

MACK WOFFORD: Resigns during Tuesday meeting

City manager resigns

Mack Wofford to end 18 years with city

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

City Manager B. M. "Mack" Wofford submitted a letter of resignation today, ending 14 years of service in that position and more than 18 years total to the city.

Wofford presented his letter to the city commissioners this morning during the commission's regular meeting. The commissioners met in executive session to consider Wofford's letter, announcing their decision to accept his resignation after reconvening in an open session. No official action was taken by the commission on the resignation.

The executive session lasted only a few minutes. In the reconvened session Wofford read his letter:

"This letter is to give you notice of my resignation as City Manager effective September 30, 1984. At this time I am considering several career options in both the public and private sectors and feel that I should devote full time to this effort.

"It has been a signal honor for me to serve the citizens of Pampa for more than 18 years. I especially want to thank the employees of the city for their efforts and loyalty through the years.

"My best wishes for continued growth and prosperity go out to all the citizens who have given their effort to building this excellent community."

Mayor Calvin Whatley said, "Mack has had this in mind for several months." He expressed his "sincere appreciation" to Wofford for his efforts and dedication in his service to the city.

No mention was made today concerning efforts to fill the position Wofford will be vacating.

Wofford came to Pampa in May, 1966, to take over as city engineer, filling a vacancy that had existed since December, 1965. His appointment, effective May 16, was announced by then City Manager Jim White.

Wofford had served as city manager at Hillsboro, resigning that position to move to Pampa.

He later also served as public utilities director.

When City Manager Charles Hill - after serving for two years and four months - resigned effective Sept. 1, 1970, the city commission appointed Wofford as acting city manager while the city began interviews for a new manager.

On Sept. 22, 1970, the commission named Wofford as city manager, making the position retroactive to Sept. 1.

Wofford was employed then at a salary of $16,500 a year with $1,500 automobile expense and $1,500 for other expenses allowance, making a total of $19,500.

During the past fiscal year his salary, including automobile expenses and his expense account, was listed at $3,913 a month, just under $47,000 for the year.

When Wofford took over as city manager in 1970, the city's operating budget was about $2,047,000. The proposed budget for 1984-1985 totals $8,346,829, more than quadruple the 1970-1971 budget.

Wofford can point to a number of accomplishments during his administration. The M. K. Brown Auditorium was constructed, opening in 1972. And the new M. K. Brown Pool opened this past summer.

The city built a water treatment plant for the switch over to Lake Meredith water, with Pampa being a member of the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority.

Police and fire department budgets were increased in efforts to obtain better caliber of employees and to attain a higher level of city services.

Pampa switched ambulance services to Pampa Medical Services after Metropolitan Ambulance Service went out of operation.

The city participated in recent Hwy. 70 project improvements, widening Perryton Parkway and joining Duncan St. to the highway.

Under the guidance of the Pampa - Gray County Office of Emergency Management, the city has developed an Emergency Management Plan in coordination

Speaker says United Way keys teamwork, sacrifice

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Teamwork and sacrifice were praised Monday as the principles by which United Way becomes successful in its efforts to raise funds to benefit community members.

Speaking at the annual United Way campaign kick-off luncheon at M. K. Brown Auditorium, Kent Stickler defined teamwork as "two or more people associated together for a common cause."

President of Financial Shares, South, in Clearwater, Fla., Stickler said teamwork can be applied at home, at work, in church - and in the United Way.

He mentioned examples of teamwork which have led to successes, referring specifically to the U.S. space programs and the recent Olympics. "The United Way, I maintain, may be the best," he said.

"We need a call to teamwork at all levels" in making the United Way drive a continued success. Stickler said. People working together with commitment can insure the accomplishment of the association's goals, he stated.

The Pampa United Way has set a goal of $275,000 in its fund drive this year. The new goal is up $25,000 from last year. United Way officials indicated the goal reflects the needs of the community to fund the various agencies and services benefiting from the campaign.

Stickler also stressed sacrifice as a principle by which United Way can achieve its ends of helping people with their needs. Contributions by individuals and businesses can benefit so many people in so many different ways, he noted.

But the biggest payoff for United Way, he said, is that "you, the contributor, receive the biggest benefit."

"It's impossible to give more than you receive" when working with commitment to the United Way programs, Stickler stated.

He challenged the more than 300 people attending the Pampa Chamber of Commerce luncheon to "give between 10 and 25 percent more this year than you gave last year. Give of your money and give of your time," he said, noting that Scriptural principles are involved in reaching out to help others.

Such sacrifice can give growth, self-satisfaction and good feelings, he said. "To give sacrificially means more to the giver than to the receiver," he claimed.

Contributors to the United Way can have pleasure in knowing that most of their money will actually go toward the benefit of others. With the government, for example, 70 cents out of every dollar is used for administration in its various assistance programs, Stickler said. In United Way, about 95 cents of every dollar goes to individuals assisted by the various agencies.

"With all the sincerity I can say, I really believe in the United Way," he said, adding that he has worked with the United Way programs for many years. He said he had been "brought to tears" by seeing the ways in which people have been aided by the United Way agencies.

The meeting, attended by

Few oppose city increase in tax rate

By LARRY HOLLIS

Pampa city commissioners passed on first reading today an ordinance adopting the proposed $8.3 million operating budget following a public hearing on a proposed property tax rate increase.

The commission has proposed an 8 percent hike in the effective tax rate from 60.2 cents to 65 cents per $100 valuation. The increase amounts to a 3.8 cents increase from last year's tax rate of 61.2 cents.

Commissioners will meet in special meetings at 9:30 a.m. on Sept. 18 and 19 in the City Commission Room at City Hall to consider adoption of the proposed rate on first and second readings of the tax ordinance, with official adoption set for Sept. 25 during the next regular meeting.

Four residents appeared at the hearing to express objections to the tax increase.

Walter Shed objected to the 8 percent figure, saying his calculations indicated an actual increase of 45 percent in tax revenue from last year.

City Manager Mack Wofford and Chief Appraiser Charles Buzzard of the Gray County Tax Appraisal District explained the calculations based on the effective tax rate (determination of the tax rate needed to raise the same amount of tax revenue generated in the previous fiscal year).

"I don't know how you get those figures," Shed said, adding that he still objected to the increase in taxes.

Cecil Bowers, 825 Campbell, said he opposed the increase because he felt the city concentrated too much on the north side of the city without doing anything on the south side. "We never get anything done down there," he said.

He said residents in the south should not have to see their taxes raised only to have the money spent on other sections of the city. His objections were supported by another resident present at the hearing.

Another resident also objected to the tax increase, saying he had "never seen a city this large" getting so little out of its tax money.

W. A. Morgan spoke in favor of the new tax rate, noting, "I'm in a minority here."

Morgan said the city has been operating "on a shoestring budget" for too many years without having the funds "to get things done that need to be done."

He agreed the south side "has been neglected" by the city and said any tax increase should be equitably spent throughout the city.

In other budget related matters, the commissioners passed on first readings ordinances amending water, sewer and solid waste collection fees. General rates will increase $1 each for water service, sanitary sewer fees and residential and commercial solid waste collection fees.

Another ordinance will increase water service tapping fees by $50 per unit. Another ordinance, amending Section V of Ordinance 935, will require a $50 security deposit for reconnection of discontinued water service and decrease the time in which the city can disconnect water service for non-payment of bills.

The commission passed on second reading ordinances concerning litter control and prohibiting the operation or parking of a motor vehicle in public parks or lawns.

On tax increase

No protests at county hearing

By JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

Question: What if they held a public hearing about raising taxes and nobody came?

Answer: The meeting lasted a half hour, only because Gray County Commissioners waited that long for somebody to show up.

The county representatives met this morning to find out what taxpayers think about their proposal to raise taxes by about $683,000 next year.

Only one member of the public, a tax representative for the Phillips Petroleum Company, showed up for the well-publicized "public hearing."

"We feel like maybe that tells us they're (county taxpayers) satisfied," Precinct 4 Commissioner Ted Simmons remarked about the empty chamber.

Commissioners will meet again at 9:30 a.m. Friday for further consideration of the tax rate and a vote to approve it.

The commissioners have proposed raising the tax rate from 18.2 cents per $100 valuation to 22.2 cents per $100. The four-cent hike in the rate in calendar year 1985 would amount to a $20 annual increase in county taxes on a $50,000 home.

The higher tax rate would bring in an estimated $683,000 in additional property taxes next year. The extra money would help fund a proposed budget of $4,012,426. The 1985 budget projects a $252,535 increase in spending over the current budget of $3,759,891.

The bulk of the increase in the budget would fund an approved five-percent pay raise for county employees and the higher costs of their benefits.

Because projected property values have increased, the county could drop the tax rate to 17.1 cents per $100 valuation and still raise the same amount of tax revenue generated by present 18.2-cent tax rate.

The commissioners have proposed raising taxes, while holding on to a $3,594,416 surplus created by the April 1979 sale of the county-owned Highland General Hospital. The surplus county fund, called the Highland General Hospital Account, earns interest in certificates of deposit at the First National Bank. The county representatives have said they intend to hold the account "in reserve" to pay for a new jail some day. The county representatives have agreed that a new jail isn't needed, but they expect the state or federal government to mandate a new facility. The county jail was built in 1929.

Wes Ashworth, of the Phillips Petroleum Company, had the floor and the attention of the five-member commission to himself in

McLean lowers amount of tax hike

By CATHY SPAULDING

McLEAN - School taxpayers here could face a tax increase, but the two-cent increase will not be as high as school officials originally anticipated.

According to McLean ISD business manager Shirley Johnson, the district can set a tax rate of 98 cents per $100 valuation and still stay within three percent over last year's tax rate of 96 cents. The district's effective tax rate, the tax needed to generate the same revenues as last year, is 95.323 cents.

At an earlier meeting, Johnson brought up the possibility of having to raise the tax rate to $1.02 per $100 valuation in order to support the school's $1,205,637 budget. Trustees would have to call a public hearing if the tax rate increases by more than three percent.

"We decided that under our current economic conditions not to raise the tax rate that much," she said following the board's meeting Monday.

High School principal Ron Cummings mentioned the possibility that the school district might get more state funding for vocational education because it has an average daily attendance of less than 1,000 students and has only two vocational education programs.

Johnson earlier anticipated about $414,593 in state aid. But, because state figures are not complete, the amount is still not certain. Much of the increase in state funds would be taken up by state mandated salary hikes and curriculum changes.

"We will be adjusting the revenue figures," she said, adding that they will have to adjust the expense figures as the years go on.

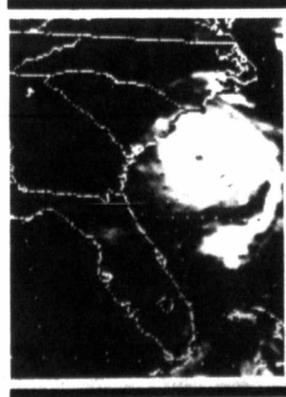

"At the beginning of the year, we have funding for programs, but we always have to amend the budget later," she said. "Still it's not enough of an increase or a decrease to be noticeable."

Trustees will set the tax rate at a special meeting next Monday. In other business, trustees adopted policies on student discipline, award of credit and attendance. Part of the policies were adjusted to comply with new state education requirements.

Under the policy, students may not receive credit for classes in which they receive a grade lower than a 70 on a scale of 100 or has

Tutorial program problem for White Deer's schools

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

WHITE DEER — Students may not live by bread alone, but they still need a good breakfast, school officials thought Monday as they worked on ways to implement a morning tutorial program.

Under a new state mandate, schools must offer two 45-minute tutoring sessions per week to students having grade problems. But White Deer ISD superintendent Tom Harkey suggested beating the state by 10 minutes by offering 20-minute sessions each day before school.

Food for thought: schools must offer breakfast to needy children.

School officials worried that the daily morning tutoring sessions might interfere with breakfast. An average of 53 students per day participate in the school breakfast program at White Deer High School, White Deer Elementary School and Skellytown Elementary School, according to school figures.

White Deer Elementary principal R.T. Laurie reported that school breakfast figures are lower so far this year, while Skellytown principal Kenneth Cox anticipated more pupils eating breakfast when the weather gets colder.

One board member pointed out that many of the children being tutored would also need the school breakfasts.

Board president Merle Kramer brought up the possibility of allowing the tutored students to be served breakfast before the other students.

School officials ruled out offering tutorials after school. Harkey said that afternoon sessions would create a hardship on student transportation.

"At 8 a.m. we get the youngsters at the prime time of the day," he said, adding that the students are worn out at the end of the day.

Skellytown junior high English teacher Caren Kensing agreed.

"We find that morning is a better time," she said. "It would be a waste of time to tutor the kids in the afternoon because they've been through the whole day."

She said she found that students failing in one subject tend to fail in other subjects.

Board member Cinda Lafferty said that morning sessions will be better for working parents who may not be able to pick up their children after school.

Teachers have to be on duty by 8 a.m. anyway and Harkey reasoned that while the sessions may mean an extension of their work time, it will not mean an extension of their day.

A possibility of starting the sessions earlier, like at 7:45 a.m., was bypassed.

Harkey said that the board need not set the tutoring policy until later. He suggested trying the daily morning sessions before adopting the policy.

High school principal Jack Clemmons reported an enrollment of 158 students Monday as he passed out copies of student and faculty handbooks to the board members. He reported that five-yardline stripes have been painted on the area of the parking lot so that the band may practice their marching routines.

Board members agreed to allow pep rallies in the new field house.

Principal Cox reported 20 children enrolled in kindergarten, 16 first graders, 17 second graders, 16 third graders, 17 fourth graders, 15 fifth graders, 10 sixth graders, 15 seventh graders and 16 eighth graders.

Laurie reported a total enrollment of 269 pupils at White Deer elementary school.

After approving the purchase of two $550 saxophones for the band, trustees discussed ways to update the school's drafting and woodworking supplies.

Harkey reported that there's some "expensive stuff" that needs replacing and suggested that a committee be formed to determine what is needed.

with other governing entities in Gray County.

The city undertook a replacement of older and outdated water pipeline systems to improve the city's water distribution system, a project still going on in the downtown area.

Animal control and litter control ordinances have been revised in response to citizen input.

But Wofford's administration has not been without controversy.

The switchover to Lake Meredith water created complaints about the water taste and sediments in the water. After the water quality settled, in 1982 complaints arose about the water being smelly. The problem was first blamed on blue-green algae. Finally the city decided to drain and clean out the 10 million gallon holding reservoir for the Pampa and Borger water supply, eventually eliminating the smell.

The quality of Pampa's streets has been under attack over the years, with citizens turning down several bond issues, including a $5.8 million bond issue in 1983. But the city moved ahead with repair and seal coating projects last year, finding money from other funds and dipping into the reserve fund to finance seal coating of the two north sections of the city and general repairs throughout the city.

Some complaints were made over lack of ambulance service arising when Metropolitan began failing. The city was without definite ambulance service for awhile until the contract was reached with Pampa Medical Services.

The latest controversy arose this summer when the city street crews began removing driveway pipes from residences without prior notice. A number of citizens mounted a recall petition drive against commission members. The recall effort was abandoned in late August.

Miami cuts class time for football

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

MIAMI — When the Chieftains play football, students here will have five minutes cut from each of their classes, according to school superintendent Bill Vestal.

The abbreviated class times were approved by the school board in August. But it wasn't until Miami played football at Cotton Center High School Friday that they found how well the schedule could work.

Vestal explained that on days preceding home games, the eight class periods would each be cut by five minutes with a pep rally — he end of the day. The schedule is the same for the five away games, although the pep rallies would be held during lunch break. This will let school out at about 3:15.

Because Miami plays six-man football because six-man teams are few and far between, school officials here wanted to see how they can adjust their schedule to comply with new state school attendance requirements. Students cannot miss more than 10 days per school year for school-related activities.

School officials asked the Texas Education Agency whether half school days can be counted as full days as was allowed last year. At the regular Miami ISD board meeting Monday, Vestal reported that the TEA will allow the half-day exception this year. But, he added that because of the apparent acceptance of the shortened periods, the district may not use the half-day exception.

In other attendance matters, Miami trustees agreed that students with more than two unexcused absences will get two points docked from their grades. Students with more than five unexcused absences will not pass their classes.

Trustees also voted to set up a typing refresher course for area residents. Vestal said the class would meet twice a week for eight weeks, making a total of 16 class periods. Tuition for the class has not been set. Times and dates of the class will be set at the students' convenience.

The board approved a 1984 tax rate of 24 cents per $100 valuation. This is a 2 1/2 cent increase over last year's valuation.

Also approved was the school's share of a computer for the Roberts County Appraisal District office. Under an agreement with the district, Roberts County will pay half of the cost, Miami ISD will pay 48 percent while the city of Miami pays the rest. While no computer has been bought, Vestal estimates a cost of about $33,000 with Miami ISD paying about $16,000 of it.

Trustees hired Cassandra Black of Canadian as a part-time nurse.

County hearing

the public hearing this morning.

County Judge Carl Kennedy gave the oil company executive a brief history of the county tax rate. The judge pointed out that higher taxable property values, estimated at $2.4 billion next year, have allowed the county to drop the tax rate below its historical level of about 28 cents per $100 valuation. Kennedy pointed out that commissioners dropped the rate to 10 cents in 1983, in order to return a surplus to the taxpayers. The rate was increased to 18.2 for the current year, but probably would have been higher without a $600,000 surplus in the general fund to start 1984, Kennedy said. The general fund surplus will be gone at the end of the year on Dec. 31, he said. Coupled with the small increase in spending, the higher tax rate is needed for next year, the judge added.

"Our objective has been to lower the tax rate," Kennedy said.

Ashworth agreed with commissioners that holding on to the $3.6 million surplus hospital fund is a good idea. Since the money originally came from a capital expenditure (building the county hospital) it should be used again for a capital expense (building a jail), he agreed.

more than five unexcused absences during a semester. Students with grades lower than 70 may be required to attend a tutoring session and may not participate in extra-curricular activities. If a student has a grade lower than 70 at the end of a six-week reporting period, a notice will be sent to the parents stating the need for a parent-teacher conference.

Transportation to the tutorials will be up to the parents.

Trustees also accepted a bid of $10,154 from IBM for five PC computers and a printer unit. This will be added to the schools current computers so that there will be enough units for 22 students.

Also accepted was a bid of $852 from Bus Sales of San Antonio to buy a 1979 GMC School bus.

School trustees also approved a report on how they plan to implement the new state education requirements for 1985. Superintendent Jim Rutherford said that the Texas Education Agency will send a monitoring team later this year to check school compliance with state requirements. The TEA team will visit the school once every three years. In the past, the team monitored the schools once every five years.

Texas crime rate down in first half of '84

AUSTIN (AP) — Decreases in four of seven categories of major crime pushed the state's crime rate down by 3.7 percent in the first six months of this year, the Texas Department of Public Safety says.

Murder, robbery, aggravated assault and burglary all dropped, while rape, theft and auto theft increased, DPS officials said Monday.

Col. Jim Adams, DPS director, said combined reports from 776 law enforcement agencies in the state indicated a rate of 2,879.8 major crimes per 100,000 people for the first six months of the year, down from 2,989.7 last year.

Adams said the actual number of major crimes reported also dropped.

"A total of 452,825 crimes were reported, amounting to a decrease of almost 1 percent compared to the first half of 1983," Adams said.

"This is a continuation of the trend we saw in 1983, when the number of crimes declined for the first time since 1961," he said.

Decreases were registered in four of the seven major-crime categories, the DPS reported.

Murders dropped 8.2 percent, robberies fell nearly 10 percent, aggravated assaults declined almost 4 percent and burglaries were down 5.1 percent, the DPS said.

The number of rapes increased by 11.6 percent, theft cases rose by 1.4 percent and motor vehicle thefts were up 2.7 percent.

The DPS said arrests for the six-month period totaled 439,061, a decrease of 4.3 percent compared to 1983.

Drug arrests were up 16.6 percent, totaling 27,888. There were 66,959 drunken driving arrests, a decline of 7 percent from the 71,972 arrests during the first six months of 1983.

"Hopefully, the increased level of public awareness about the drunken driving problem and tougher laws have reduced the number of DWI offenders on our roads," Adams said.

"But the number arrested indicates that we still have a serious problem, and DWI enforcement continues as a major priority of police agencies," he said.

Two Texas lawmen were killed by criminal action in the line of duty and one was killed in a job-related accident, the DPS reported. A total of 1,751 officers were assaulted while on duty.

Researcher says elderly discounts no longer needed

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — The elderly are not as poor as they once were, a Texas A&M University researcher says, but other experts disagree, saying the elderly are not that well off.

John Compton, an associate professor at the university's Department of Recreation and Parks, said 1980 census figures show that even though half as many people over age 65 work today as did 30 years ago, more elderly people are doing better off financially.

"It just about comes out loud and clear — senior citizens, as a group, are not all poor any more," Compton said. "Our perceptions of the elderly are about 15 years old."

Census figures show 14.6 percent of the nation's senior citizens lived below the poverty level in 1982, compared to 25.3 percent in 1969 and 35.2 percent in 1959.

Special discounts for senior citizens are no longer needed, Compton said, but the editorial director of the American Association of Retired Persons, Steven Nehlman, said Compton based his assumptions on "a myth of affluence" about elderly people.

"To claim the elderly are so affluent that they no longer need protection — like the discounts — is not something we can agree with," Nehlman said.

Elderly citizens in low-income communities should continue to receive special discounts, however, Compton said.

"I want them to get all the discounts and benefits they can get," he said.

During the 1960s and 1970s, the public believed that the elderly gathered their food from trash cans or ate dog food, Mehlmán said. But now, he says, people think senior citizens are doing better.

"Neither notion is completely true," Mehlmán said.

About one third of the elderly people eligible for special benefits and discounts actually use them, said Kathleen Gardner with the congressional Committee of Health and Long Term Care in Washington, D.C.

"Generally, you're talking about people who are too proud to take advantage of the services," she said.

People born during the baby boom will do better financially as they grow older than will those born who were born during the Depression or World War II, Compton said.

"Therefore, to offer price discounts to the elderly is to be unfair to the nonelderly," Compton said. "America has a tremendous poverty problem, but it's not just a senior citizen problem any more."

Prison planning termed appalling

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Previous planning by the Texas Department of Corrections has been appalling, resulting in inefficient use of prison units and personnel, says the director of the state's prison system.

Raymond Procnier, director of Texas prisons, told TDC board members at a meeting Monday mismanagement by previous administrations has been a problem for the system.

An 800-bed unit at a new Wynne facility near Huntsville is vacant, said Procnier, adding that he did not even have enough personnel to staff it. At the Beto Unit, he said, another cellblock is also vacant.

The new Ellis II facility near Huntsville can be staffed "just by luck" by shuffling workers, he said.

Procnier said some units are impractically designed. Only 195 prisoners can be fed at one time at a facility holding 1,000 inmates, he said, thus adding to the problem of inmate violence.

"I would become upset if you got me up at 2 a.m. for breakfast and at 11:30 at night for dinner," he said.

Also at their meeting Monday, Dr. Arnold Start, TDC medical director, said he would investigate the case of two apparently contradictory autopsy reports.

Board member Harry Whittington, waving a photocopy of a story from the Galveston Daily News, said Short should discuss the discrepancies found in the two autopsies.

The two autopsies were performed on Barry Wayne Edwards who died July 7, 1983. TDC reports show Edwards died of viral pneumonia with focal viral meningitis. A second autopsy requested by family members showed the 20-year-old inmate died of cocaine poisoning.

Procnier also told board members Monday he "panics every week" when he sees inmate census figures, which show the prison population steadily climbing despite efforts to hold it down.

"It could be a freak of nature, but it's continuing to go up every month now during a time, in my experience, when the population goes down," Procnier said.

"Big decisions have to be made" when the board receives the new corrections department budget at a special meeting next month, Procnier said.

A comprehensive inmate grievance plan was passed by the board Monday. The plan would pay for itself, officials said, and would encourage good faith between inmates and the corrections department.

"In order for disciplinary procedures to work, this is essential," Procnier said.

The new grievance system — in effect since Sept. 1 — provides that an inmate experiencing a problem may discuss the issue with a grievance coordinator at the prison unit. The warden at the unit will decide on the grievance, which can be appealed to a regional grievance coordinator.

That decision may be appealed to a chief regional coordinator in Huntsville. The grievance can be taken to court if the inmate still believes he has a problem.

"This gives a way for a prisoner to appeal," Procnier said.

Inmates would see the local grievance coordinator as a problem-solver and a source of information from inmates to the wardens, prison officials said.

With the nation's second largest inmate population, Texas prisons now hold 35,700 inmates, up 570 in the last three months. Ninety percent of the 39,658 prisoner capacity has been reached.

The department must inform the governor when inmate levels rise to 94 percent. Population rollbacks must begin if that figure climbs to 95 percent.

Adoption trial begins

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — More than 60 jurors have been summoned in for controversial case of an unwed mother who claims she was coerced by Edna Gladney Home officials into giving up her baby girl for adoption.

In the civil case, Patricia Ellen Breeding, 19, of Shreveport, La., seeks to regain custody of her daughter, who has lived with foster parents since shortly after her birth Jan. 20.

A pool of 60 jurors — double the normal amount — was summoned to the court of state District Judge Frank W. Sullivan on Monday. Jury selection was scheduled to conclude later today.

The unusually large jury pool was used because of publicity surrounding the case.

Sullivan granted a motion sought by Gladney attorneys restricting what attorneys can say to reporters. He said the motion was not a gag order but merely reaffirms limits imposed by the State Bar of Texas on public comments lawyers can make on pending litigation.

Breeding signed papers relinquishing custody a week after she gave birth but contends she

PROTEST DUMPING—Protesters stage a sit-down in the driveway to a dumping site near Wilmer Monday to protest the disposal there of lead contaminated soil from west Dallas. Seven people participating in the protest were arrested. (AP Laserphoto)

Seven protesters are arrested at dump site for contaminated soil

WILMER, Texas (AP) — A "symbolic protest" by some 30 people to stop a caravan of trucks from dumping lead-contaminated soil in a landfill was halted when seven demonstrators, including a Baptist preacher and a city councilwoman, were arrested.

But the dumping resumed Monday after the arrests. They seven were issued misdemeanor citations for "attempting to block a public passageway," said Dallas County sheriff's spokesman Jim Ewell.

"It was a symbolic protest," said the Rev. Byron Barnes, pastor of the Wilmer First Baptist Church and organizer of the demonstration.

"We believe that dump site is in a flood plain and we were just trying to hold it up until the courts have decided," he said. "It's pretty bad when you don't have the money to fight the big city. This is a tragic time for Wilmer."

Barnes said attorneys for Wilmer have gone to federal court in Dallas seeking an injunction blocking the dumping, which was approved by the Dallas City Council after the county health department proclaimed it safe.

Barnes and his group claim the 30,000 cubic yards of soil dug up from a controversial west Dallas lead smelter would contaminate the water supply in this rural part of Dallas County.

Ewell said the seven were arrested while trying to block the first of eight dump trucks from backing up to a pit just outside the Wilmer city limits.

"As it was preparing to back in to make the drop into the huge pit, about 30 to 35 protesters got behind that truck," Ewell said. "Our task force commander told them they were subject to arrest if they did not remove themselves within 15 minutes. Five women and two men chose to ignore the warning."

Barnes threatened last week that 100 volunteers would try to block the entrance when dump trucks approached.

"We were prepared for this," Ewell said.

Sheriff's deputies were posted along the entrance to keep the passage open for the rest of the dump trucks, authorities said. Ewell said one woman was carried away to a paddy wagon. Fourteen sheriff's officials made the arrests.

The misdemeanor citations carry a maximum fine of $200. Barnes said the protesters were released on their personal recognizance and told to check in with a justice of the peace by Friday for a court date.

Thank You

To all our many friends and those who were concerned, I want to express our deepest and sincerest appreciation for your thoughtful concern and consideration during the untimely death of my husband. Your cards, blessings and contributions mean more to us than I can express. Thank you for being there, Neva Fritz and daughter.

Many school officials confused about ruling

DALLAS (AP) — A Supreme Court ruling ordering the Irving school district to provide a handicapped student with catheterization has left surrounding school districts confused about what services they have to provide for the handicapped.

But the lawyer who sued the district on behalf of 8-year-old Amber Tatro, who suffers from a condition which prevents her from voluntarily emptying her bladder, says school districts will "miss the point" unless they understand the "broader issues of the case."

"All along, the Irving school district kept saying it would be catheterization today and kidney dialysis tomorrow," said Jim Todd, the attorney who sued the district on behalf of the child. "But that simply isn't true."

Amber, the daughter of Henri and Mary Tatro, suffers from spina bifida and must have a catheter tube inserted at least twice during the school day because, thus far, she is unable to do the procedure herself.

School officials had argued before the Supreme Court that the procedure was a form of medical treatment that the law does not order the public education system to provide.

The Supreme Court, however, ruled in July that the school district must provide the service to the girl.

reported Monday that most suburban school districts already supplied catheterization to their students who could not empty their bladders normally.

"Have you ever seen a court case where everything was clear?" asked Don Long, superintendent of the Carrollton-Farmers Branch school district. "No, it isn't. When the occasion arises and someone wants other services, we'll have to ask our attorney. And if we feel it's necessary, we'll have to ask the court to define it."

THANK YOU!-

SAFELY HOME

I am home in Heaven, dear ones; Oh so happy and so bright. There is perfect joy and beauty in this everlasting light. All the pain and grief is over. Every restless tossing passed; I am now at peace forever. Safely home in Heaven at last. Did you wonder I so calmly trod the valley of the shade? Oh, but Jesus' love illumined Every dark and fearful glade. And he came himself to meet me in the way so hard to tread; And with Jesus' arm to lean on could I have on doubt or dread? Then you must not grieve so sorely for I love you dearly still. Try to look beyond death's shadows. Pray to trust our father's will. There is work still waiting for you so you must not idly stand. Do it now while life remaineth. You shall rest in Jesus' land. When that work is all completed. He will gently call you Home. Oh, the rapture of that meeting! Oh the joy to see you come!

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

No wonder their workers solemn

Labor Day is behind us for another year and we're on with the business of school, football and more hectic days. But before we leave Labor Day 1984 behind altogether, we should consider the words of Martin G. Giesbrecht.

Speaking at Wilmington College, where he is director of the Center for Management and Enterprise, Giesbrecht drew a sobering comparison of labor in the United States and those "workers paradises" behind the Iron Curtain.

Having recently returned from a tour of the Soviet Union, the Ukraine, Bulgaria and Romania, he said workers in those countries "celebrate their labor day, which comes May 1, with serious speeches and solemn parades. They have less to be happy about."

He found that farm and blue-collar labor still comprise more than half the labor force and that labor, for the most part, is hard, physical work.

"When Labor Day (in the United States) first became a holiday in the 1890s, about 80 percent of all working Americans were farmers or blue-collar industrial workers. Work was physical, labor meant sweat," he said. But technology, mechanization and the desire for personal gain relieved U.S. workers of much of the physical aspect of working. The same cannot be said of socialist and communist states, where the state plans, directs and controls every aspect of daily life. State leaders believe that those under their rule are incapable of making intelligent choice and that every invention, every decision must be made for the glory and benefit of government. This is the great flaw in the socialist's thought process.

The reverse is true. Every idea conceived by mankind in an effort to improve his own lot in life will, given the freedom to do so, benefit all people. The socialist process smothered independent, creative thought.

Free enterprise remains the most successful economic machine created by mankind. It has provided better, safer jobs; greater income and the opportunity to celebrate Labor day. In the workers' paradises, men and women toil at backbreaking labor with relatively little monetary or mental reward. Is it any wonder they view their labor day in a solemn fashion.

Balanced budget action

Two years ago, the U.S. Senate passed a constitutional amendment that would compel Congress to balance the budget. Shortly afterwards, the amendment went down to dusty death in Tip O'Neill's House of Representatives. Little has been heard of it since. But observe.

Balanced - budget backers in the House (including Texas Democrat Charles Stenholm) are gathering signatures for a discharge petition, which, if successful, would bring the amendment to the floor of the House.

As it is, the speaker's troops have it bottled up tightly in the Judiciary Committee. O'Neill regards the amendment with the same affection he would bestow on a skunk or a Ronald Reagan speech.

Over 180 signatures have been collected; 218 are necessary. That's still quite a gap. On the other hand, it's an election year, Republican candidates all over the country are talking up the amendment, and, as one Washington economic analyst inquires, "How do you say you're against a balanced budget?"

The amendment could come to the House floor in late September. Keep your eyes open.

Bear in mind likewise that pro - amendment forces have launched, in military terms, a pincers movement: one pincer being Congress, the other the states.

To date, thirty - two states have passed resolutions calling on Congress either to pass a balanced - budget amendment or call a constitutional convention and submit such an amendment to the states for ratification. If two more states so act, Congress is constitutionally bound to comply.

The pro - amendment cause suffered a setback the other day. California's Supreme Court threw Proposition 35 off the November ballot. Prop 35 would have compelled the legislature to pass the balanced - budget resolution in twenty days or see their pay suspended. The court said so blunt a directive violated both the U.S. and California constitutions.

California may not be out of the game, even so. U.S. Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist is to rule this week on a request to stay the California court's order.

Meanwhile there's action in two other states: Michigan, where the Senate already has passed a pro - balanced budget resolution, and House action is due shortly; and Minnesota, where a constitutional amendment similar to the California proposition is on the ballot.

In other words, it's uncanny how close the amendment is coming to reality. Ironically, the Democratic presidential ticket's decision to make a major issue of the deficit probably fuels the push for the remedy Democrats dislike most. I mean, constitutional shackles on the right to spend taxpayers' money? How, in that event, do you court the varied interest groups that are your supporters?

It's important to say at this juncture that the balanced - budget amendment isn't a cure - all for the federal deficit. It wouldn't make congressmen less eager to spend your money; it WOULD make them more cautious about it, in order to avoid raising taxes or cutting back other programs.

Most of the sovereign states long ago enacted balanced - budget amendments. In Texas, for instance, the state comptroller must certify how much money is likely to be collected in taxes over two years' time. The Legislature sits down and votes to spend just that amount, no more; unless, to be sure, it wants to run the risk of raising taxes. This is no leap in the dark, no daring plunge over Niagara. Balanced - budget amendments work.

Good thing, too, because, maybe, just maybe, just maybe the United States as a whole will soon have one.

Today in History

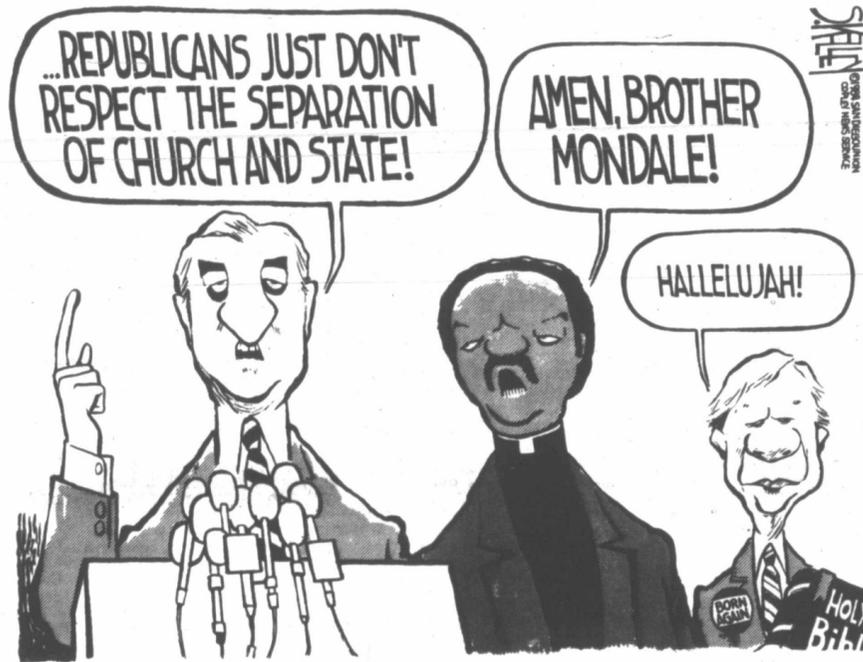

Today is Tuesday, Sept. 11, the 255th day of 1984. There are 111 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Sept. 11, 1777, forces under Gen. George Washington were defeated by the British in the Battle of Brandywine near Wilmington, Del. Washington's troops were forced back into Philadelphia, which fell to the British.

On this date: One year ago: The United States revised its transcript of a monitored conversation between a Soviet jet fighter pilot and ground controllers. In the revision, the pilot was quoted as saying he had fired "cannon bursts" several minutes before shooting down the Korean Air Lines jet.

Today's birthdays: Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos is 67. Dallas football coach Tom Landry is 60. Actor Earl Holliman is 56. Oregon Sen. Robert Packwood is 52. Movie director Brian De Palma is 44.

Thought for today: "The final test of science is not whether its accomplishments add to our comfort, knowledge and power, but whether it adds to our dignity as men, our sense of truth and beauty." — David Sarnoff, broadcasting pioneer (1891-1971).

The great tattoo controversy

I thought about getting a tattoo once. After Georgia defeated Notre Dame in the Sugar Bowl to win the 1980 national collegiate football championship, I thought about having "How 'Bout Them Dawgs" tattooed on my forehead.

Lucky for me, however, all the tattoo parlors in New Orleans were closed, and when they opened the next day I was much too sober to do anything like have a tattoo painted on my forehead.

I've known a few people who had tattoos. Frankie Garfield, who was the town bully when I was growing up, had a dragon tattooed on his stomach. His navel was the dragon's mouth. People came from miles around to marvel at the fire the tattooist painted coming out of Frankie's navel.

I bring up tattoos because currently there is controversy involving tattoos in Camden County, Georgia. Camden County is located on the Georgia coast and is the home of the Navy's Kings Bay submarine base.

Because wherever there are sailors, there normally will be tattoo parlors, Camden County commissioners have clamped down on local tattooists by adopting a stern ordinance.

First, if a customer walks into a tattoo parlor in Camden County and asks for a tattoo, he must wait 24 hours before the job can be done.

One of the commissioners, Jack Sutton, had tattoos put on both of his legs when he was an 18-year - old seaman. He wanted an ordinance so young sailors wouldn't get tattooed on impulse and later have regrets.

The ordinance also forbids a tattooist to perform his wonders on anybody who is drunk, which if adopted all over the country very well could do away with tattooing altogether. Who could get a tattoo cold sober?

To make it even tougher on tattooists, the ordinance asks a $5,000 annual business license fee for each tattoo parlor and another five big ones for each artist other than the parlor owner.

A man named Eric Pearlman, who is from Pittsburgh and says he has a degree in art, applied for a permit to move his tattoo business from nearby Brunswick to just outside Kings Bay in order to get the sailor trade.

"These people are trying to legislate morality," said Mr. Pearlman. "They say they don't want a bunch of strip joints and tattoo parlors up and down the highway here."

"Tattooing has nothing to do with sex, or drugs, or drinking or stripping. It's an art form, like music. And it's a Navy tradition.

"There is tattooing going on in Camden County, but it's being done in unclean kitchens where infection is a problem."

Pearlman said the average cost of a tattoo is $35 and takes about 45 minutes to complete. He said there is very little pain involved and tattoos can be taken off by a doctor.

"The only regret some people have is when they have a name tattooed and later want the name changed because they're divorced or something like that," he said.

I can see the problem there. You marry Roxanne after you've divorced Gloria, and Roxanne certainly doesn't want to see your ex-wife's name every time she looks at your navel.

Pearlman also said he is a Vietnam veteran and fought for the Constitution that guarantees him the right to tattoo in Camden County.

I'm not sure if the founding fathers really put anything about tattoos in the Constitution, but I do know one thing: If Georgia ever wins another national championship and I find a tattoo parlor open, I hope and pray somebody will make me take 24 hours to think about it before I do something very strange.

New ideas are hard to find

Liberal columnist Richard Reeves makes the interesting point that "intellectual ferment has begun on the Left." He says that "foundations in New York, like Carnegie, Ford, the Rockefeller Brothers and others are beginning to finance studies like nuclear issues." He concludes that "it takes years for ideas to break out, but they will."

Actually, major liberal foundations have provided massive funding for anti - defense groups for years. Mr. Reeves, however, detects and approves the latest push.

These foundations have a right to fund projects that aid the anti - defense lobby, however unwise and hurtful to U.S. interests. Conservatives, for their part, have been active in financing studies that are in accord with their priorities. The conservatives, to be sure, haven't anything like the massive foundation resources available to liberal - left causes.

The battle of the foundations and think tanks is an accepted part of American life. As Mr. Reeves correctly notes, party labels don't mean as much these days as they did in the past. In the mid - 1980s, politicians try to sell themselves on the basis of "new ideas" and that's where the foundations and think tanks come in. This approach doesn't always work, of course, as Sen. Gary Hart discovered. His failure to win the Democratic presidential nomination can be attributed at least in part to the fact that his "new ideas" campaign lacked authentic new ideas.

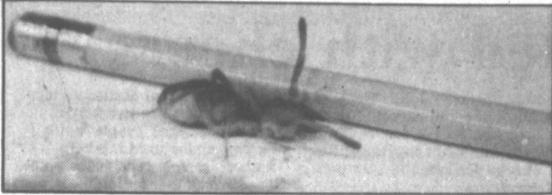

No one should condemn the search for new ideas. We need them in this decade. The world is an increasingly complex place. Citizens have difficult decisions to make on a vast array of public policy issues. Solutions to the problems we face as a nation depend very much on the discovery of new ideas, new approaches, new insights.

The public should insist, however, that it be presented with authentically new ideas.

The fact, however, is that new ideas are hard to find. They arise from dedicated and sincere studies, not from propagandistic desires or political hucksterism. Both liberals and conservatives are guilty of offering "new ideas" of questionable worth.

If one reads about the liberal "new ideas" in journals of that persuasion, one usually discovers that they are reiterations of concepts developed during the Roosevelt New Deal. Advocates of liberal innovation seem to have their minds firmly set on the year 1932, on the redistribution of income and the build - up of the federal bureaucracy.

A SOLIF-A-WHAT? - A Pampa man didn't know what to think when his daughter called him out to see "a funny spider" she had found in a sandpile in the southeast section of the city. Mike Archibald went to the sandpile and found this inch-long creature, which he captured. The "funny spider" is actually a solifugid, related to the scorpion family. Though rather formidable looking, the solifugid is generally harmless, with no poison glands. But their mandibles can cause a painful nip to the fingers; their jaws can crush a hard-armored beetle, creating a sound that can be heard at a distance of 200 yards on a silent evening. The solifugids are not common to this area, more generally found in the desert areas south and west of the Panhandle region. (Staff photo by Ed Copeland)

Lefors accepts audit report

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer
LEFORS - Members of the Lefors City Council accepted an audit report for April 1, 1982, through March 31, 1983, during their regular meeting Monday night.

The council had authorized the audit by Dickey, Cory and Co. of Pampa to begin development of regular accounting procedures for use in preparing better formalized annual budgets for the city. David Cory presented the audit to the council, noting the only major problem was the absence of a fixed assets funds group. But he said obtaining those figures would be hard since it would require "going back to the beginning" to determine the worth of all the city's assets over the years.

Cory said the audit took a long time to prepare because of problems in formulating specific figures. He recommended changes in the city's bookkeeping procedures to bring them in accord with more standardized systems for audit preparations.

The firm is currently engaged in preparing an audit for 1984. Cory said the new audit should proceed more smoothly with the first audit available for comparison and with familiarity with the city's bookkeeping. City Secretary Yvonne Pittman said the audits will aid the council to prepare a formalized budget. When the next audit is submitted, "then we can start moving forward," she said.

In other matters, engineering consultant Gene Barber of Pampa discussed proposals for the city to consider on improvements in the gas pipeline system. He said the city should consider applying for long-range financing through the Farmers Home Administration.

Barber said the city could use revenue bonds to finance gas system repairs, with the bonds paid off through utility revenues.

He said it would be more advantageous to the city to replace the pipeline a section at a time to rebuild the system.

Barber said the process of making applications for funds should begin soon, since it often takes a year or so to get all the financing procedures arranged.

Barber also suggested the city should develop plans for gaining water rights for future needs. He said the city's water system was currently adequate, but said problems could develop in the future. He recommended the city could also begin making applications for funds for a water project. Councilman J. W. Franks expressed some reservations on beginning a project without any specific figures available. He said the projects "would have to be paid for somehow."

He said he was against any tax increases now and would prefer to get funds from grants, if possible, without having to raise taxes.

Councilman John Ashford said he didn't feel he had enough information now on definite costs to consider moving ahead with plans. "We've got to have some figures before we can make a decision," he said.

He questioned Barber about what his fees would be for proposing a plan and applying for funds. Barber could give no definite figures, saying the costs generally are based on a percentage of the project cost.

Questioned further by Ashford, he admitted there would be a charge for developing the plans even if the project would later be rejected. But he quoted no specific amount for the fees.

Franks, supported by Ashford and Councilwoman Betty Hannon, suggested the council should do some studies of their own to decide if they wanted to proceed with the project. The council voted to table any action on Barber's proposals until after they studied the matters further.

City Marshall Gary McFall said the city needed to replace some traffic control signs. The yellow stop and yield signs are invalid under state regulations, he said. He also said the city needs to take steps to eliminate blind corners.

Councilman Wendell Akins raised complaints about youths driving cars in the city without driver's licenses, saying it is illegal for them to do so. He also said there are problems with three-wheelers and motorbikes being driven by youths on city streets.

He said the youths "ought to be given tickets if they're breaking the law."

Akins also said he has noted several accidents almost occurring because of the situation, adding parents should be made aware they could face liability problems if their children are involved in accidents with others.

"I believe we better put a stop to it, or someone's going to get hurt or killed," he said.

Other council members agreed and told McFall to issue tickets in such situations.

Ashford said he had some complaints about the city paying expenses to install a waterline to residents north of the city.

He said an agreement had been made with the residents and the waterlines and meters were installed at no cost to the city. The residents in the area are being charged out-of-town water rates.

Mayor Ben White reported he had received a letter from the state Department of Health concerning some conditions at the city's landfill. The main problem was that of the city's needing to keep the solid wastes at the site compacted and regularly covered with dirt.

"lend us strength and warmth" in the success of United Way, he said.

Steve Jones, drive chairman, said the local program has had "a great track record" and has had "great leadership." He praised the efforts of United Way activities in Pampa, in which "everyone is willing to make a total commitment to the United Way effort."

Volunteer workers will be going out to contact individuals, businesses, industries, professional associations and others for contributions in the next two months. Directing the activities are seven division chairmen and two loaned executives.

The United Way board of directors consists of 15 members and two ex officio members.

Members whose terms expire in December are C. M. "Chuck"

White, chairman; Bill Jones, secretary-treasurer; Louise Fletcher, Phil Gentry and Ray Hupp.

Directors whose terms expire in December, 1985, are Sara Carmichael, president; Kirk Duncan, John Curry, Jim Olsen and Richard Stowers, Jr. Others, with terms up in December, 1986, are Cheryl Every, Ron Hasebroock, Evelyn Johnson, Darrell Nordeen and Joan Vining.

Ex officio members are Reed Echols and W. A. "Dub" Morgan. Executive director in the United Way office in City Hall is Jan Lyle.

Chamber president Marion John presided at the luncheon. Luncheon chairman was Louise Fletcher. Decorations were provided by members of the Altrusa Club. Dinner music was performed by Jerry Whitten.

Jewish couple loses appeals court fight

AUSTIN (AP) - A state appeals court has affirmed a contempt ruling against a Jewish couple who said their religious beliefs do not allow them to testify against their son.

The Court of Criminal Appeals order on Monday rescinded the bond under which Bernard and Odette Port - whose son is accused of murdering a postal carrier - had been freed.

David Port, 17, is charged in the June 7 slaying of Debra Sue Schatz, 23, who was making deliveries in the the Ports' Houston neighborhood.

On Aug. 21, Bernard and Odette Port refused to answer grand jury questions about the case. A week later, State District Judge I.D. McMaster held them in contempt, freeing them on bond pending the appeal.

The appeals court, without writing an opinion, turned down the Ports' appeal. The ruling came shortly after a prosecutor told the appellate judges that the Ports' religious beliefs were "far outweighed by the public interest in identifying and prosecuting the perpetrator of a heinous crime."

Harris County Assistant District Attorney William Delmore III also said in his brief that the Ports' testimony "is essential and not otherwise available."

The religious grounds raised by the Ports are not applicable to courts of law, only to "religious forums," according to Delmore, who said the Ports' beliefs are "unsupported by religious doctrine."

Jim Lavine, Harris County assistant district attorney, said Monday officials would wait until today before deciding if the Ports will be arrested again.

"Until we see the order out of the Court of Criminal Appeals, we can't take appropriate action," he said. "One way or the other, we're going to do what we can to get them in jail."

The Ports, in a brief filed earlier by Houston lawyer Randy Schaffer, claim that "Jews are obligated to obey the commandment to 'Honor thy father and mother.'"

Chamber to elect new directors

Members of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce are in the process of electing seven directors in preparation for the upcoming annual Chamber banquet.

The new directors, elected to three-year terms, will serve on the Chamber board for the 1984-1985 year.

Ballots will be counted Friday by the Election Committee in the Chamber office.

Nominees include Bob Chambers, manager of Alco Discount Store; Warren Chisum, owner of J. T. Richardson Trucking Co.; Bill Duncan, vice president of Security Federal Savings and Loan; Louise Fletcher, publisher of The Pampa News; Jerry Foote, vice president of National Bank of Commerce; Larry Gilbert, director of Clarendon College, Pampa Center, and Ronald Hess, owner of W-B Pump and Supply.

Other nominees are Doug Lockwood, manager of Cabot Corporation, Pampa Plant; Brent Stephens, maintenance and engineering manager, Celanese Chemical Co.; Richard Stowers, sales manager of Culberson-Stowers Chevrolet; Ray Thompson, owner of H. R. Thompson Parts and Supply Co.; Norma Ward, owner of Norma Ward Realty; Virginia Wilkerson, partner in Builders Plumbing Supply Co., and Robert (Bob) Williams, manager of Federal Land Bank Association.

The annual Chamber meeting will be held in the Heritage Room of M. K. Brown Auditorium on Thursday, Oct. 18. A reception will begin at 6:30 p.m. with the banquet at 7:15 p.m.

Gloria Gilbert, Miss Texas of 1982, and her friend "Homer" will be the featured performers on the program.

"Since you will have heard at least one speech every day for quite some time because of the general election, we have planned an evening of entertainment," said Marion John, Chamber president. "Gloria is considered one of the most talented ventriloquists in the entertainment industry today," he said. Gilbert and Homer have entertained throughout the nation, sharing the stage with other entertainers such as Willie Nelson, Gary Collins and Englebert Humperdinck.

The Pampa High School Show Choir also will be on the program. The meal will be catered, featuring 12-oz. steaks with all the trimmings, John said. Tickets will be $12 per person.

Chamber members will have first opportunity to purchase the tickets until Tuesday, Sept. 18. After that date, tickets will go on sale to the general public.

Tickets may be purchased at the Chamber office.

ALREADY FOR DIANA—Tape covers the windows of a convenience store on Tybee Island, Ga., Monday as residents prepared for the possible landfall of Hurricane Diana.

Hurricane strokes up power as it lurks off East coast

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Hurricane Diana churned the ocean with winds in excess of 110 mph today, stoking up power and threatening to bounce inland as worried island dwellers moved to high ground and coastal residents secured boats, taped windows and stocked up on emergency supplies.

Hal Gerrish of the National Hurricane Center in Miami said Monday night that Diana was getting stronger and if it takes "a slight northward trend, it could make landfall in a very short time."

"The storm now presents the greatest threat to the north coastal areas of South Carolina," the National Weather Service said in recommending voluntary evacuations of beachfront areas from Georgetown to North Myrtle Beach.

At 6 a.m. the weather service said the 110-mph winds represented "a significant increase in strength over the past few hours" and "a more immediate threat to the Carolina coasts."

Diana became the season's first Atlantic hurricane Monday morning after sustained winds passed the 74 mph threshold off Jacksonville, Fla. All day it trudged north along the Georgia and South Carolina coasts at about 5 mph, slowly building strength.

School was canceled in parts of South Carolina and Georgia, beaches were closed from Florida to North Carolina, rescue boats were towed inland and military planes were flown to safer fields. Banks in Savannah, Ga., closed at 2 p.m. Monday and sent employees home. Windows on businesses and homes in Charleston were boarded and taped.

A hurricane warning was in effect from just north of Brunswick, Ga., to Oregon Inlet, N.C., just south of Kitty Hawk. Gale warnings were posted north to just south of Virginia Beach, Va.

At 4 a.m. today, the storm was drifting northeast at less than 5 mph about 90 miles southeast of Charleston, with the eye at latitude 32.0 north and longitude 78.6 west. Diana's highest sustained winds were 110 mph, and gales extended 100 miles in all directions, the weather service said. An Air Force plane reported "a well-defined eye has formed."

Tides of 1 to 3 feet above normal will occur along the coast ahead of the storm, and waves up to 8 feet above normal could crash ashore if the hurricane moves inland, the weather service said.

Forecasters faced two problems trying to predict Diana's wanderings today.

"One, it's strengthening. Two is the fact that we have very weak steering currents and the motion is rather uncertain," Gerrish said.

"A high pressure area may be building to the north" of the hurricane, he said. "There may be sufficient time for a high pressure area to build. That would tend to retard its northward progress. It certainly could stop and reverse it. That's one of the things we have to watch."

About two-thirds of the 1,500 residents of Georgia's Tybee Island, just south of Hilton Head, S.C., had evacuated by Monday night, said Lew Dotson, civil defense director. But those who stayed watched the show.

"I didn't believe it was going to hit to begin with," said Neil Boreham, 35, one of about a dozen people in a tavern on the beach. "Everybody had an attitude where it didn't bother them at all. They just sat down and had a few beers."

Pope greeted with cheers

MONTREAL (AP) — Pope John Paul II, following an unsolved bombing, was greeted with cheers and songs early today in French Canada's largest city.

Thousands of faithful gathered outside his residence in downtown Montreal and gave him a midnight serenade shortly after his arrival after a 175-mile train journey up the St. Lawrence River valley.

But the pope also faced the first protest of his 12-day Canadian visit and the menace lingering from a fatal explosion last week which has been followed by frequent bomb threats.

On the third and busiest day so far of his Canadian tour, the pope planned to meet today with priests at a basilica where a layman is said to have worked miracles, to visit the tomb of a pioneer nun he canonized two years ago, to beatify another nun, and to address thousands of young people in an evening rally at Olympic Stadium.

A group calling itself the Coalition Against the Pope's Visit announced a late afternoon march — well away from the papal route — to protest church teachings on sex. Organizers said they expected 500 to 800 people to take part.

"We're not against the person of the pope, we're against some of the things he says," said Francois Saillant, whose coalition includes students, gays, atheists and feminists. "He is against the right of abortion, against birth control, against the right of liberty of sexual orientation."

A separate women's group bought a newspaper advertisement to protest church prohibitions on divorce and abortion.

Veronique O'Leary, a spokeswoman for the Collective for Women's Freedom, said 1,200 women signed the ad and declared they were "publicly renouncing our affiliation with the Roman Catholic church."

The pope on Monday blessed thousands of Canadian Indians and Eskimos at the shrine of Ste. Anne de Beaupre in Quebec. He made the journey to Montreal in a special papal train with bulletproof windows and with the papal coat of arms painted on its nose.

When the 10-car train pulled into Windsor Station, John Paul II stepped onto a red-carpeted train platform and rode a few hundred yards to a late-night prayer service at Mary Queen of Heaven Cathedral.

Montreal security officials have been jittery since the Sept. 3 bombing at Central Station — just two blocks from Windsor Station — which killed three people waiting for a train and injured 51 others.

Authorities had received a note that appeared to threaten the pope and predict the time of the blast, but did not mention a bomb.

BRIEF EXPLANATORY STATEMENTS OF PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS GENERAL ELECTION NOVEMBER 6, 1984

PROPOSITION NO. 1 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 29 proposes a constitutional amendment that provides to state-chartered banks the same rights and privileges that are or may be granted to national banks of the United States domiciled in this state. For example, if national banks become authorized to maintain branch offices, this amendment would extend the same privilege to state banks.

The proposed constitutional amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment to provide state banks the same rights and privileges as national banks."

PROPOSITION NO. 2 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 19 proposes a constitutional amendment that restructures the Permanent University Fund to provide: (1) for the expansion of the institutions eligible to participate in the bonding capacity of the fund to include the components of The University of Texas and Texas A&M University systems that have been added to those two systems of higher education since the Permanent University Fund was last restructured by constitutional amendment; (2) for the expansion of the purposes for which bond proceeds can be expended from new construction to include major repair and rehabilitation projects and the acquisition of major capital equipment (e.g., computers and laboratory equipment) and library books and materials; (3) for an increase in the bonding capacity from 20% (3% for The University of Texas System and 1% for Texas A&M University System) of the value of the assets (exclusive of real estate) in the Permanent University Fund in order to provide sufficient bond proceeds to care for the addition of 10 new institutions to the Permanent University Fund bonding program and to care for the expanded purposes for which the bond proceeds can be spent; and (4) for the dedication of the dividends, interest, and other income from the Permanent University Fund remaining after payment of principal and interest due on bonds and notes issued, to the provision of support and maintenance (over and above normal legislative appropriations) for Texas A&M University in Brazos County, Prairie View A&M University, and The University of Texas at Austin.

House Joint Resolution 19 also annually appropriates $100 million in each fiscal year, beginning September 1, 1985 (from the first money coming into the state treasury that is not otherwise appropriated by the constitution) for the use of those education which are not included in The University of Texas or Texas A&M University Systems and, therefore, not eligible to participate in the Permanent University Fund bonding program. The amount of this appropriation could be adjusted every five years by a 1/2 vote of the Legislature, but could not be adjusted in such a way as to affect outstanding bonding indebtedness. Each institution of higher education that is eligible to participate (i.e., those institutions of higher education outside The University of Texas and Texas A&M University Systems) would be authorized to expend directly its share (such share to be determined pursuant to an equitable formula) of the $100 million appropriation for the purposes of acquiring land, constructing and equipping buildings or other permanent improvements, major repair and rehabilitation of other permanent buildings or improvements, and acquisition of major capital equipment (e.g., computers and laboratory equipment) and library books and materials. Additionally, each institution would be authorized to issue bonds backed by a pledge of up to 50% of its share of the $100 million annual appropriation for the purpose of land acquisition, new construction, and major repair and rehabilitation projects.

Except in the case of fire or natural disaster and in other extraordinary cases, verified by a two-thirds vote of each house of the legislature, all institutions of higher education would be precluded from receiving appropriations of general revenue funds for the purposes of land acquisition, new construction, and major repair and rehabilitation projects.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment to create from general revenue a special higher education assistance fund for construction and related activities, to restructure the Permanent University Fund, and to increase the number of institutions eligible to benefit from the Permanent University Fund."

PROPOSITION NO. 3 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 65 proposes a constitutional amendment which authorizes the legislature to provide for the payment of assistance to the surviving dependent parents, brothers, and sisters of officers, employees and agents of the state or its political subdivisions, including members of organized volunteer fire departments and members of organized police reserve or auxiliary units authorized to make arrests, who die in the course of performing hazardous official duties. Payments to surviving spouses and dependent children of agencies and institutions of higher such officers, employees, and agents are already authorized by the Constitution.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment authorizing the legislature to provide for payment of assistance to the surviving dependent parents, brothers, and sisters of certain public servants killed while on duty."

PROPOSITION NO. 4 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 20 proposes a constitutional amendment which abolishes the office of county treasurer in Bexar and Collin counties if a majority of the voters in each of those counties vote in favor of abolishing the office of county treasurer in a local election to be held on the issue. All the powers, duties, and functions of the office of county treasurer in each of these counties would be transferred to the county clerk.

The proposed constitutional amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment to abolish the office of county treasurer in Bexar and Collin counties."

PROPOSITION NO. 5 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 22 proposes a constitutional amendment which provides a new method of filling a vacancy in the office of Lieutenant Governor. The amendment requires the President pro tempore of the Senate to call together the committee of the whole Senate within 30 days after a vacancy occurs in the office of Lieutenant Governor. The committee would be required to elect one of its members to perform the duties of the Lieutenant Governor until the next general election. This individual would continue his duties as Senator at the same time that he performs the Lieutenant Governor's duties. If the Senator who is elected ceases to be a Senator before the next general election, another Senator must be elected according to the above procedure to perform the Lieutenant Governor's duties. The President pro tempore would be required to perform the Lieutenant Governor's duties pending the election of one of its members by the committee of the whole Senate.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment authorizing the state senate to fill a vacancy in the office of lieutenant governor."

PROPOSITION NO. 6 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 73 proposes a constitutional amendment that permits the use of public funds and credit for payment of premiums on non-assessable life, health, or accident insurance policies and annuity contracts issued by a mutual insurance company authorized to do business in this state. The constitutional prohibition against a grant of public money to an individual, association, or corporation or against becoming a stockholder in a corporation, association, or company has limited life and health group policies of political subdivisions to non-mutual insurance companies. The amendment would permit mutual insurance companies to bid for those policies.

The proposed constitutional amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment to permit use of public funds and credit for payment of premiums on certain insurance contracts of mutual insurance companies authorized to do business in Texas."

PROPOSITION NO. 7 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 4 proposes a constitutional amendment to change the membership of the State Commission on Judicial Conduct to include one Judge of a Municipal Court and one Judge of a County Court at Law, who shall be selected at large and appointed by the Supreme Court with the advice and consent of the Senate.

The amendment also provides additional grounds for removal from office of judges or justices of Texas courts, and provides additional disciplinary actions that could be taken in lieu of removal or censure. The amendment would extend the Commission's disciplinary authority to masters, magistrates, and retired or former judges who hear cases by designation. The amendment creates a tribunal to review recommendations of the State Commission on Judicial Conduct for removal or retirement of a judge or justice. The review tribunal would be composed of seven (7) Justices or Judges of the Courts of Appeals selected by lot by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. The amendment also provides for appeal of the review tribunal's decision to the Supreme Court of Texas and grants an accused judge the right to discovery of evidence.

The proposition will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment relating to the membership of the State Commission on Judicial Conduct and the authority and procedure to discipline active judges, certain retired and former judges, and certain masters and magistrates of the courts."

PROPOSITION NO. 8 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 22 proposes a constitutional amendment which increases the per diem of members of the Legislature. The amount of per diem allowed during a calendar year would be equal to the maximum amount set in federal income tax statutes as of January 1 of that same year as a deduction for ordinary and necessary business expenses incurred by a state legislator. Current per diem is $30; the maximum deduction is now $75.

The proposed constitutional amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: "The constitutional amendment to provide a per diem for members of the legislature equal to the maximum daily amount allowed by federal law as a deduction for ordinary and necessary business expenses incurred by a state legislator."

Auto union looking over new G.M. job security proposal

DETROIT (AP) — The United Auto Workers union, its contract with General Motors Corp. due to expire at midnight Friday, is studying a job security proposal that the automaker says would protect a "significant portion" of its union workers.

The proposal made Monday addresses the UAW's primary demand that automotive jobs stay in the United States and out of non-union shops, said Chief GM negotiator Alfred Warren.

He released few details, and the union said it would not comment until it closely examined the proposal.

"The proposal is complex and quite lengthy," said chief union negotiator Donald Ephlin. Union spokesman Donald Mitchell said a response probably would come today.

The union has demanded wage increases for its 350,000 workers at GM, but its leaders have said they could call a strike over job security provisions. Warren said Monday a contract settlement could be reached before midnight Friday.

"We're going to make it," he said. Warren said the job security proposal would allow GM the "flexibility" it wants, but he would not elaborate. In the past he has used flexibility to mean freedom to farm out parts work to non-UAW shops and to buy hundreds of thousands of cars from Japan and South Korea for sale in America as Chevrolets and Pontiacs.

Warren said the job protection offer would be costly to GM and called it "probably one of the most far-reaching and one of the most important offers we've ever made to the United Auto Workers."

The union has said it wants guarantees the unionized workforce will not drop below 300,000.

An earlier GM job-security proposal was rejected out of hand.

Turning their backs on ARMs

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Discounted ARMs, those mortgages that hauled homebuilders out of the pits and boosted financially strapped folks into the houses of their dreams, may be losing strength.

The turn of events comes after a year in which such loans, as if by magic, helped many people to qualify for a house they otherwise couldn't afford.

Now, says the nation's largest independent mortgage banker, Lomas & Nettleton, everyone seems to be turning his back on ARMs — borrowers, financial markets in which ARMs are wholesaled, regulatory agencies, and money markets.

It prompts James Wooten, president of the big Dallas-based mortgage outfit to comment that, of all things, the fixed-rate mortgage is coming back, even if borrower and lenders aren't ready for it.

The fixed-rate mortgage, as most people who own houses know, is the kind of loan that was standard for 50 years. Commonly, it featured a steady rate for a very long time, in most cases 20 or 30 years.

In the volatile 1970s, though, interest rates in general soared, but not on those fixed-rate mortgages. By contract, lenders couldn't raise the rates. And if they tried, usury laws would have intervened.

The solution, which was worked out over several years between regulators and lenders, was the introduction of adjustable rate mortgages, or loans on which the interest rate would rise, or even fall, with rates in general.

They caught on quickly because the market needed them. As an inducement to borrowers, lenders offered rates that might be 1.5 percentage points lower than fixed-rate loans. It was just enough to bring borrowers back to market.

In 1981, only 5 percent of mortgage loans were ARMs. This year, two-thirds of them are ARMs. Borrowers liked them because of the lower rates. Lenders loved them because ARMs offered better protection in volatile markets.

Then came the abuses. In order to qualify more hard-pressed buyers, lenders offered discounted ARMs — for one year. "Discounted to rates of 8, 9, 10 percent or below, they were pep pills to the housing market," said Wooten.

Congress began to worry. Buyers could be placed in extreme jeopardy if, after one year, their "teaser" loan, as they became called, jumped back to the prevailing rate of other ARMs.

The Federal National Mortgage Association, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the Federal Housing Administration, the U.S. League of Savings Associations and others agreed that ARMs should be standardized.

Now, an ARM borrower's income must be 3.57 times the mortgage payments, versus only 3 times for a fixed-rate borrower.

Consumer groups silent in steel quota battle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer groups have been conspicuously silent during one of the year's noisiest battles: the steel industry's fight for stiff import quotas. Instead, fair trade groups backed by big banks, big industry and big business are pleading the consumer's cause.

Saying they can't "cover every hot issue," three major consumer lobbies are staying on the sidelines, letting others warn about skyrocketing steel prices and higher costs for cars, appliances, machinery and aircraft.

"Most consumers really are not aware of the consequences of the steel quota," says Doreen Brown, director of Consumers For World Trade, which is supported by companies such as Caterpillar Tractor, Xerox and Bank of America.

"Retailers feel they're surrogate consumers. We feel the consumers' unhappiness ... When the price goes up, we feel it first," said Robert Brouse of the Retail Industry Trade Action Coalition, which contends textile and apparel quotas cost consumers $4 billion this year.

The non-partisan Congressional Budget Office says an across-the-board steel quota pending in Congress, more comprehensive than the ITC plan, would add $67 to each ton of steel by 1989. The American Institute for Imported Steel contends the rise would be $100 per ton.

The CBO estimates of short-term price increases are "so high compared with present price levels as to be totally inconsistent with those of most analysts, stretching credulity beyond the breaking point," according to the American Iron and Steel Institute.

But the Congressional Research

Service, an arm of the Library of Congress, counters that the inflationary impact of steel quotas would be "relatively small."

President Reagan must act by Sept. 24 on the U.S. International Trade Commission's package of tariffs and quotas that would restrain 70 percent of the foreign steel sold in the United States.

The ITC, agreeing with the domestic steel industry's arguments, ruled on July 11 that foreign steel shipped to the United States in 1983 caused serious injury to American steelmakers and should be temporarily restrained.

The ITC package would cost consumers $7.8 billion yearly, according to CWT. The Federal Trade Commission puts the cost at $1 billion over five years. Domestic steel companies say aggressive competition would keep prices down.

Even with so much money at stake, three consumer groups said they plan to stay out of the steel quota controversy.

"Traditionally on trade issues we haven't been able to take across-the-board positions. And we've got a lot of other issues that are a lot more direct and we feel more comfortable with," said Gene Kimmelman, legislative director of the Consumer Federation of America, which represents 30 million members of some 200 state and local groups, including some unions.

"It's not true that we always agree with labor," Kimmelman said. "We are caught in the middle (on steel) because we can see both sides."

Officials of Congress Watch, a Ralph Nader group, and Consumers Union, affiliated with the 3-million circulation magazine Consumer Reports, said small staffs limit their lobbying and their priorities.

"In general I have yet to see an import restriction that I like," said Mark Silber, director of Consumers Union's Washington office.

But he said his three-person staff "can't cover every hot issue in Washington" and is concentrating now on consumer finance, telecommunications services and health and safety issues.

"That doesn't mean we don't oppose quotas or the improper use of tariffs," Silber added. "We do oppose as a general proposition the use of those devices as a means of protection."

Nancy Drabble, head of the 60,000-member Congress Watch, said her group has focused this year on product liability legislation, hazardous waste cleanup funding and pesticide regulations.

"Steel import quotas just don't happen to be one of our issues," said Ms. Drabble. "It's not because of labor interest involvement. We don't get labor money like some consumer groups. We have grass roots supporters."

Meanwhile, CWT has enlisted importers, exporters, port interests, farmers, retailers and manufacturers in its free trade crusade, many of them with more at stake than consumer prices. CWT's supporters view steel protection as a threat not only to consumer prices but to their businesses as well.

CWT and its backers defend their authority to champion the

Cooking taught in supermarket

Dear Abby

It's hard to teach kids who aren't even in school

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Now that school has resumed, as a high school teacher, may I make a few suggestions that would greatly improve our nation's educational system and cost the taxpayers nothing? Make school attendance a top priority!

A message to students: Stop skipping school because you don't want to face a challenging day. Accept those challenges and do your best. Your whole life will be filled with challenges, so learn to deal with them now—one day at a time.

A message to parents: Stop letting your children skip school to go shopping, to go hunting, to sleep in, to go on a family vacation, to nurse a minor ache, or whatever. It's your responsibility to see that your children get eight hours of sleep each night, eat nutritious meals (especially breakfast) and get to school on time.

A message to business people: Stop hiring students to work during school hours. And please stop hiring teen-age students to work after 8 p.m. on evenings before a school day. They need time to study and get a good night's sleep for school the next day.

A message to doctors, dentists, counselors and social workers: Please stop pulling students out of classes for non-emergencies to accommodate your schedules. Most students are dismissed at 2:45 p.m., so please give them late afternoon appointments. Their education is as important to them as the schedules of adult patients and clients are to professionals.

Abby, recent studies show that we are a nation at risk. In the last 10 to 15 years, the quality of our education has deteriorated dramatically. An appalling number of our high school students are certified illiterates, and absenteeism is one of the main causes.

Students who do not attend classes cannot be taught.

SMALL-TOWN TEACHER

DEAR TEACHER: Bravo! Well

Fullbright, Rhodes scholarship applications now available

LUBBOCK — Applications are being accepted for Fulbright Fellowships and Rhodes Scholarships. Grants provide more than 500 awards available in 50 countries.

Awards are restricted to graduate students although undergraduates may apply if they will have their bachelor's degrees by the time the grant becomes effective in September 1985.

Applications are available in the ICASALS office, 103 Holden Hall. Deadline for submission is Oct. 16.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 14-year-old girl and I'm very mature for my age. My boyfriend and I have become very serious, and I don't want to take a chance on getting pregnant. I'm afraid to ask my mom because I'm sure she wouldn't understand. How do you tell a woman who doesn't realize you're grown up yet that you want to go on the pill?

Please, hurry your answer before it's too late.

MAMA'S "BABY"

DEAR "BABY": Tell your mother just the way you told me. She will then realize that you are already in a very serious relationship, and although you seem like a "baby" to her, you are old enough to have one.

I am printing this so you can show it to her. It may get a dialogue going that will be helpful to both of you.

DEAR ABBY: I could have written the letter signed "Outraged." She wanted a snappy comeback for people who joked about the fact that her child's hair color was nothing like hers or her husband's. My husband's hair is black and mine is blond, and we produced a son with flaming red hair. Believe me, I've heard my share of mailmen, icemen and milkmen jokes.

Here's how we handled it: When our son was about 4 years old, and people would ask him where he got his red hair, we taught him to say, "It came with my head."

TOUCHE IN TULSA

Designing kitchens for homemakers is complicated enough. But how do you plan a kitchen that will be used to teach cooking when it is located in the middle of a supermarket?

The client's specifications were exact: convert 900 square feet of former storage space into a kitchen with at least three complete work centers, 65 feet of counter space and room for 24 students. Requirements also included a window wall 18 feet long, a powder room and a small office.

These were the needs set forth by Joanna Preuss, director of cooking classes at Kings Supermarket in Short Hills, N.J.

Miss Preuss and her designer, Florence Perchuck of New York, agreed the school should have residential equipment so students would easily be able to apply at home what they learned in the classes.

The school — known as the Cookingstudio — opened last fall after a 13-month collaboration. Its success has encouraged Kings to plan additional schools and work has begun on a second Cookingstudio in the 15-store chain.

"We chose stoves and utensils that are used in home kitchens so our students could translate immediately what they learned here to what they prepare for their families and friends. They're also becoming familiar with new products they may want to incorporate in their own kitchens."

according to Miss Preuss. She cites as an example a double oven that combines a microwave and conventional oven in one appliance.

The culinary classroom boasts the three work centers, with residential ranges, dishwashers and refrigerators, residential kitchen cabinets, oak parquet and quarry tile floors and a beige and rose wallpaper. Long mobile tables with synthetic marble tops are on wheels and seat 24 comfortably. An angled mirror over the work surfaces enables the seated students to view what the instructor is doing in the kitchen.

The culinary classroom is separated from the shopping aisles of the Kings Short Hills market only by its long window wall. Shoppers can and do peer in to observe the activities.

Providing in-store entertainment is nothing new to Kings' president Allen Bildner. Bildner, whose father founded the chain 47 years ago, believes in the concept of shopping as entertaining and has engaged Hawaiian dancers and madrigal singers to perform in the aisles.

Shoppers who see the classes in session often become students. According to Miss Preuss, a native Californian who settled in Montclair, N.J., after 15 years of work with food experts in America and Europe, the school's success is a reflection of a growth of interest in cooking.

So far, the student population has included bachelors, homemakers, career women, couples and children. Men make up about 40 percent of the evening classes. Classes which cost $13 to $95, depending on length, are held up to three times a day, seven days a week.

Instructors have varied backgrounds. Some are cooking professionals; others are accomplished amateurs. For example, a pasta course is taught by a moonlighting biophysicist.

So far, fish cookery has been among the most popular classes. But baking, sessions on what to do with convenience foods, and on how to use new appliances such as food processors have aroused interest.

Ethnic cooking courses — especially Tex-Mex and Chinese foods — have also been well-attended.

While "nutritional" cooking in general is a turn-off, according to Miss Preuss, certain aspects of nutrition — such as low-sodium food preparation — have been very popular.

Regardless of what class they sign up for, students benefit through the confidence that completing a cooking course can give.

"The secret ingredient for any cook is confidence. Once you have it, even your mistakes can be delicious," says Miss Preuss.

Women's conference set

The Southwest Christian Women's Association is to sponsor the first Southwest Christian Women's Conference at the Big Spring Church of the Nazarene, Nov. 14-17.

Author and speaker, Florence Littauer, is scheduled as one of the keynote speakers. She has authored such books as "Pursuit of Happiness," "Blow Away the Black Clouds," "After Every Wedding Comes a Marriage," "Personality Plus," and "Shades of Beauty." Littauer has spoken all over the world and has become well known for her special ability of getting to the heart of human problems.

Ester Lewis, author, lecturer, and educator, who has delighted audiences world wide, will also be a featured speaker. She authored "We Also Build," and has conducted numerous seminars across the country.

America's first family of gospel music — the Speer family — is to entertain. The group celebrates more than 60 years as professional gospel singers, delighting audiences with a unique blend of sounds, ranging from traditional gospel to upbeat.

Child care will be provided during the conference. For more information and - or reservations, contact Big Spring Church of the Nazarene, 1400 Lancaster, Big Spring, 79720; phone (915)267-7015.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I expect to do some bathroom work soon and will be using ceramic tiles. Some cutting will be necessary to fit several places. What is the best way to cut them and do I have to be an expert to do it?

A. — While tiles can be cut in the same way you cut glass, don't try it unless you have had some experience in doing just that. If not — and perhaps even then — use a professional tile-cutting tool. It hardly pays to purchase one for a single job, but you can rent one from a hardware store, wherever ceramic tiles are sold or at a tool rental department in a home center establishment.

Q. — I will be putting up a wooden fence soon. How do I make certain the fence is level? Do I just use a spirit level?

A. — Yes, but it's a case of constant checking. Always proceed as though the tops of the posts are not even or have come out of alignment since the last time you checked, even though that may have been a few moments ago. Place a board across the tops of the posts and put a level on the board. Then see that the posts are vertically OK, do whatever nailing has to be done to hold everything in place, check again, nail again, check again and so on. The same thing is true between all operations, either the concrete kind or the fastening kind.

Q. — Whenever I have to make a connection of an electric wire to a screw on a plug, such as the kind on a lamp cord, I always have trouble getting the wire to stay properly around the screw. Is there some knack to this I don't know about?

A. — Probably, yes. When you wind the wire around the terminal screw, do it so that it runs in the direction in which the screw will be turned — that is, clockwise. When you get the wire in place, turn the screw carefully in that same clockwise direction. This will tend to tighten the wire under the head of the screw, whereas if you go the opposite way, it will tend to dislodge the wire.

ROOM FOR ONE MORE — An odd piece of furniture is often referred to as a "corner piece." It's usually unattractive — something to put in a corner out of sight. Shelley Weiss, designer, doesn't believe that the corner of a room should be for castoffs. To illustrate, she's made a corner really count by creating additional seating space for dining. Weiss had a banquette fashioned of plywood and the dining-room carpet extended over it to provide an attractive "L-shaped" seating area that is comfortably cushioned. The Asian theme is evident in Weiss's wall-accessory choices. The oil painting is Persian in feeling, and the oriental fan is in proper scale for balance in the room corner.

Museum Day plans underway

Saturday, Sept. 29, is to mark the 19th anniversary of the Carson County Square House Museum Day and the 26th annual Pioneer Day.

Special programs and art exhibits are planned throughout the day culminating with the barbecue at the Carson County Agriculture Building. Museum Day activities begin with class reunions in the morning and art exhibits beginning at 9 a.m.

Featured artist this year is David Damm of Irvine, Calif. Damm is an outstanding Western artist who will be bringing his work to the Square House for the first time. An exhibit of Chilmark Pewter sculptures, courtesy of Wagner's Jewelers of Amarillo, is to be on display in Freedom Hall as well. A gallery lecture on the production of pewter will be given at 10:30 a.m.

At 10 a.m., a branding party will be held in the tradition of the past. Area cattlemen are invited to bring their brand, sketch of the brand and brief history, and with the hot fire furnished by the arrangements committee, put their brand on beams at the museum. Jim Williams is to be in charge of the branding party.

The Museum Day program, featuring T. Boone Pickens Jr., is to begin at 2 p.m. at the Panhandle High School Auditorium. The Panhandle High School band is to provide the music, and as in the past, the Bones Hooks memorial will be presented in honor of area pioneers.

At 4 p.m. a Blackpowder Firearms Demonstration will be conducted at the museum. John C. Adams II, a former Panhandle resident, now of Okarche, Okla., is to demonstrate with firearms he has manufactured.

From 4:30 to 7:30 p.m., the annual barbecue will be served at the Carson County Agriculture Building. A country store will also be open.

All activities, except the barbecue, are free to the public.

"NOTICE OF VOTE ON TAX RATE"

Gray County Commissioners Court conducted a public hearing on a proposal to increase your property taxes from $1,972,797.00 in 1983 to $2,607,073.00 in 1984.

A public hearing to vote on the tax rate will be held on September 14, 1984 at 9:30 a.m. in the County Courtroom, Gray County Courthouse, Pampa, Texas.

The following members were present and voted in favor of the proposed tax increase:

Carl Kennedy, County Judge
O.L. Presley, Commissioner Precinct 1

OVER THE TOP—The Washington Redskins' John Riggins (44) leaps over a pile of 49er defenders for a third-quarter touchdown. However, San Francisco won, 37-31. (AP Laserphoto)

Revenge win

49ers hold off Redskins' rally

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The stakes weren't as high as their conference title clash, but the emotions were just as charged and the outcome about as close.

The San Francisco 49ers, frustrated by running out of time in a comeback bid against the Washington Redskins for the National Football Conference championship last year, pulled a role reversal and gained a 37-31 triumph Monday night in a National Football League game.

Joe Montana opened the show by guiding the 49ers to a 27-0 lead in the second period en route to one of his best days in the pros with 381 yards passing. Then the 49ers hung on as Washington quarterback Joe Theismann led the Redskins on a four-touchdown comeback and finished with 331 yards through the air.

"It reminded me a lot of last year's NFC championship game," said Washington receiver Art Monk, who caught 10 passes for 200 yards. "Time ran out on us tonight just like it did on them last year."

The big difference between the games was that the Redskins' 24-21 victory last January sent them to the Super Bowl. This time, the 49ers, 2-0, only moved to the lead of their division, while the Redskins, 0-2, dropped to the bottom of theirs.

Yet both teams played as if the Super Bowl were again on the line.

"It was probably the most emotionally charged game we've played in my three years here," said San Francisco tight end Russ

Francis, who caught five passes for 55 yards and received two personal-foul penalties for tussles with the Redskins.

"We matched them up gun-shooter on gun-shooter," Theismann said of his duel with Montana, a fellow Notre Dame alumnus, "and it was fun moving the ball the second half. The 49ers were not laying back in the second half. They were blitzing more and had a full pass rush on."

Neither team lay back the whole game. In the first half everything seemed to work for the 49ers while nothing went well for the Redskins. In the second half, it all changed.

"We shut ourselves down in the first half," said John Riggins, who had one of his worst games as a Redskin despite running for two touchdowns, managing only 12 yards rushing on 10 carries. "They were very aggressive and we had no continuity. We just couldn't get anything going. They were able to build up a convincing lead while we were sputtering and flubbing things up."

At halftime, Riggins said, the Redskins looked closely at themselves.

"We were in jeopardy of losing a lot more than a football game, i.e. our confidence," he said.

Washington Coach Joe Gibbs said he didn't have to give a rousing speech at halftime.

"I didn't say anything. They realized what a hole they were in and went to work," he said.

Pampa rodeo team opens at Memphis

The Pampa High School rodeo team entered its first Tri-State Rodeo of the season at Memphis last weekend.

Amy Green placed second in goat tying with a 10.097, and she also placed fifth in breakaway roping with a 14.519.

Leslie Leggett was fourth in barrels with a 19.444.

Canyon was the high point girls team with 13 points while Wheeler won the boys division with 28 points.

Drew Thomas of Wheeler was all-around cowboy and Christine Langston of Plainview was all-around cowgirl.

Pampa hosts the next rodeo Sept. 15-16, starting at 6 p.m. Saturday and 1 p.m. Sunday.

There will also be a dance at Clyde Carruth Bull Barn, starting at 9 p.m. Sept. 15. Admission is $3.50.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING ON TAX INCREASE

The Pampa Independent School District will hold a public hearing on a proposal to increase total tax revenues from properties on the tax roll in 1983 by 12.8 percent. Your individual taxes may increase at a greater or lesser rate, or even decrease, depending on the change in the taxable value of your property in relation to the change in taxable value of all other property.

The public hearing will be held on September 18, 1984 5:00 p.m. at School Administration Building, 321 W. Albert, Pampa, Texas.

Twins, Royals tied for AL West lead the pack for the last four seasons, are at a loss to explain why they are tied for first place in the American League West.

Mike Smithson, who pitched the Twins back into a tie for the top spot with Kansas City Monday night by stopping the Royals on seven hits in a 7-3 victory, doesn't have the answer. Nor does Kirby Puckett, who had three hits, scored two runs and drove in another.

"I don't know what it is about this team, but people keep writing us off. But we stay loose and here we are, and this is what baseball's all about," said Smithson, 14-12, five-game winning streak and both teams are now 73-70 with two games left in the series and 19 remaining in the season.

"We don't know what it's all about," Puckett said. "We just know that no one picked us to be even close to winning the pennant."

"If our offense gets going like tonight, we'll be all right," said Minnesota Manager Billy Gardner, ejected for arguing a close call in the eighth.

The Twins were leading 3-2 at the time, but put together six straight singles for four runs to blow the game open. "But I can't get thrown out every game to get us going," Gardner added. "That's going to cost me $250 and my wife's blood pressure's going up."

The Twins were 22½ games out on this date a year ago with a 61-82 record. They last finished above .500 in 1979.

Elsewhere in the AL, it was New York 6, Toronto 2; Baltimore 3, Detroit 1; Milwaukee 7, Boston 4; Seattle 7, Texas 3; and Oakland 1, Chicago 0.

Orioles 3, Tigers 1
Mike Flanagan, 12-12, tossed a five-hitter and Wayne Gross hit his 20th home run as Baltimore beat Detroit. Despite the loss, Detroit's magic number for clinching the AL East was reduced to eight when New York beat Toronto. Any combination of Tiger victories and Blue Jay losses totaling eight would give Detroit the crown.

Gross connected off Juan Berenguer, 8-10, leading off the second inning.

Eddie Murray extended his hitting streak to a club-record 22 games with an eighth-inning homer, his 27th.

Yankees 6, Blue Jays 2

Don Mattingly's three-run homer in the fifth inning snapped a 2-2 tie to lead New York over slumping Toronto, which lost its fifth straight game.

Mattingly, who also doubled home a run in the two-run Yankee first, smacked the first pitch from Dave Stieb, 14-6, over the right-field fence for his 21st home run of the season, raising his RBI total for the season to 96.

John Montefusco, 3-2, checked the Blue Jays on seven hits through six innings.

Mattingly, who went 2-for-5, maintained his .349 batting average while teammate Dave Winfield — 1-for-3 — remained in the league lead at .352.

Brewers 7, Red Sox 4

Don Sutton, 13-11, collected his 27th major-league victory and moved past Ferguson Jenkins into sixth place on baseball's all-time strikeout list when he fanned four to raise his career total to 3,194, two more than Jenkins.

The Brewers collected eight hits, four of them doubles, in less than four innings off Mike Brown, 1-8. Five of the runs were unearned, however, because of two errors by Brown and two more by catcher Rich Gedman.

Jim Rice hit his 26th homer for Boston to increase his RBI total for the year to 112, one behind Oakland's Dave Kingman, who leads the major leagues.

Mariners 7, Rangers 3

Alvin Davis' two-run homer highlighted Seattle's three-run seventh inning. With the game tied 3-3, John Moses singled with one out, went to third on Jack Perconte's single and scored when Spike Owen forced Perconte at second.

Davis followed with his 25th homer, an opposite-field shot that barely cleared the left-field fence off a 1-0 pitch from Danny Darwin, 8-10. Davis had gone 30 days without a homer.

Seattle's Jim Beattie won his career-high 11th game against 15 losses.

A's 1, White Sox 0

Ray Burris, 13-7, held Chicago to three hits over 8 2-3 innings while Chicago's Rich Dotson walked in the only run of the game.

The A's scored in the third, an inning in which a beanball incident resulted in the ejection of Oakland slugger Dave Kingman.

Rickey Henderson drew a one-out walk from Dotson, 13-13, who walked Dwayne Murphy with two outs and then hit Kingman in the left hip.

The 6-foot-6 slugger charged the mound and landed two solid uppercuts to Dotson's face before being wrestled to the ground by Chicago first baseman Greg Walker. Dotson then walked Bruce Bochte to score Henderson.

Magic number now 12 for Chicago

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The Chicago Cubs are learning how to win games with pitching and defense after relying on heavy hitting for most of the season.

The Cubs have a batting average of only .228 for their last eight games, but have managed five victories in that span while increasing their National League East lead from six to seven games. Chicago is batting .263 for the season.

"You just can't go to the park every day and say, 'Today I think we'll start hitting,'" Manager Jim Frey said after the Cubs beat the Philadelphia Phillies 3-2 Monday.

Both teams had only five hits in the game, with Chicago scoring all of its runs in the seventh inning with the help of a bases-loaded walk and a throwing error by Philadelphia second baseman Juan Samuel that allowed two runs to score.

The win over Philadelphia and the Mets' loss to the Cardinals reduced the Cubs' magic number to 12.

In other NL games, St. Louis trimmed New York 3-2, Atlanta defeated Houston 3-1, and Montreal bombed Pittsburgh 8-5.

Cardinals 3, Mets 2

St. Louis benefited from a four-pitch walk to pitcher Dave LaPoint that set up a two-run double by Willie McGee in the seventh inning against New York.

Mets rookie left-hander Sid Fernandez, 4-5, allowed only four hits in seven innings, but his two-out walk to LaPoint, 10-10, proved to be critical when McGee followed with his double to break a 1-1 tie.

LaPoint was relieved by Bruce Sutter with no outs in the ninth and Sutter went on to record his 41st save.

Expos 8, Pirates 5

Dick Grapenthin picked up his first major-league victory and Joe Hesketh his initial major-league save with the offensive support of Jim Wohlford, who knocked in five runs with a three-run homer and a single for Montreal against Pittsburgh.

Grapenthin, 1-2, pitched 4 2-3 innings of one-hit relief after the Pirates erupted for four runs in the first inning off Expos starter Dave Palmer. Hesketh then worked the final four innings for the save.

Wohlford hit his fourth homer off starter John Candelaria in the first, then added his two-run single in the fourth.

Braves 3, Astros 1

Atlanta left-hander Zane Smith also won his first major-league game, holding Houston to six hits and one run in six innings.

The loss knocked the Astros, second in the West, to 9½ games behind the first-place San Diego Padres, whose magic number for their first division title now stands at 10.

Give the United Way.

Fertilize for wheat PROFIT!

You may be looking for ways to cut costs. Who isn't? But one thing all agronomists tell us is: "Don't cut back in areas that cause yields to decrease!"

They are talking about fertilizer. They encourage the wheat farmer to select varieties and apply fertilizer for optimum yields — that's your most profitable yield.

Yes, your cost per acre will increase as you move up toward your optimum yield. But your cost per bushel will be reduced.

You not only get more bushels per acre, you get more profit from every bushel you raise!

Base your fertilizer applications on soil test results and your yield goals. Let our Fertilizer Specialist help you.

We're ready when you are, with both anhydrous ammonia and dry blends.

Abortion dogging Ferraro

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Just when she was getting the questions about her family finances behind her, Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro finds herself dogged by the abortion issue and challenged by a leader of her own Catholic Church.

The New York congresswoman talked by telephone Monday with John J. O'Connor, the New York archbishop who said this weekend she may "have a problem with the pope" because she had misrepresented the church's position on abortion.

Both came away from the conversation saying the half-hour talk was pleasant, but they were standing by their positions.

Ms. Ferraro, a Catholic who says she opposes abortion but supports a woman's right to choose to have one, said she told the archbishop he was wrong. O'Connor said he still thinks she has misrepresented the teachings of her church.

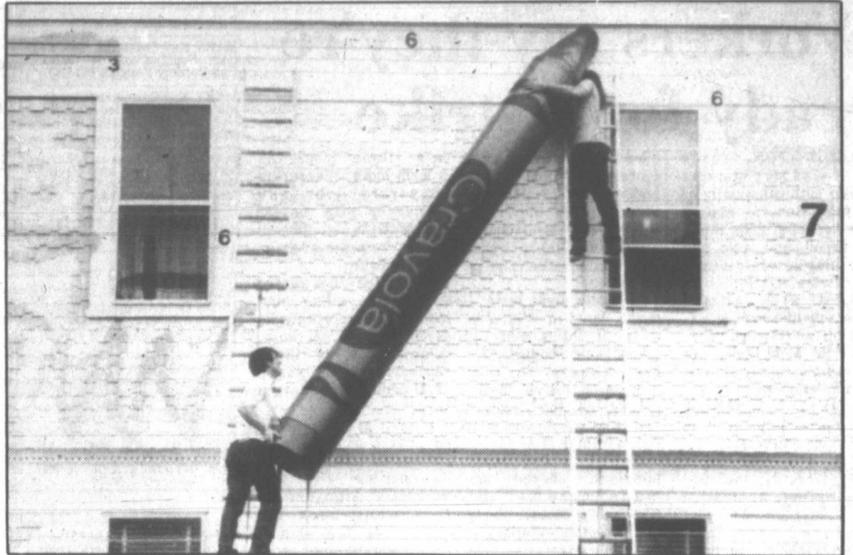

"I explained to the archbishop that I supported the right of everyone to speak out on the important issues of the day," she said in a written statement issued to reporters afterward. "When bishops speak out, they are doing their duty as church officials."

When she speaks out, Ms. Ferraro said she told O'Connor, she is likewise doing her duty as a public official.

"And my foremost duty as a public official is to uphold the United States constitution which guarantees freedom of religion," she said. "I cannot fulfill that duty if I seek to impose my own religion on other American citizens."

After celebrating Mass in a Manhattan church, the head of the New York archdiocese told reporters. "The tone of the conversation was very, very amiable. There was no hostility on either side."

But O'Connor added, "I think that she has misrepresented the teaching of the Catholic Church."

Baker still wants television crews in Senate chamber

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Before he retires in January, Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. plans a final shot at persuading colleagues to allow TV cameras in the chamber, but his long-running effort seems destined for cancellation.

"This is one that I have variously threatened the Senate with," the Tennessee Republican said sheepishly as he informed colleagues recently of his desire to bring the measure up just one more time. It was tucked in among the "must" items on Baker's long agenda for the remainder of the nearly-finished 1984 session.

Baker, who did not seek re-election this year, has been trying to win approval of his television-in-the-Senate plan from the time he got the No. 1 Senate post in January 1981.

But, despite his proven powers of persuasion in other areas, he's never been able to muster the support needed to put the question to a formal vote. It keeps running into filibusters — or threats of filibusters — from a group of opponents led by Sen. Russell Long, D-La.

Long and other critics say television would interfere with Senate decorum and encourage some senators to play to the cameras.

Nonsense, claims Baker. He insists that it's just a matter of time until the Senate enters the television age, as the House did five years ago. TV and radio coverage would be no more than electronic extensions of the visitors' and press galleries, Baker argues.

In fact, the Senate has permitted both radio and television coverage in the past, but only of selected events. For instance, the swearing in of Nelson Rockefeller as vice president in 1974 was televised and the debate on the Panama Canal Treaties in 1978 was made available for radio broadcast.

Long is as opposed to Baker's proposal as ever, and ready to use whatever tactics necessary to block the resolution when it comes up, possibly sometime this week, his aides report.

That probably won't be hard this late in the session, since any delaying tactics would almost certainly spell death for the measure.

Still, Baker seems determined to make a final push for his TV bill into his Senate swan song.

Under his proposal, the Senate itself would buy, install and operate the television cameras and then make the signal available to the news media or anyone else who wants to hook up to it — the same system used in the House.

Although cameras of any form and broadcast microphones are strictly banned in the Senate, the House has had gavel-to-gavel broadcast coverage since 1979. The picture appears on cable television around the nation on the Cable Satellite Public Affairs Network (C-SPAN).

Because of this, some House members reportedly have become more recognizable in their home states than senators. This fact seems to grate on the senators involved, but apparently not enough to muster the support Baker needs for victory.

Might the Senate become sympathetic and give this one to Baker as a going-away gift? A Republican leadership aide, who gives frequent press briefings under ground rules that his remarks remain anonymous, was asked that question.

"You mean like a gold watch?" said the aide. "The answer is no."

So what were Baker's prospects for success this final time around? "Don't make me do that," the aide pleaded. "I haven't lied to you in four years."

Texas officer helps start electronic bounty hunting

VICTORIA, British Columbia (AP) — A Texas policeman has helped electronic bounty hunting come of age in Victoria — the first city in British Columbia where police and residents have joined forces to put a price on the heads of crooks.

Crimestoppers uses 90-second to 2½-minute television newscast re-enactments to help jar the memories of those who might have witnessed something important. It also gives crooks the chance to turn in other hoods — and collect a reward.

Crimestoppers had its first television run here Thursday when volunteer actors re-enacted a drug store holdup last year during which an armed gunman escaped with a cash and drugs.

The brainstorm of a Canadian-born homicide detective in Albuquerque, N.M., it now spans 500 communities across the continent.

About a dozen cities in Canada have joined with their police departments to recreate unsolved crimes for television. More cities, including Vancouver, British Columbia, are on the verge of doing the same, said founder Greg MacAleese, a former Associated Press journalist who became a policeman.

The murder of an Albuquerque gas station attendant in 1976 led to the start of Crimestoppers. The murder baffled police and MacAleese was successful in having a television station carry a re-enactment of the crime.

An anonymous witness called police, he said. "We solved the case in 48 hours. The man was convicted for first-degree murder and is serving a life sentence."

Albuquerque's crime rate dropped for 36 months in a row after the program began to appear on a weekly basis, MacAleese said. But he said the programs also serve as "a massive informal information network between police departments."

The thrust behind the program is bounty money — rewards for information leading to a conviction. The rewards range from $100 to $2,000, depending on the seriousness of the crime, said Victoria Police Sgt. Douglas Potentier, who started Crimestoppers here.

Potentier used his holiday time to visit Calgary and Edmonton and study programs there.

Calgary police solve a major crime every 27 hours as a result of information phoned in and recover $18 in goods for every dollar spent, he said. The North American average is $88 dollars in recovered property and narcotics seizures for every dollar paid out.

Anonymity, in addition to the reward factor, makes the program work, said Potentier, a 14-year veteran.

Each caller is assigned a code number and if an arrest is made and the 18-member volunteer civilian board decides that a reward is in order, the caller simply has to give the code number and a cash reward is turned over — no names are used, nor wanted, he said.

Workers say they're ready for a strike

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — As his coworkers talked enthusiastically of striking General Motors this weekend, Ellis Black grimaced and said the last thing he wants is to be out of work, again.

The 26-year-old assembly line worker was laid off by GM two years ago in Michigan. He moved his wife to Dallas, found another job six months ago at a mid-size GM assembly plant here, and "got comfortable."

But with the United Auto Workers and GM negotiating against a Friday midnight deadline, when their present contract expires, Black is scared.

"My wife and I have a kid on the way now. It seems like we might go out, but I'm hoping not," he said. "I'm worried. But I've done without for a long time, and I guess if we strike, I'll just do without some more."

While many of the 4,500 UAW members here hope there won't be a strike, most believe the union will walk out. They say they're ready — mentally and financially.

A schedule has been posted at Local 276 for picketing shifts. Strike signs are mounted on sticks and stacked in piles at the union hall, located midway between Dallas and Fort Worth.

"We'll strike if that's what it takes to get what we want. Most everyone here is really kind of looking forward to getting this resolved," said J.E. Scogin, 56, a plant carpenter.

"The company has been sort of 'who-doing' lately. Everytime the union brings up something, they more or less ignore it. So we've seen it coming for a while now, and most of us are prepared," he said.

With conviction, the workers talked Monday about regaining concessions made in 1982 and winning greater job security. Yet they said they were ambivalent about being out of work, and would rather see a settlement.

"I really don't want a strike, but I'm willing to do it if that's what it takes," said Scogin. "The big wheels in this company have been getting all the bonuses and they took away a bunch from us."

Ironically, the popularity of the cars made here — the Chevrolet Monte Carlo and Oldsmobile Cutlass — have made the GM workers more willing to walk out.

The assembly line workers have been pulling nine-hour shifts and six-day weeks for several months, and most say the UAW warned them a long time ago to bank the overtime in preparation for a strike.

"I've got all my bills paid up and enough money saved to buy a new mobile home," said Joe Clark, 54. "I've got the one I want picked out, and if we don't strike, I'm going right down and getting it."

H.E. Roberts, an assembly line inspector wearing a gimme cap proclaiming "I Don't Need This Job, Just The Pay," said he's saved $4,000 to carry his family through the strike.

"I wish they'd (union and management negotiators) get on with it, or get off the pot," he said. "Nobody knows what's going to happen. It's tough."

"I think both sides have made up their minds that they're going to be stubborn this year," said Bob Long, 51.

As employees changed shifts, they talked of stocking freezers with grocery items from the grocery store, of securing temporary jobs and making do with the $85 weekly strike benefits — a far cry from the average $9.53 per hour.

In 1982, the UAW agreed to help the ailing auto industry by accepting no general wage increase, deferred cost of living raises and the elimination of 10 personal holidays a year.

Since profits have returned to GM and bonuses have been paid to executives, the GM workers in Arlington say they want back the concessions they made, and they want guarantees they won't be laid off.

"We want what we've got coming to us," said Virgil Ford, 45. "They gave one executive vice president $1.4 million, and they're not offering us anything. Who's doing the work here anyway? If we have to walk for six years, we'll stay out and have a breadline if necessary."

At an Aug. 14 meeting, 97 percent of the workers at this assembly plant voted in favor of a strike, but welder Mark Rhea, 33, said many at the Texas plant aren't as enthusiastic as the vote would suggest.

"I've been working here since '55, and I remember all of the strikes," said G.D. Harlow, a 54-year-old welder. "I don't see as much fire as there has been for some of the issues we've had. But we're ready for some kind of strike because we took a pretty good cut last time."

At the Ace of Clubs, a county-western watering hole one block from the sprawling plant, talk lately has centered on nothing but the strike.

"They talk more about the strike than the Cowboys," said bartender Joyce Manis.
