

'Mother, I can see light out of that eye'

From Staff and Wire Reports

DALLAS (AP) — "I'm not sure what I want to see first," Pampa's Jimmy Vinson said in a telephone interview from his hospital bed at Seton Medical Center in Austin. "I have a pretty good idea of what my family looks like. But I hope to have a better idea soon."

Doctors performed nearly three hours of surgery Tuesday to remove scar tissue from Vinson's right eye, which will now enable the retina to reattach itself.

When bandages were partially removed Wednesday, Vinson, blind since birth, detected light in the room.

"I could see a little light. But not much," he said calmly. "I'm really hoping I can see. All the doctors said the surgery went excellent."

"This is something we just couldn't believe," his mother, Leona Ray, told The Pampa News from Austin. "He's never seen light before. It's always just been black."

"He said, 'Mother, I can see light out of that eye — there's light coming through.' That's a moment I'll never forget as long as I live," Mrs. Ray said.

Over the next six months, vision should come gradually to his eye, said Dr. Lyle D. Koen, who performed the surgery.

Koen said the type surgery on the boy was "very uncommon."

Until now, Vinson has seen his family only in shadows out of his left eye, which he has always called "my good eye." And he never expected to see more than that.

Born premature, he suffered from a congenital eye disorder in his left eye, which doctors say can't be corrected. The blindness in his right eye was associated with a high level of oxygen in premature infants, Koen said.

"If you're born premature and exposed to high levels of oxygen, a membrane is formed over the retina like a scar," Koen explained.

The disease is called retrolental fibroplasia, he said.

"As time passes, after a year to 18 months, the scar membrane contracts and pulls the retina completely off. The retina is suspended in the middle of eye and no longer functions," Koen said.

"Once you cut the scar tissue away, the retina reattaches spontaneously. And once the retina reattaches, he should see," the surgeon said.

Koen said if the retina heals as expected, the teen-ager will have sight in his right eye.

"Assuming there are no other problems with the retina, like holes, and I didn't see any, the retina should reattach and he should have vision," Koen said Wednesday.

But he cautioned that the quality of vision after the retina reattaches, is difficult to predict.

Vinson's sister, Karla Cho, told the Pampa News the family thinks the surgery is a miracle.

"The doctors always thought his blindness resulted from a lack of oxygen at birth, not a detached retina," she said.

"We never dreamed this would happen. We dreamed it but it was just a dream, that was all," she said.

Vinson, a native of Pampa, attends the Austin School for the Blind where he is considered a gifted student. He is an accomplished musician, and plays professionally in Austin night clubs. He plays piano, trombone, clarinet and bass and has written his first song.

He said he doesn't know how sight will affect his life.

"I haven't thought about it very much," he said. "I want to go to college. I'm really hoping to see, but if I don't, it was my bad eye anyway."

School money matters still muddy after meet

AMARILLO — Northwest Texas educators filled the Region XVI Education Service Center here hoping to find out how legislative education reforms will affect their school districts.

But at the end of the Texas Education Agency's one day legislative seminar — and with only weeks before school starts — many area superintendents still don't know what to tell their patrons or what to do with their budgets.

More than 300 school superintendents, trustees, secretaries, business clerks, principals and patrons representing about 72 Panhandle school districts packed the center's large conference room and listened as TEA officials tried to explain the new curriculum, staffing and funding policies.

But TEA deputy commissioner Dr. James Hill and assistant TEA division of state funding director Virgil Flathouse Ph.D., also hope to learn something about how West Texas educators feel about the changes. The two TEA officials have already conducted legislative "workshops" in Midland and Lubbock and will complete a total of 20 before the State Board of Education meets in August.

Hill said he wants to present the state board with a "laundry list" of comments, ideas and reactions from educators across the state.

The commissioner prefaced his morning-long lecture on funding and other policies by noting "it's against the law to shoot a messenger."

What the educators have to implement between now and the time school opens in August is listed in an 86-page document explaining the new Texas school financing plan and other changes, and a supplement listing new faculty salary schedules mandated by the state legislature in House Bill 72.

Although some of the education changes mandated by the legislature do not go into effect until school year 1985-86 or later, several major changes, such as strict student policies and a new funding formula, are effective now.

School officials, who usually spend summer dicker over ad valorem tax rates and budgets, were caught off-guard when the legislature brought out its new school funding formula. The legislature hopes to close the gap between rich school districts — which abound in the oil-rich Panhandle — and poor school districts.

Will school changes play in Panhandle?

AMARILLO — Changes in education mandated by the Texas Legislature may help poor schools in south Texas, but will they play in the Panhandle, area educators wonder.

School officials from Pampa, Groom, White Deer, Mobeetie, McLean, Miami, Lefors and Canadian joined more than 300 educators from 72 schools at a Legislative Workshop at the Region XVI Education Service Center. At the seminar, representatives from the Texas Education Association explained changes made by the recently passed school "reform" package, House Bill 72.

School officials approach the house bill with uncertainty and doubt that it will really help Panhandle schools. With the sweeping policy and funding changes dropped on them in the middle of the summer tax rate and budget planning time, school officials admit they were caught off-guard.

To make matters even more unclear, TEA officials said that figures on state funding won't be ready until early August and that preliminary interpretations on policy changes may change when the new appointed 15-member school board is seated in January.

The new state funding formula, and the delayed information about it, worries most area educators.

The new formula bases state funding on average daily attendance and on the amount of taxable property. Several oil-rich Panhandle schools may lose state money while poorer schools will get more.

"It may be good for some schools, but overall, I have a negative response," Lefors ISD superintendent Jim Collins said, adding that his school district could get $109,000 less from the state than it got in 1984.

"The way it looks, Lefors could receive $27,200," he said. "But that does not include the state mandated salary increase for our professional employees and the fact that we'll get no equalization aid."

"We have preliminary budget figures now," he added. "But I'm going to wait for the printout from the TEA. That's the best thing for us now is to wait for more concrete figures."

Pampa ISD superintendent James Trusty also has too little faith in his current figures to set the 1985 tax rate or plan the budget.

"I can only say that the state funding increase is not going to cover the mandated regulations we're going to have," he said. "As we figure it now, we will have an increase, but it won't be sizeable."

"Confusion was running rampant," Trusty said about the meeting. "The 86-page TEA interpretation about the bill helped us to some extent and we're still studying the thing each day."

Trusty anticipates the bill will have a "tremendous effect" on Pampa school policy.

One such change is the elimination of state funding for drivers' education.

"That's gone," Trusty said, adding that it will have to be funded through increased tuitions for the students.

A regulation limiting extra-curricular activities only to students making better than 70s on a 100 scale "will not affect that many students," according to Trusty.

Smaller schools, such as Groom and Mobeetie, think they may have trouble implementing a "career ladder" for qualified teachers. Teachers advance up the four-step ladder based on ability and experience.

The state mandates that the ladder candidates be selected by three school district administrators and two teachers. Smaller schools may have smaller committees.

Still, Groom Superintendent Rex Peoples says he expects four teachers to advance on the ladder.

Groom, a district with lots of agricultural property, may gain state aid. But Peoples is skeptical. "We have all these extra requirements, so it won't be a surplus," he said, adding that the state cuts may halt library, health and counseling services out of the Region XVI Center. After the meeting, educators discussed what they'll have to do to keep the services.

Groom home economics teacher Judy Babcock will help the school implement curriculum changes caused by HB 72 and an earlier education bill.

Mobeetie ISD superintendent Bob Mickie announced a school board meeting for Saturday to discuss the changes.

Canadian ISD superintendent Jim Pollard said the schools are getting a "double shot" from the two education bills. Pollard adds that school officials will have a lot to discuss in the month before school starts.

"But most of it is pretty obvious if you study the law," he said.

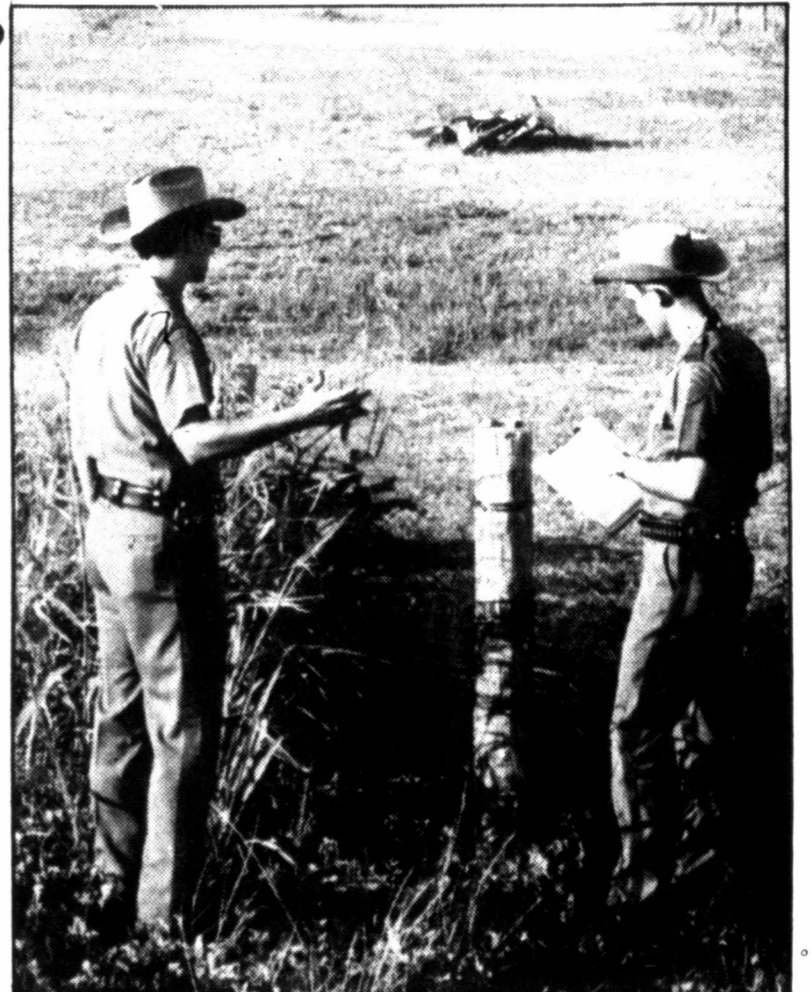

McLean ISD superintendent James Rutherford said talks on budget and taxes will be put on hold until the state figures come in.

"Hopefully in three weeks we'll have the state figures," he said.

White Deer superintendent Jim Harkey said he's "concerned with what the new board will do."

"With the new board, there will be different interpretations," he said, adding that with the "hidden costs" from the legislation, the district could lose up to $400,000.

Miami superintendent Bill Vestal could not attend the meeting.

Victim shot twice

Wife held in killing of Pampan

By JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

A 40-year-old unemployed Pampa man was killed by his common-law wife after an argument at their southside home early this morning, police said.

Robert Eugene Mitchell, 1106 Campanella, was pronounced dead at the scene.

Josephine Payne, 36, Mitchell's common-law wife, shot the victim twice with a .22-caliber revolver, a "Saturday night special," police said.

The victim was shot once in the head and once in the chest, police said.

Police said Billy Payne Jr., 15, called Pampa Medical Services for an ambulance shortly before 1 o'clock this morning. PMS notified police.

When officers arrived, they found Mitchell lying face up on the dining room floor.

Police arrested Payne at the scene. She was taken before Justice of the Peace Margie Prestidge about 2 a.m. for a reading of the suspect's rights, Police Chief J.J. Ryzman said. Prestidge set a $30,000 bond on a complaint charging murder.

The suspect hadn't been formally arraigned in connection with the murder at press time today. Assistant District Attorney David Hamilton is on vacation, and District Attorney Guy Hardin hadn't arrived from Shamrock to consider the case. Also, Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan reported that the county jail was too full this morning to handle Payne's expected transfer from the city jail, where she remained in custody this morning.

Police said the killing apparently stemmed from a lovers' quarrel.

"Apparently, prior to the shooting, there had been a domestic-type dispute, which erupted into total violence," police said.

Justice of the Peace Margie Prestidge ordered an autopsy, which was scheduled to be performed today by pathologist Dr. Ralph Erdmann.

Bowers City resident killed in cycle wreck

A Bowers City man died in a motorcycle accident early this morning south of Pampa.

Gray County deputies this morning searched for Delbert Lynn Whitman, age unavailable, after his brother lost sight of the victim while the two were riding motorcycles on FM 749 (Bowers City Highway).

The Department of Public Safety said Whitman and his brother, who wasn't identified, had stopped off the road about midnight and repaired the victim's disabled motorcycle.

The brother took off, and Whitman followed, troopers said. When the man looked around, Whitman was not in sight. The brother made an unsuccessful search for the missing man and finally called the sheriff's office about 2 o'clock this morning.

Deputies searched the road until about 4 a.m. but couldn't find Whitman.

An employee of Phillips Petroleum Company, Ernest Schaub of Pampa, spotted the accident victim lying in a vacant lot near the highway about 6:40 this morning.

Justice of the Peace Margie Prestidge pronounced Whitman dead at the scene about an hour later.

The investigating officers determined that the man was traveling south and failed to make a sharp turn in the road about five districts will be based on average daily attendance and on the value of taxable property. That means schools with less taxable property would receive more state aid than schools with higher property values.

When the legislature approved HB 72 in July, the TEA issued a print-out listing how much more or less the schools may get. According to the preliminary figures, all Pampa area school districts except Groom and McLean stood to lose state funding.

For the most part, he indicated, schools should be able to implement such changes as a merit teacher pay "career ladder" program, a required daily tutorial program, stricter policies on extra-curricular activities and stiffer minimum teaching duties.

Scheduled to go into effect over several years, the career ladder bases teacher merit pay on four levels based on the teacher's ability and experience. Steps one and two will be implemented this year.

According to the ladder guidelines, teachers who reach level two are entitled to a salary supplement of $2,000 ($1,500 for poorer districts) per year.

TEA funding official Flathouse explained that the school districts will get $100 per student for the career ladder program. Thirty dollars must be spent for the salary supplements under Level 2 of the career ladder with $35 to be spent on people other than classroom teachers and the remaining $35 to be spent for any legal purpose.

Hill also pointed out new legislation requiring tutorial services at each school. He said that these sessions must be at least 45 minutes long and be held at least twice a week. They must be supervised by an "appropriately certified teacher for each subject, although aides will be allowed to assist.

The sessions may be held during school hours or before or after school. Beginning with the second six week reporting period,

Hill said the legislature also stiffened requirements for extra-curricular activities and the number of classroom hours a teacher must have.

"The major thrust of that is to keep the kids in the classroom as long as possible," Hill said.

Under the new policy, which goes into effect January, 1985, students making less than 70 in any subject may not take part in extra-curricular activities.

miles south of Pampa. Troopers said the motorcycle and rider left the highway and traveled about 250 feet before going between fence posts and through a barbed wire fence. Whitman then struck a roll of wood picket fence stacked on the lot. He hit the stack and went airborne for another 103 feet, officers said. The victim apparently suffered head and chest injuries.

Services for Whitman are pending with Carmichael-Whatley Funeral Directors.

Disputed immigration bill apparently dead this session

WASHINGTON (AP) — The survival of a controversial rewrite of the nation's immigration laws is in serious jeopardy, but the House has handed President Reagan a victory on one of his pet legislative goals, a bill to allow student religious meetings in public high schools.

Some in Congress are already reading the obituary for the Simpson-Mazzoli immigration bill and even its main Senate sponsor says the measure is "hanging by a thread."

The bill, which has become a target of criticism by Hispanics and by Democratic presidential contender Walter F. Mondale, would grant amnesty to many illegal aliens now in the United States but impose stiff sanctions against employers who hire illegal aliens.

Sen. Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., chief sponsor of the bill in the Senate, gave a gloomy assessment of its prospects Wednesday and blamed the situation on "raging partisan hysteria" in Congress fanned by election-year politics.

As Simpson and House sponsor Rep. Romano Mazzoli, D-Ky., struggled to breathe life into the stalled legislation, critics already were saying it is dead.

"It's beginning to look like the Simpson-Mazzoli bill is dead for this session of Congress at least, and that is very, very good news," said Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif. "It's a bad bill in any form. The sooner it is buried and forgotten, the better."

The Democrat-controlled House passed the measure by a 216-to-211 vote in May. The Senate had passed its version, supported by Reagan, more than a year ago.

Normally, a House-Senate conference committee would be named to draft a compromise version that would then be presented to each chamber for final approval.

However, House leaders have expressed doubt that any form of the bill could pass that chamber again because of heavy lobbying against it by Hispanic groups and the position of Mondale and Ms. Ferraro.

And Senate leaders once considered, but on Wednesday appeared to have rejected, the possibility of trying to get the Senate to accept the House-passed bill to avoid having to go to conference.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes told reporters aboard Air Force 1 on Wednesday that "the House version is unacceptable."

Despite the growing partisan climate on Capitol Hill, the House passed the Reagan-supported bill to allow student religious meetings in public high schools.

The 337-77 vote on the so-called "equal access" measure represented a reversal of the House's position of just two months ago, when the measure failed to gain the two-thirds majority needed under an expedited procedure.

White House approval of the bill was not certain, however, because it was attached to a bill providing $1 billion over two years to strengthen teaching of math and science in schools, a bill still under review by the administration.

The Senate, meanwhile, unanimously moved to close loopholes in the federal law that governs disposal of toxic wastes in what is expected to be a flurry of pre-election environmental concern shown by Congress.

The body voted 93-0 for a four-year reauthorization of the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act, the federal law that governs handling of toxic chemical wastes from production to disposal. Differences between the bill and one the House passed last year are to be worked out by negotiators for the two houses.

In the House, a battle continued over the fate of the government's Synthetic Fuels Corp., the entity set up during a time of rising oil prices to encourage private efforts to find synthetic replacements for oil.

Some congressmen say the corporation has become merely a $20 billion welfare program for certain businesses, and they are seeking to slash up to $10 billion from the $13 billion remaining in its coffers. Defenders say to do so would be short-sighted.

Pampa man plans suit against IRS

Republicans and Democrats have been arguing over ways to end the federal deficit, but no one seems to have come up with a definite plan.

A Pampa man, however, says he knows one good way to attack the burgeoning deficit - he wants to sue the directors of the Internal Revenue Service to make them enforce collections of taxes from the rich.

James Camp said his "private investigations" of IRS rules disclosed the tax collection rate for incomes over $164,600 is rarely enforced.

IRS rules, Camp said, require a collection of 50 percent in taxes for anything above $64,500 or an income of $164,600 for a married couple filing jointly.

Camp claims a "conspiracy of IRS leaders" has resulted in a failure of collecting such tax moneys fully under legal federal tax rates. And that lack of collection has been "the primary source" of the federal deficit problems, he said.

In an attempt to correct that inequity, Camp said he plans to file a suit in federal court at Amarillo by Friday alleging criminal charges against the IRS directors.

He said the directors should be prosecuted on criminal grounds.

Camp claimed the failure to collect the proper taxes from the rich "is not the work of the guy in the field offices," but instead results from concerted actions of the IRS leaders.

He cited an instance in which federal income taxes on an income of $780,000 amounted to only $140,000. By his calculations, the taxes should have been about $350,000.

Even with deductions, the amount actually collected was way too low by rates established under federal tax rates, he claims.

Since the IRS directors have not fulfilled their obligations in tax collections, the courts need to testify against each other.

Court vindicates parents

HOUSTON (AP) — An appeals court has vindicated a Houston couple by determining they were improperly jailed for refusing to testify against their son before a grand jury, the couple's attorney says.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals found in a 6-0 ruling Wednesday that Bernard and Odette Port were incorrectly held in contempt of court for refusing to testify against their 17-year-old son, who is charged with murder.

David Port is charged with killing 23-year-old mail carrier Debra Sue Schatz, 23, at his home. Ms. Schatz was found shot to death in a remote section of northwest Harris County two days later.

The appeals court said state District Judge William Hatten did not have the authority to find the couple in contempt for not answering grand jury questions.

"Their situation (the Ports) at this point is a complete exoneration of the contempt charge," Randy Schaffer, attorney for the Ports, said of the ruling. "They're both numb by the whole thing and are just taking one day at a time. As a practical matter, there is nothing the state can do with the Ports before the grand jury at this time."

The appeals court did not answer two issues the Ports raised. They contended their Jewish beliefs bar them from testifying against their son, David. They also claim they should be exempt from testifying because they should get the same protection that allows spouses not to testify against each other.

Reagan campaigns in Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — President Reagan says he's given Texas a Texas while the Democrats are offering the state "the back of their hand."

Playing on Vice President George Bush's Texas ties, Reagan delighted a crowd of supporters in a heavily Democratic city Wednesday by saying "you've made me feel at least like an adopted son."

He told a lakeside rally here that Texans had given him "one of your finest."

"Believe me, Texas has no more loyal son than my partner, George Bush," the president said, listing Bush's experience as a congressman, director of the CIA, ambassador to the United Nations and representative to the Republic of China.

Although Reagan never mentioned Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro of New York by name, his reading of Bush's resume was an obvious reminder to Texans that the vice president is a Texan with experience.

At their convention, the leadership of the Democratic Party gave Texas the back of their hand. Well, we've come to give you a message from our heart. We care about Texas," he told a crowd estimated between 15,000 and 25,000.

U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, who had been considered as a running mate for Democratic nominee Walter Mondale, said, "That is ridiculous."

"I thought the convention went extremely well and the polls show it did," Bentsen said.

Bush, in his first campaign appearance of the year with Reagan, said, "I'm proud to serve for a president who stands up for our country and doesn't apologize for the United States of America."

"One good term deserves another."

Most in the lunchtime crowd agreed. A few did not.

"They're having a family affair across the street as if we are all one big, happy family," said Isolda Sanchez, an 18-year-old University of Texas student who held a protest sign near the rally. "We're not all one big, happy family."

Protesters distributed rally tickets similar to the officials ones printed by the Republicans. But where the official tickets said "Ticket to the Future," the protesters' tickets said "Ticket to Destruction."

Reagan-Bush supporters waved hand-written campaign signs passed out at the gate. The loudest ovation — other than that given Reagan and Bush — was sparked by the introduction of former Gov. Bill Clements, who was unseated in 1982 by Democrat Mark White.

U.S. Sen. John Tower of Texas introduced Bush, saying Texas should "rejoice that our great president has elected to open his great campaign for re-election right here in Texas."

Search for sharks stopped; victim in guarded condition

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND, Texas (AP) — The search for elusive sharks that apparently mangled the feet of two teenage girls swimming in chest-deep water has been called off after boats and airplanes found no trace of "large fish" in the water.

Meanwhile, city officials were to meet with marine biologist Robert Edwards today to determine what type of fish bit an 18-year-old girl from Mexico City and a 13-year-old girl from College Station, Texas, on Tuesday.

Edwards, an ichthyologist with Pan American University at Edinburg, said Wednesday the "large fish" might have been a type of gar or barracuda and not necessarily a shark.

City officials have downplayed any possible danger after the apparent shark attacks and decided to keep their popular beaches open, hoping publicity would boost tourism, rather than scare it away.

Carmen Castro Gaytan, who was attacked Tuesday by what rescuers described as a 4-foot shark, remained in guarded condition Wednesday night in the intensive care unit of Valley Community Hospital in Brownsville after undergoing more than five hours of extensive reconstructive surgery on her legs.

"It's just wait and see," hospital spokeswoman Suzy Payne said of Castro's chances to recover without an amputation. Payne said the young woman's leg was badly mangled by "fierce bites."

Gary Kendrick, assistant hospital administrator, said it would be 24 to 48 hours before doctors could determine whether she would regain use of her foot.

A few hours after the attack on Castro, a 13-year-old from College Station was bitten while swimming in front of the Tiki Hotel hotel and required 70 stitches on her legs.

Joe Rubio, a South Padre Island city official, said the beaches were kept under surveillance by land, sea and air Wednesday.

Rubio said there was no evidence the second girl had been attacked by a shark. City officials would not release the girl's name.

"We're not sure what happened," he said. "A girl suffered some lacerations on her foot. We don't even know what it was."

Beaches will be evacuated if "any suspicious activity that can be confirmed as sharks" is spotted, he said.

But the attack — the first in 23 years in the area — didn't keep people away from the border resort at the southern tip of Texas, he said.

"We haven't noticed people staying out of the water," he said. "We hope we can get some more publicity and get more tourists down here. We don't even consider this a major incident.... We see no reason to spoil anyone's vacation."

A school of about 12 sharks was spotted Tuesday "a couple of miles offshore," said a coast guard spokesman.

Rubio said the city kept watch with a private airplane and U.S. Coast Guard boats over the area until sundown Wednesday but found no trace of sharks.

"We're probably taking more precautions than necessary," Rubio said. "We spotted a couple further off shore. They headed out to open water."

Governor pays visit to troubled prison unit

TENNESSEE COLONY, Texas (AP) — Gov. Mark White, alarmed by stabbings and the discovery of 489 homemade weapons at a prison unit, paid a surprise visit to the state prison system's Coffield Unit Wednesday and found all quiet.

White spent about two hours talking to guards and inmates at the 60-acre complex Wednesday afternoon as officials began to lift a lockdown of 1,700 inmates that began last Thursday.

"He's been in touch, and he knows we've had problems," warden Jack Garner said. "We talked about what our problems had been and he seemed to think we were going in the right direction."

Garner said White "just showed up at our gate."

Ray Procnunier, director of the Texas Department of Corrections, ordered Coffield's two non-trustee cellblocks locked down July 19 after three guards were injured in three separate attacks by inmates during the two previous days.

About 1,700 were confined to their cells as a 15-hour cell-to-cell search yielded 489 homemade weapons. The cache included 346 homemade knives, but no guns, Garner said.

The lockdown ended Wednesday, but special security precautions will continue through the week, the warden said.

"We're going to ease off gradually and see how they act," he said. "We fed them all their meals in the chow hall for the first time since (July 18)."

Ann Arnold, the governor's press secretary, told the Tyler Morning Telegraph that White had on several occasions "dropped in unannounced to see how the prisons are doing."

Man says report of survivor was second-hand

HOUSTON (AP) — A refugee who said he saw an American "exactly like" a photograph of an Austin lawyer's son in a Vietnamese prison now says the report of the sighting was second-hand.

Nguyen Hun Chanh, a Vietnamese refugee living in the Philippines, told the lawyer, Douglas Pierce, that he lied to protect the identity of his friend, a woman who actually saw Pierce's son and five other Americans in October.

Pierce said Wednesday his belief was not shaken.

"Do I feel deceived? No, it's still reliable information," Pierce said. "It doesn't change anything. He (Nguyen) didn't know who I was, so he didn't know if he could trust me."

John Pierce is among 47 missing crew members of the Glomar Java Sea, a drilling ship that sank in the South China Sea Oct. 25 during a typhoon. Divers working for the ship's Houston-based owner, Global Marine Inc., have discovered the bodies of 34 men in the wreck.

Relatives of the missing hope they drifted onto the coast of Vietnam in a lifeboat.

Pierce said Nguyen told him the woman who claims to have seen his son is still in Vietnam. Pierce said she wrote him a letter in June saying she met John Pierce and got from him a business card bearing Douglas Pierce's name. But the elder Pierce said the woman did not send the card.

Nguyen's earlier letter seemed to imply the refugee saw John Pierce with his own eyes.

"This face is exactly your son," Nguyen said in the letter, referring to a photograph of the younger Pierce. "The hair is longer than in the picture. The face is skinnier and the beard is longer. I confirm to you that your son, when I met, looked exactly like in the picture."

The U.S. Defense Intelligence Agency acknowledged interviewing Nguyen in the Philippines after learning about his first letter to Pierce. Spokesman Kenneth Geisen said the agency determined Nguyen was untruthful.

San Antonio couple faces deportation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pedro and Rosario Narvaez have lived under the threat of deportation for almost 20 years, but they established a successful San Antonio house-painting business and watched their children become legal residents.

Wednesday, the House Judiciary Subcommittee on Immigration took a first step toward lifting the cloud when it unanimously approved a private bill sponsored by U.S. Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-San Antonio, that would grant the Narvaezes permanent status.

Two of the Narvaezes' eight children were born in the United States and are citizens. Five have been granted permanent resident status. Their oldest son is in the process of completing naturalization.

Narvaez's business employs 10 people.

The pair has been the subject of deportation proceedings since 1975. Their San Antonio lawyer, Robert Shivers, said they were able to remain in the United States through a series of delays by the government and legal appeals.

But the appeals finally ran out in 1983, he said, and now congressional action is the only thing that will keep the Narvaezes from having to move back to Mexico, leaving their children, grandchildren and business behind.

"My father worked very hard for us," said daughter Lupe Sosa, 22, in a telephone interview from San Antonio. "To lose everything like that, it isn't fair."

Sosa said her parents did not speak English.

Gonzalez's bill still must be approved by the full committee, the House and the Senate. But Gonzalez said he was encouraged by the subcommittee's quick approval of the measure.

"In my twenty-two and a half years in Congress, I think I have introduced three (private) immigration bills, so it has to be something unusual, singular, and this case is," said Gonzalez.

The deportation order was stayed when the Senate immigration subcommittee sought a report on the case from the INS at the prompting of Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, who has also introduced legislation on behalf of the Narvaezes. Shivers said

If the private bill is not approved, the couple will have to move back to Mexico and petition again for entry into the United States in two years when their oldest son completes naturalization procedures, he said.

"It was very hard for us, going to school, in our everyday lives, because we were always thinking about it (deportation)," Sosa said.

PUBLIC MEETING

WE INVITE YOU, THE TAX PAYING PUBLIC AND OUR CITY COMMISSIONERS AND MAYOR, TO JOIN US FOR AN OPEN DISCUSSION REGARDING THE POLICIES, PRACTICES AND MANAGEMENT OF OUR CITY GOVERNMENT

TONIGHT 7:30 P.M.
CORONADO INN STARLIGHT ROOM

Recent events have called to the attention of many Pampa citizens a number of problems facing our fine city and its governing body, the Pampa City Commission and Mayor. Among these problems are the lack of equal representation throughout the city, salaried employees acting without regard for the opinions of the public who pays their salaries, officials who are unresponsive to the needs and desires of their constituents, and a general attitude of disrespect for the rights, opinions and property of Pampa's taxpayers.

While the street repair issue has been at the fore-front of public resistance, we feel that the conditions that fostered this problem run much deeper and fear that the taxpayers of Pampa may be in for other equally unpleasant surprises if these basic conditions are not altered.

You, the tax paying citizens of Pampa, are invited to meet together to discuss these problems. We encourage you to bring your questions, concerns and suggestions and to voice your opinions in an open and impartial forum. As citizens of this city and nation, it is your right and your responsibility to choose the path that Pampa will follow.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Some week for women, politics

Two news items during the same recent week went a long way toward explaining the nature and sad state of women and American politics.

The first was the treatment of Walter Mondale's choice for a vice presidential running mate. Geraldine Ferraro was hailed as a bold choice, one that should enable Mondale to win his party's nomination and might enable him to unseat Ronald Reagan.

What did they say about his woman? Everyone stopped just short of calling her a token—which she is—but then went about the business of reinforcing the notion that Ferraro is exactly that.

How far have politicians sunk in their search for votes? When a Los Angeles Times reporter can straightforwardly say that Ferraro "is viewed by some as a woman acceptable to conservative men because she represents the district that serves as the setting for TV character Archie Bunker," you begin to get the idea that politics in America is not on the loftiest of planes.

When we pick our leaders because of their tenuous ties to fictional TV characters, we have fallen far indeed.

No talk of issues here, nor in the latest Lou Harris survey that says Ferraro will help Mondale with women, younger voters, white-collar workers and what he called the "pivotal moderate."

Evidently politicians need not be the great thinkers of their time. They just need to have the right ethnic and sexual backgrounds, to look pretty, smile a lot and have ties to popular TV shows. These are the people to whom we would delegate control of our lives? Think about that when you think about voting.

Think, too, about what these people do once they're in office, which brings to that second news item we mentioned. It involves the Town Council of Monroe Township, N.J. Those august officials want to close Gerry Clevenger's hot dog stand because they say she's too pretty to work on a street corner where she could cause an accident by distracting passing motorists.

Who brought all this to the attention of the council? A competing businessman, whose establishment is across the street from Clevenger's corner. A little political muscle never hurts when you are in business for a buck.

From Ferraro's background to Clevenger's, well, cleavage, what a week it was for women.

'Republican lock' in West

SAN FRANCISCO (NEA) - For the Democrats, the euphoria of conducting a successful convention in this captivating city now must give way to the harsh reality of struggling against the "Republican lock."

The concept of a Republican lock on the votes necessary to elect a president was developed in 1980 by Horace W. Busby, a member of the White House staff under President Lyndon Johnson and now a Washington business consultant.

When either party has a lock, it dominates presidential elections, losing control of the White House only infrequently and under extraordinary political circumstances.

"What is at work, exerting enormous force over presidential politics, is a little known configuration in the Electoral College," explains Busby, discussing the current situation. "This borders on being the best kept secret in American politics."

Adds Busby: "Few voters and surprisingly few current politicians know that it is politically pointless for the Democratic nominee for president to go west beyond Minnesota and Texas (because) the states west of the Mississippi Valley are safe states for Republicans."

That pattern is part of a long - term cycle that dates back to the election of Abraham Lincoln in 1860. In the ensuing 72 years, the GOP enjoyed the benefits of a Republican lock on the presidency.

In 1932, the election of Franklin Roosevelt established a "Democratic lock" which lasted until the 1952 election of Dwight Eisenhower restored the Republican lock.

In the eight presidential elections from 1952 through 1980, one state - Arizona - has supported the Republican nominee on every occasion while 16 other states have been almost as faithful to the GOP.

In that second category are these states which have voted for the Republican nominee in seven of the past eight presidential elections: California, Colorado, Idaho, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, New Hampshire, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Dakota, Utah, Vermont, Virginia and Wyoming.

In a third category are 12 states which have supported the GOP presidential nominee in six of the past eight elections: Florida, Illinois, Kentucky, Maine, Montana, Nevada, New Jersey, New Mexico, Ohio, Tennessee, Washington and Wisconsin.

A total of 538 votes are cast in the Electoral College, with 270 votes necessary to win the presidency. Those three groups of Republican lock states account for 289 votes - 19 more than are required for victory.

(Alaska is not on the list because it didn't attain statehood until 1959. It has participated in the last six presidential elections - and has supported the Republican in five.)

The Democrats' best opportunity to thwart President Reagan's bid for voters in the four most populous states - Florida, Illinois, New Jersey, and Ohio - in the third and weakest group of Republican lock states.

Even success in all four will not ensure a Democratic victory because the party has not developed a broad, consistent base of support in enough states in recent decades.

Indeed, only eight states - Arkansas, Hawaii, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, North Carolina, Rhode Island and West Virginia - have gone Democratic in five or more of the eight most recent elections. The District of Columbia also is reliably Democratic.

That entire collection controls only 59 of the 270 votes required for an Electoral College majority.

"Until the party changes its thinking, shedding the memories of the 1930s and 1960s," concludes Busby, "Democrats will continue to be noncompetitive for the White House."

Corruption of language

One of the things that is wrong with modern living is that nobody will do you a simple favor anymore.

There's this snack place I go to for an occasional soft drink or cookie or ice cream cone. I am one of their best customers. I easily drop 10 to 15 bucks a year there.

The other day I needed to make a telephone call, but I didn't have change. I walked into the snack place, where I had just spent all my change on a cookie, and asked a lady for four quarters for a dollar.

"Can't make no change," she said.

I asked why not.

"Cause my boss told me not to give out no change to nobody."

Her boss was a coin collector? So maybe the lady was just following orders, which is what Nazi officers used to say, but what's the big deal about giving somebody change?

I could have purchased another 25-cent cookie, of course, and received three quarters in change and then I could have made my call. But there was a principle involved here, so I decided to get back to the governor later.

That's just one example of nobody doing you a favor anymore. Ever walked into one of those convenience stores that sells soft drinks in big cups and asked for a cup of ice?

I wouldn't mind paying a dime or even a quarter for a cup of ice, but they always tell you they will have to charge you what the cup filled with a soft drink would cost, even if you don't want the soft drink.

And why is that?

"The way we keep inventory is by how many cups are gone," they answer.

"So what if I brought in my own cup? Could I have some ice then?" you ask.

"Sorry," they inevitably reply, "the icemaker's busted."

You can't win. I was with a friend in a restaurant. He ordered iced coffee.

"We don't serve iced coffee," said the waitress.

"OK," said my friend, "then bring me a glass of ice and a cup of hot coffee."

"Can't serve just a glass of ice."

"Can you serve a glass of ice with water in it?"

"Sure."

"OK, then, bring me a cup of coffee, a glass of ice water and an empty glass. I'll pour the water into the empty glass and the coffee over the ice, and then I'll have iced coffee."

"Can't do that," said the waitress.

My friend asked why on earth not.

"Because then you'd have iced coffee and we don't serve that."

Probably the ultimate refusal to grant a favor, however, is when you walk into a place and you need to use the restroom and the sign says, "Restroom for Employees Only."

I don't want to steal the soap, I just want to use the restroom. And what kind of clientele goes into a joint where they don't trust the customers in the restroom?

There are a number of ways to get around such a ridiculous and thoughtless affront. One is to jump around and scream and moan until you have caused such a scene they will allow you to go and relieve yourself.

If you're really desperate, however, ask them for a job application.

Nobody will do favors anymore

The world's melting pot has devolved into a goulash of mongrel dialects.

Former Senator Sam Hayakawa blames bilingual classes which teach neither language well.

Dr. Lois De Bakey blames radio and TV. Says she, "Few parents read to their young children anymore. Few children are surrounded with books. Most sit catatonically in front of a TV set listening to substandard English from superstars like a wealthy Western singer who says, 'I had no nuthin'', and a pop singer who made $45 million last year but who says 'misrepresentate' for 'misrepresent'."

Or, as a movie idol recently expressed himself: "It was like, well, he's got it."

The Voting Rights Act of 1975 was passed by the Congress "without thinking."

As applied, it required bilingual ballots for Mexicans and Asians in the U.S. They don't even have to learn our language to run our government.

Dr. Hayakawa notes that Hasidic Jews in Brooklyn do not demand ballots in Hebrew. French-speaking citizens in Maine, Vermont and Louisiana do not demand separate ballots in French.

You hear no clamor among Japanese Americans for an American ballot in their language.

He says Koreans and Vietnamese are so happy to be in the U.S. that they make no demands on the new culture. And their children are excelling in our schools.

It is only Mexicans and Asians who are thus accommodated.

"This," Dr. Hayakawa calls, "incredible racial condescension."

And it is no favor to them. Thus by passed they will forever be just outside the mainstream of opportunity.

Besides, our nation's naturalization laws says that you have to be able to read, write and speak English to become a citizen. Bilingual education contradicts our own naturalization laws.

We learn language by mimicking what we hear and read. Unfortunately, our models today are not often exemplary. A former top TV anchorman does not know the difference between enormity and immensity. Another does not know the difference between nauseated and nauseous.

When we blur the distinction between two similar words we increase the imprecision of the language and, ultimately, the ambiguity. The result is to subvert the purpose of language communication.

And history demonstrates that language is a unifying force in a pluralistic society; that where communication is less precise people are more vulnerable to domination.

Rattlesnakes out

HOUSTON (AP) — A Harris County commissioner's idea to use rattlesnakes to guard county equipment is probably not a good one, a three-month study of security issues has found.

The study, begun April 2 after Harris County Commissioner Jim Fonteno complained that equipment was being stolen from his district, found little support for Fonteno's suggestion.

The commissioner asked former Houston Police Chief Carroll Lynn to look into the possibility of using the snakes instead of guard dogs. Fonteno said he had heard of an Arizona company that used rattlers as part of its protection service.

But Lynn found only one company in the Houston area that had ever independently used the reptiles to protect its property. That company, located in Katy, found that the snakes stopped the burglaries, but the company went back to more traditional forms of security when advised by their attorney they might be held liable for snakebites, Lynn said.

Lynn, 51, was hired by Fonteno in March, two months after being paroled from prison after serving 5 years of a 12-year sentence for extortion. Lynn was paid $2,500 a month for a study that was to last three months. His services ended June 30 under that contract, but Fonteno asked that Lynn be hired for another three months, through Sept. 30.

Lynn's recent report on his findings suggests much more conventional measures than guard snakes.

Child car thief escapes from center

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Authorities have issued an arrest warrant for an 11-year-old boy who escaped from a juvenile detention center after he tearfully pleaded guilty last week to car theft charges.

The youth, about 4-feet-5 and weighing about 80 pounds, was awaiting placement in a foster home when he fled from The Crossroads, a minimum security facility late Monday or early Tuesday, said Tom Broussard, juvenile probation director.

The boy's name was not released by officials because he is a juvenile.

The child was arrested last month after he led police on a cross-town chase in a stolen car. It was his third arrest on car theft charges.

charges.

He was sentenced to one year's probation, officials said. During the hearing, he apologized to his mother.

"We don't know exactly when or how he escaped," Broussard said. "I'm very disappointed. Obviously, he has told us something by his actions."

"He has demonstrated that he is not amenable to placement in a less secure facility."

District Judge Roy Barrera, who sentenced the youngster last week, said the boy faced a much stiffer punishment if he were recaptured.

"I'm sending him to the Texas Youth Commission (state juvenile facility) until his 18th birthday," Barrera said.

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company has filed a tariff with the Public Utility Commission of Texas that will allow Centrex customers to control the number of access lines to the exchange network. Customers electing service under this proposed offering will be charged for exchange access based on the number of access lines rather than on the number of Centrex station lines.

The new offering, called Centrex III, is scheduled to become effective on August 10, 1984, unless the Commission suspends the effective date. The Commission has assigned the matter to Docket 5573.

The net effect of the Centrex III tariff will be a decrease in total billing.

Reagan target of Ferraro attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — In her initial vice presidential campaign appearances, Geraldine Ferraro is going after the Reagan administration as a male bastion that is insensitive to the needy and seeks to "paint a white face on all American women."

Ferraro used her first appearances since her nomination at the Democratic National Convention last week to sketch themes that are likely to be more fully developed as her campaign picks up steam.

Man arrested for threatening Bush

TYLER, Texas (AP) — A former mental patient who described himself as a "loner who couldn't hold a steady job" was ordered to undergo three months of psychiatric evaluations after threatening to kill Vice President George Bush, officials said Wednesday.

Mark Van Hall, who was working as a ticket agent at Pounds Field in Tyler where the vice president's plane landed Tuesday, was ordered to the federal prison at Springfield, Mo., by Federal Magistrate Houston Abel.

At the hearing, federal authorities said Hall previously spent time at Terrell State Hospital in 1978. They said he was also treated by psychologists at the University of Houston.

Hall, 24, was arrested without incident at his south Tyler apartment Monday night by Secret Service agents after they had been told by Hall's co-workers that he made threats against the vice president's life, according to the Tyler Morning Telegraph.

She was doing some work in her congressional office in Washington today and then flying back to her home in New York to relax for the weekend.

Walter Mondale, the party's presidential nominee, and Ferraro plan a joint campaign swing next week, beginning Tuesday at Ferraro's home and winding through the key electoral states of the industrial Midwest and the South.

She used solo appearances Wednesday to accuse President Reagan of pursuing domestic policies that destroy the federal government at the expense of the nation's needy and of the state governments that are left to care for them.

During remarks to about 2,000 members of the National Conference of State Legislatures in Boston she said, "The current administration is embarked on an ill-considered plan to tear down the structure of our system of government."

At the same time, Reagan was campaigning in Austin, Texas, saying Mondale and Ferraro threaten to "buy the American dream" with "endless tax increases, deeper dependency, planned protectionism, certain sacrifices and veiled quotas."

Ferraro, however, said Reagan's policies might be out of the mainstream of both major political parties, because many Republicans are committed to welfare, education and child-care programs that he has tried to cut.

In Washington Wednesday evening, she reached out to black women in an address to a gathering of about 8,000 attending the 75th anniversary meeting of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, the largest sorority for black college educated women.

She told the group that her nomination was "not only for myself but for all Americans who have been denied the full measure of opportunity promised by our great country."

Ferraro also took another swipe at the Reagan administration, saying, "There are those who've tried in the last four years to call our causes special interests. To set sister against sister, brother against brother... You understand that our strength lies in what we can do together."

Reagan ridicules Democrats

ATLANTA (AP) — President Reagan, launching a sharp political counterattack, is using ridicule and sarcasm in his campaign to convince conservative Democrats that Walter Mondale is so far to the left he's "left America."

On the second leg of a trip designed to grab the political offensive away from Democrats, Reagan prepared to deliver his appeal today at a political rally in a wealthy Republican enclave 12 miles north of Atlanta.

Mindful that he needs the votes of a quarter of the nation's Democrats and half of the independents to win re-election, Reagan pursued a strategy of portraying Mondale and his running mate, Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, as too liberal for mainstream Democrats.

"The national Democratic leadership is going so far left, they've left America," Reagan said.

He said the fog in San Francisco, where the Democratic convention was conducted last week, was "so thick out there that it was getting inside their heads."

After the rally at Cumberland Mall in Atlanta, the president was winding up his two-day trip with a spaghetti dinner in Hoboken, N.J., a state his campaign committee has placed on the priority list.

After a week-long thrashing at the hands of Democrats, the president began striking back at a news conference Tuesday night and on a trip to Austin, Texas, on Wednesday.

James Lake, the president's campaign spokesman, said Reagan came to Georgia to accuse Democrats of "reading the boil weevils and southern Democrats out of their party... It's a direct insult to them and their judgment."

The president carried all of the South in 1980 except Georgia, the home of former President Jimmy Carter, and remains extremely strong in the region this year.

Reagan, who is making an attempt to capture Georgia this time, attended a closed strategy session with about 100 state GOP chairmen and other Republicans from throughout the South after his arrival Wednesday afternoon.

In Austin, the president tried on a Stetson and tried out some new one-liners directed against the Democrats and especially Mondale, though he was never mentioned by name.

"I didn't watch all the (Democratic) convention," Reagan said, adding, "There's some punishment you just don't deserve."

At another point, the president took note of Mondale's campaign

theme of "new realism."

"Well, forgive me, but their new realism seems to begin right where their old ideas left off: billions in new spending, higher taxes on small business, family farms and every other working family. And we must answer with a firm unequivocal 'no.'"

As his audience whistled, hooted and cheered after every couple of lines, the president cracked that Democrats "never have understood the economy. They still think that GNP stands for gross national promises."

Reagan administration lifts Soviet fishing ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet fishermen will be free to fish in American waters for the first time since President Carter imposed a ban to punish Moscow for its invasion of Afghanistan in 1979, the State Department says.

President Reagan decided to ease the ban even though Soviet troops remain in Afghanistan. The decision, announced by the State Department Wednesday, has the twofold purpose of benefiting American fishermen and encouraging improved relations with Moscow.

Soviet fishermen will be able to catch up to 50,000 tons of fish in an area of the Pacific Ocean from central California to the Bering Sea. That amounts to only a fraction of the 400,000 to 500,000 tons that Moscow was harvesting before the invasion of Afghanistan.

Easing the fishing ban is the second important Carter-imposed sanction that Reagan has changed. Soon after taking office in 1981, he lifted a ban on U.S. grain sales to Moscow, citing benefits to U.S. farmers.

Other sanctions, stemming both from the invasion of Afghanistan and the Soviet role in the 1981 imposition of martial law in Poland, remain in effect. They include suspension of Soviet airline service, suspended talks on a joint maritime agreement and licensing requirements for oil and gas equipment and other technology.

Since 1976, the Soviet Union has jointly operated a Seattle, Wash., fish processing plant, Marine Resources Co., with American commercial interests. The plant annually processes 160,000 metric tons of U.S.-caught fish valued at $30 million.

Although Moscow has been prohibited from fishing in U.S. waters, it has been able to buy fish from American fishermen to process in the plant. The easing of the fishing ban means an additional $8 million in earnings for U.S. fishermen, the State Department said.

Soviet fishing vessels will be permitted within three miles of the U.S. coast but have been barred from waters near the Strait of Juan de Fuca because of concern over Trident submarine security.

By law, the only fish the Soviets can take inside the U.S. 200-mile economic zone are those not being fully harvested by U.S. fishermen.

Soviet takes will be limited to 40,000 tons off Alaska, mainly of pollock and yellowfin sole, and 10,000 tons off Washington, Oregon and northern California, mainly of hake.

Meanwhile, the Washington Post reported today that the administration also has decided to lift some sanctions against Poland as a response to the announcement last week of amnesty for political prisoners.

Citing unidentified administration sources, the Post said the action would include restoring permission for the Polish national airline to make scheduled U.S. flights and resumption of scientific and cultural exchanges. Other sanctions could be removed later if there is evidence Poland is releasing nearly all political prisoners, according to the report.

Two Israeli parties jockey for votes to form coalition

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The final batch of ballots was counted today as Israel's two major parties maneuvered to break the election deadlock and find the leverage that could enable them to form a government without the other's help.

The opposition Labor Party and Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's Likud bloc were trying to lure smaller parties — which together won about one-third of the vote Monday — into a coalition. Menachem Begin — a founder of Likud — suggested that a bipartisan unity government led by Shamir might be a good solution.

"If the Likud and the Labor alignment were united it would be easy to form a government. There are very serious problems in the country as such and under the circumstances I think it would be a good idea," Begin said Wednesday in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

Even the final allocation of the 120 Knesset seats that were the subject of the voting remained undecided. Projections issued Tuesday gave Labor 45 seats to Likud's 41. But soldiers' votes will not be fully counted until late today, and the Central Elections Committee also has to allocate eight to 10 undistributed seats before the final results are known.

Labor leaders said Wednesday they had reversed their opposition to forming a national unity government with the Likud bloc.

Labor leader Shimon Peres told Israel television after meeting party colleagues, "We aim to form a government on the widest possible base with agreed principles."

He did not say he would demand the premiership, but Labor officials have said they would insist on leadership in a unity government.

The possibility of a coalition between the two largest parties, however, is also putting pressure on the small parties. Between them, Likud and Labor can muster an overwhelming majority, leaving the small parties without any power.

The talks with the small parties have not yet produced conclusive results. Shamir met representatives of six of them Wednesday, and Israel radio quoted a statement from his office as saying he had "expressed optimism that he would be able to form a government."

In fact, Shamir can only add to his own 41 seats the certain support of the nationalist Tehiya, with four seats, the religious-nationalist Morasha, with two, and the extremist nationalist Kach, with one seat.

But Kach, led by Rabbi Meir Kahane, is rabidly anti-Arab, and a Shamir aide said Kahane would not be invited into a coalition even if Shamir could not form one without him.

Of the remaining parties, the Citizens' Rights Movement and Shinui with three each are sworn to support Labor.

The four communists and the progressives will also vote with Labor even though they will not be invited to join the government. But because they will definitely oppose Shamir, he must gather 61 seats to form a government; Labor can form a minority government with about 56 seats.

Coalition to boycott elections

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The main opposition coalition in Nicaragua has decided not to take part in the Nov. 4 presidential election because the leftist Sandinista government refuses to negotiate with anti-Sandinista rebels.

Arturo Cruz, chosen earlier as the opposition coalition's potential presidential candidate, said in Managua that the decision to boycott the election was made because "the Sandinista Front has not given a positive answer to the demand for a national dialogue that includes the anti-Sandinista rebel groups."

The coalition, called the Democratic Coordinate, is made up of business, labor and political groups. It had until midnight Wednesday to register its individual candidates. Under guidelines set by the government, it then could have registered as a coalition on Aug. 4.

Bayardo Arce, political coordinator of the Sandinista National Liberation Front, said the coalition's "abstention does not have any consequence because there are already seven parties that will take part in the elections."

Although there are ideological differences between the seven parties to which Arce referred, they support the Sandinistas in varying degrees.

Cruz came to Nicaragua on Monday from Washington, where he has been living since he resigned as Nicaragua's ambassador to the United States in November 1982, and said rebel leaders had authorized him to negotiate a cease-fire if the government guarantees a free election Nov. 4. The government candidate for president in the election is junta leader Daniel Ortega.

Ortega has said it would be possible to suspend the state-of-emergency law restricting press and other freedoms only "if the American aggression ceases." The United States supports the anti-Sandinista rebels.

Cruz, in a speech Wednesday to 1,000 followers in Managua, said, "A national dialogue including all Nicaraguans must be held for the Democratic Coordinate to participate (in the election)."

Cruz said he was authorized to negotiate by top officials of the Nicaraguan Democratic Front and the Revolutionary Democratic Alliance.

Leg bandages are the answer

STARRING CHANEL — Model Jerry Hall, companion of rock singer Mick Jagger, displays a black muslin evening gown cinched at the waist by a golden chain as part of the 1984-85 Fall-Winter Haute Couture fashion collection from Chanel, shown at the Paris Opera earlier this week. (AP Laserphoto)

Dear Miss Marbles,
Last week I read your column in which you told how a person could read the entire history of your life simply by looking at the scars on your legs. I have a similar problem. I am a young, good-looking single girl. Recently, while getting ready for my first date, my razor slipped, slicing a permanent seam down the back of my right leg. What can I do about it? Please hurry with the solution, as my date is waiting outside the door and is getting impatient.
Signed,
Lefty

Dear Ms. Marbles,
Your column last week really hit home with me, since just recently a fellow from the U.S. Department of something took one look at my legs and asked me to model for a map of New York City. What I want to know is if there is any solution to this terrible problem. Please rush your reply to me, as the highway man is waiting outside the door and is getting impatient.

Dear Mrs. Marbles,
Your column last week really thought-provoking. My wife has a similar problem which renders her almost unbearable to look at. Is there any solution to this? I am tired of keeping my eyes shut when she comes near me.
Signed,
Mystery Man

Yes, folks, that's leg bandages — large, leg-shaped bandages that you can slip on for any occasion. They will cover a multitude of sins (if that is how your life has been going) or unshaven gamms. They will come in three sizes, "Bird Legs," "Miss America," and "Mighty Oak." I will be sure to let you know when they are put on the market. In the meantime, matey, bar the door.

Love,
Marbles
P.S. Don't feed them the green bologna in the refrigerator; that may come in handy for a science experiment next year.

Owner of clothing store sees changes in kid's fashions

LEWISBURG, Pa. (AP) — To three generations of children, Birdine and Herbert Enck and their rocking horse have been about as close to institutions as you can find in this Union County town.

At the Children's Center, the clothing store the Encks have owned and operated here since 1951, a rocking horse has been the center of attention — and entertainment — for customers' children, grandchildren and great grandchildren.

"We couldn't do without it," Mrs. Enck said. While the wooden steed's appeal hasn't diminished over the Encks' 33 years in business, some aspects of the trade have changed quite a bit. For one thing, Mrs. Enck noted, children are much more assertive.

"Children have more to say about what they buy now," she observed. "There's more self-selection. They shop (by) themselves and hand you (the sales clerk) the item. When we started, the clerk would take the child into the dressing room, dress the child, help make the selection."

Now, she added, such assistance is generally limited to helping coordinate outfits. Mrs. Enck said she thought some parents put too much stock in what their children said about clothing choices.

"I get a little disturbed when I see 3-, 4- and 5-year-olds saying, 'I don't want to wear this.' They need guidance. The mother should have the upper hand."

Some items, such as dresses, seem to reflect the child's freedom of choice. Dress lengths are flexible, Mrs. Enck said. "It's not above the knee or below the knee, but what the child is comfortable in."

Styles in children's clothing run in cycles, she said, citing boys' trousers: "They've gone from straight legs to flared legs back to straight legs."

When Mrs. Enck began the enterprise 33 years ago (her husband joined her in business later), she had no experience in retailing. She took the plunge somewhat by accident. "My brother had started the store, and after three months, he didn't want it," Mrs. Enck explained. "Rather than leave him hanging, we took it."

Although Mrs. Enck is a business-school accounting graduate, the store's books are kept by her husband, who is also responsible for display.

She and the couple's daughter, Joan Lee, handle the buying — for two Children's Center outlets (the second is in Lock Haven) and The Blue J., an adjacent adult clothing store they acquired in 1982.

"I had a buyer from New York City for the first six months," Mrs. Enck recalled. "and I didn't like that — what's good in New York is not what's good in Lewisburg." So she took over that task.

She still listens to her instincts, rather than the sales pitch, when buying merchandise for the store. "If they tell me something is the hottest thing in New York," she said, "that doesn't mean I'm gonna buy it."

DEAR ABBY: I am 17 years old, and for the last four months I've been seeing this guy who is 23. We really care a lot for each other and are getting serious. He is very handsome, treats me well and goes to church regularly. My parents approve of him and think he would make a perfect husband. He doesn't drink or do drugs, and we've never had an argument.

The problem is his job. It doesn't pay much, but he is happy doing it. He never graduated from high school and has no interest in furthering his education.

I plan to go to college, and the career I hope to pursue will pay me many times more than what he makes. Abby, I can't see myself married to a man who makes less than I do. My family isn't rich, but we could always afford what we wanted. I couldn't handle pinching pennies.

Am I making a big deal out of nothing? Sign me ...

HAVING SECOND THOUGHTS

DEAR HAVING: If you're having second thoughts, now is the time to air them. Since he's happy in a job that doesn't pay much, and you can't see yourself married to a man who will never make as much as you, you're wise to realize that you need more from a husband materially than this man can give you. Also, by the time you graduate from college, you will be a different person intellectually. He won't.

DEAR ABBY: I've been a faithful reader of your column for many years and now I have a big favor to ask of you.

Will you please send me a copy of a letter you printed many years ago? It was about a wife whose husband had joined the Masonic lodge and she kept nagging him, wanting him to know all the secret goings-on, etc. You told her to quit nagging him or she would lose her husband by degrees. Thank you.

—INDIANA MASON

DEAR MASON: I'm glad that you wrote because it gives me an opportunity to tell you and others who request a copy of a specific item that unless you are able to pinpoint the date (the year and the month), I am unable to accommodate you. Also, when requesting a favor, please include a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAR ABBY: I realize that taxes are the price we pay for living in a civilized society, but enough is enough already. I've had this poem for years. I don't know who wrote it, but I sure hope you think it's worth printing.

—INDIANA READER

DEAR READER: I do. And here it is:

DEATH AND TAXES

Tax his cow, tax his goat; tax his pants, tax his coat.

Tax his crops, tax his work; tax his tie, tax his shirt.

Tax his chew, tax his smoke; tax his taxes, tax his joke.

Tax his tractor, tax his mule; tax his taxes, tax his rule.

Tax his oil, tax his gas; tax his notes, tax his cash.

If he hollers, tax him more; tax him 'til he's good and sore.

Tax his coffin, tax his grave; tax the sod in which he lays;

Put these words upon his tomb: "Taxes drove me to my doom."

After he's gone he can't relax; they'll still go after inheritance tax.

(Getting married? Send for Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

New Wave jewelry breaks the mold

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

—A double "ring" for two fingers, that supports a top heavy turning merry-go-round.

—A steel, silver and gold sculpture that includes as a design element two detachable earrings.

—A brooch that is displayed in a shadow box frame and hung on the wall.

—A hat of aluminum and linen mounted on a pine stand.

Are they jewelry or home decorations?

The question is being asked more frequently nowadays as artists-jewelers break new ground in shape, size and materials of one-of-a-kind pieces nominally called jewelry.

Several recent exhibitions in New York make it clear that contemporary American and foreign jewelry artists have gone beyond traditional definitions in the objects they design and make.

They demonstrate a much broader idea of the word jewelry than the general public assumes, says Arline Fisch, a jeweler and president of the Society of North American Goldsmiths, co-sponsor of one of the exhibitions.

"This jewelry seeks to make a political or social statement or a connection with the real world. The popular movement closest to it is probably the punk movement in music and clothing," she said.

Ms. Fisch said new ideas in jewelry were primarily being developed in art jewelry while the more commercial world of mass-marketed jewelry had yet to be influenced in this way.

The occasion for the recent outpouring of creativity in jewelry was the society's annual four-day meeting held this year in New York. The group, founded in 1970, is a non-profit organization dedicated to fostering the art of metalsmithing.

Coinciding with its meeting at the Fashion Institute of Technology, two exhibits surveying the diversity of handmade jewelry were presented at the American Craft Museum.

"Jewelry USA," an exhibit of 222 pieces by 122 American artists, is the result of a competition sponsored by the society. Entries from jewelers making both one-of-a-kind and production pieces were received and a panel of three experts selected the winners from among 2,200 slides submitted by 575 entrants.

After the exhibit closes Sept. 1, it will travel to museums in approximately 10 other American cities, according to Paul J. Smith, director of the American Craft Museum.

Also on view at the craft museum was a show of the work of 50 artists from 17 foreign countries. Helen Drutt, guest curator of this show and author of its catalogue, "Jewelry International: Contemporary Trends," is adjunct professor of 20th-century crafts at Moore College of Art in Philadelphia.

She said there had been a period of dynamic experimentation since the early 1970s, which had resulted in a much more inclusive idea of jewelry than of jewelry purely as body ornament.

"This is a time when postcards and stamps can occupy the same physical position in a brooch as a ruby or cameo and the line of a neckpiece can be determined by a plastic element, fiber-wrapped willow seed, plastic pleat, knitted nylon or paper circle as well as by forged silver or gold," according to Ms. Drutt.

Ideas that work

(From the Current Family Circle Magazine.)

—Don't be confused by the seemingly endless array of sunglass styles. To pick a style that's right for you, take a hint from "hintologist" Mary Ellen Pinkham. Pick an eyeglass-frame style that's different from the shape of your face. And, look in the mirror while trying on your sunglasses. If you can see your eyes, she said, the lenses aren't dark enough.

Today, jewelry artists are as likely to hit upon a non-precious material such as plastic, aluminum, lucite, wallpaper, cotton, glass, stone or wood to express their ideas as they are to employ traditional materials.

She also pointed out that another aspect of the jewelry "revolution" is its international and cross-cultural substance.

"The prophecy of the global village has here come true. European and American influences are evident alike in Jerusalem and Japan. Dutch approaches permeate selected British and German attitudes. In turn, Australian ideas are dominated by German and British styles and the influence of America begins to appear on the European continent."

The same internationalism was evident in the program of lectures, panels and speeches at the Society of North American Goldsmiths' annual meeting.

Speakers from Finland, England, Japan and Holland demonstrated familiarity with worldwide influences. The slides they brought showing current work in their countries appeared to have many similarities — particularly in the use of unorthodox materials and in jewelry that could serve equally well as decorative home ornament and as body ornament.

Ms. Fisch speculated on why handmade jewelry should be so intellectually interesting at present. She noted that jewelry always fared best at a time when women had power and the funds available to buy their own jewelry since "women buy for themselves for personal enhancement; when men buy for women they buy for status."

Fashion shakeout

Europe offers new look

By Florence De Santis

DUSSELDORF, West Germany (NEA) — Roaming the world's biggest fashion fair, where more than 40 countries bring their offerings several times a year, offers a fresh perspective on fashion today. The Italian designers may dazzle with show-biz openings at home, but at IGEDO, the international fashion trade show, it's serious business time with world buyers.

Among the Italians there's been a break with the past of "innovation for novelty's sake," a settling down to dividing fashion into wearable clothes for the working world and fun things for leisure wear.

Giorgio Armani, for example, in his ready-to-wear Mani collection, believes in big-shouldered, handsome, somewhat mannish herringbone-tweed coats that go over everything. His hem lengths stop at calf-top. He likes good-looking sweater tops for work-oriented outfits, and his silhouette is neatly semi-fitted.

Krizia, on the other hand, is known for inventive knits, particularly with bold animal themes. The Krizia Poi ready-to-wear collection translates those themes into such wearables as a cream angora-mohair blend chemise with a dolman-sleeve cowl top on which black cheetahs prowls. A special touch is the black rubber belt which is optional. Krizia goes much more for the oversize look than does Mani and the knits are boldly patterned.

Among the striking Krizia leisure styles are a dolman-top, ankle-length lacy knit in broad bands of color and a block-plaid wool-blend chemise in gray, brown and black, with gray tweed ribbed V-inset and hemband. Again, the black rubber belt is used to cinch the waist.

New fabrics turn up to lend novelty to wearable fashions. Angelo Tarlazzi, in his Tarlazzi II collection, is inspired by the Chinese use of padded, quilted cotton and applies the same treatment to beige viyella, edged with black to accent a one-piece style with a two-piece suit look. The wide top is bloused with a drawstring hem over a narrow, side-buttoned skirt.

Many Italian knitters use luxury fibers in a mix of loose and fitted separates, such as Enrico Borghetti, who showed a handsome collection of oversize or gently fitted dresses at IGEDO. These included capes, tops and skirts in cashmere, the color scheme always chocolate and cream handled in bold contrasts.

New designers move across borders now. Tristano Onofri is an Italian with headquarters in Dusseldorf. With him, it's the loosely draped look, with free-falling ruffles everywhere. Among the group which shows at IGEDO as "Die Strasse" — to emphasize their street looks — and who come from both West Germany and abroad, a throw-together trend is being modified, although it's not likely to turn up in business offices.

A firm called Pink Flamingo does a long, tight pastel lame dress with blouson top and hip wrapping. Loni Grunwald pieces rose and persimmon leather together for a tiered evening dress. Christine Vogdt creates a luxurious ragbag look in patchwork camel suede and fur. In these collections, hems are either very long, or very short, silhouettes very tight or very loose.

Many favorable changes are in store for you this coming year. You will disengage yourself from unproductive involvements and find new pathways of promise.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Today, let bygones be bygones. If you should try to even up an old score, it could result in worsening a situation that is already bad. The Matchmaker wheel reveals your compatibility to all signs, as well as showing you to which signs you are best suited romantically. To get yours, mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Sometimes you can be too generous to the wrong people. This could be one of those days where you ignore the deserving and cater to the takers.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be careful today what you don't do anything that could cause others to lose respect for you. Walk the straight and narrow and keep your reputation intact.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If you feel someone wrongs you today, try to forgive the offense. If you harbor resentment, the grudge will grow in importance and be hard to eradicate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In your involvements with friends today, don't change plans without first consulting them. You could mess up everyone's schedule, including your own.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Objectives that are important to you today might not be of equal significance to companions, and these cohorts might deter you from your goals.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Do not delegate work today to a person who has a poor performance record. He or she might cause you some serious problems.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Normally you're not a jealous or possessive person, but today you might step out of character and try to put too many restraints on the one you love.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You may have to bend a bit more than usual today in order to appease your mate or another member of your family. Be flexible and understanding.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you are careless or indifferent where your tasks are consigned today, don't expect co-workers to cover up for you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be careful today that you do not buy something costly that you think you'll be able to sell if you should tire of it. The market may not be there.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be able to distinguish today between being properly assertive or just plain aggressive. Pushing too hard could defeat your purpose.

Dallas golfer takes Tri-State lead

J. Rowland Ferguson of Dallas thinks the Pampa Country Club course is a gem of a layout. It's no wonder, since he shot a 3-under par 68 Wednesday to take the lead in the championship flight of the Tri-State Senior Golf Tournament.

After the first two rounds, Ferguson came in with a 141, four shots better than Andy Manning of Richardson, Bob Giese of Amarillo, J.B. White of Lubbock and Jack Williams of Plainview, all tied for second place.

"I was hitting everything pretty good today," Ferguson said. "I missed only three greens and three-putted just one green."

Ferguson also had an eagle on the par 5, 540-yard No. 13 hole, coming after a bogey on No. 12. Ferguson was at even par for the round when he sank the difficult putt.

"I was off the green and several feet away from the cup," Ferguson said. "I used a putter and was just trying to get it close. It dropped in."

Besides the eagle, Ferguson had birdies on No. 3, 4, 17 and 18.

"I had two bogies and both times I hit the ball over the green," Ferguson added.

Ferguson won in 1981, the first year he ever played in the Tri-State Tourney, and he's been in contention ever since. He tied for second in 1982, and finished second in 1983.

Ferguson, 66, had nothing but praise for the Pampa course.

"People that play here all the time can't imagine how good they've got it," Ferguson said. "I've played in 19 tournaments this year and this course is the best one by far. The greens and fairways are in super shape."

Harvey Eshleman of Kemp, who shared medalist honors with Manning the first day, soared to a 79 yesterday to fall into a tie for tenth at 150 with Otis Garner of Austin and Chester Darnell of Pampa.

"I was so erratic. My putter was eating my lunch and yesterday my putting was real good," Eshleman said.

The top 16 counting ties qualify for the championship flight after Wednesday's second round. The others fall to the president's flight for the final two rounds today and Friday. There were 19 players who made the championship flight cut.

One of yesterday's spectators was 1977 Tri-State champion Harold DeLong of Shawnee, Okla. DeLong did not play because of heart trouble. He had a pacemaker installed recently. DeLong was medalist in 1979 and 1980.

The Senior Banquet is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. tonight at the Country Club. Dr. W.C. Newberry is the featured speaker. Longtime seniors will be honored during this 50th anniversary of the Tri-State Tournament.

Cowboys protest in practice

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Veteran Dallas Cowboys linemen staged a silent protest at training camp Wednesday on behalf of colleague Randy White, who went fishing instead of showing up at camp.

Each wore "54" — the number on White's uniform — on a white sock and taped the socks above their elbows during workouts.

White didn't show up because he wants a new contract and more money, team officials say.

"There's nothing we can do about Randy not being here. This is to show we are supporting him," said lineman Don Smerek. "It's just our way of protesting."

Smerek, John Dutton, Jim Jeffcoat and Mark Tuinei took part in the protest. Ed Jones, who is trying to renegotiate his contract, did not.

Many Cowboys are convinced White will stay away from camp as long as it takes to get a new contract.

If he doesn't get a new contract from the Cowboys, they say he will probably report at the beginning of the season, play out his option and then negotiate with the United States Football League.

The Cowboys, always considered tough negotiators, and White's agent, Howard Slusher, are in a standoff. Each side is waiting for the other to make the first move.

Meanwhile, injured tailback James Jones says he's glad to be at training camp. After two seasons of inactivity, he said the pain of working out almost feels good.

Jones, a No. 3 draft pick in 1980 who was being groomed as Tony Dorsett's replacement at tailback, aggravated an old knee injury in a 1982 pre-season game.

Plagued by bone spurs and damaged nerves and cartilage, Jones thought for a while that his playing days were over.

He underwent knee operations in 1983 and in March of this year. Last summer, he could barely walk. This summer, Jones can run — but only in non-contact drills.

Rodeo announcer Tom Hadley

Rodeo more than way of life for announcer

BIG SPRING, Texas (AP) — Interspersed between the spirited horses, angry bulls and seasoned riders at a professional rodeo is the voice of the announcer. It's a voice that many take for granted.

Announcers tie the rodeo together by providing a running commentary of the event. They joke with the clowns, bark out names and scores and provide a little history on the side.

Tom Hadley, 56, has been doing that for 40 years. He was in high school when he got his first job announcing the rodeo.

"I got into it by accident," he said recently.

Hadley didn't have enough money to pay his entry fee in the roping event at a rodeo in Lawton, Okla., so he told the producer he was a rodeo clown.

"The guy paid me to be a clown. But the first bull out of the chute about ran over me," Hadley said.

He decided clowning was out of the question and told the producer he was also a rodeo announcer. The producer, wary of the young man, asked him where he had worked.

"I told him Silver City, N.M., because that sounded way far off," he said. The producer let him try, and Hadley found himself much more comfortable in the announcer's booth.

"I was too scared to be nervous. I didn't know what I was doing," he remembers now with a laugh.

But Hadley was paid $21 for announcing, paid his entry fees in the roping event and won $150. It was enough incentive for the youngster to stay in the profession.

"That was the big time," he said. "I left my bedroll in the trailer and got a room at the motel and ate in a restaurant."

Hadley later attended college on a rodeo scholarship. One day, he and a group of friends tired of the lack of organization on the college level. They gathered one night in 1948 in Alpine and "decided there should be more organization."

That meeting was the beginning of the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association. Hadley was the steer wrestling champion in the first NIAS rodeo in 1949 at the Cow Palace in San Francisco.

Hadley quit competing in 1953. "The competition got so good that I couldn't beat them anymore," he said candidly. But his rodeo career was far from over.

He began working as an announcer. Rodeo "is not a get-rich thing. It's a way of life," Hadley said. "I've been all over to most of the major rodeos."

But Hadley discovered he prefers the smaller rodeos.

"I've worked more than 20 cities where we had big indoor deals. I wore a white tuxedo and used a great vocabulary that I learned in school. But it wasn't natural. One time in Alabama I was out walking (around the rodeo grounds) and I realized I was talking to basic, normal people and I didn't need that language."

Throughout the years, Hadley has been a big supporter of the rodeo.

"Rodeo has done a lot for a lot of people," he said. "Rodeo is a very professional sport. It involves every class of people. It is wide-open to the world."

Hadley credits local roping great Toots Mansfield with repairing the reputation of rodeo. Years ago, "you saw a different class of people in rodeo. There were alcoholics, poker players, rowdy guys. They might rob a service station."

But when Mansfield took over the job as president of the Rodeo Cowboys Association, he and others on his board "decided they could kick these people out of the association."

Hadley used to travel constantly. "One year I was on the road for 50 weeks." But today, "the closer I can stay to home, the better I like it. I've seen it, so I'm satisfied."

Hadley has been living in Mason for several years. He and his wife, Jane, live in town, and Mrs. Hadley's family own a ranch in that area.

Mrs. Hadley travels with her husband as often as she can. The couple drives an old Lincoln to

Canon to test camera at Olympics

TOKYO (AP) — Canon Inc. will use the Los Angeles Olympics for the first practical tests of an electronic still camera that eliminates the need for film, a company spokesman said Wednesday.

The spokesman said the system — consisting of a camera, a projector and a transmitter — will take a picture and edit it in Los Angeles, then transmit it to Tokyo within 30 minutes.

Sony Corp. unveiled its own version of an electronic still camera in 1981 and is said to have tested the product since then but has not reported on the progress of its development.

Unlike conventional cameras that use silver-based film, an electronic still camera uses a small magnetic disk on which it reproduces images by electronic signals, eliminating the process of developing film and printing photos. The images can be viewed on a display monitor.

A device, jointly developed with Texas Instruments Inc., assures a high quality of images on the disk, the Canon spokesman said.

Thirty-two companies, including Kodak Corp. and Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Co. of the United States and Philips International of the Netherlands, have agreed on standards for the disk, according to a Sony spokesman.

Canon plans to market its product for use by news agencies and newspapers sometime next year, the spokesman said.
