

Halloween hijinks few

Pampa police reported a quiet Halloween, with no major incidents or reports of tampering with trick-or-treat candy.

Police responded to 37 calls and made eight arrests in the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.

Police investigated one reported assault and two burglaries during the evening celebration. Several Halloween hijinks were reported, including minor incidents of vandalism and the "egging" of a police car and a church.

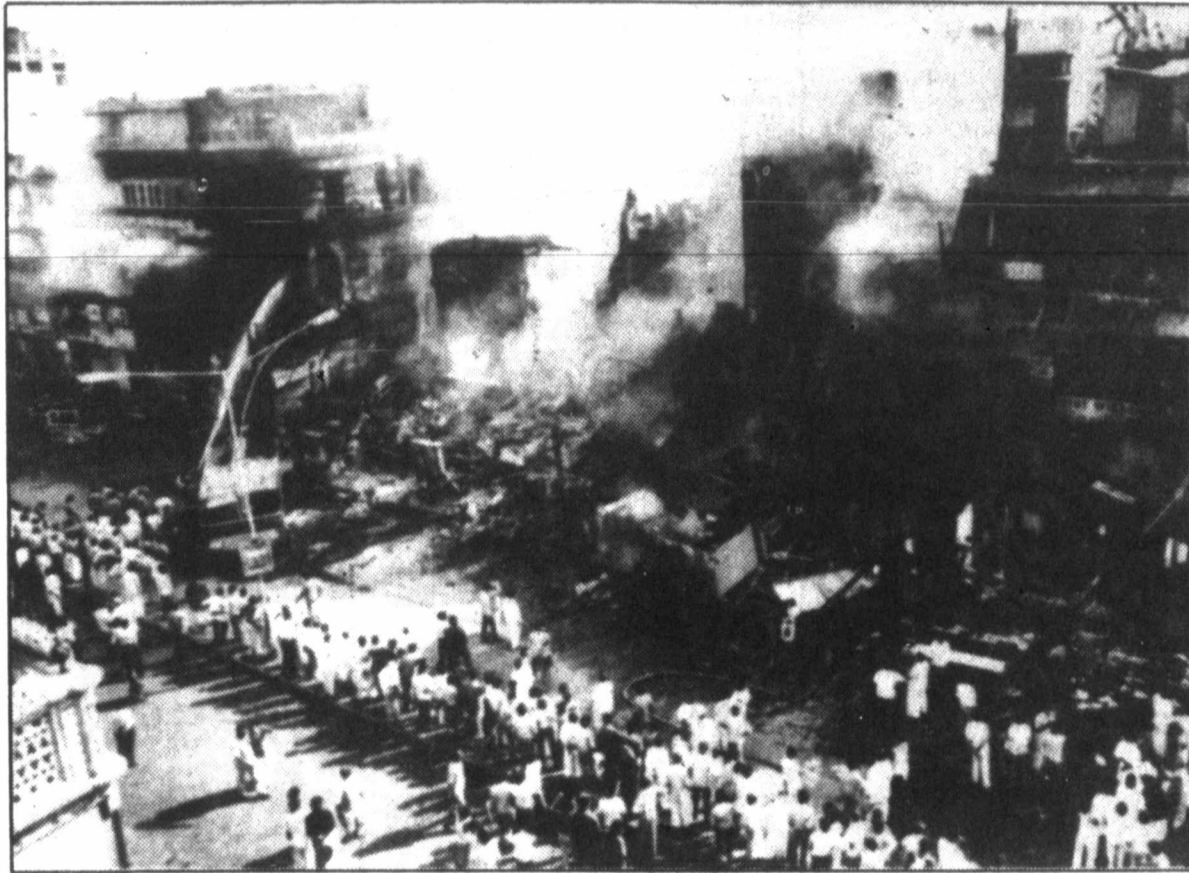

The arrests Wednesday included two for burglary, two for driving while intoxicated, two for public intoxication and one for disorderly conduct.

The most serious incident involved an assault in the 1700 block of West 23rd. Police found Ricky Edwards, 2113 Lynn, sprawled on the ground and in need of an ambulance. The beating victim was taken by Pampa Medical Services to Coronado Community Hospital. No arrest was made in connection with the incident.

Egg throwing by Halloween tricksters was reported at the Bible Baptist Church, 500 E. Kingsmill, The Bottle Shop and in the 400 block of Sloan. A police

Violence sweeps across India

Gandhi assassination triggers Hindu attacks against Sikh residents

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Vengeance-seeking Hindus set fires and beat Sikhs in cities across northern India today to vent their fury over the assassination of Indira Gandhi by two of her Sikh guards. At least 50 people were reported killed nationwide.

In New Delhi, where hundreds of thousands of mourners filed past the flag-draped body of the slain prime minister to pay their last respects, army units from neighboring states were called in and some areas were placed under curfew.

The throng of mourners became so unruly that police lobbed tear gas at some sections of the crowd to restore order.

The United News of India said troops were summoned to the capital following a two-hour exchange of gunfire between police and a "large group of people" in a building near the government's Home Ministry. It said 11 people were killed in the capital, including two policemen, and 10 died in other cities, including at least four rioters shot by police.

THE BLOODSHED was part of a surge of rioting, arson and looting by mobs of Hindus in nearly a dozen northern Indian cities seeking revenge for Wednesday's murder of Mrs. Gandhi. The mobs burned Sikh-owned businesses, cars and buses, and beat Sikh men they found in the open.

The rioting forced curfew orders in 11 other cities besides New Delhi, and police in some places were given "shoot-to-kill" orders against the mobs.

The army was ordered into Calcutta to stop looting and arson, and soldiers took over five police stations in New Delhi. Leave was canceled for all military personnel, and curfew orders included bans on the assembly of more than four people at a time.

Fires flared across the capital, and in several instances the mobs prevented firemen from putting out the blazes. One reporter saw a crowd strip a Sikh man naked, beat him and chase him down the street.

The assassination was claimed by anonymous Sikh extremists as revenge for the Indian army attack on the Sikh Golden Temple to flush out Sikh separatists in Punjab province last June. The Sikhs number 13 million in the predominantly Hindu nation of 730 million.

MRS. GANDHI WAS shot 22 times, according to the United News of India. One of the assailants was killed and the other wounded, and a third guard — who did not fire — was arrested, the agency said.

Among the first to view the body was Mrs. Gandhi's 40-year-old son, Rajiv, who was quickly sworn in to succeed his mother as prime minister. The body is to lie in state for 24 hours.

The body lay on a tilted bier in the "Teen Murti" house where her father, Jawaharlal Nehru, independent India's first prime minister, lived and died. Her head was covered by a pale yellow sari, and her face appeared swollen, masking her usual chiseled features.

The building is only a few hundred feet from the spot where independence leader Mohandas K. (Mahatma) Gandhi was assassinated by a Hindu fanatic 37 years ago. He was not related to Mrs. Gandhi.

The heavily guarded Rajiv, wearing a simple white tunic and pants and appearing tired with bloodshot eyes, admonished the mourners to stop chanting the slogan "Blood for blood."

"Nothing would hurt the soul of our beloved Indira Gandhi more than the occurrence of violence in any part of the country," he said. Some fell silent, but most ignored him.

Rajiv, like his mother, has received death threats from Sikh extremists.

THE STUNNED nation began a 12-day period of mourning for the woman who has government the world's largest democracy for 15 of the past 18 years. Her funeral was set for Saturday, which was declared a national holiday.

Mrs. Gandhi is to be cremated Saturday afternoon on the banks of the Yamuna River near the Shantivana, or Forest of Peace, where her father was cremated 26 years ago.

Millions of people, including prominent world leaders, are expected to attend the funeral.

Mrs. Gandhi's body, covered by white flowers and draped in the orange, green and white Indian flag, was transported from her residence to the museum on a flower-bedecked gun carriage towed by an army truck.

MOURNERS TOSSED rose petals and garlands of marigolds as they filed past the tilted bier, while priests sitting cross-legged next to the body chanted religious hymns.

Some mourners sobbed and beat their breasts as the line stretching for more than a mile slowly made its way past the body. They also chanted "Indira Gandhi is immortal."

Carson races relatively quiet

By CATHY SPAULDING

PANHANDLE — While national candidates continue to hurl insults, accusations and other forms of mud at each other, candidates for Carson County offices are running relatively quiet campaigns.

Three Carson County offices — sheriff, tax assessor-collector and Precinct 3 county commissioner — are up for a vote Tuesday.

The issues in a tax assessor-collector race are not like any others. There, the candidates run on administrative and management skills and ability to deal with irate and confused taxpayers.

Incumbent Carson tax assessor-collector C.L. Sterling is facing his first challenger since he took office in 1957. Republican Bob W. Curtis, an inspector at Pantex nuclear weapons plant and a 20-year veteran with the U.S. Air Force, wants to take on the county money-collecting duties.

Sterling said he feels fairly confident of staying in office for another term. He looks back on 27 years in the office and said he is a Registered Tax Collector.

"I've been here quite a while and there's been tremendous changes," he said. "In 1982, the appraisal district took over the assessing and appraising and there's just more red tape all the time."

Curtis, who is working on a bachelor of science degree in occupational education, said people had asked him to run for office.

"I'd do a responsible job," he said. "I'll be organizing, collecting and dispersing money in a matter that would be administratively sound and reliable."

One qualification he feels he has for the job is his "ability to get along with people and to work with people."

Curtis has lived in Panhandle since 1971.

"To me, this is one of the best places to live," he said. "We have a nice school district. And the people here are as nice as anywhere else."

"If elected I want to do the best I know how," he said.

After beating two opponents in the May primary, incumbent sheriff Connie Reed would have been going into office unopposed in November. But one of his primary opponents, former deputy Clint Dodd has resurfaced as a write-in candidate, challenging Reed on issues ranging from jail standards to law enforcement in area communities.

"I'd hate to get into too much," Dodd said, noting that he intends "to bring the jail up to standards," and that he believes that the sheriff's office should have a better relationship with the jail commission and the county commission.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Texas has more deep well hazardous waste injection sites than any other state, a Texas Department of Water Resources official says.

Unemployment still low in area

Unemployment climbed slightly in Pampa and Gray County during September, but was still far below the jobless rate for the rest of Texas and the nation.

Charles Vance, director of the Pampa office of the Texas Employment Commission, said the September jobless rate was 3.3 percent in Pampa and 3.4 percent for all of Gray County. The national rate was 7.4 percent during that month and unemployment across the state was 5.6 percent.

The local rates were up .4 percent from the 2.9 rate in the city and 3.0 percent for the county recorded in August, but still far below the unemployment rate of over 8.5 percent that gripped the area one year ago.

The percentages translate into 11,761 Pampa residents holding jobs and 401 unemployed. In the county, 14,456 persons held jobs and 505 were jobless.

Vance noted that the wet weather in the country during the past month has slowed the demand for outdoor work, but said the agency has job listings for retail sales, including temporary Christmas work, food service, nursing home and domestic work. One position is listed for an accountant.

In area counties, Hemphill and Roberts counties showed improvement in the unemployment rate. Wheeler saw a rise in the number of jobless residents and Lipscomb County was unchanged.

Hemphill recorded a 6.4 percent rate for September, compared to 8.3 the previous month. Roberts improved from 2.4 percent in August to 1.2 percent.

Wheeler's rate jumped from 2.7 percent in August to 5.6 percent in September, while Lipscomb County remained a 1.4 percent.

Absentee vote heavy

Friday is the last day that Texas residents can vote absentee and area county clerks report that voters are filling the polling places.

Gray County Clerk Wanda Carter reported today that 1,245 residents have voted absentee so far. She anticipates that there may be a record number of absentee voters this year. The current record is 1,676 in 1980.

According to the Gray County tax assessor collector's office, there are 15,173 registered voters in the county.

Hemphill County Clerk Gerry Vandiver also reports many absentee voters there. As of Tuesday afternoon, 82 people had voted by mail and 107 have come to the clerk's office.

Roberts County Clerk Jackie Jackson reports 52 votes by mail and 38 voters at her office.

Wheeler County Clerk T.J. Daughtry reports 180 absentee voters, 25 percent of those voted by mail.

Absentee votes in Carson County have not been tallied, although County Clerk Sue Persons reports that it is one of the heaviest turnouts she has seen.

Those wanting to vote absentee may do so at the clerk's office in the county where they live.

Rape plea draws 12-year sentence

Rodney Dean Donahue, 28, formerly of 405 E. Browning, pleaded guilty Wednesday to a charge of sexual assault and was sentenced to 12 years in prison.

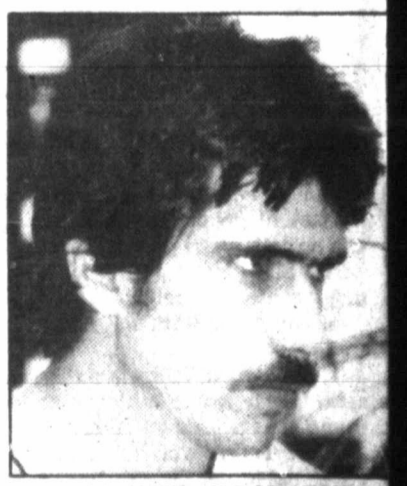

Donahue raped a 26-year-old Pampa woman about 3:30 a.m. on Sept. 8.

Following the guilty plea, 223rd District Judge Don Cain sentenced the rapist to prison.

The Pampa man was arrested at his home four days after the assault. Police have said the six-foot, seven-inch rapist grabbed the walking victim in a residential area near downtown and put his hand over her mouth. The strapping assailant slammed the woman to the ground, striking her head on a sidewalk, authorities said previously.

Donahue lifted the woman off the ground. He carried the victim to a darkened alley nearby and raped her, authorities charged.

In other action in 223rd District Court this week, Michael Dean Williams pleaded guilty to a charge of burglary committed on June 26. He was placed on three years probation and fined $300 plus costs. A charge of attempted burglary against Williams was dismissed in consideration of his guilty plea and sentence, according to the court records.

RODNEY DEAN DONAHUE

Jody Cooke pleaded guilty to a charge of burglary committed on Aug. 5 and was sentenced to three years in prison and ordered to pay court costs.

Michael Scoggins, 23, 506 N. Warren, pleaded guilty to felony possession of marijuana (over four ounces) and was placed on 10 years probation and fined $2,000 plus costs.

A charge of forgery by passing against Jimmy Hayes was dismissed, because Johnny R. Hayes, the complaining witness, no longer wanted the case prosecuted according to the records.

Mondale unleashes TV blitz, Reagan seeks Demo votes

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG AP Political Writer

The long presidential campaign is entering its final hectic days with Democratic challenger Walter F. Mondale unleashing a television advertising blitz and President Reagan invading traditionally Democratic strongholds in a bid to lock up a landslide re-election.

Mondale doggedly insisted Wednesday that "we can win this thing" despite his own campaign polls that say he is 16 to 18 points behind the president with only four days until Election Day.

Campaign aides said the Mondale polling indicated no trend in his direction in the past several days.

Reagan was opening a 10-state trip in Boston today where he hoped to solidify his support in traditionally Democratic Massachusetts and also give a boost to Republican Senate candidate Raymond Shamie.

The president also was reading the polls, and he told workers at his national campaign headquarters in Washington on Wednesday:

"I go to bed at night and my last thought is: what if everybody is reading the polls and isn't going to bother to vote?"

The final days of the campaign will see both presidential candidates appearing in Massachusetts, New York, Michigan, Ohio, Illinois, Iowa and California.

Reagan also planned stops in Arkansas, Missouri and Wisconsin. Mondale was also scheduled to visit Pennsylvania, Tennessee, and Texas before returning to his Minnesota home Monday night.

Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro was campaigning today in Cincinnati before joining Mondale in New York City, then flying West to Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Los Angeles.

Vice President George Bush was campaigning in New York before traveling to Toledo.

Mondale campaign spokesman Don Foley confirmed plans for a multi-million-dollar closing advertising buy that would include more than a dozen five-minute segments on the national networks.

One new Mondale ad already being broadcast included images of children playing, a mushroom-shaped cloud and missiles being fired.

Reagan also came under fire from the Democratic ticket for suggesting that Mondale chose Geraldine Ferraro for his running mate because he was looking for a woman to run for vice president rather than on the basis of her qualifications.

"She is far better prepared for her position," Mondale retorted, "than Mr. Reagan was when he was elected President of the United States... More than that, she's a very bright person who applies herself and learns every day."

In an interview published Wednesday by the Hearst News Service, Reagan said running mates should be chosen "not just purely on the sex of the candidate but... also on the qualifications."

Bush, campaigning in Republican Suffolk County, N.Y., said Mondale and Ms. Ferraro "have nothing to offer the American people but fear."

"... Their message is being heard, loud and clear," he said. "And the American people have heard it and they've thought about it and they are saying, 'no way' to Mondale's tax increase, 'no way' to weakening the defenses of the United States of America."

Cold air mass hits state

By The Associated Press

A strong cold air mass bore down on Texas today, with heavy thunderstorms predicted to accompany it over North, Central and East Texas.

Thunderstorms with heavy rains and strong gusty winds broke out before dawn from the Permian Basin to the Red River, with more expected as the cold air mass moved into the state.

The National Weather Service said severe weather could be triggered by the clash of three air masses over North Texas today — moisture from the Gulf of Mexico, the polar air mass moving into the state from the northern Rockies, and very dry air from the Mexican Plateau moving into the state from New Mexico. A strong upper air disturbance was expected.

The Weather Service said flash flooding could be a threat with rainfall as heavy as 3 to 5 inches in East Texas, including as far south as the Houston area, where the ground has not absorbed last week's rains.

Winds of 15 to 25 mph were forecast, shifting to the north with the approach of the colder air.

The forecast called for highs in the 50s in the High Plains to the upper 80s in South Texas, but readings were expected to drop by 20 to 25 degrees in northern parts of the state by sunset.

Temperatures are expected to drop into the 30s tonight in the north and the 60s in the south, with highs on Friday in the 50s in the north to near 70 south. Mostly cloudy skies are forecast for Friday.

Early this morning, most of Texas reported low clouds and fog as a southerly wind 10 to 20 mph drew moisture inland from the Gulf. Only the northern Panhandle and western Trans-Pecos sections reported clear skies.

American Sikhs say Gandhi government is 'terroristic'

HOUSTON (AP) — The chairman of the Sikh Association of America says slain Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi "wrote her death warrant" when she allowed the assault on the Golden Temple, the Sikhs holiest place of worship, in June.

Mrs. Gandhi, 66, was killed by a barrage of bullets reportedly fired by her own Sikh bodyguards. She had been under close guard for months because of assassination threats which followed the assault, in which military and police sources said about 1,200 people were killed.

"My religion does teach me murder is wrong," Hardam Singh Azad said Wednesday. "But my religion also teaches me it is more wrong to accept the slaughter of masses of people and sit idly by and do nothing."

The Sikhs are fighting for their own state, which would have "nothing to do with the nation of India," he said.

"This is not terrorism," Azad said. "Two people killing a prime minister is not an act of terrorism. Active terrorism is what the government of India has been doing in the state of Punjab."

He said his reaction upon hearing of the assassination about 1 a.m. was, "Thank God, You exist!"

Other Sikhs criticized the slaying.

Siri Singh Sahib Yogi Bhajan, described by his workers as chief religious and administrative authority of the ordained ministry of the Sikh religion in the western hemisphere, told his followers the killing made no sense.

"This is human insanity. It's not a matter of joy. More innocent people will be killed. Please don't take revenge," Bhajan said.

Azad said he hoped Sikhs would use less violent means in the future.

"We can accomplish the ousting of the government essentially in the same way the British' control of India was ended in 1947. Azad said — "through non-cooperation."

He said for instance, the Punjab state must not allow irrigation water to leave its borders and must cut off hydroelectric power produced there.

"Now New Delhi is lit with that electricity," he said.

Azad said about 500,000 Sikhs live in the United States, about 100,000 of whom are not descended from Indians. About 200,000 live in California, he said, and 1,500 to 2,000 in Houston.

An overwhelming number of the Sikhs in Houston are engineers, he said.

Azad said his association is sending no weapons to Sikhs in India.

"We have made a conscious decision not to get involved in any of that activity," he said.

Sikhs in San Francisco passed out food in celebration.

cruiser also was pelted with eggs. Chief J.J. Ryzman reported.

The egg throwing at the church nearly led to a shooting, according to the police reports. Representatives of the Baptist church told police the building was pelted with eggs during services about 8:30 p.m. Chester Howard Ingram Jr., 18, Rt. 1, Pampa, told police a person accused him of throwing the eggs at the church and then threatened to shoot him.

Police also investigated a report of a speeding pickup stuffed full of rowdy youths in the 2400 block of Comanche and a reported prowler in the 400 block of East Kingsmill.

Officers also received a Halloween call about a creature of the night. According to the reports, police were called about 8 p.m. to the 700 block of East Albert and asked to do something about a "possum on a fence." The nocturnal menace "appears to be rabid," officers relayed to headquarters, and they called an animal control officer.

Ryzman said it was one of the more quiet Halloweens in years.

Pesticide controls raising questions about state needs

AUSTIN (AP) — Opponents to proposed new state controls for pesticides outnumbered supporters at an extended meeting of the House Agriculture Committee, which was divided itself on the subject.

The public hearing was scheduled to continue today.

More than 60 witnesses registered to speak for and against the tentative new standards for the use of pesticides announced Oct. 19 by Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower.

In addition to the House hearing, the Texas Department of Agriculture will sponsor public hearings beginning Nov. 12 in Austin, Lubbock, San Juan, and maybe in the Victoria area.

Hightower was not at Wednesday's session, which at times attracted a crowd of about 200.

"No one has documented the need for these kinds of regulations," said S.M. True, a Plainview farmer and president of the Texas Farm Bureau. "To enact regulation before a problem is determined or if there is no problem, is wrong."

True said Hightower should wait until the Environmental Protection Agency sets pesticide application standards.

Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Amarillo, said he thought "the Legislature should be the one to address pesticide controls, not just one individual. I think the Legislature better understands the need of the people of Texas."

"These regulations are good for both the farmers and the farm workers," said Roberto Leo, a San Diego vegetable farmer and rancher, who said he lost $35,000 in 1981 when weed-killer sprayed on a grain sorghum field drifted 15 miles and destroyed 800 acres of watermelons and 2,000 acres of English peas.

"I walked out there one morning and the vines were just lying on the ground," said Leo. "All the leaves were gone."

Leo said he and 15 farmers sued the aerial applicator but there was not enough insurance money to pay for the damage.

Rep. Rene Oliveira, D-Brownsville, said he realized Hightower's proposal needed modification "but if the job isn't done by the TDA, and I hope it will be, it will be done by the Legislature or it will be done at the courthouse."

True, who said the Farm Bureau represents 313,568 members, said "we believe that the TDA's function in the area of pesticides could more properly be one of education, information, supervision, and enforcement of existing regulations.

"In other words, the TDA should seek to increase proper pesticide use in a more constructive manner," True said.

Committee Chairman Robert Saunders, D-LaGrange, complained to Deputy TDA Commissioner Ron White, the first witness, that the agriculture department did not confer with the House committee or with many commercial groups in preparing the regulations.

"I feel that many people impacted by these regulations have not been included in your considerations," Saunders said.

White said the first draft of the regulations was written after he met with concerned groups in Austin, Lubbock, Corpus Christi and the Valley.

"They were not public hearings," White said. "There were groups invited to appear but there was no restrictions against others appearing."

"What concerns this committee is that your work sessions were more or less private," said Rep. Tom Uher, D-Bay City.

Rain brings roof collapse, street flooding

SHERMAN, Texas (AP) — Heavy rains that plagued much of East and North Texas spawned a tornado watch and brought down part of the roof at a Sherman department store, authorities said.

Two people were treated for minor injuries at the Gibson's Discount Store after rain built up on its flat roof and sent about a quarter of it crashing about 2:30 p.m. Wednesday, according to Sherman Fire Department Capt. Jack Gott.

"It was coming down just like somebody punctured a balloon," Gott said. "We got 4.26 inches of rain within 30 minutes."

Almost 30 Sherman streets including its main artery, U.S. 75, were flooded out briefly during the downpour, Gott said, adding that the rain impeded rescue workers en route to Gibson's.

There was a tornado watch in North Central Texas from Wichita Falls to Gage, Okla. No tornadoes were reported, however, and the watch was cancelled shortly after 6 p.m.

Man charged in slaying girl is shot in attempted escape

DENTON, Texas (AP) — A man charged in the slaying of a 13-year-old North Richland Hills girl who was missing for three weeks was in fair condition after being shot in an escape attempt, officials said.

Mark Robert Mathtys, 23, was shot in the neck Wednesday by a Texas Ranger within a half-block of the county jail as he attempted to flee about 3:20 p.m., Denton Chief Deputy Jim Wilson said.

Mathtys had just been moved to the facility from the North Richland Hills jail when he fled the booking room.

Texas Ranger Weldon Lucas felled Mathtys with one shot from his pearl-handled .45 pistol as the suspect raced down McKinney Street, swerving into traffic and attempting to stop motorists.

"It looked like he was trying to get a hostage," Lucas said. A Flow Memorial Hospital spokeswoman said Mathtys was in fair condition Wednesday night.

Mathtys, whose family lives in South Bend, Ind., was arrested late Tuesday and charged with capital murder in the death of Michelle Trimmier. Her body was found partially buried on a farm Saturday, 21 days after she disappeared from her home's front yard Oct. 6.

North Richland Hills Police Capt. Randy Shiflet said Mathtys had been moved to Denton after prosecutors determined he should be tried in Denton County where the body was found.

North Richland Hills is in Tarrant County.

Mathtys, who lived near the Trimmier house, was arrested in Roanoke, a south Denton County town of 1,800. He was arraigned before Peace Justice Kenneth Cunningham and held in lieu of $1 million bond.

Police said they were led to Mathtys and eventually to the girl's body after receiving a telephone tip shortly after the girl was allegedly abducted.

A neighbor saw the girl talking to three teen-agers near a pale yellow car shortly before her disappearance, police said. The neighbor said she heard yelling and screaming but saw no one when she looked out her window.

Investigators said the girl's body was identified through dental records. The cause of death was under investigation.

Earlier this month, a man was jailed on charges that he tried to extract a $1,500 ransom from Mrs. Trimmier on Oct. 15.

Love letter from co-defendant read

HOUSTON (AP) — Convicted killer Karla Faye Tucker wrote a love letter to her co-defendant accused in the pickax slayings of two people, vowing she would say anything to get out of jail and "come break you out," defense attorneys say.

The letter, dated July 30, 1983, was read Wednesday in the capital murder trial of Daniel R. Garrett, 38, charged in the June 13, 1983, slayings of Jerry Lynn Dean, 26, and Deborah Ruth Davis Thornton, 32.

Ms. Tucker, 24, was sentenced to death in the murder of Dean, her former lover. She has testified against Garrett.

The letter began "To my only man and true love," and said Ms. Tucker wanted Garrett to write to her and let her know he still loved her or she would "go crazy."

Since jail rules forbid co-defendants from corresponding, Ms. Tucker urged Garrett to send a letter to his brother, Doug, who then would send it to her.

"I am ready to say anything just to get of here and come break you out," the letter said. "I just want to see you and hold you again."

"Please be strong and don't let them give you the death sentence for we will be together again always in our minds and hearts."

Ms. Tucker said she would do anything to be with Garrett. "Even if I have to say you did it and get out of here to get you out some way or another. I know there is a way," the letter said.

Ms. Tucker told him to have faith in her and she would bring them together. She signed the letter, "Yours forever and always."

During questioning by defense attorney Ray Bass, Ms. Tucker said she asked Garrett to flush the Houston man sought in helicopter robbery

DALLAS (AP) — Federal authorities have issued an arrest warrant for a Houston man in connection with the robbery of a North Texas bank where armed robbers made their getaway in a stolen helicopter.

James Richard Little, 40, is believed to have been involved in a robbery ring that committed other bank heists using aircraft to escape. George Lyford, an FBI agent in Las Vegas, told The Dallas Morning News Wednesday.

The warrant, issued this week in Dallas, is the first in the July 20 holdup of the Valley View National Bank, said Chief Deputy John Aston of Cooke County, where the robbery occurred.

Aston said he is also seeking indictments against two other Texas men in the Valley View case.

Both have already been arrested in connection with a mid-September robbery of an Overton, Nev., bank that also involved an airborne getaway.

Aston said he is seeking indictments against Russell Earl Auzston, 36, of Conroe, and Charles R. Holden, 38, of Houston. Both men are being held in Nevada.

"We have other suspects, and we'll arrest them when we can," Aston told The Associated Press Wednesday night.

Little had not been arrested as of late Wednesday.

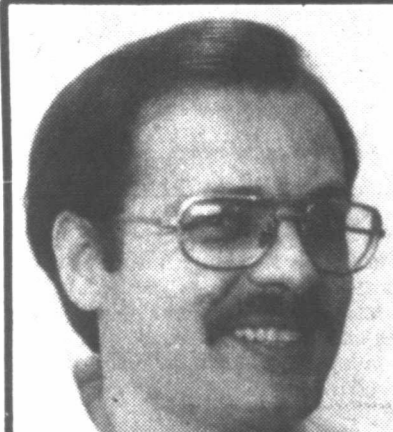

"It was a close-knit group," Lyford said. "It was a bank robbery-type gang."

In the Valley View robbery, a squad of robbers swooped down on the bank and held customers and employees at gunpoint while taking an undisclosed amount of cash.

The men were armed with automatic weapons and executed the six-minute robbery with military precision, authorities said.

On Oct. 11, authorities recovered a Cessna 40 airplane in Jacksburg, Texas, that is believed to be involved in both the Nevada and Texas robberies.

A similar aircraft was used in the Nevada robbery, and police believe one was used after the robbers ditched their stolen helicopter in Colorado.

My vote: none of the above

Next Tuesday is general election day, and I for one wonder who really cares.

I can't believe anyone seriously considers any of the major candidates as deserving of the time needed for any of us to cast a vote for them.

Nor do any of the candidates strike me as seriously paying any real attention to the wishes of their constituents. They all seem to define the "desires of the people" in terms of their own personal beliefs.

And then they listen only to the voters who happen to agree with those beliefs, casting any dissenters as un-American, a fringe element, disenchanted, out of the mainstream or any other term which implies only that such voters don't happen to agree with them.

Commercials this season seem to be particularly insulting to those of us with any degree of intelligence.

Reagan claims the Garden of Eden will reappear in America, casting Mondale as the serpent waiting to tempt us back into sin. Of course, his Garden will be membership-only for the rich.

Mondale warns us of economic disasters, wars and flaring atomic bombs if Reagan is elected, and then claims he can bring us nearer the Garden. And he'll make sure we all pay for it. And pay for it.

Gramm claims responsibility for all the supposed great legislation of the past decade and has the gall to almost imply he invented Social Security just for his mama. (If I hear him say "No one's going to take away my mama's Social Security check" one more time, I'll throw up.)

Doggett throws out one more piece of "documented" accusations against Gramm day after day, egging Gramm to continue with their school-boy battles for all of us to see. And to look at him, I'd find it hard to believe he could win any real fight.

Boulter attacks Hightower for siding with Tip O'Neill, voting for higher taxes, saying one thing and doing another. And Hightower—well, Hightower doesn't seem to say much of anything.

It's been years since there's been such a poor selection. But I do plan to vote. I wish, though, that they had ballots prepared properly for each race - I would like to check a box to indicate my choice as "None of the above."

That option's not available, so I have to find some other way to indicate none of the candidates meet my preferences.

Accordingly, I plan to write in candidates of my own selection. Under the system, I'm sure my votes will be tossed away by the election judges, but at least I will have the satisfaction of knowing I did not vote for any of the winners - or losers.

And with the candidates running this year, I think all of us will be losers no matter who wins.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

It's past time to set them free

What are you worth to the government? As long as you're working and paying a heavy tax load, the government appears ready to tolerate your existence. Once you get to retirement, however, some folks may start to resent your continued presence as you consume some of that tax money through Social Security.

The money was not really set aside for those from whom it was taken. It was spent as soon as the government grabbed it. That's tolerable, from the government point of view, as long as there are plenty of healthy young workers coming along to pay for older folks.

There are not so many healthy young workers on the horizon, however. There are, though, going to be plenty of older folks in the United States of the 21st century. Furthermore, it's likely that people will be living longer than they do today. A crunch may be imminent.

The nature of the crunch is suggested by reports like the Population Reference Bureau's recent "Death and Taxes: The Public Policy Impact of Living Longer."

It's really no one else's business how long you live, least of all the government's, but young-years productivity and older-years consumption levels are of keen interest to a powerful government taking from one and paying to the other.

There was more than a slightly ominous sound to the Population Reference Bureau's report, with such statements as: "...the postponement of an individual's death is becoming a federal affair, and one whose implications we cannot ignore." Or the observation that if all the people who died prematurely from heart attacks in 1978 had lived a full life span, government would have had to pay out an additional $15 billion in benefits.

Can it be more forcefully suggested that a government that can give you everything can also take everything away. Or that, if Social Security remains in place, unchanged, government will develop an incentive to hope that people die before their time.

No one should expect government to support him in retirement. The apparent implications of this study reinforce the unwisdom of getting into such a condition of dependency.

But it's not as if people who start their working lives are demanding to be added to the Social Security program. They are forced into a scheme they well know is headed toward collapse—but not before it steals from them viciously for a decade or two. Thus they are intentionally, as a matter of policy, deprived of the opportunity to make sound and secure investments for their future.

This is the usual foolish talk this campaign year about "saving" Social Security. It can't be saved. Those who have had their money stolen in the past cannot simply be told to starve, but there are ways to provide for them while refusing to drag future generations onto this sinking ship. And if today's young workers are not freed from this bankrupt system, it's almost certain that in a few decades they will be told to starve.

If Ronald Reagan wins a second term, plenty of advisers will tell him to buy into the system, don't challenge anything, and glide serenely into the history books. But Reagan could assure himself a better entry in encyclopedias of the future if, during a second term, he truly made history and freed people from the shackles of a system that appears increasingly dedicated to their destruction.

Just plain old discrimination

When Norman Jett was kicked out as head football coach and athletic director of Dallas' South Oak Cliff High School, he said it was for racial reasons, he, Jett, being white and the school principal, Frederick Todd, being black. A federal jury the other day said Jett had it right, and that he was entitled to $850,000 in damages from the Dallas Independent School District (DISD) and from Todd.

Not a very pretty story, the Jett story - but all too characteristic of what Americans read regularly in the 1980s. It reminds one that there won't be real racial justice in America until there is justice for ALL races, the white as well as the black.

This, to be sure, was a slogan of the '60s - and a goodhearted, sensible slogan, one may add. Certainly there wasn't racial justice here while blacks were legally deprived of rights that whites took for granted.

But, on the other hand, there isn't racial justice when whites are subjected to some of the same disabilities that used to vex blacks. Discrimination, tilted toward, or for that matter, inflicted by the formerly discriminated against, is still plain old discrimination.

Dr. Samuel Johnson fully understood the question at stake. As he wrote once: "It is too common for those who have unjustly suffered pain to inflict it likewise in their turn, with the same injustice, and to imagine that they have a right to treat others as they have themselves been treated."

So it befell Norman Jett. During Jett's early tenure at South Oak Cliff High, the school was overwhelmingly white. Population shifts in the '70s made it overwhelmingly black. And Jett, with a racially unbiased eye for talent, just kept on winning games. In his twenty-one years of coaching at South Oak Cliff, his teams won 106 games, lost 31, and tied 2, racking up five district championships. To the professional leagues he sent twenty players, including Dallas Cowboys defensive back Michael Downs, former Cowboys defensive end Harvey Martin, and San Diego Chargers running back Wayne Morris. His stature and achievements as a coach were never in serious dispute.

Todd, however, according to Jett's lawsuit, thought South Oak Cliff High needed a black coach, as better comporting with the school's racial makeup. The jury found that Jett's dismissal "was based in whole or in part on plaintiff's race." As for DISD, the jury said it acted "solely on defendant Todd's recommendations."

There is rich irony in all this, Jett's black replacement as head coach has won only 5 of 15 games.

In U.S. District Court, a righteously indignant Norman Jett prevailed over his persecutors (in no way an unfair name for them). The pity is that he was so grievously wronged in the first place.

There is an even larger pity: Jett is only one of numerous such victims. Across America, the old pieties of civil rights have been translated into excuses for squelching the rights of others.

"Affirmative action," the sanitized term for reverse discrimination, is the official policy not only of civil rights leaders but of the Democratic party. Police and fire departments, university faculties, institutions of all sorts are weighed down with racial, not to mention sexual, quotas.

Once black men couldn't get particular jobs, simply because they were black. Now, with disturbing frequency, white men can't get, or, as in Jett's case, hold, particular jobs - all because they are white.

What kind of sense does this make? None. May there be, accordingly, more court cases like the Jett case - more verdicts like the Jett verdict.

Such verdicts send across the length and breadth of America a much-needed message: No discrimination means no discrimination.

At least one fear is gone

When I was a kid, there were all sorts of things that frightened me.

I was afraid of lightning and thunder and things with huge eyes that I was certain were under my bed at night.

I was also afraid of Frankie Garfield, the school bully, and dancing the "Virginia Reel" with Cordie Mae Poovey in 4th-grade music class.

Cordie Mae wasn't as mean as Frankie, but she was the same size and twice as ugly. Dancing with somebody the size of a Greyhound bus that looks like a dump truck is not only difficult, but quite dangerous as well.

Growing into adulthood has not reduced my fears, however. It occurred to me the other day there are even more things of which to be frightened today than ever.

I was at a banquet recently eating my salad. "Sure you want to eat that salad?" a tablemate asked me.

"Why not?" I asked back.

"Could be sulfites on it," he began, continuing with a long explanation that sulfites, whatever they are, can cause all sorts of bad things.

It's the same with other foods we once thought were good for us.

You take eggs. Remember in health class when they told you to eat a lot of eggs so your bones would be strong?

Eat a lot of eggs, they tell us today, and you might have strong bones, but it won't do you any good because eggs cause cholesterol and cholesterol causes heart attacks and heart attacks cause funerals.

Milk also was supposed to be good for your bones and your teeth, but milk also causes cholesterol. So, you have a choice - weak bones and rotten teeth, or the Big One, Elizabeth.

I read where coffee can cause cancer. So can eating bacon. Eating breakfast used to be a pleasure. Now, you eat it only at our own risk.

There is also secondhand smoke to worry about, saccharin, drunk drivers, satellites falling on our heads, killer bees, walking catfish, nuclear leaks, staying out in the sun too long and getting skin cancer, interest rates going up, acid rain coming down and sweat stains under our arms.

You have to worry about stress and asbestos in preservatives and the Middle East, Afghanistan, Central America, Libya, the Russians, the Chinese, Moons, terrorism, and why they warn you there is a microwave oven in use when you walk into a convenience store.

We've got the pill, so you don't have to worry about getting pregnant anymore but what if you get herpes, the germs of endearment?

And I still don't like thunder or lightning, and I still imagine there are creatures under my bed, especially when I eat Mexican food for dinner, and since I am not sure whatever became of Frankie Garfield, he still could be lurking somewhere, ready to bang my head like he used to do in 4th grade.

Maybe the only thing left I don't have to be frightened of anymore is dancing with Cordie Mae Poovey.

She got religion and joined the Lower Wahoo Creek Church of the Bulrushes, where she serves as bouncer.

The Lower Wahoo Creek Church of the Bulrushes, thank the Lord, strictly forbids dancing of any kind.

What all nations need is less government

BY OSCAR COOLEY

One of the most puzzling characteristics of human beings is their persistence in doing things the hard way. For crowning example, the United States of America is the freest country in the world. It is also the richest. Other countries insist on retaining and even increasing government controls and dictatorships - and remain comparatively poor.

The U.S. has been free and rich for 200 years, but there has been no marked tendency of other nations to give their people more freedom and to inflict less force upon them. On the contrary, they have adopted more and more socialism, causing their states to swell, their people to shrink.

Soviet Russia, of course, is the outstanding example. After centuries of czarism, the Russians would be happy to embrace free enterprise, one would think. But they have not. Czarist dictatorship has been exchanged for Soviet dictatorship, and the muzhik is still a muzhik.

From all indications, there is no sign of a movement in the USSR to broaden freedom for freedom's sake. Nor is there in Britain, Sweden, Germany, France, in all of which socialism is the crystal ball.

More than 95 percent of the U.S. economy is private enterprise, according to the International Monetary Fund. In 1978, only 4.4 percent of the capital being formed in the U.S. came from publicly owned enterprise - that is, government. Even the telephone and telegraph systems, television and radio transmitters, electric power and transport systems are for the most part on private hands, while in other countries they are largely owned and run by government.

In Japan, which comes closest to the U.S. in preference for private enterprise, 11.2 percent of the capital is publicly, 88.8 percent privately owned. West Germany has 10.8 percent. Britain 17.1 percent public, the balance being private. Norway has 22.2 percent public ownership. These all contrast with our less than 5 percent. These facts and figures are published by the IMF in a volume entitled "Public Enterprise in Mixed Economies."

These figures, although indicative of little actual public ownership of resources, do not reflect the degree to which governments exert control, often costly and freedom-destroying, over private enterprise. This is done to a large extent through price controls and by taxes; such as "protective" tariffs, by which governments curtail trade in one line, subsidize it in another.

Pictured by ambitious politicians as helpful to the nation, these meddling measures actually are harmful. They force poverty on the people affected and do so under guise of doing them good. Americans may be glad there is, relatively, not as much of this destructive intervention in the U.S. as in other countries. When such measures are proposed by the U.S. Congress, they are exposed - and opposed - by such organizations as the American Civil Liberties Union.

As Nov. 6 approaches, some are still asking, "What does Reagan stand for?" The answer is, less government than his opponents.

Only a socialist would brand that as negative. It is the most positive of philosophies. It would clear away the impediments and give maximum encouragement to individuals and cooperating groups to help themselves. It is just what the U.S., as well as other countries, most need at the present moment.

Life with baboon heart 'day by day'

LOMA LINDA, Calif. (AP) — Doctors hope Baby Fae, the infant with a transplanted baboon's heart, eventually will go home, but for now she receives her parents' caresses in a hospital as she battles the possibility of organ rejection one day at a time.

Immunological studies "show no indications of any rejection crises of any sort.... It's surprising. I'm very pleased," Dr. David Hinshaw, a surgeon at Loma Linda University Medical Center, said Wednesday.

Doctors said Baby Fae was guzzling formula on her sixth day with the transplanted heart, while her mother rocks her and calms her when she fusses.

Baby Fae is the world's longest-lived survivor of an animal-to-human heart transplant, having surpassed the previous 3 1/2-day record of a South African accountant who received a chimpanzee's heart.

The nearly 3-week-old infant from Barstow, Calif., whose exact age and real name have been withheld, "is still in serious but stable condition," hospital spokeswoman Tami Wood said Wednesday. "She's very alert and moving around a lot. She has very healthy appetite. She really wants her food when it's time to be fed."

The infant, with a severe heart defect, was hours from death when she received the baboon's heart Friday, said doctors who performed the transplant at the Loma Linda hospital under the leadership of Dr. Leonard Bailey.

Baby Fae will continue receiving anti-rejection drugs "for a substantial period, perhaps indefinitely," said Hinshaw. "Our anticipation is certainly the child will go home like any other child.... We hope it would be as early as possible."

He said doctors were encouraged by the lack of a "hyperacute" rejection immediately after the transplant. Transplant patients often show signs of rejection seven to 10 days after surgery, he said, but "whether this will be true in this infant we just don't know."

Hinshaw noted there is no "threshold" after which she will be safe from rejecting the transplant, but her chances improve with time.

"It's a day-by-day process," Hinsaw said. "Every day that goes by in a favorable way is in a sense a watershed."

Baby Fae's parents spend "a great deal of time" with the infant, said pediatrics chairman Dr. John Mace.

"The mother and father have both caressed the baby. Pediatricians, I think, call it bonding," transplant services chief Dr. Ted Mackett said. "The mother is in the room with a rocking chair, rocking the baby."

"I think she's starting to know who her mother is," said Dr. Robin Doroshov, who explained that when the baby fusses, her mother calms her.

Baby Fae "responds to her environment normally," the pediatric cardiologist said. "She sucks on a pacifier rather vigorously, as if to tell us we're not feeding her enough."

Mace said the infant, who was born slightly prematurely at 36 weeks, also was being fed intravenously.

Asked when Loma Linda's transplant team would proceed with plans to do up to four more baboon-to-human transplants on infants with severely underdeveloped hearts, Hinshaw replied: "We would not consider doing another case until we feel comfortable with this one on a longer-term basis."

Bomb is dropped on real estate business

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Treasury officials have let the news slip out, and it is like a bomb tossed into the middle of all those folks who make up the real estate business — the lenders, the sellers, the owners and builders.

Those folks are always on edge these days, reacting to the slightest provocation.

To real estate people, some of the best ideas of the tax people are akin to criminal acts that violate their person, privacy and property.

The news: the Treasury is pondering the benefits to them of reducing or eliminating the mortgage-interest deduction that second-home taxpayers now enjoy.

Such a move might not have any more impact on housing and real estate than it has on government revenues, but to the real estate people it is the principal involved.

Let the government eliminate the deductibility of second-home interest, the housing and real estate people say, and then they'll go after the deductibility of first-home interest. And that, they argue, is discrimination.

The idea has surfaced before and the reaction was similar. But the earlier surfacings came from academics and think-tank types. This one's from Uncle Sam himself.

Here are some of the arguments against removing deductibility:

—It comes close to violating the very spirit of America because, after all, a family's home is its castle, the sanctuary of all that is right and strong.

The housing and real estate people say homeowners are more likely to be law-abiding voters and supporters of their communities — admirable people, defenders of America.

—Removing deductibility from second homes poses the threat of the camel getting his nose farther into the tent, and then his entire body.

If so sacred a deduction as mortgage interest can be eliminated or reduced, what powers will citizens have to protect themselves from further intrusions?

—It's discriminatory. If second-home interest loses its tax-deductibility, then why not second cars, and second sets of furniture and all those installment loans that allow so many people to appear solvent?

—It's based on the false assumption that second homes are owned by people who already own one home. Many people pay rent, which cannot be deducted on income taxes, and maintain a second home in order to cash in on the tax benefits that so many others enjoy.

If these arguments seem extreme there is a reason: Since World War II the housing industry has been through seven recessions.

District attorney investigating allegations against police

KENDLETON, Texas (AP) — The Fort Bend County district attorney says he's looking into allegations that police in this tiny Southeast Texas town have been abusing suspects and improperly fining motorists.

All three members of the police force resigned after some records were seized by investigators, and the town council voted to dissolve the Kendleton Police Department until the investigation is completed.

"Those people have been in trouble since the day they formed that police department," District Attorney William Meitzen. "Trouble is nothing new for the Kendleton Police Department."

Meitzen said Tuesday he also is looking into allegations that the police department has misapplied funds and lost a safe containing money and receipts.

Meitzen said he started the investigation about three weeks ago and that affidavits have been taken from four people, including a woman who claims she was strip-searched by a male officer.

A man claimed he was assaulted and others say they were harassed, the prosecutor says.

Meitzen said investigators, armed with subpoenas, confiscated police department records on Monday, just five days after a safe in the Kendleton municipal court disappeared.

Shortly afterward, the three-man force resigned.

Kendleton Mayor W. M. McNeil said the safe was used to store money, receipts and other documents from the municipal court.

Kendleton, a town of 600 about 45 miles southwest of Houston, has had a series of problems.

In 1981, county prosecutors investigated police-harassment complaints filed by citizens, but no action was taken.

Last year, Meitzen investigated the disappearance of $5,000 in fines and bonds that were collected at the city jail but never placed into the city treasury. No indictments were returned in the case, and Meitzen said Tuesday that the issue "is a lost cause."

Kendleton still owes the state of Texas $23,238 from fines and assessments collected from 1977 to 1981. The city has agreed to make monthly payments of $1,500.

TORNADO DAMAGE—The family and friends of Tania Pearson and Ray Barnes help clean up the remains of their mobile home which was destroyed by a tornado Wednesday night which killed two persons who lived in the mobile home park located just north of Carbondale, Kan.

Unusual fall twisters kill 2

CARBONDALE, Kan. (AP) — An unusual late-season tornado struck and tumbled house trailers in a mobile home park, killing two people and injuring 10 others.

The flurry of fall tornadoes Wednesday also hit Oklahoma, where the National Weather Service said as many as three twisters touched down and damaged houses and vehicles. No injuries were reported.

The twister that struck this western Kansas town Wednesday night gave residents little time to act.

"It happened so quickly it would take your head swim," said Eldred Boyer, 79, owner of the Inland Springs Trailer Court in a town about 10 miles south of Pampa. "It got still. It got dead hot. It seemed like it came right down and dropped."

The tornado killed a middle-aged man who was found buried under debris, and killed a woman whose trailer home just outside the mobile home park was demolished, said Osage County Sheriff Robert Masters. The names of the victims were being withheld until relatives could be notified.

The 10 people injured at the mobile home park were treated at the scene for minor cuts, bruises and shock, said Osage County ambulance squad director Tony Bell.

Masters said he did not know the extent of the damage to the 16-trailer court, but said at least five of the homes were extensively damaged.

The weather service reported several tornadoes near Seiling and Chester in northwest Oklahoma.

"We may be talking about only one tornado, possibly two or as many as three in the same general area," said Mike Branick, a forecaster with the weather service.

At least one home in Chester was destroyed, but its occupants escaped injury as the house collapsed around them, police said.

In Carbondale, Ray Barnes said he had been taking a shower and his friend, Tanya Pearson, had been watching television when the tornado struck.

Barnes said he ran from the bathroom to the bedroom and dived under the bed, while Ms. Pearson grabbed onto a couch.

The trailer was turned over repeatedly by the twister. Barnes ended up on top of his bed on a pile of debris, while Ms. Pearson found herself sitting in the grass next to the destroyed trailer, he said.

Victims of the tornado were told to go to a school where a relief shelter had been set up, but a dispatcher for the sheriff's department said all the displaced people had found shelter with friends and relatives.

The tornadoes are "a little bit unusual for this time of year," said Pete Reynolds of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo. "But the ingredients were there that are usually there during the springtime."

"You had a warm, moist unstable air mass meeting up with a cold front ... and that's usually what it takes."

Polish hold mass for slain priest

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland today marks its most solemn holy day with an All Saints' Day Mass by Cardinal Jozef Glemp at a Warsaw cemetery that was expected to draw a large crowd to honor slain pro-Solidarity priest Jozef Popieluszko.

On the eve of the holiday, an estimated 10,000 worshippers packed Warsaw's St. Stanislaw Kostka Church and the surrounding streets at a Mass for Popieluszko.

The Rev. Aleksander Seniuk told the crowd, which included Popieluszko's parents, that the outspoken priest had become solidarity's patron.

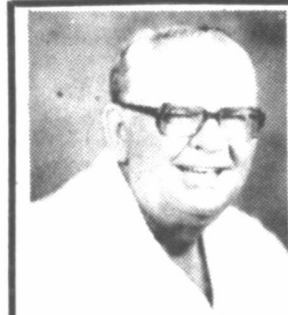

"Today Solidarity is handcuffed, but thanks to you, her chaplain, it is free with her soul as never before," said Seniuk, his voice booming over outdoor loudspeakers.

Popieluszko's body was found Tuesday in a reservoir in northern Poland, 11 days after his alleged abduction by three officers of the Polish secret police. An Interior Ministry spokesman said Wednesday the three would likely face murder charges.

The 37-year-old priest was one of the most vocal members of Poland's Roman Catholic clergy in advocating the ideals of Solidarity, the now-outlawed independent labor federation.

Popieluszko is to be buried Saturday at Powazki Cemetery in Warsaw.

State fair limps to end

DALLAS (AP) — Wet weather may have lowered the crime rate at the Texas State Fair, but it also dampened the fun as well as the activities, fair officials say.

The fair limped to a soggy end Sunday with 17 days of its 24-day run drenched by rain.

The sun broke through the clouds on the fair's final weekend, drawing more than 400,000 visitors and pushing the total attendance to 2,931,691, about 37,000 more than last year.

But fair officials said the cost of extending the fair an extra week in an effort to gear up for 1986's Texas Sesquicentennial would cancel those gains.

"We got $40,000 more (than last year), but it took a week to get it," said state fair general manager Wayne Gallagher.

Last year's fair expenses totaled about $3.3 million, while $4 million was spent to put on this year's show.

Gallagher said fair visitors spent about $4.5 million on admission tickets, food sales and the Midway. But he said they bought fewer ride coupons — 3.1 million compared with 3.3 million last year.

"That's understandable because they (ride operators) had to cut down every time it got wet," he said.

In addition, country-western singing stars Reba McEntyre and Eddy Raven canceled appearances at the Cotton Bowl.

Medical personnel also treated an above-average number of strains, sprains and abrasions sustained when people slipped on wet walkways, officials said Tuesday.

Today's hairstyles lean to a post-punk look

By ROSANNE RAMUNNI
Easton Express
EASTON, Pa. (AP) — It started a decade ago in London. Streetwise punk rockers, intent on demonstrating their rebellion against society, poked safety pins in their ears, donned leather and chains and did hair-raising things to their heads. Shaved scalps, multicolored spikes, mohawks and reverse mohawks became the vanguard of the punk era.

This new wave eventually rolled across the ocean to America when the avant-garde, the blow-dried, feathered-back look of the '70s died, and hair driers, curling irons and heated rollers were discarded in favor of gels, mousses and washout dyes.

But recently, the savage look has been tamed to appeal to a larger market. "Postpunk" styles — including lopsided hairdos, military cuts and flat-tops — are the hottest fashions of the '80s. School kids to secretaries are sporting them.

"I like new things, new looks. I like to be a little different," said Carolyn Walters, 36, of Phillipsburg, a secretary for a large pharmaceutical company in Somerville.

So Ms. Walters had the hair on the sides of her head shaved; she dyed the rest a pale shade of red. The hair on top of her head is teased into a bouffant, and a 4-inch tail — which she braids — hangs down her back.

"I dress conservatively for work so I like to do something different with another part of my appearance," she said.

Ms. Walters said she didn't get much flak about her hair from co-workers or friends. She does get a lot of attention, however.

"Most people seem to like to look at it but would never do it to their own hair," she said.

Like others who sport postpunk styles, Ms. Walters has grown accustomed to being stopped on the street by strangers who want to make a comment or ask a question about her hair. They don't mind the attention — most of the time.

"Notice is fine. Even innocence — like, 'Excuse me, why is your hair like that?' — is OK. But we'll never get used to the stares," said Jimi Harrison, 26, who not only wears an unusual cut, but creates them. Harrison owns Jimi's, a trend-setting salon in Easton.

Joe Firsh, 19 of Nazareth, thinks it's fun, too. But his parents aren't laughing.

"When I was leaving the house the other day, my father told me to put on a hat so people wouldn't throw stones at me," said the East Stroudsburg University sophomore.

Firsh has worn his naturally blond hair in everything from a Beatles' bowl cut to a military cut. Now, his bangs hang down on one side of his forehead and the sides are shaved all the way to the back, where a tail runs from the middle of his hair down to his neck.

On Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays, he puts a rubber band around the tail. On Thursdays and Fridays, he braids it.

Firsh said he didn't mind attracting attention, because the only comments he got were complimentary. "I guess that people that don't care for it don't say anything," he said.

Robert Bird, 29, of Phillipsburg, said he'd grown accustomed to the stares and the whispers. "I don't mind it because I've always been one to pioneer fashion," said Bird, who works with mentally retarded adults in Hunterdon County.

"I've always been real interested in hairstyles and the different things you can do with hair. I've always been an experimenter," he said, adding that he was "one of the first in the area" to get a tight, curly permanent, when that style was in vogue back in the early '70s.

Margaret Ferrell of Forks

Township says she's a bit too old for tails. But she sports a fashionable modified wedge.

"I don't like to look like I just came from an assembly line. I like to be different, but this is as different as I can be," said Ms. Farrell.

Ms. Farrell says her friends like many of the latest styles, but some prefer more conservative cuts.

Dear Abby

Hosts lured by fishing trip were out of line

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: "Hurt Parents" said that every summer they travel a long distance to spend 10 days with their son and his family, and while they were there last summer, their hosts let the painters come in, which ruined the parents' vacation. I think I can top that.

Every other summer, my husband and I drive 1,500 miles to visit his parents.

Last summer, after four days, our in-laws informed us that they were leaving the next day to go fishing with friends! They said they were sure there were other places we would like to see, and they were giving us the opportunity to see them.

I was flabbergasted. Since we had no other plans, and couldn't afford to stay in motels and eat every meal out for the remaining six days, we came home.

Sharing a house with painters would have been a pleasure compared to what happened to us. Now, what do you think of that?

LAST TRIP HOME

DEAR LAST TRIP: I think you were treated shabbily. When I sided with "Hurt Parents," a surprising number of readers protested, saying, "Ten days is too long. Perhaps the son and daughter-in-law were trying to tell them that after three days, fish and houseguests begin to stink."

DEAR ABBY: I just received a chain letter with instructions to make five copies and mail it to five of my friends. It says if I break the chain, "something" will happen to me.

What will happen if I don't follow the instructions?

CLARENCE

DEAR CLARENCE: You will save a dollar on postage and a lot of time.

DEAR ABBY: This is in defense of "The Eldest," who wanted to exclude the family black sheep from her parents' 50th wedding anniversary. (The black sheep was a hooker, and "The Eldest" was afraid she'd hustle men at the party.) "The Eldest" asked her minister and he said, "Invite her. 'T' stands in the middle of pride."

We have one like that in our family. There are nine of us, and No. 8 has always been the source of untold grief to our parents. They always forgave her and helped her out of jams, and in return she is absolutely ruining what should be their "golden years."

No. 8 has been arrested for prostitution, shoplifting, falsifying prescriptions, credit card theft and forgery. She's unable to support herself, so my parents remodeled their basement into a nice apartment for her. She shows her appreciation by dragging home bums and bikers she meets in taverns and letting them spend the night. We all live in terror that one of these hoodlums will go upstairs and harm our parents.

Recently when another sister was married, she asked our minister if she should exclude No. 8, and the minister said, "Leave her out; we have one of those in our family, too, so I know how you feel."

So, if "I" stands in the middle of "pride," I'd like to point out that "U" stands in the middle of "stupid." And it's just plain stupid to let one black sheep spoil everything.

Amarillo College's theatre season opens in November

The Amarillo College Adult Theater season 1984-85 begins this month with a rendition of "Amadeus," a play by Peter Shaffer, Nov. 14-18.

This play revolves around a confrontation between mediocrity and genius. In the court of Austrian Emperor Franz Joseph II, Antonio Salieri is the established court composer. Enter young Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, perhaps the greatest musical genius of all time. And so the mediocre Salieri, envious and hateful, sets about to destroy the child genius Mozart.

AC Children's Theatre season opens with "Wind in the Willows" by Joseph Baldwin, based on the book by Kenneth Grahame, Nov. 9-11.

The famous English gentleman, Mr. Toad of Toad Hall, sees his first motor car and promptly falls uncontrollably in love with motoring. He buys a car which he then crashes. Another car is bought, and another, and another.

For, once at the throttle, Toad in his goggles and duster is a man possessed.

Soon Toad is ruled off the road. Then he steals a car. For this he is sent to jail for 20 years. While there, he learns that Weasels have been taken over by his old family home and all his friends have been thrown out.

The Jailer's daughter adores Toad for his charm and dash, and helps him escape. Mingling with the adventures of Toad is the touching story of Portly Otter. This is an enchanting play for the entire family.

Season tickets are available as well as special rates for Senior Citizens and special groups.

Box office hours are 1-5 p.m. weekdays beginning one week prior to a performance and 7:30 p.m. on the day of the performance. Curtain time for all AC performances is 8:15 p.m. for evenings and 2:30 p.m. for matinees.

Questions about the 1984-85 season can be answered by calling 376-5111, ext. 2503, for the adult plays, ext. 2517 for the children's, during the established box office hours.

Museum to feature Poling's paintings

Paintings by LaNelle Poling of Fritch are to be featured at the Carson County Square House Museum, today, Nov. 1, through Nov. 10. Paintings may be viewed during regular museum hours, Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Sunday from p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Poling is a native of the Texas Panhandle. She was born in Amarillo, but most of her life has been spent on the Poling Ranch, 30 miles northeast of Amarillo. She has earned national acclaim for six life-size dioramas, commissioned by the National Park Service, shown at the Lake Meredith Aquatic and Wildlife Museum in Fritch. She has also painted the wildlife dioramas, with the exception of one, located in the Moody Wildlife Exhibit at the Carson County Square House Museum in Panhandle. Her latest natural setting is of Palo Duro Canyon as a background for an aoudad sheep. Poling began oil painting at 19, taking lessons from every available artist in the area. However, she found that individuality came through practice and experience. By combining creativeness and ability to capture depth and realism, along with a natural talent for balance and composition, her canvases are transformed into treasured works of art. With her home overlooking the Canadian River breaks and Lake Meredith, Poling has had ample opportunity to study the rich colors and rugged beauty of the Southwest's wide open spaces and canyons at first hand.

FORWARD MOTION, pictured here, is a short snappy hairstyle that flows forward onto the face exposing fringed and spiked interest for fall - winter. Designed by HairAmerica, the fashion group for the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association, the look is inspired by actress Shirley MacLaine.

Allergies

Cosmetic allergies are odd things. Skin around the eyes may react to nail polish far more than to makeup near the eyes. A reaction to hair color can happen after many harmless uses of the product. Your skin may be sensitive and easily irritated and the reaction may not necessarily be an allergic one.

Follow all directions on cosmetics, such as patch-testing hair colors, consult a dermatologist about any persistent, unexplained skin reaction.

Blackman hits winner

Mavericks continue to master Pacers

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Dallas Coach Dick Motta and Mavericks guard Rolando Blackman say they can't explain the Mavericks' mastery over the Indiana Pacers.

Blackman, who had a game-high 28 points, hit a jump shot with 16 seconds left Wednesday night to lift the Mavericks to a 101-100 win over the Pacers in National Basketball Association play. It was Dallas' fifth straight victory against Indiana.

"It's just one of those things in the NBA where one team beats another team," said Motta. "Just look, for example, at us against the Los Angeles Lakers. We just give them fits."

"How can you explain that?" said Motta. "It's just basketball." Blackman says the teams' styles may have something to do with the Mavericks' success against the Pacers.

"I don't know why we always have such good success against them, but I guess it's because we're both the same kind of ball club and we both like to run," said Blackman, who also scored nine points late in the second period to power a 13-2 Dallas outburst that gave the Mavericks a 53-47 halftime lead.

Indiana trailed by as many as 18 points, 74-56, in the third quarter, but closed to eight, 80-72, at the end of the period.

The Mavericks opened a 95-85 lead in the fourth period, before Pacer center Steve Stipanovich led an Indiana comeback.

Stipanovich, who finished with 19 points, converted two three-point plays as the Pacers scored 10 straight points to tie the game at 95-95 with 2:52 left.

Stipanovich hit two free throws to put Indiana ahead 100-99 with 25 seconds left, setting the stage for Blackman's heroics.

"The play before that was for me to go one-on-one but it didn't materialize," said Blackman. "The (winning) play was set for me. I was to take the ball and go one-on-one. It was a tough shot. I guess the Pacers deserve a better fate."

The Pacers had two opportunities to take the lead after Blackman's basket, but Jim Thomas missed a shot with six seconds left and Jerry Sichting couldn't get a shot off after Indiana threw the ball inbounds with two seconds left.

"We were looking for Stipo inside or Jerry outside," Pacers Coach George Irvine said of the final play. "We got the ball to Jerry, but he was swarmed. It's hard to get off a shot in two seconds."

Jay Vincent had 27 points and 17 rebounds for Dallas, now 2-2. Mark Aguirre scored 20 points for the Mavericks.

Rookie guard Vern Fleming finished with 16 points, Thomas had 15 and Sichting scored 14 for the Pacers. 0-2. Indiana forward Herb Williams added 14 points and grabbed 17 rebounds.

Surprise teams square off Saturday

The Associated Press
The Southwest Conference's big surprises of October find themselves facing each other on the first weekend of November as all nine teams gear up for Saturday action.

TCU and Houston match their 3-1 conference records in a regionally-televised (Raycom Sports) game kicking off at 11:34 a.m. in Houston's Astrodome. Houston opened its SWC race with three straight victories, while TCU won four straight games in October to move into the top twenty poll for the first time in 22 years.

SWC leader Texas risks its 3-0 mark at Texas Tech, while Texas A&M is at SMU and Rice meets Arkansas at Little Rock in other conference action. Baylor entertains New Mexico in the Bears' final non-conference game of the season.

Saturday's schedule in order of CST starting times, with full-season and SWC won-lost-tied records in parentheses:

TCU (6-1, 3-1 in SWC) at HOUSTON (4-3, 3-1 in SWC), 11:34 a.m. (Raycom-TV) — The early surprises of '84, Frogs are in national rankings for first time in 22 years and Cougars rebounded from early losses to sweep first three conference starts vs. Baylor, A&M and SMU before losing to Arkansas—but last time UH beat those three and then lost to Arkansas. Cougars went on to tie for SWC title ('76) and win Cotton Bowl...Frog offense going at SWC record pace of 507.7 yards per game, also leading SWC in rushing at 339.0 yards per game and remain most versatile team in SWC annals with 168.7 passing yards a game...Kenneth Davis ranks third nationally in rushing at 147.7 per game and is more than 400 yards ahead of SWC No. 2 rusher...game matches four of SWC's eight leading rushers, including No. 3 Tony Jeffery of TCU (80.0 yards per game) and Houston duo of No. 6 Raymond Tate (70.1) and No. 8 Sloan Hood (58.7) — and Davis is a junior, Tate sophomore, other two are frosh...versatility of both offenses is further reflected as game also boasts four of top eight SWC receivers — Houston's Larry Shepherd No. 1 with 4.6 catches per game, teammate Carl Hilton No. 4 at 3.9, TCU's Dan Sharp at 3.7 and James Maness at 3.1...Frogs took over 20th in Associated Press writers broadcasters poll following 38-28 victory over Baylor last week...comparing scores useless as SMU beat TCU and lost to Houston, Arkansas beat Houston and lost to TCU, while both beat Baylor by ten...Cougars are 8-0 vs. Frogs, four wins at Astrodome, but last three have been decided by total of 15 points, including 31-27 Cougar victory in '82 when they tied last met in Astrodome...Frogs have 161-yard per game offensive lead, Houston has 73-yard average margin on defense...UH has allowed 167.6 rushing yards per game and 12 TD runs, close to Davis' per-game average as he's scored 11 TDs...Merle Harmon and Bud Wilkinson on Raycom telecast, Mike Edmonds and Dave South handle combined Houston-TCU radio network.

TEXAS A&M (4-3, 1-3 in SWC) at SMU (4-2, 2-2 in SWC), 2 p.m. — Both teams have had rocky starts in SWC play prior to Aggies' 38-14 victory over Rice last week — Mustangs won close ones to TCU and Baylor before losing close ones to Houston and Texas, while Aggies dropped three straight to Tech, Houston and Baylor, last two by total of six points...after climbing as high as sixth place in polls, Mustangs dropped to 19th in AP this week after 13-7 loss to No. 2 Texas in Austin...illustrating competitive aspect of this season, teams could have combined won-lost record of 12-1 with slight changes in final minutes of four of their losses...Aggies among SWC defensive leaders, offensive laggards—they're second in total defense (283.3 yards per game) and second in pass defense (132.1), last in total offense (295.0) and eighth in rushing offense (134.9)...SMU going the other route: second in offense (392.5), third in rushing (231.0), sixth in defense (341.2) and eighth in pass defense (195.0)...SMU hasn't lost three in a row since '79, when Houston, Texas and A&M beat Mustangs...three of SWC's top rushers spark attacks, SMU's Reggie Dupard No. 2 in SWC and 19th nationally at 101.5 yards a game, teammate Jeff Atkins ninth in SWC at 53.7 and A&M's Thomas Sanders seventh at 61.9...Mustang QB Don King remains SWC total-offense leader with 194.2 yards a game and has respectable 123.6 rating points in NCAA pass-efficiency formula that figures completion percentage, TDs, interceptions and yardage...Aggies' Jimmy Hawkins broke first SWC TD punt return of year vs. Rice to take lead with average of 10.3 yards per return...Aggies have 32-28-6 all-time series lead in what has developed into streaky rivalry...Aggies won five straight before SMU won last four...Dallas tally is 15-15-4...Brad Sham and Ted Davis on combined SMU-A&M radio.

TEXAS (5-0-1, 2-0 in SWC) at TEXAS TECH (4-3, 2-2 in SWC), 2 p.m. — Two teams specializing in cardiac finishes, six of their combined 13 games went to final seconds before being settled...Tech lost successive last-minute decisions to New Mexico and Baylor, last week reserved it with 20-17 victory over Tulsa, Texas tied Oklahoma on game's final play, then survived last-minute goal-line passes to defeat Arkansas and SMU...Longhorns' persistence has paid off with No. 2 ranking in Associated Press poll after they held No. 1 spot for two weeks in September...despite 27-6 all-time series lead,

McLean eyes first win in loop meeting with Groom

By JEFF LANGLEY
Pampa News Sports Writer

McLEAN — One pack of Tigers wants to even its season record; another group of Tigers wants to win its first game in Friday's match between Groom and McLean.

Both teams hope to put the skids on losing streaks in the District 1-A contest at McLean.

Groom goes into the game with a 3 - 4 season record and a 2 - 3 district mark. The Groom Tigers have lost two straight; a 40 - 0 whipping by Wheeler and a 37 - 14 loss to Gruver last week.

Despite the consecutive setbacks, Groom has to be picked as the favorite Friday: McLean hasn't won a game all year.

Follett ran over the hapless squad last week by a score of 50 - 6. The McLean Tigers have managed to put just 12 points on the board this season, while their opponents have scored 281.

McLean won four games last year, however, and will be hungry to break the ice at home. Bill Billingsley was a winner for the team last week, scoring on a three-yard run.

Groom, which fields one of the biggest teams in the district, is led by sophomore running back Jack Britten, who went over 100 yards in the team's last two losses. Britten also finished with two touchdowns in the battle with Gruver.

The Pampa News Game of the Week kicks off at 7:30 p.m. In other area games Friday, Miami hosts Guthrie, Canadian welcomes River Road, White Deer hosts Memphis and Wheeler goes to Claude. Wheeler, ranked seventh in the state's Class 2A poll, is undefeated and will be going after its sixth consecutive shutout. The Mustangs haven't given up any points since a 23-21 opening-game win over Stinnett.

While Wheeler has a playoff spot clinched in District 1-1A, White Deer in District 2-2A is closing in on a playoff berth. White Deer and Memphis are tied for the district lead at 3-0. Should the Bucks lose Friday night, they could still qualify for the playoffs with a win over Clarendon in the final game of the season.

Miami, in District 3-A six-man, must win its final two games to have a chance of advancing.

Meeting scheduled tonight on public golf course

The Pampa Golf Association will meet at 7 p.m. tonight at Lovett Memorial Hospital to discuss the fund-raising program for the proposed public golf course and to accept final Charter Club memberships at the current $250 fee. After Nov. 1, the fee will be raised to $275.

Persons interested in helping with the fund raising are urged to attend the meeting.

Contributions for the new course can be made by writing a check to the Gray County treasurer and designating it for the Public Golf Course. Contributions can be mailed to Gray County Treasurer, P.O. Box 976, Pampa, Tex. 79065.

Fund-raising chairman for the project is John McGuire and can be contacted at 665-3031 (home) or 665-8762 (office).

OVERWORKED SEWAGE PLANT—Waste matter collects in a sewage treatment plant in the Deer Island section of Boston. Judge threatens takeover of fouled harbor

By JANE SEAGRAVE
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — For years, proper Bostonians tilted their noses at the mention of sewage. Now the issue can no longer be ignored.

Impatient with the slow progress of legislation to clean up Boston Harbor, state Superior Court Judge Paul G. Garrity has threatened to take control of metropolitan Boston's disposal system.

"Imagine a family throwing the contents of their chamber pot on their front lawn," said Garrity earlier this month. "That's what it's like."

In the two centuries since colonists dressed as Indians heaved 340 chests of English tea into the harbor, billions of tons of waste and debris have been tossed, spilled and flushed into the bay's murky waters.

Every day, two overworked plants discharge 450 million gallons of wastewater and 100,000 pounds of partially treated human waste into the 47-square-mile harbor. When it rains, storm water laced with chemicals and raw sewage gushes from more than 100 overflow pipes along the shore.

Bathers on public beaches south of Boston and boaters out for a weekend cruise complain of floating scum. Nearly 75 percent of the mudflats in the inner harbor are closed to commercial clamdigging, and the clams that are harvested must be cleaned for 48 hours before they are sold.

Toxic industrial wastes including zinc, mercury and PCBs are in "relatively high concentrations" in the inner harbor, and elsewhere the water is contaminated with organic chemicals, according to the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering.

A recent study by the National Marine Fisheries Service Laboratory found a higher than normal incidence of liver cancer in harbor fish.

"It's unsightly, it's unhealthy and more importantly it's dangerous," said Garrity.

After watching helplessly while its beaches grew foul, Boston's southern neighbor, the city of Quincy, filed suit against the Metropolitan District Commission in December 1982 to force cleanup of the harbor.

Garrity, who oversees the lawsuit, appointed Charles M. Haar, Brandeis professor of law at Harvard University, to assess the problem.

Haar found a 5,300-mile network of pipes and pumping stations — the oldest in the nation — that carry the wastes of 2 million people to two treatment plants that were obsolete soon after they were built.

The same pipes that carry sewage also carry storm water from city streets. When it rains, the plants can't handle the extra volume, and the excess pours into the harbor. Nearly six billion gallons of raw sewage enters the harbor that way each year.

Equipment failures occur monthly at the Deer Island and Nut Island plants. One pumping station in East Boston is so antiquated that the Smithsonian Institute wants to acquire its 100-year-old steam engine, now considered a collector's item.

"It's held together with chewing gum and baling wire," Haar said of Deer Island. "You think you're back in Pompeii."

The problem is compounded by an equally complex tangle of responsibility for sewage disposal in the greater Boston area. Waste is collected by 43 different communities and piped to plants operated by the MDC, a state agency that depends on the Legislature for its funding. A number of federal and state agencies regulate the treatment and discharge of waste.

In part because no one agency is fully in charge, no one ensured that Boston's sewage system was up to date.

Today, Boston Harbor is one of the worst violators of the 12-year-old federal Clean Water Act, said Michael Deland, Northeast regional administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, which is considering various MDC proposals for bringing the system into compliance.

Proposal would force press corps from capitol offices

AUSTIN (AP) — House Speaker Gib Lewis is recommending that reporters be forced from their Capitol offices because state government is growing and the press corps is in the way.

Former Capitol correspondent Dick Merkel, now Lewis' press secretary, told reporters this week his proposal would double the rent next year and close the press room in 1986.

"There's nothing in the rules or the law that says we have to provide for the press," said Merkel. "We've known we have two problems — not enough space for all the press that wanted it and not enough space for the legitimate requirements of this building under the law, to house the Legislature and support agencies.

"The demand for space overpowers the amount of space," he said.

Reporters have had office space in the Capitol since the building opened in 1888. The space was free until about five years ago. The approximately 20 news organizations in the Capitol now pay $1 per square foot per month.

Merkel's proposal would double the rent, which he said would still be about "one-tenth of the going rate" in Austin.

Merkel's plan now goes to Lewis and House Administration Committee Chairman Charles Evans, D-Hurst.

A committee of Capitol reporters plans to meet next week to discuss the proposal.

House officials control the press space because it is in the House wing of the Capitol. Evans' committee is in charge of the press room.

"They are open to alternative proposals if the press corps can agree on an alternative proposal," said Merkel.

The original blueprints for the Capitol includes areas called "reporters rooms." There also was a "reporters wash room."

Under Merkel's proposal, reporters would be given "a kind of a bullpen area" with tables and telephones. The space would be available for press use, but no news organization would have assigned offices.

The two-floor press room is outside the House of Representatives. There is a waiting list of other organizations that want space.

Merkel said the space is needed for House members and support agencies — such as the Legislative Budget Board and Legislative Council.

Asked if there is an ethical question of whether the state and press should be doing business, Merkel said, "I wouldn't even raise that point. The public's right to know, of course, is a consideration. Whether we are under an obligation to provide that space, I have no idea."

THE FIRST CHANNEL FOR KIDS HAS MOVED INTO YOUR NEIGHBORHOOD.

Nickelodeon has arrived! And it's the one channel you'll want your kids to watch.

Its wide range of programming is informative, entertaining, and best of all, nonviolent. Even the PTA likes what they've seen. They awarded Nickelodeon a special commendation. And the National Education Association, America's largest group of teachers, endorsed the whole channel. That's a first in television history!

But our biggest fans are the kids who watch the shows. See why they love them! Call today and find out how to bring Nickelodeon into your home.

Lasers track fingerprints

By JUDY GIANNETTINO
Associated Press Writer
LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Searching for fingerprints at a crime scene has become as easy as pointing a laser beam at a surface, and a Texas Tech University professor researching the sophisticated technique says the day will come when laser detection makes print dusting obsolete.

"Quite often, you can pick up fingerprints (with the laser) that you couldn't get otherwise and I see the day when this will be the way to detect fingerprints," said Roland Menzel, a Tech physics professor.

"It's not a quick process, but it's been a long time since I've had a case where I didn't do better with the laser," he said.

Menzel said a few law enforcement agencies, such as the FBI and the Los Angeles Police Department, already are using lasers to identify fingerprints.

But his research should one day make laser print detection commonplace, he said.

Menzel, who pioneered laser print detection, is apparently the only person besides FBI researchers currently studying the technique.

In his eighth year of research, the 41-year-old professor said recently he is working on devising and refining methods for detecting fingerprints on wood, cardboard, cloth and skin — surfaces on which prints generally cannot be detected.

On more typical surfaces and with a specially designed laser, fingerprints can be seen and photographed for later identification, Menzel said.

"On some surfaces, you simply illuminate it and the laser picks up the prints," he explained. "On other surfaces, you dust with fluorescent powder or mix the surface with chemicals and the laser can then pick up the prints."

Menzel currently has three lasers — one he bought, one that was donated to his laboratory two years ago and a third portable machine on loan from a Florida company.

The portable laser with a price tag of about $30,000 can be moved easily and taken to crime scenes, while the two larger machines strictly are for lab use, he said.

The portable laser consists of a power unit, the laser head and beam delivery optics. An optic fiber cable can be attached to the laser to direct the beam to a certain area where fingerprints are believed to be, he said, and a television monitor and camera can be used for better viewing.

"It's all so compact that you can just load it in the car and take it to the crime scene," Menzel said.

Menzel has used his laser fingerprint detection methods on several national murder investigations.

"I get casework from all over the place," he said.

But he said he prefers to concentrate on his research.

For wood and cardboard, Menzel said he is working on ways to reduce the amount of background seen by altering the illuminating light color and by mixing various chemicals with the prints.

For cloth and skin detection, he said, enzymes are being tested to break down inert concentrations of the fingerprint into amino acids.

The enzymes attack the proteins and make fingerprints visible to the laser, he said.

"I have on occasion picked up prints on cloth or skin, but they are very rarely found," he said. "We need more research on the enzymes and the stabilization of the prints. But I think in due course we'll get the cloth."

Menzel also is researching the use of computer images in identifying fingerprints, he said.

"Too often, you get these prints that are good but not good enough to positively identify," he said.

"We're hoping to take the photograph of the print the laser has found and dump it into a computer and let it fool around to try to enhance the images," he said. "That way we should be able to identify it."

Menzel has been at Texas Tech since 1979 and formed a Center for Forensic Studies at the university in 1982.

He does not teach his fingerprint detection methods to Tech students but does offer classes for law enforcement officers.

And, he said, he hopes to one day establish a forensic technology program at the college.

"More and more, in law enforcement, we're turning away from the turn-of-the-century evidence methods," Menzel said.

"As we do, and as we get into the more sophisticated evidence examining, there will be a need for people with technological backgrounds."

Menzel, who completed his undergraduate work at the University of California at Los Angeles and received a doctorate in physics from Washington State University in 1970, said his Center for Forensic Studies is now nearly self-supporting and, has expanded into other areas in which lasers may simplify the detection and identification of physical evidence.

"For example," he said. "We're looking at how lasers may be useful in identifying fibers. There's a lot it could do; we just have to find out what."
