Rev. Turner recipient of award

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Rev. Joe L. Turner, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church here since 1977, was named Outstanding Citizen of the Year during the 59th annual banquet meeting of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce Thursday night.

Presenting the award was Dudley Steele, last year's recipient.

The selection of the outstanding citizen award is made by a secret Chamber committee, Steele explained. The award "is significant in this case" since Rev. Turner is being honored after being a resident of the city for only seven years, he added.

Rev. Turner's "interests have focused on people of all ages," Steele said. Turner is "an eternal optimist... his optimism, continual good attitude, always positive, never negative" and other fine characteristics have helped him in his endeavors and successes, Steele said.

These qualities are exemplified in the activities Turner has promoted and participated in during the seven years he has lived in Pampa, Steele stated.

Turner served in an advisory capacity to the Gray County Committee on Aging to help establish the Pampa Meals on Wheels program, which delivers meals daily to the elderly and others.

He has been a member and past chairman of the advisory board for the Satellite Center for Mentally Retarded, leading to the Pampa Sheltered Workshop, which supplies a learning, social and working situation for mentally retarded and handicapped persons.

A member of the Pampa Ministerial Alliance, Turner has been instrumental in establishing an accredited Hospital Chaplaincy Training Program at Coronado Community Hospital for local and area pastors.

Turner also has given strong support to the Community Day-Care Center, serving on its board of directors. He also is a past member and chairman of

Missing children line expected to be busy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Operators are geared up to handle a possible avalanche of calls following today's opening of a nationwide telephone hot line to gather information on missing children.

"We think it's going to be an awful lot," Jay Howell, executive director of the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, said Thursday. "We're prepared to do whatever we have to do. No one is certain what the demand's going to be."

Howell is overseeing the startup of the first federally funded nationwide service to take tips on the whereabouts of missing children. Each year somewhere between 500,000 and 2 million children are reported missing.

"We are confident that this national telephone number will result in many missing children being safely returned to their homes," Howell said.

People with information on missing children may call a toll-free number and relay their leads to operators working at the center's computer bank. The tips will then be turned over to local, state and federal law enforcement agencies.

The toll-free number is 1-800-943-5678. Until Alaska and Hawaii are tied into the toll-free number, the temporary number for those states is 202-634-9836. Calls for information and assistance are received at the National Center's main number, 202-634-9821.

A former district attorney in Florida and a U.S. Senate investigator, Howell also is overseeing preparation of materials to help parents proceed when their children are missing, advise law enforcement officers on the latest search techniques and educate families on how to prevent abductions and sexual abuse of youngsters.

He gave some examples of specific advice:

— Police investigating the case of a missing child should return to the scene of the disappearance 24 hours, 48 hours and a week after the initial report to canvas for witnesses whose regular activities bring them into the area.

"Don't ask, 'did you see anything suspicious?'" Howell counsels. "Instead ask, 'What did you see?'"

— Authorities should assume from the outset that the disappearance of a child may be a kidnapping. "The first few minutes may be the only time during which evidence or information is going to come to light about the child," he said.

— Children should be given clear information about danger signals to watch out for. They should be told, for instance, "no one should be touching you on the bathing suit areas of your body or asking you to touch them there. Adults should not be asking you to keep special secrets," Howell suggested.

The center opened last May with a $3.3 million grant from the Justice Department.

CIA probe demanded

Manual endorsing assassination triggers furor

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats, dissatisfied with President Reagan's order of an internal review, are demanding an independent investigation into the CIA's production of a manual endorsing "selective use of violence" against some officials of the Nicaragua's leftist government.

President Reagan ordered the CIA on Thursday to conduct an internal review and asked his three appointees who sit on the Intelligence Oversight Board to carry out a separate inquiry.

But House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. said any in-house CIA investigation could be a "whitewash" and added that the probe should be turned over to the congressional General Accounting Office.

Meanwhile, the manual emerged as the hottest new issue in the presidential campaign only three days before Sunday's foreign policy debate between Reagan and Walter F. Mondale.

Democratic vice presidential nominee Geraldine Ferraro cited it as an example of the administration's "moral blindness," and added: "Anyone who believes for one minute that refining murder techniques of Central Americans will advance our national interests is gravely mistaken."

Reagan's order for an investigation also ended four days of administration silence on the issue after The Associated Press reported the manual's existence Monday.

The White House response Thursday included a statement that the administration "has not advocated or condoned political assassination."

In New York, Reagan rejected new demands for the ouster of CIA Director William J. Casey, saying "there is no guilt there." He also asserted that the agency was "not at all" out of control despite its role in producing the 90-page book.

The manual, entitled "Psychological Operations in Guerrilla War," recommends hiring professional criminals to carry out "selective jobs," creating a "martyr" by arranging a violent demonstration that leads to the death of a rebel supporter, and coercing Nicaraguans into carrying out assignments against their will.

In announcing the CIA investigation, the White House said the inquiry would be carried out by the agency's inspector general, John Stein. But the CIA said Stein had to disqualify himself because when the manual was produced a year ago, he was director of covert actions and thus supervised the Nicaraguan operation.

CIA spokeswoman Patti Volz said the investigation would be turned over to Stein's deputy, whom she refused to identify.

Within a few hours of Reagan's announced investigation, a senior administration official told reporters that the manual was written by a "free-wheeling, free-lancing" CIA contract employee who produced it without the knowledge of his superiors.

"He clearly did not know how we do business," said the official, who insisted on anonymity. "This individual was clearly operating outside the way the CIA wants its contract employees to operate."

Election interest high in area

BY CATHY SPAULDING

If voter registration and absentee ballot applications are any indication, area county clerks can expect a high turnout for the Nov. 6 presidential election.

In the three days since absentee balloting began, county clerks are already reporting that many people have applied for absentee ballots. County tax assessor-collectors reported heavy voter registration before the Oct. 7 deadline.

Gray County Clerk Wanda Carter said turnout has been heavy in her office this week. So far, 159 Gray County people have applied for absentee ballots in person. Among those, 13 were ballots that were mailed early to voters overseas. About 246 absentee ballots have been mailed out.

While registrars in Roberts, Hemphill, Wheeler and Carson counties have current voter registration lists, Gray County tax assessor-collector Margie Gray said her current figures are not in yet. The voter registrations are listed on a computer system and are tallied by Western Data of Dallas. The accounting firm has not yet returned the registration figures to the county.

Gray's most recent figures are from the April registration deadline for the May primaries. The county had 12,925 registered voters in May. Because no current figures are available, Gray could not yet make any comparisons with registration for the 1980 presidential election when there were approximately 13,694 registered voters.

Roberts County clerk Jackie Jackson said Thursday that 25 residents had applied for absentee ballots, "so I look for it to be heavy."

According to Jackson, Roberts County had 796 registered voters at the Oct. 7 deadline. Although she could not recall what last year's figures were, she said "it seems like people are getting out."

"I was getting an awful lot of the same people registering," she said. "I don't believe the publicity had been clear enough."

She explained that several people already on the voter registration rolls had apparently thought they had to register again.

"They (people promoting voter registration) should have said 'If you haven't registered, go register,'" she said.

Hemphill County Clerk Jerry Vandiver reported heavy voter registration, followed by heavy absentee voting. The county currently has 2,595 registered voters. So far this week nine people came to her office to apply for absentee ballots and about 45 people have made application.

Voter registration in Wheeler county is up by 286 to 4,589 people according to a clerk in the tax assessor-collector's office.

"It has been heavy for the last three months," she said. "A lot of people tried to register again."

So far 28 people have applied by mail for absentee ballots and 11 people applied in person.

Carson County officials also report more absentee applications: 57 by mail and 29 in person. The county has 4,362 registered voters.

For Furr's expansion

Residents question zoning change

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Neighborhood residents around Furr's Family Center expressed a desire to have more specific, detailed information and plans on Furr's proposed expansion before approval of a zoning change request during a public hearing Thursday afternoon.

Furr's has requested a change from Multi-Family zoning to Specific Use Permit for the expansion.

Appearing at the Planning and Zoning Commission meeting yesterday, residents indicated general acceptance of the Furr's purchase of half a city block between Harvester and Decatur Streets, commonly called Kelley's horse lot, for its proposed expansion.

But they voiced concern over increased traffic flow, future development of the land, specific plans for the property and increased trash and litter problems in the area.

Jack Looney of Amarillo, representing Mex-Tex Realty Co. (a development of Furr's, Inc.), said the company is planning to build an approximate 80 to 100 feet deep addition east into the property from the present building.

The company feels the current building "is not an adequate size for the growth we've seen in Pampa," Looney said.

He said the expansion will be only a full-service supermarket, fully upgraded, keeping its entrances on Hobart and adding one new entrance from Decatur.

To accommodate residents in the area, the firm is willing to build a decorative wall - suggesting a brick and wood fence eight feet in height - around the expansion area to keep down trash, debris and litter, he explained. Deliveries would be restricted to 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., cutting down on late-night noise to the area, he said.

Looney said the company also

"is more than happy to build a playground" or the like on the southeast corner of the lot for use by residents. He said the rest of the lot would remain undeveloped, with the firm maintaining it by keeping weeds cut and litter out of it.

Looney said he had expected to have architectural renderings and plat information, but the materials had not been ready for him to bring to the meeting.

Jim Radcliff, 1408 Hamilton, said he was concerned the specific use permit would not prohibit future development plans by Furr's. He said he was not generally opposed to the expansion, but he felt there were too many unanswered questions.

Mrs. Vera Plunk, 1330 Hamilton, said she was concerned that corners of the lot be kept clear because of vision problems with traffic in the area.

D. V. Biggers, 1540 Coffee, said there had been a gradual encroachment of businesses on the residential area in the past 30 years. He was "uneasy" about what would happen in future years, saying there seemed to be no guarantee that a quick-food place or something else wouldn't be located on the property.

Nolan McKean, commission chairman, said the specific use permit would limit the use of the property. No other changes could be made without Furr's having to come before the commission again.

Doug Miller, 1420 Hamilton, expressed concerns about the traffic flow, deliveries and trash. He said the proposed park "would probably be torn apart by teenagers." Miller said the company has not shown enough of its specific plans.

He agreed something needs to be done with the property and

100,000 homes in Utah left without power by snowstorm

By The Associated Press
A "blockbuster" storm logging record snows left 100,000 Utah homes without power, trapped hunters in Colorado's mountains and spit more than a dozen tornadoes across three states, killing one person. And forecasters said the third storm of the week is moving in today from the Pacific.
In Wyoming, snow-covered ground was rattled Thursday by the third-strongest earthquake in the state's history, measuring 5.5 on the Richter scale and felt up to 200 miles away, the U.S. Geological Survey said.

The storm stretched from the Rocky Mountains to the Mississippi Valley and was described by Salt Lake City meteorologist William Alder as a "one-in-50-year occurrence." It dropped a record 18.6 inches of snow in 24 hours at Salt Lake International Airport and up to 3 feet in the mountains.
"At least a dozen or 15 tornadoes" were spawned when the snowstorm's icy winds swooped down on the moisture-laden Plains, said forecaster Joseph Galway at the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City.
"This is the same weather system that gave the snow to portions of Utah and Colorado," said forecaster Bill Hirt in Kansas City.

One person died and another was injured in Argo, Texas, where "two houses were completely demolished," and an elderly woman was injured when the roof of her mobile home collapsed in Hollis, Ark., authorities said.
The dead person was found in an open pasture, said Dallas Department of Public Safety dispatcher Larissa Jones. "There had been problems getting emergency vehicles into the area because of downed trees."
About 175 elk hunters were marooned in the rugged mountains of the Rio Grande National Forest along the Colorado-New Mexico border, and Conejos County Sheriff Gene DeHerrera said, "We airlifted them, used wheeled vehicles, horses, snow cats, everything we could get" to rescue them.

the Gray County Child Welfare Board.
His other service interests include being a member of the regional Public Responsibility Committee of Mental Health - Mental Retardation in Amarillo and a member of the Ad Hoc Committee for developing a 10-year plan for the Amarillo Center for the Mentally Retarded.
Steele noted Turner also has assisted with cooperative programs for giving a helping hand to the needy, serving on the board of directors for Good Samaritan Christian Services, which provides food, clothing and other assistance for the needy.
Turner also is a member of the Downtown Kiwanis Club, in which he has served on its Spiritual Aims Committee. He has participated in various fund raising drives and in delivery routes for Meals on Wheels as a member.
He also has been assisting with local implementation of the Latch Key program, designed to give safety to children who have to come home alone while their parents are working.
Turner "has worn out more than one pair of shoes... doing these kind of services for the community," Steele said. "He is a friend to man."
Joining Turner and his wife Pat for the presentation were their children - Martha, 24, a graduate student in North Carolina, and Matt, 21, a senior at Austin College in Sherman. The two children's appearance was a surprise to the Turners; they had been visiting Martha only earlier this week, returning home for the banquet.

Turner received his bachelor of arts degree in 1958 at Austin College and his master of divinity degree in 1961 at the Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary. He was director of admissions at the seminary for four years and had pastorates at Hitchcock and Wichita Falls in Texas and Oklahoma City before moving to Pampa.
His other interests include fishing, rock hounding, bird watching, softball, football (a fan of both the Cowboys and the Oilers) and traveling, especially in the mountains.
Receiving his plaque for "distinguished service to the citizens of Pampa," Turner said, "I think it's me who should be thanking you..." for the type of community and Chamber members. "I simply say thank you."
Marion John, who served as Chamber president for 1983-1984, presented the gavel to incoming president Rev. Claude Cone.
Giving his appreciations to the city and Chamber, echoing Turner's remarks, John said, "It's been a real honor for me to serve as your president."
"I have some real big shoes to follow," Rev. Cone said, presenting a plaque to John and flowers to Mrs. John.
Cone said he was looking forward to his service, not only with the Chamber but with the citizens in the community.
He set three goals for his term: to put the Chamber on a solid financial footing, to get more members into the Chamber and to work toward the establishing of a new Chamber and community building.

"That's what we want to do, is go to work," he said.
Roy Sparkman, member of the board of the new Chamber of Commerce Foundation, discussed the construction of the proposed building - "a dream for Pampa" - a community building and a place for the homeless civic and cultural groups in the city, not just a home for the Chamber.
Sparkman said the building would be a showcase for the "viable, prosperous, growing community that we really are." He asked the audience to "join with us in making our latest dream a reality."
Featured entertainer for the banquet in the Heritage Room at M. K. Brown Auditorium was singer and ventriloquist Gloria Gilbert and her "friend," Homer. She entertained the sell-out crowd of 500 with jokes and anecdotes, incorporating local residents into the material. With her ventriloquist dummy, Gilbert - who was Miss Texas 1982 - sang four songs: "Rocky Top Tennessee," "Let Me Be There," "The Auctioneer's Song" and "I've Been Everywhere."
Also providing entertainment was the Pampa High School Show Choir under the direction of Fred Mays. The group sang "Say, Say, Say," "Always on My Mind," "Baby, I Lied," "Wind Beneath My Wings," "Wrapped Around Your Finger," "They Don't Know" and "Only You."
Citizens Bank & Trust was inadvertently left off a list of reception sponsors in the banquet program published in a special section of The Pampa News.

discounted any great additional traffic flow problems. He said he's willing to go along with the expansion, but he wants to see more details before giving his approval to the project.
His wife, Mrs. Estelle Miller, wanted to know why Furr's couldn't expand to the north "like everyone else." She said the residential area didn't need any more businesses.
Mrs. Nickie Gordon, 1501 Hamilton, complained about having problems now backing out onto Decatur and voiced concerns about increased traffic on the street. She also said there are trash problems now, indicating the expansion would add to the litter in the area.
Commission member Jay Johnson pointed out that the specific use permit would be tied to the building permit, allowing no more expansion than that specified in the permit. But he said there was no guarantee that Furr's could not sell off the rest of the property, allowing someone else to build apartments in the area.

Other commission members Ralph Milliron, Jerry Noles and Ken Shearer indicated they also would prefer to see more specific plans from Furr's concerning the expansion and the rest of the property.
After nearly an hour for the public hearing, the commission tabled any action on Furr's request, inviting the residents to attend the next meeting on Nov. 15 to review Furr's plans. Looney said he could have the plans ready by then.
In other business, the commission held another public hearing on a request by the Pampa Medical Development Association, Inc., for a specific use permit to place a clinical pharmacy in a medical building in the Northeast Addition. No one appeared to voice any objections.

The pharmacy would sell only prescriptions, over-the-counter medicines and medication, and other medical-oriented products. It would not become a general "drugstore" operation, PDMA officials indicated.
The commission approved the request. Johnson abstained from the voting since he has a dental clinic in the area.
The commission approved the preliminary and final plat for the National Bank of Commerce Plaza Addition. Forrest Cloyd, technician with the Engineering Department, said the plans met city specifications.
In other business, commission members continued discussion of possible annexation needs for the city.

Doggett, Gramm each claiming victory

DALLAS (AP) — Both U.S. Senate candidates proclaimed themselves victors after a televised debate in which they sounded some familiar themes and continued to differ on Social Security and U.S. involvement in Central America.

The Thursday night session, produced by public TV station KERA, was the second of two scheduled debates between Republican Phil Gramm and Democrat Lloyd Doggett.

"I won the debate because I think I focused in on the issues that are relevant to Texas and America," Gramm said. "I thought it was a good, balanced debate in terms of my performance and my opponent's."

Doggett had a different view. "I think we won this debate. We had an opportunity to concentrate on those issues that Phil's been running from and trying to avoid, like Social Security and education," Doggett said. "I think this debate provided a good example and contrast of the positions that we take."

During the hour-long session, Gramm reiterated his close ties with President Reagan, his authorship of Reagan's spending cuts and his support for income tax cuts. Doggett said Gramm consistently sought to cut Social Security benefits and said he has found Gramm's record in Congress "to be pretty negative."

Gramm said the issue was a simple one, whether Texans wanted the president's programs to continue on the course which has cured serious economic problems and created 7 million new, private-sector jobs nationwide and 850,000 in Texas.

"The question is, do you want Reagan's program seen through to a successful conclusion?" the Republican asked.

"If you don't, if you want taxes raised, if you want to go back to the policies of the past, vote for my opponent. If you want Ronald Reagan's programs seen through to a successful conclusion, send me to the Senate to help finish the job," Gramm said.

Doggett accused Gramm of trying to hide from his record and said integrity is a key issue in the race. He criticized Gramm for trying to connect the Senate race with the presidential contest.

"When you get right down to it, this contest for the United States Senate is not a battle between Ronald Reagan and Walter Mondale," Doggett said.

"It is a contest between two very different types of individuals. We can either pursue the path of progress that has served us so well in Texas, a path that I have worked on for the past 11 years in the Texas Senate, or we can divert to a path of extremism, of intolerance, of callousness," Doggett said.

The two showed some of their sharpest differences over Social Security and Central America.

Doggett criticized Gramm for seeking to cut the minimum Social Security benefit and being one of just 13 congressmen to vote against a House resolution calling for no cuts in benefits to people currently receiving them.

"That resolution goes to the heart of the debate. Not one Texas Democrat, not one Texas Republican ... voted against that except Phil Gramm," Doggett said.

But the Republican said it was his work in Congress which helped save the Social Security system from bankruptcy, and he insisted that he wants to make certain that money is there to pay benefits to those who have earned them through contributions to the system.

"I'm the guy who helped save Social Security," Gramm said. "We put Social Security in the black and I'm trying to keep it there."

On Central America, Gramm said he believes that the Soviet Union is trying hard to establish a foothold in the Americas from Nicaragua through El Salvador and into Mexico.

"I don't believe we can allow the communists to get a firm foothold in the mainland of the Americas. We have a critical stake in Central America," he said.

Doggett said that military assistance to the anti-government forces in Nicaragua isn't working and negotiation in El Salvador is necessary.

What must be recognized, he said is that "what we're doing in Nicaragua has not worked and we need to try new ideas."

The two also continued their dispute over two television advertisements in which Doggett runs what he says are quotations from Gramm that show Gramm's "insensitivity" toward aid to the elderly and the handicapped.

Gramm said that in one ad, his quotation was taken out of context from a longer interview.

Panel agrees to urge convention elimination

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' Democratic and Republican parties have asked and won approval from a legislative subcommittee to do away with a state convention in presidential election years.

The final decision to change state election laws will rest with the 1985 Legislature.

Both parties had already recommended the change in resolutions and platforms posted at their September meetings this year.

And "we concur with this bipartisan concern," Rep. Charles Gandy, D-Mesquite, head of the House Elections subcommittee, said Thursday.

"Our September convention this year cost the party as much as $65,000," said Texas Democratic spokeswoman Camille Burger. "That's not counting what it cost the delegates. That time and money could have been put to a better use this year."

And subcommittee member Rep. Jim Horn, R-Lewisville, added in a prepared GOP statement that "there is no longer any need or purpose for the September convention."

Prior to 1974, when governors were elected every two years, the September conventions were used by the respective parties to organize their campaigns for gubernatorial nominees.

But in 1974 the law was changed to give Texas governors four-year terms, with the elections during non-presidential election years.

"The September convention is both unnecessary and costly," said the GOP statement. "It takes away from both parties' efforts to elect their candidates during a presidential election year."

State Democratic Chairman Bob Slagle suggested to the subcommittee that the Democrats might want to hold their state convention in June on a presidential-election year and in September on non-presidential election years.

Slagle said he agreed that two conventions every two years were unnecessary.

Ms. Burger said some believe a September convention in non-presidential election years is better to a June meeting because it might conflict with a primary run-off election for governor.

State Republican Party Chairman George Strake said he and Slagle had agreed to work together during the 1985 Legislature to change state law to end the second convention requirement.

Picking the wrong winners

I will never make it as a judge of debates. This realization came after I heroically watched every minute of the Reagan-Mondale and Bush-Ferraro confrontations.

The experts said I picked the wrong winner both times. They said Walter Mondale was a clear winner over President Reagan and George Bush clobbered Geraldine Ferraro.

My scorecard had Reagan by a nose over Mondale and Ferraro by a mile over Bush.

In the first debate, the experts gave Mondale a wide edge because he was smooth and smiled occasionally. They deducted points from Reagan because he was serious and sometimes had to think for a moment before he came up with an answer.

I was just the opposite. I deducted points from Mondale because his slickness reminded me of a snake-oil salesman. I was glad to see the President think before he answered. I thought that's what you were supposed to do.

Besides that, I thought a few of the things Reagan said sounded sensible. I failed to detect anything sensible in Mr. Mondale's remarks.

The experts said they gave points to Bush in his debate with Ferraro because the vice president showed emotion. Ferraro (I suppose we can't call her "Mrs. Ferraro" because her husband has a different name) was criticized for not showing emotion.

Again, I was on an opposite track. I thought the vice president's "emotion" was contrived and forced. I thought Ferraro came through as a calm, thoughtful person who had her emotions under control, characteristics that I thought desirable.

I didn't hear either Bush or Ferraro say anything sensible, so that didn't figure into my calculations.

But when you add it all up, if the experts were right (I'm sure they are) and I was wrong (which is not beyond the realm of possibility) debate winners are people who have an immediate answer for everything, can talk fast and convince people they are sincere, whether they are or not.

Given this, if debates play a large role in who the country selects as president, we may as well forget the Reagans, Mondales, Kennedys and Bakers.

The perfect candidate would be a used car salesman. Simmons is managing editor of The Pampa News.

Inmates strain to stay in jail, out of prison

HOUSTON (AP) — Violence in Texas prisons has some criminals so frightened that they are straining to serve time in county jails, defense attorneys say. But one prosecutor says he has little sympathy for their plight.

So far this year, 21 inmates have been killed by other prisoners and 317 have been knifed within the Texas Department of Corrections.

Attorney Rachel Capote said two clients in the last two weeks have told her they are afraid to go to state prisons.

Ms. Capote said one of her clients asked a judge to let him serve 60 days in Harris County Jail before turning him over to state prison officials. Defendants get credit off their prison terms for time served in county jails.

"He said he really didn't want to go to TDC because they're killing people there," she said.

Ms. Capote said she hates even to strike plea bargains which include prison time because of the danger.

But Harris County District Attorney John B. Holmes Jr. said he is not concerned by defendants' fears.

"I don't think the penitentiary should be pleasant," he said. "If it adds to a deterrent effect, then maybe they won't commit the crime the next time around."

Attorney Brian Coyne said his clients are also afraid.

"Three or four have asked me to use every type of delay I know so they can get most of their time done here in Harris County," Coyne said. "They're begging for any type of delay."

Coyne admitted some of his clients are also interested in avoiding the work that awaits them in state prison, where prisoners hoe and pick cotton.

"(Jail) is a pretty soft life compared with the TDC," he said.

Attorney Bennie House said he's hearing fear from clients for the first time.

"I've never had that problem until this year," he said. "I've never heard the expressions of fear of being killed as strong as I have in the last year."

In Austin, Gov. Mark White said Thursday he wants prison officials to move more quickly toward curbing inmate violence.

"I am trying to let them know, including all the members of the board as well as the administration, that when I say 'Hurry,' I mean it," White said.

"I worry and work with the problem on a daily basis and I'm sometimes concerned that we don't move as fast as they should as far as trying to implement some of the changes that would improve safety there," he said.

The state prisons are in the process of buying metal detectors aimed at screening out inmate weapons.

Also Thursday, White announced approval of a grant to fund prosecution of the "backlog" of cases involving prison violence. No amount has been set for the grant, he said.

Opinion

Civil rights bill was dangerous

What was it about the Civil Rights Act of 1984, debate over which almost brought the government to a halt and caused Sen. Edward M. Kennedy to invoke shame upon his colleagues when the legislation was finally tabled?

All along proponents had been describing it as just a trifle—minor corrective surgery, they said, on a defective, narrow Supreme Court ruling. Then why all the fuss?

Why Kennedy's outburst—"Shame on the Senate"—unless, perhaps, he recognized, as opponents of the act had argued, that it had much broader implications and that's why it was so strongly supported by Kennedy and his crowd?

Earlier this year, the Supreme Court ruled, in the case of Grove City College, that the federal anti-sex-discrimination law known as Title IX applied only to specific programs or activities that receive federal funds and not to institutions as a whole or those parts of it that do not receive federal funds.

That was not enough for militant feminists and others who wish to expand the scope of federal power as widely as possible. The Civil Rights Act of 1984 was drafted to assure that such power could be applied to an entire institution that in any way in any or all of its programs directly or indirectly—benefited from federal subsidies.

The legislation would have applied Title IX regulations to "recipients" of federal aid, substituting that vague word for the "programs and activities" definition in the original legislation.

Opponents led by Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, feared that ultimately federal regulations and bureaucratic red tape involved in anti-discrimination enforcement could be applied to every educational institution, local and state government, private business and organizations, large and small, that benefited in any way—directly or indirectly—from federal aid.

If true, the Civil Rights Act of 1984 would have dangerously extended the power of the federal government to enforce group rights and preferential treatment in all sectors of society, public and private.

In this modern transfer society into which we have evolved, in which the U.S. Census Bureau estimates that 30 percent of the population receives some direct federal subsidy, it would be hard to find an institution that is not somehow contaminated by federal aid. Is the corner grocery store that accepts food stamps from its customers, or the retirement community that accepts rent payments from residents on Social Security, a "recipient" of federal aid?

Supporters of the act ridiculed such interpretations, assuring legislators that the bill was limited in scope and intent and precise in language.

Perhaps? But those assurances remind us of how Sen. Hubert Humphrey defended the Civil Rights Act of 1964. He told his colleagues that nothing in the act would ever require an employer "to achieve any kind of racial balance in the work place by giving preferential treatment to any individual or group." From that humble beginning came affirmative-action quotas and reverse discrimination.

Sen. Hatch showed admirable wariness regarding the 1984 civil rights act.

Distorting the figures

NEW YORK (NEA) — As the presidential campaign thunders toward its climax, thoughtful people will be on guard, even more than ordinarily, against misrepresentations in our ultra-liberal national media. The famous Lichter-Rothman survey in 1980 revealed that at least 80 percent of the media elite voted Democratic in every presidential election since 1964. They haven't changed their spots.

A truly spectacular example of distortion appeared recently in the anti-Reagan New York Times. In his first debate with Walter Mondale, President Reagan asked the American people whether they believed the country was better off economically today than it was four years ago. Anticipating that question, the Times assigned reporter Peter T. Kilborn to write a long article on the subject. Accompanying his article when it appeared on Oct. 9 was a chart, entitled: "The Carter and Reagan Terms: How the Economy Fared." If a Museum of Journalistic Dishonesty is ever created, that chart deserves a glass case all to itself.

The chart purportedly sets forth comparative figures for the Carter and Reagan administrations, in seven categories of economic measurement. The first is "economic growth," as reflected by the "increases in the GNP, adjusted for inflation." The increases given are: Carter 13.6 percent, Reagan 10.3 percent. It should be borne in mind, however, that Carter and Reagan did not start from the same base.

The growth experienced by the economy in the Reagan administration was on top of the entire growth it achieved under Carter.

The next category involves interest rates, but here the Times becomes preternaturally choosy. It concentrates solely on "home mortgage rates (25-year fixed rate)" — a notoriously sluggish indicator — and offers us two measurements: an "administration average" (Carter 10.60 percent, Reagan 13.86 percent) and an "administration peak" (Carter 14.15 percent, Reagan 16.38 percent). What the Times thereby conceals is the astronomical prime rate when Carter left office (20.16 percent) and how far Reagan has brought it down

(it is 12.75 percent today).

Then come the measurements for "inflation," defined as the "rise in the Consumer Price Index during the administration." Here the Times simply throws in the sponge: Carter 45.7 percent, Reagan 26.1 percent. Even this, however, avoids comparing the rate of inflation for Carter's last 12 months (11.7 percent) and Reagan's most recent 12 (4.2 percent) — that, of course, being the comparison invited by Mr. Reagan's question.

Next comes the "unemployment rate," which was 7.5 percent when Carter left office and is 7.4 percent today, even though five-and-a-half million more people have joined the work force. None of this, however, is even hinted at in the Times chart. Instead we are offered the "average administration rates" (Carter 6.4 percent, Reagan 8.6 percent — reflecting the big rise in unemployment during the midterm recession) and the raw numbers of unemployed at the end of Carter's term and today (7.6 million and 8.5 million, respectively) without reference to the size of the work force.

When it comes to the "national debt," however, the Times skips the fancy footwork and uses the proper comparison (since it is unfavorable to Reagan): Carter $914.3 billion in fiscal 1980, Reagan $1,575.6 billion in fiscal 1984.

In the matter of "poverty," the Times resorts to the old Mondale dodge of counting only cash benefits in computing a family's poverty (i.e., disregarding non-cash benefits, which can rise to as high as 70 percent of total income). On that basis it finds 13 percent below the poverty line at the end of the Carter administration, and 15.2 percent today.

Finally, under "disposable personal income in 1972 dollars," the Times concedes there was an increase of only 7.9 percent under Carter, vs. 9.8 percent under Reagan.

And there you have it: Of nine measurements, seven seem favorable to Carter — even though this usually requires ignoring Reagan's request that we compare his end result with Carter's.

America was better off under Carter — says the Times!

The nation's last 'sweatshop'

Re-read the opinions of Justice Brandeis relating to horrendous sweatshop working conditions of the '20s and '30s and you are at first horrified, then ashamed.

And then you realize that he is describing conditions which still exist today in our nation's last "sweatshop."

He is describing the trial-by-fire, tough-it-out, round-the-clock ordeal to which we subject most medical professionals.

At the birth of our son, his mother was days in limbo between this world and the next one.

At least once her heart stopped completely. During the month of days and nights at the hospital I could not comprehend her doctor going off to his office to nap.

I understand now. Recently I saw a study conducted by Rush Medical College revealing that "ten percent of practicing physicians are impaired." Fatigue, alone, may hamper their ability to perform professionally.

So I'm glad now that Dr. Bill Dieckmann disciplined himself to rest when he could.

But while physicians may discipline themselves, third-year med students, interns and residents have no control over assignments.

Every second or third night in most hospitals, those assignments require 24 hours on duty.

Any opportunity to rest is likely to be interrupted by all-night admissions and beepers that won't stop.

Even the Marines have modified their formerly rigid basic training as counterproductive — yet we persist in preserving an outdated modus operandi for interns and residents.

And it is the patient we place at risk.

A reader recently wrote to Ann Landers, "I would hate to have my life depend on a person who had gone without sleep for two days and a night."

Dr. Gerald Flamm, clinical professor at Yale University School of Medicine, says, "Medical schools, internship and residency are dehumanizing."

"But," he says, "changing this is difficult because the forces opposed to change are so powerful."

However "difficult," a multi-dimensional study is presently under way at Rush Medical College to determine what changes are appropriate.

I will submit, anonymously if requested, any related experience you may have had which will help evaluate today's medical training — its benefits and its risks.

Union monopoly cripples steel industry

BY OSCAR COOLEY
Americans cannot be proud of their steel industry.

If practice makes for efficiency, this basic industry should be very efficient. But it isn't. For months it has been pleading with Washington to curb the import of steel, which is about 25 percent of our total consumption. Both the companies and the union want imports limited to a rigid quota.

Reagan has refused to set quotas but has promised to try to get the foreigners, Japan especially, to reduce their sales here from 25 to about 18 percent of our consumption. That would leave the domestic industry to supply a little over four-fifths of demand, but still it is not satisfied.

This country has ample deposits of iron ore. Our mills have been making steel for many years and should know how to do it with efficiency.

Steel built our railroads and the trains to run on them. It frames our skyscrapers. It is basic in the structure of our ships, our pipelines, our automobiles, trucks, and tractors. There is no good reason why we should not be able to compete with any steel-maker in the world.

If foreign steel can be bought more cheaply, let's buy a lot of it while the buying is good. But this, we are told, would result in U.S. steel mills laying off workers. Still, we should get our steel the cheapest way. Why pay through the nose for this — or any — much-used commodity?

Screams go up from the union, which foresees its members idled and deprived of their handsome wage rates.

This is human, but steel mills do not exist to employ workers. On the contrary, as few as possible should be employed in order that the cost of producing each ton of steel will be minimum.

When many workers skilled at the same kind of work band together to sell their labor, the result is a monopoly (although it is never called that, monopoly being a bad word). The employer now has no choice. He does not hire workers — he hires a union.

We have laws against monopolies in the sale of goods, but in the sale of labor we have the National Labor Relations act which says that collective bargaining is the law of the land. This and other laws aid and abet monopoly in the sale of labor.

The steel industry is in trouble because its costs of production are higher than those of competitors, and this is true because management has not been free to reduce its costs by hiring at reduced wage rates. Many mills are shut down and are not hiring at any wage at all.

Granted freedom, the employers would hire on the basis of the worker's age, state of health, and extent of experience in the kind of work done — not on the basis of union membership. Some would qualify for a higher wage than others. Knowing this, each would be moved to improve his skill to the utmost.

Basic industries such as steel would not go into a decline because of competition, either foreign or domestic. As competition by low-cost producers began to pinch, executives would reduce their selling prices, and to avoid operating unprofitably would lower their costs by every means possible, including wage cuts.

It is simply not logical to assume that U.S. steel mills can pay wages that are twice as high as those paid by mills abroad and stay in business. Nor is it logical to assume that American consumers, through their government, will close the nation's harbors to foreign steel so that domestic steel can continue to be sold at a higher-than-world-market price.

Cooley is a retired economics professor.

State pesticide rules are revealed

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas agriculture officials, saying the state hasn't adequately regulated pesticide use in the past, has proposed rules to allow people to require their neighbors to give advance notice of aerial applications.

"Like many other technological innovations, pesticides are a mixed blessing," said a 109-page report prepared by the Texas Department of Agriculture.

Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower planned a series of news conferences today to discuss the proposal that has drawn criticism from some farmers and chemical associations.

Wayne Newberry, executive director of the Texas Farm Bureau, has said the rules "would prohibit, for all practical purposes, the use of pesticides — which are an integral part of our operation."

Jon Fisher, a lobbyist for the Texas Agricultural Chemicals Association, has said, "There is no showing of a problem of such a magnitude to justify this type of response."

The agriculture department report says the new rules are needed because the state's "past performance in regulating pesticide use had in many cases been insufficient to adequately protect the health of Texas citizens."

While calling pesticides an "important technological innovation that has become a vital tool for Texas farmers," the report also recounts stories of Texans — including several farm workers — who suffered illness or death as a result of exposure to the chemicals.

The new rules would require warning flags on treated fields and protective clothing, in some cases, for workers entering recently treated fields.

Chemicals used in agriculture also pose a threat to crops, the department said.

"Millions of dollars worth of cotton crops have been destroyed by herbicides in Texas in the last three years," the report said.

The notification requirements would allow Texans to force their neighbors to give them at least 24-hour notice of a planned aerial application. The request, which must be in writing, may be made by anyone living or working in a building "immediately adjacent" to farm land on which pesticides are used.

A request for notification would have to be renewed at the beginning of each year.

"Some people believe prior notification is going to be expensive," said Ron White, assistant agriculture commissioner. He added, however, that the department said it should not cost any farmer more than about $35 a year.

"A lot of information less than accurate is being passed around out there," White told a press briefing.

People who have medical conditions that are sensitive to pesticides also may ask for notification of any aerial application within a mile of their home or workplace.

Beekeepers and other people who could suffer economic hardships can ask for notification of aerial applications within a mile.

Notification would be required — without request — for schools, hospitals or temporary worker housing within one-half mile of an aerial application.

Ground application of pesticides would be exempt from the proposed notification rules.

State sells veteran bonds

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Veterans Land Board accepted a bid Thursday from an investment syndicate headed by Citicorp Capital Markets Group of New York to underwrite an additional $250 million in bonds to help veterans buy houses.

Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro said it was the largest sale of general obligation bonds in the history of the state.

Mauro will release the interest rate on Citicorp's bid and what it will cost veterans to acquire a housing loan at a Tuesday news conference, according to Mike Connelly of the land office's public information office.

Mauro said in a statement more than 10,000 housing loans have been made to Texas veterans through the Veterans Housing Assistance Program since it began accepting applications nine months ago.

One killed by Texas tornado

ARGO, Texas (AP) — A tornado that came down from the clouds in north Titus County killed one person, injured another, demolished two houses and uprooted several trees, authorities said.

Witnesses said the twister struck shortly before 9 p.m. Thursday in this small northeast Texas community north of Mount Pleasant.

A Titus County sheriff's dispatcher, who asked not to be identified, said early Friday morning she could not release the victims' name or gender pending notification of kin.

"We had heavy rains and two houses completely demolished," said the dispatcher. "Trees and power lines were down."

Dallas Department of Public Safety dispatcher Larissa Jones said the victim's body was discovered in an open pasture about 8:15 p.m. Thursday.

Gena on Genealogy

By GENA WALLS
 Indian heritage might be discovered if your ancestors were in MONTANA as at least 16 different tribes were in the area before it became a state in 1889. The first large influx of settlers to the area were in 1862 after gold was discovered. In the early 1880s, silver and copper discoveries brought more miners into the territory.

Prior to Montana becoming an organized territory, it was at times a part of Missouri, Nebraska, Oregon, Washington, and Idaho. Records might be found in any of these places. Always search carefully and for the variant spellings of surnames.

 The Historical Society of Montana, 2nd edition of the 1862-1863 Census List of Early Settlers: A List of All Persons in what is now Montana during the winter of 1862-63, might be able to help you locate an ancestor. However, the list is not complete and if you have names that should be included. Send them to the society in Helena, Mont., 59601.

With the possibility of Indian ancestors, begin as with all research at the local level. If you have the name of the tribe then start with the tribal records. If the tribe is not known, contact the Bureau of Indian Affairs and they might be able to narrow your search by location. Some Indian census were taken similar to our own federal census and often are very detailed in naming each generation to establish place within tribe.

Off-duty, police team writes a novel

By BRAD BAILEY
 The Dallas Morning News
DALLAS (AP) — The name's Sgt. Bill Clair. He's a cop. He's got a partner, Lt. Richard Abshire.

But they're not partners in crime-fighting. They work the literature beat. There's a million stories out there in the naked city, and these guys have written one of them. They wrote a book, found a publisher, and it looks as if it may sell.

Clair is an investigator in the Dallas Police Department Auto Theft Division. He's a visual guy who likes to see the big picture, likes to see all the threads come together in a neat ending just the way they never do in real life.

He's the plot man. Abshire is on the staff of Southern Methodist University's Department of Public Safety. He lets the words take him where he needs to go. He's got a way with words.

He's the writer. Abshire, 38, was just a kid in blue jeans when words walked into his life, and they never walked out. He won a theme contest sponsored by the Daughters of the Confederacy when he was in the eighth grade, and from then on, he was hooked. He grew from a kid with a penny-ante word habit to become a cop with a typewriter on his back.

"Been writing one thing or another all my life. Wrote plays in grade school. Sold eight or 10 magazine articles, worked some with the 'Dallas Observer,' did a series for them on gambling and victimless crimes. Did a few things here and there under pen names. Did a little bit of ghostwriting," Abshire said, leading one to ponder this mystery: How come cops in literature always leave the first-person subject of their sentence implied?

Abshire got together with Clair when both worked for DPD where they were "in harness" on the streets of Southeast Dallas.

They started a book way back in 1968. It was to have been a series of vignettes about several different officers and their experiences. Then another writer came out with a book a lot like theirs was going to be.

His name was Joseph Wambaugh. The book was "The New Centurions."

Dum da dum dum. It's a publishing jungle out there, a cop-author old world. The two Dallas officers confessed, however, Wambaugh had done a pretty good job of it. Their effort went right into the round file.

Then a couple of years ago, the book-writing urge hit them again. Literary cops have a problem figuring out where to go.

The policeman in them wants to head straight for Denny's.

The author in them wants to light out for the Wine Press. So they went to both.

Clair: "Abshire had an idea, a thought. There're books about women solving crimes, men solving crimes, but the victim never solved his own crime. It sounded like an interesting premise. We more or less sat down and worked out the basic story line in Denny's up on Central at Fitzhugh. That place is full of characters, anyway. We did a lot of work in there. Then we'd go on writing marathons, spending three or four days just taking off and locking ourselves away."

Abshire: "We go to the wine press because we've had good luck there. Inspiration always hits about the third or fourth drink."

Clair: "We had a little trouble right there at the first, getting the rules down about working together. Richard is more into the writing, he's a word technician. I'm a visual person. I see things in terms of screenplays, while Richard gets into characterization. Richard gets into their minds — but if left to his own devices, the character would never do anything. He'd just sit there forever."

Abshire: "I usually sit down with a pad (legal pad) and write, while Clair paces. He envisions great scenes. We kick them around."

The pair kicked around a set of characters, ideas, personal experiences and imaginary scenes until it became the novel they call "Gants."

"Gants," briefly, is about a police captain found dead in a hotel room. Everybody thinks it's a suicide except the captain, who knows better, but is, remember, dead.

Said Clair, "The captain is such a strong-willed individual that he can't let go. He uses a young investigator, Charlie Gants, to solve the murder."

There are various other sub-plots so that what the two officers wound up with was a ghost story, a love story, a murder story, a mystery. They say what resulted is a little like what would happen if Stephen King sat down to rewrite Dashiell Hammett.

They got an agent who didn't do them any good and got rid of him.

They started making copies and sending them to publishers. They got in return a lot of nice mail praising the work. Some of the letters from editors said things like "it marks a major turning point in American fiction" but adding at the end, essentially, "no first novels, thanks but no thanks, don't call us, we'll call you."

Then a California publisher bit. The two say they have a contract with SOS Publishing to produce 30,000 copies next spring.

The copies are called "trade paperbacks," meaning they aren't hard-cover and will be sold only in bookstores until sales take off well enough to merit putting the book in grocery stores and other mass-market outlets.

Movie Sunday at Lamar Full Gospel

Lamar Full Gospel Assembly, 1200 S. Sumner, will present the film "The Cross and the Switchblade" at 7 p.m. Sunday at the church.

The movie relates the ministry of David Wilkerson and the life-changing effect his ministry had on young Nicky Cruz.

Pastor Gene Allen said the public is invited to attend the showing. A nursery will be provided.

Church's history unfolds Sunday in Panhandle

PANHANDLE - In celebration of the bicentennial of Methodism in America, the First United Methodist Church of Panhandle will present "Journeys," a history of 95 years of Panhandle Methodism.

The readers' theatre presentation will be at 10 a.m. Sunday in the church sanctuary.

Taped interviews and written comments have been secured from many church members and former members to provide facts and incidents concerning the four church buildings which have served the congregation during the 95 years.

The history also will concern the 53 pastors and their families who have served the churches and the trials and joys of adults and youths through good and bad times.

Many second, third and fourth generations of the early members are still active in the church programs. Seven persons have been members of all four churches.

The first pastors were assigned to Panhandle in 1889. Between 1890 and 1892, the first church - a Northern Methodist Church - was built. The Methodist Episcopal Church South was founded in 1903. In 1919, the two congregations combined; all but one member transferred to the MECS.

A new church was built on Main Street in 1928 at a cost of $30,000. This served the congregation until January, 1968, when the present church was occupied.

Interviews were compiled by Mrs. Ralph Randel. Mrs. J. B. McCray is directing the program. Cast members are Mrs. Louie F. Cleek, the Church; Dr. Max Reno, the Pastors; Mrs. Frank Simms and Paul Caldwell, the Congregation; Sara Allyson Mulkey and Heath Howe, the Youth; and Mrs. McCray, the Spirit.

Rev. Herb Tavenner, pastor, will preside at the gathering and benediction. The program will last until noon, taking the place of the regular Sunday School and worship services.

Following the program, a sandwich luncheon will be held in Fellowship Hall. All former members, pastors and friends of the Panhandle United Methodist Church are invited to attend the program and luncheon, Mrs. Randel said.

In observance of the bicentennial, a display of artifacts, including drawings of the four churches, has been set up in the church foyer, arranged by P. J. Pronger III, Square House Museum administrator. Banners have been made for the church through a committee chaired by Mrs. Tavenner with special help from the Junior High Sunday School Class.

The final celebration of the year will take place in December in remembrance of the first Annual Conference of Methodism held in Baltimore, Md., at Christmas of 1784.

Bicentennial committee members are Mrs. Randel, chairperson; Mrs. McCray, Rev. Tavenner, Mrs. Simms, Mrs. R. F. Surratt and Mrs. Elmer Padgett.

Is it UFO Old Testament?

By George R. Plagenz

Let the FAA and the Air Force hoot. They need to get religion.

Haven't they ever read Genesis or Ezekiel in the Old Testament?

While thousands of people in New York's Westchester County and parts of Connecticut were seeing UFOs this summer, the Federal Aviation Administration dismissed their cries for an investigation.

The FAA said, "Why would we care about a UFO?"

The Air Force long ago - dealing with reports that aliens were invading our airspace - adopted the stand, "There's nothing to it."

Well, maybe so. But some believers in UFOs say it's happened before, and what's to say it can't happen again - and is?

The author of "The Intelligent Man's Guide to Flying Saucers," T.M. Wright, says that when "Ezekiel saw the wheel," it wasn't his imagination or a hallucination (as most Bible commentators believe). Wright says Ezekiel was witnessing an invasion from outer space.

Erich von Daniken, who wrote "Chariots of the Gods?" is another who considers Ezekiel's visionary account to be a description of the actual landing of an interstellar spaceship.

Von Daniken claims, "He describes (in the first chapter) a craft that comes from the north. It gleams, emits rays and raises a gigantic cloud of desert sand."

IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

The Protecting LIGHT

This lighted tower is a light shining in the darkness to guide sailors and ships through the night. Our Lord is our light who guides us faithfully through life, even though it be as a stormy sea - He knows the way. His word, as proclaimed in His church, will light your way and bring peace, joy and comfort.

"Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." Psalm 119:105.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Coleman Adv.

You should see marked improvement in material conditions this coming year. In areas where you reaped a sparse harvest, you could now enjoy large returns.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Although what occurs may not be totally visible, things will be stirring today which will contribute to your security and material well being. Major changes are in store for Libra in the coming year. Send for your year ahead predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) This is likely to be a busy day for you, but it also should be a pleasant one. Dealings you have with friends will prove fortunate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Do something positive about any financial hunches you get today. Your inner voice will be trying to put you on track to something worthwhile.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Even though you'll view things on a grand scale today, they will be within your realm of capability. Do not permit others to put doubts into your mind.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) In your business dealings today, let the other guy make the overtures. If you play a little hard to get, you'll come out with better terms.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Friends will find you a charming companion today because you'll innately know how to make them feel important, while bringing out their finer points.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Give work and career matters priority today. Lady Luck will be there when you need her to help you pull off something big.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Problems which appear to have no immediate solutions can be resolved today if you'll adopt a positive attitude. Be self-assured.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You're likely to be luckier in joint ventures today than you will be playing a lone hand. Intuitively you should know the right persons with whom to team up.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be attentive when conversing with knowledgeable persons today. Something beneficial can be pieced together from information you get from different sources.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Although you may not be seeking them, substantial gains could come your way today from your willingness to be helpful and of service to others.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Situations you personally manage today should work out well for everyone involved. Don't let others do things you know you can do better yourself.

Pampa hosts Canyon tonight in fight for runnerup spot

The Pampa-Canyon game tonight is a crucial District 1-4A matchup with the loser facing early exile into no-playoff land.

Going into tonight's 1-4A schedule, Lubbock Dunbar is the only unbeaten team (2-0) in district play. The other six teams all have one loss apiece.

"This is a very big game for both teams," said Pampa head coach John Kendall. "After this game, there will be three teams (unless Levelland somehow upsets Dunbar) with two losses apiece, so this is a very big game."

Canyon, a pre-season favorite to clinch one of the two playoff spots in district, has a 3-3 overall record. The Eagles lost their district opener last weekend to Lubbock Estacado, 6-0.

The Harvesters, 1-5 overall, started off district play on the right foot by edging Levelland, 9-7, last week.

"Canyon has a very big team. They're the type of team that likes to grind the ball out, a ball-control team," said Kendall.

The Eagles were district runnersup a year ago, and return three key players that helped get them there. Two of them, fullback-middle linebacker Terry Nix and tailback-defensive back Wes Stevens, were first-team, all-district picks a year ago. Stevens, a 189-pound senior, has rushed for 300 yards one touchdown from his tailback spot and is considered one of the top pass defenders in the district. Pampa's loss was Canyon's gain. Stevens transferred to Canyon from Pampa when he was a freshman. Nix, a rugged 208-pounder, has rushed for 346 yards and four touchdowns.

Quarterback Phil Behrens was a solid performer down the stretch for the Eagles a year ago.

"Behrens did a super job for them last year," Kendall said.

The Eagles have size, with 225-pound Todd Manley, 220-pound Tony Brumley, and 205-pounders Brian Kershen and Kevin Shelton and is going for his fourth consecutive game of 100-plus yardage. Bridges has passed for 311 yards and two touchdowns with Howard doing most of the catching.

Pampa receiver Brent Cryer (12) and a Levelland defender battle for a pass during last week's District 1-4A game. The pass fell incomplete, but Pampa won the game, 9-7, and can take a giant step in the playoff race with a win over Canyon tonight.

manning the trenches. Kendall said his squad is looking forward to tonight's game after a rough week of workouts.

"Monday, it was raining and cold, and Tuesday and Wednesday, it was windy, but the kids have worked hard," Kendall said. "The kids have got their spirits up. They realize this is an important game."

Pampa's offensive attack is built around the running of Brian Kotara and the pass-catch combo of Jimmy Bridges and Wade Howard.

Kotara has rushed for 516 yards

Howard has caught 19 passes for 216 yards and two TDs.

The Harvesters have two players out with twisted knees.... starting offensive guard Travis Adams and reserve split end Lance Ripple.

"Adams was hurt Wednesday," Kendall said. "I'll know more about his condition today."

Tonight's game kicks off at 7:30 p.m. at Harvester Stadium.

In other district games tonight, Dunbar hosts Levelland, and Borger welcomes Estacado. Dumas has an open date.

Flutie looks for win against Mountaineers

Boston College quarterback Doug Flutie is looking for a victory; West Virginia is looking for revenge.

"I'd like to show West Virginians that I am as good as some say... that's it's not only publicity," said Flutie, who has passed for more than 8,000 yards and 53 touchdowns in his career, but never has beaten West Virginia.

"It really bothers me," Flutie said. "That's something I don't want to go through my career without doing."

While BC is ranked fourth in the nation and West Virginia is 20th in the Associated Press college football poll, the Mountaineers want revenge for last year.

"We haven't forgotten last year," said West Virginia fullback Ron Wolfley. "We beat BC at their place 27-17, but the voters gave the Lambert Trophy to them, not us."

The Lambert Trophy is awarded to the best team in the East.

In other games involving the Top

Ten, No. 1-ranked Washington is at home to Oregon, No. 2 Oklahoma is at Iowa State, No. 3 Texas plays host to Arkansas, No. 5 Nebraska travels to Colorado, Houston is at No. 6 Southern Methodist, No. 7 Brigham Young is at Air Force, No. 8 Ohio State is at Michigan State, Pitt is at No. 9 Miami of Florida and No. 10 Louisiana State is at No. 16 Kentucky.

Elsewhere, No. 11 South Carolina travels to Notre Dame, Kansas is at No. 12 Oklahoma State, Georgia Tech is at No. 13 Auburn, Vanderbilt is at No. 14 Georgia, Tulane is at No. 15 Florida State, Cincinnati is at No. 17 Florida, Michigan plays at No. 18 Iowa and Syracuse is at No. 19 Penn State.

In the season's first balloting for the Lambert Trophy, Boston College is ranked No. 1 with West Virginia No. 2.

"We want to leave no doubt who's best in the East this year," Wolfley said. "As good as Boston College is, Penn State is still the team to beat. But we must first win this Saturday, then take it from there."

The BYU-Air Force game will pit the nation's top passing team, Brigham Young led by Robbie Bosco, against the No. 1 rushing team, Air Force. And BYU, at 6-0, owns the nation's longest winning streak at 17 games.

The last time BYU lost at home was in 1982 to Air Force. And, Brigham Young was the last school to defeat Air Force in Falcon Stadium, one of only two losses suffered by the Falcons last year.

Tiger League football roundup

The Raiders rolled past the Rams, 33-0, Thursday to remain the only unbeaten team in the Tiger Football League.

Chris Pollard and Paul Brown scored two touchdowns each for the Raiders, while Wayne Cavanaugh added one. Chris Pollard scored two conversion points while Craig Stevens had one.

The Raiders rolled up 320 yards in offense. Raiders coaches said Quincy Williams played outstanding on offense.

Defensively, the Raiders Greg Cryer recovered a fumble and also picked off a Rams pass. Leading the Raiders defense were Jayson Williams, Ryam Smethers, Ray Dickson and Quincy Williams.

Top defenders for the Rams were Mike Chaney, Mike Cota, Daniel Hampton, Casey Campbell, Jason Horn and Sammy Laury. Hampton had a pass interception.

The Colts rolled over the Packers, 28-0, in the other game played.

The Colts were led by Phil Sexton, who scored two touchdowns and four extra points. Todd Madison and Michael Ross had one TD each.

Top defenders for the Colts were Tyson Beck, Jimmy Mayberry, Steve Sanders and Sexton. Mayberry, Beck and Bryan Eller recovered fumbles for the Colts.

For the Packers, Chris Howard, Ross Kelson and Joe Yurich were the top defensive players.

One more week of the regular season is left before the City Tournament, which starts Saturday, Oct. 27.

The Raiders are top of the standings with a 3-0 record, followed by the Packers 2-2; Colts 2-1; Rams 1-2, and Redskins 0-3.

The regular season ends next Thursday with the Redskins meeting the Raiders at 6 p.m. and the Colts going against the Rams at 7:30 p.m.

Redskins better beware of the Cardinals

By The Associated Press
This is the week for all those people who have been saying, "Watch out for the Cardinals."

The Redskins will go to St. Louis as 3 1/2-point favorites looking every bit the team that's represented the National Football Conference in the past two Super Bowls. The Cardinals await them after two straight victories in which they've looked every bit the team about which people were warning the Washingtons of the world.

If the Redskins are vulnerable, it's in the secondary, which is something that Neil Lomax and Roy Green are prepared to exploit. The Cardinals did a decent job on Chicago's Walter Payton last Sunday. If they can do the same on John Riggins, watch out for the CARDINALS.

Anderson earns AL honors

DETROIT (AP) — Sparky Anderson promised to make the Detroit Tigers winners in five years. He kept his word, and today is the American League's Manager of the Year.

But to hear Anderson tell it, he had almost nothing to do with it.

"The award really says, 'The players won this for the manager,'" Anderson said by telephone from his home in Thousand Oaks, Calif.

"I always say no coach or manager can earn an award like that. The players did that."

"I appreciate it. I just feel it's for our whole system."

In fact, Anderson used the opportunity to lobby strongly for relief ace Willie Hernandez, who has a shot at both the AL Cy Young and Most Valuable Player awards, and for General Manager Bill Lajoie, who could be Baseball Executive of the Year.

"I appreciate it only because it's an award for the Detroit Tigers," Anderson said. "I hope the rest of our guys go on and have a clean sweep."

Anderson, who guided the Tigers to the best record in their history and a World Series championship, won the award by one point over Dick Howser of Kansas City, it was announced Thursday by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Anderson received 13 of 28 first-place votes and a total of 96 points. Howser, who led the Royals to the AL West title, got 11 first-place votes and finished with
