

Charge: Two gunmen shot at pope

ROME (AP) — A judge today indicted three Bulgarians and four Turks on charges of complicity in the attempted assassination of Pope John Paul II in 1981 and revealed for the first time that two gunmen, not one, shot the pontiff.

Judge Ilario Martella, who conducted a three-year investigation into possible Bulgarian involvement in the shooting, said convicted papal assailant Mehmet Ali Agca was not the only gunman in St. Peter's Square on May 13, 1981.

He said Oral Celik, a suspected member of a right-wing Turkish terrorist group, fired one of three shots that wounded Pope John Paul II.

"We must believe without question that there was an international plot to kill the pope," Martella told news conference. However, he refused to say whether he thought the Soviet Union was behind the alleged Bulgarian involvement.

Martella said the evidence and witness testimony suggest that the shot fired by Celik, one of those indicted today, hit the pope on his finger and arm. He said the bullet was never found.

Celik is at large and sought by Italian police.

"I have deposited indictments against all the suspects," said Martella after submitting his 1,243-page indictment to court officials.

Martella also indicted Agca on a new charge of illegally bringing a pistol into Italy. Agca is serving a life sentence in Italy for the 1981 shooting.

Martella said the Bulgarians indicted were Sergei Ivanov Antonov, 37, former Rome station manager of the Bulgarian state airline and the only one of the three held in Italy; Todor Aivazov, former cashier at the Bulgarian Embassy in Rome; and Maj. Zhelyo Kolev Vassilev, former aide to the military attache at the Bulgarian Embassy in Rome.

The Turks named in the 1,243-page indictment were Celik; Bekir Celenk, a reputed head of the Turkish Mafia who is in custody in Bulgaria; and Omer Bagci and Musa Sedar Celebi, both held in Italian prisons.

Italian prosecutor Antonio Albano, who reviewed evidence gathered by Martella, recommended in May that all seven men be charged with aiding Agca. However, the final decision rested with Martella.

Antonov was arrested and jailed on Nov. 25, 1982, but later was released to house arrest reportedly because of declining health. He remains under heavy guard at a Rome apartment.

Albano, who reviewed Martella's evidence, told The Associated Press in June that he is convinced Bulgaria, possibly with Soviet aid, masterminded the assassination attempt to stop social unrest in the pope's native Poland.

Bulgaria has reportedly denied the charges and has charged that Western intelligence agencies were trying to smear Soviet bloc countries.

Agca, in a surprise meeting with the press last year, said the Soviet KGB intelligence agency was behind the plot and he named his alleged Bulgarian co-conspirators.

WICHITA FALLS — The day after Ohio Senator John Glenn asked residents here to re-elect Jack Hightower to Congress former President Gerald R. Ford was endorsing his opponent, Beau Dougan of Amarillo.

At a $30 per plate luncheon at the Wichita Falls Country Club, in Rep. Hightower's home country, Ford exhorted northwest Texas Republicans to re-elect President Ronald Reagan and vice president George Bush, and to elect Phil Gramm to the Senate and Boulder to the House.

"I think they would make a great team in the nation's capital," Ford said. "In Beau Dougan, you have one of the finest young candidates to come along in a long, long time."

At a press conference following the luncheon speech, Ford admitted that he had not met Boulder before that morning.

"But I had read all about him," Ford said. "I was impressed by his community work and his hard work and activity."

He added that he came to Wichita Falls because it is a "target area" for Republican Congressional candidates and that it is expected to be a close race.

But at the luncheon, Ford was all praise for the former Amarillo councilman, telling the supporters that he was impressed by his "fine record in the law and excellent record as a public official in Amarillo."

"He made the right decision in 1980 to head the campaign in Amarillo for Ronald Reagan," Ford said. "The facts are he was 100 percent right."

Citing improvements in the economy as "the fundamental issue in the election," Ford said that when he left office in 1977, the rate of inflation had been reduced from 12 percent to 4.8 percent and the prime interest rate from 12 percent to 6 1/2 percent.

When President Carter left office, inflation had climbed to 13 1/2 percent while the prime interest rate was up to 21 percent, he said, adding that the rate of inflation under President Reagan is now four percent and the prime interest rate dropped to 12 1/2 percent.

With unemployment also down, Ford admitted there is "still one problem on the horizon: the federal deficit."

Here, he said, is where the difference is between the Republican team and "Mondale, Ferraro, Doggett and (turning to Boulder) your opponent."

"Mondale would add $85 billion more in taxes," Ford claimed. "For every five dollars that Mondale says he would reduce the deficit, four of those would come from new taxes and one dollar would come from a

Shultz urges accord on terrorist retaliation

NEW YORK (AP) — Secretary of State George Shultz, warning of more terrorist attacks on U.S. interests in years ahead, is calling for "a broad public consensus" for quick military retaliation — even if it involves the loss of innocent lives.

"If we are going to respond or preempt effectively, our policies will have to have an element of unpredictability and surprise," Shultz said in a speech Thursday night at the Park Avenue Synagogue. "And the prerequisite for such a policy must be a broad public consensus on the moral and strategic necessity of action."

"The public must understand before the fact that there is potential for loss of life of some of our fighting men and the loss of life of some innocent people," he said.

Shultz has spoken out frequently on the need to combat terrorism, but had never before suggested the United States might have to respond at the cost of innocent lives. Shultz's statement differed from the point of view expressed by President Reagan in Sunday's presidential debate with Walter F. Mondale.

When asked why he hadn't ordered retaliation for terrorist bombings that have taken more than 250 American lives in Lebanon, Reagan said the United States would respond "only if we can put our finger on the people responsible and not endanger the lives of innocent civilians."

Shultz, delivering the synagogue's annual Sherr lecture, also urged a broad program of intelligence gathering and political action to combat terrorism and praised the way Israel reacts to attacks.

"We will need the capability to act on a moment's notice," he said. "There will not be time for a renewed national debate after every terrorist attack."

"A great nation with global responsibilities cannot afford to be hamstrung by confusion and indecisiveness," Shultz said. "Fighting terrorism will not be a clean or pleasant contest, but we have no choice but to play it."

Shultz scoffed at those who equate terrorists with freedom fighters or legitimate revolutionaries, saying the latter do not blow up buses full of civilians, slaughter schoolchildren, assassinate innocent businessmen or hold civilians hostage.

Shultz forecast "more terrorism directed at our strategic interests around the world in the years ahead," and warned that the remaining weeks before the presidential election would be a time of "particular danger."

Gramm claims allegations attempt to obscure issues

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — U.S. Senate candidate Phil Gramm says he is tired of having to respond to allegations leveled against him by his Democratic opponent because the charges only are attempts by Lloyd Doggett to divert attention from the real issues of the race.

Speaking at an Abilene news conference Thursday, Gramm reiterated his desire to talk about issues, but found himself again responding to allegations made by Doggett about his campaign finance reports.

Doggett on Thursday charged that Gramm "lied" about campaign contributions and said the Republican congressman apparently violated federal election laws by accepting more than $110,000 in primary election contributions after the May 5 primary.

Late primary campaign contributions are legal only if spent on primary campaign debts.

In reports filed with the Federal Election Commission, Gramm showed no debt for the period ending June 30. He since has reported paying more than $214,000 in campaign bills for the period.

Gramm said that a consolidated bookkeeping procedure resulted in him not "being in the red," but still having a primary debt.

But Doggett said, "The Federal Election Law is quite clear. He had an opportunity right there in a sworn form to show whether he had a debt or not. It's a question of whether he lied then or he lied now."

Gramm said his contributions were reported truthfully, explaining that "we had a lot of bills come in at the end of our primary, but we were also actively raising money for the general election."

"We did have a primary debt," he said. "We do have a primary debt now and we raised money for the general election and to pay off the primary debt."

Gramm said his bookkeeping system that consolidated his primary and general election contribution reports was proper and that Doggett only brought it up because he wanted to evade campaign issues.

He also expressed disappointment in Doggett's choice of the word "lied," saying, "Using the word lie and calling people a liar does not serve the political process well. It makes people think that people running for public office are just name-callers."

He said Doggett "wants to debate bookkeeping. I want to debate the future of Texas in America."

Earlier in the day, in which Gramm visited seven West Texas cities, Gramm said that although Doggett is showing no interest in the agriculture problems of the state, he is committed to a new farm program for 1985.

At an Amarillo news conference, Gramm also assailed Doggett for his opposition to the United States' intervention in Grenada last year.

Mondale chin up, polls down

Demo hopeful asks voters to end 'selfishness, greed'

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

President Reagan is looking for votes in the Northeast as Walter F. Mondale, insisting he's keeping his chin up in the face of discouraging polls and a gloomy outlook by some party leaders, urges voters to "end this selfishness, this greed, this ... caring only for yourself."

In need of a dramatic reversal in the polls and with time growing short, Mondale was offering an emotional appeal to voters to reject Reagan and coupling with it a broad attack on the president as opposing government programs that help people.

"I believe in a government that helps," the Democratic presidential nominee said Thursday as he stumped through the industrial Midwest. "I believe in a government that cares. I believe in a president who feels, who knows, who tries, who's with you when you need it."

Reagan, he said, believes that Social Security and Medicare for the elderly mark "a step toward dictatorship."

"Let us be a community, a family where we care for one another," Mondale said. "Let us end this selfishness, this greed, this new championship of caring only for yourself."

Reagan today was going to New Jersey, New York and Connecticut, speaking to Jewish voters and suburban New York City voters. He spent Thursday in the White House.

While in Connecticut he was planning to sign a wildlife preservation bill that would, among other things, create a refuge for threatened birds along that state's coast. The bill was one the administration had once opposed.

"This is another example of Ronald Reagan going out and showing himself to be an election-year environmentalist," said Adrienne Weissman, spokesman for the Sierra Club, which has endorsed Mondale.

Mondale was heading West today, stumping in Michigan, Iowa, Texas and California.

Mondale drew large, enthusiastic crowds on Thursday, and at one point was told by a supporter, "Keep your chin up."

"It's up," Mondale replied.

The running mates were out campaigning again, with Vice President George Bush in Ohio and Kentucky today after facing hostile questions about Reagan's economic policy in Syracuse, N.Y.

Democrat Geraldine Ferraro was in San Francisco and heading up the coast through Oregon and Washington, insisting she doesn't believe the polls.

"There are a lot of first-time voters out there who are not being polled," she said. "The crowds are incredibly large. The people are there, and they're enthusiastic. ... I am convinced we are going to win."

Two polls released this week, a Harris Survey and an ABC News-Washington Post poll, have given Reagan leads of 14 and 12 points respectively. Both indicate the surge to Mondale that came after the first presidential debate was halted after their second debate last Sunday.

Mondale aides, speaking on condition they not be named, said their own polls are in that range, too, and indicate that Mondale has begun losing ground.

Mondale went over polling information in a meeting with advisors Wednesday night in Milwaukee. The Boston Globe reported that campaign chairman James Johnson told him Reagan has what appears to be an insurmountable lead, using surveys from Mondale pollster Peter Hart and Democratic pollster Patrick Caddell.

End of Day Light Saving Time, turn clocks back.

Time changes on Saturday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Morning people get their turn in the light starting Sunday, as an hour of daylight shifts from evening to morn in the annual change back to standard time.

A continuing source of bickering between early-rising country folk and nightowl city dwellers, this semiannual bit of clock confusion began way back in World War I.

And the latest round was fought out only last year when a congressional effort to tamper with the system was rejected.

Currently the nation — most of it anyway — is on standard time for six months and daylight time for six months.

The changeover comes at 2 a.m. on the last Sunday in April and October, with clocks being set back in October.

That means turn your clock back an hour before going to bed on Saturday, or you'll be an hour early for church or other appointments.

Ford campaigns

Ford. "With Mondale, tax increases are the first resort. With Reagan, taxes are the last resort."

Ford told the Boulder boosters that they have 10 days to expand their influence in the election.

The former president spent most of the press conference speculating on the 1984 election and commenting on President Reagan's defense policy. He also showed disagreement with the conservative Republican stands on abortion, school prayer and the Equal Rights Amendment.

"Both Betty (Mrs. Ford, the active former first-lady) and I are strongly for the ERA," Ford said, adding that he believes Reagan, an ERA opponent, is also for equal rights.

"Our goals are different, Reagan believes in state action. We believe in national action," he said.

"He wants to front-load and overload the deficit problem with more taxes, more taxes, more taxes," he said.

"Reagan's deficit proposal is to cut the budget," he said.

"Reagan's approach is one of restraint of growth of domestic expenditures."

"We'll tighten our belt before we even look at new taxes," said said.

Ford said he does not support a constitutional ban on abortion, although he does not favor "abortion on demand" either. While he supports a school period set aside for silent prayer or meditation, he does not support a written prayer.

Ford also supports research in space military technology, often referred to as Reagan's "Star Wars" policy. He said the research is needed to keep the Soviet Union from getting ahead in the arms race.

However, if the Soviets do not cooperate in arms limitation talks, Ford said he would not offer them information or samples of the space system. In a debate with Walter Mondale, Reagan said he would share his "High Frontier" information with the Soviets as a way to deter nuclear weapons.

When a Wichita Falls television reporter asked if he is getting paid by the Republican National Committee to endorse Boulder, Ford told her: "The Democratic Committee ask people from the news media to ask that question."

"Every where I go, some nice young lady like you asks that question," Ford said, adding that the funds go to such charitable projects as Betty Ford's alcoholic and drug treatment center, where such celebrities as Liza Minelli, Mary Tyler Moore and Elizabeth Taylor received treatment for alcohol and drug abuse.

Calling the "bread and butter issue" the biggest issue in the campaign, Ford said he doesn't think the presidential debates have closed the gap in the polls.

The former president arrived at Wichita Falls Municipal airport at noon Thursday, just as former astronaut John Glenn was leaving from a Democratic rally, where he endorsed congressman Jack Hightower.

Teacher claims television violence affects children

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wooden toy cars that lasted many years in a pre-school playroom are easily destroyed by children who drive them like "mad" to imitate violent television heroes, says teacher Mary Ann Banta.

With the advent of increasingly violent TV shows, "I was forced to introduce into the block corner the concept of sensible driving, losing driving licenses and impounding of cars," Ms. Banta told a congressional hearing Thursday on television violence and its possible effects on children's behavior.

"Before the 'Dukes of Hazard,' they used to build really nice roads — now they have a tendency not to 'build roads and to drive like mad,'" she said.

"Each fall I wait with eager anticipation 'the new fall lineup'. What defensive tactics am I going to have to develop this year to counter the new activities of the latest heroes?"

Robert J. Keeshan, who played the TV role of Captain Kangaroo for many years on CBS, warned that a "steady diet of television viewing exposes our young people to considerable violence, dramatic violence."

Philip A. Harding, vice president of the Office of Social and Policy Research in the CBS-Broadcast Group, said that "after years of hearings and official government reports, there is still no convincing evidence that television violence creates criminals or increases crime in our society."

Seminar on listening scheduled

Doug Manning, author, speaker and humorist, will conduct two seminar sessions on listening skills in Pampa on Saturday, Nov. 8, sponsored by the Pampa Chamber of Commerce.

A session on listening as a tool for conflict management will be conducted from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. An evening session of listening as a tool for successful selling will be presented from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Both sessions will be at the Pampa Center of Clarendon College.

Manning, president of In-Sight Books, Inc., and the Family Growth Center at Hereford, says the most powerful parts of our bodies are our ears.

The seminar is designed to reveal how to develop listening skills and how to use them in sales, managing conflict, avoiding manipulation, developing relationships, relating to children and controlling one's own life, Manning said.

"This is not just another pep talk," he claimed. "This seminar deals with the practical methods of becoming a quiet winner."

Born in Frederick, Okla., Manning was raised on Will Rogers lore and developed a love for humor early in his life. He has attended Hardin Simmons University at Abilene and the Oklahoma Baptist University at Shawnee, Okla. He graduated from Southwestern State College at Weatherford, Okla., receiving a bachelor of arts degree in speech and English.

For 30 years he was a pastor of Baptist churches in Texas and Oklahoma. Since 1982 he has been engaged in lecturing, writing and counseling. He conducts seminars on dynamic listening, pre-marriage, divorce, grief and self-esteem.

As a speaker for the past 20 years, he has addressed student groups in more than 30 states and has appeared at many state and national conventions.

Manning has written four books: "A Minister Speaks About Funerals," "Don't Take My Grief Away from Me," "When Love Gets Tough" and "With God on Your Side." His articles have appeared in several national magazines. He writes an award-winning column of humor for newspapers, titled "The Penultimate Word."

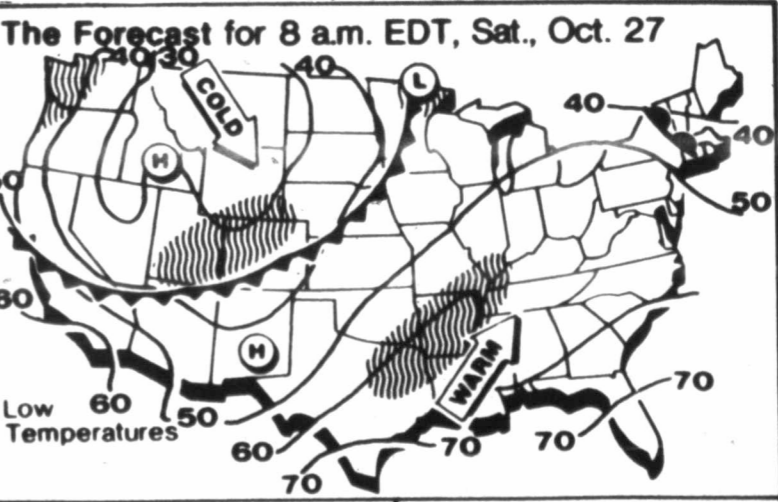

While his seminars deal with serious matters, Manning always injects humor into his sessions to DOUG MANNING underscores his comments and insights. Cost of the seminar is $15 for each session, with a special rate of $10 a person for groups of five or more. Tickets may be purchased at the Chamber office.

Hispanics looking forward to Mondale visit at fiesta

By The Associated Press
Walter F. Mondale, optimistically predicting a Democratic victory in November but troubled by President Reagan's lead in the polls, arrives in El Paso late today to speak at the Ysleta Mission Fiesta.

Two El Paso Democratic leaders said Mondale's decision to address the Mexican-American community in the far West Texas city suggests that he wants to send a message to Hispanics around the country.

El Paso County Commissioner Rogelio Sanchez and County Judge Pat O'Rourke termed the Mondale visit a major campaign stop. It marks the first appearance by a national political candidate at the 405-year-old plaza, they said.

Officials expected about 1,000 people to be at the Ysleta Mission when Mondale arrives at 7 p.m. County Democratic Chairman Tom Diamond was expected to attend, along with other officials.

Mondale was scheduled to arrive at El Paso International Airport at 3:30 p.m. He was expected to depart El Paso for San Diego, Calif. at 9 p.m.

On Thursday, South Texas Democrats tried to rouse support for Mondale by blaming President Reagan for high unemployment along the Texas-Mexico border.

"The Republicans are only interested in South Texas around November. The Democrats fight for our issues all year long," Zavala County Judge Ron Carr said in Laredo during a stop by the "Rural Express" for Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro.

Mondale "came to South Texas as a senator to fight for education and better living conditions for the migrant workers," said Carr.

The "Rural Express" included John Zaccaro Jr., son of vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro.

"Under Reagan, the jobless rate rose to over 10 percent, the highest since the Great Depression. This high unemployment rate along the border is inexcusable," Leodoro Martinez, La Salle County judge, said. "We are not asking for a handout, we are asking for work. But Reagan refuses to hear our call."

In other political developments: — State records showed that Texas Agricultural Commissioner Jim Hightower, Attorney General Jim Mattox and Supreme Court Justice Raul Gonzalez flew to Corpus Christi at taxpayers' expense Oct. 9 for a political fund-raiser for a state senator.

The Dallas Morning News reported in today's editions that records also show the Democratic officials were among eight passengers aboard a state-owned plane operated by the Texas Human Resources Department.

Gonzalez said he had taken the flight, but declined to give details of the trip. Hightower said through an aide that he took the plane rather than his own because he would not be traveling on state business.

Mattox could not be reached by telephone for comment by The Associated Press.

All the passengers attended a $25-a-person fund-raiser for Democratic state Sen. Carlos Truan of Corpus Christi. Truan is unopposed in the Nov. 6 general election.

The use of airplanes and other state equipment or supplies is prohibited by state law for personal or political purposes.

The flight's purpose was to meet with agency board member Vicki Garza of Corpus Christi, said Human Resources Commissioner Marlin Johnston.

Mattox, Gonzalez, Hightower and the others asked for a ride, said Johnston. He said he agreed because vacant seats existed on the agency's twin-engine plane.

Ms. Garza said she had asked Johnston and the other welfare officials to come to Corpus Christi to discuss "some budget questions."

Johnston and the other employees met at her office for an hour or less and went to the Truan meeting afterward, she said.

Ms. Garza, asked if the timing of her meeting and the Truan reception were coincidental, said, "I guess so."

But Johnston and another passenger said the group went directly to the Truan reception from the airport and returned to Austin immediately after it was over.

"We essentially went directly there (to the reception), I believe, and then talked some as we went into the meeting room," said Johnston, adding he spoke to Truan briefly and spent the rest of the evening discussing state business with Ms. Garza, one of his three bosses.

Austin attorney David Shapiro, another passenger, said that Ms. Garza and an Agriculture Department employee met the party at the airport.

"We all went directly to the Truan shindig," said Shapiro. "By God, we didn't stop for a beer or anything. We went directly to the fund-raiser."

Shapiro works part-time for Truan's Senate subcommittee on human resources.

TRAVEL FLOOD WATERS—Boats were the mode of travel Thursday in the flooded subdivisions north of Houston. Up to nine inches of rain fell in the area, causing creeks to leave their banks. (AP Laserphoto)

Thunderstorms push creeks over banks, floods homes

HOUSTON (AP) — Thunderstorms dumped more than 9 inches of rain on parts of Houston and already swollen creeks and bayous jumped their banks, flooding roads, stalling vehicles and forcing residents from their waterlogged homes.

One woman was missing and feared drowned after the car she was driving Thursday collided with two other vehicles, then skidded down an embankment and into a muddy bayou, police said.

Jim Green, director of the area Flood Control District, said Thursday's deluge "will rate with one of the most severe storms we've had."

The thunderstorms developed from the same weather system that had been keeping skies overcast and rain in the forecast since Monday.

Weather officials had feared the downpour would continue for another day. But the rain stopped Thursday night and the storm system shifted west toward the Texas Hill Country.

"The worst appears to be over. This may get us out of the woods," said Bob Fields of the National Weather Service's office in Houston.

Flood warnings, however, were extended through the night because the water was slowly receding and drainage systems were filled, Fields said.

On Thursday high water, waist deep in places, forced residents in northern sections of Houston to board fire department airboats, flatbed trucks or canoes and scurry to higher ground.

"We've got the furniture stacked and are moving it around of the water. We sweep it out one door and it comes in another door," said Pat Fusilier, who lives north of Houston.

In the 24 hours ending at 7 p.m. Thursday, 9.32 inches of rain had fallen, the weather bureau said.

At least 100 homes were hit by the rising waters, said Ray Beall, director of disaster services for the Houston Red Cross Chapter.

"I've got three feet of water in front of my house on the street," said Joe Davis, who lives just north of Houston. "My garage is completely flooded. ... I've got about an inch under my kitchen door."

Red Cross disaster relief workers set up shelters at a church and one high school, officials said.

However, the exact number of evacuees was unavailable because many stayed with friends or took refuge in area hotels, said spokesman Bobby Allred.

Law enforcement officers were patrolling the evacuated areas for looters.

At least three bayous were out of their banks and most were nearly full to the banks, said John Caswell, Harris County deputy civil defense director.

Police divers tried to find the driver of a car that plunged into Braes Bayou on the city's south side. The search, however, was suspended Thursday evening because of strong currents.

"That car could be in the Ship Channel by now," said diver D.L. Carlton.

Traffic was clogged and freeway feeder roads were blocked by stalled and abandoned cars. Tow-truck drivers did a booming business removing vehicles from the high water.

Only one of several roads to Houston Intercontinental Airport was completely open, but no flights were affected by the weather, said spokeswoman Sissy Cooper.

In Spring, about 20 miles north of downtown Houston, an elementary and a middle school Thursday were closed after the principals reported they had to wade through knee-deep water to get to their buildings, said Jerry Smith, spokesman for the Spring Independent School District.

Although the schools were spared water damage, conditions were too dangerous for students to get to them, Smith said.

Students were rescued from a school bus that stalled in high water in Aldine, a northwest Houston suburb, said Ola Maxey, a clerk with the Harris County sheriff's office.

"So many streets are flooded we're not able to keep a list," Ms. Maxey said. "So many stalled cars are blocking the roads, we can't get through."

About 100 students planned to spend the night at several Aldine schools because they were unable to get home, officials said.

Man was fighting IRS 'tyranny'

HOUSTON (AP) — A Freeport man has testified he advised 3,500 taxpayers whose income tax returns he supervised to withhold payment to battle the "tyranny of the Internal Revenue Service."

David M. Martin, 65, testified in his federal trial Wednesday on income tax charges that he advised customers of Taxpayers United not to pay taxes on the grounds that federal reserve notes are worthless because they are not based on gold or silver or because wage-earners are not employees in the eyes of the law.

He said he hasn't paid taxes for 30 years but said he considers himself a patriot. He's named in a 120-count indictment alleging that he filed false income tax returns and conspired to file false returns.

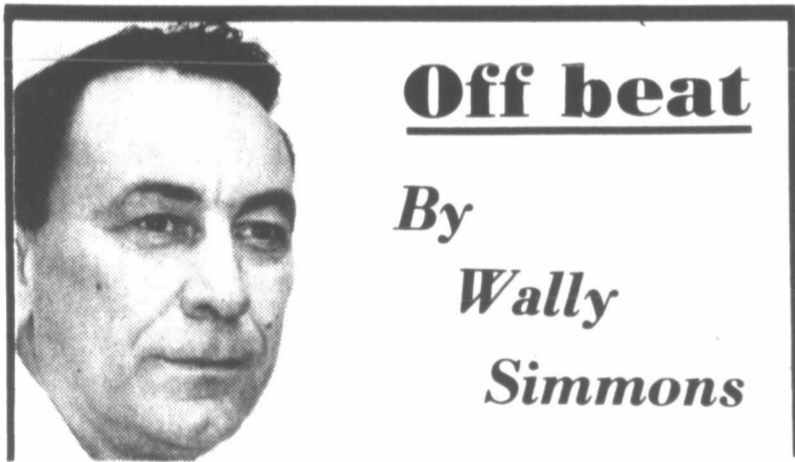

Martin was chided for his position by Assistant U.S. Attorney

Jim Powers. Powers said Martin's viewpoint would lead to the conclusion he has pocketed $600,000 in "worthless green things" since forming his group in 1981.

The prosecutor attempted to portray Martin as a con man using "bizarre" legal arguments.

Children say what they feel

Youngsters have a talent of cutting right to the heart of a situation and saying exactly what they feel. Since the customs of a less-than-forthright society demand that we stifle that talent before we reach adulthood, the questions and comments of children often leave adults speechless.

For example: I have a dentist friend in East Texas who keeps a human skull on his desk. A four-year-old was visiting in his office and wanted to know what it was.

The dentist explained that it was the skull of a man who is now dead. The youngster studied the skull seriously for a few moments, then: "How'd you kill him?" he demanded to know. My friend was speechless before he broke up.

Also: My young son glanced at the television set as President Reagan and Walter Mondale were preparing for their debate Sunday night. "Do they really like each other?" he asked. "I really don't think they do," was my reply. "Then why did they shake hands?" he asked, innocently enough. I was stumped.

I started to say that it was because they wanted people to think they like each other whether they do or not, but that somehow didn't sound right. I knew he would then have concluded that both candidates are liars. (Some might say there would be a lot of truth in that conclusion.)

I also started to say that in order to be polite you are supposed to pretend to like other people, even if you don't, but that didn't sound right either. I would have been saying it is proper to be a phony. I told him I wasn't sure why they shook hands.

In retrospect, that was about as truthful as I could get, although I probably wouldn't have thought about it if he hadn't asked. Kids don't always stump us, though. Sometimes we can learn from them.

I didn't become totally convinced of the value of advertising, even though it is the lifeblood of the newspaper business, until one Christmas several years ago when that same son was much younger. I learned then that intensive advertising can stamp a mental image even stronger than Santa Claus.

My son was just learning about Santa, and we were trying to get him in the Christmas spirit.

My wife picked up a "teaser" toy a few days before Christmas and told him that someone had given it to her to bring home to him. "Who do you think sent it to you?" she asked.

He was, of course, supposed to have said Santa Claus. But the Santa stories hadn't sunk in yet. "I don't know," he said.

"Who says 'Ho, Ho, Ho'?" she prompted. He was puzzled for only a moment, then his face brightened. "The Jolly Green Giant," he exclaimed.

Farmworker sues grower alleging retaliation against union activities

SAN JUAN, Texas (AP) — An attorney for a member of the United Farm Workers of America said his client was fired from her job because she was active in the union and questioned the wages being paid to her co-workers.

In a suit filed in Hidalgo County Court Thursday, Isidra Tovar, said she was fired from her job as a field worker with Bannworth Inc. after 13 years with the farm because of her affiliation with the union.

The suit also accuses Bannworth farms owners Harold and John Bannworth of firing her in retaliation for complaining about possible violations of the federal minimum wage law.

Mrs. Tovar, whose husband was also fired from the company, earned $4,000 a year before she was terminated.

The suit seeks restitution of her job and $6,000 in back wages. Mrs. Tovar said she joined the union in 1982 after the firing of Maria Guadalupe Vasquez.

Mrs. Vasquez was fired for reporting Bannworth to state officials for failing to provide toilet facilities in the field as required by law. She also filed suit against Bannworth and earlier this year was awarded $3,000 in damages.

"The Union is very active at Bannworth's generally," said Jim Harrington, Texas Civil Liberties Union attorney representing Mrs. Tovar.

"They have been at the farm recruiting members, forcing the Bannworths to comply with laws that require them to pay minimum wage and provide a clean, safe work environment. The union is obviously a thorn in the side of Bannworth."

"But the Texas Right-To-Work laws are very clear. You don't fire someone for union activities," Harrington said.

But E.G. Hall, an attorney with Atlas and Hall of McAllen representing Bannworth Inc., said he did not view the suit as a conflict between the union and his client.

The wrong rules for NCAA game

The folks down at the federal revenue department have a new admirer: Notre Dame basketball coach Digger Phelps.

Phelps is such an admirer of the IRS' ability to pry into private lives that he wants them to snoop into major college athletics and find out how much his competitors are paying for prime football and basketball players.

Phelps' comments came in the wake of the admission last weekend by Walter Byers, executive director of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, that some college athletes may be receiving as much as $20,000 a year to sweat for the glory of their alma mater.

In some lines of work it is not yet a federal offense to receive payment for services rendered. College athletics is one of them. It is, however, a violation of NCAA rules to receive the kind of money Byers was talking about. But to his credit, Byers did not beg the help of the IRS.

Instead, he urged NCAA members to come to grips with their problem: a set of rules many of them apparently willfully violate. Whether to rewrite the rules or improve in-house enforcement, that is the question.

It is somewhat understandable that Phelps would turn to the IRS. Its powers of snooping are indeed awesome—and certainly beyond the powers entrusted to any group of mere mortals, such as the voluntary association of colleges and universities called the NCAA. Furthermore there is a growing trend to turn to government for help in dealing with problems that individuals themselves do not want to face.

The future of college athletics is one of those problems. Byers himself suggests that it cannot be solved until colleges and universities are willing to decide the purpose of college athletics: a semi-or fully professional sports program or an amateur extension of the learning process.

NCAA rules of amateurism are not universal laws. Because they are not, they need the support of all in order to stand. Without the support of the governed, NCAA rules, like the 55-mph speed limit, become unenforceable no matter the degree of coercive power brought to bear by the NCAA or the government.

If you follow Digger Phelps scenario, the IRS would fail to solve the NCAA's problem just as surely as it is losing the battle against tax resisters.

Phelps is dead wrong in believing the IRS can solve—or even help reduce—the problem. Turning to government is no substitute for self-control. The colleges and universities of the NCAA must determine for themselves if they have a problem then how to solve it.

A new game in Nicaragua

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (NEA) — Americans aren't the only ones gearing up to vote. Nicaraguans are now expecting to go to the polls two days earlier — on Sunday, Nov. 4. The timing is no coincidence.

But first some background: The Nicaraguan election has been a long time in the preparation — too long, some would say.

A voter registration campaign began in April and ended in July with more than 1.5 million Nicaraguans on the rolls, 93 percent of those believed to be eligible.

The voters will select a president, a vice president and a 90-member National Assembly, whose first order of business will be the writing of a new constitution.

Once the new government is installed, the revolutionary junta and appointive Council of State that have been running things for the last five years will be dissolved.

Seven political parties are now participating. They include the dominant Sandinista Front, the Communists and two other Marxist groups to the left of the Sandinistas, and liberals and conservatives to the right.

Not yet involved but still talking is a coalition, favored by the United States, of three other parties. It has, however, a designated presidential candidate. He is Arturo Cruz, a former member of the revolutionary government and ambassador to the United States who broke with the Sandinista leadership in November of 1981.

Cruz and the coalition say power, isn't really at stake as the election is now set up, that the Sandinistas intend to keep control regardless of the vote. As a price of participation, the coalition demands changes.

These have included freer access to the media in campaigning, lifting of the state of emergency and postponement of the election. Early on, the parties also wanted negotiations with guerrilla forces fighting the Sandinistas, but they dropped that one.

The Sandinistas, who say the election is to "institutionalize" the revolution, have been willing to compromise to an extent. But there are limits, such as the state of emergency, which can be lifted, the government says, only "when the United States stops the illegal war that it is waging against Nicaragua."

The date would appear to be another. It has an involved history.

For four years the Sandinistas have been under unremitting pressure from Washington to hold elections as they promised the Organization of American States on the eve of the overthrow of Somoza. As Washington sees it, they reneged by not following through immediately.

The Sandinistas argue that conditions at the time ruled out meaningful elections. First, order had to be restored and the public educated. Somoza's Nicaragua had a literacy rate of 52 percent.

For four years they refused to set a specific date, promising only "by 1985." The general expectation here was that it would be called for February, traditional in Nicaragua's limited experience with democratic processes.

Election officials prefer not to talk about the reason for the advance to Nov. 4. But they don't deny a connection with Nov. 6.

There appears to be real concern here that if Reagan is returned to office, especially on a landslide vote, his administration will escalate the pressure on Nicaragua. Direct military action is not being ruled out.

The intent here is to be in first with a vote that would, as Washington has long demanded, establish an elected government. To make sure the word gets out, a preliminary reporting system is being set up to report provisional results on Nov. 5 — the day before Americans go to the polls.

It's not over yet. Anything could happen between now and Nov. 4. But whatever does, it will be a changed game here.

Today in History

Today is Friday, Oct. 26, the 300th day of 1984. There are 66 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Oct. 26, 1881, gunfighter Wyatt Earp, his two brothers and "Doc" Holliday shot it out with Ike Clanton's gang at the OK Corral in Tombstone, Ariz. Three of Clanton's cohorts were killed, and Earp's two brothers were wounded.

On this date: Five years ago: The president of South Korea, Park Chung-Hee, was shot to death along with his bodyguard by the head of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency, Kim Jae-Kyu.

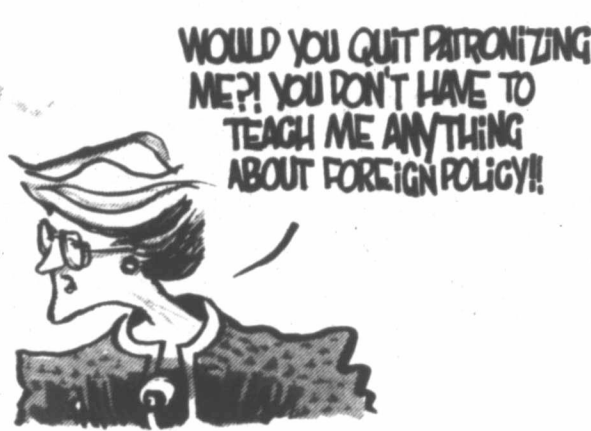

One year ago: The first Americans to evacuate Grenada following the U.S.-led invasion arrived in South Carolina, expressing their gratitude and saying they supported President Reagan's decision.

Today's birthdays: The archbishop of Philadelphia, Cardinal John Krol, is 74. The president of France, Francois Mitterrand, is 68. Actress Jaelyn Smith is 37.

Thought for today: "Dawn comes slowly, but dusk is rapid."

Health industry responding

Periodic political campaigns bring into focus some unfinished business, frequently helpfully.

In open dispute is the degree to which President Reagan and - or Mr. Mondale intend to cut Medicare, but both candidates are willing to put the squeeze on doctors and hospitals.

Mondale's deficit - reduction program proposes a $12 billion Medicare cut.

President Reagan's Medicare - reduction program is already in place and working.

Eleven cents of every dollar Americans spent last year went for medical care. Our combined medical bill came to $355.4 billion. For each man, woman and child and us that's $1,459.

Seventy - three percent of all medical bills were paid for "indirectly" - by government or by insurance companies.

Both government and insurance companies, make no mistake, collected the money from us in taxes or in premiums.

But we are "not doing nothing" about soaring health - care costs.

The cost of medical care increased 11 percent in 1982, 6.4 percent in 1983; this year 4.3 percent, the least in ten years!

Since Medicare decreed a strict schedule of fees for specific ailments, the average length of stays for all hospital patients has declined dramatically.

As a result, health insurance costs which had been increasing 20 percent a year for five years will increase less than 10 percent this year. In Iowa, Blue Cross - Blue Shield has reduced its premium rate for the first time in 40 years.

And so far there is no evidence that patients are hurt by having fewer tests and earlier dismissals and more use of outpatient facilities.

Hospitals are being forced to become innovative.

Doctors are required to be innovative.

Americans are at their best when they have to be. Confronted by a free - and - easy medical system which threatened itself with bankruptcy, we have doctors voluntarily freezing fees, hospitals voluntarily sharing equipment, subcontracting maintenance, instituting other efficiencies.

If the political debate shed more heat than light on the subject, it did serve to terrify professionals with the realization that the only viable alternative to bankruptcy is self - discipline.

Mondale hasn't learned from the past

BY CHARLES VAN EATON

Walter Mondale began his debate with President Reagan by saying, "One of the key tests of leadership is whether one sees clearly the key problems confronted by our nation." Mr. Mondale is absolutely right. Therefore I ask whether or not he sees clearly the key economic problems confronted by our nation. I'm sure that he thinks he does. But I'm convinced that his statements on the campaign trail as well as his arguments during the debate support the opposite conclusion. He does not understand the future precisely because he doesn't understand the past.

At this very moment in history, the U.S. economy (which means the people of the United States in their role as workers, consumers, creditors and debtors) is still struggling to escape the burden generated by the incredibly wrong-headed economic policies adopted during the 1970's. While these burdens still rest on all sectors of the economy, it is my professional opinion that two key sectors - agriculture and banking - are still so close to the margin that the final verdict on their ultimate fate is still uncertain.

The principal economic policies which framed the decade of the 1970's were not exclusively those of Carter - Mondale. They were also those of Nixon - Agnew and Ford - Rockefeller. Indeed when President Ford chose to retain price controls on domestic crude oil when he had the opportunity to eliminate them, he was merely affirming the validity of those values which formed the foundation of virtually all government economic intervention during that period. Therefore it was pure political rhetoric, not rational discourse, when, during the 1980 presidential campaign, Mr. Ford charged that he had left Carter a healthy economy and Carter "blew it". In 1976 the economy wasn't healthy, it was sick. It's just that the symptoms had not yet fully emerged. Economic nonsense, after all, is not the private property of only one of our major political parties.

The really important thing which has happened under Ronald Reagan - and not always with the full support of his fellow Republicans - is that he had begun to reverse the thrust of those policies which characterized the 70's. But there's still a long way to go and a heavy price yet to be paid before it's over.

What were the principal policies of the 1970's? In terms of broad categories there were three: Official encouragement of a monetary policy aimed exclusively at keeping interest rates low; a decided preference for controls rather than markets; and political encouragement of and federal budget accommodations for the perverse mind - set which Sociologist Daniel Bell has termed "the sense of rising entitlements."

Moreover no one of these policy categories was independent of the others. Together they formed a role in affirming the political conviction of our age: Government is obliged to solve every economic problem - real or imagined - which might befall mankind. Both as a matter of political philosophy and as a matter of record (he was, after all, in the middle of it all as, first, a U.S. Senator and, finally, Vice - President) the 1970's was a Walter Mondale decade. Its policies were his policies then and, in general terms, are still his policies now.

So what did these policies yield? A decade of accelerating inflation; rising interest rates; declining productivity; a continual decline in the quantity of directly productive capital (machines, tools, equipment, etc.) invested per worker; a sustained loss in the competitiveness of American products abroad; an increasing dependence on imported oil as domestic crude oil price controls and refinery entitlements distorted the flow of capital from domestic crude oil production to oil refining, while at the same time acting as a subsidy to the OPEC oil cartel and flooding the American banking system with unstable "petrodollars"; an increase in the level of farm debt to such a level that only greater and greater rates of inflation would rescue farmers; an exacerbation of all the pathologies of poverty - broken families and hopeless youth. And this list is far from exhaustive.

It was not an accident. Everything which happened to the U.S. economy in the 1970's - the decade which gave us the term "stagflation" - followed necessarily from the interventionist policies happily adopted and applauded by both a Republican and Democratic White House and a Democratic Congress. Furthermore, throughout the decade, economists of the status of Milton Friedman issued warning after warning to no avail.

In 1980 Ronald Reagan based his entire campaign on the promise to follow radically different policies. He promised to eliminate price controls on domestic crude oil. The oil industry responded in textbook fashion and played its capital investment pathology out to a logical conclusion with predictable and sadly necessary results - including, in some cases, bankruptcy. He promised to support monetary and tax policies which could break the back of inflation. He did and it's working.

But that's enough! Reagan's economic policies - as painful as they have been for some industries - are the only policies which have the slightest chance of assuring that the economic disaster which was the 1970's need never be repeated. And it is precisely these policies which Walter Mondale wants to reverse.

Mr. Mondale claims that only he is talking about the future. He is talking about the future - a future which would surely be a repeat of the decade of stagflation. For Mondale the past is his future.

THOMAS BAREFOOT—Scheduled to die Tuesday.

Three cadets won't appeal suspension

BRYAN, Texas (AP) — Three Texas A&M University students will not appeal their suspension from school in connection with the Aug. 30 hazing death of a Corps of Cadets member, according to a letter released by their attorney.

Tony D'Alessandro and Jason Miles, both of Houston, and Louis Fancher III, of San Antonio, said they do not want to provide an opportunity for further embarrassment of the corps, according to a letter dated Monday and sent to Bill Kibler, the university's assistant director of student affairs.

A preliminary hearing for D'Alessandro, Miles, Fancher and a former corps member, Gabriel Cuadra, was scheduled today on criminal charges stemming from the death of Bruce Goodrich, a 20-year-old transfer student from Webster, N.Y., who had joined the corps.

In their letter to Kibler, the three juniors said, "While we cannot accept responsibility for the tragedy that occurred, neither can we accept responsibility for initiating an action which has the potential to subject the Texas A&M Corps of Cadets and our classmates to further public misunderstanding."

"Notwithstanding the personal anguish involved in such a decision, our experiences over the last few weeks have convinced us that almost no action on our part will be articulated or subsequently reported, without providing opportunity to depreciate the meanings and values of a group which has contributed so much to our state and country for 108 years," the letter said.

All three cadets signed the letter, which was released Thursday by the Bryan-College Station Eagle by the cadets' attorney, W.W. Vance of Bryan.

The three were suspended last week until the 1985 fall semester. Under university regulations, readmission must be approved by the Office of Student Affairs.

Cuadra, a senior from Houston, was also disciplined, but the extent of the action taken against him has not been made public. Cuadra could have been suspended for an indefinite period of time or expelled from the university.

According to police reports, the three juniors roused Goodrich and another transfer student from their beds early Aug. 30 and forced them to perform "motivational exercises" including situps and pushups.

DA: no plans to prosecute nurse again

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Kerr County District Attorney Ron Sutton says convicted baby killer and former nurse Genene Jones wouldn't serve a day longer in prison if she were convicted on seven pending child injury charges, so he won't prosecute her on them.

Sutton said Thursday he likely will move later to dismiss the child injury charges filed in connection with alleged injuries to children while Ms. Jones was working at the Kerrville Pediatric Clinic.

Ms. Jones, 34, was convicted Wednesday of child injury in connection with the Jan. 9, 1982, injection of four-week-old Rolando Santos with an overdose of a blood-thinner.

The injury occurred while Ms. Jones was a nurse at Medical Center Hospital in San Antonio, where the Santos baby was hospitalized for pneumonia.

The former licensed vocational nurse was convicted in Georgetown earlier this year of murder in the September 1982 death of Chelsea McClellan. The 15-month-old Kerrville girl died after she was given an injection of a muscle relaxant at the Kerrville clinic.

Ms. Jones faces a 99-year term on the murder charge and a simultaneous 60 year sentence for the injury conviction.

Sutton's decision may mean Ms. Jones will face no further charges in the suspicious injuries and deaths of dozens of children in San Antonio.

A grand jury is continuing its investigation of infant deaths at Medical Center from 1978 to 1982, when more than 120 infants died mysteriously and while Ms. Jones was working there.

However, prosecutors in San Antonio have said they do not expect further indictments against Ms. Jones in connection with the Medical Center investigation.

Sutton, reached by telephone at his office in Junction, Texas, said he doesn't think another trial is necessary.

"With the conviction we have on her already, it would not add anything to her sentence," he said.

The 60-year and 99-year terms will run concurrently, and any subsequent terms, Sutton said, also would run simultaneously.

"She would not serve a day longer even if she was convicted on all counts," he said.

Governor considering Barefoot reprieve

AUSTIN (AP) — The family of death row inmate Thomas Barefoot, denied a reprieve recommendation by the Board of Pardons and Paroles, is looking today to Gov. Mark White to postpone the execution scheduled for Tuesday.

Barefoot's brother, cousin and lawyer made their appeal to the board Thursday, then turned to White for help before the board's 3-2 vote not to recommend White grant a 60-day reprieve.

White can grant a 30-day postponement. Ann Arnold, White's press secretary, said the governor would review the records during the weekend and make a decision Monday. An appeal also is pending before the U.S. Supreme Court.

The Board of Pardons and Paroles vote turned down board member Connie Jackson's motion that a 60-day reprieve be granted because the case is in the courts. Ms. Jackson was the only board member to comment before the vote.

Earlier Thursday, Larry Barefoot told the board his brother's execution should not take place because "everybody can make a turnaround."

"From our conversation the other day, as far as future predictability of violence, Andy is a person that can re-enter society safely one of these days, I know. I'm certain of it," Larry Barefoot, of Charleston, Miss., said of his Tuesday visit with his brother.

"I've grown up with him. I know his actions. I know his ways and means. He has been a (problem) in the past, but everybody can make a turnaround," he said.

Thomas Barefoot was convicted of capital murder in the Aug. 7, 1978, shooting death of Central Texas policeman Carl LeVin. Prosecutors said Barefoot feared the Harker Heights officer would discover he was wanted in New Mexico on charges that he raped a 3-year-old girl and escaped jail.

Barefoot had served prison terms in Louisiana for cocaine possession and in Oklahoma for possession of a sawed-off shotgun.

Carolyn Garcia of Houston, Barefoot's lawyer, said a reprieve of any length would allow her to seek court hearings concerning psychiatric testimony.

Ms. Garcia said prosecutors failed to tell the defense that Dr. James Trost of New Mexico, who examined Barefoot, had refused to testify as to whether Barefoot would commit future violent acts. Two other two doctors — who reviewed Trost's records but did not examine Barefoot — made that prediction at the trial.

Ms. Garcia criticized their work as "remote control diagnosis." "Before we take another human life, which will not restore the life of Officer LeVin, is it not fair that we exhaust all questions that deal with whether that death penalty was fairly assessed," Ms. Garcia said.

Mike Barefoot of Houston, Thomas Barefoot's first cousin, also appealed to board members Thursday, asking "that you give the lawyers more time."

District Attorney Arthur Eads of Belton, who prosecuted Barefoot, told the board, "Suffice it to say this. There is no issue presented to this board this morning which has not been litigated and presented in our court system."

Tuesday's scheduled execution is the fifth death date set by courts for Barefoot. He came within 11 hours of the lethal injection on Jan. 24, 1983 before the U.S. Supreme Court stopped the execution in order to review the handling of last-minute appeals.

Columnist sees Reagan election win

HOUSTON (AP) — The Nov. 6 election is "not a question of who will win" but how President Reagan's victory will affect the makeup of the Congress, Pulitzer Prize-winning columnist William Safire says.

The New York Times columnist also predicted Americans will do a lot of ticket-splitting between Democratic candidate Walter Mondale and Reagan.

"It could be that the Republicans will lose several Senate seats and not get the 30-35 House seats they need," Safire told more than 400 Houston business people Thursday at a symposium sponsored by the Houston Chronicle.

The result would be a "President with a personal mandate and a Congress pretty much ready to paralyze" his efforts, he said.

Once Reagan gets into his second term, the White House would break into two camps — a conservative faction that wants to "let Reagan be Reagan," and the other a more moderate group that would favor tax increases, Safire said.

"A great mystery is what kind of second term it will be," he said. "Reagan has given no indication which way he'll go."

Democrats, meanwhile, will become resurgent when the economy takes a routine cyclical downturn, setting the stage for a close presidential election in 1988.

Safire predicted New York Gov. Mario Cuomo would emerge as the Democratic frontrunner for the White House in 1988, with Sens. Dale Bumpers of Arkansas and Gary Hart of Colorado making bids.

On the GOP side, 1988 loomed as a "real donnybrook," with George Bush the man to beat for the nomination. Others he'll have to contend with would be Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, retiring Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee and Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, he said. Safire noted, however, that no House member has gone directly to the White House since James Polk was elected President in 1844.

A darkhorse candidate for the Republicans would be United Nations Ambassador Jeanne Kirkpatrick, Safire said, who could end up the GOP "trump card."

Safire said Mondale lost his any momentum going into the election by failing to deliver a knockout punch in last week's second debate with Reagan.

But he said the real failing of the Mondale candidacy came at the Democratic convention in San Francisco where "the media was dominated by Jesse Jackson."

Report says groundwater pollution increasing

WASHINGTON (AP) — A move to bury chemical wastes instead of dumping them into lakes and rivers produced cleaner surface water but is now threatening supplies of underground drinking water, government scientists say.

Since waste burial began in the early 1970s, an ever growing number of water wells are being closed for health reasons because of chemical pollution working its way, slowly but steadily, into the nation's hidden water reserves, according to a new government study.

"What is going into the ground now was previously dumped into a river, lake or the ocean in the 1960s," said Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn.

"In a sense, we have been chasing the waste from one disposal method to another, and underground disposal has become the preferred method — because groundwater is the only water resource not specifically protected by federal law."

Durenberger offered the analysis Thursday as he released a new study by the Office of Technology Assessment showing that chemical contamination of underground water supplies — the source of drinking water for half the nation's population — has become a major pollution problem.

At least 1,000 wells have been declared unsafe for humans, and thousands more have measurable levels of chemical pollution.

—In the San Gabriel Valley of California, 39 public wells serving 400,000 people had to be shut down because of contamination by trichloroethylene, an industrial solvent that causes cancer and affects the liver, kidneys and nervous system.

—In Florida, Durenberger said, 681 wells were found to contain the pesticide ethylene dibromide, a potent carcinogen. State officials in Tallahassee told The Associated Press on Thursday that the list has since expanded to 724, and residents have been advised not to drink water from those wells.

—Public wells have been closed in 22 cities in Massachusetts, 16 in Connecticut, 25 in Pennsylvania and 22 in New York, Durenberger said. Some 500 private wells were recently closed on Long Island, and 150 wells have been closed in Minnesota.

The study by OTA, a non-partisan arm of Congress, confirms and elaborates on earlier studies reaching similar conclusions. It says the problem now involves only "a small portion" of the nation's total water supply, estimating that 1 to 2 percent of the nation's underground water is contaminated.

Scientists discover the virus that causes major type of hepatitis

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time, scientists have identified the virus that causes a major type of hepatitis, a significant step in the battle to check the infectious liver disease.

Government researchers said the virus causes so-called non-A, non-B hepatitis, which has become the main form of the disease transmitted through blood transfusions.

The findings should lead to a screening test to identify contaminated blood supplies and eventually could lead to finding a preventive vaccine, as are available for other forms of hepatitis.

Researchers from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration and the National Institutes of Health said the viral agent is a retrovirus, one of a family of viruses that is increasingly being implicated in a number of human diseases.

Along with various animal diseases, members of this family cause a number of human diseases, including rare forms of cancer and acquired immune deficiency syndrome — AIDS.

In a report published today in the Oct. 27 issue of The Lancet, a British medical journal, researchers say they found evidence of the non-A, non-B hepatitis virus in human serum specimen from people known to have the disease and in two samples of plasma-derived blood products.

Dr. Robert J. Gerety of the FDA said in an interview that in all cases, the researchers detected an enzyme called reverse transcriptase in the samples. This enzyme is necessary for retroviruses to duplicate and is a strong indication of their presence.

he added. Gerety said the researchers also saw the actual virus in other tests and that it looks like a retrovirus and not those that cause other kinds of hepatitis.

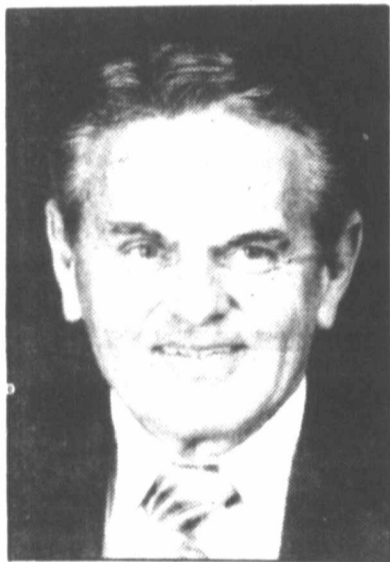

Non-A, non-B hepatitis accounts for 90 percent of the hepatitis transmitted through transfusions of blood and blood products. This type also is responsible for about 110,000 cases annually, or about 40 percent of all hepatitis cases in the United States.

Gerety said the virus in some ways resembles the retrovirus believed to cause AIDS. Some people at high risk of getting AIDS show evidence of unusually high exposures to other disease viruses, including forms of hepatitis.

It is possible the newly identified hepatitis virus might play a remote role in making some people more susceptible to the AIDS virus, called human T-cell leukemia virus or HTLV-III, but that there is not yet any evidence of this, he said.

Because the hepatitis and AIDS viruses are in the same family, he said, researchers working on both diseases are exchanging information on the germs.

The research team that identified the virus includes Belinda Seto of the FDA, William G. Coleman Jr., of the National Institutes of Health, and Sten Iwarson of the University of Goteborg in Sweden, a visiting researcher at the FDA lab.

In February 1983 they were moved back to South Africa where McClintock has been engineer for the Ciskei Department of Transportation and Aviation.

The public is invited to attend the program.

Relations with Iraq a risk

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Sometime after the election, the Reagan administration is likely to restore relations with Iraq, which until 2½ years ago was on the U.S. terrorist list but is now credited by many analysts with following a more moderate course.

The move, acknowledged privately by administration officials, carries potential advantages but also risks. It could increase U.S. influence in the Arab world, but it also might antagonize Iran and drive that bigger and more strategic country into the arms of the Soviet Union.

Would a restoration of U.S. diplomatic ties improve prospects for peace between the Arabs and Israel? No one knows for certain.

But Fred Axelgard, a Middle East specialist at the Center for Strategic and International Studies at Georgetown University, thinks it could bolster a new U.S. peace initiative should President Reagan win a second term.

Apart from being the most dramatic diplomatic step in years, he said, it would enhance U.S. credibility with Jordan, Egypt and Saudi Arabia and their backing for American peace efforts.

"It certainly would be quite a coup for the United States," said Shireen T. Hunter, deputy director of Middle East projects at the Georgetown center, of the prospect of renewed ties.

Along with most of the Arab countries, Iraq broke relations with the United States after Israel defeated Egypt, Jordan and Syria in the 1967 Six-Day War.

An AP News Analysis

For the last four years, Iraq has been bogged down in a war with Iran. It now appears to be gaining the upper hand militarily. The Soviet Union and France are Iraq's principal weapons suppliers, while the United States maintains an officially neutral stance. In fact, last March, the administration accused Iraq of using chemical weapons against Iranian troops.

And yet, the Agriculture Department this month announced a $633 million package of credit guarantees for Iraq to buy American farm commodities with up to three years to repay. Bell Helicopter Textron Inc., of Fort Worth, Texas, is discussing the purchase of up to 45 civilian helicopters without objection from the State Department.

President Saddam Hussein disclosed two weeks ago he is ready to consider resuming normal relations with the United States.

For years, Iraq rivaled only Libya in its hostility to Israel. It sent troops into every war with the Jewish state although it was never attacked. And, until the Osirac reactor was leveled in 1981, Iraq may have been building an atomic bomb — probably intended, according to the Israeli government, for use against Israel.

And yet, only this week, Iraq abstained when Iran tried to deny Israel its credentials to the U.N. General Assembly. A separate Palestinian bureau in Baghdad has been disbanded. An ancient synagogue is being restored, according to Christine Helms, a Brookings Institution scholar who has just written a book on Iraq.

More Border Patrol agents

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — U.S. Border Patrol stations in the state will be beefed up by 70 new agents to help stem the flow of illegal aliens into southern New Mexico, an agency official said.

The new agents, to be added in the coming year, will join a staff of 109 already covering the southern third of New Mexico, said Larry Richardson, chief of the patrol's El Paso sector.

The 400 agents currently patrolling the entire El Paso sector apprehend about 20,000 illegal aliens a month, but Richardson said he did not know how many avoid detection.

"We're buying some time with these resources for the political system to do something," he said Tuesday.

More agents will allow the Border Patrol to increase traffic checks on highways in southern New Mexico in an effort to shut down routes smugglers have used to circumvent existing checkpoints, Richardson said.

"After that, it depends on the smuggling," he said.

The New Mexico border entry with Mexico is "all vulnerable" to entry by illegal aliens, but most illegal aliens in the state enter through El Paso, Richardson said. As long as they can come through El Paso, "they're not going to enter through the desert," he said.

The El Paso sector includes stations in Alamogordo, Carlsbad, Deming, Las Cruces, Lordsburg and Truth or Consequences.

'DILLO WARS'—The armadillo, Texas' official state mascot, often becomes the state's pest in the fall. Experts say the armadillos can tunnel at speeds up to 12 feet an hour, in their search for a meal. Not much can be done about the tunneling creatures, though many have tried to rid their yards of the pests. (AP Laserphoto)

Armadillos may be Texas' pet, but a pest in the fall

By THOM MARSHALL
Dallas Times Herald

DALLAS (AP) — Armadillo fighting is a seasonal thing, much like kite flying in spring, except that kite fliers enjoy what they do and most armadillo fighters would prefer not to battle the little critters to protect their yards.

"I feel sorry for people that get them," said Agnes Johnson of Mesquite. "Anybody who has real nice grass, it'd be a shame." Ms. Johnson says she doesn't have much lawn for armadillos to damage but "they just come dig up all by flower beds."

And Ricky Sramek, Dallas County wildlife control specialist, says he gets calls about armadillos in late summer and early autumn every year.

Sramek says it's because armadillos like to eat cutworms. And when the untamed countryside has been baked hard and dry by the relentless summer sun, armadillos come to dig up the cutworms in homeowners' soft, watered lawns. And dig they do. Experts say they can tunnel at speeds up to 12 feet per hour.

Virginia Miles lives in Kessler Park, only five minutes from downtown Dallas, and yet she, too, often suffers from apparent armadillos. Apparent because she hasn't actually seen them at work.

But, she says, "I have some trenches in my yard. I stood out there and almost cried. One of them is 18 inches long and 4 to 6 inches wide and 6 inches deep. Another one is in two sections, but it takes up about as much space."

Like many homeowners, Ms. Miles takes pride in her lawn. Works at it.

"I've sat up nights watering it to keep it alive."

"And then along comes an armadillo in the dead of night and...What's a person to do?"

Well, not much, actually.

Sramek says. "They're so dumb they are hard to trap. They may walk up to the back of the trap and smell the bait but not be smart enough to go around to the front of the trap."

So that doesn't work too well.

"If you live out in the country you can get them with your shotgun."

Municipalities, however, have strict laws about discharging firearms, so that's out.

"You can spotlight them and club them if you stay up that late."

Armadillos are nocturnal, and they may not come around where you're guarding until the wee hours.

Said Ms. Johnson, "I'm 65 years old, and I don't feel like going out there all night and trying to hit them with a shovel."

Can this be? Shoot them; club them; hit them with a shovel?

Amazing. This is the same nine-banded armadillo (Dasyus novemcinctus) that is the loved and lauded official state mascot. He's proudly displayed on T-shirts and posters throughout Texas. He's come to mean something, symbolwise; like the Alamo means something; like Tom Landry means something. The armadillo stands for good times and rednecks and longnecks and country music and chili.

Texans weren't the first to elevate the armadillo to lore status. The creature is found frequently in folk art and handicrafts in Latin America. In Brazil, where there are 10 species of the creature, ranging in size from a tiny six inches up to a hefty 100 pounds, some natives believe the first humans came to earth when they fell through a big armadillo hole in the sky. Other tribes depict the armadillo as one of four animals that support the universe.

According to backwoods legends in central Brazil, if a stroller happens to see a six-banded armadillo with dirt on its back, a friend or relative will be dead when that person returns home. Some Brazilians believe a cure for rheumatism and arthritis can be made by combining rendered armadillo fat with sugar-cane rum.

If that's a bit difficult to believe, think how much trouble Brazilians might have understanding this: In 1968, Neiman-Marcus Christmas catalog offered beribboned armadillos for sale. The ad read: "Armadillo, anyone?"

Lady Bird stumps for wildflower center

HOUSTON (AP) — Former First Lady Lady Bird Johnson says the National Wildflower Center she helped start was designed to encourage citizens to plant wildflowers "so they'll still be with us in our world to preserve this heritage that our ancestors enjoyed."

"This world is filling up with folks. All those fields I (used to) enjoy are grids of houses, shopping centers and lots and lots of highways," Mrs. Johnson said at a fundraiser for the center.

The widow of Lyndon B. Johnson said the wildflower center, located northeast of Austin, will also serve as a clearing house and research center for the 25,000 varieties of wildflowers found in the United States.

"We're trying to compact all that information and make it available to all who care — like developers and park people," Mrs. Johnson said, adding that "research is at the very heart of this (center). It's the nuts and bolts of it."

Mrs. Johnson, who said the center has developed 30 test wildflower plots across the state, said the center's employees learned about wildflower planting patterns during September, when the grounds were hard and dry.

"In October, the rains came, and we praised the Lord and were happy, but then they (the rains) kept coming," Mrs. Johnson said.

U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, a Houston Democrat who joined Mrs. Johnson at the media briefing, said he expects Congress will pass a bill next year that will allocate one-quarter of 1 percent of the federal highway landscaping funds for use in wildflower planting.

Now it's time for a 'she' bear

QUILTED JESSICA BEAR — She'll steal your heart away! Squeezeably soft and lovable to the end, Jessica Bear is made of pre-quilted, unbleached muslin. She's adorned with ruffled lace and ribbon, and has candlewicked hearts on her muzzle and tummy.

By STEVIE BALDWIN
I've known many bears in my time — Pooh, Panda, Smokey, Yogi, Teddy — and the list goes on. These famous bears lead exciting lives and do all the heroic things "real men" supposedly do. Please note that such bears do NOT eat quiche.

What I'm wondering is, why don't we ever hear of "she" bears? In a day of female vice presidential candidates and prime ministers, you would think we could find a noteworthy "she" bear. Since I didn't know of any, I made my own — the quilted Jessica Bear. Jessica Bear is made of pre-quilted, unbleached muslin. She's adorned with ruffled lace and ribbon, and has candlewicked hearts on her muzzle and tummy.

Jessica Bear is a charming addition to the bear population and can be made quite easily, using our detailed plans. They include a materials list, illustrations, step-by-step sewing and candlewicking instructions, and full-size patterns.

To receive plans for the Quilted Jessica Bear, simply specify Project No. 1566-2 and send $3.95. Don't forget to order your copy of our 1985 color catalog! It features hundreds of additional craft and woodworking items you can make in your own home, and is available for only $2.95.

Mail your order to Makin' Things, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla., 74008.

To begin, cut a four-inch heart from fuchsia-colored material, and cut enough lace to outline it. Place the heart and lace right sides together and stitch around the edges. Press the lace outward and adorn the edges of the heart with candlewicked stitches. Make a two-inch heart in the same manner, but do not outline it with lace.

Cut two circular body pieces, approximately 10 inches in diameter, from pre-quilted muslin. Attach the larger heart to the right side of one of the pieces, using iron-on fusing material. This piece will be the body front.

Cut eight 8-inch-long arm-leg pieces, each curved slightly at one end. Stitch the pieces together in pairs with right sides together, leaving the straight edges open. Turn the arms and legs right side out and stuff each with fiberfill.

Place the front body piece right side up on a flat surface. Align the straight edges of the arms and legs with the edges of the body, and baste. Place the back body piece right side down on top of this assembly. Stitch around the outer edges, leaving an opening at the neck. Turn the body right side out and stuff.

Cut two back ears from pre-quilted muslin, and cut two front ears from plain muslin. Stitch a back and front ear right sides together, leaving the straight edges unstitched. Turn the ear right side out. Make a second ear in the same manner.

Cut two 10-inch-diameter circular head pieces from pre-quilted muslin. Place one head piece right side up on a flat surface. Baste the ears in place. Place the remaining head piece right side down on top, sandwiching the ears between the two head pieces. Stitch around the head, leaving an opening at the neck. Turn the head assembly right side out and stuff with fiberfill.

Cut a 3½ x 5-inch heart-shaped muzzle front from pre-quilted muslin and cut an identical muzzle back from plain muslin. Attach the remaining heart to the muzzle front. Stitch the muzzle pieces right sides together, leaving a small opening. Turn right side out and stuff.

Whipstitch a pink felt tongue to the back of the muzzle, underneath the scalloped edge. Whipstitch the nose to the face, leaving the scalloped edge unstitched.

Add black coat-button eyes and tie lengths of ruffled lace and ribbon around the neck. Jessica Bear is now ready to represent womankind in the bear world.

Give the United Way.

Homemakers clubs plan Achievement Day

Polly's Pointers

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — How long can ground meat be kept in the refrigerator after bringing it home from the store? — MARY LOU

DEAR MARY LOU — Ground meat should be used within 24 hours of purchase. Solid cuts of meat, such as steaks, chops and roasts, can be kept refrigerated for two to three days. Fresh chicken should be used within one to two days. Meat that has been frozen and thawed should be kept refrigerated no more than one to two days after thawing. Follow these guidelines and you'll always be assured of fresh, high-quality meat. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — When I strip any floor that requires liquid wax, I put two coats on, let it dry thoroughly, then polish and buff with a floor polisher. The longer you buff, the harder the shine. Then, I can just damp mop and buff again weekly. My floors always look lovely with no wax buildup. They are shiny, but not slippery. — MRS. S.M.

DEAR POLLY — I always seem to poke a hole in or get a run in nylons that do not have reinforced toes, especially if I walk some distance. Today I thought of a great solution to this problem. I donned a pair of peds before putting on my nylons. A long walk caused no runs or holes. — MRS. E.D.

DEAR POLLY — To keep the color in new jeans and help prevent fading, soak the jeans in vinegar water for 30 minutes, then wash them in hot water. — P.H.S.

DEAR POLLY — For safety, I insert the tips of my sharp kitchen knives into corks before storing them in my utensil drawer. — KAREN

Canning fruits and pickles is easy and fun with the complete directions in Polly's newsletter "Canning Fruits, Tomatoes and Pickles." It even includes recipes for dilled green beans and fruit butters. Send $1 for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1216, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to include the title.

DEAR POLLY — Is there anything one can soak dentures in that is less expensive than commercial denture cleaners? — MARIA

DEAR MARIA — A couple of tablespoons of baking soda dissolved in water will be helpful in cleaning dentures and freshening them. Brush the dentures well after soaking. It may not do as good a job as the commercial cleaners, but give it a try and see what kind of results you get. You also can brush natural teeth with baking soda. It's gentle and non-abrasive, preserving precious tooth enamel. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — I have found that I can save money when using teabags. You usually can get more than one cup from each bag, so I wrap the teabag in a sandwich bag after using it and put it in the freezer. Then when I want another cup of tea, I use the frozen bag. It's good as new. — V.M.

Polly will send you a Polly Dollar ($1.00) if she uses your favorite Pointer, Peeve or Problem in her column. Write POLLY'S POINTERS in care of this newspaper.

Gena on Genealogy

By GENA WALLS

In numerous columns I have stressed to you as a researcher to search every possible source. I could have spared myself many hours of work over the past four years had I taken my own advice.

I have been trying to locate a great "Aunt Bettie" and her sister "Aunt Hettie" without success. I knew that the parents were divorced prior to 1900 but was not interested in the details of the divorce. Then in trying to fill in all the blank spaces, I checked the record and found that the wife asked for custody of the children: "Mary Elizabeth" and "Harriet Sopharano." Rechecking the census, I found both girls and had "found" them in the census the first time but I thought I was dealing with different people. Always check all the available records. You can always decide to let the skeleton stay in the closet!

Most NEBRASKANS today can trace their family back to Germany or the Scandinavian countries after the Homestead Act of 1862. Many of these settlers went first to California and Oregon but had difficulty adjusting to the mountains and returned to make a new home in Nebraska. For general information contact Nebraska State Historical Society, 1500 R. Street, Lincoln, Neb., 68508.

NEVADA was populated during the 1849 gold rush to California and later by Mormon pioneers reaching the Great Salt Lake. Many Mexicans stayed in the territory after it was ceded to the U.S. after the Mexican War in 1848. Nevada has a rich heritage of many different cultures and can be rewarding in locating ancestors that "went in search of gold." That phrase did not always mean "California."

For information write Northeastern Nevada Genealogical Society, P.O. Box 1903, Elko, Nev., 89801. If the society is not able to assist, they will suggest another source.

Remember that all - important self-addressed, stamped envelope.

SPOOKS, GOBLINS AND witches are to be flying about at the annual Methodist Senior High Spook House Saturday, Oct. 27, from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. The event is scheduled in the youth building of the First United Methodist Church across from the Post Office. A small admission fee will be charged and a treat will be given to each visitor after the tour of the Spook House.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: How important is it for a woman to know all about her husband's past? This is the second marriage for both of us. I'm 51 and he's 59, and we're happy as a pair of teen-agers. I've talked and talked about my past, and there is nothing he doesn't know about me.

Him? He hasn't told me anything. When I ask him to tell me more about himself, he says his past is none of my business. He treats me like a queen and gives me everything I want, but don't you think he should tell me if there's anything I ought to know? After all, I am his wife.

LIVING WITH A MYSTERY MAN

DEAR LIVING: If you're happy and being treated like a queen, don't question his past. As his wife, however, you should be made aware of a few facts: Is he wanted by the police? Does he have any large outstanding debts? Does he have any illegitimate children who might come out of the woodwork and say, "Hi, Dad?" Or worse yet, one or more wives?

If he can answer no to all of the above, cover him up; he might catch pneumonia.

DEAR ABBY: Poems fascinate me, so I clip and keep them. I just came across this one from your column. It's at least six or seven years old. If you agree that it's still appropriate, I hope you'll run it. Thanks, Abby.

ADA M. WHITMARSH,
BINGHAMPTON, N.Y.

DEAR ADA: Here it is:

DEAR ABBY: My name is Steve Zondlak and I am 12. I wrote a poem. If you like it, you may keep it.

NICKY CRUZ

Ex-gang boss to speak here this weekend

Nicky Cruz, author of the best-selling book "Run, Baby, Run," will be speaking at the M. K. Brown Auditorium at 7 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Special music will be presented both nights, with Cruz giving his testimony Sunday night.

Cruz, author of several other books, also has made a number of television appearances and produced several TV specials, the most recent entitled "Lonely, But Never Alone."

Cruz was one of 18 children in a family in Puerto Rico. His parents were spiritualists who made their living as mediums and sorcerers, contacting spirits from the dead. When he was eight, his mother in a spiritualistic trance called him a "son of Satan" and hurled curses at him.

Rejected by his parents while young, Cruz was sent at age 15 to live with one of his brothers in New York. He soon ran away and joined a gang called the Mau Mau's. His seeming lack of emotion and thrill for blood soon won him a reputation as top warlord and president of the feared gang.

Told by a psychiatrist that he was on a "one-way street to jail, the electric chair and hell," Cruz began to feel this prophecy coming true as the parameters of his world began closing in on him.

But he came into contact with David Wilkerson, a preacher whose persistent witnessing helped Cruz to realize the destructive course his life was taking.

Cruz accepted Christianity and redirected his life into a ministry of helping others to find the same inner peace and understanding of God he felt he had achieved.

After completing Bible College in La Puente, Calif., Cruz became the director of the Teen Challenge Center in Brooklyn, N.Y., administering to drug addicts.

After starting outreach ministries in California, North Carolina and other states, Cruz maintained his headquarters at Colorado Springs, Colo. Going out on crusades, Cruz has taken his ministry throughout the United States and to such countries as Spain, England, Switzerland, Norway and Central and South American nations.

Cruz also ministers to what he calls the "forgotten people," those in jails, prisons, detention homes, hospitals and nursing homes.

Cruz is a husband and a father of four girls.

Gene Allen, pastor of the Lamar Full Gospel Assembly, said the public is invited to attend the free sessions at the auditorium.

Harvest dinner set by Groom church

GROOM - The Groom United Methodist Church will hold its third annual Harvest Dinner at the school cafeteria Sunday.

The women of the church will be serving turkey with all the trimmings for an "all you can eat feast." The meal will be served from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Proceeds from the dinner will go to the church.

Religion Roundup

NEW YORK (AP) - In a 30-minute film being shown to groups around the country, a succession of theologians, Congressmen and lawyers contend that the conviction of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon poses a general threat to religious rights in this country.

"We're trying to awaken other religious leaders to that threat," says Mose Durst, president of the Unification Church whose central authority, Moon, was imprisoned last July 20 for an 18-month term for income tax evasion.

About 40 religious groups had joined in an unsuccessful appeal for a Supreme Court review.

ZION, Ill. (AP) - No amount of clinical, sociological or other data can ever depict the "interior drama of aging," says long-time, prominent Lutheran theologian Joseph Sittler of Chicago.

Sittler, now 80 and virtually blind, told a symposium on aging sponsored by the Lutheran Council

Join Us In Worship IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

The Everlasting Arms

This tiny child looking with trust into his mother's loving face and cradled in the safety of her arms feels that her care will be eternal and everlasting. When one matures, one very quickly finds that the securities provided by the transient helps of this world do not offer everlasting security. No matter how much of this world's goods we accumulate, they cannot make life secure against the hazards of it. There is only one place where eternal security is available, and that is within the bounds of a trusting relationship with God who extends to man in love the everlasting arms. Go seek Word of His love in the Church.

EVERYONE IN THE CHURCH
THE CHURCH IN EVERYONE

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the message of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without government or society or way of life will long persist and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Boundary changes raise fears for fishing industry

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — Paydays for David Gregory used to be a big deal: $1,700 for 10 days of hard work aboard a fishing boat. But poor catches have cut the figure in half in recent months, and now Gregory thinks his paycheck is about to take another tumble.

"It's the decision," says the 38-year-old fisherman. "It's going to hurt everybody."

Gregory isn't alone in his fears. From the busy docks of New Bedford to the lobster piers in Maine, fishermen are holding worried discussions about "the decision" — a World Court ruling that denies them a fertile swath of the North Atlantic's Georges Bank they have fished for generations.

The court's ruling goes into effect on Friday.

"We fish there very heavily. I don't know if we can make it up," said Tom Brancalone, a 43-year-old Gloucester captain who has been going out to the northeast peak of the Georges Bank since he was a 17-year-old boy on his father's ship.

"The impact is very hard. It's brought a hardship to the whole industry," he said.

The World Court's Oct. 12 ruling ended a boundary dispute over a 30,000-square-nautical-mile area that began in 1976 when the United States and Canada extended their territorial claims to overlapping areas 200 miles out to sea.

The two countries agreed to submit the dispute to the international court after the U.S. Senate refused to ratify a 1979 treaty that called for joint management of the Georges Bank.

The international court's decision gave the United States a major portion of the disputed area. But when the international jury drew new boundary lines, Canada received a section of shoals rich with scallops and an abundant spawning ground for finfish.

The impact may be significant. According to the National Marine Fisheries Service, 55 percent of the pollack caught by New England fishermen — and 25 percent of the total U.S. pollack harvest — comes from the area now off limits to Yankee fishermen.

The section also accounts for 35 percent of the yellowtail flounder and scallop brought back to New England's fish piers. The loss could cut U.S. catches in those categories by as much as 20 percent, the fisheries service said.

The boundary changes will affect those who traditionally fish closer to the U.S. shore. John Rittgers, executive director of the National Marine Fisheries regional office in Gloucester, said the new restrictions will crowd U.S. fishermen in a smaller area, increasing competition for the already dwindling supplies of fish.

"It's sort of like an apple orchard on a public common. If the apples in the neighboring town die and the people come over to your town, there are fewer apples to go around," he said.

The fishing industry grew rapidly in the late 1970s when the extension of the 200-mile limit barred foreign fishing fleets from Georges Bank. But New England's fish harvest has been dropping since the early 1980s.

Berry named new Patriots head coach

NEW COACH—Raymond Berry (shown above) is the new head coach of the New England Patriots. He replaces Ron Meyer, who was fired Thursday. Berry, a member of Pro Football's Hall of Fame, becomes the Patriots' ninth head coach. (AP Laserphoto)

New England Patriots players may be excused if they claim that their concentration was broken a bit this week for Sunday's game with the New York Jets.

It's been a week when the big news out of Foxboro, Mass., where the game will be played, has been the upheaval on the Patriots' coaching staff. On Wednesday, much to the consternation of many of the players, Coach Ron Meyer fired defensive coordinator Rod Rust; on Thursday, Meyer was fired and replaced by Raymond Berry, who reinstated Rust.

Berry, a Hall of Fame receiver with the Baltimore Colts and a one-time New England assistant, said he would make no changes in Meyer's game plan for the contest with the Jets, which could have considerable bearing on the race for wild-card playoff spots in the American Conference.

General Manager Pat Sullivan said he made the switch at the season's midway point "because I oppose disruptions and we need a stable situation here."

In other games Sunday, Cincinnati is at Houston; Indianapolis at Dallas; Detroit at Green Bay; Minnesota at Chicago; New Orleans at Cleveland; Atlanta at Pittsburgh; St. Louis at Philadelphia; Tampa Bay at Kansas City; Buffalo at Miami; Denver at the Los Angeles Raiders; San Francisco at the Los Angeles Rams; and Washington at the New York Giants.

Seattle is at San Diego Monday night.

New England, 5-3, beat the 6-2 Jets 28-21 in their first meeting a month ago at Giants Stadium. But the Patriots were crushed 44-24 last week by the Miami Dolphins.

New England lists as "questionable" All-Pro guard John Hannah, hospitalized during the week for treatment of a neck injury and will definitely be without Irving Fryar, the NFL's top draft choice, who has a separated shoulder.

The Jets, 28-7 winners over Kansas City last week, are getting healthier — running back Freeman McNeil may be back after a week on the sidelines with a rib injury and receiver Johnny "Lam" Jones may be activated after missing the entire season with a broken collarbone.

There's a new coach in Cleveland, where defensive coordinator Marty Schottenheimer took over the 1-7 Browns after Sam Rutigliano was fired last Monday.

Schottenheimer doesn't plan any immediate changes when the Browns take on the 3-5 Saints, who blew a 21-point lead and lost to Dallas 30-27 in overtime last Sunday night. But, he says that sometime soon he may switch to a two-back offense in place of Rutigliano's one-back alignment.

The big game Sunday is in Los Angeles, where the Raiders and Broncos, both 7-1, play for the lead in the strong AFC West.

BYU stays unbeaten

By PETE HERRERA
AP Sports Writer

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — It is the nature of Brigham Young's offense that an opposing defense can play respectably and still lose by boxcar figures.

Quarterback Robbie Bosco, the latest in the long line of Brigham Young passing wizards, threw three touchdown passes Thursday night and teamed with bullish fullback Lakei Heimuli to lead the unbeaten, No. 5 ranked Cougars to a 49-0 Western Athletic Conference football victory over New Mexico.

Despite the lopsided defeat, New Mexico Coach Joe Lee Dunn felt his injury-depleted defensive unit had played about as well as it could against the best passing machine in major college football.

"We didn't play bad defensively," said Dunn. "They sort of outclassed us tonight. We're not in the same league with them."

The Brigham Young-New Mexico game kicked off a long weekend of college action which features a pair of clashes involving ranked teams.

In a headliner in the Southwest Conference, No. 3 Texas, 4-0-1, hosts No. 14 Southern Methodist, 4-1. At 2-0, Texas shares the league lead with Houston while SMU, 2-1 after a loss to the Cougars last weekend, faces elimination from the chase for the SWC's automatic bid to the Cotton Bowl.

In a major confrontation of Eastern powers, No. 18 West Virginia, 6-1, will be attempting to wipe out three decades of frustration at the hands of No. 19 Penn State, 5-2. The Mountaineers, conquerors of Boston College last week, haven't beaten Penn State since a linebacker named Sam Huff helped subdue the Nittany Lions 21-7 in 1955.

Top-ranked Washington, a fortunate escapee last weekend, puts its 7-0 record on the line against Arizona, the nation's 12th-ranked defensive unit. Washington stayed unbeaten last weekend by edging Oregon 17-10 despite gaining only 109 yards and recording just three first downs.

Second-ranked Oklahoma, a 12-10 survivor against four-touchdown underdog Iowa State last weekend, tries to regain momentum when it visits Kansas. Sooner Coach Barry Switzer is concerned with an ankle injury that has kept quarterback Danny Bradley off the practice field this week.

The Sooners will be trying to keep pace in the Big Eight title chase with No. 4 Nebraska, 6-1, which is at home against Kansas State.

In other games Saturday involving teams ranked in the Top 10, No. 6 Ohio State, 6-1, travels to Wisconsin; No. 7 Louisiana State, 5-0-1, hosts slumping Notre Dame and its troubled coach, Gerry Faust; No. 9 South Carolina, 6-0, is at home against East Carolina, and Colorado calls on No. 10 Oklahoma State, 5-1.

Horned Frogs draw national attention

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

What a hoopla homecoming for those wonderfully wacky Horned Frogs of Texas Christian Coach Jim Wacker!

Representatives from six bowls, the Bluebonnet, Fiesta, Sun, Liberty, Peach and Independence, will be on hand for the Saturday morning Southwest Conference joust with the Baylor Bears in Amon Carter Stadium in Fort Worth.

It will be televised at 11:30 a.m. over the SWC network.

And guess who else will be hanging out in Cowtown?

For one, an ABC news team was filming a piece on Wacker.

And Texas Christian graduate author Dan Jenkins, who filmed an interview about the school for the NBC Today Show, was going to stay around for the game.

The oddsmakers have even jumped on the bandwagon making the Horned Frogs a touchdown choice over the Bears.

The 5-1 Frogs are off to their best start in 26 years.

Some 30,000 fans are expected for the game. TCU is 2-1 in the SWC while Baylor is 2-4 overall and 2-2 in league play.

Another game under the red eye of television is No. 3-ranked Texas against No. 14-rated Southern Methodist in Austin at 2:50 p.m.

ABC-TV developed a lukewarm attitude toward the game after Houston upset SMU last week and will show the game in the Southwest area only. The network went with LSU-Notre Dame nationally.

Texas rated a seven-point choice over the Mustangs although the home team hasn't been victorious in this series since 1979.

In other SWC games, the league-leading Houston Cougars were field goal underdogs to Arkansas although the game is being played in the Astrodome; Texas A&M was a 17-point pick over the Rice Owls at College Station; and Texas Tech was a thin one-point nod over the Tulsa Hurricane in an intersectional tilt at Lubbock.

TCU has never been overly successful in homecoming games.

In fact, the Frogs have won only one game before the returning

NBA season starts tonight

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

No. 1 pick Akeem Olajuwon dominates the spotlight on the National Basketball Association season openers in a nationally televised debut for the Houston Rockets against the Dallas Mavericks Saturday.

He does not, however, have a monopoly on big expectations.

Olajuwon probably takes a back seat in that department to Chicago rookie Michael Jordan, who led the hapless Bulls to a 5-2 preseason record. Chicago hosts the Washington Bullets tonight in one of six season-opening games.

"He's already a superstar," Kansas City General Manager Joe Axelson said of Jordan, the former North Carolina and Olympic hero. "We were playing Chicago in an exhibition game in St. Louis. The crowd was about 5,500 and they were sitting on their hands until Jordan came on the floor. It was like somebody turned the lights on."

Elsewhere tonight, Atlanta is at New Jersey, Cleveland at Philadelphia, Boston at Detroit, Utah at Seattle and Phoenix at Golden State.

Saturday night's games include Detroit at New York, Philadelphia at Atlanta, New Jersey at Cleveland, Washington at Indiana, Los Angeles Lakers at San Antonio, Portland at Kansas City, Chicago at Milwaukee, Golden State at Denver and the Los Angeles Clippers at Utah.

The Celtics-Pistons matchup pairs two strong teams with revamped starting lineups.

The 76ers, after posting a 65-17 record in 1982-83 and then winning 12 of 13 playoff games en route to the championship, are back this year hoping to prove last spring's first-round playoff loss to New Jersey was a fluke.

Pro Picks

Raiders favored in rematch

By The Associated Press
An enduring cliché of coachdom is that it's tougher to beat a team the second time around than the first. Last week, there were seven rematches in the National Football League...

...and the team that won the first game won four of the seven.

There are six more rematches this weekend, the big one at the Los Angeles Coliseum where the Raiders try to avenge their only loss of the season to the Denver Broncos, and try to break a tie with the Broncos at the top of the AFC West.

The cliché is supposed to hold — the Raiders are favored by six.

The Raiders may finally be finding a passing offense — their wide receivers caught their first three TD passes of the season against San Diego last week. But it's a lot easier to throw TD passes against San Diego than against a Denver defense that's already scored six touchdowns. It's the BRONCOS.

San Francisco (minus 3½) at RAMS. Take the RAMS.

PENSACOLA OPEN— Ralph Landrum of Florence, Ky. sinks a putt on the 18th hole for an 8-under par 63. Landrum is in sole possession of first place after first-round play.

Landrum leads Pensacola Open

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — It was not a particularly good start to the day for Ralph Landrum.

He woke up Thursday with his right eye almost swollen shut. "I guess it had gotten irritated and I rubbed it too much," he said.

When he got to the course for the start of the $300,000 Pensacola Open golf tournament, his caddy was missing. "I just grabbed one out of the bullpen," he said.

Then he made a bogey-6 from the middle of the fairway on the second hole he played.

But Landrum, enjoying what he called "pot luck — the hole just got in the way a lot" scattered nine birdies across his card, one-putted

10 times, and compiled the best score of his two-year PGA Tour career, an 8-under-par 63. It staked him to a three-stroke lead after the first round.

"The difference was that I made a lot of putts (including a couple from 12-15 feet to save pars). Maybe I made a lot of putts because I couldn't see very well out of the right eye. I'll go home and rub it some more tonight. Maybe stick a fork in it," he said.

Mark O'Meara stuck three shots in the water on the way to a scrambling, struggling 77 that virtually ended his hopes of obtaining any of golf's three major seasonal honors in this, the last official event on the 10-month PGA Tour.

His poor opening round all but assured the absent Cal Peete of the Vardon Trophy, which goes to the man with the low-stroke average on the Tour. O'Meara, the only man with a chance to catch him, would have to shoot three rounds of 63.

Three strokes off Landrum's leading pace were Ken Brown of Scotland, John Cook, Roger Maltbie and Danny Edwards, tied at 66.

The group at 67 included Hal Sutton, John Mahaffey, Lou Graham, Tim Norris, Dan Pohl, Bobby Wadkins, Bill Kratzert, Leonard Thompson and Ed Fiori.

Sutcliffe may be available for draft

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

The Chicago Cubs are Rick Sutcliffe's sentimental choice, but business considerations probably will force the National League Cy Young winner to go through the Nov. 8 free agent re-entry draft, his agent says.

While the Cubs and Sutcliffe's agent, Barry Axelrod, expect to resume negotiations on a new contract next week, Axelrod says there is "a very real possibility" the pitcher will be available for the draft "simply because we've come this far."

Sutcliffe filed for free-agency last week, well ahead of the Monday deadline. Clubs can sign their free-agent players until Nov. 5, three days before the draft. Even after the draft, clubs may opt to retain negotiating rights to their free agents.

Axelrod said Thursday that two things had stalled negotiations. Sutcliffe wanted a grace period after the Cy Young announcement on Tuesday to enjoy the award, and the Cubs' Dallas Green was at a general managers' meeting this week.

"I have seen Dallas Green quoted as saying that no one will outbid the Cubs," Axelrod said in a telephone interview from his Encinitas, Calif., office. "But it's hard to set a value on Rick without knowing all the facts, and that (going through the draft) is one way to know how much people are willing to offer."

Other clubs may contact free-agent players before the draft, but they may not discuss money until afterward.

Tiger League roundup

The Raiders shut out the Redskins, 27-0, Thursday night to finish the Tiger League regular season unbeaten with a 4-0 record. The Raiders were never scored against, winning by scores of 39-0, 30-0, 33-0 and 27-0.

Against the Redskins, the Raiders scoring attack was led by Quincy Williams, who had two touchdowns. Chris Pollard had one touchdown and two extra points. Paul Brown had one touchdown and one extra point.

Defensive standouts for the Raiders were Chris Snapp, Craig Stevens, Rodney Brown and Wayne Cavanaugh. Chris Pollard had a fumble recovery.

Redskins' coach Bob Lowrance said his team, which had only 12 players suited up Thursday, played good defense.

The Colts came from behind to beat the Rams, 32-13, in the other game played Thursday. Scoring for the Colts were Phil Sexton, one touchdown, one extra point; Michael Ross, one touchdown, one extra point; Cedric Welbon, one touchdown; Marlo Payne one touchdown and Kevin Marak, one touchdown.

Jimmy Mayberry, Bryan Ellis, Phil Sexton and Steve Sanders were the defensive standouts for the Colts.

The Rams were ahead, 13-7, at halftime.

Sammy Laury scored both TDs for the Rams, one on a 65-yard run from scrimmage and the other on a 70-yard kickoff return. Scott Frazier scored an extra point.

Casey Campbell, Gabriel Griego and Jeff Richter led the Rams defense.

The Colts finished second behind the Raiders with a 3-1 record, followed by the Packers, 2-2, and the Rams, 1-3.

City Tournament action starts Saturday at 1 p.m. at the Optimist Club park with the Packers taking on the Redskins in the first game. The Colts and the Rams play at 3 p.m. The winner of these two games play Monday at 6:30 p.m. and the winner of Monday's game play the Raiders at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday. The Raiders drew a bye until the finals.

More donations needed for public golf course

More donations are needed as soon as possible so construction can start on the proposed Pampa Public Golf course.

For $25,000, a green, fairway and tee box can be built. A marker honoring the donor will be placed at the purchased tee box. All donors will have their names engraved on a bronze plaque, which will be placed in the pro shop.

The new 18-hole course will be owned by Gray County and all donations will be tax-deductible.

"We're hoping that clubs and businesses will join in and run promotions to help raise the necessary funds," said Buddy Epperson, president of the Pampa Public Golf Association, which was organized two years ago in an effort to bring a public course to Pampa.

The association has established a charter membership for persons who have donated $250 and pledged 100 hours of work toward building the course. The charter membership will be cut off at 200 persons. Starting Nov. 1, charter memberships will be raised to $275.

Contributions can be made by making a check payable to the Gray County Treasurer and designating it for the Public Golf Course. The check can be mailed to the Gray County Treasurer, P.O. Box 976, Pampa, Tex. 79065.

John McGuire is the fund raising chairman. He can be contacted at 665-3031 (home) or 665-8762 (business) for more details.

The Blue team scored on the first play of the game when Richie Bowers broke loose on a 75-yard end sweep. James Bybee scored on a 60-yard run in the final minute of the game for the Blue.

Football powers to study TV rights

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Representatives of all major college football powers have set a December meeting in Dallas for what could be a final attempt to put together a single coalition to administer television rights.

Officials of the Big Ten, Pac-10, Southeastern, Southwest, Big Eight, Atlantic Coast and Western Athletic conferences will attend, along with Notre Dame representing northern independents and Florida State representing southern independents.

"We're trying hard to look to the future and cast aside or ignore the problems we've had in the past," said Tom Hansen, executive director of the Pac-10 Conference. "I think we've been very successful in working together in a cooperative vein."

The panel's goals, according to Hansen, would be to increase network TV income by having one administrative body, work out a fair plan for TV appearances, protect receipts at stadiums and meet all legal requirements.

Television rights fees were cut in half for many schools this year following the Supreme Court decision voiding the NCAA's control of football telecasts.

The court's ruling stemmed from an antitrust suit brought by the universities of Oklahoma and Georgia.

Afterward, an unsuccessful attempt was made to form a TV coalition involving the 63 schools of the College Football Association and the Pac-10 and Big Ten.

ORGANIZED CRIME—Photographs depicting various scenes were on display at New York's Federal Hall during the President's Commission on Organized Crime hearings Thursday. A hooded witness testified that he was told former Vietnamese Prime Minister Nguyen Cao Ky headed a web of anti-communist gangs that rob, extort and sell marijuana in the United States. Ky contacted in California by The Associated Press, immediately denied the allegation, saying "my first reaction is shock. It is ridiculous." (AP Laserphoto)

Man faces sentencing in church burnings

CAMERON, Texas (AP) — A state district judge says he plans to conduct a pre-sentencing investigation into the background of a 35-year-old Houston area man convicted in the fire-bombing of three church buildings in Milam County.

Norris Eugene Moss was convicted Thursday on three counts of arson stemming from last year's fires, which authorities had initially thought were racially motivated because the targets were mostly black churches.

Moss had variously claimed to authorities that he was the reincarnated spirits of Jesus Christ, Moses, Julius Caesar and Holy Roman Emperor Frederick Barbarossa.

The used-car salesman also faces charges in connection with fires in Robertson and Brazos counties.

Defense motions had requested 20th state District Judge Don Humble to assess punishment, but the judge said he first would conduct an investigation into Moss' record and medical history.

"That generally takes a couple of weeks," said Humble. Defense attorney John Sherman said he would appeal the verdict.

"The evidence was overwhelming, in my opinion, that the guy was insane," said Sherman.

During the three-day trial, two psychiatrists testified that Moss was psychotic when he set the fires. And the report of a third doctor who couldn't be present to testify supported findings of the other two. Moss did not testify during the trial.

The 10-woman, two-man jury deliberated 90 minutes before finding Moss guilty. Moss showed no emotion when the verdict was read.

News in brief

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pakistan has been told "implicitly" that an American military aid cutoff would follow any attempt by that nation to develop nuclear weapons, a U.S. official says.

The comment Thursday followed a report that President Reagan warned Pakistani President Mohammad Zia-ul-haq in a letter last month about such a possibility. Speaking only on condition that he not be identified, the official said he was "unaware that the point has been made that bluntly" but added that the policy has been "implicit in conversations" with the Pakistanis.

State Department spokesman John Hughes said Washington has "assurances from the Pakistani government that its nuclear program is entirely peaceful."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Acting to ease congestion at six of the nation's busiest airports, the Civil Aeronautics Board has approved 1,300 airline schedule changes.

Under the changes approved Thursday, fewer planes will be competing for the same gates and runways at the same time. The measures, which go into effect next Thursday, place a ceiling on flights at Newark International — site of some of the worst delays.

Other airports include those serving Atlanta, Denver, Chicago, LaGuardia and Kennedy in New York City. All six have accounted for about three-quarters of the delays nationwide of 15 minutes or longer this year. The frequency of such delays jumped by 80 percent.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Today is the beginning of "Ray Bradbury Days" in the hometown the science fiction author immortalized in his novel "Dandelion Wine" and other stories.

Bradbury will be given the key to the city and a bottle of dandelion wine and escorted from the local airport by flag bearers and a troupe of baton twirlers.

His books include "Something Wicked This Way Comes," "Fahrenheit 451," "The Illustrated Man" and "The Martian Chronicles."

Names in news

ROCKY HILL, Conn. (AP) — CBS commentator Andy Rooney says Connecticut's new $1.1 million library for the blind and physically handicapped is a "monument to civilization" that "stands a little higher than most."

"For all the things we've done wrong with the land we live on, all the mistakes we've made... it is a great delight to come to a place like this where finally we have done something right," Rooney, known for his humorous commentaries on the news program "60 Minutes," said at dedication ceremonies Thursday.

The new library has 90,000 books in Braille and large print.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Burt Reynolds is back at work on a new movie after being sidelined for about four months by an inner ear infection, kidney stones and a jaw problem, a spokesman says.

Reynolds, 48, is "doing terrific," Dave Gershenson said Thursday. "Burt is back at work... on 'Stick' and will begin reshooting some scenes for about a week beginning Nov. 7. He got sick while they were filming the final scenes and they have to be done over."

In "Stick," adapted from an Elmore Leonard novel, Reynolds plays a man who stumbles into a murder and drug operation upon his release after seven years in prison. The movie also stars Candice Bergen.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Antony Hamilton, a 30-year-old Australian, will "become a major international star" by replacing the late Jon-Erik Hexum in the CBS series "Cover-Up," a 20th Century-Fox spokesman says.

Hamilton, playing opposite Jennifer O'Neill, will have a new name in the show, but still will play a government agent who poses as a model, Fox publicist Vince Panettiere said Thursday.

Hexum, 26, died Oct. 18, six days after he accidentally shot himself in the head with a blank charge in a prop gun.

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Baltimore Orioles pitcher Jim Palmer will be joining a new team as host of "The Sporting Life," public television's first-ever continuing series devoted to athletes, beginning next spring.

Profiles of Washington Redskins lineman George Starke, who also is a carpenter and reggae music producer; Jim "Catfish" Hunter, former major league pitcher and now gentleman farmer and Little League coach; and jockey Angel Cordero are among the first 10 half-hour segments.

LONDON (AP) — Barbara Cartland, 82-year-old queen of the historical romance, says she is amazed to discover that her novels sell best in France, the country that supposedly wrote the book on romance.

"I expected them as a nation to want sensuous and dirty books, but they want pure ones," said Ms. Cartland, author of 384 novels.

"The French know about two things: the art of food and the art of love," she said recently. "France is the only place where you can make love in the afternoon without people hammering on your door and asking, 'Are you ill?'"

WAUKEGAN, Ill. (AP) — Today is the beginning of "Ray Bradbury Days" in the hometown the science fiction author immortalized in his novel "Dandelion Wine" and other stories.

Bradbury will be given the key to the city and a bottle of dandelion wine and escorted from the local airport by flag bearers and a troupe of baton twirlers.

His books include "Something Wicked This Way Comes," "Fahrenheit 451," "The Illustrated Man" and "The Martian Chronicles."

At least 3 airlines will honor tickets

DALLAS (AP) — Officials of three airlines said Thursday they will honor tickets issued by Braniff Inc., which will suspend service to half its cities and make other cost-cutting moves designed to ensure its survival.

Braniff announced the austerity measures on Wednesday, including sale of most of its gates at Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport to rival American Airlines, grounding of airplanes and layoffs of "hundreds" of workers.

A spokeswoman for Braniff, which emerged from bankruptcy protection less than eight months ago, said American and Continental Airlines have agreed to accept tickets for routes which Braniff will cancel effective Nov. 5. Muse Air will also honor Braniff tickets for eight routes, officials said.

"They have in fact agreed to accept our tickets for those of our passengers ticketed on or before Oct. 24," said Braniff spokeswoman Barbara Potter.

Braniff will suspend service effective Nov. 5 to Austin, Texas; Detroit; Houston; Kansas City, Mo.; Miami; Newark, N.J.; New Orleans; Oklahoma City; Philadelphia; and San Antonio, Texas.

An American spokesman said the airline will honor tickets for all routes Braniff is canceling.

"Braniff's current circumstances are unfortunate, and we want to help alleviate any adverse impact on travelers in markets Muse Air serves," said John Mumaugh.

Braniff tickets will be accepted at face value for travel on Dallas-Austin, Dallas-Houston, Dallas-New Orleans, Austin-New Orleans, Dallas-Tulsa, Austin-Tulsa, New Orleans-Tulsa and Houston-Tulsa routes.
