Ferraro, Jackson get share of spotlight with Mondale

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) -Walter Mondale, trying to focus an abbreviated Southern campaign swing on his plan to revamp the nation's defense policy, is being plagued by potshots from the Rev. Jesse Jackson and persistent questions about the finances of his running mate.

The Democratic presidential nominee was closing a two - day trip today with an appearance at the Kentucky State Fair in Louisville. He was to return to his Minnesota home later in the day.

He canceled a campaign appearance planned for today in Macon, Ga. Aides said they had been unable to arrange for former President Jimmy Carter, Sen. Sam Nunn, state party chairman Bert Lance and other Georgia Democrats to appear with him and wanted to reschedule the trip later when they could be there. Lance resigned as Mondale's general campaign chairman two weeks

But questions about party unity, Jackson and vice presidential nominee Geraldine Ferraro have taken equal billing.

Mondale, responding to reporters' questions, said in Memphis on Tuesday that he would welcome Jackson's full backing but would not negotiate to win anyone's allegiance.

He was asked about an interview, published Tuesday in the Los Angeles Times, in which Jackson, one of Mondale's former rivals for the presidential nomination, said the Mondale campaign had no strategy to attract black voters.

The questions arose on a flight from Little Rock, Ark., to Memphis, after David Hess, a reporter for Knight-Ridder newspapers, told colleagues he overheard Mondale indicating to his staff that the appointment of a Jackson adviser, Ernie Green, as a deputy director in the Mondale campaign still was not bringing forth Jackson's all - out support.

"I gave them Ernie Green and that isn't enough," he quoted Mondale as saying. "I can win this thing on my own.'

Lawyers charge well 'killed' during testing

Special to The Pampa News
LUBBOCK — Harlow

Corporation attorneys inferred Tuesday that Dorchester Gas Producing Company may have "killed" a Harlow oil well during testing this summer.

The latest "charge" between the two sides at the Lubbock trial came two days after an expert witness for Dorchester testified that oil he found in two Harlow wells was injected from the surface.

Despite more than a day of grilling by Harlow's counsel, Phil loses of CORE Laboratories stuck to his story that the oil did not come from the formation into which the well was drilled.

Harlow lead attorney Broadus Spivey did get Moses to admit Tuesday that if fresh water was put into the well, or any oil well, it would stop producing oil. But the petroleum analyst insisted no water was introduced before his 24-hour test of well No. 2.

Dorchester, which claims rights to the gas Harlow is producing from its oil wells, is trying to show the wells primarily produce gas, not oil. Dorchester wants $500,000 in damages and a halt to Harlow's gas production.

Harlow, the first of many independent oil operators to appear in court in the on-going controversy, is trying to show it produces casinghead gas with oil, to which it claims rights in the

West Panhandle Field near Pampa

Each side seems to think the other did something to one or both of Harlow's wells to influence the outcome of tests Dorchester conducted in June and July.

Over the objections of Dorchester lead attorney Robert Templeton, Spivey introduced a 1964 CORE report stating that fresh water would cause moderate to severe permeability damage to the formation under two wells in the vicinity of Harlow's wells.

Moses said he had no direct knowledge as to how Harlow well No. 2 was operated immediately before his testing, which has cost Dorchester about $100,000 to date.

Though he thought the oil was not native to the wells, Moses conceded it could have been produced by the wells, heated and put back in. Harlow is expected to bring in testimony about problems with well apparatus and, apparently, with water getting into the well.

Pat Long, counsel for the lease owners, tried to point out contradictions and inconsistencies in Moses' testimony at the December 1982 Amarillo Oil Company trial and current hearings of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

Long insinuated Moses ignored a decline in the last part of his oil gravity statistics and accused

Moses of having preconceived opinions about whether the brown dolomite layer produces oil.

Dorchester claims the brown dolomite mainly produces gas and virtually no oil. Dorchester vice president John Dannelley took the stand Tuesday to begin explaining how his firm's position evolved.

Quoting Texas Railroad Commission reports, Dannelley said Harlow's four oil wells were producing little gas and only half a barrel of oil a day until two of them were perforated in the brown dolomite in October, 1981.

By the end of November, oil production rose to 21/2 barrels a day and gas production zoomed to 21,000 mcf. But Dannelley claimed most of the oil was coming from the non-perforated wells.

"So what they had, in effect, was two oil wells producing oil and two gas wells producing gas, concluded Dorchester attorney Bob Garner. "That's right," Dannelley replied.

According to Dannelley, it is more productive to perforate at the bottom of a stratum when searching for oil. When asked by Garner what reason Harlow might have for perforating higher, he answered, "To get more gas, I

Conflicts of interest charged

McLean denies allegations

By CATHY SPAULDING Staff writer

McLEAN - In response to allegations of conflict of interest made by a former city council member, Mayor George Terry says that the city is trying to operate legally and that what city officials don't know, they're willing

Wayne Bybee quit July 18, citing what he considered were conflicts of interest and illegal activities among city council members. His brother, McLean electrician Loyd Bybee also resigned so that he could pursue a government contract

Wayne Bybee alleges that one city councilman, whom he did not directly identify, is operating his business rent - free in a building owned by the city and has had equipment provided by the city free of charge.

Terry answered that the council member, Dr. Harold F. Fabian, was operating his clinic before he was elected to the council in April.

At their regular meeting Tuesday, McLean City Council members voted to draft a contract and lease agreement with Fabian, filled until the next city election in charging him $50 per month lease, plus equipment maintenance costs for the clinic. He was also told that he could not vote on matters concerning the McLean Clinic or the now - closed hospital.

Fabian said that he had been operating the clinic, located across from City Hall, since 1957 and did pay rent on the facility in 1957-58. He also paid rent to the hospital from 1965 to 1980.

"I have been maintaining it tonight." he said.

'What happened was that when Dr. Fabian was running for office, Gray County Commmissioners turned over responsibility of the hospital to the city," Terry said. Earlier this year, Futura Health Services, an Oklahoma health care organization, agreed to operate the hospital.

"I called the attorney general's office, and he said Dr. Fabian can use the building, but that he cannot vote on matters pertaining to the clinic," Terry said.

The doctor was also unable to vote on the appointment of his wife, Bonnie Fabian, to the city library board. With the resignations of the Bybee brothers, this left two council members and Terry to vote on city matters.

Terry said that the positions left open by the Bybees will not be April. The city is prohibited from conducting the election during the presidential election in November.

Loyd Bybee was out of town and unavailable for comment. Wayne Bybee said he planned to contact the attorney general later next Bybee also charged that the city is also allowing hazardous flammable material to be kept within the city limits. City officials answer that the questionable chemicals, used to remove parrafin from wells, is no more dangerous than chemicals that are legally kept in the city. Other area cities also store the chemicals.

they say. Neither Bybee nor the city officials would identify the chemicals.

Bybee said that he found 55 gallon drums containing the material after he bought a building where they were stored.

He said that a label on the drums said that the materials were flammable, had dangerous fumes and should be kept away from heat, flames and children. He added that the label said the containers were dangerous when empty.

The drums have since been moved to an old gas station away from the downtown area.

Soviets condemn joke

MOSCOW (AP) - The Soviet Union today issued a formal statement condemning President Reagan's joke about bombing Russia, calling the remark 'unprecedently hostile toward the U.S.S.R.

The statement, issued through the official Tass news agency, was an unusually strong method of reacting to Reagan's comment. Such Soviet statements are issued to make public the policy or opinions of the highest echelons of the government and usually are reserved for proclamations of new arms control proposals or other similar weighty issues.

Reagan said in a microphone test before taping a radio address Saturday: "My fellow Americans, I'm pleased to tell you today that I've signed legislation that will outlaw Russia forever. We begin bombing in five minutes." 'Tass is authorized to state that the Soviet Union déplores the U.S. president's invective. inprecedently hostile toward the U.S.S.R. and dangerous to the course of peace," the Soviet statement said today.

'This conduct is incompatible with the high responsibility borne by leaders of states, particularly nuclear powers, for the destinies of their own people and for the destinies of mankind. ... The peoples expect that the leaders of the United States (will) at long last start acting with awareness of their responsibility.

The Soviet statement noted that Reagan's remark was not intended to be made public, adding:

"In the White House, they are now trying to make it appear that the head of the U.S. administration just indulged in 'cracking a joke.'

"Reagan indeed has not signed any such legislation and no orders to bomb have been given this time either. But it is not fortuitous that the president's words have been received with serious concern both in the United States and elsewhere.

Conservatives toughen platform

DALLAS (AP) - Republican platform writers, defying the White House and slapping down moderates at every turn, are fashioning a conservative campaign document that one dissident said would force many party loyalists to "hold their noses" while voting with the GOP in November

The conservatives toughened language opposing tax increases, snubbed the Equal Rights Amendment and included a pledge to "do everything necessary so that, in case of conflict (with the Soviet Union), the United States would clearly prevail.'

"The delegates will write the platform, not the president," said Rep. Trent Lott of Mississippi, chairman of the 106-member platform committee that begins its work on the platform today.

It was a draft worked up by Lott and White House aides that seven subcommittees reworked extensively Tuesday before passing it on to the full committee.

With five days left before the Republican National Convention convenes, party officials also were meeting today to deal with housekeeping issues and hear a 'state of the party' talk from national committee chairman Frank Fahrenkopf Jr.

While the Republicans were City briefs getting ready to renominate Reagan and Vice President George Bush, they also were enjoying the discomfort of Democratic challengers Walter Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro over the refusal of Ferraro's husband to make public his federal income tax returns

"The larger issue before the American public is whether Walter Mondale is willing to accept the responsibility of leading his ticket," Lott told a news

But it was the party platform that occupied most of the attention during the pre-convention week.

Drew Lewis, the former transportation secretary who is Reagan's representative to the platform committee, was scrambling to undo some of what was done in the subcommittees. That included a plank calling for replacement of the entire U.S. tax code with a simple flat - rate tax and another that would urge repeal of the windfall profits tax on oil

Lewis said the administration would prefer offering the flat tax as one possibility for reforming the tax code — not as the only solution. And he said administration officials were reviewing the impact of repeal of the oil profits tax.

The platform writers approved and then dropped a plank Tuesday that called for elimination of all taxes on savings income, a proposal Lewis said would cost $7 billion in lost revenue and would be "a bonanza for the rich.

Sen. Robert Kasten of Wisconsin, chairman of the subcommittee that approved the plan, denied the panel bowed to White House pressure when it reversed itself on the savings - income tax.

"They didn't tell us to do it," he

For GOP moderates, Tuesday was a disaster, as freely admitted by Rep. Jim Leach of Iowa, chairman of an outnumbered group that calls itself the republican Mainstream Committee

Leach told a news conference that the strong control exercised by conservatives in the platform writing was a ''profound disappointment" to moderates. He predicted that "a lot of people this November will hold their noses and vote Republican.'

Auditorium renovation planned

By LARRY HOLLIS

Staff Writer city commissioners Tuesday approved initial steps toward renovation of entrances and ceilings at the M. K. Brown Auditorium. The commission authorized Public Works Director Allyn Moore to enter a professional service contract for the city with Johnson and Riemer Inc. for developing plans for the renovation project.

Moore said there were "some serious structural problems" with the glass doors at the two main entrances to the auditorium. He said the problems had probably occurred from years of use and inadequate design.

The project is designed to rebuild the entrances, repair the ceilings in the entrance area and provide better insulation in the ceilings, Moore said.

He estimated the project would cost about $55,500: rebuilding the doors, $29,500; repairing the ceilings, $17,000; installing insulation, $5,200, and professional services, $3,800. Project funds will be available from the auditorium maintenance fund, he said.

The project is on the list of suggested needs for the auditorium, he added. He said he would meet with the auditorium advisory board members to present the project plans for their

Forrest Cloyd, technician with the Engineering Department, said the seal coating project in the north sections of the city was completed Aug. 3. "I think we've got one of the best seal coats we've had in a long time." he said.

He said about $7,000 left over from the seal coating project could be used in the street repairs continuing in the south sections of

Moore said the lines were inspected on site. "We're satisfied with it," he said.

Commissioner Clyde Carruth, in additional remarks, said, "I think we've inherited some bad engineering projects in the past," mentioning street projects specifically. He said efforts should be made to ensure the projects receive good inspections with follow-through studies.

Moore said top inspections were a goal he planned to check thoroughly.

In other action, the commission passed a resolution reappointing Fred Thompson as a member of the board of directors of the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority for an extended term ending July 31, 1986. Thompson currently serves as chairman of the CRMWA Water Quality Committee Commissioners also accepted final draft of an easement for a Celanese Chemical Co. pipeline, approved salary changes for July and approved accounts payable.

Deficit projections trimmed $3.5 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Reagan administration today trimmed its projected deficit for this fiscal year $3.5 billion to $174.3 billion and said much of the credit goes to the rapid economic expansion in the face of moderate inflation.

The revisions by the Office of Management and Budget also project an annual deficit of $161.7 billion by the end of the decade. down from the $193 billion projected early in the year.

Today's revisions assume that the economy will grow 6.5 percent when measured from the fourth quarter of last year to the October-December period this year. That compares with a year-earlier gain of 6.4 percent in the inflation-adjusted gross national product

OMB said that faster - than expected economic growth in the first half of the fiscal year would bring the government higher revenues than had been expected and that lower inflation rates will hold down some of its costs. Interest rates, however, are running somewhat higher Inflation, as calculated by a GNP

- linked measure, should run at a modest 4.4 percent annual rate in the fourth quarter of this year, and unemployment should slip to 6.8 percent of the total labor force by the end of the year, the administration predicted.

The administration's forecast comes about a week after the Congressional Budget Office projected that the red ink would rise through the next five years, hitting $263 billion at the end of the decade without additional spending cuts, tax increases or both.

The differences between the CBO and administration projections are most striking in 1989, with about $100 billion separating the two.

Edwin Dale, spokesman for the Office of Management and Budget, said that about half the difference - $50 billion or so - is due to the higher interest rate assumptions of the congressional analysts. When interest rates are high, the government has to pay more for the money it borrows to finance the national debt. Electronic courses offered

Clarendon College Pampa Center will be starting a full daytime electronic maintenance technician program Aug. 27. Graduates will receive an Associate of Applied Science

The first two semesters will provide basic electronic courses that will apply to all areas of electronic servicing. The final two semesters will advance the student into his or her specific field. The specialized fields are computer maintenance technology, home entertainment instruments and electronic keyboard equipment. The program provides both theory and practical "hands on" training to qualify a person as an electronic service technician in a chosen field.

The class schedule will run from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday through Friday from Aug. 27 to Dec. 14. Students may pre-enroll at the college's Pampa Center.

Protesters, city apparently settle banner-hanging dispute

DALLAS (AP) - The fencing match is over, at least for now.

City officials and a coalition of anti-Reagan protest groups appear to have resolved their differences over whether protest signs can be mounted on a controversial security fence around the Dallas Convention Center

On Monday, Dallas police and the protesters had their first run-in when a large banner saying "Dump Reagan!" was draped on the fence.

Police asked protesters to take the sign down until officials could decide whether it was legal. But the Dallas March and Rally Committee ignored that request and only took it down at 5 p.m. rather than leave it unattended for the night

On Tuesday, police officials decided not to interfere with protesters who hang signs on the 1.5-mile long chain-link fence, spokesmen for the city and the American Civil Liberties Union the agreement over signs was

Former ambassador: war possible in Central America

AUSTIN (AP) - By continuing to give military aide to the government of El Salvador. President Reagan only increases the chances for a war involving U.S. troops, the former American ambassador to El Salvador says.

"The logical result of everything that the Reagan administration is doing in Central America leads inexorably to the involvement of U.S. combat troops in that region and the outbreak of a regional war," former envoy Robert E. White said Tuesday.

White, a career foreign service officer who retired after Reagan was elected, said problems in El Salvador and other Central American nations require political, economic and social answers — not military force

He said America should take all necessary steps to ensure that Russian and Cuban troops stay out of Central America. But he also said the United States should

"The expectation of the right wing military and economic elites, particluarly in El Salvador, is that the Reagan administration will introduce U.S. combat troops in order to save them from revolution. As long as that expectation is alive, negotiations will never take place.

White said Congress should prohibit the president from sending troops to El Salvador without congressional approval. "Once that is done, you will see how quickly the Salvadoran military becomes ready to negotiate," he said. Additional military aid won't help, White contended, because the Salvadoran army already has more equipment than it can effectively use.

'The Salvadoran military already have more arms than they know how to use. A lack of guns is not the problem. It's lack of a will to fight that's the problem," White

"Unless you can offer a new hope to these people, you're not going to get any kind of will to fight. Not when they are led by generals and colonels who have their condominiums, their bank accounts and their families in

White also said states such as Texas should pay particular attention to the unrest in Central America, which is sending increasing numbers of refugees across the U.S. border

Mental health official has returned

Gary E. Miller is back at the Texas Mental Health and Mental Retardation. Only this time, he's on top

It was April 1970 that Miller, who headed the department's mental health branch in the 1960s, bitterly packed his belongings and vacated his office.

This time, he is the No. 1 official. As its sixth commissioner, Miller reigns over a department that has changed markedly since he was last there. It is also one that is under siege from many directions. Federal judges are requiring that conditions improve in the state mental hospitals and in state schools for the mentally retarded.

Patient advocacy groups are trying to force the department to provide more community-based services. Demoralized mental health workers complain that they are forced to work longer hours and care for more patients. With 25,500 full-time employees,

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Putting the cart before the horse

It has become one of the dreary platitudes of our times to speak of world population growth in the most apocalpytic terms possible. A recent report from the World Bank, predicting that world population will double by 2050, is in that tradition.

Predicting the usual doom, it calls on governments to spend $7 billion per year (they now spend about $2 billion) to distribute contraceptives, encourage abortions and do various other things in the arsenal of population control "experts.

There's a grain of sense here, but only a grain. Poor countries with backward economies and growing populations do often find themselves in a desperate, downward cycle of poverty and misery. Conventional rhetoric about population and poverty, however, puts the cart before the horse. Delegates from around the world met in Mexico City for the U.N. International Conference on Population last week, and we hope some of the following points were brought up.

The use of gross population figures might blur important distinctions; strident and emotional projections may deter consideration of other issues that are equally (or more) important.

The World Bank, for example, downplayed the fact that world population growth is actually falling — from 2.4 percent a year in the 1960s to 2 percent a year now. In its single - minded concentration on the supposed relationship between population and poverty, it glosses the fact that some heavily populated places actually prosper. South Korea, for example, is 13 times as crowded as Kenya, yet its income per capita has grown nearly three times as fast.

Those entranced with government - sponsored, coercive population control measures might do well to see just where population growth has fallen most quickly. Note the fast - growing, relatively free - market countries of Pacific Asia. South Korea's population growth has declined from 2.6 percent a year to 1.7 percent; Singapore's from 2.4 percent to 1.5 percent. The same is true of the more Western - looking nations of Latin America: Brazil from 2.8 percent to 2.1 percent, and Chile from 2.1 percent to 1.7 percent.

Population growth decline has been slowest in countries where a socialist overlay on a still - primitive economy spells slow economic growth, such as India, where the decline has been only from 2.3 percent to 2.1

If population doomsayers could put aside "something has to be done and government has to do it" attitude, they might view population issues with more common

In agriculture - dominated, subsistence - level economies, especially those with a high death rate among children, large familes are usually considered an economic asset. They represent more mouths to feed, but also more hands to work the relatively unproductive land. This attitude predominated in most Western countries up to, and somewhat beyond, the Industrial Revolution.

If people were simply machines, it might be useful to distribute contraceptives and "reprogram" them to have fewer babies. They're more complex than that. Experience indicates that they will gradually change attitudes about family size once a certain level of prosperity takes hold and economies become more diversified. Those who want population control first are putting the cart before the horse. The great engine of economic development is a free market, not government coercion. Given enough real incentive — i.e. enough freedom — poor people, even more than the well - off will work hard and eventually prosper. Then, almost inevitably, they are likely to alter their attitudes about family size.

Carter harder on poor

On August 2, the Census Bureau announced that in 1983 the national poverty rate increased from 15 to 15.2, well within the statistical margin of error, or no change at all. Nevertheless, House Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill rushed to call this "the smoking gun" to prove that Reagan's policies toward the poor were "unfair."

To show you what hypocritical political nonsense this is, you should remember that the biggest annual rise in poverty took place under the Carter - Mondale budgets of 1978 - 1981. In Carter's last three budget years, poverty rose at a 9.1 annual rate. In the Reagan administration's first two years, it rose at an annual rate of 5.4 percent; 1983 was the first year since 1978 that poverty did not rise appreciably.

Surprisingly, in the first two Carter - Mondale years the real (after inflation) spending on programs for the poor declined far more than under Reagan's first two.

In Carter's first two years, real spending on the poor (five major programs) declined 3.5 percent while in Reagan's first two budgets, the same spending actually rose 1.1 percent. Furthermore, under the Carter - Mondale budgets, poverty began to grow for the first time in three decades. and 7.3 million Americans were added to the poverty roster. I recall no hue and cry or "prestigious studies" revealing Carter's "cruelty to the poor." Yet, by any standard of measure, the Carter - Mondale administration brutalized more poor Americans than any modern administration.

In January 1977, Carter inherited spending of $30.05 billion on the five major "safety - net" programs (AFDC, SSI, food stamps and child nutrition, energy assistance and Medicaid). He also inherited an inflation rate of only 4.8 percent and declining poverty. Within two years, Carter -Mondale had inflation up to 13 percent - and, by fiscal year 1979, social spending for the poor had actually fallen 3.5 percent in purchasing power to

While this spending trend was reversed in the last two Carter - Mondale "re - election" budgets of FY 1980 and FY 1981, the poverty line soared to 14 percent by FY 1981, up from 11.4 percent in 1978. One must wonder why the Washington Post and Boston Globe were not "scandalized"? And why the Urban Institute, Brookings Institution and Congressional Budget Office never bothered to

You know why, of course. Carter and Mondale were following the same inflationary, high - tax policies recommended by these institutions. This subtle guilt explains why hardly a month goes by that we are not offered some fatuous new study "documenting" Reagan's alleged cruelty to the poor. They are hoping we will forget that the greatest enemy of the poor is inflation, and that by cutting inflation from 13 percent to 4 percent, Reagan has done more to help the poor than any president since John Kennedy.

Ironically, under "Scrooge" Reagan, federal social spending has remained steady at its all time high of more than 12 percent of GNP; that's double the level under liberal JFK. Yet, under Kennedy and his 1963 - 65 tax cuts, poverty dropped faster than at any time in U.S. history. It wasn't until massive "anti - poverty" social spending began to drive up inflation and taxes and slow down economic growth, that poverty rose

This is what makes the July 25 release from the Congressional Research Service such nonsense. In it, researchers "estimated" that Reagan's 1981 budget cuts had added 557,000 Americans to the poverty rolls in 1982. There is, of course, no way these "researchers" could prove this short of actually tracking real human beings in and out of poverty to find out what actually happened to

The best proof that the figures have no validity, however, is to note that in 1980, social spending for the poor shot up be a huge 9 percent, real. Yet, in that Carter - Mondale year, 3.2 million Americans fell below the poverty line - 600,000 more, incidentally, than the 2.6 million who fell below it during the deep recession of 1982, when poverty spending was cut 6 percent. In short, there is no correlation between poverty and spending.

You could make a better case that Reagan's social - spending cuts, which mainly re-targeted the programs to 130 percent of poverty line and below, actually reduced the effect of the recession on the poor, because we lured fewer people to welfare. University of Miami Professor Kenneth Clarke makes that precise case in a paper in the American Enterprise Institute's new book "Maintaining the Safety Net" where he writes:

"From 1981 to 1982, when real per - capita GNP fell 2.8 percent, the number of non - elderly poor increased 9.6 percent. During previous recessions, however, the number of poverty - level households rose more steeply. In the 1979 - 80 (Carter -Mondale) recession, when real per - capita GNP fell 1.4 percent, the number of non - elderly poor rose 13.4 percent. In the 1973 - 75 recession, while real per - capita GNP fell 3.6 percent, the number of non - elderly poor rose by 15 percent.'

One reason for this contrast is that under Reagan's "safety - net" targeting, more poor people than ever before received benefits.

The political crucifixion and resurrection of Richard Nixon is a secular miracle.

He suffered political defeats for governor of California and for president of the United States, which might have caused most professional politicians to crawl in a hole and hide.

He came back to be elected president in 1968. Following the media vandetta that deposed him in 1974, there appeared no way he could survive, certainly no way his career could be revived.

But he did and it was Richard Nixon is a survivor.

Mob rule threatens Britain

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

The continuing labor violence in Britain, involving a dispute over the planned closure of a number of coal mines, reflects the degree to which hardcore leftism persists in a country that has a conservative government. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and her ministers have rightly said that the labor violence threatens parliamentary democracy in the United Kingdom. The militant coal miners are striving to achieve by street violence what they cannot achieve at the ballot box or in orderly, lawful negotiations with the National Coal Board.

The stormtrooper tactics employed by the miners raise fears that Britain could become a kind of Orwellian East Bloc country under the domination of Marxist labor leaders. Fortunately, not all labor leaders in Britain support the miners' strike. Many are outspoken in opposition to the methods employed by Arthur Scargill, the radical boss of the miners.

I have received a letter from a well - informed British writer who is deeply concerned about the spread of violence in a society where police go unarmed. He wrote: "Violence on the picket line is growing and we have now what amounts to mob rule in certain areas of the North, intimidation on a huge scale of those who want to work and their families. There is a hard core of militant Marxists and Trotskyites who are mainly inciting the violence. They are sometimes called a 'tiny minority' but in fact they are made up perhaps as many as 25,000 rabid militants.

"Many of the people on the picket lines are not coal miners at all, but students from universities some hundreds of miles away. Others are unemployed men who turn up for 'picket duty,' as they paid by the union to do this. But they are not themselves miners and have no personal interest in the matter. Then there are the professional thugs who will go anywhere to a punch - up, and if they are paid for it they like it all the better. The existence of this mob rule threat in Great Britain testifies to a political failure during the Thatcher years. While Thatcher's government has worked hard to achieve economic reforms, it has been unable to deal directly with the union power in Britain that exists as a virtual state within a state. The country is plagued with strikes of all types and in all sorts of industries and in the public sector. The Thatcher government has not dared to engage in the type of confrontation that President Reagan had early in his term with the striking air controllers, which he won.

Now, the conservative government is fearful of major confrontations and the ultimate one, a general strike. Large scale strikes brought down the Conservative Heath government in the 1970s. However, it must be established that the lawful government in Parliament is the real government of Great Britain.

The boss of the coal miners cannot be allowed to sabotage the economy of the British nation. Establishing this point will be the ultimate test of

Irish rioting is continu

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — American IRA supporter Martin Galvin hinted he may again defy a British ban on his presence in Northern Ireland, and rioting broke out in advance of today's funeral of a man killed when police tried to arrest Galvin.

Police and Roman Catholic youths clashed Tuesday night at a soccer match. A spokesman at Belfast police headquarters said 35 officers and 10 civilians were hurt and 10 people were arrested, heightening tension before the funeral.

A statement attributed to Galvin was issued by Sinn Fein, the legal political wing of the outlawed Irish Republican Army, after Britain's Northern Ireland Secretary James Prior admitted that the ban on Galvin, publicity director of the New York - based Irish Northern Aid Committee, was a serious mistake.

The statement said: "Since Jim Prior himself has now admitted that the ban against me was an error, may I now consider the ban to be withdrawn or must I take further action to use their ban to further expose the indefensible realities of British rule in Ireland? Galvin has been in hiding since he turned up at a Sinn Fein rally in Belfast Sunday. Sean Downs, 22, was killed and 20 others were hurt when riot police firing plastic bullets plunged into 2,000 people at the rally in a bid to arrest Galvin. The 34 - year - old lawyer escaped in the chaos.

There was no indication whether Galvin planned to be at Downs' funeral at St. Agnes Roman Catholic Church in the staunchly Catholic Andersonstown quarter of West Belfast Galvin was expected in Dublin, capital of the Irish Republic, Tuesday. But supporters apparently failed to smuggle him out of West Belfast, where he was thought to be hiding. Rich Lawlor of Hartford, Conn., a member of Galvin's Noraid delegation, told The Associated Press that attempts were being made to get Galvin out of Belfast.

Sinn Fein did not indicate what was planned for Downs' funeral. A crowd of several hundred followed the coffin containing his body as it was carried through West Belfast late Tuesday.

exan recalls Cuban crisis

TAYLOR, Texas (AP) - James Qualls, a retired Air Force major watched with special interest when ABC-TV aired the film "Call to Glory" this week

Qualls, 55, knew how it really was in October 1962. He was one of the pilots who flew over Cuba armed only with cameras to gather evidence of Soviet missiles.

"Call to Glory," which aired as a two-hour film Monday night and is scheduled to be a series, was a fictional account of the men of the 4080th Strategic Reconnaissance Wing and their families during the Cuban missile crisis

Stationed at Laughlin Air Force Base near Del Rio, the pilots flew top-secret missions in the U-2, a spy plane able to take detailed photographs from altitudes of 70,000 feet and more.

After seeing the show, Qualls said, "I suppose it made a good story. I thought there would be more on the flying part of it. But that part of it was pretty much the way it happened."

The Qualls' former house on the Air Force base was featured in one scene that showed a family driving up to a residence.

'We really got a kick out of that," he said

Qualls reflected on his flights as a U-2 pilot, a mission "so secret you couldn't even tell your wife can't work, then you should clearly

Qualls said he and other pilots chosen for the reconnaissance work were not even told what they were being asked to volunteer for.

'They just selected certain pilots out of the fighter wings and asked if they wanted to volunteer," Qualls said. "They couldn't tell you at all what it was about. They just said it was high-altitude, unarmed r)conaissance.

Qualls had joined the wing in 1956 and stayed for 10 years in Southwest Texas.

"We were a real close-knit group," Qualls said. "Even though we were way out in Del Rio, we had a good time.

During the crisis, flying over Cuba wasn't a quick mission, Qualls said. He often flew over Cuba for as long as 2½ hours. Louise Qualls, James' wife, said she never had enough time to worry about what her husband was

"I didn't really know what they were doing," she said. "Maybe I was just dumb and naive. I had my hands full with three kids. Now I have a son in the Navy who flies off aircraft carriers. You just can't worry about everything they do."

In early October 1962,10F. Kennedy had evidence from intelligence sources that the Soviet Union was placing offensive missiles in Cuba, about 90 miles from Florida. Kennedy considered it a dangerously provocative act, and put out the word to the Air Force to get the proof.

"We lnew something was going on," Qualls recalled. "Our intelligence had a pretty good idea they were there. We had the pictures back to Kennedy within 12 hours after he said he wanted

Allergy for every season, this season's bad

WASHINGTON (AP) - The sneezing, wheezing ragweed season arrived early this year, and experts say most of the nation will have to wait until the fall frost arrives to breathe easy again.

Unusual amounts of moisture and warm weather produced ideal growing conditions for ragweed the experts say. The pollen from this weed can cause sneezing, watery eyes, asthma attacks, coughing, hives and general misery for millions.

"Ragweed season usually starts around Aug. 17 each year, but it came a week early this time," Dr. Michael A. Kaliner of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases said Tuesday.

"Ragweed is enormously prevalent in the northern part of the country and along the East Coast.' Kaliner said. "Traditionally, the Southwest and Southern California are the only areas that escape the weed, but throughout the country this year, there are recent reports that it is spreading there, also. Kaliner said about 35 million persons in the United States suffer with allerges, and about half of these are affected by ragweed.

The best way to avoid the pollen is to stay in air conditioned rooms or buildings, he said, and people suffering severe symptoms should see an allergist

Sufferers can turn to anti-allergy medicines available in drug stores for some relief. But many of these preparations mostly contain antihistamines and may not be aimed at relieving the specific symptoms an individual is suffering with, said Kaliner.

"I don't recommend that people

Conference adopts controversial resolution

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Over the objections of U.S. and Israeli delegates, a U.N. conference on population problems ended with the adoption of an Arab-sponsored resolution condemning settlements in occupied lands.

The final hours of the nine-day gathering were spent in often-bitter debate Tuesday night over the controversial resolution. one of 88 recommendations adopted by the delegates, who came from 149 countries.

The U.N. International

Conference on Population was supposed to have ended Monday, but wrangling over the resolutions forced the delegates to work an extra day.

The resolution on establishment of settlements was considered critical of Israel, which occupies the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip, territory seized during the 1967 Middle East war.

The resolution was approved 87-2 with 26 abstentions, with Israel and the United States casting the votes against it. After that vote, the 149 delegates adopted the entire set of recommendations by consensus and approved a declaration a summarizing conference ideas.

James L. Buckley, a former senator from New York who presented the Reagan administration's views at the conference, said the United States was pleased about a recommendation that says abortion should not be promoted as means of family planning. The controversial recommendation also was advocated by the Vatican.

Restaurants feature clutter

By JOHN CUNNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) - Anyone who has ever entered a TGI Friday's sees a decor unlike that of any other restaurant except perhaps another unit of the $250 million, Dallas-based chain.

"Elegant clutter" is what Dan Scoggin calls his mooseheads, wood airplane propellers, racing sculls, old prints, mirrors, brass fixtures and the like that somehow meld into a serene atmosphere.

Less well known is that Scoggin - who built the chain from a singles place here into more than 80 units nationwide, with more than 20 others scheduled - is one of the more original entrepreneurs in corporate management.

In his mid-40s, Scoggin writes rather than reads the book, the result of having had to learn under pressure what makes a restaurant succeed. Often his ideas are unique. He never advertises, for example. Others do it for him.

"What's the most popular topic at a cocktail party?" he asks. "The bad movie or restaurant you went to," he answers. By the same token, 'if people have a phenomenal experience they'll tell 20 others, and half will come in."

To advertise is "to toot your own horn, and what's talkable about that?" asks Scoggin, who has "never spent a dime on advertising" since leaving his selling job at Boise Cascade. He lets people "discover" Friday's decor, its 25-page menu, service and prices. Sound management, controls and systems are hallmarks of food chains, such as McDonald's, Burger King and Wendy's. But Scoggin claims his full-menu TGIs (thank God it's Friday) are "the most sophisticated food operation anywhere."

It wasn't always so. A decade ago his venture capital creditors were upset. Having grown his chain to six stores, success turned Houston and Atlanta - volume fell from $60,000 to $30,-000 a week.

Scoggin reacted in a singular way, setting out on a 90-day trip around the country, studying successful and failing restaurants, examining decor, service, food and systems.

Why, he asked, do so many restaurants have a 5-to 7-year life cycle? It was, he concluded, not just competition from without but aging from within. Restaurants failed to change with times and clientele. They sat pat.

Scoggin claims that each unit of Friday's, now traded on the N.Y. Stock Exchange but owned largely by Carlson Companies of Minneapolis, does in food volume alone what most units sell in food and beverages. At $2.2 million to $2.4 million a year per unit, he says, his units tops that of any other chain.

Athletes get ticker tape parade

returned from Iran

NEW YORK (AP) - Fresh off their record-setting gold grab in Los Angeles, America's Olympic athletes swept into New York for a ticker tape parade today through Wall Street's "Canyon of Heroes, an honor usually reserved for warriors and astronauts.

A flurry of ticker tape, a shower of paper gold medals and a line of yellow balloons awaited the medal winners along the parade route through the heart of the nation's financial capital to the steps of City Hall.

The excitement over the parade, which Mayor Edward Koch promised the 206 Olympians would be the city's "biggest and best," spilled over to the athletes themselves.

"I thought you had to be an astronaut to be in a ticker tape parade," said Steve Lundquist of Jonesboro, Ga., who won a gold in swimming.

Indeed, the honor has been reserved for the likes of pioneer aviator Charles Lindbergh, Gen. Douglas McArthur and astronaut John Glenn. The last time the city threw such a parade was in 1981, when the American hostages

Unlike most of their heroic predecessors, the 1984 Olympians who spent the last two weeks running, cycling, swimming, jumping and diving - were walking the 10-block parade route instead of riding in cars.

The parade leaders were Koch and several other Olympians, including 4-foot-9 gold medal gymnast Mary Lou Retton and 6-foot-6 basketball star Chris Mullin, a native New Yorker.

Gilbert I. Low, one of three attorneys defending the county, said he assumed the order requires the county to redraw precinct lines but that Parker did not say what plan would be acceptable. Instead, Low said, the county must interpret Parker's findings and come back with a plan it thinks will

Beaumont resident Cleveland Nisby, who filed suit against the county in April 1983, said blacks will be satisfied with nothing less than two black-majority precincts. Parker gave the county until Oct. 15 to come up with a new plan but said he will grant an extension if the county needs more time.

Parker's ruling answered Nisby's contention that precinct lines are drawn in such a way as to deny black taxpayers representation on the court.

Zaccaro lost privacy when wife became running mate of Mondale

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

AP Political Writer DALLAS (AP) - Like it or not, John Zaccaro lost his privacy the day his wife was tagged to be Walter F. Mondale's running mate.

Even if Zaccaro thought it would be business as usual; surely Mondale knew better, and Republicans here are relishing the chance to remind voters of the Democrats' embarrassment.

The Republicans don't have to do much. They might be better off sitting back and letting Mondale, Geraldine Ferraro and Zaccaro kick around the disclosure issue.

Ms. Ferraro said Tuesday she still is trying to get her real estate developer husband to make his tax returns public. But there was no sign he was willing to comply.

Each time Republicans interrupted preparations for next week's party convention to denounce the Democrats on the disclosure issue, they were asked whether they ever had made their tax returns public and the answer inevitably was they had not.

One of the unanswered questions in the uproar over whether or not Zaccaro will open his financial affairs to public scrutiny is how Mondale and his staff let the controversy get so far out of hand.

A problem that should have been anticipated and dealt with before anyone knew it existed now threatens to overshadow the Democratic campaign and dissipate much of the support Mondale hoped to gain from his selection of a woman running

During the past three weeks, Mondale got control of the agenda of the campaign by attacking President Reagan on the question of whether a tax increase will be needed to reduce federal budget deficits. It was a strong performance by the challenger.

backed off her promise to disclose Zaccaro's tax returns, the Democrats were on the defensive, their campaign dogged by questions about financial

During his long search for a running mate, Mondale tried to give the impression of a meticulous process that would eliminate any chance of embarrassment.

There would be no surprises, no repeat of 1972 when Democratic nominee George McGovern had to switch running mates in mid-campaign following disclosure that his original choice, Sen. Tom Eagleton of Missouri, had undergone psychiatric treatment years earlier. And no repeat of piro Agnew who became Richard M. Nixon's vice president and had to resign after pleading no contest to charges growing out of his Yet suddenly, after Ms. Ferraro acceptance of bribes while serving as governor of Maryland.

Yet it appears that none of the seasoned political operatives around Mondale asked Ms Ferraro or her husband whether they had any problem with making the fullest financial disclosure.

And once Zaccaro told his wife he didn't want to make his tax returns public, why were the people who've taken control of the Democratic Party unable to convince this New York real estate developer that he had to make this sacrifice for the sake of his wife if not the Democratic ticket?

So far, Zaccaro is taking a tougher stand on disclosure.

"He has decided not to file the returns," said the Democratic nominee. "As I understand it, that's his right under the law and I'm not in a position to second Charles Lindbergh to John Glenn, ticker tape parades have been bestowed on some of this country's greatest heroes. Today America's 1984 Olympic medalists were joining the list of honorees.

"I thought you had to be an astronaut to be in a ticker tape parade." said Steve Lundquist of Jonesboro, Ga., who won a gold in swimming.

The city honored astronaut Glenn with a 1962 ticker tape parade; others who received the ticker tape treatment include Gen. Douglas MacArthur on his return from Korea in 1951 and Lindbergh following his New York-Paris flight

From the minute their flight touched down at Kennedy Airport, the athletes' winning spirit spread like a fever. From the airport, through the borough of Queens and through the Midtown Tunnel into Manhattan, the welcome from New Yorkers poured out.

"When people lined the streets all the way from the airport, it's great," said Lundquist. "Crowds formed everywhere. People stopped in their cars. There were people on overpasses and some were getting out of their cars to

Another 150 policemen and seven mounted officers greeted them at the elegant Plaza Hotel, where the

Mary Lou Retton, the 16-year-old gold winner in gymnastics from Fairmont, W. Va., said the parade would be "wild." She exclaimed, "That's going to be something," when told the athletes would walk not ride in the parade.

Nelson Vails, a native New Yorker who captured a silver in sprint cycling, said he looked forward to marching in the parade with Mayor Edward Koch. Vails quipped, "I hate walking, I wish we were in a car." He quickly added, "I've been all over the world, but New York will always be my

No softies in NFC West Division

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Bum Phillips, coach of the New Orleans Saints, would prefer getting just one look per season at opposing stars such as Joe Montana, Eric Dickerson, Steve Bartkowski and William Andrews.

But the Saints must again go twice around against those three and the other Pro Bowl players in the National Football Conference West, a division with no soft spots in 1983. The close race had the winning San Francisco finishing three games ahead of last-place Atlanta.

All four NFC West teams now consider themselves of playoff

The 49ers, 10-6, and second-place Los Angeles Rams reached the playoffs. The Rams, 9-7, deprived the Saints, 8-8, of a playoff berth and first winning season by beating New Orleans 26-24 in the final game of the season on Mike Lansford's 42-yard field goal

Atlanta, 7-9, had the National Football League's top-rated quarterback in Bartkowski, who passed for 3,167 yards and 22 touchdowns and was intercepted only five times. Teammate Andrews, with 1,567 yards, was the league's No. 2 rusher behind sensational Rams rookie Dickerson, who ran for 1,808 yards and 18 touchdowns.

The Saints, who have a ,000-yard rusher in George Rogers, are the only NFC West team with a preseason battle for the quarterback job. New Orleans got Richard Todd in a trade with the Jets, and the former Alabama star is competing against Ken Stabler and David Wilson.

Stabler threw only nine TD passes and allowed 18 interceptions last year. Todd, who passed for 3,478 yards, was intercepted 26 times, but he had an excellent, interception-free game in the Jets' 27-13 pounding of the NFC West champion 49ers.

The 49ers' Montana was not far behind Bartkowski in passing efficiency, with statistics including 3,910 yards, 26 TDs and 12 interceptions. Newcomers Wendell Tyler and Roger Craig gave the team an improved rushing attack, combining for 1,581 yards.

The 49ers were the top scoring team in the division with 432 points. The defense allowed 293 points. second lowest total in the NFC, while the Rams allowed 344, the Saints 337, and the Falcons 389.

On offense, if everyone stays healthy, the 49ers expect to open the season with 11 returning starters including receiver Dwight Clark, who missed the playoffs in! I just found out that the rat I've been living with for nine years (we have a 6-month-old baby) has been having quickie affairs all along. I bought the story that he couldn't marry because we're living in my house, which is located out of his district (he's a Detroit police officer), and he would say, "If I married you and we lived in your house, I would lose my job because of residency."

One of his girlfriends wrote him a letter addressed to my house. In this letter she described some love scenes she has had with him that are exactly like the ones I have had with him. She used the very same endearing words he used to whisper in my ear at night.

I am so burned I want to throw the rat out. Can you give me some advice? He lies so much I can't believe a word he says.
BURNED IN MICHIGAN

DEAR BURNED: The "rat" has a legal responsibility to the remark, the teller closed her window child he fathered. I don't blame you for wanting to throw him out. Too bad you didn't write to me nine years ago. I would have suggested that you sell your house and move into his district.

DEAR ABBY: You recently gave your readers some valuable advice when you warned them against vigorously shaking an infant or small child. I am a retired pediatric nursing instructor who has always stressed that very point.

Few people are aware that shaking an infant or small child vigorously can cause a whiplash kind of brain injury that can result in eventual mental retardation!

How often we see well-intentioned adults playfully "tossing a baby high into the air." This innocent little game that seems to delight the baby can also result in permanent brain damage.

Brain cells are easily destroyed in infants, and as I told my students, every child needs all the brain cells it can maintain in order to cope in our complex world.

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (NEA) Things had not been going well for Warren and Carol Jean Wright. He had been laid off his job at a film company, and she had not worked steadily for months. So, needing money, the young couple, local authorities say, tried to sell the most valuable possession they had. Their 6-week-old baby.

The authorities say the child, named Jonathan, was put on the open market for $5,000. And an informant reported it to the police department. The police dispatched a pair of undercover officers to make the deal, the money was exchanged, and Warren and Carol Wright were arrested.

The sale was thus thwarted. And baby Jonathan has been placed safely, in a social service shelter. But the matter doesn't end there. The loathsome crime is not just an isolated aberration. Law enforcement officers here and elsewhere say the peddling of children is going on all around the nation.

- In Slidell, La., a woman has been arrested for trying to sell a pair of infants, one of them unborn. Police there say the asking price was $1,200 for both. The woman, pregnant, told the buyer he could have her 8-monthold baby immediately, and she would give him the other one when it was

The examples shock the senses, of course. But they may be only a hint of what is going on. Police have reported cases of child selling from New York to Los Angeles, on street corners and in shopping centers. An offi-cer in Miami Beach says one fellow there tried to sell a 14-month-old not all other states as well. There is a federal law against selling children into peonage, but John Russell of the U.S. Justice Department says it does not apply to child selling in general.

It seems ridiculous. Yet Dr. Don Bross says there is a historic explanation. Bross is an attorney with Denver's Center for the Prevention of Child Abuse, and he says that children were originally excluded from that part of American law that is based on the premise of equal protection.

The reason is that for much of the country's history kids were legally considered to be mere property. And they can still be exchanged in some divorces like furniture and appliances. Bross says adults have always had the guarantees of the Constitution and the courts, but, customarily, children have only had their parents.

That began to change in the 1920s when the child labor laws were enacted. And the rights of children have multiplied since. But Bross thinks some gaps remain. He says society continues to react slowly to situations such as child selling, because it doesn't want to weaken overall parental control.

That's why it's still difficult for the law to meet the needs of many neglected children. That's why it's still difficult for the courts to interfere with the traditional family authority. And that's why some parents, under some circumstances, may still get away with selling their Police say some kids who've been sold have turned up in the pages of sadist magazines. Others may have been all but enslaved. There have been tales of cases in Chicago where kids have been sold and resold like beef on the hoof, bringing increasing profits as they grow larger and more valuable.

NO-COOK PEACH RELISH JAM - Store it in the freezer.

No-cook jams store well in the freezer

By CECILY BROWNSTONE Associated Press Food Editor

Judging from inquiries, even cooks who have never made fresh fruit jams are now thinking of doing so. They like the idea of using pure ingredients.

Easiest of all to prepare are the no-cook freezer jams that are made with fruit pectin — a product that does not contain undesirable preservatives. The following recipe may entice you during the fresh peach season. We found it good served with chicken or turkey. It's also delicious with ham

NO-COOK PEACH RELISH JAM 2 pounds (about) fully ripe peaches 1/2 cup raisins 1/4 cup cider vinegar ½ teaspoon ground cinnamon 1/4 teaspoon ground cloves 51/2 cups granulated sugar 1 cup firmly packed light brown sugar 1/4 cup lemon juice

In a small bowl stir lemon juice into fruit pectin; stir into peach mixture and continue stirring for 3 minutes. (A few sugar crystals will remain.) Ladle quickly into containers (see Note). Cover at once with tight lids. Let stand at room temperature for 24 hours, then store in freezer. Small amounts may be covered and stored in refrigerator for up to 3 weeks. If raisins sink to bottom, stir gently before serving. Allow flavors to blend and mellow for a week or so before using.

Americans walk tightrope

By REDBOOK

A Hearst Magazine Americans are walking a dietary tightrope these days, trying to balance nutrients and count calories while being bombarded with seemingly contradictory eating advice.

To take the mystery out of healthy eating, Redbook asked leading nutritionists for the 10 most common mistakes people make in their diets, and the results appear in the September issue.

The experts agreed the most common - and deadliest - dietary sin was eating too much fat. Most dangerous are the saturated fats found in animal and dairy products that raise the cholesterol level and are culprits in heart disease and

A diet high in any fat also may increase the risk of cancer of the breast, endometrium, ovaries, colon, rectum and possibly

Fat also has twice the calories per gram of other nutrients which means overindulgence can lead to obesity.

Next on the list of dietary mistakes was overloading on protein. About 12 to 15 percent of a person's daily caloric intake should be made up of protein. But most Americans eat twice that much, and a large proportion comes from such high cholesterol foods as beef

"For your heart's sake, have burgers or steak no more than two or three times a week." advised Gail Levey, spokesperson for the American Dietetic Association of Chicago.

The third diet error was getting too little iron. It isn't necessary to eat iron-rich - and cholesterol-high - red meat in order to increase iron intake. Legumes, oysters, clams, sardines, whole-grain cereals and bread, leafy green vegetables, brussels sprouts and dried prunes, dates and raisins are good sources of added iron.

Don't assume starches are fattening. Such complex carbohydrates as pasta, potatoes, rice and bread are top sources of B-complex vitamins and are no more fattening than protein. It's the butter, oil and sour cream we put on starches that add calories.

People who avoid starches also probably are not eating enough fiber. The experts say that if half the foods you eat are complex carbohydrates, you should be getting enough fiber.

Drink milk. Women tend to avoid milk because they think it is fattening, and lose out on calcium as a result. Skim milk, low-fat plain yogurt and such non-dairy products as canned fish, tofu, turnip and collard greens and broccoli are good sources. Americans eat far too much salt. Some comes from the shaker, but sodium also sneaks into the diet via processed foods, cured meats and packaged baked goods. Three additional dietary sins are eating too much sugar, relying on vitamin pills for nutrients, and crash dieting.

"We're always better off getting nutrients from real foods, not pills," said Betty Perkins, associate administrator of the Human Nutrition Information Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Helen Guthrie, professor of nutrition at Pennsylvania State University in Philadelphia agreed, saying, "Eating a wide variety of foods - that's the best insurance of Study indicates minorities, teens more likely to drown

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) -Drowning is the nation's second-leading cause of accidental death and a 15- to 19-year-old male minority group member is the most likely victim, according to a study by a Texas A&M researcher.

Jim McCloy, of the Coastal Zone Laboratory at Texas A&M University in Galveston, also has found that alcohol use is a factor in most drownings involving people over the age of 14.

An average 7,578 people drown each year in the United States, trailing auto accidents as the leading cause of accidental death.

Texas, with about 634 drownings annually, accounts for nearly 10 percent of the nationwide total. The Houston-Galveston area averages 101 drownings a year, almost one-sixth of the state count.

"One of the things that concerns us, of course, is that very little is known about it," said McCloy, who is seeking to determine what leads to drowning and what can be done to prevent it.

McCloy has been studying drownings that occurred from 1970-79 in Galveston, Harris and Brazoria counties. Those counties are the only ones along the Texas coast with a medical examiner, he said, and thus the only counties with accurate medical records available.

McCloy determined that of 912 people who drowned in the Galveston-Houston area in the 10-year period, 515 were minorities.

The reason for drowning is partly economics, and partly culture, he

"I think it's well recognized there's a higher proportion of minorities that are (financially) disadvantaged than whites," McCloy said. "They don't have the same opportunity to learn how to

Minorities' cultural habits also tend to play a significant role in the high proportion of drownings, he

"You go down here and pay two bucks to park and have restrooms and a shower. Bring your barbecue. Drink beer. You know that's cheap recreation," McCloy

Once in the water "with blue jeans on and alcohol consumption, you get a very dangerous combination," he said.

Of 199 drowning victims who were recovered early enough to conduct valid alcohol consumption tests, 50 percent were positive. Of that 50 percent, 30 percent were legally intoxicated.

'Understand that alcohol can impair your ability to react, motor coordination, rational thought, recognition of danger," McCloy said. "It also impairs your judgment to judge distance and

The study also found males - by a 5-to-1 ratio - were more likely to be drowning victims than females.

"They're more daring," McCloy said. "They do things that put them in a risk situation more often than females in general. You don't see that many females riding motorcycles, for instance.'

The 15-19 age group is most susceptible to drowning because members are most likely to go to the beach, stop to buy some beer and spend the entire day in recreational activities, he said.

'Common sense, don't drink too much. Stay away from inflatables (rafts). Swim in the guarded areas," he said.

The thin, plastic-type inflatable rafts rupture easily, he said.

Palm reader continues family tradition

By VIVIENNE HEINES

The Brazosport Facts OLD OCEAN, Texas (AP) - The tiny room is crowded with religious figures, candles, pictures and bottles of oils. The Rev. Mother Lucy, a petite dark-haired woman with huge brown eyes, reaches across a small table to take the visitor's hands in hers, turning them so the palms face upward toward heaven.

She is silent for only a moment before she begins.

"You have a very long life ahead of you you work very hard right now, you're a go-getter and you're very independent. You never did like to depend on nobody, you always just depended on yourself for things. There is things now that you have planned on doing and you will accomplish those things. Between December, January and February that's the time that things are going to improve for you, things are going to happen for you then," she says in a smooth

Mother Lucy is giving a palm reading in the "chapel" of her home, something she does for dozens of people each week, 8 a.m. until 8 p.m., Monday through Saturday, and after church on Sundays She also looks into her crystal ball for people, lays out the Tarot cards, offers prayers, lights candles and provides advice to those who seek her talents.

A resident of Old Ocean for the last 23 years, Mother Lucy's real name is Lucy Marks. She is 50 years old, married with four children, with speech patterns and a dark complexion that gives evidence of her Greek background.

"I've been reading and doing Tarot cards since I was about 12 or 14 years old. My grandmother used to read, and my mother read, and I did, too," she explained.

"One day I just noticed that I could see things about people just by looking at them," she added. Mother Lucy is a tiny, pleasant woman with a warm smile, unlike the dark and wickedly mysterious figures associated with fortune-telling in the late-night movies. Maybe it's the way she treats her work with the simple, unquestioning acceptance of someone who enjoys her job, does it well and is satisfied with her life. Spiritualism, as she calls it, is not a craft she ever studied or was apprenticed to. She says she was never allowed to watch while her mother and grandmother gave readings, just as she doesn't allow her daughter to watch her. Yet she can tell you that her oldest daughter, 21 years old, has the same gift and her younger one

"When I'm reading, these words just come into my head and I just tell you what I see. Whatever comes out, I tell you ... I was never taught," she says.

Originally from the east coast. Mother Lucy moved to Old Ocean after her marriage to Ricky Marks, who is self-employed in the cleaning service, and they've stayed there since.

"Maybe God sent us here and we just bought a house and decided to stay here like I say, God works in a mysterious way," she said.

A member of the Greek Orthadox Church, she attributes her powers to help people to the Lord. And her religious devotion is obvious as she tells about a trip she took recently to Santa Fe and Albuquerque where she visited churches and collected some sacred dirt and religious relics that she claims have healing powers.

She says her work is done mostly through prayers and candles. If asked, she will also provide herbs. oils, holy water or good luck tokens (for example, a tiny pair of praying hands). All the items have been blessed, she says.

"I don't believe in casting spells at all. My work is strictly done with God and with my saints. I would not do anything that might hurt someone that would not be right,"

she said adamantly. The red sign outside her home that reads "Rev. Mother Lucy, Spiritualist, Reader-Healer-Advisor, Tarot Card and Palm Reading," is the extent of her advertising but it's enough to keep her busy. She has some clients who have been coming to her since she moved to Old Ocean 23 years ago. In addition to those customers seeking specific assistance with a problem, there are also those who come just for advice and to talk to someone who will listen, she said.

"Mostly it's mouth-to-mouth," she said of her popularity.

The price for a Tarot card reading, palm reading or crystal ball reading is about $5 or $10, and she occasionally runs half-price specials. If someone doesn't have the money, that's okay, too.

"If some people are not able to pay, they don't have to ... I get a lot of teenagers and I never charge them teenagers have so many problems. They need a lot of help these days," she said.

Although she enjoys talking to teen-agers, she will not do a reading for anyone under age 18.

"I will talk to them when they are younger but I will not read. Their hands are still too young and the crystal ball wouldn't be clear ... they don't know what they want and what they expect from life yet," she explained.

She is also careful never to prescribe oral medicine or potions for anyone. "That's for doctors,"

She doesn't claim to have made any miraculous cures, only to have helped people feel better over time. through her prayers, candles, holy objects and advice. Mother Lucy won't even offer the advice if it's a subject she's unsure on

"If I could not advise them on something selling or buying or investing then I would tell them to talk it over with their attorney," she said firmly

ATLANTA (AP) -State Sen. Julian Bond, a nationally known civil rights activist, narrowly defeated his first challenger in 10 years in Georgia's primary Tuesday, while U.S. Sen. Sam Nunn easily won renomination for a third term over a political unknown.

In other races, a judge held a strong lead in his bid to become the first black elected to statewide office, and blacks mounted campaigns for three of the state's 10 congressional districts.

With 46 of 54 precincts reporting, Bond, a national figure since his name was placed in nomination for vice president at the 1968 Democratic convention. had 4,400 votes to 3,800 for contractor Hildred W. Shumake Jr., according to Hamilton McWhorter. secretary of the Georgia state Senate.

Shumake had accused Bond of neglecting his district. No Republican sought the seat in Atlanta.

With 1,054 of 2,291 precincts reporting in the Democratic Senate primary, Nunn, the ranking Democrat on the Senate Armed Services Committee, had 703,620 votes, or 95 percent. Challenger Jim Boyd, a 49-year-old political consultant who campaigned exclusively on a call for an end to the nuclear arms race, had 36.857 votes, or 5 percent.

"I am deeply grateful for the support I received today from the voters of Georgia, and I am honored to be the Democratic Party's nominee for the Senate,"

Nunn said in a statement. "In my opinion, there can be no higher honor than to serve the people of Georgia in the U.S. Senate.

precincts reporting.

Jon Michael Hicks, a 32-vear-old substitute teacher from Riverdale. had 6,338 votes, or 38.2 percent, while Kelly Stratton Brown, a 48-year-old attorney from St. Simons Island, had 6,111 votes or 36.8 percent. Dr. James W. Tibbs Jr., a 59-year-old black Atlanta pharmacist, trailed with 4.135 votes, or 11 percent. Robert Benham, a 37-year-old black judge, led three white attorneys in a race for a Court of Appeals seat with 959 of 2,291 precincts reporting. If successful, Benham, who was appointed to fill a partial term on the court, would become the first black elected to a statewide post in Georgia

Benham had 152,039 votes, or 59.3 percent, while his nearest challenger, Jack Dorsey, 53, of Decatur, had 57,478 votes, or 22.4 percent.

A runoff for races in which no one gets a majority will be held Sept.

In one closely watched congressional race, Rep. Wyche Fowler, 4), a white Democrat seeking his fourth term, defeated four black challengers in the predominantly black 5th District in Atlanta.

With 204 of 238 precincts reporting, Fowler had 35,763 votes, or 60 percent.

Piecing causes of jet plane crashes

ZIMMER Associated Press Writer

RANTOUL, III. (AP) -A perfect model of an F-106 fighter plane hangs from the classroom ceiling above 5,000 pounds of compressed, fused metal that was once the engine of a real jet plane. The room is full of twisted and burned engines, clues that students use to figure out why jet planes crash.

"The engines in here are beautiful to us," said Still, it is essential to find Air Force instructor Tom Epps, running his fingers over mangled compressor blades. "With good parts, you can't teach damage patterns.

The course at Chanute Technical Training Center is the only one in the free world dealing exclusively with the jet engine'd role in a plane crash, the Air Force says. "We have to say if these engines were capable of supporting flight, and if not, what caused the failure," said Epps, who has been investigating crashes for 37 years. "If an engine failed, we want to prevent future occurrences and save lives. The next plane might crash into a city... Epps prepares his students to be detectives. sifting through deformed and shattered engine parts for answers. The way the blades of a compressor are bent can indicate whether it had failed, whether it had stopped rotating before the crash. The remains of a tiny instrument panel light can tell a trained investigator whether the light was on at the time of impact, indicating the hydraulic system had failed. "We can use lightbulbs to our advantage, even if they are peanut-sized," Epps said.

Since the eight-day course opened at Chanute 19 years ago, it has been attended by hundreds of students from the United States and 53 foreign countries. They include both military personnel and civilians, who conduct accident probes for agencies such as the National Transportation Safety Board.

The 13 students in one recent class included Air Force sergeants with closly cropped hair and fatigues, and a civilian with long blond hair and blue jeans.

"Do not jump to conclusions at a crash

Men 'Society just wants to forget' fight for many reasons

TENNESSEE COLONY, Texas (AP) - Some officials and inmates of the Texas Department of Corrections' Coffield Unit blame a surge in prison violence on racial tensions, lack of guard staff and the ease of getting material for knives, but others attribute it to

Last month, a guard was almost killed, two others were attacked and 11 inmates stabbed, prison officials say. A search of half the prison later turned up 489 handmade weapons.

Warden Jack Garner says one problem with Coffield is its design. which resembles a crumpled wagon wheel. While other TDC units allow one guard to monitor an entire hallway, Coffield's design requires more guards and it takes months to learn the layout well.

INMATE WEAPONS-Warden Jack Garner of Texas' largest prison, the Coffield unit, displays some of the 489 weapons turned up in a search of about half of the unit, where 11 inmates have been stabbed since the search.

Those problems can foster too much privacy, officials say, giving prisoners the opportunity to make weapons or battle among themselves

The metal that's required by the prison's major industries can easily be converted into knives. Garner said. And even a shard of porcelain can be sharpened into a

As a result. Garner said, there's an arms race behind bars.

One inmate makes a knife and another sees it and decides, "I'll make me my own knife." We couldn't protect them," Garner also has helped.

told the Houston Post. Another problem is deciding the prison's mission: Prison guard Major A.D. Caskey says the public must decide if Coffield and the other TDC prison units should be warehouses for criminals or places where inmates are rehabilitated. Either way, it will take more money and staff, he said, but

"society just wants to forget." There has been some progress, Garner says, and the confiscation of knives and an additional 100 officers have helped.

Things are more comfortable than they were three months ago,' said Garner, who believes morale is better now among guards and inmates. The warden said the addition of more senior officers

"If there are not enough people to talk to them (inmates) about their problems, they'll solve the problems themselves," Garner

Until recently, the public was not aware of the amount of violence behind prison bars, the warden

"We didn't report all the stuff," he said. "It looks like we are having a stabbing everyday somewhere — and we are — but it's nothing new.'

For years, the Texas prisons used a building tender system in which trusted convicts were used to control other inmates. Officials halted that system after it was abused in some places, leaving a transition problem.

Garner noted that inmates 'don't change overnight. When for so long they're told when to get up. to go eat, to go to work, they keep doing it a while before they realize: 'We don't have to do this.' And it's going to take a while before they figure out they don't have control - we have control."

A number of inmates gave their views in interviews with the Post. Jose Nava, an 18-year-old in prison on a manslaughter conviction, said he stabbed aother inmate to pro1ect himself.

The stabbing victim tried to collect money for protection, Nava

"He just thought I was young and he'd take advantage," said Nava. Another inmate, William Leftwich, wants to be placed in protective custody, a special area of cells for inmates who likely would be victimized by stronger Leftwich, who is small and doesn't have a weapon, said Coffield needs "enough security bossmen who know what's going on and can handle the situation. The younger ones are less likely to really do anything. Some of the older ones are afraid they'll get stabbed.

Ricky Meals, another inmate, was asked what could be done to reduce the violence and weapons in the prison unit.

"Nothing," he replied. "They can do a shakedown (weapons search) every day and come back and find just as many (weapons). Harassment by guards over little things - such as using a comb in the hallway - have made chances of an uprising "very high"

G'attraction found in a R-rated town

By AUSTIN WILSON

Associated Press Writer NEW ORLEANS (AP) - The locals know it, even if nobody else does. The Louisiana World Exposition of 1984 is the best "G" attraction ever to hit this R-rated

Almost 15 percent of the metropolitan population of 1.2 million has spent from $85 to $100 for season tickets. Locals account for about half of the average daily attendance of 43,000, fair officials

It's a mixed blessing for a fair that counted on 75,000 visitors a day to break even, then scaled that back to 50,000 a day. The lower figure might pay off the $25 million borrowed from the state - but kiss off the $55 million from corporate and private sources.

The locals buy food and drink particularly in the late evening hours when the Fulton Street nightspots are jumping and tourists have succumbed to the humidity and 90-degree heat. But the locals are not paying $15 a head to get onto the 82-acre fairgrounds. and they're not paying for hotel rooms or eating at the city's world-renowned restaurants, and they aren't buying souvenirs.

George Williams, the fair's vice president for marketing, isn't giving up. "We're playing catch-up," he said. "We're doing now what we should have been doing in January and February."

Williams was hired in June after the fair's first marketing director was fired, blamed for an underfunded advertising campaign that called for a media blitz for six weeks preceding the fair's opening on May 12 and little else.

The fair is accomplishing some of its secondary goals. Despite the still-depressed city economy, unemployment went up just 0.4 in June, when students usually drive the figure much higher. Officials say 5,600 jobs at the fair alleviated that recurring summer problem. The Great Hall rill become a convention trade show center after the fair closes on Nov. 11.

Meanwhile, the show goes on. After one gets past the "PG" mermaids at the fair's main gate huge bare-bosomed, bare-bottomed statues - it's all family-oriented.

Live music, literally at every turn. Dixieland, jazz, Cajun, Blue Grass, pop. gospel, march, rhythm and blues, Italian, German oom-pah, all day and everywhere, along the deliciously tacky Wonderwall.

In addition, there are night concerts at the amphitheater. featuring big-name entertainers for an extra charge — sometimes a pretty stiff charge, like the $40 a ticket for Bob Hope, sometimes not so stiff, like the $12.50-$20 for Kris Kristofferson

A 19-story Ferris wheel - billed as the world's largest - dominates the fair's skyline along with the cable car across the Mississippi. The fair's theme is "The World of Rivers: Fresh Water as a Source of Life," and lagoons and waterfalls decorate the grounds. But one of the most frequent complaints is the lack of drinking fountains.

Medical team encounters obstacles, rewards in Mexican mission work

Beaumont Enterprise

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) -Deep in the interior of Mexico, a medical team drove through thick foliage on a narrow road to deliver supplies and health services to a small village. After flagging the caravan down, a man produced a machine gun and held the health professionals at gunpoint while soldiers searched through medical supplies looking in vain for arms headed for enemy troops.

At a small clinic in another Mexican town, a gunshot victim refused to relinquish his pistol for fear he might have to ward off his attacker while being treated.

Dr. David Powell, a Beaumont anesthesiologist, has encountered obstacles treating village peasants he never was warned about in medical school. Yet, as part of a Shreveport physician's annual medical expedition to Mexico, Powell has discovered professional satisfaction lacking in the sterile confines of Beaumont operating rooms.

"It's medicine in its truest form." Powell says. "You don't worry about getting paid, and the patients really appreciate what you're doing. You're dog-tired and worked to the bone it's a good feeling

Each year since 1974, Powell has joined Dr. Charles Black on his annual medical expedition to a remote Mexican village. The caravan, on its 15th run this summer, hit an unexpected snag when Mexican customs officials refused the party entry

"It's a real tragedy." Powell says. "We're not making any real difference in the socio-economic condition in that country. But, for those 80 people waiting for surgery. we make a difference.

Powell met Black while he was in medical school. Black was a professor of surgery and went to the same church as Powell. Like every other member of the expedition, Powell had heard about Black's annual trip and asked to go

The main focus of the trips is Niltepec, a small village near the Pacific Ocean just north of the Guatemalan border

Usually waiting for the doctors are 70 to 80 patients suffering from various ailments. The group normally spends four to five days. 10 to 12 hours a day, doing three operations at a time in one room of a cinderblock building, with overflow procedures concluded in the backs of campers.

'Down there, we have a saying," Powell says. "The only plan is no plan. There's always a surprise.' Powell and other expedition members make side trips to other towns: a mountain village surrounded by lush, tropical forests; one town situated a day and a half from the nearest road; and another settlement accessible only by boat.

See-Thru Looseleaf Notebook!

Powell's wife, Connie, has accompanied her husband on several trips, assisting where necessary. There is no room for excess baggage, or people, on the trip. Everyone helps when he can.

"A Shreveport jeweler makes travel arrangements, another couple does the cooking, but the real heroes are two nurses who scavenge supplies for us throughout the year," Powell says. 'It's not a pleasure trip; there's no spare time. Besides it's the last place you'd ever go on a vacation.' Powell says the realities of working conditions soon wear the glamour off the trip. But the rewards remain. Grateful villagers have given the doctors chickens, samples of local
