Nixon To Deliver Indochina Speech

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI)—Primed with "encouraging" reports from top military commanders on operations in Vietnam and Cambodia, President Nixon will deliver a televised interim progress statement Wednesday night.

Nixon, winding up a five-day Memorial Day sojourn at his vacation villa, planned to fly back to Washington this evening 10 p.m. EDT.

White House sources indicated the address has been in the works for some time. There was strong speculation Nixon timed it to blunt a Senate drive to curb his powers.

Starting Wednesday, the Senate will begin voting on a series of amendments sponsored by Gerald L. Warren said. "General Sens. Frank Church, D-Idaho and John Sherman Cooper, R-Ky., and other lawmakers who seek to bar future U.S. military troop withdrawals announced operations in Cambodia after April 30.

The President was encouraged by this briefing," the press spokesman added.

At the end of the month, Nixon plans to deliver another speech to signal the proposed windup of American combat operations in Cambodia.

Others who flew in for the meeting were Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird, Adm. John S. McCain Jr., Pacific command chief, Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, outgoing chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Deputy Press Secretary Thomas H. Moorer, incoming

THE MONTH of May was to go down in the annals of weather facts as a dry month until Sunday's thunderstorm changed the rain picture. Up to Sunday, only .68 was recorded on a mid-town gauge, but with the 1.22 recorded between Sunday noon and 6 a.m. today, the total rainfall was upped to 1.90 for the merry month of May. ## Sunday Storm Cuts Short Outdoor Weekend Activities

Pampa's summertime outdoor activities came to an abrupt halt about mid-afternoon Sunday when a maverick thunderstorm starting between Pampa and Miami and started traveling from the southeast in the southwest in an almost unprecedented fashion.

Citizens Band Radio Club members had two units out that were keeping a close watch on the movement of the storm.

Tornado hooks were reported and hail and moderate wind sited around White Deer. Several funnel clouds were spotted in the Panhandle, but none of them touched the ground. No section of the state escaped unscathed over the weekend.

Winds shoved a wintry cold front through the Panhandle and dropped temperatures here from the 80s into the 60s.

Czech Government Silent As Former Leader Returns

VIENNA (UPI)—The Czechoslovak Premier Lubomir Strougal expected to convene about June 10, said political trials were in silence today about the sudden being prepared against persons arrival home of former reform leader Alexander Dubcek from his ambassadorial post in Turkey during the weekend.

A source close to the Czechoslovak Embassy in Washington said the trip was a "routine" one and that Dubcek was not planning to visit his ailing 80-year-old mother, hospitalized in Bratislava.

The fact Dubcek left Istanbul one day after Czechoslovakia's ruling body,

Nancy's In Washington For The Bee

Pampa's own Best Speller, Nancy Palmer is in Washington, D.C. today preparing to represent her town and state in the 43rd National Spelling Bee.

Nancy is one of 44 girls and 30 boys in the nation's capitol representing more than 7 1/2 million students, who completed at the local levels.

There will be some tense moments for Nancy and her parents, the Ralph Palmers, and her three brothers and two sisters, who accompanied her to Washington.

And it is a tense moment that won't be eased until the 1970 champion is named about noon Thursday and awarded the $1,000 in cash and a weekend trip to New York City. Second place winner will receive $500; third place, $250; next five places $100 and the next 10 places $75.

The remaining finalists will receive $50 each and a gold medal.

Nancy began her climb toward the national spelling bee in competition as a student at Robert E. Lee Junior High School.

STARTS TODAY County Solons Hear Progress Report On Rebuilding Annex

By BEN KECK, News Staff Writer

Gray County commissioners today approved a bid speed rehaul for Lake McClellan, a progress report on a preliminary survey of the watershed project on Red Deer Creek, and discussed the progress of rebuilding the county annex.

John McLennore, district ranger for the U.S. Forest Service, asked commissioners to approve a boat speed of five miles-per hour on Lake McClellan after dark and within 100 feet of the shore area.

McLennore said there were no state laws governing boat speeds on the lake and Texas Park and Wildlife Service regulations permitted the county to adopt such regulations.

He said the Park Service would post speed warning signs for boaters on the lake.

Doug Cunningham, area conservationist for the Soil and Water Conservation District, asked commissioners to study carefully the progress reports of the Red Deer Creek watershed program.

Cunningham said he urged commissioners to submit any ideas they had for improvement of the plan.

The plan is co-sponsored by the conservation district and Gray County commissioners.

The original plan called for 28 dams to be constructed along the creek from Pampa to Canadian, but Cunningham said cusses would probably allow for only 18.

Final plans for the watershed program are to be completed in September.

Preinet 2 Commissioner Vernon Watkins told commissioners material had begun to arrive today for reconstruction of the county annex.

Watkins said federal funds from the Office of Emergency Preparedness would be available to complete the project but would not allow for expanding the original facilities.

Watkins said reconstruction would begin as soon as the debris from the old annex is cleared.

In other action, commissioners approved bills incurred by the county since the last meeting and set the date for the next session June 12.

Oil Much Less Problem Than Rain On Coast

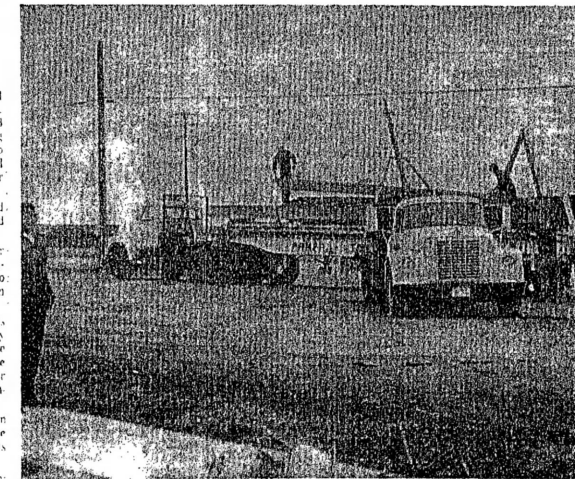

By BEN KECK, News Staff Writer

GALVESTON, Tex. (UPI)—The oil was much less of a problem for Sunday bathers than was originally predicted. The rain was much more of a problem.

The bay took care of the oil for the most part. There wasn't much anyone could do about the rain except wait.

And what they did. Those who arrived at the beach early waited for hours under boardwalks or in gift shops, hotel lobbies or parked cars. But it kept raining.

Commissioners studied the progress reports of the Red Deer Creek watershed program.

STEEL BEAMS to be used in the reconstruction of the county annex building east of the city are being unloaded at the construction site. District Commissioner Vernon Watkins, left, looks on. Reconstruction of the annex, destroyed by a tornado April 18, will begin as soon as debris clearance has been completed. (Staff Photo)

While Others Sleep, Pampa Police Keep A Steady Pace

The dispatcher's answer was always the same: "Just light rain and a little thunder, ma'am. Nothing to worry about."

A patrol car pulled in front of the door and stopped. A civilian clothes got out.

The officer put his hand on the man's shoulder and patted him toward the door. The man moved slowly stiffly. He needed the officer's guidance. He was drunk.

The policeman opened the door and the man preceded the officer into Pampa police headquarters.

The man's belongings were examined before them with them and after them.

"In here," the officer said, indicating small room to his left and still guiding the man.

The policeman said the man to empty his pockets, remove his tie and belt and be wadded.

"What am I here for?" the man asked.

"You know you were here last night, didn't you?" the officer asked.

"Yes. It's better in the morning," said the policeman.

The officer began making reports and asking the man in civilian clothes the color of his hair and eyes and if he addressed on his district's license was valid.

One officer explained that the man the manager had complained about was sober and not breaking any law. He also said the two men were removed from the restaurant because of making a disturbance.

It was unattractive to be in a public place, the officer said.

The cook showed the time to be 1 a.m. The dispatcher was still answering calls concerning the weather.

While Others Sleep, Pampa Police Keep A Steady Pace

Editor's Note: Pampa Daily News reporter, Ben Keck assigned to write a story about the activities in the early-morning hours at the Pampa Police Department, tells it "like it is" — a relatively quiet, crime-wise, Sunday morning.

By BEN KECK, News Staff Writer

The time was 2 a.m. Light rain was falling outside. Thunder could be heard in the distance and lightning would flash occasionally.

Handfuls of bugs were clinging to the lighted door awaiting refuge from the weather. The telephones were ringing.

The dispatcher's answer was always the same. "Just light rain and a little thunder, ma'am. Nothing to worry about."

A patrol car pulled in front of the door and stopped. A police officer and a man in civilian clothes got out.

The officer put his hand on the man's shoulder and guided him toward the door. The man moved slowly, stiffly. He needed the officer's guidance. He was drunk.

The policeman opened the door and preceded the man into Pampa police headquarters. The bug examined in before them with them and after them.

"In here," the officer said, indicating small room to his left and still guiding the man.

The policeman told the man to empty his pockets, remove his tie and belt and be seated.

"What are you here for?" the man asked.

"You know why you're here," the policeman said.

"I ain't drunk," said the man in the morning.

"You'll feel better in the morning," said the policeman.

The officer began making reports and asking the man in civilian clothes the color of his hair and eyes and if the address on his driver's license was correct.

The man's belongings were then inventoried and stored for safekeeping. The officer took him to the drunk tank for a night's rest.

The phones continued to ring. The dispatcher sent two more to a local restaurant where he had a report of trouble in a local police character.

Officers arrived at the restaurant, but the man the manager had reported a being drunk was found to be sober and minding his own business.

Two other customers were found by officers to be intoxicated and were removed from the restaurant and taken to the police station.

The officers had no sooner brought the men into the station than the restaurant manager called and demanded an explanation as to why the man he had reported had not been arrested. He also wanted to know why officers had arrested two of his customers.

One officer explained that the man the manager had reported was sober and not breaking any laws. He also said the two men were removed from the restaurant because they were drunk.

"It is unlawful to be intoxicated in a public place," the officer said.

The clock showed the time to be 4 a.m. The dispatcher was still answering calls concerning the weather.

Activity had been relatively light for a Saturday night. The fact it was the Memorial Day holiday and many people were out of town may have been the reason.

She made a phone call, and a young man — probably her daughter's boy friend — on her father's came in and posted the bond.

Before leaving the station, the girl's mother told the girl whose parent had filed simple assault charges. "You're going to get it."

"No, mother," her daughter told her. "let's just forget about it."

"No," said the mother. "I'm going to wait for her outside."

Officers escorted the assaulted girl to her car. The crowd dispersed.

US Gives More To Romania Than Russia Does

VIENNA (UPI)—The United States has sent nearly three times as much flood aid to Communist Romania as the Soviet Union, official figures released Saturday showed. Shipments from the two nations were believed to be only first installments of aid for the stricken nation, where an estimated 200 persons have died and millions of acres of farmland have been flooded. But the initial figures reflected Russia's conspicuous foot-dragging on aid for its independent-minded ally. Agerpres, the Romanian news agency, reported Friday that a Boeing 707 landed at Bucharest Thursday carrying $140,000 worth of beds, boots, blankets and medicine. The agency said Saturday 12 tons of food and medicine arrived Friday from Moscow on an Antonov-12 plane, part of a $50,000 gift from the Soviet Red Cross. The Romanian floods, which have affected every district in the nation, have been going on for more than two weeks and are expected to last at least until June 12. The meager Soviet aid reinforced reports from Bucharest that the Soviet Union had tied strings to its help—a demand that Romania resume full military and economic cooperation with the rest of the Soviet bloc.

Tension Between Iran And Iraq Undulates To Uncertain Future

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI)—For more than a year the military forces of Iran and Iraq have faced each other along the entire stretch of their common border. Planes, ships and troops have been on a more or less continuous alert. The tension rises and falls but few observers are willing to predict the future course of the confrontation in the Persian Gulf. Relations between Iran and Iraq have never really been "normal" since the assassination in July 1958 of young King Faisal II of Iraq. The new Iraq Republican regime showed it had little in common with Iran's constitutional monarchy and at the best of time the situation between the two nations has been no better than "lukewarm." It deteriorated seriously in April, 1969, when Iran decided to abrogate the 1937 treaty on navigation rights in the Shatt-el-Arab River which flows between the two countries. Tehran ordered Iranian vessels to fly the Iranian flag and not to submit to Iraqi inspection on the river. In turn, Iraq handed Iran a note on April 15, 1969, claiming the Shatt-el-Arab as an integral part of its territory and demanding that Iranian craft lower their flags therein and not carry naval personnel. The note threatened force if Iran did not comply. Iran replied that the treaty cited by Iraq was drawn up when Iraq was a British protectorate and thus given "the lion's share" in the agreement. Iran argued the treaty violated international recognized rights, that it would not accept anything less than equal use of the river and that force would be answered by force. Both sides took precautionary steps. Iranian vessels of all classes now fly the Iranian flag on the river under the protection of naval and air units and the Iranian frontier forces have been ordered to "take all necessary steps to stop any attempt against Iran's sovereignty and territorial integrity."

Television In Review

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Many local television stations don't think the Federal Communications Commission is doing them any favor by making it possible for them to originate more of their own prime time shows next year.

The FCC recently decided to limit network television shows to only three of the four prime time hours starting Sept. 1, 1971, in order to promote diversity and local programming.

Critics of the FCC decision have already pointed out that most local stations simply don't have the resources to do steadily first-rate shows, and will put on cheap programming as a rule.

Now the stations are beginning to make themselves heard. As an example, representatives of ABC-TV affiliate stations who recently met here said they oppose the FCC ruling.

As another grassroots example, the news editor of the Medford, Ore., Mail Tribune, Cleve Twitchell, interviewed the general managers of his town's two television stations. And, he wrote in his report, they both think "it's a bad rule."

Writes Twitchell: "Although the rule applies only to the top 50 markets (Medford ranks in the 70s), it is expected to affect all TV stations, because the networks most likely would not find it profitable or feasible to transmit extra programming for small markets only."

Twitchell says one of the

Wall Street Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI)—Just as 1967 was called the year of the rich man's panic, so should the 1969-70 period be abeled the young man's panic because it was during the past year that the new investment ideology that was highly successfully in 1965-68 came to grief, Hoppin Bros. & Co. Says. The "performance cult" was appropriately named. It seemed to be a quasi-religious state of mind associated with a certain age group and as such it may have been significantly modified by the recent government-sponsored catastrophe even as young religions are modified by persecution, the firm adds.

The stock market, which is "largely emotional anyway," has simply overreacted to the slowing economy, inflation and the international situation, the Alexander Hamilton Institute observes. The long downswing has brought bargains within reach again, but caution is advised because the market is not likely to run away on the upside, according to the analyst.

The specialists are concerned about the amount of amateur short selling in the market recently and the abnormal amount of short-selling in 100-

Foreign News Commentary

TOKYO (UPI)—Police expect Japan's radical students to allow the military treaty with the United States to renew in June without the fire and bloodshed that marked the pact's birth.

The treaty is opposed by Japan's Communists, Socialists, political Buddhists, student revolutionaries and most organized labor unions.

But Prime Minister Eisaku Sato's conservatives, who rule with a commanding majority in the Diet (parliament), say they will permit the 1960 treaty to renew automatically on June 23. That is the first date since the pact was signed on which Japan can give notice of withdrawal from U.S. military protection.

Police report that as many as 50,000 students may mobilize on the streets of Tokyo, the world's most populous city with 11.4 million residents, to denounce the treaty under which the United States maintains air and naval strike forces in Japan.

But police doubt the radicals will mount the terror tactics which turned Tokyo into near anarchy when the treaty was signed 10 years ago.

"We expect that the rallies and demonstrations staged by the students in June will be mostly peaceful," a Tokyo police official said. "We don't expect the students to arm themselves with staves, rocks and pipes as in the past. Oh, there will be some scattered flareups of violence, but nothing we can't handle."

Plenty Of 'Cool' Needed

In a recent letter to the Record-Courier of Kent-Ravenna, Ohio, three assistant professors of English and one professor of library science at Kent State University roundly castigated the newspaper for having attacked student hoodlums in an editorial. Those who should be denounced, write the professors, "are not the handful of militant radicals who burned down an ROTC timbershed but the warlords who have ordered a still order now the burning down of entire countries. You should be denouncing the barbaric leaders who seem to have educated themselves to suppressing the blacks and eradicating the Panther and you should be denouncing the magnate who are corrupting the countryside with their industrial fall." The four slain students were "murdered by proxy," they declare, not by skittish National Guardsmen "but by a burgeoning fascist regime, preoccupied with self-aggrandizement and profit, that emanates from Washington and is generally infecting the rest of the country." "Just getting warmed-up," the professors go on to indict the "imperialist racist insanity that is prevailing in America," "the insensate brutality of current American policies" and the "quasi-patriots who are leading the country straight down the road to hell." Space permits more excerpts from this somewhat less than tightly reasoned document, but stomach does not. It must be noted, however, that the professors did not forget to accuse the newspaper editors of "cant," "inflammatory half-truths," "political propaganda" and "pat cliches." Now, it is intensely exhilarating to be consumed with the burning fire of righteous zeal. The only trouble with that feeling, however, is that it is dangerous fuel on which to try to run country. Certainly zeal was ample demonstrated by New York construction workers in their bloody disruption of a peaceful antiwar rally in Wall Street a few days ago. America's students are motivated by "a sense of im-

High Cost Of Being Poor

It's expensive to be poor. credit, the cost is high. They have little choice in their source of loans because they are poor credit risks, so they pay both high interest rates and for long time periods. Poverty is expensive in nonmonetary ways. Lower quality education usually plagues the poor, hindering their ability to improve themselves. Living conditions sap energy and ability to resist disease and overcome personal problems. In short, the poor can't afford to be frugal and "poor" isn't always lazy — it may be tired, ill and hopeless. Next time you wonder why more people don't lift themselves out of poverty, think about these things, says Mrs. Nelson.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

Uruguayans are the world's biggest meat eaters. The World Almanac notes. A report on per capita consumption of meat in 1967 showed that Uruguayans ate an average of 227 pounds of meat. Ranking after Uruguay were New Zealand, 212 pounds; Argentina, 202 pounds; and Australia, 192 pounds. The United States ranked fifth, with an average meat consumption of 178 pounds.

H. L. Hunt Writes

O.E.O. PROPAGANDA Congress has specifically prohibited the spending of federal anti-poverty funds to publish newspapers. Yet many branches of the Office of Economic Opportunity (O.E.O.) are propagandizing their programs and stirring up community unrest through newspapers paid for by federal funds. In February one such newspaper in San Francisco, called "The Spokesman," published a story supporting the student strike at San Francisco State College. The story stated: "The activities and grievances of the students deserve the sympathy of the local community." Among these "activities" were attacks on other students, disruption of classes, and destruction of property.

VIEWPOINT Militants Get The Publicity

By JESSE HELMS Some time back, down in Macon, Ga., several hundred people gathered at the city's coliseum to honor five outstanding young men of that state, including a 30-year-old hero of the Vietnam war. Don Smith came home from the war a quadriplegic — totally paralyzed from the neck down. Despite his awesome handicap, Don Smith has never given up. Indeed, he has plunged into a career of helping others. He is a high school football coach; he travels around the state counseling young people to love and be loyal to their country, and to dedicate their lives to faith in God. He has had remarkable success; he has been a tremendous influence upon the young people. Throughout the state, they love him for it. In the audience that evening, as Don Smith and four other young men were honored, was retired Air Force Brigadier General Robert L. Scott, himself a distinguished hero of World War II—General Scott will be remembered as the commander of Claire Chennault's "Flying Tigers." The next morning, General Scott recalls, he turned on his radio expecting to hear a news report on the event the night before. There was not even the barest mention. The same was true with television. He checked several newspapers. Not a mention. All he heard, and all he read, was — as he put it — "report after report about the activities of the 'Chicago Seven' who had been sentenced the day before by Judge Hoffman for destroying the dignity of his court, for making obscene threats to both the Judge and to this country — making a mockery of justice." General Scott remarked that it is his belief that the five outstanding young men, who had been honored in the coliseum at Macon, Georgia, really represent the ideals of this country. They, he insists, are the kind of people whom we should be hearing about. But who gets the attention, the coverage by the news media? The Chicago Seven, and every other loud-mouthed, unwashed militant who bids for publicity! General Scott suggests that this is no accident. He regards it as a planned, contrived affair. There are forces, he warns, who want America to destroy herself. He is concerned about the manner in which the news media are condemning American fighting men as a result of the incident at My Lai. He quoted from a letter written by the son of a friend, a young man now in Vietnam describing the hazards there. Part of the letter reads as follows: "When we take a village from the communists, there are usually nothing there but old men, women and children. Many times as a result of having been fired upon, we have entered a village and begun a search for weapons. Time and time again," the young man wrote, "our men have been killed and many others wounded, by booby-traps. The old women that you read about back home throw hand grenades at us. Even the children have

With Some Reservation

By INJUN WOODY A lot of you good people might think that if a 10 cent stamp goes into effect that the major victims will be big business. Mebbe it is true that business accounts for most of the first-class mail that wanders hither and yon across the countryside until it finally reaches its destination. It may be true that the average individual writes only 100 letters a year and the extra 4 cents would only cost him $4 more. But wait a minute! Do you suppose business establishments, already overburdened by high wages and almost insurmountable taxes, will be able to absorb the postage increase all alone? You bet your biffy they won't.

Question Box

QUESTION:—Does the government, other than keeping the peace, ever do anything as efficiently as it could be done on a free market basis? ANSWER: The government doesn't make very much of a success of keeping the peace. The government believes largely in protective tariff and immigration restrictions and those are the things that lead to conflict and one war after another. No, it is hard to think how the government, whether it be local, state or national, can be efficient in creative production. Any project operated by the government is controlled by politics which means by those who can finagle special privileges. Of course, private enterprise hasn't done as good a job as it could have, but one of the reasons for that is governmental interference. We've never had a truly free private enterprise system. Government has given special groups like labor unions the privilege of violating the Sherman Anti-Trust Law and not be guilty of any offense. They have the right to combine to set prices while other people do not have the right. One rule should govern individuals and groups of all kinds alike.

The Loneliest Job in the World

The Doctor Says

By DR. W. G. BRANDSTADT Asthmatic Bronchitis Caused by an Allergy Q—Can a person ever be cured of asthmatic bronchitis? What causes it? Could it make you lose your voice or feel tired? A—This disease is caused by an allergy. It can be controlled rather than cured. When the offending allergen has been identified it should be avoided. Desensitizing injections may be given and various drugs may be helpful. The chief symptoms are shortness of breath, cough and wheezing. Fatigue and loss of voice may occur as secondary symptoms. Q—I have chronic asthmatic bronchitis. Could this cause my chest, back and arms to ache constantly? How much of my shortness of breath could be caused by cigarettes? A—Asthmatic bronchitis may cause some soreness in your chest and abdomen but, since this pain is not constant as a rule nor present in the back or arms, some other cause for your symptoms should be sought. The best way to tell how much of your trouble is caused by smoking is to quit and see how much improve there is. There is bound to be some and perhaps a lot. Q—I have heard that a person can outgrow asthma. Is this true? A—Some persons whose asthma is greatly aggravated by emotional problems do outgrow this disease. Others cease having attacks when the causative allergen is removed from their environment. This is not a true outgrowing of the disease but it may be called that. Q—Is asthma always caused by an allergy? A—There are two unrelated forms of asthma — allergic (the commoner of the two) and cardiac (asthma associated with heart disease). Q—Would taking cod liver oil aggravate asthma? A—No, unless you are allergic to cod liver oil. Q—Is it true that vitamin E will counteract the side effects of taking large doses of steroids over a prolonged period? A—A thorough search of the literature reveals only one report (1967) of the use of vitamin E with cortisone-like steroids — in this case for a urologic condition. Although the results were apparently good this case for a urologic condition is hardly sufficient evidence to warrant a valid conclusion. Please send your questions and comments to Wayne G. Brandstadt, M.D., in care of this paper. While Dr. Brandstadt cannot answer individual letters, he will answer letters of general interest in future columns.

Inside Washington

WASHINGTON — Leopards may not be able to change their spots, but the notorious Black Panthers are craftily trying to shed theirs. To get away from its fearsome image and malodorous reputation for murderous crime, sordid vice and violent revolution, the Black Panther Party (BPP) is now busily proselytizing and operating through two new fronts. Their euphemistic cover names are — "National Committee to Combat Fascism" and "Black Community Information Centers." Under the shelter of these innocent-sounding fronts, BPP leaders are aggressively continuing organizing activities throughout the country despite claims that no new Black Panther chapters are being established. That disclaimer is a hoax and deliberate deception. Late last year, the BPP national headquarters, Berkeley, Cal., authorized the formation of new Black Panther units under either of the two cover organizations. It was also prescribed that the new groups, like existing Black Panther chapters, would be under complete BPP control and discipline; follow strictly all instructions from BPP national headquarters; advocate and support its programs and projects, such as "free breakfasts for children," and distribute the BPP newspaper, "The Black Panther" and other BPP literature and propaganda — mostly of a virulent hate and violence-preaching revolutionary character. In effect, these national headquarters directives made it clear that members of the two cover organizations are actually Black Panthers and are to consider themselves as such. And they do. A check by this column confirmed that members of the two organizations openly refer to themselves as Black Panthers. Also highly significant — in the May 9, 1970, issue of "The Black Panther," the "National Committee to Combat Fascism" was publicly identified as the "political organizational bureau of the BPP." WHERE THEY ARE — Strikingly indicative of the success of the wily BPP strategem is the number of groups that have been organized throughout the country under the guise of the two fronts. Currently, "National Committee to Combat Fascism" units are operating in the following cities: Washington, D.C.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Detroit; Cleveland and Lima, Ohio; Milwaukee, Wis.; Tulsa, Okla.; Omaha, Neb.; Augusta, Ga.; Portland, Ore.; Bridgeport and Hartford, Conn.; Winston-Salem, N.C.; Newark, N.J.; East St. Louis, Ill.; Cambridge, Mass.; Atlantic City and Jersey City, N.J. "Black Community Information Centers" are now functioning in Baltimore; New York City and Mount Vernon, N.Y., and Gary, Ind. In process of being organized, under one or the other of the front names, are sub-rosa Black Panther groups in Cincinnati, Dayton and Toledo, Ohio; Albany, N.Y.; Sunflower and Greenville, Miss.; Providence, R.I.; Des Moines, Iowa; Flint, Mich.; and Kankakee, Ill. In some areas, with approval of BPP national headquarters, local adaptation is being applied to the use of the cover names. For example: The Wisconsin Committee to Combat Fascism, the Fred Hampton Community Center in Gary, the Portland Committee to Combat Fascism, the Nebraska Black Community Information Center. The name "National Committee to Combat Fascism" first popped up at the Black Panther-sponsored "National Conference for United Front against Fascism" in Oakland, Cal., last July. While Black Panthers ran and managed the affair, it was largely attended by whites — of the left persuasion. Prominent among those present were members of the Communist Party, USA, Students for a Democratic Society, and various New Left and other extremist elements. The BPP advocated creation of a new party to be known as "National Committee to Combat Fascism." It was to be offered by a coalition of black and white radicals, with the
