

Local jobless rate remains far below norm

Pampa's official unemployment rate in June went up to 3.6 percent, a .2 percent increase over the previous month, the Texas Employment Commission announced.

The local unemployment rate in June (reporting of the local rate lags one month behind figures for the state and nation) climbed with state and national unemployment rates recorded in July.

"The slight increase was no surprise. The improving job market has brought about a noticeable increase in the number of workers coming into the (local) labor market," said Charles Vance, manager of the Pampa TEC office.

Pampa's unemployment rate of less than four percent compares with a state rate of 6.1 percent and a 7.5 - percent rate nationwide.

Pampa's 3.6 percent unemployment rate for June was more than the 3.4 percent recorded in May, but less than the four - percent rate for April. The unemployment rate for all of Gray County in June was 3.7 percent, compared with 3.5 percent in May and 4.1 percent in April.

In June, 15,373 people were counted in the labor force for all of Gray County. In the county labor force, 14,811 people were working, and 562 were unemployed. The labor force in Pampa for June was calculated at 12,495 people. In the city force, 12,049 people were working; 446 were counted as being unemployed.

With its higher but comparatively - low unemployment rate, the Pampa job market remained strong, Vance said.

"There has been heavy activity in retail sales, food service, convenience stores, medical services and domestic and outside labor," he said.

The higher unemployment rates in the state and nation, which were announced last week, took some labor analysts by surprise.

The Texas unemployment rate jumped from 4.8 percent to 6.1 percent.

"The news is not good... We're surprised by the amount, but I'm not ready to attach any significance to it," Nick Santangelo, a labor department economic analyst, remarked about the higher state rate.

Santangelo pointed out that the Texas unemployment rate was the second - lowest rate in the nation, behind Massachusetts' 4.2 percent.

Michigan, with 11.5 percent, posted the highest unemployment rate in the nation, helping increase the national average to 7.5 percent, up 4 percent over the previous month. It was the first increase in the national unemployment rate in 20 months.

Must taxes rise?

Reagan:
'Never'

Bush:
'Maybe'

Mondale:
'Certainly'

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan and Vice President George Bush, who normally speak with one voice, are disagreeing publicly over whether a post-election tax hike is possible — or at least over whether to admit it.

Bush, who has earned the respect of the White House staff for his loyalty and low profile, seemed embarrassed and uncomfortable about the division when he met with reporters here Monday following a lunch with Reagan.

In a campaign appearance Sunday, the vice president acknowledged the administration may have to raise revenues next year in an effort to cope with the federal deficit, approaching $200 billion a year.

That put him at odds with Reagan's repeated declaration that he has no secret plan to raise taxes, as Democratic challenger Walter F. Mondale has been asserting.

When pressed on the contradiction between the two positions, Bush got flustered.

"What was it I said?" he asked during the press briefing. "Refresh my ... Well, let me try again to do it the way I'd like it to come out."

Then, sidestepping the question, he said: "I would like any questions from now on here, on taxes, to be referred to Mr. Mondale. They are the ones that are the experts in it. They demonstrated a tremendous ability in knowing how to raise taxes."

Bush's confusion may stem from Reagan's repeated strong disavowals of any intention to raise taxes, while at the same time refusing to flatly rule out a tax increase of any kind.

Reagan promised Saturday to veto an increase in income taxes but has not made a similar pledge on other taxes.

When asked whether that didn't amount to keeping his options open, Bush said: "Listen, any president would keep options open. Conditions can dramatically change one way or the other."

Reagan, dressed in jeans, posed for pictures with Bush at the president's isolated mountaintop ranch before the two men sat down to plot political strategy over lunch of turkey and macaroni salad. Reporters who were allowed onto the ranch to witness the event asked Reagan about Mondale's charge that he has a secret plan to increase taxes after the Nov. 6 election.

"Walter Mondale is not telling the truth," said Reagan, sounding irritated. "I have said it before and I will say it again and no matter how many of you try to put in a hedging line, we have no plans for, nor will I allow plans for a tax increase. Period."

By contrast, Bush did not sound so positive when he appeared at a local hotel to brief reporters. Asked whether there would not be a need for a tax hike, he said: "... We have to wait and see what the conditions are at the time. I'm not saying yes and I'm not saying no."

Asked whether Reagan was simply ruling out plans to raise taxes, while not ruling out actually raising them, Bush appeared totally confused.

"I don't know," he said. "I don't know how you'd read it. I'd ask him for clarification the next time he talks."

NORTH OAKS, Minn. (AP) — Walter F. Mondale thinks Vice President George Bush is right to differ with President Reagan over the need for new tax revenues to reduce federal budget deficits.

Mondale and Reagan sniped at each other anew Monday about possible tax hikes in 1985, the hottest issue of the early days of the fall campaign for the White House.

The Democratic presidential nominee said new taxes are needed to cut the "appalling and obscene" deficit. But Reagan accused Mondale of not telling the truth and broadened his own pledge not to raise taxes, while Bush insisted the president was keeping his options open about future taxes.

Mondale planned to continue to talk about deficits and their effect on U.S. trade on a three-day campaign trip starting today through Ohio, Pennsylvania and the South.

"This deficit is appalling and obscene ... It is a very severe problem that threatens our future," Mondale said, citing new figures from the Congressional Budget Office that projected continuing high deficits.

Reagan, in Santa Barbara, Calif., took another shot at Mondale, repeating that there is no secret GOP plan to raise taxes, as the Democratic nominee contends.

"Walter Mondale is not telling the truth," Reagan said at his ranch. "I said it before and I will say it again — and no matter how many of you try to put in a hedging line — we have no plan for, nor will I allow plans for a tax increase."

Salaries of two neighboring districts, the San Antonio Independent School District and the Northside Independent School District, rank far above Edgewood, Vasquez said. "We're not in the ballpark," Vasquez said. "It made it very, very hard for us to recruit teachers."

In the huge Houston Independent School District, the reform measure means a tight budget — and almost guarantees a tax hike, officials said.

The bill sent administrators scurrying for money to cover $42 million to $43 million in additional expenditures over the next two years, said HISD Superintendent Billy Reagan.

"That does include about a 7 percent salary increase (for See SCHOOL, Page two

Geologist talks about source of Harlow gas

Special to The Pampa News
LUBBOCK — A consulting geologist for Dorchester Gas Producing Co. said Monday that most of the gas produced by Harlow Corporation's oil wells is coming from a free gas zone.

On cross examination at the trial, however, Ray Stotler corroborated his deposition statement in which he did not dispute the West Panhandle Field's having been designated a common reservoir by the Texas Railroad Commission.

Stotler, employed by a Dallas firm hired by Dorchester, also conceded to Harlow attorneys that he is not an expert on the West Panhandle Field and has not inspected wells or well samples from that area.

Dorchester is suing Harlow, one of 37 independent operators embroiled in an on-going controversy in the field, claiming Harlow produces gas belonging to Dorchester apart from oil in Harlow's wells.

Harlow contends it is entitled to produce oil and casinghead gas. How much gas is being produced and from where are two points being debated in Lubbock as the far-reaching trial begins focusing on geology in its second week.

Visiting District Judge Robert Montgomery, presiding in 137th District Court on a change of venue from Pampa, is using the Natural Resources Code to define casinghead gas as "indigenous to an oil stratum and produced with oil."

Both sides interpret that definition differently. Ownership, prices and the future of independent oil operations in the Panhandle and perhaps the entire state may be riding on the outcome.

Stotler testified the gas and oil in Harlow's wells could not be mixed because one well's gas production was too great compared to the area's oil output. He said the well is producing much more gas than would be expected based on the amount of oil being produced.

The suit deals with two Harlow oil wells located about eight miles south of Pampa. An appeal of the jury's verdict is certain, so legal wrangling arose again Monday over Montgomery's ruling to limit discussion of RRC regulations.

Montgomery sent the jury out when Dorchester attorney Robert Templeton of Amarillo objected to Harlow attorney Broadus Spivey's questioning of Stotler about the common reservoir designation. After a discussion, Montgomery overruled Templeton and denied his motion for a mistrial.

Templeton argues the area is not a common reservoir but brought up See TRIAL, Page two

Economist: growth won't end deficits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress' chief economist says the booming economy will not grow quickly enough to wipe out the record federal deficit without spending cuts, more tax increases or a combination of the two.

"I can't say it's impossible but I can say it's improbable," Rudolph Penner, director of the Congressional Budget Office, said Monday of the argument by some conservatives that Congress should do nothing about the deficits except step back and let the economy grow.

CBO expects this year's deficit to total $172 billion, down from last year's $195 billion, but predicts that by 1989 the red ink will hit $263 billion in the absence of additional spending reductions, tax increases or both. Without significant action to cut the deficit, CBO says, interest rates will remain unusually high.

There was some good news in the report: CBO looks for inflation to remain low for the next 18 months and for unemployment in 1985 to average less than this year.

Over the next 18 months, Penner said, CBO expects the economy to continue "quite outstanding" growth. He added: "But it is very unlikely the growth rate would be big enough to bring the deficit to satisfactory levels ... It will take significant legislative actions to have a big change" in the deficit.

Penner said the deficit poses a less ominous problem for the economy than it did in February — when CBO issued its last forecast — but only because in the meantime Congress has approved a package of tax increases and spending.

Reform spells relief for some, but causes headache for others

DALLAS (AP) — The $2.8 billion education reform bill recently passed by the Legislature comes as a relief for some Texas school districts, while others are scrutinizing budgets — and considering tax increases — to fund higher teacher salaries and other expenses.

The law, which also includes stricter academic requirements, teacher competency testing and new restrictions on extracurricular activities, was hammered out by lawmakers after more than a year of hearings conducted by a blue-ribbon education panel headed by Dallas industrialist H. Ross Perot.

In the Edgewood Independent School District, located on the west side of San Antonio, the measure was greeted enthusiastically, said Superintendent James Vasquez.

The 13,000-student system is "known among the education system as the poorest urban district in the state," said Vasquez, estimating the district would receive an additional $10 million for the 1984-85 school year.

Without more state financing, to be paid for largely by a one-eighth cent increase in the state sales tax, the district could not afford mandated curriculum changes, such as a requirement to teach computer skills to secondary students, Vasquez said.

Even more important, he said, the additional state funding will enable Edgewood to increase teacher salaries — a major problem for a district that has had trouble attracting qualified instructors with an average starting salary of under $12,000 annually.

U.S. sending minesweepers to help clear Gulf of Suez

By The Associated Press
 The Pentagon said today the United States will send minesweeping helicopters to the Gulf of Suez region to help Egypt try to clear the heavily traveled Red Sea of explosives which have damaged 10 ships in recent weeks.
 In Washington, a Defense Department spokesman, Marine Maj. Jim Pisciotano, said several RH-53D Sea Stallion helicopters and a support ship were being sent at the request of the Egyptian government, which controls the Suez Canal.
 The U.S. force "will work with Egyptian authorities to carry out mine countermeasure operations..." Pisciotano said, reading from a statement.
 Six of the twin-turbine helicopters were prepared over the weekend for the mission, he said, adding he did not know how many would be sent. The helicopters dangle devices that can destroy magnetic and acoustic mines.
 An unarmed Navy oceanographic survey ship, the Harkness, is already in the area, serving as a base for U.S. explosive experts sent to Egypt on Thursday, according to Pentagon officials.

 In London, a British Foreign Office spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said on Monday that Britain is considering an Egyptian request for minesweepers.
 So far, shipping and military experts have not been able to definitely identify the explosives as mines or pinpoint who is responsible.
 In Cairo, Egypt's defense minister was questioned Monday about who is to blame for the explosions and said there were "indications this was done by two countries, but we are not sure, I cannot, therefore, single out any particular country."
 Diplomatic observers in Cairo said they believed Field Marshal Abdel-Halim Abu-Ghazala was referring to Iran and Libya. Suez Canal Authority sources have said they suspected Iran and reported they received instructions to alert security authorities any time an Iranian or Libyan ship passed through the canal.

 All the sources spoke on condition they not be identified.
 Abu-Ghazala told reporters: "We are using our rights in order to intercept any ships suspected of carrying explosives. We did intercept some ships but nothing was found on board." He declined to give the nationality of the vessels or otherwise elaborate.
 Five of the explosions occurred in July in the Gulf of Suez, and the rest took place this month in the southern part of the Red Sea, off the coasts of Saudi Arabia and North Yemen.
 The latest victim was a Taiwanese-owned tanker, the Oceanic Energy, which was left drifting in the southern Red Sea after being damaged Sunday. Lloyds of London said Saudi helicopters evacuated 22 crew members from the 88,599-ton Liberian-registered vessel. No casualties were reported.
 The 180-mile-long Gulf of Suez, at the north end of the Red Sea, leads to the Suez Canal, which links it to the Mediterranean Sea.
 There have been no reports of mines in the 100-mile-long canal.

Over 500 weapons found in shakedown

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A special squad of guards conducted a systematic search of the Ferguson Unit of the Texas Department of Corrections over the weekend and found 524 weapons — about one weapon for every 4.3 inmates in the unit, officials at the prison announced Monday.
 TDC spokesman Charles Brown also announced that an inmate in the Coffield Unit suffered six stab wounds during a disagreement on Monday with a cellmate. The wounds are not serious.
 Warden Jerry Gunnels said that the cells of all 2,240 inmates in the Ferguson Unit were searched by a special team of 27 guards that has been organized to conduct such searches.
 Of the 524 weapons found, said Gunnels, 356 of them were homemade knives.
 Gunnels said a special "lockdown" — or general cell confinement for inmates — that was in effect at Ferguson has been lifted, but that inmate movement is still restricted. He said 500 inmates are working in the kitchen, laundry and at other essential jobs, but that school classes and the commissary are closed. Nor are inmates working the fields.

 "We have restrictive movement to fit our schedule," said Gunnels. Inmates, he said, are being fed and allowed to shower in smaller, more easily controlled numbers.
 The lockdown started last Thursday after a guard was slugged in the face. Before the lockdown, said Gunnels, there were many inmates who refused to work or to attend school. Since the lockdown, he said, "they all want to turn out right now."
 When Ferguson returns to normal, said Gunnels, the trouble-making inmates will be offered a choice of behaving or of being moved to a segregated cellblock that offers far fewer privileges. Those refusing to work or attend school, he said, will face disciplinary charges.
 At Coffield, inmate Albert Raul Perez, 22, was stabbed six times with a butter knife. Brown said his assailant was a cellmate. Perez was treated at the unit infirmary and is in good condition, Brown said.
 Inmates also are locked down in Coffield, as the result of the stabbing of four inmates. Cellblocks in the unit have been searched twice.

School reforms

teachers this year," Reagan said. "There's no salary increase built in for 1985-86. We're now in the process of identifying about $42 million cost-containment items that we can carry out."
 Last month, Houston school board members approved a $595-million spending program for the 1984-85 school year, with more than $30 million in budget cuts to be implemented over the next two years.

 But HISD officials say they still expect taxes to be raised because more cuts must be made or revenue sources increased.
 HISD chief spokeswoman Geri Konigsberg said "there will have to be a tax increase, but we won't pass one until November when we get the tax rolls from the district appraisal."
 Ms. Konigsberg said the district can approve a tax increase of up to 8 percent, but added that the increase probably will be "somewhere between 5 to 7 percent."

 Reagan said district administrators had identified "14 prime areas of cost containment," including:
 — a hiring freeze for non-teaching positions
 — elimination of 100 administrative and clerical positions through attrition — cutting custodial services to three days a week
 — elimination of administrative "off-periods" for teachers.
 — cutting back some positions, such as counselors, to nine months a year.
 — raising the pupil-teacher ratio by one at the secondary level.
 — reducing the number of school days from 180 to 176.
 — eliminating all out-of-district travel.
 — trimming in-district travel mileage by 20 percent.
 Other districts have adopted a "wait-and-see" attitude about the education bill.
 "Some of it is very easily interpreted. But a lot of it we're going to have to have further information on," said Superintendent Elain Ballard of the Paris ISD. "We're not going to talk finance until we get some further interpretation on it."
 Angel Martinez, associate superintendent for business and finance of the El Paso ISD, said the district was "trying to work up some formulas" and had not compiled the exact cost of the new legislation.
 Bruce Wood, superintendent of the Terrell ISD, said the additional state money will enable the district "to do things we haven't been able to do."
 Tyler ISD Superintendent Jack L. Davidson wasn't as enthusiastic about the bill.

the issue during questioning of Stotler. He claimed asking Stotler about the Commission's designation was inadmissible and prejudicial. Defense attorneys countered the Commission's geological data would be just as valid as Stotler's.
 When the jury returned, Montgomery made his ruling and Stotler made his admission about the designation. He also said he based his geological conclusions about the field on information furnished to his employer by Dorchester, not from personal experience.
 During this questioning, Templeton tried to assist Spivey by hoisting to eye level a placard showing the definition of "indigenous." A mildly irritated Spivey returned the visual aid to the floor, remarking, "I'd appreciate it if you'd leave it right there."

 Stotler acknowledged there are faults and shale stringers in the strata being drilled. He also conceded liquids were found in a Dorchester well in the brown dolomite stratum at a point higher than where Harlow had perforated its wells.
 He indicated he believes wells produce either oil or gas but not both to any significant degree.
 Under examination by Templeton, Stotler testified that the oil, gas and water in the underground formations had sought their own levels. He said there is no contact between the oil and gas because the gas-laden dolomite is separated from the oil, which is held in a liquid in a lower granite stratum by an impermeable layer of shale between the two strata.

 The presentation of Dorchester's case is expected to consume the rest of this week.
 In previous actions during pre-trial sessions, Templeton has indicated he wanted accurate and specific evidence introduced so it would be "on the record" for the appellate courts.

Dope vessels will be used as mine hunters

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Three Texas cities have been selected to participate in a new Navy project to convert boats seized from dope smugglers into military vessels used to hunt mines, a Navy spokesman said.

Coast Guard Cmdr. Ross Bell, assigned to the Navy to oversee the conversion project, called the idea "an old program with a new twist."

"During both World Wars, the British and Americans used auxiliary minesweepers that were actually fishing boats. They were used all along the Gulf and Atlantic coasts. Now we're just using confiscated drug boats as well."

Vessels used to run drugs are confiscated when captured by the U.S. Coast Guard and, after lengthy litigation, are usually sold at public auction, said Bell. Litigation often lasts more than two years, he said.

Now, when the vessels have cleared the courts, the Navy will get first crack at those that meet certain specifications.

Seized vessels between 60 and 90 feet long that have good hulls and can be easily converted will be taken by the Navy before they can be put up for sale, Bell said. Of the thousands of boats confiscated each year, only a "few hundred" are suitable for Navy use, he said.

Bell said the proposal for converting dope vessels was taken to Adm. James Watkins, Chief of Naval Operations, in 1982.

"We said, 'We know you don't want to spend a lot of money on new boats, so here's an alternative,' and he said, 'I like that one. Go ahead,'" Bell recalled.

Converting a vessel costs about $100,000 compared to $500,000 for a new minesweeper, he said.

Under the plan, 22 vessels will be refitted between now and 1988. A dozen of these will be confiscated boats and the rest will be Naval Academy training vessels.

In Texas, the born-again minesweepers will be docked by next April in Corpus Christi, Port Arthur and Galveston, said Bell. A prototype of the converted boats is already in use at Port Aransas, he said.

The boats stationed in Texas will be converted by Texas contractors, Bell said.

Bell said the boats will be used to hunt for modern mines which rest on the ocean floor instead of floating near the surface.

Georgia, North Carolina, Maryland, Delaware, New York and Massachusetts also have cities that will serve as ports for the converted boats.

Prosecutors seek testimony second time

HOUSTON (AP) — Harris County prosecutors will make a presentation to a second grand jury to try to force a Jewish couple to testify against their teen-age son, who is accused of murdering a mail carrier, an official said.

Assistant District Attorney Brad Beers said Monday his office will issue another grand jury subpoena to Bernard and Odette Port, the father and stepmother of David Port, 17.

Port, 17, is free on $20,000 bond in the June 7 slaying of Debra Sue Schatz, 23. Schatz disappeared while delivering mail in the Port's neighborhood. Her body was found two days later in nearby woods.

The couple claimed their religious beliefs prevented them from testifying before an earlier grand jury. Randy Schaffer, their attorney, said Monday the Ports would continue to refuse to testify.

Prosecutors and defense attorneys said the Ports continued refusal to cooperate in the investigation would send the issue once more to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

"(The Port) testimony is important or we wouldn't be exhausting our efforts," Beers said. "We feel it is important because it goes to the truth of the matter."

State District Judge William Hatten ruled the Ports were in contempt of court and ordered them jailed and fined $500 each on June 27. They were released on $1,000 bond each after being held for about six hours and the case was appealed.

The appeals court said Hatten had no authority to find the couple in contempt.

"No judge has general authority to order anyone to answer questions merely because they are asked in a courtroom," the appellate court said. "If contempt be found, it is of the grand jury, not of the district court or district judge."

The appeals court did not address the parent-child privilege

PUC examiner okays AT&T rate plan

AUSTIN (AP) — Despite opposition from opponents worried about the effects of a AT&T long-distance plan, a state examiner has given her temporary approval to the proposal.

Opponents who challenged the AT&T "Reach Out Texas" plan said the company wanted to offer below-cost service that could force higher rates for other AT&T services.

Public Utility Commission Examiner Deborah Miller said in her Monday order that company stockholders should pay if the plan turns out to be a money loser.

"If AT&T does lose money as a result of implementing Reach Out Texas, the examiner is in agreement with all of the intervenors and the commission staff that such losses should be borne by AT&T's shareholders and not its ratepayers," she said.

Under the "Reach Out Texas" plan AT&T customers can pay a $14 monthly fee for one hour of in-state long-distance calls at night and on weekends each month rather than for each call. Customers also would receive an additional 13 percent cut in calls made during evening hours.

Ms. Miller's temporary approval gave the company immediate permission to offer the new plan. However, a full hearing will be held later this month.

Tom Jones, AT&T vice president for external affairs in Texas, said the optional plan would benefit many telephone customers.

"We are pleased, on behalf of our customers, that they may immediately begin taking advantage of reduced long distance rates," he said.

AT&T expects to make an additional $6 million during the first year of the plan. Company witness William O'Neal testified last week that a test of a similar plan in other states showed it sparked more business for AT&T.

Though pleased with Ms. Miller's decision, Jones said Monday, "We continue to be frustrated by the fact that we are the only long distance company in Texas that has to go through this process. It costs time and money that ultimately has to be paid by our customers."

AT&T is the only long distance company regulated by the PUC.

Phil Ricketts is elected PUC chairman

AUSTIN (AP) — Phil Ricketts, a former aide to Gov. Mark White and the new chairman of the Public Utility Commission on Monday, says the PUC will follow White's wishes and take a hard look at all rate applications.

Ricketts said Texas consumers would not have to pay a penny more than necessary on any application.

The former assistant general counsel to the governor was elected unanimously Monday as chairman of the three-member agency that sets water, electric and telephone rates.

The PUC met in emergency session to elect a chairman to replace Al Erwin, who resigned last month, for a term extending to September 1985. Another former White aide, Dennis Thomas, was named by the governor on Friday to replace Erwin on the PUC.

The third member of the commission is Peggy Rosson, who is viewed as a consumer advocate.

and it was Ms. Rosson who moved that Ricketts be elected chairman. The meeting was over in three minutes.

Ricketts, who was appointed to the PUC by White on March 31, 1983, said White had told him he "wanted us to continue very strict scrutiny of utility rate applications ... so that is our intent, and I think we're going to do that over the next year."

Asked if there was any possibility that the PUC might lower rates, Ricketts said "there's always that possibility," but he added "at this point, I can't make any prediction."

Ricketts was asked about his reputation for being more pro-utility than Ms. Rosson, and he suggested that reporters look at the votes in rate cases. He said the vote in a half-dozen or more major electric cases had been unanimous, and it would be a "little unfair" to single out any single case to type him as pro-utility.

Old cemetery move raising questions

BUTLER, Texas (AP) — They're digging up graves in a small cemetery here as a small part of a long-range plan to provide power to residents of San Antonio.

Eighty-year-old Glenna Dungan, who watched her grandmother's burial beneath the tall oaks 70 years ago, has signed her approval for the move of several ancestors' remains, but she has some questions.

"I'm not for any graves being disturbed," she said Monday as she sat on a folding chair and watched the digging. "According to the Bible, when Christ comes people are supposed to be rising from the dead. What's going to be with these people?"

The graves must go because the United Methodist Church, owner of the small tract about 30 miles east of Austin, is selling the land to San Antonio, which is interested in lignite to produce power. The remains from the eight marked graves will be moved to a more attractive cemetery in nearby McCade.

"I guess you can't stop progress. That's what they informed us," said Mrs. Dungan, now living in Waco.

"We'll have to accept it. But I'm not for disturbing any graves. That's not my idea of doing things," she said.

The old Morgan's Chapel church closed before World War II, according to attorney Jim Odiorne of Bastrop, who is representing the Southwest Conference of the United Methodist Church. The cemetery has been choked with weeds for many years, he said.

"At this time the plans are just to sell it," he said.

The buyer is City Public Service, San Antonio's city-owned gas and electricity provider.

"What we are doing is acquiring additional lignite properties in that area," said Bob McCullough, CPS manager of public relations.

Exactly where the cemetery land fits in CPS' plans is unknown, said McCullough. CPS is paying a funeral home to move the remains.

"From the very first we tried to do the right things," said McCullough. "We got all the necessary permits from the county and state. We contacted the family members. We worked with the church."

Odiorne said relatives of six of the people buried at the eight marked graves have been notified, and did not object to the move. Descendants of the people buried here until the end of the world. Now they are going to get scooped up."

Mrs. Dungan chose not to join the demonstrators. She sat patiently on her folding chair and watched the digging. In addition to attending her grandmother's funeral here in 1914, Mrs. Dungan watched her grandfather's burial 10 years later.

An older sister who died at birth in 1897 is buried nearby. Mrs. Dungan signed her consent to the move, but said she did so only because family members told her it was best.

"My grandfather was a big, strong Methodist," she said. "I never thought the church would do this if they believe in the hereafter, which they are supposed to."

Chuck Stuard, Ann's husband and a storekeeper, said, "These people were supposed to be buried

Sitter suspected in murder

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Police have asked the district attorney's office to charge an 11-year-old baby sitter with murder or delinquent conduct in the beating death of a 3-month-old baby.

"At first, we didn't consider the 11-year-old because of the severity of the injuries," Detective Danny Larue told the Dallas Morning News. "You wouldn't have thought a small girl could have caused those injuries."

Jason Biglow died at John Peter Smith Hospital on July 21 shortly after being admitted to injuries to his head and body. His twin sister, Jennifer, also was admitted for multiple injuries and remains hospitalized in serious condition, hospital officials said.

Assistant District Attorney Dave Purcell said the 11-year-old is "the youngest by far" of any child handled in Tarrant County with a possible murder charge.

When a juvenile is accused of a crime, delinquent conduct charges can be filed, Purcell said.

The Ports, who contend the protection that allows spouses not to testify against each other should extend to parents and their children.

The Ports claim their Jewish beliefs bar them from testifying against their son.

Beers said a presentation to the grand jury will be made next week, or as soon as an agreement on a date can be reached with Schaffer.

Schaffer said he would be out of town until the week of Aug. 20.

Opinion

Reagan should rethink position

Not so long ago Tip O'Neill thought Ronald Reagan might just be lying in wait to veto the Simpson-Mazzoli bill and thereby win favor with Hispanics. The Democrats didn't want to get themselves into that fix.

How things change. Apparently on the advice of White House "pragmatists," Reagan came out in favor of this measure, even as Democrats were starting to feel the heat against it. Now Walter Mondale says he'll try to make sure the bill doesn't become law.

Reagan had an opportunity to show Hispanics, immigrants and would-be immigrants the he isn't an orge. He could end up with precisely that image if he continues to say there is a need for this type of legislation. And Mondale will be the hero, where Simpson-Mazzoli eventually passes or not.

It does take a measure of political courage for Mondale to oppose the measure because, while many minority people are against it, powerful and well-funded factions within the Democratic Party, such as a few environmental fanatics and most of the labor movement, are feverently for Simpson-Mazzoli.

The president might be well-advised to rethink his position. The legislation could well be dead for this session after all, but the "close-the-borders" people will remain determined to make it into law, later if not right now.

Reagan should take note of the fact that the more closely people look at Simpson-Mazzoli (in any version) and its probable implications, the more it loses support. If it should reach his desk, a presidential veto would reflect the growing consensus against this coercive approach and keep the debate on immigration open.

Libertarians have opposed immigration restrictions for decades. If a cleansing show of libertarianism is too formidable a thought for Reagan, he might note that numerous leading conservative voices—The Wall Street Journal, columnist Patrick Buchanan and the Heritage Foundation—have all forthrightly opposed Simpson-Mazzoli.

By rethinking Simpson-Mazzoli, Reagan could show real command during his re-election campaign. Or he can get outfoxed here, even as Mondale is turning up the heat on higher taxes—another issue where Reagan could be convincingly saying "no" if he hadn't become a born-again taxer.

Who is telling the truth?

Already, this presidential season, you know the debate over taxes will be hot. Here is House Majority Leader Jim Wright accusing President Reagan of "a cynical effort to delude people" about tax increases. Which is a little bit like Penthouse Magazine's Bob Guccione's rebuking St. Augustine for his youthful indiscretions.

Wright's point - it bids fair to become a major component of Democratic campaign rhetoric - is that Reagan intends to raise taxes next year, only won't admit it, whereas Walter Mondale owns up gladly to his designs on our pocket books.

Reagan has to some extent asked for the trouble being dished out to him. In his press conference last week, the president did say he could rule out a tax increase next year, inasmuch as "it would be counterproductive to the present recovery, or expansion." Why yes -- just the same way that putting on armor is counterproductive to swimming.

Yet Reagan went to say that if -- which he didn't for a moment believe - we can't provide basic government services without more taxes, well, that's another matter. This permitted the old tax-hiker himself, Sen. Bob Dole, Republican chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, to suggest that Reagan had left the door open to a tax increase. Dole's interpretation sits disquietingly atop the sad memory of two tax increases (not counting Social Security) that Congress pressured Reagan into going along with.

In other words, why doesn't Reagan, whose supply - side tax cuts were instrumental in producing and sustaining the economic boom, just say: "Forget it, Bob, Fritz, and Jim; no way; no tax increase 'til hell freezes over"?

But the main point here isn't the fuzziness of Reagan's rhetoric? The point is: Who's the great deluder? Reagan, when he denies plans for a tax increase? Or Mondale Democrats who castigate tax - breaks - for - the - rich - breaks that must be repealed if we are to eradicate the federal deficit?

Concerning those tax breaks: Yes, the rich did receive them. So did everybody else. That's what happens when you cut taxes across the board, as in 1981. The statistic to remember is that 70 percent of the tax cuts went to households in the $10,000 - $50,000 category. That's rich?

Well, then, whose taxes does Mondale propose to raise? Rich people's? Naturally. The trouble here is that, according to the Grace Commission, by taxing 100 percent of income above $75,000, the government would raise enough money to function for 14 days and 21 hours. Yet Mondale promises to cut the deficit by two - thirds, meaning $100 billion - 130 billion. Plainly this means taxing the middle class, most likely through repeal of indexation, so that taxes again will rise with inflation.

The Democrats say they would put the touch only on taxpayers in the $60,000 - plus bracket; but this wouldn't be a drop in the deficit - closing bucket. The rich already pay the maximum rate of 50 percent; indexing doesn't affect them. It does affect, profoundly so, the non - rich.

University of Kentucky economists Michael R. Baye and Dan A. Black calculate that, at 5 - percent inflation, a family with $20,000 in taxable income would pay 17.7 percent more to the government over five - years' time. A family with $5,000 in taxable income would suffer a 49.9 - percent tax increase.

Yes, who's deceiving whom? Don't tell me. Let me guess.

"No tax increase from Reagan? That's the biggest fish story I ever heard."

Today in History

Today is Tuesday, Aug. 7, the 220th day of 1984. There are 146 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On Aug. 7, 1789, the U.S. War Department was established.

On this date:
In 1782, George Washington established the Order of the Purple Heart.

In 1912, the Progressive Party nominated Theodore Roosevelt for president.

In 1927, the Peace Bridge between the United States and Canada was dedicated during ceremonies attended by the Prince of Wales and Vice President Charles Dawes.

In 1934, the U.S. Court of Appeals upheld a lower court ruling striking down the government's attempt to ban the James Joyce novel, "Ulysses."

In 1942, U.S. forces landed at Guadalcanal in the Pacific during World War II.

In 1964, Congress passed the Gulf of Tonkin resolution, giving President Johnson broad powers in dealing with North Vietnamese attacks on U.S. forces.

Ten years ago: Three Republican leaders met with President Richard M. Nixon and came away with the impression that he might resign.

Mass immigration problem

Opposing immigration is one thing; opposing unlimited immigration is something else.

All of us are descendants of immigrants. To slam the door on others is to be selfish, ungrateful, un - American.

But to leave open the door for all others is national suicide.

The closest any politician has come to acknowledging the extent and portent of the invasion was when President Reagan sought to justify his intervention in Latin America by saying that if we don't make them happy there they will come here.

They are here already, in numbers our Government officials admit they cannot count. Guesstimates of the number of illegals now in the U.S. range from three million to twelve million.

Nobody knows.

And many are demanding and getting free lunch, free school, free food stamps, free health care and subsidized housing.

And they don't even have to learn our language to influence our government. San Francisco is printing ballots in three languages.

Where the Great Migration of the last century brought to our land a strong root stock of ability, energy, artistry.

Today the most degenerate, ignorant criminal from the Caribbean may bring us mostly disease, drugs and perpetual dependency.

While -- to our further loss - qualified, capable, energetic people from other nations seeking legally to come to the U.S. wait in interminable lines - or are told there is no room.

How do we close the flood - gates while preserving the tradition of Ellis Island?

The voting numbers are already sufficient to intimidate lawmakers. Congress' only proposed response to illegal immigrants is to legalize them.

Much of the wretchedness of the rest of the world results from the mistake we are making now, encouraging unlimited population growth.

There are Americans willing to accept continuation of this influx of illegals imagining that each, ultimately, is somebody to sell food to, to sell things to, to be served by...

Those were the objectives unenlightened Americans of another generation used to justify importing slaves.

To our eternal shame.

Mario Cuomo's view flawed

Perceptions of America vary according to an individual's background and life experience. It is understandable that not all Americans see the country's condition in the same light. The U.S. is a plural nation with a variety of strands in its fabric.

Gov. Mario Cuomo's vision of America is strangely flawed, however. In his keynote address at the Democratic national convention, the Governor of New York State said that America has been divided into two cities, two separate nations, "into the lucky and the left out; into the royalty and the rabble." He depicted the U.S. as a nation with the lucky, the rich and the few at the apex of our society, and a vast mass of hungry, despairing, dispossessed people at the base - a nation of homeless people sleeping on iron grates in city streets. That's really a weird, absurd view that has no basis in reality. The vast majority of Americans are employed, self - reliant and full of hope for the future.

To be sure, there are homeless people in our cities. An affluent society should help them, and every - city - and the nation as a whole - has an extraordinary array of assistance programs. Indeed now specialized programs may be required to deal with some of these people. Unfortunately, many of the homeless are alcoholics or persons prematurely released from mental institutions. Their plight has nothing to do with government economic policies. They aren't evidence of a cold hearted economic system. New York State, for example, of which Mr. Cuomo is chief executive, is partly responsible for the homeless population in New York City, and most probably needs to revise its policies on the release of mental patients.

No one argues that the system we have in this country is perfect in every respect. However, the American system is demonstrably superior to any other on earth. Why else do millions of people seek to enter the USA? They wouldn't want to become Americans if the USA were as Gov. Cuomo described it in San Francisco.

The American system can be improved, and must be. In the last few years the federal government has endeavored to reform public assistance laws so that benefits go to the truly needy. Gov. Cuomo apparently would have the federal government return to the giveaway programs that were so abused in the sixties and seventies.

The Governor fails to see the economic progress that millions of Americans have made through individual and corporate enterprise, not through federal programs. He ignores the widespread state of well - being in the U.S., despite the rough bumps of the recent recession. He lacks a sense of perspective on the achievements of the post - World War II era, with the huge expansion of the middle class. He fails to acknowledge the efforts that thousands of businesses are making to move into a new era of technology. He looks at America in 1984 and sees America as it was in 1932. Obviously, something is wrong with his vision.

If 1932 returns, Gov. Cuomo is ready. Unfortunately for the Governor, these are different times. The contemporary era requires something other than anger, despair and nostalgia for the New Deal.

THE YOUNGEST EVER—Little Hollie Roffey, the youngest person ever to receive a heart transplant, lies in her incubator at the National Heart Hospital in London at the age of 11 days on July 31. ## Chances fading for new soil conservation program

WASHINGTON (AP) — With Congress nearing a late summer recess, key Republicans on the Senate Agriculture Committee say chances are dwindling for a compromise with the House on legislation for a new, dramatic soil conservation program.

In fact, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., says the so-called "sodbuster" legislation likely will be put on hold until next year, when lawmakers begin to develop a comprehensive new farm bill.

"Frankly, I've just about decided ... that the best thing to do is consider the legislation fully as we write the farm bill and make it part of that," says Helms, who is chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee. "We are already working on the farm bill for 1985 and I'll be glad to give it a top priority in that."

At issue are differences in House and Senate versions of the sodbuster bills, which would deny federal crop price supports, operating loans and disaster assistance to farmers who plow land the government considers highly erodible.

In particular, Senate Republicans like Helms and Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., object to a provision in the House-passed legislation to establish a three-year, $225 million "conservation reserve" that would pay farmers to take their most erosion-prone land out of production for seven to 15 years.

Story behind Hollie's heart transplant

By LARRY THORSON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Hollie Roffey was born at 1:19 p.m. on July 20 — 6 pounds and 8 ounces, dark-haired, and a joy for her young parents. But there was a problem with Hollie's tiny heart, and it quickly worsened.

When she was 10 days old, Hollie made medical history as the youngest person ever to receive a heart transplant. It was a breakthrough that wouldn't have been possible without a gifted surgeon, computerized organ matching, and a network of volunteers who rush surgeons and organs into place for transplant operations.

Here is the story of how scores of people worked to give Hollie Roffey a chance to live:

Hollie's heart problem became evident soon after her birth at William Harvey Hospital in Ashford, a suburb southeast of London where Hollie's parents, Janet Roffey, 24, and Anthony, 26, have their home.

"Her health appeared normal although a heart murmur was noted," said John Hind, administrator at the hospital.

On July 24 Hollie became breathless during feeding. An electrocardiogram was done, the heart murmur was recognized as something worse, and Hollie was transferred to National Heart Hospital in London.

There she was diagnosed as suffering from a congenital defect called hypoplastic left heart syndrome, meaning that the left side of her heart had not developed. Without a new heart she would die within weeks.

Hollie became a patient of Magdi Yacoub — surgeons in Britain go by plain Mr. rather than Dr. — who had performed 120 heart transplants since January 1980. In the next week, Yacoub, a 46-year-old Egyptian-born dynamo, did three heart transplants in five days, including the urgent operation on Hollie.

No baby so small had ever had a heart transplant, though newborns have had corrective heart surgery. "It was experimental," Yacoub said later. "But all advances in surgery are experimental. The first time someone took out an appendix it was an experiment."

Yacoub was looking for a heart the size of a plum. His call went out on July 28 via a computerized network called UK Transplant, which has been matching transplant patients with donor organs for 12 years. On the afternoon of July 29, word came back from a sister organization, Euro-Transplant, that the heart of a 3-day-old was available in the Netherlands. The brain-damaged Dutch infant had weighed 7 pounds, a good match with Hollie's size.

Yacoub went into high gear. UK Transplant's Bristol headquarters received a call at 4:35 p.m. July 29 saying that Yacoub needed a flight to Nijmegen in the Netherlands. Within 57 minutes an executive jet had been arranged through St. John's Air Wing, a cadre of volunteers, and a landing was okayed at a military airfield near Nijmegen. The jet took off from Heathrow airport outside London at 7:20 p.m.

"We have quite a sophisticated transport system," said Peter Brooman, administrator of UK Transplant. "We lay on transport for the transplant teams, moving them from the hospital to the aircraft, and to wherever they are going and back again."

At 1 a.m. on July 30 Yacoub was back, carrying the tiny heart in a protective saline solution. He went immediately to National Heart Hospital to operate on Hollie with a team of 10. At 5:30 a.m. the surgery was complete.

That afternoon, the hospital announced that Hollie had received a new heart and was in stable condition. "The patient seems to be doing quite well," said hospital administrator Tom Cosgrove. "The operation was a success and required a delicate touch."

The next day Hollie was awake in her germ-free incubator and, despite a network of wires connecting her to monitors, she was "waving her arms and legs like a normal baby." A press photographer and a television crew were permitted in that day, giving the world its first glimpses of a historic baby.

A day later Hollie suffered a setback, developing a perforated bowel that required a second operation. Hollie then was said to be "very critical," but she has made slight progress day by day, the hospital said. Last Friday, two days after the second operation, Janet and Anthony Roffey were permitted to touch Hollie, their first baby, for the first time since her heart transplant.

"They were gowned up and wore surgical gloves, but very fine ones, so they could get a real touch when they put their hands on the baby," said Cosgrove.

Amtrak train hits vehicle, two dead

COLUMBIA FALLS, Mont. (AP) — A westbound Amtrak train struck an automobile that had gone through a railroad crossing Monday night, killing both people in the car, authorities said.

No one was hurt in the train, the Empire Builder, which stayed on the tracks, said Corky Derby to a spokeswoman for the Flathead County Sheriff's Office.

The collision occurred at 9:49 p.m. MDT in the Vetville area on the west side of this northwestern Montana town of 3,100 people.

According to three witnesses, the arms were down at the railroad crossing and the warning lights were flashing, but the car went around the arms and collided with the train, Ms. Derby said.

"As far as we know, no one in the train was hurt," she said.

The Empire Builder was en route from Chicago to Seattle.

Last month, 11 people were killed in five separate incidents involving Amtrak trains.

Gulf oil spill inquiry being prepared

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — As crews continued to clear Galveston Island's beaches of tar and oil, officials prepared for a federal inquiry into a spill that poured almost two million gallons of crude into the Gulf of Mexico last week.

Although no definite plans on the federal probe were announced Monday, the investigation was to begin perhaps as early as today with meetings between ship representatives and officials of the National Transportation Safety Board, Coast Guard spokesman Jim Kosch said.

Meanwhile, Coast Guard officials concluded after a four-hour overhead search that the Gulf Coast appeared free of remnants of slick that had reached a length of 85 miles.

"Nothing. We didn't see anything up there," Coast Guard Lt. Larry

Clark said after returning from a flight in a specially outfitted C-130 transport summoned to Texas from its base in North Carolina.

About 1.89 million gallons of oil were spilled after the British tanker Alvenus split a week ago off Louisiana. Malcolm Gillis, the Alvenus' pilot said his vessel hit nothing and he did not know why it ruptured. The Coast Guard said divers and sonar-equipped vessels also have been unable to find anything the tanker could have hit.

Clark said the flight from the ship to Corpus Christi Monday indicated some oil still lay around the ship.

"But that's to be expected with the pumping operations there," Clark said.

A Coast Guard ground survey crew reported 1 1/2 to 2 inches of oil on the beach along Galveston's seawall and some oil still in the surf.

Most of the oil already is ashore, evaporated or has dissipated in the Gulf, officials said.

But along the 55-mile stretch of beaches blackened by the spill, workers cleaned up for a third day Monday with bulldozers, road graders and dump trucks trying to remove the thick, gooey sludge from beaches. Most of the work was concentrated west of Galveston, where the oil made a 30-yard-wide section of beach look like a newly paved black road as far as one could see in either direction.

"It's slow going," said Joe Cochran, superintendent of the Galveston Island State Park. "It's really hard to say if any more oil has come ashore. There's so much."

Cost of the spill cleanup has been estimated in the millions of dollars. The ship's owner, Alvenus Shipping of London, has agreed to pick up the bill, the Coast Guard has said.

John Dellanera, Galveston Beach Park Board director, said city officials and representatives of Alvenus Shipping, however, have not agreed yet on how the piles of oil-soaked sand will be removed.

"What we can do with it legally is strictly in limbo, and we're looking into that," he said.

At Jamaica Beach, west of Galveston and near the park, seven graders were pushing oil two feet thick beyond the tide line, Coast Guard spokesman Joe Gibson said. In addition, three new patches of oil — about 150 yards long and one-quarter to a half-inch thick — came ashore Monday afternoon at Pirate's Beach, just east of the park, he said.

Dellanera said that many beachfront homeowners hoped to keep the oily sand to build up dunes. But in some areas where the sludge was especially thick, "I don't know what we're going to do with it," he said.

State officials have indicated the oily sand could be used in road construction.

"From what we've seen so far, the worst is over," according to Debbie Payton, an oceanographer with the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration.

Meanwhile, pumping the remaining oil out of the tanker "could take quite a lot longer," Kosch said. Originally, it was estimated the ship could be pumped out in about four days. But bad weather in the area about 11 miles off Cameron, La., has slowed operations and the oil has cooled, making it extremely thick, he said.

"The stuff is so thick we've got to heat it," Kosch said. "I think we're talking 12-13 days, and these are 24-hour days."

Crews will be "pumping out all the cargo, removing the vapors and cleaning out the tanks so it's ready to go to drydock," Kosch said. Then the ship will be taken for investigation to Galveston, New Orleans or Mobile, Ala.

Gibson said bad weather Monday halted pumping operations at midday. Some 30,000 barrels of Venezuelan crude had been transferred to barges.

Radar seeks spill remnants

Space-age radar plane is searching for the oil slick

HOUSTON (AP) — Its history can be traced back to the Titanic, whose sinking started a Coast Guard tradition of scanning the seas for icebergs.

But the space-age technology now jammed into the dark, hot cargo bay of the Coast Guard C-130 aircraft is used for such diverse missions as tracing toxic spills to tracking the movements of smugglers.

The squat four-engine plane arrived in Texas on Monday to look for the remains of 1.8 million gallons of oil that spilled in the Gulf of Mexico from the British tanker Alvenus a week ago.

A good deal of the gooey sludge washed ashore along 55 miles of Texas beaches over the weekend and authorities are trying to find out if the rest of the mess has evaporated or dissipated in the Gulf.

"This could be a wild goose chase. But if we don't find anything, it's good for the beaches," Coast Guard Lt. Larry Clark said Monday as the plane headed out of Houston's Ellington

Field on an inspection mission over the Gulf. "Every indication is that most of it has gone ashore."

The 96-foot-long, 133-foot-wide and 38-foot-tall plane, based in Elizabeth City, N.C., officially is known as a SLAR aircraft — an acronym for Side Looking Airborne Radar.

Flying at 8,000 feet, two 16-foot-long radar boxes mounted on the fuselage on each side of the aircraft are capable of "reading"

Soviet reporters can cover convention

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department says it won't bar Soviet diplomats and journalists from observing the Republican convention in Dallas this month even though the Texas city is usually off limits to Soviet citizens.

"The State Department has no intention of denying Soviet journalists and diplomats access to the Republican convention in Dallas," said Alan Romberg, 27 miles of the earth's surface, said Bill Leonard, the plane's navigator.

In the dark cargo area, a radar technician peers into a video display unit that detects changes in the surface of the water.

"It's looking for difference in the reflective properties and to some extent the density and texture," Clark said.

The differences detected in the water's surface will determine the presence of oil not detectable by the human eye.

The radar console sets in the middle of the plane's cargo area. Two small rectangular windows and two portholes let in a minimum of light. To get to the flight deck, a person must climb a four-foot ladder where the crew is surrounded by the usual display of scores of clocks, lights and dials.

Unlike the interior of the craft, the flight crew is in a greenhouse-like enclosure, giving them a panoramic view of the outside world.

Entertaining Olympics style - a marathon

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sports Illustrated is doing it at sea, Coca-Cola on a movie soundtrack. ABC got the Beach Boys to play and Southland Corp. signed up Bob Hope.

Dozens of companies and individuals are competing in the Olympic party event, with points awarded for good food, imaginative settings and celebrity guests and entertainers.

The fast track to a gold medal is an Olympian or two on the guest list.

"The athletes are the guests of honor," said Los Angeles Times society editor Jody Jacobs. "Whenever there's a medalist there, people get very emotional."

The scale of Olympic party-giving is so huge it's no wonder some restaurants are reporting declines in business. Many of the estimated 600,000 visitors to the Games are guests of Olympics sponsors who have gone to great lengths to entertain.

Perhaps the largest entertainer is ABC, host not only to the sponsors who helped defray the $225 million cost of Games television rights but to network executives, affiliates and hundreds of employees.

The employees will get a huge bash on the last day of the Olympics. The others have been wined and dined in shifts at a series of parties repeated all over town.

There's a New York street party at 20th Century-Fox, Tex-Mex and formal dinners at the Riviera Country Club, and a "Gone With the Wind" celebration at Laird International — formerly David O. Selznick's studio.

The Beach Boys entertained at a packed Beverly Hilton affair where guests kicked up their heels "as if they were teen-agers, but they're not teen-agers. We just danced our feet off," said ABC publicist Carol Fleischer.

The Southland Corp., whose 7-Eleven chain is the "official convenience store" of the Games, rented "The Love Boat" liner for its guests and hired Bob Hope to perform four nights.

Sports Illustrated is treating five groups of 500 people each to a few nights on the Cunard liner Saga Fjord. On one night during each shift, the boat sails into the harbor for a dinner-dance with music by Peter Duchin and his orchestra.

Coca-Cola USA has taken over the Sheraton Grande hotel for an estimated 2,500 guests.

O'Neill, Baker agree on something

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill and Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker don't agree often, but they're united in discouraging talk of a post-election "lame duck" session this year.

The continued failure of Congress to agree on a 1985 budget and on a defense bill has prompted some key lawmakers to suggest that such matters may only be capable of resolution once the year's political smoke has cleared.

Lame duck sessions are usually avoided at all costs, and until this decade they were the exception rather than the rule.

But in the last two election years — 1980 and 1982 — Congress has returned to town to such sessions. Usually little has been accomplished in post-election gatherings, although in 1982 Congress did approve President Reagan's plan for a nickel-a-gallon gasoline tax increase to help finance road and bridge repairs.

Congress is now scheduled to leave at the end of this week for a recess for both the Republican National Convention and Labor Day. It returns in September for five weeks of work, quitting for the year in early October.

Both O'Neill, D-Mass., and

Baker, R-Tenn., have said repeatedly they have no plans for calling Congress back to town, regardless of the outcome of the presidential election.

Baker seems to be particularly anxious to leave. He isn't running for re-election and his departure from the Senate is widely viewed as the first step in what is expected to be a bid for the 1988 Republican presidential nomination.

Some prominent members, however, have suggested that

Inmate admits killing 16 women

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A jail inmate has admitted killing "16 and possibly more" young women in the so-called Green River murders in Washington state last year, and police said they are investigating the claims, a newspaper reported.

Robert Matthias, 25, told the San Francisco Chronicle that he killed at least 16 women. In a separate interview, jail inmate Richard Carbone, 32, said he committed two murders with Matthias, and helped him kill nine others.

San Francisco police said they would question the men about the killings Tuesday.

legislation currently snagged in partisan politics might be easier to get through in a post-election session.

Sen. Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., said it might provide an opportunity to revive the stalled major immigration bill that he and Rep. Romano Mazzoli, D-Ky., are sponsoring.

"It's a very valid option, handling it in a lame duck session," Simpson said recently.

And Sen. Ted Stevens of Alaska, the assistant GOP leader, contends that it might take a lame duck session to break the long House-Senate deadlock over defense spending.

It would also give the five Republican contenders to succeed Baker as majority leader — including Stevens — more time to campaign for the post.

The Senate leadership job is also being sought in differing degrees of intensity by Robert Dole of Kansas, James McClure of Idaho, Pete Domenici of New Mexico and Richard Lugar of Indiana.

No clear front runner has emerged.

As Stevens was holding forth on the possibility of a lame duck session at a recent news conference, Baker came within earshot and grimaced.

"Write me about it," Baker said.

How to pick wallpaper

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

You've decided to put up wallpaper, but with so many sample books on the market and wall coverings steadily growing in popularity, the choices can be rather dizzying.

Country, floral, big scale, little scale, vinyl or grasscloth: How do you choose?

Lyn Peterson, president of Motif Designs, a wall covering producer, advises using common sense and following some basic guidelines.

First, she says, research your room. Consider the room's function and the amount of time the family will spend in it. Is it a primary room like a master bedroom or kitchen? Or is it a secondary space, like a guest bathroom that is not used so frequently?

For primary rooms, she recommends colors and patterns that are easy to look at and live with. Save the bold adventurous styles for secondary rooms and passageways.

Next consider color. The entry of the sun into the room is an important consideration when selecting colors. Bold, bright colors tend to become harsh in bright sunlight. Strong contrasts are more effective in dim light.

"Don't decorate a space you haven't lived in — or at least visited at 9 a.m., 12 noon and 3 p.m. on sunny and cloudy days," says Ms. Peterson.

Personal tastes also should influence color selection. Take a look in your closet. If there is no green in the wardrobe, chances are good that you won't be happy with it on your walls.

One more tip: Warm colors tend to bring a wall in and make a room feel warm and cozy. Cool colors give a sense of expansion.

Measuring carefully is the next step. To know how much wallpaper to buy, you have to measure accurately. A good rule of thumb, says Ms. Peterson, is to measure the distance around the room. Treat doors and windows as if they didn't exist and include them in the measurements. Next, measure the height of the room. Then, multiply the distance by the height. Divide the number by 27 to get the number of rolls necessary to do the job, she said.

She advises do-it-yourselfers to order extra wall coverings, allowing for any mistakes or future repairs. Most retailers will give an 80 percent refund on unused rolls, she says. That is a lot less trouble than trying to match dye lots at a later date. However, check the store's policy before you order.

Selecting the right type of wall coverings can provide camouflage for cracked and peeling walls. A vinyl wallpaper in a small-scale overall pattern will draw attention away from the wall's imperfections and it will hold up better in a damp area than paper.

Kitchens, bathrooms and children's rooms also benefit from the use of vinyl products, because they are washable.

Solid vinyl coverings on fabric backing are generally considered the strongest type of wall covering and are often used in commercial areas. Paper-backed vinyl is the next strongest. Vinyl-coated papers are less durable but work well in baths and kitchen areas not subject to heavy-duty use.

Avoid paper in the kitchen, she recommends, because it will absorb grease and show spots.

An appropriate option in living rooms, dining rooms and dens is a textured covering such as grasscloth, linen, cotton or silk. These coverings — laminated to paper — enrich the atmosphere in more formal rooms.

It's tricky to know which type of pattern will work best on your wall. Ms. Peterson says that "generally, large goes with big spaces and small patterns go with small spaces. But there are always exceptions." For example, you might want a big effect in a tiny vestibule. In that case, achieve it with an intense splash of color or a giant pattern.

Here's another decorating tip: overall patterns with lots of coverage — whether light or dark — show less wear. Large open or empty patterns show scratches. For this reason, overall patterns are a good choice for rooms and passages that are heavily trafficked.

Besides studying wallpaper sample books, you can order a three-foot sample-square — it costs about $1.50. Ms. Peterson recommends tacking the square up on the wall at home. Live with it for a few days and see if it goes with the furniture, fabrics and other colors in the room.

Once you've chosen, and are ready to install the paper, she suggests you call a friend. "It's more fun that way."

Start working in an inconspicuous corner or area so that by the time you get to the most visible spot you will be an expert.

After putting up one or two rolls, take a good look. If you don't like it, take it down immediately and select another wallpaper.

Don't try to learn to like it. You won't, says Ms. Peterson.

THE BEDROOM — it can be a heavenly place for other things besides sleeping, changing and storing clothes. An armchair, or even a sofa, may not be enough to lure one out of the noisy family room; however, the "haven" illustrated could induce almost anyone to cherished moments of solitude. The canopied four-poster bed and the Cheval mirror are faithful reproductions of the finest craftsmanship of 18th century design by Thomasville in rich cherry cabinetwoods. 1982 fabrics are nostalgic but done in fiber blends that are practical and adaptable to today's lifestyles. Shelley Weiss is the interior designer.

Q. — Several years ago I applied rubber strips to the bottom of our bathtub. It was intended to keep people from slipping when they bathed. It worked OK, but the rubber is getting a bit worn and, besides, I want to change the color to harmonize with our present decor. But I find it very difficult to get them off. Some of it has come off, some hasn't, and where it has, some of the rubbery adhesive remains stubborn. Is there some way to get this off?

A. — Usually, it comes off fairly easy by using a single-edged razor blade or a blade in a holder. The blade also is good for removing the old adhesive. Should some of it still remain, use a rubber cement thinner, sold in many places but especially in art supply stores. When using this cement, be very careful and work with as much ventilation in the room as possible. Also, check to see whether the thinner is inflammable, which it usually is.

Dear Abby

Man's Filipino wife, children are shocks to his U.S. bride

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am writing about my long and painful experience as the "wife" of a Filipino immigrant. I met this charming man, fell in love with him, and was courted by him for over a year before he married me in a church wedding.

Now I find out that my "husband" is married to a Filipino woman who is the mother of many children by him. She and her entire family knew that he had entered into a marriage with me, but they kept his secret so his wife in the Philippines could continue to get the money he sends her for their children's education. He promised to support her forever in return for her silence.

After learning that I had been used by this man, whom I sincerely loved and believed that he loved me, I discovered that this happens every day to American women! I am not saying that every foreign man is playing this game, but I want to say to all American women: Do not marry a foreigner until he has taken you back to his country to meet his friends and family. Even if he has a green card and a job that pays good money, he could still have a "real" wife back home.

CALL ME USED

DEAR USED: Thank you for telling your sad story. Too bad you and I will never know how many women will be saved from a similar fate because you cared enough to write.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are expecting our first child soon, and we're constantly "teasing" my father about how we expect him to do some baby-sitting.

He says, jokingly, that he has sat all the babies he is going to sit. (He already has several teen-age grandchildren.)

Abby, have you any words of wisdom on the responsibilities of grandparents?

WAITING IN LYNCHBURG, VA.

DEAR WAITING: No. But I have a few words of wisdom for you. Although some grandparents consider it a privilege to baby-sit their grandchildren, all the responsibilities of child care belong to the parents. So quit "teasing" your father about how you expect him to baby-sit and he won't have to tell you "jokingly" not to count on him.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were married recently. We had both been married to former spouses for over 40 years, owned our own homes and had accumulated a lot of household goods. We both sold our large homes, got rid of most of our stuff and moved into a small apartment.

We invited friends and relatives to our wedding to help us celebrate our joy. We requested "no gifts" because we didn't want anything, didn't need anything, and have no room for more "things" in our apartment.

Everyone gave us a gift! Most of the things had to be given away. We received our wedding invitation reproduced in different ways from eight guests. We received three wedding samplers done in needlework, 11 religious enrollments and lots of ornamental bric-a-brac we have no room for. It really spoiled our day.

Abby, please tell people that when "no gifts" is stated, to please respect the wishes of the guests of honor, as they have good reason for that request. Thank you.

OLDER BRIDE

DEAR BRIDE: People who give gifts out of the goodness of their hearts cannot—and should not—be dissuaded. Quietly dispose of whatever you don't want. One woman's trash is another woman's treasure.

...

DEAR ABBY: What would you think if someone whom you knew only slightly had sent you a note of apology and signed it "Your obedient servant"?

This person is employed by my husband, and wrote to apologize for having caused a small problem involving me.

CURIOUS IN BUFFALO

DEAR CURIOUS: I would think that person showed good manners to write a note of apology.

Ice cream vendor: job best in town

By DENISE RICHTER
The Brazosport Facts

CLUTE, Texas (AP) — The street is deserted. Sun glints off the chrome spokes of bicycles overturned in yards. Doors are closed, forming an air-conditioned barrier against the scorching heat.

Suddenly, the strains of "The Entertainer" break the mid-afternoon silence. Doors open, children race across hot sidewalks, clutching money in their hands.

In the words of comedian Eddie Murphy, "The ice-cream man is coming! Ice cream! Ice cream!" It's a summer tradition buying frosty treats from the ice cream truck as it winds its way through neighborhoods.

And it's a tradition in no danger of fading away. The ice cream truck continues to work its magic today, drawing children like a modern-day Pied Piper.

In Clute, the holder of "the best job in town" is Pauline Mitchell, who got her first taste of the ice-cream business 10 years ago.

"My daughter was very young and I wanted a job I thought I could fit in without needing a baby sitter," she said. "I enjoyed it, but it wasn't what I needed at that time."

So she went into the fast-food business as a restaurant manager in New Jersey.

"My husband and I ... were struggling like most young people do," she said. "We were both managing fast-food restaurants and making $13,000 each. We were barely making it."

Then she talked to her brother in Houston, who worked for Southern Ice Cream.

"He told us it was dynamite in Texas for ice cream," she said. "When we came down, we couldn't believe how much more lucrative this was."

"We had planned to stay for a year and make enough money to go back to New Jersey and open a restaurant. But we love it here. I've decided I'm going to be 80 years old and still selling ice cream."

Two pig-tailed little girls stare patiently by their mailbox, waiting for the ice-cream truck to arrive.

As the bright blue truck stops, one of the girls pulls a pink plastic Strawberry Shortcake purse from her pocket. Coins clatter on the truck's aluminum counter as she dumps the contents of her wallet.

"Two fudge bars, please," the little girl says as she tiptoes to peer over the counter.

Mrs. Mitchell deftly counts the coins, puts the left-over change back in the purse and, with a smile, hands it and the ice cream to the little girl.

That smile and good humor are necessities, Mrs. Mitchell said.

"If I don't feel good, there's no point in selling to these kids because they can pick up on it fast," she said. "You get a little short when you don't feel good and that's not right. The person in the ice cream truck is supposed to always have a good temper."

The children help make that possible, she said.

"The kids here are different from the ones up north," Mrs. Mitchell said. "They have beautiful manners they always say 'Yes, ma'am' and 'No, ma'am.' It's just a joy."

"And from a business point of view, they spend a lot more money. If I wasn't in the business, I'd say they spend too much money. They'll come up with a $5 bill and spend it all on gum."

Although ice cream is a summer staple, summer is the least busy time of their year, Mrs. Mitchell said.

"Spring and fall are our busy times," she said. "The kids are back in school and as soon as they come home, they do their homework, then they come out for a couple of hours to play."

"Now they're inside the air-conditioned house or at the pool or at summer camp."

Not only does the heat keep potential customers indoors, but it also makes the temperature in the metal trucks skyrocket.

"That's another reason we don't sell as much ice cream in the summer," she said. "You tend to drive faster, trying to get a breeze. I know that 5 mph is the speed to sell ice cream and 15 mph is the speed to get a breeze. But some days it sure is tempting."

A little Hispanic boy runs toward the truck waving a dollar bill.

"May I help you?" Mrs. Mitchell asks.

The boy looks puzzled and points to a picture of a Popsicle painted on the side of the truck.

"Cuantas?" she asks. "Una?"

He nods. She hands him the treat and with a delighted grin, he takes it and runs toward home.

"I'll bet you never have heard such bad Spanish with an English accent, have you?" she asked.

"But it's a case of my Spanish being as bad as their English so we get along fine."

Mrs. Mitchell came to the United States from England 16 years ago, but has retained her lilting British accent. She has picked up a little Spanish "mostly numbers and flavors" but language never has been much of a barrier.

"Ice cream seems to be a universal language," she said. "Some kids are still in diapers, others don't know English, but they all know what the ice-cream truck means."

The blue truck Mrs. Mitchell drives is a 1983 model, the "Cadillac of ice cream trucks," she said.

And the truck is a sure sign that the business has come a long way in four years.

When she and her husband, Charles, came to Texas, they went to work for Southern Ice Cream and each were given a route in Houston.

Because they obviously enjoyed the work, they were asked to start a satellite operation.

"What you basically need to do is find an area without an operator," she said. "This was one of the areas suggested and we came down and liked it."

They started with two trucks. Adding at least one truck each year, they have expanded their operation throughout the county.

"It's taken a lot of hard work," she said. "The first few years, it would be 40 degrees and Charles and Pauline would be out selling ice cream."

Now they own seven trucks. They lease them to drivers, who buy ice cream from them but act as independent operators.

"It hasn't been easy," she said. "But we're happy and that's all that matters."

A middle-age woman walks to the truck and orders six Mini Bombs, a cherry-and-banana ice confection.

"Once a month, I let the kids buy whatever they want because I can afford it," she says. "The rest of the time, I buy the Mini Bombs because they're 25 cents and with eight kids, that's what I can afford."

She gives Mrs. Mitchell a crumpled dollar bill and change and gets six orange-wrapped Mini Bombs in return.

She hands one to the little girl tagging after her, and walks toward the house to distribute the rest of the treats.

"The places where you make the most are in the low-income areas," Mrs. Mitchell said as she watched the woman enter the house. "In the high-income areas, people have freezers and they can afford to buy ice cream at the supermarket."

"In these other areas, this might be all parents can afford to do for their kids. But for 25 cents, they can feel they're doing something good for them and they are."

The Mini Bomb is the biggest seller, Mrs. Mitchell said, and because of its popularity, they have put an informal price freeze on the confection.

"The price goes up for us every year, but we keep it at 25 cents," she said. "We don't want to price anyone out of buying."

The sun's harsh glare has softened into the muted shades of twilight. The mosquitoes are coming out, children are going in.

A lone little boy waits for the ice-cream truck near his apartment building. He buys a Fudgsicle and plops down on the stairs to eat the after-dinner treat. As Mrs. Mitchell drives away, the tinkling music of the ice-cream truck lingers in the dusk.

Crowd boos Lewis

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Carl Lewis said he was sore, but he wasn't half as sore as a lot of folks in the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum who paid premium prices, hoping to see a world record.

When Lewis stepped up to receive his second gold medal of the Summer Olympics Monday night, he was loudly cheered and mildly booed. He responded by gently applauding his triumph, a 28-foot, 1/4-inch leap on his first — and only legal — long jump.

It was far different earlier in the evening, when boos outweighed the cheers in intensity, washing over him as he strode from the field.

His victory was intact. But so was Bob Beamon's record, the incredible 29-2 1/2 set in Mexico City 16 years ago.

Lewis said he had no intention of jumping any more than necessary — a decision with which Beamon wholly agreed — because he was hurting, the result of a long day during which he also qualified for the 200-meter semifinals.

Monday ended with the United States owning 101 medals, 46 of them gold. Romania and West Germany were tied for second in total medals with 33 apiece. Romania the runner-up in gold with 16.

In the women's springboard diving, gold went to Canada's Silvie Bernier, who defeated silver winner Kelly McCormick of Columbus, Ohio, and bronze medalist Christina Seufert of Ann Arbor, Mich.

It also went to West German weightlifter Rolf Miller, to Finnish hammer thrower Juha Tiainen, to Alberto Cova of Italy in the 10,000 meters, to Doina Melinte of Romania in the women's 800 meters and to Byeong-Keun Ahn of South Korea in lightweight judo.

Track and field took today off, with attention turning to Greg Louganis of Mission Viejo, Calif., in the men's springboard diving preliminaries, the U.S. women's gold-medal games in basketball against South Korea and volleyball against China and the U.S. men's non-medal championship baseball game against Japan.

There were those in the Coliseum crowd who paid double or even triple the $45 face value for a track and field ticket, expecting to see records fall. Five did — all Olympic records, none a world mark.

— In the 110-meter hurdles, Roger Kingdom of Pittsburgh was clocked in 13.20 seconds to lead a 1-2 U.S. finish, upsetting world record-holder Greg Foster of Los Angeles, who for years had run in the shadow of Renaldo Nehemiah.

— In the women's 400 meters, Valerie Brisco-Hooks of Los Angeles set a mark of 48.43, also leading a 1-2 American finish as Chandra Cheeseborough of Jacksonville, Fla., won the silver. It was the first U.S. women's medal ever in the event.

— In the men's 800, Joaquim Cruz of Brazil was timed in 1 minute, 43 seconds, beating Briton Sebastian Coe and Earl Jones of Inkster, Mich. Steve Ovett, also of England, the event's defending champion, was last in the final and was hospitalized with a form of bronchitis.

— In the semifinals of the women's 400 hurdles, Sweden's Anne Louise Skoglund broke her own mark, set in an earlier heat, with a time of 55.17.

— In the women's javelin, Tessa Sanderson of Great Britain won with a record toss of 228-2.

Beamon watched Lewis on television.

"He was smart. ... Six jumps take a lot out of a man physically," he said after Lewis passed for the last time. "Carl is right in conserving his energy for his final two events. ... It's more important for him to win four gold medals and match Jesse Owens' record than risk an injury going all out for a world record."

Lewis of Willingboro, N.J., who won the 100-meter gold last Saturday and will anchor the 400 relay next Saturday, didn't have to go anywhere near all out to get into Wednesday's 200 semifinals. He loped home in 21.02 seconds in the qualifying heat and eased to a 20.48 in the quarterfinal. Kirk Baptiste of Beaumont, Texas, and Thomas Jefferson of Cleveland also won in the quarters.

The U.S. men's basketball team moved into Wednesday's semifinals against Canada by beating West Germany 78-67; guard Steve Alford scored 17 points and Michael Jordan 14.

The United States also moved closer to gold in water polo, defeating the Netherlands 8-7; Oddibe McDowell's two-run homer and Cory Snyder's two-run double led the United States' 5-2 semifinal baseball victory over South Korea; Spain edged the United States 17-16 in men's team handball; Australia defeated the American men's field hockey team 2-1; and Brazil swept the U.S. men's volleyball team 15-10, 15-11, 15-2.

In boxing, light middleweight Frank Tate of Detroit and welterweight Mark Breland of Brooklyn, N.Y., scored unanimous decisions and heavyweight Henry Tillman of Los Angeles stopped Kalig Singh of India in the first round.

Synchronized swimming made its Olympic debut and tennis, a demonstration sport this year, returned after a 60-year absence.

The U.S. synchronized swimming duo — Tracie Ruiz of Bothell, Wash., and Candie Costie of Seattle — took the lead over Canada and Japan.

Kathy Horvath of Chicago, the top women's tennis seed, swept past Petra Huber of Austria. Jimmy Arias of Buffalo, N.Y., the No. 1 men's seed, plays today. Horvath and Arias are pros but under rules instituted for these Games only are allowed to participate because they are under 21. Tennis will become a medal sport in the 1988 Olympics.

McCormick had hoped to duplicate the gold-medal performance her mother, Patty, achieved in 1952 and again four years later. Instead, Bernier gave Canada its first women's springboard gold ever, amassing 530.70 points to McCormick's 527.46.

The turning point was the eighth of the 10 dives, a reverse 2 1/2 somersault in the tuck position. Bernier scored 60.48 points to McCormick's 51.24. "I kicked too high on the dive and did a Hawaii Five-O," McCormick said. "That's a washout."

Basketball team struggles to victory

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Canadian basketball players, cherishing their 78-72 upset of 1980 silver medalist Italy, now go after bigger Olympic game — the unbeaten United States.

The Canadians think they can pull off another stunner. And they could be right, if the Americans play as they did in a 78-67 triumph over West Germany in another quarterfinal Monday night.

"This was just not a good performance for us. We had a lack of concentration on what we were doing," said U.S. Coach Bobby Knight after watching the Americans struggle through their closest game here.

But before Knight's squad takes to the court again, the U.S. women make their bid for the team's first-ever gold medal. They meet the South Korean team, which they beat by 37 points last week, tonight at the Forum in the title game.

Depth has been the biggest factor for the U.S. women's team in the Olympic tournament. The Americans have ripped five preliminary-round opponents by an average margin of 33 points with their merry-go-round substitutions.

South Korea is 4-1, and Coach Seung-Young Cho suggested his players did not try so hard in their loss to the Americans.

"To be honest with you, we didn't want to use all our strength. We'll do our best in the gold medal game and show how good we are," he said.

But Don McCrae, coach of the Canadian women's team, which will play China for the bronze, predicted the South Koreans would have no chance.

"There are an awful lot of all-stars on the American women's team," McCrae said.

In the tuneup for the men's semifinals Wednesday, West Germany used a 2-3 zone to shut off the Americans' potent inside game. The U.S. fast break was practically nonexistent. And Michael Jordan, the team's principal scorer, put up a 4-for-14 shooting performance for 14 points.

Steve Alford saved the night. The 6-1 guard, who plays for Knight at Indiana, sank seven of 12 outside shots and led the Americans with 17 points.

The United States was hit with 30 fouls and the Germans with 27.

Knight suggested Olympic leaders have game officials attend daily seminars instead of resting in their hotel rooms.

"The officiating was incredibly bad for both teams," he said.

Crowd demands more from Lewis than gold

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Track and field rules say you get six chances in the long jump. They also say you don't have to take them all. And Carl Lewis knows the rules.

So, Lewis decided to play a high-stakes game of Olympic poker with the world's best jumpers and made it pay off with another gold medal.

His reward was a razing. Chasing a four gold-medal dream at the 1984 Games, Lewis took his chances in a dangerous test of nerves and survived when no one could match his first jump Monday night. He had sailed 28 feet, 1/4 inch on that attempt, and after fouling on his second try, decided to let the field try to catch him if it could.

If you want the gold, Lewis was telling the others, there it is. Take it if you can.

It was a dangerous gamble as Lewis decided to pass on three jumps, preferring to jog easily at the side of the track and let the others go sailing into the pit.

"I was sore after the second jump," he said on a tape recording played by the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee for the press. "Regardless of what happened — if someone had jumped farther than I, I wouldn't have come back."

So there was the dream of four golds, dangling delicately in the balance. But, for four rounds, none of the other jumpers came close. Lewis seemed impassive, almost disinterested, as time after time, the others dashed down the track and tried.

Three times, Lewis passed on jumps, and through each round, his lead stood. Finally, the competition came down to two last jumpers — Lewis and teammate Larry Myricks would complete the event.

Again, Lewis chose to pass. It was the ultimate challenge. The medal was Myricks' for the taking. His personal best of 28-1 would have delivered it and the 28-year-old from Chino, Calif., knew it.

"I thought of that," he said. "It crossed my mind on the last jump."

Myricks took a deep breath and charged down the track. He did not foul, but that was about the only thing right with his attempt. It was 20-7 1/4, well short of Lewis.

But there was no gleeful exultation for Lewis this time, no joyous jog around the track, no flag waving. Instead, the fans booed him. Winning, it seems, is not enough for Lewis. He must win dramatically, impressively, with record-challenging efforts, or else, it just won't do.

Many fans thought Lewis would take a shot at Bob Beamon's awesome Olympic and world record of 29-2 1/2 set in the 1968 Games at Mexico City. He has, after all, twice reached 28-10 1/4, well within hailing distance of Beamon's incredible accomplishment. And what better showcase for it than the Olympic Games?

Myricks offered some insight on Lewis and the record book.

"I think if he kept jumping, he wouldn't have surpassed the record anyway," he said. "I really don't blame him for not jumping anymore. He's run a lot of races already. Just from looking at him, he really doesn't look like he does when he's jumping 28-10."

So Lewis settled for a mortal 28-1/4, merely tying the second best long jump in Olympic history.

Davis' pitching keeping Orioles alive

By The Associated Press
The Baltimore Orioles have barely stirred up a mild zephyr since the All-Star break with a 13-12 record, but imagine where they'd be without Storm Davis.
The 22-year-old right-hander has accounted for six of those 13 victories, including Monday night's 4-2 triumph over the Cleveland Indians. He upped his record to 12-4 with a six-hitter, bringing his major-league record to a glittering 33-15.
"If you want to see improvement in a young player, the second half is the proving ground for that," said Manager Joe Altobelli. "He's done remarkably well since the All-Star break."
In other American League games, Detroit shaded Boston 9-7 but dropped the second half of the double-header 10-2, Minnesota defeated Oakland 7-4, California trimmed Seattle 8-4, Chicago downed Milwaukee 5-3 and Texas nipped Toronto 5-4. Kansas City and New York were not scheduled.

Davis blanked the Indians until Jerry Willard hit his seventh home run in the eighth inning. It was only the third homer allowed by Davis in 168 innings this season, the best ratio in the major leagues.
Tigers 9-2, Red Sox 7-10
Wade Boggs drilled two homers, a double and a single, scored four runs and drove in three in support of rookie Roger Clemens' strong eight innings to earn Boston a split in the nightcap. The Tigers snapped a four-game losing streak in the opener as Lance Parrish, Chet Lemon and Tom Brookens homered and reliever Aurelio Lopez upped his record to 8-0.
"This was a good time to win a ballgame," said Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson. "I've used Lope quite a bit, but he was ready. When he got into trouble, I brought in Hernandez (for the fifth time in six days this month). If I'm going to lose the game, I want him in there. I want to lose with my best man."

Twins 7, Athletics 4
Gary Gaetti's three-run homer in the sixth inning wiped out a 2-1 Oakland lead and paced a 16-hit Minnesota attack. Winner Mike Smithson allowed eight hits in 7 2/3 innings as the Twins remained one-half game ahead of California in the AL West.
Gaetti's homer came off Bill Krueger after Tom Brunansky walked and Dave Engle singled to open the sixth. Dave Kingman hit his 29th homer — but his first in 14 games — for Oakland in the bottom of the sixth. Brunansky singled home a run in the Minnesota seventh and Mickey Hatcher delivered a two-run triple in the eighth, his fourth hit of the game.
Angels 8, Mariners 4
Reggie Jackson drove in three runs with a homer and a two-run single and Brian Downing cracked two solo homers. Downing and Jackson hit consecutive home runs in the third inning for a 5-0 lead. Jackson drilled a two-out, bases-loaded single in the sixth and Downing hit his second home run leading off the eighth. Winner Tommy John blanked Seattle until the seventh.

"I spent a very uncomfortable winter," said Jackson, who hit only 194 last season. "I felt I had to do well this season and produce some decent numbers, or say it's over."
Jackson is batting only .241, but has 18 homers — 496 for his career — and 56 RBIs.
White Sox 5, Brewers 3
Greg Walker belted a three-run homer and Harold Baines ripped two doubles and two singles to power the White Sox to their fifth straight victory, while Milwaukee dropped its ninth in a row. Greg Luzinski singled home Chicago's first run in the opening inning to extend his consecutive-game RBI streak to nine, four short of the American League record, and Walker followed with his 14th homer for a 4-0 lead.
Rangers 5, Blue Jays 4
Buddy Bell singled home Mickey Rivers with two out in the bottom of the ninth to cap a late Texas rally. George Bell's two-run homer helped Toronto to a 4-1 lead. But George Wright delivered a two-run single in the Texas sixth and tied the score with an eighth-inning homer. Rivers opened the ninth with a pinch single and was sacrificed to second before Bell's single.

Niekro back at Atlanta but Mahler gets win

By The Associated Press
The Atlanta Braves, who have missed Phil Niekro all season long, finally got him back — just when they didn't need him.
The 45-year-old knuckleballer returned to Atlanta Monday for Phil Niekro Night at Fulton County Stadium. After the ceremonies, Rick Mahler went out and twirled a shutout, beating the Los Angeles Dodgers 2-0.
Mahler, who celebrated his 31st birthday Sunday, not only did his best to upstage the man of the hour, he lowered his ERA to 2.58 to move past Phil's brother Joe into the National League's top five.
"I felt pretty good when we got that second run," said Mahler, 8-6, whose teammates have given him a total of only seven runs in the six games he has lost.
"I am a Braves fan and always will be," said Niekro, whose number 35 was retired in the pregame ceremony.
Monday was a pitcher's night in most of the National League parks. Three shutouts were thrown, with the curious result that the NL's offensive Odd Couple, the Cubs and the Astros, outscored the rest of the league combined.
San Diego's Mark Thurmond and Goose Gossage threw a three-hit, 1-0 victory over the Reds, while Houston's Bob Knepper hurled a six-hit, 8-0 blanking of the Giants.
Elsewhere in the NL, Chicago blasted New York 9-3, Philadelphia topped Montreal 4-1 and Pittsburgh edged St. Louis 3-2.
Padres 1, Reds 0
Kevin McReynolds doubled with two out in the top of the ninth and scored on Luis Salazar's single, sending the Padres to their third straight victory and 11th in 13 games.
Salazar's single was the seventh hit off Reds starter Joe Price, 5-8, as Cincinnati lost 1-0 for the fifth time this season and third time in nine games.

Thurmond struck out nobody in seven innings, while Gossage whiffed five of six batters.
Astros 8, Giants 0
Knepper scattered six hits for his third shutout of the season and third straight victory while capping Houston's six-run sixth inning with a two-run double.
"It has been a long time," said Knepper, 10-8, who hadn't won 10 games since 1978.
Knepper's double followed a run-scoring double by Craig Reynolds, a run-producing single by Denny Walling, and Enos Cabell's two-run homer to left off losing pitcher Bill Laskey, 6-10.
Cubs 9, Mets 3
Jody Davis drove in four runs with a homer, a double and a sacrifice fly as Chicago won its third straight and ninth in 11 games and opened a 1 1/2-game lead over the second-place Mets in the NL East.
Dwight Gooden, 9-8, struck out six in the four innings he worked to take the NL lead with 171, but he was rapped for eight hits, including six for extra bases.
Phillies 4, Expos 2
Juan Samuel and Von Hayes stroked run-scoring singles in a three-run eighth inning. Two wild pitches by Expos starter Charlie Lea, 14-7, also contributed to the three-run rally that made a winner of Steve Carlton, 10-5, who allowed six hits, struck out four and walked nobody. Lea lost his third straight start.
Gary Carter tied it 1-1 in the bottom of the seventh with his 22nd homer of the season. The game was delayed by rain after the first inning for an hour and 43 minutes.
Pirates 3, Cardinals 2
The Pirates scored their first victory in 10 tries this season against the Cardinals as Johnny Ray's eighth-inning double scored Marvel Wynne from second.

Volleyball team beat by Brazil

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The United States, with a berth in the medal round wrapped up, ran into a desperate team in the final match of pool play in the men's volleyball competition Monday at the Olympic Games.
Desperation won out.
Brazil, which had to beat the Americans to earn a berth in Wednesday night's medal round, did more than that. The Brazilians swept the match 15-10, 15-11, 15-2 before a crowd of about 12,000 at the Long Beach Arena to win the Pool A title.
The United States will face Pool B champion Canada and Brazil will face Pool B runner-up Italy in Wednesday's semifinals.
The winners battle Saturday night at 6:30 for the gold medal, with the loser of the championship match earning the silver.
The losers of the semifinals square off for the bronze at noon Saturday.
The U.S. women's team shoots for a gold medal when it faces China at 8:30 tonight. The loser will receive the silver medal. Japan and Peru will battle for the bronze medal.
The American men had clinched a berth in the medal round before their match with Brazil, and all they had to do to capture the Pool A title was win one game over the Brazilians, but they failed.
Brazil, the United States and Korea all finished with 3-1 records in Pool A. However, the Brazilians earned the title by virtue of their 10-4 record in all games played.
The Americans were 9-4 and Korea, which outlasted Argentina 15-6, 14-16, 13-15, 15-7, 15-12 Monday morning, was 9-6.
Canada and Italy earned the medal-round berths with one-sided victories — the Canadians trounced previously unbeaten Japan 15-10, 15-8, 15-9 and the Italians thrashed winless Egypt 15-4, 15-7, 15-6.
Canada, Italy and Japan all finished with 3-1 records in matches played, but the Canadians had a 10-3 record in games played; the Italians were 11-4 and the Japanese were 9-5.
U.S. Coach Doug Beal was asked whether his team had been affected by the fact that it already had qualified for the medal round before Monday night's match while Brazil had to win to qualify.
"It may have hurt a little bit," he replied. "I would hate to think that it did. Brazil played a great match."
"I hate to lose a match 3-0, but we have to put that behind us and focus all our attention on Canada."
Like Brazil, Canada had to beat Japan to reach the medal round. And like Brazil, the Canadians swept a previously unbeaten team.
Japan failed to qualify for the medal round for the first time since volleyball was introduced as an Olympic sport in Tokyo 20 years ago, excluding 1980, when the Japanese didn't compete.

NEW YORK (AP)—As director Sir Richard Attenborough opened rehearsals for "A Chorus Line: The Motion Picture" with a line of kicking and swaying dancers, he said the tale of a Broadway musical audition still gives him "a thrill."

"I've seen the show perhaps 20 times," Attenborough said Monday of Broadway's longest running musical, which premiered in 1975 and has won nine Tony Awards and the Pulitzer Prize.

Attenborough, who last directed the Oscar-winning film "Gandhi," said one of the 17 dancers in the film has yet to be cast.

The movie will be filmed in the Mark Hellinger Theater in Manhattan and at outdoor locations, Attenborough said.

Marvin Hamlisch, who wrote the original score, will revise the musical numbers with lyricist Ed Kleban. Jeffrey Hornaday, who directed the steamy dances in the movie "Flashdance," will be the choreographer, Attenborough said.

The movie is scheduled to open late in 1985.

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Filmmaker Blake Edwards and MGM-UA are locked in a $1.4 billion legal dispute over the production and distribution of two Pink Panther movies and "Victor-Victoria."

Inn is half-century of good eating

By SYDNEY RUBIN
Associated Press Writer
KINGSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Orlando Underbank was no fool — he knew when he had tasted success.

Underbank was one of a group of Humble Oil Co. seismologists working along a remote stretch of coastline near the King Ranch in the 1930s and feasting nightly on magical meals prepared by Blanche Wright.

Mrs. Wright learned to cook back home in France and brought her skills with her when she married a handsome young Texan during World War I and moved to the Texas Gulf Coast.

During the Great Depression, when Humble's offshore troops needed a cook, they recruited Mrs. Wright.

Underbank liked Mrs. Wright, but he loved her cooking and knew others would, too. He told her if she'd keep cooking, he'd build her a restaurant right there on that spot. She agreed and so he did.

And now, almost 50 years later, people leave the King's Inn restaurant feeling like satisfied, stuffed shrimp thanks to the good cooking of Mrs. Wright and the good taste of Orlando Underbank.

The restaurant, the same blue-frame building constructed on the shores of Loyola Beach a half-century ago, is several miles off the state highway and 23 miles from the nearest town, Kingsville.

Black-eyed Susans line the two-lane blacktop that winds past cow pastures, chicken coops and whitewashed farmhouses on the way to King's Inn.

Despite the remote location and the single, inconspicuous sign on State Highway 77, determined diners from throughout the world still turn up at the restaurant's linen-covered tables.

Faye Ware, owner of the King's Inn for 39 years, said advertising is almost exclusively by word-of-mouth.

"Oh gracious, they come from everywhere," said Mrs. Ware, 73. "I guess they just hear about the food."

No wonder. Plates from the fragrant kitchen arrive heaped with succulent fried shrimp, moist oysters in a miracle cornmeal batter, juicy drum or other seafood, sweet onion rings and thick, tangy tomatoes.

Mrs. Ware and her late husband worked in the kitchen with Mrs. Wright developing recipes until the mid-1960s when she died. But one item on the Kings' Inn menu is an unadulterated Mrs. Wright original.

Forget Leonardo's Mona Lisa, true artistry is Mrs. Wright's fish sauce. But don't ask what's in the peppery, yet sweet, light white sauce.

"Oh, that's a secret," Mrs. Ware said, smiling slyly. "Mrs. Wright asked that we never give it out, but people ask anyway all the time."

Meals are served family style in one of three comfortable rooms lined in greenish paneling hung with paintings by local artists and photos of Mrs. Ware's children and grandchildren.

A meal of two kinds of fish, tomatoes, french fries, salad, onion rings and beer cost about $35.

Mrs. Ware now runs the restaurant with her son, Randy.
