County saves surplus for jail

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

Gray County Commissioners won't touch a $3,594,416 surplus sitting in a bank, because the state of federal government may some day order the county to build a new jail, county representatives said.

The surplus county fund, called the Highland General Hospital Account, was created by the sale of the Highland General Hospital in April 1979. The county hospital was sold to Hospital Corporation of America for $2,275,000. Highland General's land and building were sold to HCA later for an additional $450,000.

Except for minor sums, the county hasn't touched the fund, placing it on deposit in the First National Bank. The fund is invested in 90- and 180-day certificates of deposit paying interest ranging from 9.8 to 11.4 percent. Previous earnings in the fund came from its investment in treasury bills.

Now, the county commission has proposed raising county taxes in 1985 by $682,233, while commissioners say they don't intend to dip into the $3.6 million hospital fund.

In a budget meeting Friday, Precinct 3 Commissioner James McCracken conceded that by spending the fund, the county could do away with taxes next year and still end 1985 with a $950,000 surplus.

But commissioners and County Judge Carl Kennedy said the fund will be held "in reserve," because the state or federal government will one day order the county to build a new jail. Having the money on hand to build a new jail beats having to pass a bond issue or order higher taxes, they said.

The commissioners and Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan said it isn't a matter of if, but when, the county will be ordered to replace the jail built in 1929.

"It is as predictable as more federal taxes. It is inevitable," Judge Kennedy said about the expected mandate for a new jail.

The fund hasn't been used and interest earned is plowed back into the fund "in anticipation of the day that we're forced to build the new jail," he said.

"If it wasn't for the sheriff we have, we'd already be building one," said Precinct 2 Commissioner Ronnie Rice.

Precinct 4 Commissioner Ted Simmons said officials with the Texas Jail Standards Commission have told him flat out that Gray County gets by with the old jail because of Sheriff Jordan's "stubbornness" and ability to persuade the state agency to grant variances for the county jail.

"I thought we'd have to build one four or five years ago," McCracken said.

"We could drop the tax rate to zero for a year and spend it (the hospital fund) out through general revenues," he said.

But commissioners pointed out the trouble that Hutchinson County and others had in raising the money when the state decided the counties needed new jails and issued orders to build them.

Judge Kennedy said three black marks against the facility are its age, its design of multi-prisoner cells and narrow corridors. The jail standards commission now prefers single-prisoner cells, he said. The jail also lacks "all of the little things the state and federal government would like the jail to have," such as exercise and game rooms.

The county has worked to keep the jail up to state standards, the judge said. The effort has included "on-going maintenance" and the installation of smoke alarms and other safety equipment.

Even though they expect the state or federal government to issue orders for a new jail some day, the county officials all believe it isn't needed.

"We feel our jail is adequate," Kennedy said.

"We have a very good jail. We could stand some more room, and it has a lot of time on it," Sheriff Jordan said.

"We're going to need a new jail. I don't know when," he said. "We've been talking about it for two and a half years."

County plans tax increase for pay hike

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

Gray County Commissioners approved a preliminary 1985 budget of $4,012,426, which includes a five-percent pay raise for county employees, and once again declined to collect $5 tax on license tags during their regular meeting Friday.

Commissioners will meet Sept. 11 and Sept. 14 to consider final approval of the proposed 1985 tax rate and budget.

The preliminary budget proposes expenditures of $4,012,426 in calendar year 1985, a $252,535 increase over the current budget of $3,759,891.

The county proposes to collect $2,655,030 in property taxes, a $682,233 increase over the current year's $1,972,797. The proposed county tax rate of 22.1 cents per $100 valuation amounts to a 29.2-percent increase over the effective tax rate of 17.1 cents. The effective rate is the rate needed to generate the same amount of revenue raised in the current year.

If the proposed rate is approved, state law would allow taxpayers to petition for a tax rollback election, which is permitted when any government entity increases taxes over 8 percent.

Despite that, the proposed county tax rate for next year amounts to an increase of just 3.9 cents per $100 valuation over the 1984 actual tax rate of 18.2 cents.

The increase would amount to an additional $19.50 in county taxes on a $50,000 home.

The $682,233 proposed increase in property taxes is greater than the proposed $252,535 increase in spending, because the county started the current year with a surplus, Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy has said.

The value of taxable property within the county in 1985 is estimated at more than $2.4 billion.

The bulk of the spending increase in next year's budget would fund the five-percent pay raise (a total of $92,252) and higher payments for social security and employee benefits.

The public hearings on the tax rate next month each begin at 9:30 a.m. in the commissioners courtroom on the second floor of the courthouse.

The commissioners voted unanimously to approve the pay hike for the county's 111 employees. Precinct 3 Commissioner Jimmy McCracken said the raise won't improve the employees' standard of living.

"It's all we can do. I hate it for the taxpayers' part, but it doesn't do much for the employees," McCracken said, adding that rising prices for groceries, utilities and other expenses "eat it up faster than we give it to them."

The two district court reporters, who are paid by the county, will receive a 10-percent pay hike, as ordered by the district judges. Commissioners complained that even though the county pays the salaries, it must pay the higher raises ordered by the district judges in accordance with state law.

Precinct 4 Commissioner Ted Simmons had asked that the court's earlier decision to turn down a $5 tax-on license tags be placed on the agenda for reconsideration. Simmons said other state officials told him the county should think twice about refusing the tax authorized by the state because after September, the county won't have another chance to approve it for five years.

"I'm not pro or con either way," Simmons said. "I just thought we should reconsider it and make sure we're not making a mistake."

"Governor White is not going to allow the counties to have any sales tax, at all," he said.

Simmons joined the rest of the commission in taking no action to change the earlier decision of killing the permitted $5 fee for licensetags.

In other action Friday, commissioners approved a $13,850 bid from Hart Graphics of Austin for three electronic ballot counters to be used in the precincts in the November election. Hart Graphics' bid was the only one submitted.

Commissioners also approved an $8,030 bid for storm windows for

Khadafy pledges to destroy Israel

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Col Moammar Khadafy, marking the 15th anniversary of the coup that brought him to power, pledged Saturday to destroy "the so-called state of Israel," and told Libyan pilgrims not to cause trouble in Saudi Arabia.

The radical Arab leader also spent much of his one-hour speech raising a treaty of unity he signed Aug. 13 with King Hassan II of Morocco.

Moroccan officials announced in Rabat, the capital of Morocco, on Saturday that the treaty had been approved nearly unanimously. Libya's legislature gave it preliminary approval on Friday.

Khadafy, 42, said Hassan, King Fahd of Saudi Arabia and Syrian officials had told him that Libyan pilgrims to Moslem holy places in Saudi Arabia "wanted to take to the streets of Mecca and control the holy mosque."

He gave no other details, but called on the Libyans to behave "reasonably, responsibly and in close cooperation with Saudi authorities."

Western diplomats in Libya said a plane and two cruise ships loaded with Libyan pilgrims were turned back recently by Saudi authorities because of suspicions that they were carrying arms.

Khadafy, again referring to the treaty with Morocco, said he wanted no trouble with Saudi Arabia because "we are in a state whereby we would like to unite the Arab nation." Relations between Libya and Saudi Arabia often have been turbulent during the past decade.

The Libyan leader has failed six previous times to form unions or federations with other Arab states.

He spoke in Arabic and a translation was provided by the official JANA news agency.

Jabbing his hands forcefully in the air, Khadafy also vowed that "we shall continue to mobilize the forces of the Arab world to destroy the so-called state of Israel which was unjustly established on the rubble of our Arab nation."

He accused the United States of being "the leader of international terrorism" and he said Libya was helping Nicaragua in its confrontation with U.S.-backed rebels.

A two-hour parade followed the speech. Soviet-made tanks, artillery and sophisticated missile launchers rumbled past the reviewing stand on a seaside street. Navy ships in the blue harbor sounded their fog horns as Soviet-made jets screamed overhead in the hot, sunny sky.

In 1969, Khadafy, then a 27-year-old son of a desert herdsman, and 11 other junior officers overthrew King Idris. Since then he has turned his oil-rich desert nation into a socialist "jamahiriyyah," or state of the masses.

He has been accused of using his oil wealth to finance terrorism, revolution and civil wars around the world. He denies supporting terrorism but says he does help liberation movements.

Monday's Chautauqua offers more for all

Thousands of Pampa and area residents are expected to crowd into Central Park on Monday for the third annual Chautauqua, with new events, exhibits and activities offering more for everyone.

The event is sponsored by the Pampa Fine Arts Association.

A new area will be opened for children, and a new permanent stage has been erected for use by musicians, dancers and other entertainers.

The children's Funter will be available as children's events spread west from Central Park into the adjacent park, where there is more space and more trees.

The 4-H Top o' Texas races to be staged there include three-legged and gunny sack events and even a bean-bag drop for toddlers. Some of the races will be free.

All of Pampa's Cub Scout packs, under the direction of David Gauger, will have free carnival games as their service project.

Linda Radcliff's Cub Scout Den 410 will operate the free bridge painting as a service project.

Also in the Funter area will be wagon and pony rides sponsored by the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, a soft drink booth, a booth for leathercraft work by the Southern Skies Riding Club, and the bandaging of pretend wounds by Young Life Pampa Club.

PROPS will have their radio-operated model airplanes. The Lamar Full Gospel Assembly Church youth will stage a lively puppet show by the bridge. The Jeryl Vance watercolor classes also will be in Funter land. Nearby will be the United Way's free car drawing, with donations accepted.

Colorful banners will mark the Funter and Carousel areas. Pennants - color coded for each of the four divisions - will mark each booth. The divisions include food, exhibits, displays and the children's Carousel.

Heading the Carousel activities are Martha Campbell, Elizabeth Connor and Lilith Brainard.

A petting zoo has been organized by Jeff Goodwin and Bill Kidwell. There will be calves, pigs, chickens, sheep, goats, llamas and a snake. An unusual feature for Chautauqua will be the Community Day Care Center's spinning wheel, proceeds from which will be used to help build a storm shelter at the center.

The DATE pancake breakfast from 7 to 10 a.m. will feature "all you can eat" pancakes at $3 for adults and $2 for children. Included are sausage and coffee or juice.

There will be a ribbon-cutting at the new stage at 9:20 a.m. following the blessing by Rev. Joseph Stabile. The Honorary Patron of the Fine Arts award will be made from the stage at noon. The award is made by the Pampa Fine Arts Association board in recognition of a person, organization or corporation that has made an outstanding contribution to the purpose or support of PFFA.

Lee Cornelison will emcee the stage shows, and a trio of local well-known singers - Richard and Wanetta Hill and Eddie Burton - will sing during intermission breaks.

Chautauqua '84 will feature three bands performing free to the public at the stage.

Adding festivity to the Labor Day event will be the Mariachi Band of Atarillo. The band has been organized for more than two years. Members will be wearing native costumes purchased in Mexico.

Johnny Florez, director of the band, hopes to double the size of the group, which has performed throughout the Panhandle and in Lubbock and Clovis, N.M.

Soloists include Juan Saavedra and Maria Del Rosario. Other the White Deer Land Museum. The approved bid from Bill Petke of Amarillo was the second-lowest of the five bids received. A low bid of $6,025 was rejected because of incomplete information about the work to be performed.

The panel approved a bid of $480 per year to lease 60 acres of county farmland around the McLean Airport. Lee Hibler was the successful bidder.

The commissioners amended the county auditor's 1984 budget for the purchase of a $762 typewriter.

No action was taken on an item to try to collect property taxes from the Rock Island Railroad. Judge Kennedy checked and announced that the taxes have been paid.

Commissioners also discussed a letter from the Roberts County Commissioners. The Roberts County officials suggest that Gray County be eliminated from the 31st Judicial District. The letter asks for Gray County's support in getting the legislature to eliminate Gray County from the five-county district. Gray County, the letter points out, has a separate 223rd Judicial District. No action was taken on the proposal, which will be placed on the Sept. 14 agenda for formal consideration.

County bills approved for payment Friday totaled $194,046.

Jail needs

"They're hanging on (to the fund) for that. It's going to cost a lot of money," Jordan added.

The jail received its first prisoners in May 1930, he said. Jordan's father, Frank Jordan, a deputy for Sheriff E.S. Graves, helped transfer the first prisoners, about a dozen inmates, into the new facility.

Jordan, who lives in an apartment next to the fourth-floor jail, said the 1,000-square-foot facility was designed to hold 26 inmates in multi-prisoner cells. Now, in compliance with the state commission's recommended maximum of 10, the jail keeps a daily average of eight or nine prisoners, he said.

The daily average shot up to twelve prisoners in 1983, "due to circumstances beyond our control," the sheriff said. He said prosecutors were tied up in the trial of capital cases for long stretches that year.

"We try to stay within the mark," he said.
The sheriff said the jail operates with seven vacancies.

"Our jail is a strong and well-kept jail. I think we do a very good job of complying," Jordan said.

Hobart Street hearing set

A public hearing to discuss the parking and signs on North Hobart St. will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 6, in the City Commission Room at City Hall.

Public Works Director Allyn Moore said the parking and signs have had an impact on a street improvement project being planned.

The Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation is planning a project to improve the street, which forms a part of state Hwy. 70.

Much of the funding for the project is expected from the Federal Highway Administration. However, Moore explained, the project "may be in jeopardy due to the present situation of parking and signs along the street right of way."

Moore said a request for federal funding has already been turned down because of the parking and sign problems with businesses along the street.

Some alternate parking arrangements have been suggested, he said, with parallel parking being considered instead of the current diagonal parking in many sections of Hobart. The alternatives will be presented for discussion at the hearing.

"Public participation is needed to work out the problems, so the street paving project can proceed," Moore stressed.

Property owners have been sent notices about the hearing. All other interested persons are also invited to attend the meeting, Moore said.

Donald F. Biauze, 27, who allegedly took two families hostage, shot three people and stole vehicles and guns since beginning his four-day flight from police, was captured at 1:30 a.m. Saturday by a local resident who had kept watch fearing for the safety of his family, according to authorities.

His companion, Donald Kinney, 19, was arrested at about 1 p.m. in a wood south of this McKean County hamlet, about seven hours after exchanging shots with police near Lewis Run, authorities said.

State and local police, aided by bloodhounds and helicopters, had "saturated" the area near Allegheny National Forest in their search for the pair, said state police Lt. Harry Elienberger. Holiday weekend campers had been advised to stay out of the area during the manhunt.

Physical abuse ban doesn't stop hazing

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Students this weekend were mourning the death of a Texas A&M University sophomore as officials vowed to make sure the hazing he underwent before he died never happens again.

Corps of Cadets Col. Donald Burton said that in January 1983 he outlawed "motivational exercises" such as those forced on Bruce Goodrich, 20, of Webster, N.Y., but former Corps members say physical abuse of freshmen and sophomores is common.

"It's rampant," said Jay Holland, a senior at Texas A&M and former Corps member. "If you want to stay in the Corps, you've got to go along."

Goodrich and his roommate, John McIntosh, were awakened by three juniors in their Corps unit at about 2:30 a.m. Thursday and taken out for "motivational exercises" that included nearly an hour of running, push-ups and sit-ups, officials said.

Goodrich collapsed about a half-hour later and died at St. Joseph Hospital in Bryan, apparently because of a heat stroke, according to preliminary autopsy results.

College officials have refused to identify the three juniors involved in the incident but said the trio could face suspension or expulsion.

Corps freshman, who are called "fish," are required to greet every upperclassman on sight and must work on the university's homecoming bonfire. Fish also must memorize a list of Aggie traditions, legends and other information about the school, the Houston Chronicle reported Saturday.

"If you miss one word or get one word out of place, you'll end up doing push-ups all afternoon," Holland said.

Bob Wiatt, university director of security, said the number of push-ups is determined by a student's graduation year. He said Goodrich, who was scheduled to graduate in 1987, was required to do 87 push-ups and sit-ups.

David Hatch, a former Corps member who graduated, said sophomores who transfer into the Corps undergo hazing more severe than that imposed upon freshman. The sophomore transfers are called "frogs."

"Frogs get the usual hazing that sophomores always get — plus what they missed as fish," said Hatch, 22.

But Student Commander Rollins said the exercises help students realize their capacities.

"Our intentions are not to hurt anybody," Rollins said. "It's to help them see what they can do."

One common Corps practice, according to the Chronicle, is "quadding," in which upperclassmen are held on the ground outside the Corps dormitory while freshmen pour buckets of hot and cold water on them from the floors above.

School policy forbids any activity that "submits a student to physical pain or discomfort, indignity or humiliation at any time," said John Koldus, vice president for student services. Koldus said physical abuse is punishable by suspension or expulsion.

But Holland said hazing still occurs.

"If you want to stay in the Corps and be commissioned into the service, you've got to do it," he said.

Holland said he complained about incidents in which he was hazed, but university and Corps officials ignored him.

Wiatt said he is conducting a criminal investigation of Goodrich's death and said he will present to the case to a Brazos County grand jury if he finds sufficient evidence. Rollins said he received permission from the regents' ad hoc committee Friday to conduct an in-house investigation.

Burton announced Friday he has suspended physical training for the Corps' 2,150 members.

Goodrich, a former varsity tennis player in high school, planned to study engineering at A&M.

Texas A&M President Frank E. Vandiver said he talked with Ward Goodrich, the student's father.

"Mr. Goodrich has hopes that the life of his son will produce the kind of action that we would all like to see. We want to ensure that such an incident is not repeated at this institution," Vandiver said.

Funeral services will be held for Goodrich in New York this week.

Astronaut's hair like a Brillo pad

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Judy Resnik knew that her long, naturally-curly hair would "look like a Brillo pad" in the weightlessness of orbit and doesn't really care, but the astronaut's hairdresser plans a new style for the next voyage of America's second woman in space.

Sylvia Salinas, a staff member in the astronaut office and a close friend of Ms. Resnik, said they discussed the effect weightlessness would have on her long hair. It was forecast that a lack of gravity would cause the astronaut's curly hair to spring away from her head.

"I expected it," said Ms. Salinas. "We told her she'd look like a Brillo pad when she got up there. But I think she's having too much fun to really care."

Ms. Salinas said the astronaut's hair "looks great" on the ground, but television views of Ms. Resnik aboard the shuttle Discovery shows her curls standing straight up and out on all sides.

Menchaca said Ms. Resnik's natural curl has an energy that forces the strands to stand out away from her head, but that there are styles that will control the springiness in orbit.

Eleven Texans die in holiday mishaps

By The Associated Press

Eleven Texans — at least one who wasn't wearing a seat belt — have died so far in Labor Day holiday traffic accidents, police said, nine of them involving only one vehicle.

The DPS is predicting 54 deaths by the end of the holiday period Monday night. The DPS count began at 6 p.m. Friday and ends at midnight Monday.

Ruben Barrera Jr., 20, of Corpus

Christi died at 10:35 p.m. Friday when his car struck a utility pole at a Corpus Christi intersection.

Leroy Gallien, 45, of Houston was killed when his car struck a cement pole on Holmes Road in Houston at 2:11 a.m. Saturday.

Kathryn Ann Taylor, 29, of San Antonio, died after her car flipped over on Interstate 35 just south of Jarrell, which is north of Austin. Ms. Taylor, who wasn't wearing a seat belt, was ejected from the car in the accident, police said.

Patrick Shawn Evins, 17, of Port Lavaca was standing at an intersection in Port Lavaca when he was struck and killed by a truck at 8:47 p.m. Friday.

Troy Shannon Cook, 17, of Grandbury died at 8:50 p.m. Friday when his vehicle failed to negotiate a curve on farm-to-market road 1190 south Fort Worth in Hood County.

Mark Raymond Harper, 22, of Gonzales was killed at 9:14 p.m. Friday when his vehicle struck a group of trees head-on about three miles east of Gonzales on farm-to-market road 532.

Mary Rodriguez, 28, of Odessa died in a one-vehicle accident Saturday at 12:35 a.m. when the vehicle in which she was riding struck a deer and rolled over. The accident occurred about 14 miles northwest of Ozona on state Highway 137 in Crockett County.

Party loses ballot fight

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A challenge by the Libertarian Party of Texas' requirements for getting lesser known candidates' names printed on that state's general election ballot has been turned down by a federal appeals court.

The Libertarians asked the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for a preliminary injunction requiring Texas to put their candidates' names on fall election ballots that must be ready for printing by Sept. 12.

The appeal was filed when a federal district court in Houston granted a motion to throw out the case filed by the Libertarians against Texas' secretary of state, John W. Fainter Jr., and Anita Rodeheaver, county clerk of Harris County, Texas.

The Libertarians, in trying to stop the printing of ballots without their candidates' names, specifically challenged the constitutionality of Texas law that bars candidates from the general election ballot unless:

- their party received less than two percent of the total number of votes cast in the immediate past governor's election or;
- their party submits petitions containing the signatures and voter registration numbers of no fewer than one percent of the people who voted in that same governor's election.

Sex counselor fired for sex crimes

ANGLETON (AP) — A more thorough background check might have kept the Texas prison system from hiring a psychologist who once allegedly tried to extort money from a Harris County jail inmate's family, a prison spokesman says.

The psychologist, Armando Simon, is one of three prison employees who have been suspended or fired recently after they were charged with sexual crimes involving teen-age girls, officials said.

Texas Department of Corrections spokesman Charles Brown said the TDC had a fingerprint check run on Simon, but it didn't reveal that he was asked to resign from the Harris County Sheriff's Department in 1981 after being accused of attempted extortion.

"We ran an FBI check on him, but we missed this one," Brown said. "I think we need to run a more thorough check on candidates, because anytime something like this happens, it's a bad reflection on the entire system."

The 33-year-old Simon, who responsibilities included counseling sex offenders, was suspended without pay Wednesday from the Ramsey III Unit near Rosharon in Brazoria County.

He was charged with sexually assaulting a 15-year-old girl and was released from released from Brazoria County Jail on $30,000 bond.

Also charged with sexual assault is Simon's 19-year-old wife, Angela, who is free on $10,000 bond.

Simon is accused of raping the teen-age girl several times at his Angleton apartment, said Angleton Police Detective Mike Jones. Simon's wife is accused of convincing the girl to participate in the sex act, Jones said.

Assistant Harris County Attorney Billy Lee said Friday that an inmate's father accused Simon in 1981 of trying to extort thousands of dollars from him for helping write a book on his son's involvement with organized crime.

Lee said Simon was given the option of resigning or being fired.

Simon filed a lawsuit against the Sheriff's Department in 1981 alleging he was discriminated against and that the department neglected to follow due process before terminating him.

The suit, which is pending in U.S. District Judge Gabrielle McDonald's court, asks for reinstatement with back pay, $250,000 in damages and another $1 million in punitive damages.

Brown said that although allegations against Simon were overlooked because of "human error," he thinks a more thorough background check — possibly an in-depth interview with potential employees — would help avoid such oversights.

Another Ramsey III employee, 30-year-old Dwayne David Dumesnil, was indefinitely suspended Aug. 6 after he was charged with the aggravated sexual assault of a 13-year-old girl. Brown said Dumesnil had been employed at TDC since February 1983.

Brown said another TDC employee, Raul Jaime Perez, a guard at the Ramsey I Unit, was fired Aug. 12 after he was charged with sexual assault in a case involving another 13-year-old girl. Perez began working for TDC in February 1981, Brown said.

The spokesman said he did not know the reason for the trio of alleged sexual assaults by TDC employees.

"I don't really know why it happened," Brown said. "But it's important that it did."

"WHAT WILT THOU HAVE ME TO DO?"

"And he trembling and astonished said, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? And the Lord said unto him, Arise, and go into the city, and it shall be told thee what thou must do." (Acts 9:6.)

The disposition of Saul of Tarsus, which prompted him to ask, "What wilt thou have me to do?" is the disposition to submit to any and all decrees from the Lord. It displayed the attitude of mind which consistently characterized this great man of God. Even though he was as wrong as he could be in persecuting the church (Acts 8:3), he did it because he honestly thought he was doing God's will (Acts 26:9; I Timothy 1:13.) After his conversion, he was just as zealous for the Lord as he had been against him.

But the important thing is that he was willing to do anything the Lord required of him. He did not question nor argue, but willingly submitted to the Lord's directive. For three days he waited, without food, water or sight until Ananias came and told him what to do to be saved.

Paul, (as he was called later, Acts 13:9) recognized his own personal need as is expressed in the question, "What wilt thou have me to do?" All of us should look, first of all, to our own individual need for salvation. While each and everyone is told to do exactly the same thing (Mark 16:16; Acts 2:38), still it remains entirely an individual decision for everyone to make.

Paul also recognized that Jesus Christ held the key to salvation when he asked "What wilt Thou have me to do?" Jesus Christ, alone is the way, the truth, and the life (John 14:6). We must look to Him for the way of salvation. That way is revealed in the New Testament.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Our Opinion

These ideas may not be so good

There are three ideas floating around in the circles of government these days that sound pretty good on the surface to many American citizens. But each contain hidden dangers and deserve careful consideration by thoughtful Americans before they rush to endorse them.

The three ideas are a simplified "flat tax" to replace the present income tax; Congressional approval of a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced federal budget; and, barring such Congressional approval, the calling of a Constitutional convention through resolutions of state legislatures enabling citizens to pass a balanced budget amendment.

Now each one of those sounds like a great idea, right? A flat tax would be fair and simple. A balanced budget amendment would keep those liberal politicians from spending so much of our money. And, if those rascals in Congress won't pass such an amendment, we, the people, will call a Constitutional convention and pass it ourselves.

But before you fire off a letter to your Congressman urging him to support those propositions, look at them a bit closer. Rather than improving our situation, they could result in the taxpaying public being worse off than we are now.

Take the "flat tax" idea, for example. First of all, we have not heard any proposals for a true "flat tax" where everyone pays the same amount to the federal government, or even the same percentage of their income. All proposals we've heard advanced so far still amount to a graduated income tax, with the amount to be paid still determined by total income. The only difference is that there would be no deductions, or at least fewer deductions. That may or may not be beneficial to the American taxpayer.

But the most important thing about the flat tax idea is how much money it would raise. If in approving a flat tax, Congress were to set a rate high enough to finance continued wasteful spending, the taxpayers would not gain a thing.

As for the balanced budget amendment, if it did not include a limitation on how much government could increase spending each year, it would be of absolutely no benefit to the American taxpayer. If government's only concern is balancing the budget, it can always raise taxes enough to cover its expenditures.

In fact, if we had a balanced budget amendment, Congress could use that as an EXCUSE to raise taxes. The argument would go like this: "Look, we have to have money to pay for all these things because its against the law for us to operate at a deficit. So we're just going to have to raise your taxes. Sorry, but that's the law."

There are two big questions that should be asked before endorsing the idea of a Constitutional convention: Would it be limited in what it could do and who would control it?

Even if a convention assembled only to pass a balanced budget amendment, there are no guarantees it would not do as this country's original convention, which threw out the Articles of Confederation and wrote a completely new document outlining how this country was to be governed.

Now, if delegates controlling the convention were citizens devoted to preserving and extending freedom, that would not be bad. But we all know who would control such a convention: The politicians. And, if they were concerned with preserving and extending freedom, there would be no need for a constitutional convention in the first place. The idea of the people who govern us now drawing up a new document outlining how they will govern us in the future is frightening at best.

The first thing we should consider when we hear attractive-sounding ideas about changing government is where they come from. We can almost always be certain if the idea comes from politicians it will not result in more freedom for the people. It will result in more power for the politicians.

Walter Williams

Congress can renege

Voltaire said, "The art of government consists in taking as much money as possible from one class of citizens to give to another." And although there's no evidence in 1984 to dispute his observation, he could have made a finer contribution to posterity had he pointed out the technique for such theft: official lies. And nowhere has the art of government taking and official lies been as well-developed as in our Social Security program.

For a long time Americans were led to believe their Social Security "contributions" were held in a trust fund where they were invested and paid out later. That's a lie. The money paid into Social Security today is IMMEDIATELY doled out to recipients.

The second lie has to do with the work contributions as applied to Social Security. Contribution implies something given voluntarily. What you pay into Social Security is a compulsory tax; failure to pay carries a stiff fine or imprisonment.

The biggest lie, which demonstrates how Congress preys on economic illiteracy, is that the employer and employee each pays half. That is an accounting fiction: you pay the whole thing.

Here's how it works: suppose your hourly wage is $6.75 and 50 cents is deducted to pay your Social Security. Your employer adds another 50 cents an hour. That means the employer is putting out $7.25 an hour for your services. If the employer is to stay in business, you must produce at least $7.25 an hour worth of goods or services. YOU pay the so-called employer's share. This official lie pacifies Americans who are already angry about paying $2,000 a year in Social Security taxes. We could have anti-Social Security riots if people knew they were really paying the whole $4,000.

These lies, and others conceal the fact that Social Security is a Ponzi (pyramid) scheme on the verge of collapse. To be successful any good Ponzi scheme requires a ready supply of new participants. Congress' recent inclusion of some federal workers and non-profit organizations has just about exhausted that supply.

Every once and a while Reagan tries to forthrightly address the problem, but he's beaten back. This year he correctly said Social Security is a bad deal for the young since they will never get back what they put in and by 1990 they will be paying in $8,000 a year. He was bad-mouthed. He responded to the political licking by proposing raises in Social Security inflation adjustments. This was a mistake.

People say Reagan wants to eliminate Social Security. He can't, but Congress can, as pointed out in a Cato Institute study by Peter Ferrara. A 1960 Supreme Court case, Fleming v. Nestor, rules, "To engraft upon the Social Security system a concept of accrued property rights would deprive it of the flexibility and boldness in adjustment to ever-changing conditions which it demands." That means, as Justice Hugo Black lamented, that Congress has the power to renege on Social Security despite your faithful payment of taxes.

There've been several sound proposals to end our Social Security crisis, but there's a particularly good one for an election year. It is unconstitutional for government to refuse to make good on its debts. Write your congressman and demand he or she introduce legislation making Social Security equivalent of a U.S. debt instrument. He won't do it, but it will be amusing to hear the excuses for not doing so.

Don't miss Old Faithful

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK—They told me about Old Faithful, the world-famous geyser that is the main attraction of Yellowstone National Park, when I was a kid in school, but I hadn't been that impressed.

So every hour on the hour this hole in the group spews out a lot of steam and hot water.

That's a big deal? Rock City and Disneyland certainly had been on my list of things to see once I could afford to see them, but Old Faithful wasn't anything I ever thought I would be writing home about.

My traveling companion had a different idea about Old Faithful, however.

"People come from all over the world to see it," he had explained to me. "We're crazy to come this far and not get a look at it."

We were staying at the Signal Mountain Lodge in the Grand Tetons National Park, north out of Jackson, Wyo. My companion suggested there was still plenty of daylight and we should drive farther into Yellowstone to see Old Faithful. I checked the map. It was a 120-mile round trip.

"You want to drive 120 miles through wilderness to see some hot water and steam?" I asked him again. "Why don't you just turn on the shower and close the bathroom door?"

He responded by questioning my patriotism, and the next thing I knew I was deep into Yellowstone National Park, where there are bears that eat people, on my way to see Old Faithful.

We arrived just after 8 o'clock.

"We've come all this far and the thing might not even go off," I said.

"That's why they call it 'Old Faithful,'" said my friend. "It always goes off."

"You can't count on anything anymore," I said.

I wasn't making that up. Old Faithful, since it was discovered in 1872, has been erupting roughly every hour and 80 million people have come to watch.

Since an earthquake in Idaho last year that measured 7.2 on the Richter scale, however, Old Faithful has gone as long as 92 minutes between eruptions. It would be just my luck, I figured, to come that far and have the darn thing decide to take the rest of the night off.

There must have been 3,000 people sitting on benches waiting for Old Faithful to do its thing, which it never seemed it would do. I went to get an ice cream.

"You might miss it," said my friend.

"So I'll see the highlight film," I replied.

When I came back with my ice cream, Old Faithful was still smoking a little steam, but that was about it.

The rest of the crowd showed no signs of impatience, however. They remained quietly apprehensive, their cameras poised.

And then...and then, it happened, at maybe a half past 8.

There was steam, and then more steam, and then there was a roar and I think the ground trembled and Old Faithful belched forth with a boiling steam column of water that reached more than 100 feet into the sky.

The crowd gasped in awe. The explosion went even higher and higher, and when it finally ended a few minutes later, the crowd fell silent for a moment and then burst into spontaneous applause.

Later, as we were driving in the darkness of the park, my friend asked me how I felt when I saw Old Faithful come through for her audience.

"Proud to be an American," I answered. I can't explain why. You had to be there.

Fed's 'help' hurts farmers

BY THEODORE G. SHAD JR.

Most people know that farming and food production are America's oldest and largest industries. But America's farmers are in deep, deep trouble. Tragically, their problems are directly traceable to misguided efforts by the federal government to help the agriculture industry.

For example, in just one year U.S. farm subsidies more than doubled from $10.6 billion in fiscal year 1982 to $21.8 billion in fiscal year 1983. This later figure amounts to four times the national average through the 1970s. These subsidies, which were supposed to increase farm income, have had a completely opposite effect.

During the four-year period 1978 through 1982, while subsidies quadrupled, net farm income shrank more than 22 percent. This decline has been especially dramatic since 1979 when U.S. farmers earned $32.4 billion. Since then net farm income is down nearly 40 percent to $19.5 billion.

At the same time, American agriculture is losing its share of the world market to foreign competition. Agricultural exports for FY 1983 came to about $34 billion, 21 percent below FY 1982's figure of $43.8 billion. This erosion has actually been aided and abetted by U.S. farm policies. Government price supports have raised U.S. prices to foreign buyers that other agricultural exporters have been willing to undercut.

The long tradition of government intervention and management of the farm sector, whatever its good intentions, cannot justify the continued and expanded role of the government in agriculture.

While it may be appropriate for the government to monitor soil erosion and farm water supply problems, the federal government should not attempt to shield the agricultural sector from the effects of marketplace competition.

The collectivized farms of the Soviet Union stand as a tragic testament to the devastation that results from absolute government control. Yet, today U.S. farmers are being forced to surrender an ever increasing measure of their economic freedom. The market distortions caused by arbitrary price supports and production quotas penalize farmers and consumers alike. Farmers whose crops are purchased by the government have no incentive to observe the economic signposts of the market. Crops taken off the market in order to prop up the prices are unavailable to consumers who are often hard-pressed to pay grocery bills inflated by government price management.

If the American farm economy is going to return to prosperity at home and competitive strength in the world market - place, the government role in agriculture must be dramatically reduced. The Reagan administration's central goal for farm policy has to be a return to reliance on the market, in farming, as in every other industry.

Needle points

Is anyone else even faintly worried that people who go to conventions and wear those silly hats are the people who choose the country's president for the next four years?

A Democratic vice presidential candidate shouldn't have to pay 40 percent of income to the government. But neither should anyone else.

The Washington Post reports that Ronald Reagan nominated Andrew L. Frey to a judgeship on the D.C. Court of Appeals. You can't accuse Reagan of trying to enforce his own views through this guy on the bench. Frey belongs to the National Coalition to Ban Handguns, Legal Aid Society of D.C., National Abortions Rights Action League and Planned Parenthood.

Writing about arms-talk negotiations, Henry Kissinger says he sees no point in opening talks on outer space in the middle of an election campaign when bipartisanship may be lacking. Heck, isn't it the middle of outer space where most campaign activities occur?

CERTIFICATION—Laboratory personnel at Coronado Community Hospital in Pampa show the accreditation certificate the lab has received from the College of American Pathologists. Shown are Dr. Joe Lowry, pathologist and director of the lab; chief technician Joy Evans and Gene Reed, administrative director of the lab.

Coronado laboratory receives accreditation

The laboratory at Coronado Community Hospital in Pampa has been awarded a two-year accreditation by the Commission on Laboratory Accreditation of the College of American Pathologists (CAP), after a recent on-site inspection.

CCH's lab is the only lab in the Texas Panhandle, outside of Amarillo, to receive the certification, according to Dr. Joe Lowry, pathologist and director of the lab.

John K. Duckworth, MD, chairman of the commission, advised Dr. Lowry of the national recognition and congratulated him and his staff on the "excellence of services you are providing patients and their physicians."

The lab at CCH is one of 3,000 CAP accredited laboratories nationwide.

According to Gene Reed, administrative director of the laboratory, the staff at CCH had to answer about 2,000 questions in one day during the inspection, evaluating the lab in various sections such as hematology, chemistry, blood bank, microbiology and overall administration.

The inspectors examined the records and quality control of the lab for the preceding two years, as well as the education and qualifications of the total staff, the adequacy of the facilities, the equipment, laboratory safety and laboratory management.

The nationwide standards are used to provide uniformity and excellence in labs across the country, according to Dr. Lowry.

He explained that about 20 to 30 percent of all tests done in the lab are done for quality control to maintain the high standards.

The inspection itself is one of the most rigorous a laboratory can experience, Lowry said, and may require up to a year of advance preparation by the staff.

The College of American Pathologists is a national medical specialty society of physicians certified by the American Board of Pathology.

Bell nixes measured service

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company has announced the withdrawal of its application for optional local measured service now pending with the Public Utility Commission.

In taking the action, the company cited the need to consider issues raised by customers and to allow more time for an in-depth study of pricing for local telephone service.

Local measured service is a billing system in which customers would be charged according to the number of local calls placed rather than a flat monthly rate.

"This request does not mean Southwestern Bell is backing away from the difficult issue of how we price our service," said Larry J. Alexander, vice president-public relations. "Today, providing local exchange service is our primary business and the rate we charge must now cover the costs—if we are to keep providing the kind of dependable service customers deserve. But more importantly, we must offer rate options that meet customer needs."

Alexander said Southwestern Bell plans to form an advisory panel representing Texas consumers and organizations who have expressed interest in the pricing issue. Leaders from the American Association of Retired persons (AARP) and the League of United Latin-American Citizens (LULAC) already have indicated they will serve on the panel.

Invitations will be issued to other leaders and experts in this area in the coming weeks, according to the company.

Southwestern Bell reaffirmed its commitment to offer pricing options, including some based on telephone usage.

"Customers are asking for more choices. They want the freedom to select more than a 'single, take-it-or-leave-it rate,'" Alexander said. "But providing choices won't be easy because we have a century of flat-rate tradition. That's why, frankly, the rhetoric becomes so emotional on this issue."

"The panel's input will be a part of the company's considerations in proposing future pricing plans," he concluded.

APPOINTED — David Haynes has been appointed vice president and branch manager of Shamrock Savings for the Wheeler County region. Haynes, a resident and native of McLean, was previously employed with the American National Bank of McLean as assistant vice president of commercial loans.

LOWERING CHOLESTEROL
For years, we have been hearing about the importance of reducing our intake of cholesterol. A new government study has now confirmed it. If you change your diet, you may actually reduce your risk of heart attack. Those with abnormally high blood-cholesterol levels can cut their heart-attack risk in half by following a special diet combined with drug treatment. In the ten-year study of 3,000 men aged 36 to 59 (all with abnormally high cholesterol levels), researchers gave half the subjects a cholesterol-lowering drug called cholestyramine. All followed low-cholesterol diets. The results: For every 1% drop in cholesterol, there was a 2% fall in the risk of coronary heart disease.

Proper nutrition is important as a consideration in the maintenance of a healthy body. Too often adults and youngsters alike do not take the time to eat a proper, nutritionally balanced meal. To help insure that the body receives the necessary nutrients to insure its proper growth and development, vitamins should be taken daily. At B&B PHARMACY, we have a fine line of quality vitamins. Soviet leader still not seen in public MOSCOW (AP) — The last time Konstantin U. Chernenko, the Soviet leader, was seen in public was July 13. Two days later, according to Tass, he left for his vacation.

He has not been seen in public since and speculation is growing about the health of the 72-year-old Kremlin chief. Chernenko previously had been reported to be suffering respiratory problems.

On July 13, he met in the Kremlin with U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar. The session was photographed and the picture published.

There has been no official report that he has returned his vacation, but he was rumored to have gone to a Moscow hospital in early August for medical treatment.

While previous Soviet leaders have used their long summer vacations to entertain visiting dignitaries at their Crimean resorts, Chernenko has not been reported to have followed this custom this year.

Western diplomats in Moscow say they have not received any independent confirmation of reports that Chernenko's health has deteriorated. But they note that strict Soviet control of information makes it difficult, if not impossible, to verify such reports.

"It's something we are all watching very closely," one foreign political specialist said.

Chernenko, long-time Communist Party ideologist, has been at the Kremlin helm for less than seven months. He succeeded Yuri V. Andropov, who had been in office for only 15 months following the death of Leonid I. Brezhnev on Nov. 10, 1982.

Andropov's long absence from public view before his death in February fueled suspicion among Kremlin-watchers who were unable to confirm Andropov's failing health when those reports began surfacing last fall.

There have been no diplomatic visits since Chernenko began his vacation July 15 that would demand his appearance. Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko has received several foreign visitors, including former U.S. Sen. George McGovern in July.

But events like the opening ceremony of the Friendship '84 games might have been expected to draw Chernenko's attendance. He missed it, but five other Politburo members attended, including Mikhail Gorbachev the man many consider the No. 2 man in the Kremlin.

Official Kremlin spokesmen have repeatedly said they "have no information" about Chernenko's health or when he is expected back at work.

Memorial service held

Relatives mourn KAL victims

MANGHYANG GARDENS, South Korea (AP) — In a driving rain from a leaden sky, South Korea held a memorial service Saturday for the 269 people killed one year ago when a Soviet jet fighter shot down a commercial Korean airliner.

About 900 relatives of the victims came to these gardens 50 miles south of the capital, Seoul, for the service and dedication of a twin-towered, granite monument to the dead. Officials of Korean Air — formerly Korean Airlines — said the mourners included about 160 family members from 15 countries.

An estimated 1,200 people, including Korean government officials, members of the diplomatic corps and others huddled under umbrellas in front of the monument as a military band played funeral music and hymns that included "Nearer My God to Thee."

A Buddhist monk, a Protestant pastor and a Roman Catholic priest offered prayers for the dead.

The service at Manghyang Gardens, a burial place for Koreans who died overseas, was the first major observance in South Korea of the shooting down of Korean Airlines Flight 007 on Sept. 1, 1983, as the plane flew from New York to Seoul by way of Anchorage, Alaska.

The anniversary of the incident was subdued, in contrast to the world outcry and protests one year ago.

South Korea has said it will still press for compensation from the Soviet Union, but will also seek to develop unofficial ties between Seoul and Moscow.

The two countries have no diplomatic relations. Even unofficial sports and scientific exchanges were ended after Flight 007 was blasted from the skies near Soviet-held Sakhalin Island.

The Soviets have rejected all demands for compensation. The Soviets claim the plane, which strayed off course, was on an espionage mission, in collusion with the United States. South Korea and the United States deny this.

After the speeches and prayers, family members filed past an altar before the monument, offering flowers and burning incense. Several Korean women appeared near collapse as they were escorted from the altar.

In the Sea of Japan, 79 relatives of 21 victims — 20 Japanese and one Korean — took part in a brief memorial service on a ferry near where the plane was downed.

Soviet warships were visible in the distance as the families threw overboard flowers, candy, fruit and other offerings to the dead at a point about 29 miles northeast of the Soviet Union's Moneron Island.

After arriving at the designated spot, the ferry's horn sounded three short blasts and family members gathered on the main deck for the service.

"How are you, father?" asked Mei, the sobbing, 9-year-old daughter of Tokuhiko Osaka, a restaurant owner who died aboard the flight. "Please tell mother not to work so late into the night. We are so lonely without you, especially during dinner."

"We cannot forget the anger against the Soviet Union and the deep sorrow you left behind," said Kazuo Kono, father of the late actress Tomiko Kono.

Israeli agreement nears

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Yitzhak Shamir, the caretaker prime minister, and Labor Party leader Shimon Peres hope to form a bipartisan government at their next meeting Sunday, but both men said they still differed on bringing Jordan into the Middle East peace process.

Shamir, of the right-wing Likud bloc, indicated in an Israel television interview broadcast Friday that he disagreed with Peres, the prime minister-designate, on making peace overtures to Jordan.

"There are diplomatic initiatives that are not agreed" between Labor and Likud, Shamir said. "These will not be taken. I can add that everyone knows that the period we are entering will not bring these initiatives."

Asked if he meant negotiation with Jordan, Shamir said, "For example."

18 House members claim legal exemption on finances

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, whose vice presidential campaign has been dogged by her responses on a financial disclosure form, is one of 18 House members who this year claimed a legal exemption from having to reveal details about the finances of a spouse or dependent.

Interviews with 16 of the 18 — or their spokesmen — show some members are uncertain over what they need to disclose about their families. At least four of them claimed exemptions for items they did not have to disclose anyway.

While Ms. Ferraro, D-N.Y., continues to maintain that she meets the three tests the law requires for an exemption, three members of the group have either dropped the exemption claim or say they will do so soon.

Rep. Tom Kindness clearly remembers the post-Watergate days of 1978 when Congress wrestled with the touchy question of whether members should bare their financial souls to America.

"I do recall being generally concerned they were creating problems for people to deal with down the road," the Ohio Republican said last week.

That road has run straight to 1984, causing criminal problems for Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, and well as the political ones bedeviling Ms. Ferraro.

Hansen faces up to 15 months in prison and a $40,000 fine after being convicted by a federal jury last April for filing false financial disclosure statements for the first three years following enactment of the 1978 Ethics in Government Act.

More recently, Ms. Ferraro's historic campaign has been haunted by financial questions that partly center on her refusal to list the assets, liabilities and transactions of her husband, real estate dealer John Zaccaro, on her congressional disclosure forms.

Exemptions claimed by other members covered such things as U.S. savings bonds purchased for children and a wife's bank account worth $1,200. None of the items approached Zaccaro's net worth of $3 million that Ms. Ferraro excluded from her report.

The ethics law says that to qualify for an exemption, a member must have no detailed knowledge of the spouse's holdings, have no part in their acquisition and receive no benefit from them.

It also says there is no need to disclose a spouse's personal bank account if it amounts to less than $5,000 or anything about the spouse's finances if the couple was legally separated or divorced within the reporting year.

Kindness was one of the members claiming an exemption for information he did not have to report. He was divorced in 1983. "I always approach these things with an abundance of caution," he said.

On Aug. 6, after Ms. Ferraro's exemption was questioned, Rep. Norman Lent, R-N.Y., filed an amended statement listing assets of his wife, Barbara Morris. The ethics law allows valuation in broad ranges. Lent valued her holdings at between $35,000 and $145,000.

"He still felt he was qualified (for the exemption), but because of questions concerning others he filed the amendment," said his spokeswoman, Stephanie Taylor.

Rep. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., said she checked the exemption box "as a precaution in case my spouse had made any investments through his law firm of which I was unaware."

Mexican government battling drug trafficking

By CARL MANNING
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — For years, Mexico has been a source of marijuana and opium to the United States, but the government, mounting what one drug agent calls "a war without end," is waging an uphill battle to wipe out the illegal crops for good.

U.S. officials say Mexico once was the No. 1 supplier of marijuana to Americans, but the bottom fell out of the market when the government in 1974 began spraying the plants with herbicides — notably paraquat and 2-4-D.

Despite the fall from notoriety as the No. 1 supplier, drug cultivation has remained a persistent problem and officials estimate that 10 percent of the marijuana smoked in the United States comes from Mexico.

"They are growing more marijuana than before, but we are destroying more than before also," one Mexican drug agent said. "It is a war without end."

President Miguel de la Madrid has made the anti-drug war a major priority of his administration. On July 27, he went to Sinaloa — a key drug producing area — to announce he was ordering drug agents to redouble their efforts.

He said the possibility exists for a resurgence of drug trafficking in Mexico because of the economic crisis here.

Since 1963, Mexican officials have been working closely with U.S. drug agents, whose main role is to exchange information with Mexican authorities and lend technical advice. U.S. agents are forbidden from taking part in drug arrests and have no arrest powers in Mexico.

Agents last year destroyed about 25,000 plants covering 6,000 acres, along with nearly 184,000 pounds of harvested marijuana. It is estimated that more than 700 tons of marijuana grows annually in Mexico, primarily in the states of Sinaloa, Guerrero and Oaxaca.

The agents have been doing even better in their war against red-flowing poppy plants, from which come opium, heroin and morphine

This year, the government has destroyed more than 28,000 poppy plants covering nearly 5,700 acres, along with 20 pounds of opium, another 20 pounds of morphine and 40 pounds of heroin. Last year, agents destroyed 28,840 poppy plants.

More than 3,200 people have been arrested this year on various drug charges and agents vow they will exceed last year's record of 4,744.

Agents combine modern techniques such as surveillance with airplanes and helicopters, old-fashioned police work, and a little bit of luck. When needed, army and navy units are called in to help.

The southern state of Oaxaca, the No. 1 marijuana-growing region in Mexico, has been the focus lately of repeated drug raids and aerial spraying to kill the crop because it has been an area long neglected by authorities.

In July, agents destroyed 12 tons of marijuana in Oaxaca — the largest single destruction of the illegal weed in the nation's history — after the fields were spotted by agents in an aircraft on a routine patrol.

Later, another 170 acres of marijuana and 12 acres of poppies were destroyed by 130 federal drug agents, moving in with 20 helicopters and four airplanes.

The same month, government agents arrested four Bolivians who were caught smuggling 33 pounds of cocaine behind the linings of four suitcases. The arrests came after a customs inspector noticed white powder leaking from one of the bags, prompting further checking.

Drug agents estimate nearly 50 tons of cocaine each year move through Mexico from South America, most of it destined for the United States.

Most drug smuggling into the U.S. is by boat or aircraft. The desert areas just inside Arizona, New Mexico and the Big Bend area of Texas are favorite landing spots of airborne smugglers because of the sparse population and few patrols by American authorities.

Much of the marijuana and poppies has been grown for generations by campesinos, or farmers, who find cultivating the crops the best way to earn a few pesos to feed their families.

According to a report by the Roman Catholic Bishops Conference for the Southern Pacific area, "international drug gangs" are forcing thousands of poor farmers in Oaxaca and Chiapas to cultivate hundreds of thousands of acres of marijuana and poppies.

The bishops said the problem is complicated by the lack of government support for the impoverished farmers.

Reattaching limbs tough surgical job

By KURT J. REPANSHEK
Associated Press Writer
MORGANTOWN, W. Va. (AP) — Dr. David Labosky can tell in seconds whether the veins he's pieced back together will work, but it takes months after he reattaches human limbs before he knows whether the nerves have mended.

"You can tell right away if you've done it right," the surgeon says of the vein splicing, because the blood "either flows or it doesn't."

But nerves in an amputated limb regenerate at the rate of just one millimeter per day, so it can take months before improvement is noticeable, Labosky said.

Labosky and Dr. David Fogarty head West Virginia University Hospital's microvascular surgery teams that reattach hands, feet, legs and arms severed in accidents. In recent weeks the doctors reattached a Preston County man's arm that was cut off with a power saw and sewed a Cumberland, Md., woman's left ring finger back on.

Before Labosky, a 37-year-old orthopedic surgeon, came to WVU from the University of Pennsylvania in 1980, no one at the Morgantown hospital had the experience needed to perform such surgery.

Nine months after Labosky arrived, he was presented with one of the toughest cases he's had to handle. Five-year-old Dennis Courtney had lost his left arm when he walked into the path of a pickup truck.

"That was a toughie, because his arm was ripped off," Labosky recalled.

But the success of that operation and the ensuing publicity led more emergency medical service squads to begin taking special care of severed limbs, making more reattachments possible, he said.

"Back then, we were having trouble with people treating the amputated part properly," the surgeon said.

Doctors have approximately 6-10 hours in which to act if they are to have a chance of success, he said. If the detached limb is packed in ice while en route to the hospital the time is closer to 10 hours, Labosky said. If not, then it's closer to six, he said.

Another factor is which limb has been severed, the doctor said.

"If somebody cuts his arm off at the forearm, there is a lot of muscle in the forearm and that muscle will die quicker than any other tissue in the amputated part," Labosky said. "Because there aren't any muscles in the finger, there is considerably more leeway."

The surgical reattachment teams go into action as soon as the hospital's emergency room is notified that an amputee victim is en route.

In the emergency room, Labosky examines both the limb and the patient to determine whether reattachment is worth attempting.

"You have to describe to the patient just what you have to do," he said. The surgery, the lengthy hospitalization and the pain involved all are explained, Labosky said.

Patients also are told that the procedure is by no means guaranteed to work — there is always a chance that the muscle damage is too extensive. If the reattachment fails to "take," the limb must be surgically amputated later.

Labosky said he won't attempt reattachment if he sees too much muscle damage or is worried that dead tissue will send poisons into the patient's bloodstream.

"As a surgeon, you have to make a clinical judgment. You can't, just because the patient wants you to, endanger his life."

The surgeon also stresses that a reattached limb will never be "normal."

"For all practical purposes, if you cut something off and put it back on, it's not going to be normal," he said flatly. "Sometimes, you just have to tell the patient that you don't think it'd help to put the limb back on."

In the operating room, the doctors are assisted by microsurgical technicians and residents. Once the cleaning of both the amputated limb and the remaining stump is completed and the bones lined up, the team begins the painstaking task of matching and reconnecting nerves, veins, arteries, tendons and ligaments.

In some cases, the doctors must take muscles from other parts of the body to reconstruct those in the limb that have been destroyed, Labosky said.

Recovery periods are long, and there often are months of rehabilitation, but attempting reattachments usually is better than giving up in favor of a prosthesis, he said.

"Prostheses aren't as good, as a rule, as the part you can put back on," Labosky said.

A leader training for all 4-H Food and Nutrition Project Leaders will be held at 6:30 p.m. Sept. 10 in the Courthouse Annex. The Sept. 6 session has been cancelled.

We will be using and discussing the new project leader guides and planning the Foods Project. We expect a tremendous turnout and look forward to a successful Foods and Nutrition Project. This year's project theme is "food and fiber."

4-H PROJECTS: SOMETHING FOR EVERYONE

4-H, the youth development program of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, offers exciting projects and activities for every young person between the ages of 9 and 19 who has a curious desire to learn.

4-H encourages learning by doing and provides citizenship and leadership skills. 4-H wants to involve all youth — rural, urban, suburban, teens and pre-teens and from all races, creeds, ethnic and economic backgrounds. 4-H youth learn, work and play together.

In 4-H, young people can learn how to make things, grow things, take care of things and repair things in a wide variety of projects.

And the great part about the whole program is that the 4-H youth can select what they want to do. Projects include things such as wildlife, entomology, animal science, beef cattle, horse and pony, dog care, plant science, gardening, home economics, foods and nutrition, clothing, automotive, bicycle, small engines, electricity, personal development, citizenship, leadership and public speaking.

4-H has a lot to offer. If you want to get involved in an action-oriented program, this is the time to join 4-H. The new 4-H year begins this month so join now and get in on all the action.

The Boettcher's mill needs service, annexation to city may be the solution

By FRANK KLIMKO
Houston Chronicle

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Back when the oil industry was just a little squirt and timber was king, Boettcher's Mill was a thriving company sawmill town on the fringes of Huntsville.

It produced millions of board feet of lumber, much of it used for frame homes built 60 years ago that are still standing in Huntsville and Houston.

Built on the eve of the Great Depression, Boettcher's Mill was a small town in itself, providing basic services such as housing and running water.

The mill area was never a high-rent district and since the mill closed in 1969, the community of about 200 homes has fallen into general disrepair.

Some homes do not have running water. Sewage flows from back yards into driveways. The streets are dusty, trash-lined dirt roads.

But Huntsville, which now surrounds Boettcher's Mill, is now considering annexing the community and reworking the area's water and sewer lines.

Sawmill towns sprung up after the Civil War and thrived until the 1950s and 60s when many were forced out by competition from international lumber conglomerates.

Boettcher's Mill was a typical southern company town complete with workers' houses, a company store and company script on a pay day.

"The company towns were an off-shoot of the southern plantation farms," said Gerald Holder, a Sam Houston State University geology professor.

"In many cases the worker's condition bordered on that of an indentured servant who depended on the company for everything. But it was servitude by choice because for a long time after the Civil War, the southern man had nothing to offer but his strong back. For many it was either work at the company town or starve," Holder said.

Mill workers were never paid a high wage and undoubtedly many went over their heads into debt with the easy credit at the company store. But, the mill towns offered security for the economic refugees who sought only jobs and a roof over heads, said Holder.

By the most accounts, the workers at Boettcher's Mill were not taken advantage of.

Edward Boettcher Sr., the son of a German immigrant, was a benevolent patriarch who looked after his workers and often sponsored charitable company events such as deer-hunting parties.

"Old Man" Boettcher also had a feisty side and enjoyed jousting with the town's landed gentry who looked with disdain at the outside influence the mill brought in, said C.J. "Clinton" Boettcher, 57, a Huntsville developer and son of Boettcher.

"We were the outsiders to the town folks. They thought the way we worked was disgusting. They also resented the fact that we were self-sufficient and never asked anything from them," Boettcher said. Merchants bitterly complained in the 1950s that the mill drained the local economy. By that time the mill had stopped issuing company script and was paying its workers cash they could spend either in town or at the Boettcher commissary.

In a move to prove the merchants wrong, "Old Man" Boettcher one day paid the mill hands in $2 bills. "Those damned bills flooded the town and kept turning up for weeks afterward. We never heard again how little he helped the town," said Clinton Boettcher.

Despite years of profits and an effort at automation, Clinton Boettcher closed the mill down in 1969 after he was faced with new federal government regulations he couldn't meet.

The family sold off what they could and little is left of the mill today. A giant steam-driven saw rests rusting in a berry-strewn field next to the site of the old mill, which has long since been leveled.

The old company store is boarded up, donated to a local church for its missionary work.

In the past 10 years, the entire character of the old mill town has changed. Elderly white mill hands have been replaced by waves of Hispanic immigrants that have moved in to live in the low-cost housing.

Charles McPike, 73, is one of the few remaining mill workers left living in Boettcher's Mill and keeps an eye on the dilapidated buildings. McPike started working for Boettcher as a log hauler in the 1920s, driving a mule team for $2.50 a day.

McPike is one of the big supporters of annexation. He wants the city to install water meters at each home.

Lordy! Lordy!

Look Who's "40!"

We Love You!

TIME FOR "COLE" CROPS

It's anything but cold right now, but it is time to plant and transplant "cole" crops. "Cole" refers to any of various plants belonging to the Cruciferae or mustard family, including such cool-season crops as brussels sprouts, cabbage, cauliflower, collards, chard, kale, kohlrabi, mustard, broccoli, turnips and watercress.

Cole crops have a common ancestry of wild cabbage originating in the Mediterranean and Asia Minor area, and this close kinship enables wide usage of plant parts.

For instance, brussels sprout plants are grown by most gardeners for miniature heads (sprouts) which develop in the axils of leaves. However, some consider brussels sprout leaves to be milder and sweeter than those of collards, which are especially grown for their leaves. Most gardeners are familiar with the fact that turnips can be grown for greens (leaves) or for roots. In other words, when growing a member of the Cruciferae family, the saying "what you see is what you get (to eat)" truly applies!

This group of cole crops enjoys cool seasons and is somewhat cold tolerant. Cabbage, for instance, can withstand cold down to 20 degrees or even 15 degrees F. Broccoli, collards, kale, kohlrabi or mustard can also withstand fairly low temperatures while cauliflower and chard are more sensitive to cold.

The conditioning of plants as influenced by weather conditions prior to exposure to cold temperatures determines plant survival. Plant maturity also has much to do with the amount of cold which cole crops can survive. When broccoli plants have produced buds, even a light frost may cause considerable damage since clusters freeze, turn brown and ultimately rot.

Cole crops grow best at a monthly mean temperature of 60 to 70 degrees F. This occurs when temperatures are 80 degrees F. or less during the day and 60 degrees F. or less at night.

Of all the cole crops mentioned, broccoli is probably the best tasting, most nutritious and most economical of the entire group. It's surprising that such an excellent vegetable, known for more than 2,000 years in Europe and perhaps 200 years in America, has become popular only in the past 50 years.

Broccoli furnishes good eating while being high in vitamin C and supplying a substantial amount of vitamin A. It is the only crop which can be blanched and frozen and still retain its superb taste and quality. It actually is better after the freezing process which softens the stem tissue.

Fall is the best time to plant cole crops since they thrive in cold temperatures. Planting now can assure some fresh cole crops for Thanksgiving dinner.

CUT FIREWOOD NOW

It's not too early to cut firewood for next winter. Firewood cut now will be dry by the time cold weather rolls around. It takes as much as a year for split and stacked firewood to reach an "air dry" condition. This is when 20 percent of the wood's weight is water. However, four to six months storage will dry wood enough for use.

Stack the wood off the ground, in an open area to allow air circulation. Covering the wood pile to keep off the rain will speed up the drying process.

When cutting firewood, safety should be a primary consideration. A chainsaw is probably the most dangerous piece of equipment most people ever handle. Chainsaws cause more than 30,000 accidents each year, mostly due to operator carelessness.

Get a copy of the Extension Service publication, "Safe Chainsaw Operations", available in the Extension office.

If buying firewood, be sure you know what you're getting. First, ask if the wood is green or dry. Then, check on the amount and price. Firewood is often advertised for sale by the cord, but the seller usually means a "face" cord.

A cord of wood is a stack 4 feet wide by 4 feet high and 8 feet long. A face cord is a stack 4 feet high and 8 feet long, but the pieces are only 18 to 24 inches long. From the front, or "face," it looks like a cord, but is only one-third to one-half a cord. A pickup load of wood is generally equal to a face cord.

Plan to cut or buy your firewood early, so that it will be ready to burn once the winter season sets in.

Fertilize for wheat PROFIT!

You may be looking for ways to cut costs. Who isn't? But one thing all agronomists tell us is: "Don't cut back in areas that cause yields to decrease!"

They are talking about fertilizer. They encourage the wheat farmer to select varieties and apply fertilizer for optimum yields — that's your most profitable yield.

Yes, your cost per acre will increase as you move up toward your optimum yield. But your cost per bushel will be reduced.

You not only get more bushels per acre, you get more profit from every bushel you raise!

Base your fertilizer applications on soil test results and your yield goals. Let our Fertilizer Specialist help you.

Threats against the President not taken lightly

By ANN LEVIN
Tyler Courier-Times-Telegraph
TYLER, Texas (AP) — It's a rare kind of crime because you don't have to DO anything. Just to say the words is against the law.

A person can get up to five years in prison and a $1,000 fine for a written or oral threat against the President of the United States.

The same penalty goes for threats against any protectee of the U.S. Secret Service, a group that includes the Vice President, the President's family members, former presidents, their children under age 16, and spouses, until their remarriage.

Prosecutors interpret the law to mean words "not uttered in jest, idle talk or political argument," said Chris Harrison, an assistant U.S. attorney in Tyler. "A person doesn't have to have had a gun, or flown to Washington, D.C. Just the statement in itself, if a jury believes it is a true threat, can convict someone," he added.

A 24-year-old Tyler airport employee realized the seriousness of the law recently when Secret Service agents arrested him at his South Tyler apartment for threatening the life of Vice President George Bush, who was campaigning in Tyler.

The man had boasted to co-workers of his access to light anti-tank weapons and his intention to appear on the Pounds Field runway in camouflage clothing. Secret Service agent Tom Holman said in a competency hearing.

The Secret Service investigated about 4,000 threats a year, and the number grows in election years because of heavy media coverage of government officials and candidates, said Dr. Bill Logan, a psychiatrist at the Menninger Foundation in Topeka, Kan.

Logan recently wrote a study on presidential threateners based on his clinical experience at the U.S. Medical Center for Federal Prisoners at Springfield, Mo., the main psychiatric hospital for federal prisoners in the United States. The Tyler man arrested was committed by a federal magistrate to Springfield for 90 days.

Logan's conclusions about threateners and the danger they pose to society has added new findings to an already published profile of the presidential assassin.

Logan agrees with earlier studies, which portray would-be assassins as loners and misfits, often with histories of mental illness.

Almost every threatener Logan examined at Springfield was unemployed at the time the threat was made. Many had criminal records.

But Logan also discovered a new category of offender — basically harmless individuals who are victims of government cutbacks and make the threat when they are intoxicated.

"When people are having a rough time financially, they tend to threaten the President when they're drunk. They're dissatisfied about Social Security benefits, or welfare," Logan said. Usually, they do not remember having made the threat when they sober up, he added.

A smaller proportion of threat-makers want to get out of state prisons and into the federal prison system, where conditions are considered superior.

Another small percentage voices threats to find a warm, secure, temporary shelter.

Logan said he knows an individual who calls the Secret Service in various cities to threaten the President "whenever it's cold or rainy or he's hungry."

"Very few (threateners) seem to be calculated assassins like the one who shot the Pope, and only a small number who threaten do it for fame and notoriety, like John Hinckley," Logan said.

A quarter of the 150 threateners sent to Springfield every year for psychiatric evaluation are psychotic, Logan said. If psychiatrists decide they cannot understand the charges against them or assist in their own defense, they are sent back to their state of residence for commitment to a state mental health facility.

Paranoia can cause some psychotics to think the FBI or the CIA is following them, on the President's orders. Delusions of grandeur lure others into believing they must act out a divine mandate to kill.

Below are profiles of three men accused of making threats against the President in the Eastern District of Texas. They share characteristics typical of the types found to make such threats. The profiles were compiled from interviews with prosecutors, law enforcement agents and mental health professionals. Initials are used in place of names to protect the subjects' identities.

D.S., a 32-year-old white male, was born in Dallas. An electrician, he has been arrested about 27 times, and has felony convictions for burglary, possession of drugs, and auto theft. He has spent time at Terrell State Hospital, a state mental institution.

D.S. told authorities he is a very religious person and reads the Bible continuously. He said the pages of the Bible fall open at places God has messages for him.

Last November, he was arrested twice in Denton within 24 hours. He had drunk several ounces of cough syrup and a six-pack of beer. Later, when he was sober, he claimed he could not remember everything that happened that day. Denton police officers, however, signed sworn statements to the Secret Service that D.S. said, on the way to jail, that nobody could stop him from shooting the president.

D.S. fits a syndrome associated with threateners and described by prison psychiatrists. People who make threats seem to resent authority. They display quick temper and often make rash remarks for the shock value.

After commitment to Springfield, D.S. was ruled competent to stand trial. Charges were dismissed against him in June, however, because psychiatrists found he was intoxicated when he made the statements.

S.H., 50, was born in Alabama. His last address was a Nacogdoches halfway house. He was admitted to Springfield after he walked into the Nacogdoches Police Department last October and said he was going to Washington to kill the President.

Authorities say S.H. traveled with carnivals and ran a dart game. He was a drifter, who preferred Southern states because of the warm weather. He slept in graveyards and ate from garbage cans.

Diagnosed as a schizophrenic, he was taking anti-psychotic medication and drugs for epilepsy at the time of his arrest.

S.H. has received more than 20 shock treatments. He told authorities a man's voice named John tells him what to say and do. He said he talks to God several times a day and God talks back to him.

In February, he was judged competent to stand trial. A federal magistrate sent him back to Springfield.

Tough year for many farmers and ranchers

By The Associated Press
COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Hot, dry weather continued its siege on Texas the past week, adding further to crop and livestock conditions. From a weather standpoint, it's been an extremely tough year for many farmers and ranchers, said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. Many parts of the state have had little measurable rainfall this year, so crops and ranges are in poor shape. Cropland in some western areas was never planted last spring due to dry conditions, and grain crops in some counties were cut for hay in early summer due to poor grain prospects, Carpenter noted. Currently, cotton harvesting is under way in southwestern south central and north central counties as well as in coastal areas, with yields ranging from poor to good, depending on irrigation and the timing of spring and summer rains. Irrigated yields in Southwest Texas have been excellent, and an excellent cotton crop has been harvested in the Rio Grande Valley, Carpenter said. Some grain sorghum is still being harvested in Northeast Texas, and a poor harvest is under way in west central counties. Cropwise, the one bright spot is in the South Plains where timely rains have boosted agricultural conditions, noted Carpenter. Developing crops are making good progress, although bollworms have been a problem in some of the area's cotton. Farmers in the Panhandle and South Plains are starting to sow wheat for fall grazing while elsewhere land preparations continue for wheat and other smaller grains. Hay making remains limited over most of Texas due to the continued dry weather, Carpenter said. Yields are averaging as much as 50 percent below normal in eastern counties that normally boast a good harvest. In many parts of Texas hay supplies are nonexistent, and ranchers are having to order hay from neighboring states for current feeding. And with the fall season approaching, hay demands will increase, notes Carpenter. Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions: PANHANDLE: Most crops are making good progress although those in dryland areas need rain. Early carrot harvesting is under way, and farmers are harvesting forage crops for silage and hay. Recent rains have helped ranges, and cattle are in good condition. SOUTH PLAINS: Good moisture conditions are boosting the area's crops. Cotton looks excellent although bollworms continue to be a problem in some fields. Sugar beets are making good progress and harvesting will start in the next few weeks. Some early fields of wheat are being seeded for fall grazing. ROLLING PLAINS: The cotton crop varies from having a full boll set to just emerging due to weather problems that have plagued the area this season. Planting of forage sorghums continues, and farmers are getting land ready for wheat. Pastures generally remain in poor shape, with cattle marketings steady. NORTH CENTRAL: Cotton harvesting is increasing while the grain sorghum harvest is about complete. Yields have been short due to the season-long dry weather. Peanuts, pecans and hay crops continue to suffer from lack of moisture, and grazing remains short. NORTHEAST: Grain sorghum harvesting continues, with generally low yields. Cotton is making good progress. Fall vegetables, pecans, sweet potatoes and pastures need rain badly. Hay production has been limited, with yields from 30 to 50 percent below normal. FAR WEST: Recent scattered rains have helped some crops and ranges. For some areas it was the first measurable rainfall this year. However, the region generally remains dry. Cotton is making good progress. Late cantaloupes are being harvested. Ranges remain in poor shape. WEST CENTRAL: Drought conditions continue to plague the area despite some scattered showers. The cotton crop looks poor; acreage is limited and bollworms are heavy in some fields. Harvesting of a small grain sorghum crop is under way, and farmers are baling the stalks for hay. Pecan prospects are fair, with aphids and the drought reducing the crop. Livestock feeding continues. CENTRAL: Farmers have wrapped up the corn and grain sorghum harvests and are now harvesting cotton. Crop yields are running below normal this year due to the extended dry weather.

Peanuts and pecans are in dire need of moisture and pastures remain short. Land preparation is under way for wheat and oats. EAST: Dry conditions are limiting hay making and livestock grazing on pastures. Peanut acreage is down due to the dry weather, and the pecan drop has been heavy due to limited moisture. Most gardeners and truck farmers are waiting on rain to plant fall vegetables. UPPER COAST: Rice and cotton harvesting is making good progress with open weather; yields are fair to good. Soybeans and peanuts are doing well but need rain, as do pastures. A decline in grazing conditions is causing increased cattle marketings. SOUTH CENTRAL: Cotton harvesting is in full swing, with good early yields. Farmers are preparing land for small grains and fall gardens are being planted. Pastures are short due to dry conditions. Aphids, weevils and lack of moisture are hampering the pecan crop. SOUTHWEST: Drought conditions persist, with rainfall at 20 to 35 percent of normal. Irrigated cotton is producing above average yields, but yields are short where irrigation has been limited. Farmers are preparing land for fall crops. Fall sheep shearing is under way. COASTAL BEND: Cotton and rice harvesting is about 90 percent complete, with yields down due to the season-long drought. The hay crop has been light, so hay supplies are virtually nonexistent. Peanuts are under severe moisture stress, and pastures and ranges are in poor shape. Ranchers are continuing to cull cattle and are having to feed those kept on hand. SOUTH: The cotton harvest is about complete, with above average yields of good quality cotton. Hay production remains limited due to dry conditions, and grazing is short over most of the region. Farmers are continuing to plant fall vegetables and other crops.

WHEAT INFORMATION
We had a good Wheat Conservation Day this past week. A lot of good information on the use of Glean, wheat diseases and varieties, and barley production was discussed.

I know a lot of wheat farmers were busy and unable to attend. If you have questions about any of these topics, come by the office. I have handout material on wheat varieties and hybrids as well as barley varieties that have been tested in our area. Feel free to come by and visit about any of these topics or get a copy of this handout material.

SHEEP AND GOAT FIELD DAY
There will be a Sheep and Goat Field Day at San Angelo on Sept. 6. Part of the program includes a Suffolk Ram test which has been underway since June. More details are available by giving me a call.

STORE ROUND HAY BALES PROPERLY
Using a little care when storing round hay bales can cut losses. A critical factor in hay losses is the percent moisture of hay at storage, which is directly related to nutrient at storage, the greater the losses. High moisture conditions permit hay to undergo heating and result in losses.

The degree of heating that develops during storage depends not only on the moisture of the hay but also on the density, size and shape of the hay in storage. Round bales that are put up tight have less loss than loose, round bales. Moisture content of stored hay is the main factor in controlling nutrient loss or retention in storage.

Research in East Texas has shown that a firm round bale stored one year outside will lose 22 percent dry matter. The same bale stored for two years outside will lose 25 percent dry matter. This means that a round bale stored outside for two years will only have 75 percent of its original weight left for feeding. The main loss of both weight and nutrients is on the outer portion of the bale. Large round bales of coastal bermudagrass hay in storage at Overton for 112 days showed that the protein content decreased almost 2 percent in the middle of the bale and 14 percent in the outer layer. Digestible dry matter decreased 11 percent in the middle of the bale and 32 percent in the outer surface. This implies that the bale's inner core undergoes little change in quality but that the outer portion, which is in contact with the weather, has a great loss in nutrient quality. The greatest loss to a round bale occurs at the bottom where they are in contact with soil.

A study at Purdue University involved round bales stored inside, on the ground and outside on a layer of crushed rock. Round bales stored inside retained 92 percent of their original weight, bales stored on crushed rock retained 85 percent of their original weight, and bales stored on the ground retained only 76 percent of their original weight. This shows the importance of storing bales in an area that is well drained, where moisture will not accumulate and where water will run off from around the bales.

Both of these research studies were done in higher rainfall areas and certainly moisture aids the loss noted in this research. Hay loss from large bales should not be this great if bales are stored on high ground and the sides of the bales are not touching.

TRACTOR ID CAN THWART THEFT

Farmers can reduce tractor theft by putting an identification number on their tractor. The proper number to use for property identification in Texas is the owner's driver's license number. Place the identification number on the rear of the differential housing, or if this area is not accessible, place the number on the right axle housing on the top or rear. Use metal stamping tool and make sure the imprint is legible. Also, record and safeguard all serial numbers on farm equipment.

Economics education lacking in high schools

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — In a test of 15,000 junior high school students, only 23 percent could identify capitalism, and only one in two could differentiate between economies of the United States and the Soviet Union.

Not surprising, says the Joint Council on Economic Education, which cites that figure. It claims that only 26.4 percent of secondary schools offer even one economics course, and that only 13 states require high school economics.

Economic illiteracy is more understandable, it goes on to say, when you learn that only half of all high school social studies teachers have had an economics course.

So, it was with gratitude that the various groups concerned about economic ignorance welcomed the selection in April of an assertive, vocal high school economics instructor as National Teacher of the Year.

Sherleen Sisney has made an issue out of the economic literacy gap, saying people cannot be familiar with their own world or vote intelligently if they fail to understand economic concepts.

To her classes in Ballard High School in Louisville, Ky., she has invited many real-world figures — bankers and business people, for example — to act as teachers.

She turns passive students into participants with debates, seminars, guest speakers, discussions and simulation games in which students assume the roles of bankers, businessmen and others.

Still, she is appalled by the extent to which the subject remains almost ignored. "Economics is life," she says. "It isn't just an abstraction." She asks how anyone can live efficiently without an understanding of it.

Much of the blame falls on teachers, she says. "They're afraid or bored by the subject. They want to avoid it."

The boredom and fear is evident even among those social science instructors who do make an effort to teach it, she says.

She has observed that the period of great industrial growth from 1865 to 1900 is almost ignored by many such teachers, and that in discussing Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal the stress is on social rather than economic aspects.

"Economics doesn't lend itself to teaching as well as history does," says Mrs. Sisney, whose graduate degree is in the latter. "There are no black and white answers; an understanding often requires reasoning by the student."

The reasoning factor troubles teachers, too. "When students question them they don't know what to say," she says. And yet, she points out, economics is at least as important as history in understanding the real world.

Mrs. Sisney was chosen for her award, and the accompanying White House visit, by Encyclopedia Britannica Cos., Good Housekeeping magazine and the Council of Chief State School Officers.

Harvesters show progress in scrimmage with Rebels

By L.D. STRATE
Pampa News Sports Editor

Pampa's pass defense took it on the chin against Tascosa in Friday night's scrimmage, but head coach John Kendall could see improvement in other areas.

The Rebels struck for four touchdown passes, but the Harvester defense held their own against the rush.

"I thought we did things better than we did last week (Pampa's scrimmage with Boys Ranch), even though we did give up those touchdown passes. Our secondary was misreading a few things, but that's something that can be worked out."

Tascosa scored twice on 70 and 40-yard touchdown passes before Pampa drove down the field and scored on Brian Kotara's 20-yard run.

Each team ran 20 plays before surrendering the ball. There were no punts or kickoffs.

End David Carter, tackle Dean Birkes and guard Travis Adams were among the defensive standouts for Pampa.

"On the passes they completed, we just couldn't see the outside contained, but we did keep up a pretty good rush," Kendall said. "We contained the run pretty good."

Lineman Lyle VanBuskirk did not play due to injuries while fullback-center David Ellison suffered a knee injury during the scrimmage.

"VanBuskirk probably could have played, but I thought I'd better hold him out," Kendall added. "He'll be back Monday. I don't know about Ellison yet."

Kendall is still worried about Pampa's lack of experience.

"I thought we played pretty well at times, but did make some mistakes because there's a lot of players that just don't have varsity experience. That can be expected."

Pampa kicks off the 1984 season next Saturday night against Monahans. Kickoff time is 8 p.m. at Monahans.

KSZN-radio (1340) in Pampa will air the game. Warren Hasse will be the announcer.

Ellis takes one-stroke lead in Top O' Texas Golf tournament

Richard Ellis seems to thrive on competition.

Facing probably the toughest field ever in a Top O' Texas Golf Tournament, Ellis shot a two-under par 69 to take the opening-round lead Saturday at the Pampa Country Club.

Ellis of Plano and a former Pampa native is the tournament's five-time defending champion. Ellis started off hot with three consecutive birdies. He had only two bogies and added another birdie on No. 15 to hold off Pampa's Paul McIntire, Steve Russell and Tommy Dement. McIntire, Russell and Dement were one shot behind at 70 after the first 18 holes. McIntire was the medalist on Pampa High's state championship team last season and Russell was a member of the University of Houston NCAA champions last season.

In a three-way tie for fifth at 71 are Jackie Coffey, Glenn Goldfinch and Barry Terrell.

Klein resigns as Rangers' general manager

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Joe Klein, the Texas Rangers general manager, resigned his post Saturday to pursue "other opportunities," team officials announced at a press conference.

Klein, who didn't attend the press conference, will be replaced by Tom Grieve, now the farm director for the American League baseball team, team president Mike Stone announced.

Published reports had said that Stone and Klein were not getting along and that in the past two weeks Klein "had lost all his power."

But Stone said Saturday that Klein's resignation had nothing to do with conflicts between him, Klein, majority owner Eddie Chiles or other team officials.

The Associated Press could not reach Klein for comment.

Coaches' son hurt in wreck

Coby Nichols, 9-year-old son of Pampa High basketball coach Garland Nichols, was hurt Friday night when the three-wheeler he was driving and a car collided on Evergreen Street.

Coby was taken to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo where he underwent surgery Friday night.

"He had two broken bones in his leg and some bruises on his stomach," coach Nichols said. "He's doing fine now."

Coby's room number is 525 and he is allowed visitors, coach Nichols said.

Cougars shock Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Robbie Bosco, the latest in a long line of Brigham Young's prolific passers, rifled a 50-yard touchdown pass to Adam Haysbert with 1:37 left in the game Saturday as the Cougars rallied from an 11-point deficit to shock third-ranked Pittsburgh 20-14.

Pitt, expected to contend for the national college football championship, turned two third-quarter interceptions into touchdowns to take a 14-3 lead, but BYU came back.

Bosco, a junior making his first start after playing behind All-American Steve Young in 1983, completed 25 of 43 passes for 325 yards and two scores.

BYU cut Pitt's lead to 14-9 when Bosco threw to Lakei Heimuli with 4:53 to go in the third quarter. BYU, after forcing a Pitt punt, drove from its 17 to the Panther 6 but elected to go for a field goal on a fourth-and-goal. Lee Johnson's 23-yard kick cut Pitt's lead to 14-12 with 9:15 to play. Bosco throws of 35 yards to Glen Kozlowski and 22 yards to Richard Orr keyed the winning drive.

The Cougars needed just five plays to cover the 74 yards on the game-winning drive, with Haysbert beating cornerback Keith Tinsley for the TD, one of nine receptions for 141 yards.

BYU led 3-0 at the half on Johnson's 37-yard field goal.

Bill Callahan's 78-yard return of a Bosco pass with just over three minutes gone in the second half gave Pitt a 7-3 lead. Pitt then made it 14-3 less than three minutes later after Tinsley's 20-yard interception return to the BYU 20. A 14-yard Congemi to Chuck Scales pass set up Bailey's 1-yard run with 8:31 left in the period.

Martina, Chris win easily

NEW YORK (AP) — Martina Navratilova and Chris Evert Lloyd continued their collision course Saturday, easily advancing into the fourth round of the $2.55 million U.S. Open Tennis Championships. Czechoslovakia's Ivan Lendl, who has lost in the men's singles final in each of the last two years, also cruised past his third-round opponent, but several seeds were ousted on the hardcourts at the National Tennis Center in Flushing Meadow.

Tim Mayotte of Springfield, Mass., upset 10th-seeded Eliot Teltscher 6-4, 6-3, 6-4 in men's play, while West Germany's Sylvia Hanika eliminated No. 7 Zina Garrison 6-3, 6-2 and Austria's Petra Huber ousted No. 16 Andrea Temesvári of Hungary 6-1, 6-4 in the women's singles.

Other seeded men to advance to the fourth round included No. 4 Mats Wilander of Sweden, No. 5 Andres Gomez of Ecuador, No. 12 Vitas Gerulaitis, No. 14 Anders Jarryd of Sweden and No. 15 Pat Cash of Australia.

Buffaloes edged, 40-33

DEKALB, Ill. (AP) — Quarterback Darryl Taylor threw four touchdown passes, including a 69-yard, game-winning bomb with 10 seconds left, to lead Northern Illinois to a 40-33 non-conference football victory Saturday over West Texas State.

Taylor hit Carl Aikens for the winning score after the two had connected on a 67-yard scoring play earlier in the contest.

West Texas State pulled ahead 33-32 with 25 seconds left on a 1-yard run by quarterback Tod Mayfield. Mayfield also threw for one touchdown and rushed for two more. The Buffaloes' other points came on a 53-yard field goal by Dennis Steinbock and a safety.

Taylor completed 12 of 23 passes for 238 yards in the game, while Aikens had four receptions for 158 yards. Taylor's other touchdown passes went to Curt Partridge and Steve Quinlan.

The Huskies also scored on a 6-yard touchdown run by Joel Kinkade, and a 25-yard field goal by Darren Monnett.

The game was the season opener for both teams.

Oiler rookie surprise starter in first game

HOUSTON (AP) — He could have been studying for a career in medicine this fall but instead he is preparing to do surgery on National Football League secondaries as a wide receiver for the Houston Oilers.

It's all a surprise to rookie sixth-round draft choice Eric Mullins of Stanford, who will begin his pro football career with the Houston Oilers Sunday against the defending Super Bowl champion Los Angeles Raiders in the Astrodome.

Kickoff is at 3 p.m. CDT.

Mullins, who was not a starter his senior year at Stanford and caught only 16 passes, nonetheless was one of the major surprises of the Oiler preseason when he was the team's second leading receiver.

"In a way, it's really surprising," Mullins said. "You work hard but you don't always get your shot. But here, I had a lot of help. I expected a lot of competition but I got help right down the line from all the veterans."

Mullins averaged 20.5 yards on 12 catches in the preseason including a 61-yard touchdown bomb from quarterback Warren Moon that helped earn him a place on one of the most competitive positions on the team.

Mullins' performance helped the Oiler staff decide to trade veteran wide receiver Butch Johnson to the Denver Broncos.

The Oilers will be trying to break out of a losing trend that has resulted in only three victories in two seasons.

"I see a lot of good things here," Mullins said. "We've got a great coaching staff and all the players seem to get along. I just see a great future."

Mullins said he had been accepted to medical school at the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston and would have started classes had he been cut by the Oilers.

Warren Moon will get his first NFL regular season start for the Oilers after leading the Edmonton Eskimos to five Grey Cup titles in the Canadian Football League.

The Raiders begin defense of their second Super Bowl title in three years with quarterback Jim Plunkett at the helm.

New look for Dallas

Cowboys open against Rams

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The new-look Dallas Cowboys, with a host of young players on their roster and a quarterback starting for the first time, will attempt to win their 18th National Football League season-opening game in the past 20 years Monday night when they face the Los Angeles Rams.

The nationally televised (ABC) game marks the beginning of the 15th year of Monday Night Football.

The Cowboys, who have a 10-0 record in NFL season-openers on the road, will be trying to snap a three-game losing streak in games that count. They were beaten by Washington and San Francisco in the final two regular-season games of 1983, then lost 24-17 to the Rams in the National Football Conference wild-card playoff game.

The Cowboys were 3-1 in the preseason while the Rams were 2-2.

against the Rams, who have made it into the playoffs nine times in the past 11 years.

Randy White should help shore up a defense that had only three quarterback sacks in four preseason games.

"He is one of the premier players in the NFL, there's no doubt about it," Los Angeles Coach John Robinson said when asked about Randy White. "He changes their defense and the way you attack them."

"If he'd like to take one more week off, I'd be glad to buy him a round-trip ticket to Tahiti, returning Sept. 4."

When asked about the Dallas quarterback situation, Robinson said, "I don't think it's as important to us as it is to them. They're both excellent quarterbacks."

Two of the NFL's top running backs will be in action — Tony Dorsett of Dallas, who gained 1,321 yards last season, and Eric Dickerson of Los Angeles, who picked up 1,808 yards in a league-record 390 carries as a rookie a year ago.

"There's no love lost between us," Dickerson said when asked about the Cowboys. "We're ready and we'll be especially ready for the Cowboys."

Collegians to meet in amateur finals

EDMOND, Okla. (AP) — Collegians Scott Verplank of Oklahoma State and Sam Randolph of Southern California won their semifinal matches Saturday and will meet Sunday in the 36-hole championship of the U.S. Amateur golf tournament.

Verplank sizzled through the front nine in 33 to go 4-up on Randy Sonnier but had to hold off the 35-year-old Houston airline pilot down the stretch, 1 up.

Verplank needed to nail a six-foot putt on the 18th hole after Sonnier missed a 10-footer that would have sent the match to extra holes at the windy Oak Tree Golf Club.

"There's a lot of people who would have given up after nine holes, but Randy's not that kind of guy," Verplank said. "He played a great back nine ... It got tight there."

Verplank, who says he has taken on the 7,015-yard, par-71 layout 20 to 30 times, called his front nine "the best nine holes I've ever played out here."

Verplank won the first three holes and wound up winning eight to Sonnier's seven. The players halved three holes.

The U.S. Golf Association has rated Oak Tree the toughest course in the country, and Verplank said wind gusting at more than 20 mph Saturday "makes the course ... a lot tougher."

Randolph won seven of the first nine holes as Jerry Haas of Belleville, Ill., of Wake Forest ballooned to 45 at the turn. Randolph took the semifinal round, 7 and 5, for the biggest victory margin in the tournament.

Verplank and Randolph are survivors from the 282 golfers who played in the 36 holes of qualifying and the 64 golfers who began match play Thursday.

"I just took it day by day and I didn't expect anything great. I'm happy to be here," said Randolph, a 20-year-old junior whose father is a club pro at Santa Barbara, Calif.

Four tie for lead

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Vicki Fergon took advantage of 20-mph winds Saturday to notch an eagle and join four other tour veterans posting 4-under-par 68s for the first-round lead in the $150,000 LPGA Rail Charity Classic.

Fergon joined Becky Pearson, Vicki Alvarez, Therese Hession and Cindy Hill for the lead in the 54-hole tournament. Jane Crafter was one shot back and 12 other players were bunched at 70.

Fergon eagled the par-5 sixth hole on the strength of a wind-aided 280-yard drive. She left her approach shot 15 feet from the hole and sank the putt.

"The wind was worse than the heat," Pearson said of temperatures that neared 100 degrees. "There was a tricky crosswind out there and it was hard to read."

Miller started in spectacular fashion but also needed the 20-foot birdie putt he sank on No. 18 to give himself some breathing room.

Earlier in the round, he started off with a bogey-5 on the par-4, 388-yard first hole, followed with birdies on Nos. 3, 6, 7, 8 and 10 before two bogeys cost him out of the lead.

Pena hits two home runs as Pirates defeat Reds, 6-2

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

In a league dominated by Johnny Bench and later by Gary Carter, Tony Pena has labored in obscurity to a certain extent, despite his reputation as an outstanding defensive catcher with a lightning-quick throw to second base.

Add to that a .301 lifetime batting average entering this season and it doesn't take much to see that the Pittsburgh Pirates have genuine star in their midst. And then, as if to offer another page from his resume, Pena surprises people with his power.

Take Friday night as an example. Pena slammed his 11th and 12th homers of the season and drove in six runs to supply all the offense for Pittsburgh in a 6-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

"I tell myself I don't want to hit a home run," the 27-year-old native of the Dominican Republic said in explaining his general approach to hitting. line drive line drive line drive

Ironically, Pena's two-homer night was the third of his career, which has spanned just three full seasons during which he has belted a career total of 40.

"I just try to swing hard," Pena said of the three-run shots he hit off Cincinnati's Joe Price.

Pena's homers were more than enough for John Candelaria, 12-10, who pitched seven innings before giving way to Don Robinson for his eighth save.

Elsewhere in the NL, New York and San Diego split a double-header, the Padres winning the opener 5-1 and the Mets taking the nightcap 4-0. Atlanta edged Chicago 3-2. San Francisco shaved Philadelphia 6-5; Montreal whipped Los Angeles 5-2, and St. Louis took Houston 7-5.

Padres 5-0, Mets 1-4
Mookie Wilson dropped pinch hitter Kurt Bevacqua's eighth-inning fly ball, giving San Diego two unearned runs in a 5-1 victory over New York in the opener.

The Mets won in the nightcap 4-0 on a combined shutout by Bruce Berenyi and Jesse Orosco.

Luis Salazar had two hits and three RBI as Ed Whitson, 13-7, and Craig Lefferts combined for an eight-hitter in the first game. Sid Fernandez, 4-3, who allowed just one hit through the first seven innings, when he faced only 21 batters, was the loser.

In the second game, Hubie Brooks' 14th home run and Wilson's two-run double highlighted a three-run seventh inning and Berenyi, 10-13, pitched seven shutouts innings. The victory, combined with Chicago's loss to Atlanta, moved the Mets to within 5½ games of the Cubs in the NL East.

"This team has character," said Manager Dave Johnson. "We've bounced back all season and I promise it's going to be a race to the end."

Expos 5, Dodgers 2
Dan Schatzeder, 7-5, limited Los Angeles to three hits over eight innings and Miguel Dilone's run-scoring single started a three-run third inning as Montreal handed the Dodgers to their sixth straight loss.

Dodger starter Orel Hershiser, 9-8, was victimized by a pair of two-base errors on throws by third baseman Candy Maldonado.

Bosox building for next year

By JONATHAN VITTI
Associated Press Writer
This year, it looks like a case of too little, too late for the Boston Red Sox. Next year, however, they hope to be too much.

"We're building for next year," Dwight Evans said after his second homer of the game, a three-run clout, gave the Sox an 8-7 victory over the Cleveland Indians. "We want to finish on a strong, positive note. We feel we can win, because we have some good young pitchers and one of the best lineups in baseball."

The Red Sox' total of 149 homers impresses as second-best in the league behind the Tigers, runaway leaders in the American League East. It's already seven more than they hit all last year.

Boston also is second in the league in runs scored.

"We've got that kind of lineup. We've got some power — period," said Evans, who ran his personal total to 26 homers this year.

One of their good young pitchers, Roger Clemens, caused the Red Sox and himself some worry Friday.

The rookie right-hander, who had won his last six decisions, struck out seven in the first 3 2-3 innings, allowing only one hit, but left the game with soreness in his pitching elbow in the fourth.

"The elbow started to tighten up," the 22-year-old Clemens said. "I had been throwing the ball great. When Ralph (Houk) came out to the mound, I told him I felt great, but that I was just a little tight."

"But I threw two more pitches and it was throbbing some. We're going to have it X-rayed to make sure. It kind of scares me because nothing like this has ever happened before."

In the league's other games, Toronto blanked Minnesota 7-0. Texas edged Milwaukee 7-6. Oakland beat Detroit by the same score but in 13 innings. Baltimore rocked Seattle 11-7. Kansas City topped Chicago 3-1 and California defeated New York 4-3.

Bob Stanley pitched the last two innings to raise his record to 8-10 despite yielding George Vukovich's tie-breaking three-run homer in the eighth inning.

The Red Sox took a 4-0 lead against Roy Smith with a pair of two-run homers, Evans' in the first inning and Rich Gedman's 20th in the second.

Mark Clear relieved Clemens in the fifth and, after allowing the Indians to load the bases, walked Vukovich, Chris Bando and Tony Bernazard to make the score 4-3.

The Indians tied the score in the fifth on Thornton's 30th home run, a solo shot off Steve Crawford.

Reliever Ernie Camacho, 4-9, retired the first batter in the ninth before yielding three singles and Evans' blast.

Blue Jays 7, Twins 0
Rance Mulliniks and George Bell belted home runs in support of Dave Stieb's four-hit shutout.

Stieb, 14-5, who struck out 11 in beating the Twins 2-1 last Sunday, went the distance for the ninth time this season. He struck out 10 and walked two.

Stieb has bad news for batters. "Even after 222 innings, I feel stronger now than I ever have in the past," said Stieb, who lowered his league-leading earned run average to 2.34. "Without a doubt, this is the greatest I've ever felt this late in a season."

Rangers 7, Brewers 6
Buddy Bell's grand slam with two outs in the ninth inning capped a six-run rally. Bell's seventh homer came off reliever Pete Ladd, 4-9. The four runs were unearned.

The Brewers appeared to have won when Gary Ward grounded to shortstop with two outs in the ninth.

but Robin Yount bobbled the ball for an error, loading the bases for Bell.

Bill Schroeder hit his 13th homer of the season, his sixth in as many games, fourth in seven at-bats and fourth in nine at-bats against the Rangers this season.

A's 7, Tigers 6
Dave Rozema's wild pitch enabled Mike Davis to score from third base with the winning run in the 13th.

The Tigers went ahead 4-1 with two runs in the fourth but the A's came back with four of their own a half-inning later. Alan Trammell's 13th homer tied it 5-5 in the fifth.

Lance Parrish drew a bases-loaded walk with two outs in the ninth to break a 5-5 tie, but Oakland tied it in the bottom of the inning as Rickey Henderson tripled and scored on Carney Lansford's sacrifice fly.

Orioles 11, Mariners 7
Cal Ripken hit two of Baltimore's four home runs and snapped a seventh-inning tie with a single Friday night for the Orioles.

John Lowenstein had a two-run shot in the fourth and Ken Singleton a three-run homer in the ninth. Ripken and Eddie Murray each had four hits in the game.

The Orioles survived a fifth-inning grand slam by Jim Presley.

Royals 3, White Sox 1
Willie Wilson doubled and scored on Dane Iorg's grounder in the first, then tripled and scored on Iorg's sacrifice fly in the seventh. Iorg's fly was only of medium depth, but Wilson tagged anyway on center fielder Rudy Law.

Thomas hammers out decision

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Pinklon Thomas, a former heroin addict, is the World Boxing Council heavyweight champion. Now, he wants more.

"I consider Larry Holmes the true champion," Thomas said after earning the WBC title by winning a majority 12-round decision over Tim Witherspoon at the Riviera Hotel. "I think I should have my opportunity to fight for unification so the whole world can recognize me as champion."

Holmes and World Boxing Association champion Gerrie Coetzee were among those in the audience Friday night. The two are scheduled to fight in November, although a contract hasn't been signed.

"I thought I beat Gerrie Coetzee," said Thomas, who fought to a draw with the South African in January 1983, before Coetzee won the WBA title. "Larry Holmes or Gerrie Coetzee, that's who I want."

Witherspoon's reign as champion lasted only one fight. He outpointed Greg Page for the title last March, after Holmes had relinquished the crown in a dispute with promoter Don King and the WBC.

Thomas, who weighed 216 pounds, was declared the winner by judge Duane Ford, who scored the bout 116-112, and judge Dalby Shirley, who had it 115-112. Judge Hal Miller scored it a 114-114 draw. The AP scored it 115-112 for Thomas.

It would have been a split decision rather than a majority decision had referee Richard Steele not taken a point away from Witherspoon, who scaled 217 pounds, for back-handing in the fifth round. Witherspoon had been warned twice previously.

The draw with Coetzee is the only blemish on Thomas' record. Thomas, who began taking heroin at age 12 and was addicted for several years, now has a 25-0-1 record.

There were no knockdowns and neither fighter appeared to be in serious trouble at any time.

"I had a short amateur career. I'm still learning," said the 26-year-old Thomas, who earned $100,000 Friday night. "None of them are easy but this fight wasn't as tough as some I've had. I give Tim credit, he's a tough fighter."

Thomas, who is from Philadelphia, did most of his damage with a devastating jab.

"It's my bread and butter," he said. "My jab was working for me. I use what's working."

Witherspoon, also 26 and also from Philadelphia, accused Thomas of thumbing him continually throughout the bout.

"I was thumbing in almost every round, more than several times," said Witherspoon, who earned $400,000 plus $50,000 in training expenses. "I outjabbed him. I think I won the majority of the rounds. But he's a good fighter."

"I'm happy and there's no problem. I'm going to come back because I'm a leader."

Thomas denied the thumbing charge, saying, "I did my job. I'm not going to say nothing bad about the guy ... he back-handed me. I'm not accusing him of fighting dirty. He fought a good fight. I just won the fight."

McClenahan is new Pampa Dolphins coach

Bob McClenahan, new Pampa Dolphins' swim coach, has an intense interest in seeing the swimming program grow here. He's a former championship swimmer himself and knows the value of swimming, not only as good exercise, but as a form of self-discipline.

"It's not only good physical training, but good mental training," said McClenahan, a chemical engineer at Celanese. "It's hard sometimes to get out there and practice when there's nothing to look at but water."

McClenahan is a Los Alamos, N.M. native and swam on the high school team there and later at New Mexico State where he was team captain for two years. He also advanced to the AAU and NCAA championship finals.

"My background in swimming has helped in stressful situations," McClenahan said. "It's taught me to work out things on my own instead of relying on other people."

McClenahan wants to pass on this self-reliance to his pupils. "We're going to have fun, but we're going to learn things," McClenahan said.

McClenahan was an assistant coach at New Mexico State after graduation and later taught age-group swimming in his home town for several years.

"Los Alamos is a city where swimming is big and it probably has one of the best age-group programs in the state," McClenahan said. "I would like to see a good program like that developed in Pampa, but it needs to start at the grass roots level and there needs to be community interest. I would like to see swimming incorporated into the physical education program at school. It's not only good exercise, but one of the youngsters could learn enough to save a life someday."

McClenahan has been working with several young swimmers for the past two weeks, although official tryouts won't get started until Sept. 5.

"We'll have workouts for eight days and divide all the swimmers into A, B and novice divisions," McClenahan said. "If I feel a youngster can fit into the program, he or she will be invited to join the club. Entry into the club is free."

A youngster must be at six years old to join the Dolphins and he can stay a club member until he turns 19.

Rule changes expected to improve football

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
DALLAS (AP) — Texas college and high school football will be played by some new rules this fall, and the legislation should improve the game.

If there is a yawn-provoking play in the college game now, it's the kickoff. Placekickers have become so prolific, the kickoff normally is a good time to get a hot dog because the odds are good there won't be a return. That may change.

Some help also has arrived on a chicken play called "Go deep and try to get a defensive back to bump you." It's a play that didn't belong in football and now it's gone.

Penalties for defensive interference no longer will be marked off from the spot of the foul. Should an infraction occur more than 15 yards from the line of scrimmage, a penalty of 15 yards is marked off from the spot the ball was snapped.

The rule will cut out desperation "Hail Mary" passes thrown into an opponent's end zone in the hopes of getting a cheapie first-and-goal pass interference call.

Offensive pass interference remains a 15-yard penalty from the spot of the foul, plus loss of down.

And now the return might be back in kickoffs.

Kickoffs that travel through the end zone untouched will be brought out to the 30-yard line instead of the 20. If a player fields a kickoff, but downs it in the end zone, the ball will be returned to the 20.

Surveys showed that only 10 percent of kickoffs were returned during the 1983 season.

The college and high school kickers boot the ball from the 40-yard line on kickoffs, and some coaches don't like it.

"It's a bad rule that penalizes good kickers," says Texas A&M's Jackie Sherrill.

Sherrill has a great kicker in Alan Smith and has said he might take a delay of game penalty to put the ball on the 35 for Smith to kick.

Another rule change involves kick-catching interference. The 1983 rule, which established a 2-yard buffer zone, remains in effect. But contact inside the buffer zone could result in a 15-yard penalty instead of a 5-yarder. That's up to the officials' judgment.

The legal clipping zone also has been reduced to cut down on the crackback blocks by players outside the 6-yard zone beyond the offensive line. In deep punt formation, there will be no blocking below the waist or chop blocks allowed by both the kicking and receiving teams.

And then there are other little nitpicky rules. Perhaps you've seen a running back grab the face mask of a defender. Such a stiff arm now will cost the runner 15 big ones.

All unsportsmanlike conduct fouls will be treated as dead ball fouls and no longer can offset each other or be canceled out.

Another change involves "deceptive substitution" on onside kicks.

A coach would send a player onto the field at a strategic location at the last second, catching the opposition by surprise. Now if a player does that, he can't touch the ball or his team will be penalized 5 yards.

Now let the kickoffs begin! And don't kick the darn things through the end zone.

Aggies prevail, 20-17

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas A&M's Kevin Murray completed two first-half touchdown passes and Alan Smith kicked a 27-yard fourth quarter field goal to brunt a Texas-El Paso comeback and lead the Aggies to a 20-17 season opening victory Saturday.

But the Aggies still had to survive a late scoring attempt by the surprising Miners. Hugo Castellanos, who had kicked three earlier field goals, bounced a 36-yard attempt off the goal posts that would have tied the game with 1:39 to play.

The Aggies took a 17-6 lead early in the third quarter on Smith's 24-yard field goal before the Miners, 2-10 last season charged back aided by a series of A&M turnovers.

Texas-El Paso's Castellanos kicked his third field goal, a 32-yarder, following a fumble recovery by Robert Murray. Moments later, Murray threw an interception to Luther Johnson, setting up a 19-yard touchdown pass from Sammy Garza to Larry Linne.

Garza then went to Linne again for a two-point conversion and a 17-17 tie with 2:15 to go in the third quarter.

Darrell Smith's fumble recovery at the Aggie 40 preceded Smith's game-winning field goal with 10:20 left in the game.

Murray's two first half passes, a seven-yarder to halfback Rod Bernstine in the first quarter and an eight-yarder to Jeff Nelson in the second quarter, lifted the Aggies to a 14-6 lead at the end of the sluggish first half.

The Miners, 2-10 last season, drove to a 42-yard field goal by Castellanos on the first drive of the game, keyed by the passing of quarterback Sammy Garza.

Garza hit pass completions of 11, 17 and 16 yards to set up the score.

Cheerleaders

Story by Cathy Spaulding

Pampa Photos by Ed Copeland

but the spirit remains the same

Ready! OKAY!
It's gametime again and while the quarterback scores the touchdowns and the linebacker executes spectacular defense tackles, the real gridiron entertainers are the gutsy girls at the sideline flinging their pom poms into the air, cautiously mounting pyramids and cheerfully drawing enthusiastic support from the fans.

The wardrobe of the 1984 cheerleaders may be more extensive than those of their sweated predecessors; the routines more complex than the old leaps and cartwheels and the boogie of the band more forceful than the megaphones. But any smiling spirit leader will tell you that the boosting of school spirit will always be the Number One goal.

Before the sparsely dressed Dallas Cowboy cheerleaders brought steam to the sidelines, the cheerleader was seen as a jumping, spirited co-ed with a white letter sweater and blossoming pom poms.

But until about 1961, the Pampa High School cheering squad had its share of boys, also.

Pampa resident Mabel Torvie, who sponsored the PHS cheerleaders for nearly 15 years from the end of World War II to the early 1960s, remembers the boys who supported the squad.

"We had some mighty fine boy cheerleaders," Torvie said observing that the boys helped the squad with pyramids — squad members piling onto each other — or flips or gymnastics.

Leslie Howard, an employee benefit's manager at Ingersoll-Rand, was one of the male cheerleaders in 1957. He remembers it being a lot of fun and a lot of work.

"There was a lot of practice involved, people don't realize that," he said.

According to Howard, the boys and the girls shared responsibilities.

"The boys had all the lifting and supporting parts," he added. "But we weren't nearly as fancy as they are now — no back flips or anything. Some of the kids do a super job."

Despite the lack of boys on contemporary Pampa squads, Howard said they're "probably better than we used to be."

Howard doesn't know why the appeal of cheerleading faded with the boys.

"I don't know why except the cost involved with different housing," he said.

"The boys got jobs or were involved in sports," Torvie said. "Cars became more available after the war and the boys got more interested in them."

When Torvie was sponsor Pampa was part of a large district which went from Amarillo down through Lubbock to Midland-Odessa and east to San Angelo and Abilene.

"Our district was so big and we were the most remote 4A school," Torvie said. "And we always went to summer camp to catch up on the latest trends and fashions."

"The uniforms and yells came and went with the times," she said. "Some were really long, other times they were short.

Mabel Torvie retired as a teacher and cheerleader sponsor in the early 1960s. While the memories are fond and vivid, she admits she has not been to a game in several years.

By 1964, the year the Edmondson twins were seniors, cheerleading was a female-dominated activity.

To her knowledge, Jerri (Edmondson) Owens is the only member of the five-girl 1964 cheering squad who still lives in Pampa. And she still cheers the Harvesters, although she is in the stands, not the sidelines.

She said that cheerleading 20 years ago and cheerleading today are "basically the same."

"I think we had a little advantage because we weren't quite as limited during the day," she remembered. "We could do pep rallies during school. Today it has to be before or after school."

"But we didn't do a whole lot of gymnastics," she said.

the cheerleaders for the White Deer Bucks, whose five-costume wardrobe runs between $450 and $500. The costumes were paid through fund-raising, school allocations and by the girls themselves.

Miami cheerleaders have a total of seven uniforms. But, said head cheerleader Gerri Anderson, the squad will be reducing their wardrobe over the next few years.

White Deer cheerleader sponsor Tammy Bennett notes that the large expenditure is "not the norm."

"We spent more this year," she said, adding that they will probably spend less next year. She said she knows Perryton school spent more per girl for their squad while Groom and Pampa spent less.

Included in their wardrobe are three skirts, including the expected pleated one, a white sleeveless top, a short-sleeve sweater, squad shoes with blue and white pom poms, warm-up pants

The more formal and fancy routines were reserved for the pep rallies.

"We did have some pom pom routines, but that was during the pep rallies," she said, adding that their halftimes were spent trading soda pop with the opposing team's cheerleaders.

"Back then about the only way for a girl can participate in athletics, was to cheer for the boys," she joked.

There was a PHS girl's volleyball team in 1964.

"It was more than just cheering and pep rallies," she added. Cheerleaders decorated the school and goal posts before the games. They were also among the top fund-raisers in the school.

"And even then, we got to charter a big bus," she added.

The squad cheered for the football team and the basketball team. And they dressed accordingly.

"We only had two uniforms," she remembered. "One for football. One for basketball."

The basketball uniform was a pleated skirt, a shirt and a green vest. The pleated skirt and white sweater — decked with a bold capital "P" and a cloth megaphone — was worn for football games, even during hot early September games.

The wardrobes for the 1984 cheerleading squad is more extensive and expensive. Just ask and jackets. They also have blue and white striped practice short suits that they wore when they presented a routine at a recent Fourth of July celebration in Panhandle.

At the celebration, the squad performed a light jazz dance number on stage in front of the Carson County courthouse. They had no pulsating pom poms, no megaphones.

The squad also performs light gymnastic stunts that may not upstage Olympic gold medalist Mary Lou Retton, but they are more intricate than the cartwheels and tosses of past squads. They've also worked up formations that outdo last year's pyramids.

"Just cheering is about one-fourth of what we do," said sophomore Staci Thompson.

"Maybe a half," Bennett said. "We have cheerleading camp and raise money for uniforms."

"But the sideline cheering is not as much as people think," she said, adding that pep rallies are also part of their activities.

Bennet said they do not often do dance numbers like they did this summer in Panhandle.

And all this takes practice. Head cheerleader Tammy Clay said the squad practices five days a week.

Such practice, according to the White Deer Senior, earned them

Brides need no-knead roll

DEAR CECILY: I've never baked with yeast and want to do so. Before I try making a loaf of bread for which the dough has to be kneaded, I'd like to bake some no-knead rolls. My mother once had a booklet that gave easy ways to bake these, but she mislaid it. Have you a recipe for such rolls? — BRIDE.

DEAR BRIDE: I suggest you try the following recipe for Oatmeal Walnut Yeast Rolls and see how you make out. No kneading is necessary and neither is shaping because the batter is dropped into muffin-pan cups. — C.B.—

OATMEAL WALNUT YEAST ROLLS

- ¾ cup boiling water
- 5 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 envelope dry yeast
- ½ cup warm water (110 to 115 degrees)
- 2½ to 3 cups unbleached all-purpose flour
- 1 cup quick-cooking or regular oats
- 1 large egg

½ cup chopped (medium-fine) walnuts

In a large bowl stir together boiling water, 4 tablespoons of the butter, sugar and salt until the butter melts; cool to lukewarm (95 degrees).

In a 1-cup measure, sprinkle yeast over the warm water; stir to dissolve; add to the butter mixture with 2 cups of the flour, oats, egg and walnuts; with a wooden spoon, mix well. Stir in enough of the remaining flour to make a stiff batter. Cover and let rise in a warm place (about 80 degrees) until doubled in size — 1 to 1½ hours.

Generously butter 18 muffin-pan cups (each 2½ inches across the top and 1 inch deep). Stir down batter; spoon into muffin cups, filling them two-thirds full. Let rise, uncovered, in a warm place (about 80 degrees) until nearly double in size — 20 to 25 minutes.

Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 18 to 20 minutes. Melt remaining 1 tablespoon butter and brush over hot rolls. Remove to wire rack. Good served warm or reheated. Makes 18.

Desk & Derrick honors local leaders

BEST BOSS — Vernon Stowers of Stowers Oil and Gas is presented Desk & Derrick Boss of the Year Award by employees Sherilan Hopkins and Jeanne Townson and, far right, D&D vice president Connie Ball.

Members of the Pampa Desk & Derrick Club honored their Number One members and bosses and learned how to stay Number One this week at their annual Industrial Appreciation Dinner.

Featured speaker for the banquet, held Tuesday at the Pampa Country Club was Bob "Diggs" Brown, retired vice president of sales at Haliburton Services. He spoke on "In the Run for the Roses, a Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Finish Line," or "It's Tough Being No. 1." His speech dealt with the history of the petroleum industry and what it must do to remain what he said was the top energy related industry in the world.

The club also honored 1984 ADDC Tally Committee Chairman Martha Sublett as their Outstanding Member of the Year. An assistant treasurer at Leonard Hudson Drilling Co. Inc., she has been a member of Desk & Derrick for 10 1/2 years.

Upon presenting Sublett with her plaque, vice president Connie Ball noted the Outstanding Member's contributions to the club. Among these are her service as 1980 Region V Director and 1983 treasurer of the Association of Desk and Derrick Clubs. She was the only Pampa D&D member to serve as an officer on the Board of Directors for the ADDC. She has been a delegate, alternate, candidate, committee chairman or regional representative in all 10 ADDC conventions.

She was Pampa Desk & Derrick president in 1975.

Club members also honored Vernon Stowers of Stowers Oil and Gas as Boss of the Year. He was nominated Boss of the Year by employees Sherilan Hopkins, Jeanne Townson and Kim Harkrader.

Stowers moved to Pampa in 1956 as a logging engineer for Welx. He formed Panhandle Perforators in 1960 and formed Stowers Oil and Gas in 1963.

His secretaries praised Stowers as "expecting the best every employee has to offer and gives the same in return."

"He is always ready to give a pat on the back or a compliment when it is deserved," one employee notes. "He is neither stuffy nor reserved with his employees and is always ready to share a joke or a story. The one thing that is most pleasant to all of us is his attitude of optimism. He can brighten your spirits by just a simple 'good morning' or a smile. He is definitely not negative or prone to waste time after his mind is made up."

Speaker Brown used humorous cartoon slides and graphs to boost his speech on the past and future of the American petroleum industry, which he said was Number 1 in the energy field.

Nuclear power has its critics about safety, he said. Solar, wind and other "exotic" energy sources are too expensive, as is hydro-electric energy and coal is ridden with acid rain and strikes, he said.

"From an energy standpoint, we are Number One," he said. "The public loves a winner, but roots for the underdog."

Brown traced the history of the petroleum industry from its founding in Titusville, Pa. in the mid-1800s through the oil strikes in Texas in the early 20th Century to the rise of Arab oil and the oil embargo of 1973.

He admitted that in the past 10 years, oilmen have made unrealistic projections.

Today, however, the oil industry is more "consumer oriented."

SPEAKING AID — Retired Haliburton sales vice president Bob "Diggs" Brown holds a slide projector controlling device as he speaks at the Desk & Derrick Industry Appreciation Dinner.

The evaluation and selection of the applicants for scholarship awards is the responsibility of a scholarship committee made up of representatives from colleges and universities in four geographic areas. Cabot exercises no control over the selection.

Peeking at Pampa

Once again the school bells rang to set up priorities and to make demands on the daily routines of families across town. Drums rolled as band members began long and strict marches.

Let's take a peek at what else took place last week.

Deacons, staff members, and their families of Central Baptist Church had a fish fry, covered-dish supper at the Hal Brown residence on the Hay Hook Ranch. Joe Ring once again shared fruits of several fishing trips with the group.

Joe, his wife Elva and I. B. (Mrs. Rev. Norman) Rushing cooked the fish to perfection. Sharing a fish catch with 50 people is generosity at its purest.

Congratulations to Brian Hogan and Jeff Langen, who won first and second honors at the recent Junior Golf Tournament.

Construction of Kathy and Dan Hopkins' new home moves right along. Ground will be broken soon in the next block at the home site chosen by Janice and Lee Porter. Dan and Janice are brother and sister.

BEST WISHES to Katy and Dr. Julian Key, who will be enjoying a well-earned retirement of fun, sun, golf and relaxation after a 40-year tenure in Pampa. They have thoughts of retiring to Phoenix, Ariz. They will be missed by their many friends here.

Georgia (Mrs. Doug) Coon's deep tan gave extra finish to the casual look of her white shorts and halter top at a local swimming pool on a recent Sunday afternoon.

And that brings us to Doug, Behrman's and the 50th anniversary party. Fifty years ago, Leah and the late Bunny Behrman, still loved by all who have known them, came to Pampa as newlyweds to open a quality ladies' ready-to-wear store where Behrman's stands today.

Doug Coon, owner and operator of the store for several years, has planned a big-city type celebration to cover several days - champagne reception honoring Leah, a style show of designer fashions, cocktails and dancing next Saturday evening, followed by several in-store fashion shows the following week.

Doug always does everything to perfection.

CONGRATULATIONS to Shirley (Mrs. Rex) Waller, who recently received an associate degree in credit union management from the University of Houston, where she spent the summer. A lot of study and hard work went into her degree. Shirley is manager of the Pampa Teachers Federal Credit Union.

Margaret and Ed Sweet, totally excited, went all the way to Vera Cruz to attend Cassandra's wedding, no doubt of storybook beauty.

Cassandra's avid interest in the Spanish language eventually led her to be employed by an import-export agency of the Mexican government in Houston, where she met her fiancé, by now her husband.

Ed speaks Spanish fluently, while Margaret speaks pure, beautiful and soft Mississippian! Surely there will be pictures to show!

Dr. John Kendall, head football coach at Pampa High School, spoke to the Rotary Club on his favorite subject: football at PHS.

"WELCOME ABOARD!" to Norma Young of Indiana. She is the new swimming coach and girls' PE instructor at PHS.

And to Mary Ann Blue and her three-year-old daughter of Guyton, Okla. Mary Ann is the new PE teacher at Stephen F.

Austin Elementary. Cara Tidwell Stone, a native Pampa, returned to teach at Lamar Elementary. She's welcomed by family and friends.

Cynthia (Mrs. Bill) West returned to SFA after an absence devoted to fulltime motherhood. For more "Austin" in the family, her son Troy and Danny Sebastian will be roommates at the University of Texas at Austin.

Parrish Potts and Danny Boddy will be freshmen at Texas Christian University in Fort Worth.

Roady Spoonmore was in town last week before returning to Dallas, where he will be a senior dental student.

Birthday wishes 'tho belated to Chuck White, Charles Langen and Sarah Fields, daughter of Carol and Ken. Sarah celebrated her fourth birthday. And to Kimberly Cory and her grandmother Grace Cory, who share a birthday.

Congratulations to Cris and Danny Brown on the birth of a baby boy born a few days before his brother Michael's second birthday.

WHILE SPENDING a wonderful week in New York City, Phyllis and Jack Curtin, Ann and Benny Kirksey took in four Broadway shows. Phyllis and Ann would like to have persuaded the boys to stay a little longer.

Becky and Greg Crawford spent a week visiting family and friends in the Lamar, Colo., area, their former home.

Kathryn and Dudley Steele report a wonderful Alaskan cruise with as much excitement as if it were their first cruise. They are seasoned world travelers, you know! Congratulations on their 50th anniversary!

Lolly Mae and Dr. Steve Davis and their five children flew to Casumel, where they had fun swimming, snorkeling, deep-sea fishing and resting.

Vicky and Fred Venal and Vicky's parents attended the Olympics. It was the perfect vacation for Fred, a well-disciplined runner who spends his lunch hours running.

Christy, Rev. Ron McCrary and Jeffrey spent their vacation on a dude ranch at Durango, Colo. A report says Christy even enjoyed horseback riding.

Members of St. Matthew's had morning worship service and an all-church picnic last Sunday at Hobart Street Park.

If you must drive on the highways over the holiday weekend, do drive carefully!

Better yet, attend Chautauqua activities at Central Park tomorrow - and Meet me back here next Sunday!

The Right Stuff in the right places

By ERMA BOMBECK
The Olympics have been over for three weeks now. Los Angeles freeways are back to gridlock. Bilingual cab drivers are once again back to their first language — Yugoslavian. And the promises I made to myself as I sat there in front of my TV set for 180 hours, watching those young, taut, muscular bodies being pushed to the maximum, have gone to the big septic tank in the sky. I made a resolution during those two weeks that my entire life was going to change. I was going to challenge my body to do things it never thought possible. Discipline was going to become a way of life. Pain would make me stronger and strengthen my character. I made a schedule.

First, I was going to take all my hand-washables that I had stashed away for the last eight years (and which equal my body weight) and eventually build up to lifting them over my head and holding them there for 30 seconds.

Then I was going to run 26 miles to the shopping center each day, stripped down to a pair of satin shorts, a sleeveless T-shirt and two major charge cards.

I set goals for myself. I knew through conscientious exercise and perseverance I could park in a five-minute unloading zone, sprint 400 yards to a White Sale, get four matching peracles and be back in the car before I got ticketed.

I geared the entire house toward fitness. In each door frame I put two hanging rings so that every time I went through, I could hang in (an iron cross). The clothes hamper had a hoop over it. I kept a stack of the kids' favorite albums and each day I planned to step inside of a circle, spin around until I nearly screwed my body into the ground and throw the album for as many yards as I could toss it.

The fact that none of this has worked out for me is not important. What is crucial here is that up until now I could never figure out why there were four years between each Olympiad. Naive little fool that I am, I thought it took the host country that long to build all the facilities needed for the events.

No, no. It takes four years to find a swim team that has the courage to get into a bathing suit that has legs that go all the way up to the armpits.

How easy do you think it is to unearth six girls who can balance themselves on a 4-inch bar and hold in their stomachs at the same time. Or who can guide a horse across an 8-foot bar without ripping their pants.

I'm talking raw courage here. Oh, sure, a lot of us have the right stuff. It's just in the wrong places.

Limit sodium sensibly

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Does shellfish such as shrimp, stone crabs or clams affect someone with high blood pressure? Some medics claim shellfish is high in sodium.

DEAR READER — While many people who have high blood pressure do better with sodium restriction, some authorities feel that, to do any good, the restriction in most cases has to be so severe that it is counterproductive. But a sensible limitation of sodium is probably wise.

Many shellfish do contain more sodium than beef, chicken or fish. That doesn't mean you can't use them. Just use them in moderation, and when you use shellfish, use foods with it that are relatively low in sodium.

To illustrate the relative values, shrimp contains about 140 mg. of sodium per 100 grams (3-and-a-half ounces), soft clams about 36 mg., hard clams 205 mg. Those are values for the meat only. But canned crab contains nearly 1,000 mg. Lobster contains about 200 mg. of sodium per 100 grams.

A similar weight of raw lean beef contains only 65 mg. of sodium, chicken a little less and flatfish about 70 mg.

The fat in fish may actually be beneficial. It differs from the polyunsaturated fat you find in almost all other food products. It may help to lower a person's cholesterol.

Many more people with high blood pressure seem to benefit more from eliminating any extra body fat they can than from simply restricting sodium. Most shellfish are low-calorie foods and are useful in that regard.

You will want to know the calorie content, fat and cholesterol content of commonly used fish and shellfish, which are included in The Health Letter 11-12, Fish and Shellfish as Health Foods, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — What should be done about a brown mole on the soft part of my grandson's left cheek? It is where he will have to shave. The mole has begun to grow white hairs and he cuts them off with scissors, but they grow back very fast.

I am concerned because his mother had a mole removed from her left leg when the mole began growing and bleeding. Later she got some small nodes in her left groin, which her doctor thought were just glands that had swollen because of some insect bites or stings. She believed him because she had recently been stung by some fire ants. The nodes got bigger, but she felt all right and kept on working.

Blood appeared when she was on a vacation, about two years from the time the mole was removed. She went to a specialist and a tumor was removed from her bladder. The verdict — melanoma. It had spread through her entire glandular system. Chemotherapy and radiation came too late, and she was dead in less than three years.

DEAR READER — Your concern is quite understandable. I wanted to include your letter in the column as a warning to others not to neglect a mole that changes in any way, particularly if it enlarges or bleeds. Early diagnosis and early treatment can save lives.

Take your grandson to a dermatologist. Depending on what he sees he may elect to surgically remove the mole. Certainly those that are in locations where they can be repeatedly irritated, as by shaving or by a belt or strap, should be removed. The family history is also important.

Questions answered

Q. — A relative of mine recently offered to sand the wooden floor in our dining room and then finish it with varnish. It not only didn't come out the way we wanted it; it produced a somewhat rough finish. We haven't complained to him about it, but now we would like to take a crack at it ourselves. It didn't look too difficult if you have the correct equipment. He rented his. Do you think we can handle it and will we be able to get a smoother finish?

A. — There is no way to tell your capability. Sanding a floor preparatory to putting varnish on it can be done by anyone with reasonable patience and a knowledge of the fundamentals of sanding. When you rent the sander — and an edger — ask the dealer to show you exactly how it works. Perhaps the most important part of the job is never to let the motor run while the sander drum is resting on the floor. When the machine is in operation, it must be moving. Sanding a floor produces a mess, as you must have seen if you watched your relative at work. Take all the precautions necessary to keep the grit from getting on everything in the room and outside it.

Q. — I have an old piece of furniture that was originally finished with shellac, probably about 20 years ago. Now, I would like to refinish it with varnish without taking off the shellac, which is still in fairly good condition. I seem to remember reading somewhere that this cannot be done. Is my recollection correct?

A. — Not exactly. Years ago, varnish was often used over shellac. It was only with the introduction of synthetics that certain care had to be exercised. Some synthetic manufacturers say their product should not be used over shellac. Usually, the label on the container will give you this information.

Studies show

Suicide attempts attract sympathy?

TORONTO (AP) — Because society trains girls to be more sympathetic to others than boys, adolescent females may intentionally use unsuccessful suicide attempts to attract sympathy, new research suggests. Adolescent males may not be seeking sympathy as frequently when they attempt suicide, researchers from Western Carolina University in North Carolina said Sunday.

"For females it may be more a cry for help. For males it may be more an attempt to solve a problem," said Eugene McDowell, one of the researchers who studied high school and college students. But that conclusion is speculative, he said.

And it doesn't mean female suicide attempts should be taken less seriously than those by a male, another researcher cautioned after results were presented at the annual convention of the American Psychological Association. Society teaches girls to be more sympathetic in general than boys, said Judith Stillion, McDowell's colleague. While that may lead them into intentional failures in suicide, taking those attempts less seriously would be "very dangerous," she said. "Every individual is an i make 90 percent of the suicide attempts in the 15-to-24 age group, but account for only 20 percent of the deaths," McDowell said.

Suicide deaths for both sexes in the age group increased 40 percent between 1970 and 1978, from 8.8 per 100,000 people in 1970 to 12.4 per 100,000 people, said Ms. Stillion. The 1980 rate represented 5,239 suicides, according to federal statistics.

The sympathy hypothesis was the result of studies of high school and college students, in which females consistently showed more sympathy than males toward hypothetical peers who decided to kill themselves. They also tended to sympathize more with females than with males who had decided to take their own lives, McDowell said.

Among the groups the researchers tested in one study were 106 ninth-graders, 196 12th-graders and 84 college sophomores. A second project focused on ninth-graders, with questionnaires given to 48 gifted students at a summer program, 36 gifted students in a public school system and 106 non-gifted students in a public school.

Cheerleaders:

top honors at their summer cheerleading camp at Central State University in Edmond. "We were one of five finalists out of 25 squads," Clay said. "We're one of five to go on to National Competition."

The girls also returned with five superior ribbons and the Most Spirited Award.

PHS cheerleaders also took Most Spirited Honors at the camp they went to this summer at North Texas State University in Denton. Miami cheerleaders took home excellent and superior ratings at their camp at Panhandle State University at Goodwell, Okla.

PHS cheerleader sponsor Mary Sturgeon said that Pampa has one set of varsity cheerleaders, who support the football and basketball teams and junior varsity cheerleaders who support varsity girls' sports.

To Sturgeon, cheerleading is "more of a responsibility than an honor."

"They have a lot of work to do," she said, noting that cheerleader rules are laid out in the PHS constitution.

One rule, she pointed out, is that the cheerleaders must have an 80 grade point average to participate on the squad.

Sturgeon added that the girls must practice five days a week. At Miami, Anderson said the six-member squad practices after school on Mondays and Thursdays. The Miami members are chosen by three cheerleaders from West Texas State University and the MHS student body.

"I think the cheerleader works harder than any student in the school," Torvie said. "They had to be good students. I don't remember a cheerleader failing because the people who weren't good students just didn't try out."

Owens confirmed that the squad members had to be top students.

She also "disagrees wholeheartedly" that cheerleading is sexist — a stereotype boosted such as the Dallas Cowboy cheerleaders.

"I don't agree with that," she said. "The job of the cheerleader is to promote school spirit."

Owens fondly looks back on "the friendships we all developed."

Her sister, Terry, and squad mate Paula Sealey now live in Amarillo. Betty Brown — the petite girl who "headed the other four cheerleaders in kindling school spirit" according to the 1984 yearbook — now lives in Midland. Owens can't remember what happened to the fifth member, Linda Cox.

"What a great bunch of kids they were, and hard workers, too," Torvie concluded.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

Beauty only skin deep? Pageant judges require it

DEAR ABBY: I recently participated in the Miss Teen USA Pageant for our state. There were 70 of us—some were striking, some were cute, but there was one who was exceptionally beautiful. She also had a beautiful personality. Everyone simply fell in love with her. She was vivacious, friendly and totally giving. We all picked her as the sure winner.

Abby, she didn't even place! She was disqualified because of something she couldn't help. She wears a wig. When she has a child all her hair fell out (due to an illness), and it never grew back again.

I heard that the judges were all for her until they found out she wore a wig. I think this is grossly unfair. It looked so natural, none of us girls knew it until after the pageant was over.

One of the judges told her later that the contestants could not have anything "artificial" such as padded bras, wigs, etc. I can understand that, Abby. But this girl wasn't trying to put something over on anyone. She wore a wig because she had no hair.

What do you think?

RUNNER-UP

DEAR RUNNER-UP: I think it's unfortunate and very sad that this young woman was disqualified for reasons beyond her control. If the candidates are not told in advance that nothing artificial may be used, they should be. And how about false eyelashes, capped teeth and silicone implants?

DEAR IN LOVE: The only person who can answer that question for you is the Greek guy in your life. Ask him.

DEAR ABBY: I read the letter from the home economist concerning the baking time of your pecan pie. I agree that 350 degrees is 350 degrees regardless of whether the temperature is attained from a gas oven or an electric oven. However, the discrepancy lies in the type of fuel being used in the oven.

Gas ovens require oxygen to burn and, therefore, pull more air and moisture from the ingredients being baked.

Electricity requires no oxygen to heat; therefore, it takes longer for a liquid food to set.

I am also a home economist, and when I give my friends a recipe for a casserole, etc. that does not have much moisture, I always suggest that if they are using a gas oven, they should check the casserole several times during baking, and add more liquid if necessary—or cover the casserole to reduce evaporation loss.

MRS. T.C. McDERMOTT,
FULLERTON, CALIF.

DEAR MRS. McDERMOTT: Thank you for the explanation that even I can understand. (Julia Child, where were you when I needed you?)

DEAR ABBY: I'm another mother who had a child whose hair color didn't even remotely resemble my husband's or my own. When people would crack, "Ha! It must have been the mailman," my snappy comeback was, "No way—our mailman is a woman."

CORY'S MOM IN CALIFORNIA

(Problems? What's bugging you? Unload on Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

DEAR ABBY: I recently met a wonderful guy and fell for him like I haven't fallen for a very long time. Yes, the feeling is mutual. He told me so. We've been dating steadily. I don't date anybody but him, and I'm sure he doesn't date anybody but me. Now for the problem—he's Greek. I'm not.

My friends tell me I'm wasting my time—that Greek guys always marry Greek. They date all kinds of girls, but when it comes to marriage, they marry Greek.

Abby, do you think I'm wasting my time?

Realtors to begin voter registration

The Pampa Board of REALTORS has designated September as "Realtor Voter Registration Month," a month in which Realtors are asked to urge at least five people to register and vote in the November general election.

"In some countries" people are required by law to register to vote," said Judi Edwards, president of the Pampa Board of REALTORS. "Here in America, we have the freedom not to register to vote. Unfortunately, an estimated 55 million Americans of voting age take advantage of that freedom. That's why the United States ranks 21st among 21 western Democracies in the percentage of those eligible to vote who are registered to vote. Dena Whisler has been appointed local chairman of the Realtor voter registration project.

"We'll be kicking off our nonpartisan voter registration project Monday at Chautauqua in Central Park," Whisler said. "Several of our members have been deputized to register voters and will provide this service at the Pampa Board of REALTORS booth. So if you don't have your blue voter registration card, be sure to drop by our booth and register to vote.

Members who will be registering voters include Mike Ward, Roy C. Sparkman, Karen Hunter, Marie Estham, Exie Vantine, Jannie Lewis, Becky Baten, Joy Turner and Beula Cox.

Food processor answers

BY DONNA BRAUCHI
County Extension Agent

Food processors are rapidly becoming a common appliance in many of our kitchens. However, many consumers seem to have questions regarding their use and care.

Acceptable food processor performance depends on the proper balance of many factors, any one of which can cause problems if overlooked.

When performance problems arise, the best advice is: Read the manufacturer's use and care manual from cover to cover. By checking for the possible causes and making recommended adjustments you may resolve the problem through process of elimination. Such problem solving will prevent unnecessary service trips. Of course, a mechanical problem may exist and a service technician should be consulted if your efforts are unsuccessful.

At this point, I will share with you some common problems, causes, and solutions.

1. Problem: Chopped food becomes watery. The major cause of this problem is overprocessing. Try to process food in quick, pulsating motions by turning processor on and off several times and checking the condition of the food each time. It will also help to reduce liquid in recipes.

2. Problem: Uneven slicing. One cause might be uneven pressure on the food pusher or operation of the appliance without the pusher. We recommend using a food pusher with even, firm pressure. Another cause of uneven slicing can be a loosely packed food chute. When processing long narrow foods, pack the food chute so food will stand upright. Cut pieces the same length and hold firmly in place with pusher to process.

3. Problem: Many of us process cheese with this appliance. Sometimes the cheese smears and balls under the cover when shredding or slicing. This is usually caused by warm or soft cheese getting caught between the cover and disc. Keep cheese cold to help prevent this from happening. Placing the cheese in the freezer for 10 minutes before processing will also help.

4. Problem: Bowl, bowl cover and accessories have an odor. Usually this is caused by not washing items immediately after use. Wash all parts immediately after use. Make sure all food residue is completely washed away. Allow air to circulate to all parts when not in use.

5. Problem: Knife blade is dull or jammed. Processing of ice cubes or undefrosted frozen food can cause dulling. Attempting to process hard or sticky foods can cause the blade to jam. Always defrost frozen food first, then process. Do not frequently process ice cubes. Do not process hard foods, like frozen vegetables. Process sticky foods, like dried fruits, combined with sugar or flour.

6. Problem: Food processor does not operate. Check the following causes: A. Unit is not plugged in or speed selection button not pushed completely; B. No power at outlet—check fuses or circuit breaker; C. Bowl assembly not secured correctly into safety lock or cover not in place; D. Failure to insert properly the section blades used on some processor to provide varying thickness; E. Applying excessive pressure to food pusher which can result in distorting the cutting blade; F. Failure to recognize that the steel "S" blade used can fall out if the bowl is inverted.

7. Problem: Food processor jumps on the counter. This is caused by an uneven, heavy food load. Try to redistribute food load, or empty bowl.

8. Problem: Liquid leaks between bowl and cover or liquid overflows bowl and goes down through center shaft. The cause of this problem is too much liquid. Reduce liquid in bowl.

9. Problem: Bowl cover or bottom of chute is cut by slicer, shredder or grater blades. Too much food in the work bowl can cause the blade to be pushed upward. To alleviate this, empty the bowl more often. Another cause of this problem could be too much pressure on the food in the food chute; blades not assembled correctly; blades not secured in center shaft; or bent or damaged blades. Try reducing pressure on food pusher, reassemble blades correctly, and make sure blades are secured on shaft.

Most of the problems mentioned could be avoided by a thorough reading of the use and care manual to learn about the installation, operation and maintenance of each particular model of food processor. As the old saying goes, if all else fails, read the directions.

Computer is multilingual translator

By PETER MCFARREN
Associated Press Writer

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Aymara, a language spoken by 2.5 million Indians in one of the poorest regions of the Americas, has been discovered by the computer and might soon become one of man's most useful languages.

A Bolivian mathematician, Ivan Guzman de Rojas, has devised a system of translating by computer, using Aymara as a "bridge" to convert texts from any one of five Western languages into all the others, simultaneously.

His achievement, a breakthrough in the fledgling art of machine translation, is a vindication for Aymara's ancient founders. According to some historians, wise men constructed the language from scratch, by logical, premeditated design, as early as 4,000 years ago.

The Aymaras were later subjugated by Quechua-speaking Incas, who conquered much of the Andean highlands before being conquered themselves by the Spanish in the 16th century. Both ruling forces tried to silence the guttural-sounding Aymara tongue, but it survives today along the shores of Lake Titicaca, among the peasant farmers and llama herders of Bolivia and Peru.

"The irony is that the language of a people who are mostly illiterate and have lived under centuries of cultural oppression could, in a couple of years, be used in sophisticated computers throughout the world," Guzman de Rojas said in an interview.

The 50-year-old mathematician and engineer is the creator of Atamiri, a computer program that reduces the simple syntactical rules of Aymara to a string of algebraic symbols. Atamiri means "interpreter" in the Indian language.

These symbols form an algebraic "bridge language" at the core of the computer logic. The computer can translate a text through this code and into English, French, German, Portuguese and Spanish at a speed of 60 to 120 words per minute.

Sitting at a computer terminal, Guzman de Rojas demonstrates by typing a tricky Spanish sentence: "la mujer que vino ayer tomo vino." Less than a second after he pushes a button, five translations flash on the screen and roll off a printer. The English reads: "the woman who came yesterday drank wine."

The system is remarkable, according to U.S. and Canadian experts, not only for its speed and versatility, but its ability to sort out ambiguities. Other systems, they say, cannot distinguish between uses of the word "vino" — which can mean "came" or "wine" — without an awkward modification of the computer logic.

"It is done very simply," said Miguel Brazao, a research supervisor at Wang, a major computer firm in Lowell, Mass. "Many systems have failed because their approach is so complex. They try to include vocabulary and grammar in the central program."

Over the past decade, researchers have developed a computer system that translates English to French (but not French to English). Another turns Russian into French. A third goes from German to English. None has advanced into large-scale commercial use.

"Atamiri is 10 times faster than any of the others," said Bill Page, a computer specialist at the International Research Center in Ottawa, Canada.

The center published Guzman de Rojas' first study of Atamiri's potential in 1980, and Wang has just offered him a $50,000 grant and a $100,000 computer to refine his system.

For five years, he has honed his system on borrowed equipment in a rented La Paz office with a view of the Aymaras' Andean Altiplano homeland — a setting popularized by his late father, Cecilio Guzman de Rojas, Bolivia's best-known 20th-century painter.

HI-TECH SYSTEM — A Bolivian mathematician and engineer shows a group of radio broadcasters how he uses a computer.

TEXAS GARDENER TIPS

Vegetables with Funny Names Taste Great

If a name like "Smucker's" makes it hard to sell jelly, you can imagine what a name like "fuzzy gourd" might do to the popularity of a vegetable.

A closely-related oriental vegetable known as winter melon would seem to be less handicapped, though its name may mislead you, for it looks like a watermelon, tastes like zucchini and is used to make soup. The names and appearances of these vegetables may be unfamiliar, but both are worth planting.

The fuzzy gourd and winter melon have been grown for years in China and India. Using them can be simple enough. The fuzzy gourd, after the hairs are rubbed off, can be used as a substitute for zucchini. The winter melon is used to prepare an Asian version of chicken soup. This soup, when prepared according to full Oriental tradition, is cooked inside the melon. The outside is often elaborately carved with dragons and designs.

Cultivation for these vegetables is quite simple. Both need plenty of room and appreciate a soil mixed with lots of manure or other organic material. The fuzzy gourd is best grown on a trellis. The fruits are ready to pick when they are 6 to 8 inches in length and about 1 1/4 to 2 inches in diameter.

Winter melons need an especially large amount of space in the garden and should be planted in hills 8 to 12 feet apart. Some of the best news about growing these vegetables is that they seem to be bothered by few or no insect pests in Texas.

You may be able to find seed of these vegetables at an Oriental marketplace, should there be one in your area. Otherwise, you can purchase seed by mail. Fuzzy gourd seed can be obtained from Glecker's Seedmen, Dept. TG, Metamora, OH 43540; and Stokes Seeds, P.O. Box 5487G, Buffalo, NY 14240. Winter melon seed is available from Nichols Garden Nursery, 1190 N. Pacific Hwy., Dept. TG, Albany, OR 97321.

3 to 6 Club helps kids left at home alone

BY DONNA BRAUCHI
County Extension Agent

Hundreds of Pampa school children are home alone each day after school and many others are alone at various times during the year. The increasing number of employed mothers and lack of supervised after-school programs means that more and more children will be involved in self-care.

The "3 to 6" Club letter series sponsored by the Gray County Extension Family Living Committee is being offered to help parents and children cope with responsible self-care. The letter series will begin Sept. 10 and will continue for four weeks, with one letter being mailed per week. It is free of charge.

The letter series will focus on safety, first aid, snacking, study skills, home responsibilities, coping with emergencies, and responsible television viewing. Each letter will contain one portion for children and one portion for parents.

To enroll in this letter series, contact the Gray County Extension office at 669-7429 or write to Star Rt. 2, Box 33, Pampa.

B&PW Meets

The Business and Professional Women's Club of Pampa held a watermelon feast and yard party Tuesday at the home of Ruby Crocker.

The club members made plans to attend the B&PW District Conference Oct. 6-7 in Lubbock. Those wishing to attend may contact Virginia McDonald, 669-7117.

The next meeting is noon, Sept. 11 at Furr's Caffeteria.

Singer records 'her' song

By PETER COY
Associated Press Writer
ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — When Chuck Mangione wrote a song about Academy Award-winning actress Shirley MacLaine for his new album, he had no idea she'd actually record it.

But she did, laying down a raspy, laughing and obviously impromptu rap over a funky Mangione instrumental called "Shirley MacLaine," one of seven songs on the LP, "Disguise," which was released this month.

"She was like a jazz musician. She has incredible time. Her rhythm was absolutely wonderful," Mangione said during an interview in his den at Gates Music, Inc. — his home base.

Mangione, 43, first met Miss MacLaine in April after a performance of her one-woman Broadway show. It was the week she celebrated her 50th birthday.

"I hid behind eroding room door, and when she came out I honked 'Happy Birthday' at her," he said.

The flugelhornist-composer-arranger recorded "Shirley MacLaine" and was going to have the vocal group, Rare Silk, record some lyrics he had written for it. But he showed them to Miss MacLaine first. "I think the lyrics embarrassed her," he said.

The next night, Mangione said, Miss MacLaine came to the Manhattan studio with her own idea — an upbeat rap she said would lift Mangione's spirits after the sad song that precedes it. "She's Not Mine to Love (No More)."

"Hey, Chuck!" the rap begins. "It's me, Shirley, MacLaine. 'No Pain!'"

Mangione said Miss MacLaine had him rolling on the floor in a fit of laughter, tears streaming from his eyes.

"She'll knock your socks off in so many different ways, I can't tell ya," he said. The ap took ust two takes.

"DISGUISE" IS THE Grammy award-winner's 19th album, the first he has done with another producer. He said it's the best studio album he's ever done.

She wants to play sweet girl role

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Bianca Jagger, darling of the jet set and former wife of the Rolling Stones' Mick Jagger, says she'd really prefer a role as a "sweet girl" instead of always being cast as the femme fatale.

"Well, actually, I usually play women who have a cool side and a childlike side," she says. "In 'Success' the lady prosecutor I played was tough and cold. Then she falls in love and reveals her childlike side. In 'Flesh Color' I'm a Mafia leader, then I fall in love and reveal the other side."

Ms. Jagger, who divides her time between living in this country and other parts of the world, also says she'd like to do comedy. "I'd like to do more American television — if it's good. I'd love to do a series."

She makes her first American

TV appearance in an episode of the ABC fall series "Streethawk," which stars recording star Rex Smith as a motorcycle police officer turned government agent. Once again, she is the femme fatale.

Ms. Jagger left her homeland of Nicaragua when she was 16 and went to Paris to study at the Institute of Political Science. She was born Bianca Theresa Perez Mora de Macia and changed her name to Bianca when she was in Paris.

"I studied for three years in Paris and at that time I had no interest in acting. I only became interested in acting toward the end of my marriage. I met Mick Jagger in 1970 after I finished school and started working. I did political and economic files for a journalist for a Paris newspaper. I wanted to be a politician and a diplomat. But I didn't want to be a diplomat with Somoza."

President Anastasio Somoza Debayle resigned in 1979 following defeat by the Sandinista National Liberation Front.

She says she tries to maintain a neutral position, "but I feel the Reagan administration has no business in Nicaragua. It should be left to the Nicaraguan people to decide."

Ms. Jagger, who was divorced in 1980, doesn't like to talk about her personal life. "I'd rather look to the future than to the past," she says. "The past is gone and the future is to be seen."

In her future is the title role of the play "Daniela Frank," in which she plays a journalist whose Pulitzer Prize-winning story is found to be not quite factual.

A QUIET SPOT—Eugene Chesrow stands amidst a forest he created next to his home in a busy area of Chicago. Chesrow grew tired of the empty, littered lot next door so he got permission from the owner to plant a few trees and in 1974 bought the 75-by-100 foot lot and began planting in earnest. The area is now owned by the Chicago Audubon Society which plans to use it as a bird sanctuary. (AP Laserphoto)

Cattle ranching turning African area into desert

By MORT ROSENBLUM AP Special Correspondent
 MOPIPI, Botswana (AP)—Burgeoning cattle ranching encouraged by foreign aid is transforming fragile land in southern Africa into desert wasteland and killing off some of the world's last great herds of game ecologists say.

Here in Botswana, a stable democracy with Black Africa's highest per capita income, owning cattle means status. But instead of providing food in a country each year less able to feed itself, the beef is mostly being sold on the foreign market for profit for the rich elite, according to international economic agencies.

Only eight percent of Botswana's cattle are sold or slaughtered for food. Meanwhile, on the rangelands, the cattle are displacing wildlife that is a source of food.

"This is obscene," says ecologist Douglas Williamson, looking out on a barren landscape dotted with blackened piles of skulls and bone ash — burnt remains of 50,000 wildebeest antelope crowded out by cattle at this reservoir in the Kalahari Desert.

Northeast of here, at least 40,000 zebras and antelopes face death, walking 30 miles between their water source, the Botete River, and the nearest vegetation left by grazing cattle.

"At this rate, within the decade there will be nothing left of the game," says Douglas Williamson, a South African who has worked in Botswana 10 years and is now with West Germany's Frankfurt Zoological Society.

Steadily, he said, cattle are rendering sterile land that should indefinitely sustain wild and domestic animals.

The wildebeest — or gnus — are the most endangered. They look like American bison with skinny withers and, in this region, they appear headed for a similar fate. But, Williamson says, "Bison were replaced by the world's finest agricultural system. Here there is nothing but desolation."

Experts from the United Nations and the Botswana government agree that environmental damage is critical, in places irreversible.

They also say most of the beef is sold to Europe at preferential rates, with no net tax benefits to the Botswana treasury.

As elsewhere in Africa, severe drought has led to overgrazing, leaving vast stretches devoid of vegetation or covered in scrub bush even wildlife cannot eat.

In Botswana, the situation is worsened by 1,800 miles of fences erected to control hoof and mouth disease, believed carried by buffalo. Since 1954, ecologists say, hundreds of thousands of game animals have died as a result of the fences.

The problem, ecologists say, is balance. Cattle and wildlife have both been part of African cultures for 1,000 years, but nature kept numbers within bounds. Cattle stayed near water sources. Wild animals roamed freely, causing little damage to the environment.

A three-year drought has killed perhaps 300,000 cattle, but Botswana's herds total 3 million, three times the human population. By African tradition, cattle mean status, the more the better regardless of condition, and tribesmen — voters — resist curbs on herds.

All but two cabinet ministers and top civil servants own cattle, government sources say. President Quett Masire keeps huge herds. His brother, Peter, is the country's second largest rancher.

Last year a Kalahari Conservation Society symposium said authorities had disregarded scientific warnings that urgent measures were needed against environmental threats "of very serious proportions."

But David Finlay, the top civil servant in the Agriculture Ministry, says authorities now are beginning to consider stock controls.

Foreign specialists fault not only rich ranchers but also such donors as the European Economic Community and the World Bank.

"We are helping finance the devastation of the Kalahari Desert," says Christian Blanchard, EEC delegate to Botswana, who advises a policy review. "The problem is political."

He referred to a beef export quota of 19,000 tons a year to the EEC, a concession arranged by Britain after Botswana gained independence but had no other source of income.

Today, Botswana produces 12 million karats of diamonds a year, the world's third largest producer, but the government makes no profit from cattle since ranchers' taxes are offset by free veterinary services and indirect subsidies.

"The $100 million earned last year from beef exports went straight into the pockets of private owners — one third of them to one man," one foreign aid official said.

The one man, Derek Brink, is believed to hold more personal land than anyone in the world — 900,000 acres.

The EEC paid Botswana cattle owners $30 million more than the free market price and, at the same time, subsidized beef sales to Mozambique and Angola, Botswana's, poor neighbors. The nine-member organization already has a surplus of 600,000 tons of beef.

The World Bank has loaned more than $10 million for cattle projects in Botswana. Their own reviews later found the projects to have caused serious damage.

The U.S. Agency for International Development abandoned livestock projects two years ago when it was determined they were causing more harm than good, a U.S. official said.

U.S. specialists argue for more emphasis on food production.
