoir received 1.14 inches of rain Sunday and a spokesman for Wesley Seal Dam said .37 inches of rain fell at Lake Corpus Christi, the city's main reservoir.

Some areas of the Coastal Bend received up to 6 inches of rain and Werner said the rain helped parched lawns and shrubs.

The National Weather Service forecast a 30 percent chance of showers and thundershowers in the Corpus Christi area today, with the chance for additional rain through Thursday.

As Sunday's thunderstorm moved in, skies became menacing and temperatures fell from 88 degrees to 69 degrees.

Judge won't free parents

HOUSTON (AP) — Spending a month in jail is starting to weaken the determination of a couple jailed because they vowed not to tell a grand jury about their son, accused of murdering a female letter carrier, says a prosecutor in the case.

But the attorney trying to gain the release of Bernard and Odette Port dismissed the notion, insisting his clients will not break their silence.

State District Judge I.D. McMaster refused Monday to order the Ports' release after the couple reiterated they would not testify about events at their home at the time postal worker Debora Sue Schatz was slain.

Attorney Randy Schaffer sought the Ports' release, claiming the grand jury had indicted their son, David, 17, and no longer has jurisdiction. But prosecutors opposed it, saying the grand jury is considering whether to upgrade the charge to capital murder.

Schaffer said he will ask the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin today to free the Ports.

During Monday's hearing, Port testified he "might be willing to answer some questions on the advice of counsel" that would not be detrimental to his son. But when pressed by Assistant District Attorney Jim Lavine to be specific, Port changed his mind.

Mrs. Port offered a similar response. "I'll feel much more comfortable not answering any questions at this time," she said.

The Ports were taken back to their cells at the Harris County Jail, where the couple has been held since Sept. 12. Their son remained free on $20,000 bond.

Lavine said he was not offering to "cut a deal" with the Ports. He said the Ports will remain in jail until they testify or until the grand jury's term expires Nov. 2.

"It's clear that they aren't interested in cooperating. They seemed arrogant, and their answers were flippant and waffling. I think jail is working," he said.

Schaffer said his clients and prosecutors were "saying the same thing, they just were not communicating what they meant."

"What they were saying was that if prosecutors agreed to limit the questions to whether the Ports had any information that would elevate the charge to capital murder, then depending on the advice of counsel, they might answer them," he said.

Schaffer accused prosecutors of abusing the grand jury in order to obtain evidence for trial and of punishing the Ports for refusing to testify against their child.

"This should serve as notice to all parents in Harris County that if you don't actively help the state try to kill your child, you'll be locked up," Schaffer said.

Lavine called the suggestion "totally absurd."

"They're simply trying to direct the scope of a grand jury investigation and no citizen has that right. They're just trying to do something by the back door that they can't do by the front door," Lavine said. "Refusing to give us information, even if it can lead to a capital murder indictment, is not their choice."

Prosecutors say they want to question the Ports about David's activities the day Ms. Schatz died and they say the grand jury should be allowed to decide whether capital murder charges should be filed in the case.

Families brace for details of tragedy as trial opens

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A 12-year-old girl who claims she accidentally shot and killed her best friend faces up to six years in a correctional institution if a jury decides delinquent conduct was involved.

The body of Kerry Thomas, 11, was found Sept. 12 covered with leaves and debris four days after she was shot by her best friend.

The accused girl claims she shot the girl accidentally, then buried the body and cleaned up the evidence because she was scared.

It will be up to a state district court jury to decide if the shooting was intentional, the result of the girl's recklessness, or accidental. The adolescent is being tried for the juvenile equivalent of murder and involuntary manslaughter. Jury selection was scheduled to begin today.

The 12-year-old told authorities the shotgun fired accidentally and that she then dragged the body into the backyard of her Benbrook home, hid it under a pile of debris, cleaned up the blood in her living room and kept silent until the body was found — all because she was scared.

"She was playing with her friend, they had an accident, and the police are trying to make it into something else," said the father of the 12-year-old. "We're just all tore up."

But Tarrant County prosecutors disagreed and filed delinquent conduct-murder and delinquent conduct-involuntary manslaughter charges against the girl on Sept. 17.

Kerry Thomas' parents also believe the child deliberately pulled the trigger, hid the body and lied to police.

"All the gory details. It's all going to come out. It's going to be very difficult to have to live through what Kerry went through," Kerry's mother, Peggy Thomas, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram before the trial.

"I want to see justice done for Kerry," she said. "And after all this has sunk in, I don't believe for a minute that it was an accident."

Kerry had been spending the weekend at her friend's house. The accused girl told police that at about 5 p.m. on Sept. 8, she got the shotgun, loaded it and leveled it at her friend. While she fidgeted with the weapon, it accidentally discharged, striking Kerry in the face, she told police.

Should jurors find delinquent conduct in the death, the young girl faces a maximum penalty of incarceration at a Texas Youth Commission facility until she is 18.

Defense attorney Harold Calvin Ray said his client still grieves over the loss of her friend and is aware that she is being blamed. Recurring nightmares disrupt her sleep, he said. She dreads returning to the home where it happened. She knows she will not return to Monnig Middle School where she and Kerry were classmates.

"She recognizes she was the only one in that room when the gun went off," Ray said.

Tuesday evening in Groom

I knew there would be a Groom town council meeting last Tuesday.

Groom meets the night after the city of White Deer's Monday marathon, and there's always plenty of people with plenty to say there. So, without thinking twice, I went.

I figured I could make it in time for the 8 p.m. meeting. But when I saw the jackrabbits hopping out of their grassy knolls to start their nightly roadside vigils, I knew it was getting late.

It was 8:15 and the town was already dark. Even the Groom city building was empty. No meeting tonight. No city council. No busy secretary. No concerned citizens.

The main street stood wide and vacant. The teens that flock the main drags on small-town nights were not out in Groom tonight.

The school was so silent, the building seemed to disappear in the darkness. But there were some lights on downtown. Grocery shelves were shadows under the dim lights inside the Groom Market. Lights were on in a cabinet shop and at The Groom News, where a man and woman were putting the next issue together. Mites darted around a corner street light glowing above the buildings.

Mine was the only moving vehicle in silent town. All I could hear were the hum of the motor and music from a distant radio station.

So what do people in Groom do when there's no city council meeting, no church, nothing going on at school and Pampa is too far to drive?

There was some activity at a cafe on the south side, where townfolk were playing a talkative game of pool. The booths were lined with lively conversation, while a waitress watchfully darted between the tables and the counters. Jerry Reed was playing a bluesy guitar on the jukebox.

There, in the midst of the songs of Conway Twitty, Willie Nelson, and the Judds, was Al Hirt's rendition of "September Song."

"Who on earth picked that," called a man not familiar with Hirt's velvety trumpet. But the waitress, knowing somebody must have wanted to hear the song, sweated it out with the rest of the customers. It must have been 10 years since Al Hirt was heard on that country jukebox, and it will probably be 10 more years before he is heard there again.

Back out in the motionless night air, I saw other signs of life along the vacant expanse of Route 66.

Cars waited in front of convenience stores and the usual line of rigs rumbled at the I-40 truck stops. There was also a crowd at the dairy stop, where a cheerful high school girl served me a milk shake. She agreed that the town was definitely quiet tonight.

"It does look like rain," she observed. "But everyone's probably at home doing their homework."

I drove again along the quiet neighborhood streets. A cat watched me from under a street light and wondered what I was doing there.

In the light of an open garage, I saw a man talking with his son. Light from television sets flickered through big living room windows. Other lights glowed warmly out of bedrooms where the high school girl's friends were doing their homework.

The streets are empty and still and the night is quiet and deep. But Groom is a busy place at 8:30 Tuesday nights.

Just ask the families who are at home together. Or the pals at the cafe and dairy stop. Or the students cautiously doing their homework.

Even the 63 jackrabbits I counted on the trip back to Pampa looked like they had plenty to do.

Old oil field producing after 81 years

BATSON, Texas (AP) — The Ada Belle Oil Co. hasn't changed much in its 81-year history, but stockholders in the old field aren't complaining.

"Any lucky sucker who inherited a share ain't about to give it up," says Judy Allen, 44, secretary of the company.

The company began in 1903 and in its early years netted just enough money to meet expenses. But Ms. Allen told the Houston Chronicle things have changed quite a bit since then.

"My mother used to make snide comments about how puny the stock dividends were," she said.

Oil prices jumped with the Mideast oil embargo, dividend to Ada Belle's lucky 1,425 shareholders rose to about $80 a year, or about the same price the original investors paid.

Ms. Allen's family got the stock through her grandfather, John Cashen, a drilling contractor who traded equipment to Ada Belle for stock.

The Ada Belle is the oldest oil field of its kind in the country, Ms. Allen said.

"It's the only producing oil field in the country that still has a central roundhouse to run the pumps," she told the Chronicle.

One electric motor moves a big wheel in the roundhouse, pushing and pulling rods that make the Ada Belle's pumps move.

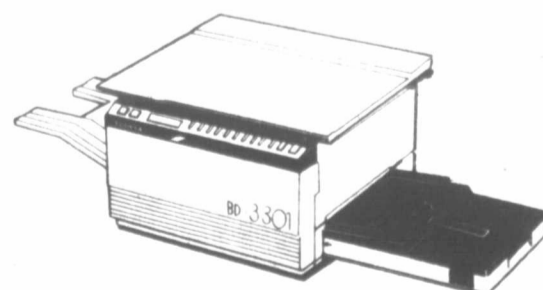

Although some oil fields are older, they've been modernized over the years.

But at Ada Belle, some of the tanks are still made of cypress, and are so oil-soaked that they may never rot.

More than 300 wells have been drilled on the property or adjacent leases, although only about two dozen are kept running at one time.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Let the cameras roll in Senate

Howard Baker has given up. He will retire from the U.S. Senate at the end of this year, not having succeeded in opening the chamber to live television.

This is a disappointment, not only for the senior Republican senator from Tennessee, who is the Senate's majority leader, but for that minority among our citizens who might wish to see and hear the debates of that body on television.

One of the big objections voiced by many members of the Senate is that some Senators would degrade the dignity of that body by posturing before the cameras. However, if the Senate is filled with frustrated ham actors, the public had a right to know who they are.

The proceedings of the House of Representatives have been telecast for several years without serious consequences for the "dignity" of the House. There has been partisan bickering about members campaigning on the floor in front of the television cameras. But that is of minor importance compared to the public information benefits of televising debates such as the one earlier this year on the Simpson-Mazzoli immigration law reform bill.

It is harmless when the Senate insists on preserving tradition by keeping quill pens at each desk and sand to dry the ink of their signatures. But when a few senators object to unobtrusive television cameras, they are doing a disservice to the nation and to the Senate.

The electronic doors of the chamber that echoed to the speeches of Daniel Webster, John C. Calhoun and Henry Clay should long ago have been thrown wide open so more people can hear the debates and see the filibusters.

Among his fellows, Howard Baker has been one of the more popular senators in history. Perhaps they should reconsider the TV issue in the few days remaining before adjournment.

Defense spending hypocrisy

Last May, campaigning in Texas, Senator Gary Hart said: "Walter Mondale now promises an America that can and will stand for its vital interests in the world. But Carter - Mondale gave us an America held hostage to the ayatollahs of the world."

It was a jocular reminder of the event that awakened the Carter administration to the reality of rising Soviet military hegemony over the Middle East - and America's declining military capacity to respond.

It is also a reminder that it wasn't Ronald Reagan who started "re-arming" America in 1981 and 1982, but Carter - Mondale. And it wasn't Reagan who first pushed us toward the MX, but Carter - Mondale. So, when Mondale - Ferraro attack Reagan's "military build-up," remember they are counting on your political amnesia.

Just to refresh your memory, in the fall of 1979 a number of unpleasant international events took place. First, in September, we discovered the Soviets had secretly installed some 3,000 heavily armed combat troops in Cuba. The Soviet Union and Cuba yawned at Carter's public outrage. Then on November 4, the embassy in Tehran was seized, and the ayatollah was unimpressed by White House candlelight vigils. Finally, on December 27, 85,000 Soviet troops invaded Afghanistan despite a warning from the Carter - Mondale administration.

So, on January 20, 1980, Carter jingled forth before Congress with a major new defense build-up program that received thunderous applause from his own party - which in Congress, had been steadily cutting defense spending for the prior eight years. Instead of the $134 billion he had planned for Fiscal Year 1981, Carter asked for an immediate increase to $143 billion. He and Congress wound up appropriating $161 billion - an 18.4 - percent increase over 1980. And, instead of the $145 billion he had planned to spend in 1982, he asked for an immediate increase to $162 billion. And in his last budget submission (January 1981) he asked for $184 billion. Reagan spent $183 billion.

What is more important is that in January 1980 and again in January 1981 (just before he left office), Carter outlined a defense build-up that rivaled the Reagan administration's plans.

For example, in Carter's final submission, he called for a 1984 defense outlay of $239 billion, a figure identical to the Reagan appropriation for this year. But, the actual spending on defense this year will wind up at about $224 billion, or $15 - billion LESS than Carter called for.

In fiscal 1985 Carter's long - range plan called for a budget authority of $291 billion and a budget outlay of $269 billion. Well, Reagan has just settled in Congress for $297 billion. And his outlay for next year is likely to be as much as $10 billion below what Carter proposed in January 1981.

All of which shows there is basically no difference between what Reagan has actually done and what Carter and Mondale, driven by international realities, had planned to do.

The best proof of this is that Mondale has selected as his defense advisers, former Defense Secretary Harold Brown and former Undersecretary for Research and Engineering

William J. Perry, who authored the Carter build-up.

This is why, when you listen to Walter Mondale very carefully these days you will find no wildly dovish promises to slash the defense budget. He had already endorsed Carter's planned 5 - percent real defense growth per year, submitted to Congress in 1981.

As liberal writer Andrew Cockburn carped in the August 13 New York Times: "It looks as if Walter Mondale finds little wrong with the policies of the Weinberger Pentagon that could not be put right with a few token gestures." Cockburn was vindicated when Mondale's "deficit - reduction" plan called for a less than 1 1/2 percent per year cut in defense spending! This does not apply, incidentally, to his running mate, Geraldine Ferraro, who has talked and acted in Congress as if she were George McGovern's running mate, instead of Mondale's.

She termed the Grenada invasion "a disaster." She compared the CIA's mining of Nicaragua's harbors with the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. She opposes Carter - Mondale's MX. (They wanted 200, Reagan asked for 50.) she even proposed suspending deployment in Europe of Pershing and cruise missiles.

She has voted to scrap not only the MX, the Trident, the Pershing IIs, and the B - 1 bomber, but to cut nuclear carriers by one - third, and cut Army divisions 20 percent.

So the question is, who will Mondale respond to in the White House, the Ferraro - McGovernite unilateralists, or the technocrats or Harold Brown & Company? It's a question voters ought to ask.

Today in History

Today is Tuesday, Oct. 9, the 283rd day of 1984. There are 83 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Oct. 9, 1975, Soviet scientist Andrei Sakharov, now in internal Soviet exile for his dissident views, won the Nobel Peace Prize. He was cited for his "personal and fearless effort" in the cause of peace and his "fight against violence and brutality."

On this date: Five years ago: Wall Street became alarmed following the Federal Reserve Board's decision to get a tighter grip on the nation's money supply to fight inflation. That announcement, along with higher interest rates, caused the Dow Jones Industrial Average to fall almost 26 1/2 points.

One year ago: Interior Secretary James G. Watt resigned. Thought for today: "Wealth lost--something lost; honor lost--much lost; courage lost--all lost." - Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, German author-philosopher (1749-1832).

What a coffee maker!

I am just as concerned as the next American that the U.S. Air Force is spending $7,600 on coffee makers.

My coffee maker cost about 20 bucks, and except for the fact that it makes a noise like an elephant belch while it is brewing my coffee, I am quite satisfied with it.

However, I make it a point never to condemn before I hear both sides of the story, so I contacted an old Air Force source who was able to get me an exclusive interview with the Air Force purchasing agent who ordered the $7,600 coffee maker.

For obvious reasons, the man requested anonymity. I will call him Lt. Folger. Herewith is the interview:

"Lt. Folger, how do you make coffee in a $7,600 coffee maker?"

"First, you need coffee and a large bottle of Perrier water."

"You use Perrier water?"

"This isn't an ordinary coffee maker, as you can tell by the price. You would no more put ordinary tap water in it than you would put a $10 saddle on a million-dollar horse."

"OK, so then what?"

"You put the coffee inside the coffee maker and then you put in the Perrier water."

"That sounds like the same way you make coffee in a regular coffee maker."

"True, but does a regular coffee maker talk to you?"

"The Air Force coffee maker talks? What does it say?"

"It says, 'Your coffee will be ready in 10 minutes. Have a nice day.'"

"That's a big deal?"

"It is when you consider whose voice it is in the coffee maker."

"Whose voice is it? Joe DiMaggio's?"

"No, President Reagan's. The Air Force thought it would be a great morale builder to have the president talk to flight crews on C-5A's as they have their morning coffee."

"What else does this machine do?"

"It is completely computerized."

"Computerized?"

"Sure." Each member of the crew, when he steps into the aircraft in the morning, can punch in exactly how he likes his coffee and the computer is programmed to dispense cream and sugar, cream only, sugar only, or, of course, black.

"That saves the Air Force countless man - hours previously wasted while each crew member prepared his own coffee. The taxpayers should be grateful."

"I am certain they will be. Does the coffee maker serve any purpose besides making coffee?"

"It can be used as a radar device."

"How is that?"

"Let's say the regular weather radar goes down in the aircraft. If the coffee is sloshing around all over the floor, the crew will know it is in heavy turbulence."

"How many cups of coffee will this coffee maker make, incidentally?"

"Ten."

"Only 10?"

"They're big cups."

"How big?"

"I'm not certain, but we paid $3,200 a set."

"Thirty - two hundred for a set of coffee cups?"

"That included saucers, too."

"Such a deal."

"We try to watch every penny," said Lt. Folger.

Who's behind the state lottery boom?

By Robert Walters
SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (NEA) - Religious leaders, politicians, educators and law officers are yringing their hands but there's not much else they can do to keep California from joining the growing list of states with a lottery.

Already firmly established in 17 states and the District of Columbia, the lottery is likely to be extended not only to California but also to Missouri, Oregon and West Virginia. Propositions calling for lotteries will appear on the ballots in those states next month.

Although state-run lotteries often are instituted at the behest of a special interest group, they are phenomenally popular. Here in California, for example, more than 75 percent of all voters who participated in a statewide public opinion poll last year endorsed the concept.

For players, the lottery's get-rich-quick appeal is reinforced by elaborate promotional campaigns touting the possibility of becoming an "instant winner" and by reports of multimillion-dollar jackpots in New York, Massachusetts, Illinois and other states.

The appeal to public officials is succinctly described by an issues analyst for California's legislature: "The lottery fulfills many politicians' wildest dreams - it is a relatively painless way to raise money."

But the pending ballot proposition has been criticized by the state's three highest-ranking elected officials - Gov. George Deukmejian, a Republican; Lt. Gov. Leo McCarthy, a Democrat; and Attorney General John Van De Kamp, a Democrat.

Even though much of the lottery revenue is to be earmarked for public education, the measure also is opposed by both the state's Parent-Teacher Association and its School Board Association.

Especially disturbing is the fact that lotteries are being instituted in numerous states not in response to any identifiable clamor from the public but to generate new business for a little-known but highly profitable industry.

Although the states technically run the games (in California, the lottery would be governed by a five-member commission and a paid administrator) most of the actual work is performed by private firms awarded state contracts.

The leading candidate here is Scientific Games, Inc., of Atlanta, which since 1982 has been a subsidiary of Bally Manufacturing, Inc., a Chicago company which is the nation's largest manufacturer of casino slot machines.

Scientific Games has signed lucrative contracts with all six states that have initiated lotteries since 1976 and this year is deeply involved in financing and promoting ballot referendums in California, Oregon and Missouri.

The campaigns in those states follow a pattern established earlier in Arizona, Colorado and the District of Columbia, where Scientific Games was an early and generous supporter of lottery referendums.

Of the first $1.1 million contributed to promote passage of the ballot proposition in California, more than $1 million came from Scientific Games. The only other major contributor was Dittler Brothers, Inc., an Atlanta firm which prints lottery tickets for Scientific Games.

Dittler Brothers contributed $25,000 and pledged an additional $50,000 to the campaign.

To get the measure on the ballot, lottery promoters paid almost $465,000 to a company which specializes in gathering petition signatures through the use of paid solicitors.

More than $3 million is likely to be spent on that effort by Election Day. The voters of California (and other states) may enjoy playing the lottery but they shouldn't deceive themselves into thinking that they are primarily responsible for establishing it.

Peres says cuts would hurt Israel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seeking more U.S. aid for Israel's inflation-ravaged economy, Prime Minister Shimon Peres has told the Reagan administration that deeper government spending cuts would jeopardize his country's military security.

Israel already has sliced $1 billion from its $23 billion budget and undertaken several austerity measures, including a ban on auto and stereo imports.

With inflation over 400 percent, Israel's economic woes were the principal focus of today's meeting between Peres and President Reagan.

The two governments are trying to develop a program to help Israel put its economic house in order. Among the possibilities: U.S. backing for the weak shekel and Pentagon purchase of Israeli weapons, including anti-tank equipment and artillery pieces.

American dollars deposited in a special account would serve as a guarantee for Israel in world credit markets. Inflation and repeated devaluations have weakened the shekel, and Israel's credit rating is shaky.

Also, the $1.2 billion in U.S. economic aid Israel is due to receive in January may be delivered at an earlier date. And, diplomatic sources said, Israel may ask for U.S. assistance in building non-nuclear submarines.

According to Israeli sources, Peres told Secretary of State George P. Shultz on Monday that further budget cuts would be detrimental to Israel's security.

Of the $1 billion that is being cut from the government's budget, $300 million will come from defense. Israel devotes $10 billion of the annual budget to repaying debts. Apart from that, half of what remains goes toward defense.

Peres told Shultz there is no more room for cuts in defense spending without eroding Israel's military security, according to the Israeli sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified.

Working groups were asked to produce economic proposals for the White House meeting as well as recommendations to extricate the 14,000 Israeli troops now in southern Lebanon.

Duarte's offer to meet guerrillas is said 'a major forward step' to peace

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — President Jose Napoleon Duarte's surprise offer to meet next Monday with leftist guerrilla commanders was hailed by U.S. officials as "a major forward step" toward peace but drew a cautious response from the rebels.

Duarte, addressing the U.N. General Assembly on Monday, offered to open peace talks with rebel military leaders in the mountain village of La Palma, near the Honduran border in an area of frequent civil war clashes. Rebels control the last several miles of highway leading to the town.

Duarte said he would arrive without protection — "placing my life as a guarantee to have this meeting to attain peace" — and his only condition was that all participants be unarmed. Previously he has insisted that the guerrilla forces stop fighting before talks could start.

The rebels' position has been that they would talk, but without preconditions, and leftist spokesmen said they are waiting for Duarte to follow up his speech with a direct proposal for talks.

"We are positively and constructively disposed to dialogue, if it is formally proposed," the Mexican news agency Notimex quoted Salvador

Samayoa as telling reporters. Samayoa serves on the joint political-diplomatic commission of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front and the Democratic Revolutionary Front, the leftists' military and political organizations.

Duarte, a moderate Christian Democrat who took office June 1, said he was inviting the international press and Salvadoran church leaders to attend the meeting, which has "the complete support" of the Salvadoran military command.

He invited rebel leaders to discuss "the details for their incorporation in the process of democracy and the preparation of an atmosphere of freedom so that we may have another popular election."

A Roman Catholic Church official said Monday that channels between the government and guerrillas had been opened, with the archbishop of San Salvador, Arturo Rivera y Damas, acting as a "messenger."

Duarte's speech drew a warm response from most assembly delegates, and U.S. envoy Jeane Kirkpatrick applauded enthusiastically. Representatives of Nicaragua, which El Salvador accuses of supporting the guerrillas, and the Soviet Union did not applaud.

Fishermen threaten shrimp extinction

MAZATLAN, Mexico (AP) — Poaching and using fine nets to increase shrimp harvests along Mexico's Pacific coast is fast threatening at least two species of shrimp with extinction, a spokesman for fishing cooperatives says here.

Bernardino Farias Reyna, an executive of the Regional Federation of Fishermen's Cooperatives, told a news conference Sunday that federal authorities are doing nothing to stop the illegal fishing for shrimp.

Farias Reyna claimed that many fishermen ignore the government's periodic bans to protect the species and often dredge shrimp beds with fine nets to increase their catches, something that authorities have also prohibited.

OCTOBER GARDENING
ACTIVITIES

The following are timely jobs to be doing around your home landscape:

Plant spring flowering bulbs and bulb-like plants such as Hyacinths, Allium Snowflakes, Easter Lily, Daffodils, Jonquils, Narcissus, Rain Lilies, Ranunculus, Anemones, Muscari, Crinum and others.

Repot resting amaryllis and store in cool place till roots develop growth starts then force for indoor flowering. Takes 6 to 12 weeks.

Dig and store Caladium tubers. Store in dry peat moss, sawdust or rice hulls in boxes so that roots do not touch each other. Store in an area where temperature will not go below 60 F to prevent spoilage.

Scale insects on broad leaf evergreens as Burford Holly and Euonymus can be effectively controlled by spraying with dormant oil, Malathion, or Diazinon. Do not use oil if temperature is expected to go above 80 F. Follow label instructions carefully.

Add fallen leaves to compost pile and keep moist.

Still time to purchase tulip bulbs and chill in refrigerator at 35 F to 40 F for 60 days.

Prepare tulip beds to receive bulbs you are chilling, if you haven't already done so.

Flowering annuals to sow in early October include: Cornflower, Larkspur, California Poppy, Snapdragon, Bluebonnets and Drummond Phlox. They will be ready to grow and flower next spring.

Apply fertilizer to the lawn in early October.

For dried arrangements, don't forget to collect those dried seed pods, pine cones, grass plumes and other interesting materials, before it is too late.

Be ready to dig and store Dahlia roots after first killing frost kills back foliage.

In the vegetable garden, activities for October follow:

Harvest sweet potatoes when leaves turn yellow and before soil temperature drops below 55 F.

Cure sweet potatoes at 80 to 85 F and 85 to 90 percent relative humidity for 5 to 7 days immediately after harvest, dry air prevents curing and permits shrivelling.

Store sweet potatoes at 60 to 65 F and 75 to 80 percent relative humidity to preserve high quality; temperatures below 55 F cause chilling injury which leads to decay.

Harvest mature pumpkins and winter squash; don't let mature fruits lay on soil; place them inside, high and dry away from danger of rodent injury or decay.

Harvest ornamental corn; pull husks all the way back; tie several ears together by the husks and hang in a dry, airy place to cure.

Harvest gourds and place in warm, dry place to cure skin; do not paint with shellac if you want them to last - simply polish them to a nice sheen.

Manure spread on garden and tilled in during fall provides essential nutrients and reduces need for fertilizer; do not exceed application rate of 50 pounds of manure per 100 square feet of garden.

1984 GREENHOUSE GROWERS CONFERENCE

On Nov. 1-3, the Texas Agriculture Extension Service will sponsor the 1984 Texas Greenhouse Growers Conference to be held at the Aggeland Inn, College Station. Advance registration fee is $35 per person. This year's program includes concurrent sessions on foliage and flowering plants with an additional session on bedding plants.

The two day conference will conclude on Nov. 3 with a tour of greenhouse facilities in and around the Houston area.

This year's conference is shaping up as one of the best in recent memory. Anyone interested in program details can call the Gray County Extension office - 669-7429.

A better way needed by the Senate

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — "There must be a better way," grumbled Sen. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., as the Senate tried to extricate itself from a parliamentary quagmire of gargantuan proportions.

The Senate, once again, was snarled in a tangle of its own rules.

In fact, in the closing days of any session, it's possible under Senate procedures for any single senator to nearly paralyze the chamber — either by mounting a filibuster or merely by threatening to do so.

Senate rules do not limit debate. The only way to shorten debate on a measure is for the Senate to invoke cloture — a motion that not only takes 60 votes to prevail, but which limits all future debate to a total of 100 hours.

In the last days of a session, 100 hours can account for a large chunk.

At one time, when the Senate was trying to complete work on a $500 billion omnibus spending bill, there were so many threats of filibuster that Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. had filed seven cloture petitions against various amendments to the bill.

Baker noted that he would probably go down in history as the leader who had filed the most cloture petitions.

If there are better ways to do things, there's no shortage of proposals.

For instance, Baker, who did not seek re-election, has a proposal that would limit the opportunity to filibuster to one shot per bill.

Baker also has proposed shorter sessions — allowing members to be "citizen legislators," keeping other jobs on the side, which is now prohibited.

Many senators have offered pet ideas for reforming Senate rules.

Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va., has proposed that the Senate set aside certain days for committee work and other days for floor action. That would keep senators from having to continually leave committees to go to the floor to vote — a practice that Randolph claims leaves a bad impression on visitors.

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, who hopes to be able to succeed Baker as Senate GOP leader, has come up with a whole package of proposed rule revisions.

Among his proposals: sharply reduce the 100 hours of debate now allowed after a filibuster had been ended by a cloture vote and require that amendments deal with the same subject matter of the legislation to which they are to be attached, a rule that already applies in the House.

Quayle suggested he would move for such changes in January, when the new Congress is seated. If his efforts are like past attempts to revise Senate rules, opponents will use the same Senate rules to try to scuttle the proposals.

Father hopes investigation will clear son whose death was ruled suicide

DALLAS (AP) — The family of a prize-winning fisherman who allegedly committed suicide believes foul play was involved in the death, a day before he was to testify in a federal grand jury probe of high-stakes tournament cheating.

Danny Davis, 34, was found dead of a gunshot blast to the head Aug. 28 on the bank of a gravel pit lake where he often fished alone.

"It could have been an accident. It was common for him to carry a gun out there to shoot snakes," said Oris Davis, Davis' 71-year-old father. "But there is more than one of us who thinks it could be foul play."

"He loved that place better than any place in the world. That would be the last place I would expect him to do it."

Although the Dallas County medical examiner's office ruled the death a suicide, Davis recalls his son feared he would never make it to the grand jury.

"He knew the people involved, and he knew what they would do. He told me that if he testified, he was a dead man," Davis said. "I was supposed to go with him to Tyler on Wednesday — 'If we lived to get there,' he said."

Chris Harrison, an assistant U.S. attorney, says the federal grand jury will convene again Oct. 16 in Tyler to resume its investigation. The investigation is nearing its end, Harrison said, but he could not predict if indictments would be returned.

Oris Davis hopes the investigation will answer some of the puzzling questions over his son's death.

The fishing tournament scandal has created a considerable stir among fishermen and drawn national attention. Cheating isn't unusual in fishing tournaments, fishermen say, but the death of Davis and the involvement of a federal grand jury seem to have robbed fishing, once and for all, of its carefree aura.

"I was flabbergasted," said Ed Cox Jr., chairman of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission, which now is seeking regulatory authority over fishing tournaments.

Investigators believe fish fattened in warmer Florida lakes have been shipped to Texas and used to claim tournament purses, which sometimes exceed $100,000.

The inquiry focuses on six to 12 people in Texas and Louisiana, the Dallas Morning News reported Monday.

One man, Terry L. Isam, 21, of Longview, has been charged with fraud in connection with the tournament cheating. He is being held in Harrison County's jail in Marshall on an unrelated state charge.

Isam was the apparent winner of the $100,000 Coors Invitational Big Bass Classic on Lake Lewisville in August 1983. He was disqualified, however, after tournament judges ruled that he was intoxicated and incapable of taking the required polygraph examination.

Danny Davis began fishing for rehabilitation. A technician for the Dallas Power & Light Co., he was working on an underground transformer in downtown Dallas in March 1974 when the transformer exploded, critically burning 90 percent of his body.

After more than six months in Parkland Memorial Hospital, Davis began fishing every day at a gravel pit lake on land leased by his father in Grand Prairie.

"At first, he could barely move his arms. But he stayed with it, and pretty soon he was catching big bass out of there," Davis said.

The younger Davis continued fishing after his recuperation was complete, and began winning big in bass tournaments, claiming prizes of $20,000 and $50,000 in 1983.

Yet he often returned to fish alone on the small gravel pit lake in Grand Prairie.

"That's the reason he loved that place out there — because it brought him back to life," his father said.

COUNTRY MAIL—Rural mail carrier James Cammack leans out the window of the car he uses to deliver mail in Brazoria County. He covers an 83-mile route that includes 445 boxes. (AP Laserphoto)

Rural mailman delivers mail through dust and mosquitoes

By PATRICIA McMORROW
The Brazosport Facts
CLUTE, Texas (AP) — A film of dust coats the dashboard and seats of the 1982 Checker. Package notification cards line the sun visors; a coil of 20-cent stamps hangs near the ash tray.

James Cammack apologizes for the state of his car with a grin. "Out here on these country roads you can't help but pick up a little dirt. Some days it's really bad."

Cammack is a rural mail carrier for the Brazoria branch of the U.S. Postal Service. Fazed neither by the traditional "rain, shine, sleet and snow" or the routine mud, cattle, mosquitoes and flat tires, he covers an 83-mile, 445-box route along the San Bernard River, providing "his people" with a full range of mail services.

"I give my people all the same service they could get by going into town," he says. "But some of them can't always get into town, so I'm here to take care of them."

A Brazosport native and Postal Service employee for 28 years, Cammack has worked the river route since 1965. He is one of six rural mail carriers serving the Brazoria Post Office, which has no city routes.

"I've been there longer than most anyone around," Cammack says. "I started out clerking in 1956 and I've come to know quite a bit about the post office."

Island residents enjoy isolation

By PRUDENCE HELLER
Associated Press Writer
FISHERS ISLAND, N.Y. (AP) — Thickets of bull briars and bittersweet ... birds of many feathers ... the summer estates of the very rich and the simpler homes of the year-round population of 300 or so. This is Fishers Island, N.Y., which despite its state affiliation lies only two miles off the coast of Connecticut.

The island, about one mile by eight, does not present a dramatic landscape. There are gentle hills, all that brush, a bit of woods, sand beaches and also long stretches of beach whose rounded stones, the size of large potatoes, soccer balls and upward, make a walker's arches ache.

The summer homes with their tennis courts, swimming pools, guest houses, yachts and other accoutrements are often out of sight across the thickets. They front the sea. What looks like an intriguing side road as often as not turns out to be someone's driveway.

But if many of the homes are secluded, the birds are highly visible and audible everywhere. Swans and ducks paddle along the beaches. Ospreys nest on the telephone poles. The squawk of seagulls mingles with the plaint of mourning doves and the hammering of woodpeckers. A bob white whistles as a visitor walks toward the ferry.

Fishers Island's history goes back to the days when Indians, believed to be Pequots, used to fish there, and to the appearance offshore in 1614 of the Dutch explorer Adriaen Block. One of his officers, we're told, was a man named Visscher. Anyone who wants to know how Fishers Island got its name can take his choice: because the Indians fished there or because it was named after Visscher, with the spelling changing down the years. Books and articles on the island say no one knows.

There is, however, a definite answer as to how this island, which is five times as close to Connecticut as it is to New York, comes to be part of the town of Southold, Suffolk County, New York, on the other side of Long Island Sound. The legislatures of the two states approved in 1879 an agreement settling controversy and confusion that had persisted since colonial times.

The Winthrop family, settlers of the Massachusetts Bay Colony and eastern Connecticut, owned the island for nearly two centuries — until the 1880s. Later, relatively elite families built summer homes here. The island also had an era of hotels and boarding houses, with day-trippers and weekenders

Politicians ponder polls, coattails

AUSTIN (AP) — This election year, it's a question of polls and coattails.

With the general elections a month away, Texas Republicans are wondering whether the coattails of a popular President Reagan will be long enough to sweep other GOP candidates into office with him.

Democrats, looking at opinion polls showing Reagan with a 20- to 29-percentage point lead over Walter Mondale, talk constantly about how polls don't show everything. But some, clearly, want to stay out from under Mondale's coattails.

"There is a potential for a big Republican win so long as there isn't a complacency on the part of Republican voters," said John Maxwell, director of the Texas Republican Party.

Maxwell says independent-minded voters "will recognize that there is a linkage between the presidential race and other races down the ballot" and vote for GOP congressional candidates to help push through Reagan programs.

Texas Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle is blunt, saying, "I don't believe in the coattails effect."

But some other Democrats aren't as sure.

"We're very conscious of the coattail effect," Bob Davis, campaign manager for U.S. Rep. Jack Hightower, told the Austin American-Statesman recently.

Hightower, a conservative West Texas Democrat, faces a tough challenge from Republican Beau Bolter, a former Amarillo city councilman.

"Historically, we haven't gotten involved in anyone else's campaigns," Davis said. "Let Mr. Mondale and Ms. (Geraldine) Ferraro run on their own. We'll run our deal. They can run theirs."

Reagan won Texas in 1980. No Democrat has become president without carrying the state. But Reagan leads handily in the 20 polls right now.

On a recent swing through the state, Mondale joined what has become a chorus of Texas Democrats in talking about polls and 1982.

That year, Republican Gov. Bill Clements enjoyed a sizeable lead over Mark White, only to lose on election day.

"On the eve of the election, Mark White was 12 points behind in the polls, and he won by six points," Mondale said.

At a Mondale rally in Houston, Sheila Jackson Lee shouted to an audience of 1,200 students who were waiting for Mondale to speak at Texas Southern University.

"How many of you have phones?" she asked. When only a few hands in the mostly black audience went up, she shouted: "Have you been called to ask who you're going to vote for?" A wave of "no" was the answer.

Texas gobbler is triumphant

CUERO, Texas (AP) — Paycheck came into the race with a decisive 30-second advantage but the Traveling Turkey Trophy of Tumultuous Triumph slipped through the wings.

Ruby Begonia of Cuero ran the second heat of the Great Gobbler Gallop in 30 seconds to win the trophy Sunday during the annual Turkey Fest in Cuero.

"That's why we're going to send those polls walking. We're going to vote that president out of office," she said.

Polls also figure in the Texas U.S. Senate race, one of the most visible contests in the nation.

The surveys indicate Democrat-turned-Republican Phil Gramm is running as much as 10 percentage points ahead of liberal Democratic state Sen. Lloyd Doggett.

But many political analysts of both political persuasions say the race still could be very close.

George Christian, former White House press secretary to Lyndon Johnson, noted that historically, "the Democratic presidential candidate lags behind the Senate candidate in Texas.

"When (George) McGovern was defeated in Texas (by Richard Nixon in 1972), the Democratic Senate candidate who also lost was 10 to 12 points better. If there is a landslide for Reagan in Texas, Gramm probably will win. If the gap is narrowed, Doggett has a chance," Christian said.

Ken Towery, former state campaign chairman for retiring GOP Sen. John G. Tower, also says Gramm isn't running as strongly as is Reagan.

"I think Gramm will run several percentage points behind Reagan," he said.

Doggett has worked hard to portray himself as the underdog, even describing himself as "David" to Gramm's "Goliath."

And although Gramm has been running an advertising-rich campaign since summer, Doggett campaign strategist James Carville says the Democrat's campaign is only now getting ready to take off.

"Our strategy has always been that we'd basically key the campaign up in October, that we financially could not fight and sustain a war of attrition," Carville said. "And after they've thrown everything at us, we're still very much standing, we're ready to go, we have our money in the bank."

Both national senatorial campaign committees are expected to pump the maximum donations — $889,000 — to Doggett and Gramm.

The two have debated once, and a second televised confrontation is scheduled this month.

Gramm says he is taking nothing for granted, that he is "not in any way comfortable."

"I expect it to be a close race," he said.

However, the GOP hopeful clearly enjoy having Reagan's name on the top of the ballot.

"No one has ever run in this state as strongly as Ronald Reagan is running," he said.

Besides electing a president and U.S. Senator, Texans will be choosing 27 congressmen, 16 state senators, all 150 state representatives, a railroad commissioner, three Supreme Court justices, three Court of Criminal Appeals justices and deciding the fate of eight proposed constitutional amendments.

In the congressional races, the Republican Party has targeted several Texas districts and is providing all sorts of support — from money to campaign visits by national Republican stars.

The GOP national campaign committee has targeted and will spend about $400,000 in eight races, those in Districts 6, 8, 13, 14, 16, 19, 22 and 26.

According to some sources, including the Institute for Government and Politics' recent "Political Report," the GOP believes its best hopes are Boulder against Democrat Hightower in the 13th District, and Larry Combest, who is running against Democrat Richards in the 19th District — the seat vacated this year by conservative Democratic Rep. Kent Hance.

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, in accordance with an order from the Public Utility Commission of Texas, hereby gives notice it has filed a tariff to reduce the monthly rates for the Switched Access portion of the company's intraLATA Foreign Exchange (FX) Service offering that was implemented starting June 1, 1984. Simultaneously, the LATA-wide toll-free calling scope, also started June 1, would be discontinued and the calling scope would return to that in effect prior to June 1. The Commission has assigned this matter Docket Number 5891.

The net effect of the tariff will be a monthly decrease in total billing of approximately $700,000 until November 1, 1984. After that time the net effect on the company's revenue is estimated to be negligible.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Southwestern Bell Telephone

Aviso Público

En conformidad con una orden de la Comisión de Servicios Públicos de Texas, se anuncia mediante el presente aviso público que Southwestern Bell Telephone ha presentado una tarifa con el objeto de reducir las cuotas mensuales que se han cobrado desde el 1 de junio de 1984, por la porción de la tarifa para acceso a la red central necesaria con el uso del Servicio de Zona Exterior (Foreign Exchange (FX) Service).

Simultáneamente, el servicio de llamadas de larga distancia sin cobro dentro del área de servicio que también se efectuó el 1 de junio de 1984, se discontinuará; y el campo de llamadas será al igual que antes del 1 de junio de 1984. Se ha registrado la nueva tarifa bajo el Docket 5891.

El efecto real de la nueva tarifa se verá en la reducción del costo total de facturas de aproximadamente $700,000 hasta el 1 de noviembre de 1984. Se calcula que después de esta fecha el efecto real para nuestra empresa será despreciable.

Los usuarios de Southwestern Bell Telephone Company que estén interesados en participar en esta reunión, o que requieran mayor información, deben dirigirse por escrito a: Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. LIFESTYLES

Pampa tales of the '20s recalled in new book

By MARGARET C. BIGGER
 With the help of The Pampa News readers, John Carter Goldsborough filled in the blanks of his 50-year-old memories about Gray County. Some of those memories are now recorded in his book, "Only 40 Miles of Pavement" recently published by Eakin Press of Austin.

After the newspaper article about his questions was printed in March 1982, Elleta Nolte, Lee Harrah, Hazel Clark and Mrs. J.L. Bain all wrote to Goldsborough naming the restaurant with room-and-bed accommodations where the former traveling salesman ended a dust-storm ordeal. Each suggested a different name.

"None rang a bell," so I told the tale without the name," said the 80-year-old author from Charlotte, N.C.

In the late 1920s, Goldsborough sold building materials for the United States Gypsum Company

(USG) in the Panhandle of Texas and Western Oklahoma.

"That first territory had 19,000 square miles in 19 counties and only 40 miles of paved roads, including the main streets of the towns," he recalled. "Why I remember when there was not even a trail from Pampa to Borger. There were only criss-crossed tire tracks across the prairie from Panhandle to Borger then."

One entire chapter of "Only 40 Miles of Pavement" is about the oil-boom town, Borger, but there are many references to Pampa.

The four people who wrote to Goldsborough are named in the acknowledgements, as are Daniel D. Snider of Lovett Memorial Library, Lynn Hunter, former editor of The Pampa News, and Clotilde Thompson of the White Deer Land Museum. Mrs. Thompson assisted Goldsborough when he was "checking memories" on a research trip in 1981.

Goldsborough and Nolte, who was writing a book for the Gray County Historical Society, exchanged information. For him, Nolte interviewed oilman E.J. Dunigan about the landowner's fight to keep the North Fork of the Red River from being declared navigable.

A participant in the proceedings to stop the state from claiming the entire riverbed (and the oil in that area), Dunigan described the prolonged fight. But his facts did not match Goldsborough's recollections.

"When I was there, people talked about the landowners marching into the legislative hall in Austin and laying .45s on the lawmakers' desks just before the bill came up from my manuscript," he said.

The USG salesman did see a theater change hands in a high-stakes domino game in the lobby of the Schneider Hotel. "A bystander told me the winner had put up an oil lease," he recalled.

At the Schneider, he also saw the famous oil well shooter Tex Thornton, resting up after blowing out a well with nitroglycerin. Goldsborough described Thornton as a huge man, skin darkened and spotted from burns, who boasted of 400 such scars.

"The people of Pampa will have to read my book to find out what else I told about their town and their grandparents," he said with a wink.

John Carter Goldsborough lost the seven Texas counties of his territory in a company reorganization in 1928. In 1932, he left Oklahoma. Seven years later, he was transferred to Charlotte to open a USG district office. He remained district manager there until just before his retirement in 1969.

A widower, Goldsborough lives alone at 2201 Malvern Road in Charlotte, N.C., 28207.

Dear Abby

Parents carry to their grave their grudge against daughter

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am sitting here brokenhearted over a problem that could have been resolved years ago. My father died last week; my mother died a year ago. Although we were very close when I was younger, they stopped speaking to me six years ago when I decided to live with my boyfriend, whom I have since married.

When I first told my parents I was moving in with my boyfriend, they called me "slut, tramp" and a few other names you can't print.

I was over 21 and wasn't hurting myself or anybody else, but after this move, they wanted nothing more to do with me. When I invited them to my wedding, they didn't even respond.

Now that they are gone, I feel angry and bitter that they could let this one difference come between us forever. They missed the opportunity of sharing their lives with me, my husband and our son.

Why am I writing? Because I hope you will print this as a plea to other parents who feel the way mine did about living together. Please, parents, don't lock your children out of your lives because their ideas differ from yours.

with International Soundex Reunion Registry in Carson City, Nev.

Until I read it in your column, I never knew such a service existed. I have often had a desire to contact the daughter I placed for adoption 21 years ago.

I filed my application, and within days, a match was made! (My daughter had filed with Soundex Registry, too.) I have spoken with her on the phone, and we made plans to meet in the near future. I am still recovering from the incredible experience. Thank you for making it possible!

KATHERINE C. IN SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR KATHERINE: I share your joy. I want to repeat, however, that minors may register with Soundex, but until they are 18, they may not be matched with their birth parents. And only if their parents have also registered with Soundex can a match be made. I am in full agreement that birth parents and adoptees should be able to meet, but only when it is mutually agreeable.

DEAR NO NAME: Here's your letter. I'm sure many parents will identify with it. My mail tells me that although most parents disapprove of "living together," they accept it rather than lose their children.

CONFIDENTIAL TO THE CAMBRIDGE BUM: I recently reread the letter you wrote to me in 1970. A reader requested it because he thought it contained a powerful moral lesson for young people. I agreed. You were 18 and wrote from prison in Cambridge, Minn., while awaiting trial for burglary and other charges. Many readers wrote to ask what happened to you. If you see this, please let me know. Write to Abby, Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q: - We will soon be in need of a new roof on our 24-year-old house. I would like to tackle the job myself, since I am fairly handy at most do-it-yourself projects. However, I have never done any roof work and do not know if I have the skill to take on a reroofing job. Can you give me some advice?

A: - Yes. From the wording of your letter, part of which had to be left out because of space reasons, it is a fairly good guess that you should not do the job yourself. If you were asking whether you should do almost any other do-it-yourself project, the answer probably would be in the affirmative as long as you were aware that the trial might cost you some time and effort if things did not work properly. But there is an added and important consideration. In this case, the factor of safety is involved. In order to do a reroofing job, you should be physically fit, able to move about on a roof easily and know which steps to take to avoid danger. All this in addition to a knowledge of how to install the shingles and the skill to perform the various necessary chores. Even if you are convinced you can handle the job, try some lesser roof project first to see what it's like before you tackle an entire reroofing task. For the moment, therefore, the advice is not to do it, but that's because there is no way of knowing from here what your physical capabilities are. ---

Q: - We have an old brick house and want to paint it to give it a better appearance. Can we use latex paint over it?

A: - Generally, it is better than oil-based paint because the alkali in the brick mortar sometimes attacks oil paint. Before putting on the paint, go over the walls carefully and be sure the mortar between the joints is in good shape. Replace that which is beginning to crumble, even a bit. You can buy and use the mortar which comes already mixed and requires only the addition of water to make it workable.

(The techniques of using varnish, lacquer, shellac, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743.

Panel provides help for consumers

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

You've had the appliance for two years and it has been nothing but trouble. It's been fixed several times under warranty, but now the warranty has expired and it's broken again.

Before replacing it or running up a big repair bill, consider another option: appealing to the Major Appliance Consumer Action Panel.

MACAP is sponsored by, but independent from the Association of Home Appliance Manufacturers, the Gas Appliances Manufacturers Association and the National Retail Merchants Association. Its primary purpose is to review consumer complaints which have not been resolved at the retail, installer or manufacturer level and to recommend a fair resolution of the dispute. Since 1968, the volunteer panel has reviewed 35,780 consumer complaints, resolving about 80 percent of them, often in the consumer's favor.

MACAP processes complaints about all types of major appliances, including traditional stoves and ovens and microwaves, room air conditioners, trash compactors and water heaters.

Normally the panel meets from six to eight times a year at MACAP's Chicago headquarters. But recently the panel took its show on the road to New York, where an open session was held to acquaint county extension agents with its work.

At the open meeting, Dr. Elsie Fetterman, chairman of the panel and a consumer education specialist, and other panel members offered some general guidelines on appliance selection and use.

The panel suggested consumers should also weigh warranty information while considering other factors such as price, size and features when shopping for new appliances. Though manufacturers are not required to provide warranties, a federal law specifies that they must provide information on their warranty policies on every product that costs more than $15. Retailers are obligated to make this information available to consumers at the point of purchase.

Full warranties offer more protection than limited warranties, since they require the warrantor to remedy a problem in a reasonable time and without charge or to replace the product as long as the warranty is in effect. A limited warranty is responsible solely for what is outlined in the terms of the warranty.

Once you've gotten an appliance home, you should take the time to put it through all its paces, testing all the features and controls. Warranties are based on time, not usage, and flaws discovered after the warranty has lapsed are not covered. If, however, you've had a problem with the appliance under warranty and it reoccurs, many companies will consider repairing the problem.

Since receipts documenting service calls serve as proof of a problem, consumers should be sure to obtain and keep service receipts, even when there is no charge for the call or repair.

Consumers who have trouble with a major appliance should follow a four-step procedure to have the problem resolved. The first step is to read the use and care book to be sure you are operating the appliance correctly.

Next, contact the local dealer or service agency authorized to repair the appliance. If this is not effective, contact the manufacturer, whose name and address is furnished in the use and care booklet. If you are still not satisfied, write the Major Appliance Consumer Action Panel at 20 North Wacker Drive, Chicago, IL 60606.

MACAP will forward your complaint directly to the manufacturer for a last consideration. If you aren't satisfied, MACAP will review the facts and make a specific recommendation. Manufacturers are not obligated to follow the panel's advice, but according to a representative, Ms. Fetterman, in approximately 98 percent of the cases, they do.

Consumers who write to MACAP should include the following information to have their complaint processed quickly:

- Your name, address and daytime phone number.
- The type of appliance, brand and model number.
- The name, address and phone number of the dealer or service agency involved.
- Copies of any letters you have written or received about your complaint.

Homeowners plan ahead for winter

The traditional cycle of falling temperatures and rising home heating and utility bills each winter has many homeowners planning ahead for the coming cold weather months.

Among the most popular energy conservation projects are listed as follows:

-Adding insulation. A significant improvement in attic insulation by adding a layer of roll-on or blow-in insulation. A 700 square foot attic, for example, can be insulated with blow-in cellulose insulation for about $100 in most areas of the nation, providing an additional R-19 of insulation.

-Cellulose insulation, which is loose and comes in bags, also can be used in homes without adequate wall insulation.

-Replacing leaky windows with new energy efficient models.

-Addition of a storm window, either permanent or a winter-only plastic model.

-Application of tape or foam sealing products to fill cracks and cut drafts around windows and doors.

-A hot water heater insulating blanket, keeping cold air away from the water heater.

-Caulking around window and door frames, and any other areas where cold air can get in.

Many other projects and products are available for energy conservation. Homeowners should consult their local gas and electric company for other money saving suggestions. And many home winterizing projects may qualify for state or federal energy tax credits.

Your financial prospects look encouraging for the year ahead. However, you may be extremely careful not to lend money to unreliable persons.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your resources must be managed with considerable prudence today. Think twice before assuming any new long-term obligations. The Matchmaker wheel reveals your compatibility to all signs, as well as showing you to which signs you are best suited romantically. To get yours, mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Strive to keep a cool head today so you do not react out of emotion rather than logic. Be especially tolerant with your valued relationships.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Procrastination could put you behind the eight ball today. Don't dilly-dally. Give your responsibilities and duties prompt attention.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Independence is an admirable quality, but today, if you fail to go along with the will of the majority, you could be left out on the limb.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If the workaday world treats you a bit roughly today, don't come home and take it out on innocent members of your family. Leave your frustrations at the door.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Think before speaking today or you may say something in the presence of friends you might later regret. Extricating your foot from your mouth won't be easy.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your grandiose financial schemes may look good on paper today, yet they might not be feasible. Re-examine them to be sure they make sense.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be extremely selective of your associations today. Persons whose value systems are not on par with yours could make you look bad.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Attempting to make major changes in your work habits or procedures today could add to your burdens, rather than lightening them.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're the one who could end up the loser if you ignore a close and valued friend today in order to be more attentive to a person you met only recently.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll desire lofty accomplishments today but you may not be prepared to pay the price in tenacity that is required to achieve them.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Try not to be glib today. Unfortunately, information passed on by others may have little basis in fact.

Tigers, Padres open World Series tonight

SAN DIEGO (AP) — It is a matchup both of contrasts — tradition vs. expansion — and common threads binding the San Diego Padres and Detroit Tigers.

And it wasn't even supposed to start here. Chicago was all charged up for its first World Series in 25 years, perhaps the Cubs' first world championship in 76.

But in a most improbable of comebacks, the Padres, only 15 years old, won the final three games in the National League's best-of-five playoffs and now find themselves hosting tonight's opening game of their first World Series.

In Chicago, where waiting for next year has become a family tradition, handed down from generation to generation, a psychiatrist and Cubs fan, Helene Starr, was quoted as saying of the Padres: "I don't want you to think I'm bitter, but let me say this... I hope the Tigers squash them, eat them up and spit them out. I hate the Padres! Their colors stink, too!"

Their colors are those of autumn, brown and gold, but in Southern California, autumn is only a word, not a season. It is forever sunny, warm and green. Not a bit like Detroit, the very essence of fall — cool, crisp and rich in World Series tradition.

Eight times previously, the Tigers have participated in this fall classic, winning three of them, most recently in 1968. The names, too, ring of tradition — Ty Cobb, Charlie Gehringer, Mickey Cochrane, Hank Greenberg, Al Kaline.

And in San Diego, major league baseball tradition is, well, nonexistent. In fact, for a while a decade ago, major league baseball here almost was nonexistent. C. Arnholt Smith, then the owner of the Padres, was on the verge of selling the franchise, which was to be moved to Washington, D.C.

Instead, he sold it to the late Ray Kroc, the hamburger king, founder of McDonald's, a pioneer in fast-food franchising.

This, incidentally, is being called the fast-food series matching McDonald's against Domino's Pizza, a nationwide chain owned by Tom Monaghan, who bought the Tigers after the 1983 season.

Kroc, who in his early years as the team's owner was perhaps best known for grabbing a stadium microphone, apologizing to the fans for the club's performance and berating his players, went about the business the past few years of finding the right parts to the puzzle.

The pivotal one was Dick Williams, a manager with winning credentials in Boston, Oakland and Montreal.

the coast with the Los Angeles Dodgers who led the team with 86 runs batted in. He was the Padres' Most Valuable Player in the NL Championship Series against the Cubs, who nearly outbid San Diego for his services in the free-agent market before the 1983 season.

— Third baseman Graig Nettles, the still-slick fielder with the occasional lightning in his bat (seven home runs in six consecutive games in August) was acquired in trade from the New York Yankees.

— Relief pitcher Rich "Goose" Gossage, the stopper out of the bullpen (25 saves) the Padres had so sorely missed, was signed out of

And Jack McKeon, vice president for baseball operations, went about spending Kroc's money for the rest of the pieces, among them:

— First baseman Steve Garvey, for years the All-American boy up free agency when he tired of Yankee owner George Steinbrenner's meddling.

Less traveled than Williams but equally successful is Detroit's manager, Sparky Anderson.

Cowboys' Hill ready to return

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Just when the Dallas Cowboys need him the most, wide receiver Tony Hill is eligible to begin full-scale workouts.

Doug Donley is questionable against the Washington Redskins on Sunday with a pulled hamstring and a shoulder injury.

Hill represents a deep threat for the Cowboys, who are having trouble getting their offense untracked.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry was moved to change quarterbacks in Sunday's 31-20 loss to the St. Louis Cardinals but Danny White says he has no reason to believe he will be the starting quarterback against Washington.

"Hogey has been starting and he probably will again. He didn't have much help in any area and a quarterback can only do so much."

White said he was stunned when Landry called him off the bench.

"I was a little surprised," White said. "I really wasn't expecting to play. The game was still in doubt. We still had a chance to win."

White was cheered and Hogeboom bood, just the reverse of what happened last year when White was the No. 1 quarterback.

"It was nice to have that reception," White said. "The fans have been great throughout this whole thing. They really have been very supporting and encouraging."

The loss dropped Dallas to a 4-2 record and into a tie with the Redskins in the National Conference Eastern Division.

Hogeboom said he wasn't overjoyed about being yanked out of the game.

"I wasn't pleased, but then again, hey, you've got to try something," Hogeboom said. "We were down and needed something to get us going offensively. We weren't doing that good."

Texas quarterback may miss OU game

AUSTIN (AP) — Coach Fred Akers of No. 1-ranked Texas says the Longhorns and Oklahoma are alike in at least one way: Both teams can trace their undefeated seasons to the play of their quarterbacks.

Akers on Monday described Oklahoma quarterback Danny Bradley "as the most physically gifted quarterback we've faced."

Texas and Oklahoma, 4-0, meet Saturday at the Cotton Bowl in Dallas before a sellout crowd of 75,587 and a national television audience. Kickoff is at 2:50 p.m., CDT.

Dodge, who went down with a hyperextended knee in Texas' 38-13 victory over Rice on Saturday night, missed practice Monday and Akers said it is only "possible" that he might play against Oklahoma.

Dodge, among the nation's top-rated quarterbacks, has completed 30 of 49 passes for 488 yards and four touchdowns this season.

If Dodge should miss the OU game, Akers said his son, Danny, a 5-foot-9 senior who has never started, "would be the probable starter."

Stafford, is behind Danny Akers, and Coach Akers was asked if he had thought about moving senior tailback Rob Moerscheil back to quarterback. "We thought about it but not for long," he said.

Dodge was among eight starters on the Texas injury list, and Akers said tailback-fullback Ronnie Robinson and offensive guard Paul Jetton are "doubtful" for Oklahoma. The others could return to practice this week but might not be 100 percent healthy.

Akers was asked if the 1984 Oklahoma team is different than other OU teams.

"Not basically," he said. "They've got the speedy backs in numbers, and they'll have the largest offensive line we'll see. They're a very aggressive offensive team. I think probably the biggest difference is they're getting really good play from their quarterback, Bradley. He's a much-improved football player."

"We know he's a fine runner and a great scrambler, and he's throwing the ball well, which gives them more versatility, but physically they're the same type football team with great speed and size."

"Defensively, they're quicker — quicker moving as a whole unit than they have been the last two or three years as far as I can see," Akers said.

He said he didn't know if the Texas-Oklahoma matchup would display the two best college teams in the nation. "I'd say we're two of the best. This game ... is considered by most to be the No. 1 college football game in the country today," Akers said.

As far as a favorite is concerned, he said, "more times than not ... this kind of football game is a tossup."

Akers is 5-2 as a Texas coach against Oklahoma.

49ers rip Giants, stay unbeaten

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers learned a good lesson about the value of keeping a big lead earlier this season and they showed the New York Giants they hadn't forgotten it.

Quarterback Joe Montana threw two touchdown passes and Dana McLemore returned a punt 79 yards for another score as the 49ers ripped the Giants 31-10 Monday night to remain one of two undefeated teams in the National Football League this season.

"Even though we jumped to a 21-0 lead, the game was by no means over," said safety Dwight Hicks, who had an interception in the nationally televised game. "It's a comfortable lead but you still have to play hard."

That's the lesson the 49ers learned earlier this season against the Washington Redskins. San Francisco grabbed a 27-0 lead in that game, but had to sweat out a 37-31 victory.

"It wasn't that long ago and it popped into everybody's mind once we got the big lead," said linebacker Keena Turner. "We knew what happened in the Washington game and we knew it could happen again if we did not keep playing."

The 49ers never did as they raised their record to 6-0, the best start in the team's history.

"The 6-0 means consistency throughout the ballclub," said Montana, who completed 15 of 24 passes for 207 yards and three touchdowns. "We are playing well."

That was especially true in the first quarter as the 49ers scored on their first three possessions in a span of seven minutes, 33 seconds.

Montana, wearing a flack vest to protect sore ribs, connected with speedster Renaldo Nehemiah on a 59-yard scoring play just 2:32 into the game. Less than four minutes later, he tossed a 1-yard TD pass to tight end John Frank.

McLemore's long punt return, the second against New York in as many weeks, turned the game into a rout.

Montana added his third touchdown pass in the second quarter on an 8-yard swing pass to fullback Roger Craig and Ray Wersching added a 37-yard field goal in the third period.

For the Giants, it was their second straight miserable performance. They dropped a 33-12 decision to the Los Angeles Rams last Sunday.

"We were bound and determined when we left San Francisco to play the best possible game in New York," said Coach Bill Walsh. "You're never a class football team until you come to New York and win."

That apparently was never in doubt to many Giants fans who left at halftime. When the game ended the stands were virtually empty.

Texas retains top ranking

Texas held onto its No. 1 ranking today in The Associated Press college football poll, while Oklahoma, the Longhorns' opponent next Saturday, climbed from fifth place to third.

Washington took advantage of Ohio State's 28-23 loss to Purdue and replaced the Buckeyes as No. 2, while Purdue, South Carolina and Kentucky made the Top Twenty after absences of several years.

Texas, a 38-13 winner over Rice, received 55 of 59 first-place votes and 1,170 of a possible 1,180 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

While Ohio State dropped from second to eighth, Washington, No. 3 a week ago, moved up one spot with one first-place ballot and 1,049 points following a 19-7 triumph over Oregon State.

Oklahoma was idle last weekend but jumped from fifth to third with one first-place vote and 1,038 points. The other two first-place ballots went to Boston College, which was idle for the second week in a row and received 1,026 points to remain No. 4. The Eagles return to action this weekend against Temple.

Brigham Young moved up from seventh to fifth with 932 points for a 52-6 rout of Colorado State and Nebraska, a 17-3 winner over Oklahoma State, rose from eighth to sixth with 869 points while the Cowboys fell from ninth to 13th.

Southern Methodist also was off last weekend and the Mustangs received 807 points while going from 10th place to seventh. Eighth-place Ohio State received 690 points, while Florida State dropped from sixth to ninth with 646 points after a 17-17 tie with Memphis State. Miami rounded out the Top Ten, vaulting from 14th to 10th with 605 points by defeating Notre Dame 31-13 and knocking the Irish out of the rankings.

The Top Ten consists of Penn State, LSU, Oklahoma State, Purdue, Georgia, Auburn, South Carolina, Florida, Kentucky and Georgia Tech.

Last week, it was Penn State, Georgia Tech, Michigan, Miami, LSU, Notre Dame, UCLA, Auburn, Vanderbilt and Georgia.

Purdue, 4-1, last appeared in the Top Twenty in 1980, finishing the season as the No. 17 team.

South Carolina, which trounced Kansas State 49-17 to go 4-0, also made the rankings for the first time since the 1980 season. That year, the Gamecocks were in the Top Twenty 12 times.

COUNTRY NEWCOMERS—The Judds, a mother- and - daughter duo, accept the horizon award Monday night at the 18th annual

Country Music Association Awards show at the Grand Ole Opry House in Nashville. (AP Laserphoto)

Alabama wins third entertainer of year

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Alabama's bouncy fiddle music and soft love songs won the group a record third entertainer of the year award, and guitarist Chet Atkins won top instrumentalist for the seventh time at the 18th Country Music Association ceremonies.

The award pushed Alabama past Barbara Mandrell for most awards as top entertainer. Miss Mandrell, who missed Monday night's ceremonies because of injuries sustained in a car accident but was shown at home via remote camera, won entertainer of the year in 1980 and 1981.

"We don't take entertainer of the year lightly," said Alabama lead singer Randy Owen. "We are going to make plans tomorrow to make you proud you voted for us."

Miss Mandrell, Lee Greenwood, Ronnie Milsap and the Oak Ridge Boys were finalists for the top honor. The award presented at the Grand Ole Opry house is based on excellence in all phases of country music.

Alabama was bolstered by the album "Roll On," which contains the hit singles "Roll On," "When We Make Love" and "If You're Gonna Play in Texas (You Gotta Have a Fiddle in the Band)."

Monday night's winners were chosen by the 8,000 singers, musicians, songwriters and other country music professionals who belong to the CMA — the industry's trade association.

Greenwood, a former casino dealer who scored this year with the hit "God Bless the USA," was voted top male vocalist for the second straight year.

A tearful Reba McEntire, who sings hard-core country music, received a standing ovation when she was chosen top female vocalist.

The only double winner was Anne Murray, who won single of the year and album of the year for "A Little Good News." They were her first CMA awards after 14 years of trying.

Willie Nelson and Julio Iglesias were voted vocal duo of the year.

The Statlers won vocal group of the year for the ninth time, ending Alabama's three-year hold on the award.

News in brief

CHICAGO (AP) — The suspension of 220 pupils at a parochial school because their parents missed Mass boosted attendance at Holy Angels Church and shows the church is "serious," the pastor says.

Usual attendance at Sunday Mass is about 2,700 people, but about 3,500 people came on Sunday, the Rev. George Clements said Monday. The suspension "certainly was a contributing factor."

A week ago, Clements suspended 220 elementary school pupils because their parents had not lived up to an agreement they signed to attend Mass each week. The children were back in school after their parents agreed to attend Mass.

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The American Civil Liberties Union says a county budget analyst who was fired because he suffers from AIDS is a victim of discrimination.

Broward County officials acknowledge Todd Shuttleworth, 31, was fired Sept. 13 because he has acquired immune deficiency syndrome. One official said that because the disease is communicable and fatal the county was taking no chances.

Allan H. Terl of the ACLU's Broward County chapter, said over the weekend that the ACLU would either appeal to the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission or go directly to court.

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's Foreign Ministry, in an annual report released today, called for greater East-West dialogue but expressed doubts that the current Soviet leadership is strong enough for serious talks on easing tensions.

Names in news

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Singer Kenny Rogers apparently believes in sticking with a good thing. After teaming up with Dolly Parton for the 1983 hit song, "Islands in the Stream," Rogers announced the duo will get together for a television special, a concert tour and an album.

"I think she is singularly the most talented individual I ever met," Rogers said Monday.

Their one-hour television special, "Kenny and Dolly: A Christmas to Remember," is scheduled for broadcast Dec. 2 on CBS.

The two are to begin a concert tour Dec. 31 in Los Angeles. And they will have an album out soon, "Once Upon a Christmas."

Thursday at the Aldwych Theater.

Ros Asquith in The Observer called the show "a one-joke play."

But Michael Coveney in The Financial Times said, "You will find 'The Nerd' either very funny indeed or not funny at all. I found it very funny indeed."

"Fool For Love," the comedy-drama about incest and love set in the American frontier West, is in its second year off-Broadway. It opened Friday at the National Theater's Cottesloe auditorium starring film actors Ian Charleson of "Chariots of Fire" and Julie Walters of "Educating Rita."

"The gritty comedy is short-changed," John Barber wrote in The Daily Telegraph.

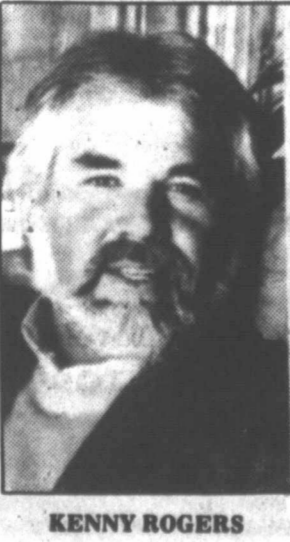

Francis King in The Sunday Telegraph said, "The play tends to ludicrous overemphasis."

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — "Sad Sack" may not have had a whole lot of faith in the cartoon Army in which he served, and now cartoonist Fred Rhoads is not so sure about the real-life jury system.

The state court of Appeals last week overturned a $2.58 million award for Rhoads in his legal battle against Harvey Publications Inc. of New York.

LONDON (AP) — British theater goes don't suffer fools — or nerds — gladly. Two American plays, Larry Shue's "The Nerd" and Sam Shepard's "Fool For Love," have opened to mixed reviews here.

"The Nerd," a comedy about a parasitical house-guest that stars the Oxford-educated comic Rowan Atkinson, opened
