

City will consider pay plan

Pampa city commissioners will consider approval of a 1984-1985 employee classification and compensation plan during its regular meeting at 9 a.m. Tuesday.

The plan relates to the determination of a pay raise for city employees approved in the adopted operating budget for the fiscal year.

Commissioners also will consider on first reading an ordinance regarding the Texas Municipal Retirement System for employees.

In zoning matters the commission will consider on second reading two ordinances. One concerns the annexation of a tract of land between Francis and Harvester streets near the Pampa County Club and the zoning change from agriculture to Single Family 2 District for the same tract.

The other regards preliminary subdivision plats containing more specific guidelines for developers to follow to meet city standards.

A public hearing will be held on a request for a zoning change from Office District to Specific Use Permit in Lot 1, Block 12, of the North Crest Addition, Section II, for a clinical pharmacy in a medical building.

Commissioners will consider recommendations on two items for a renovation project at the M. K. Brown Auditorium, both requiring bids. One will be for stage lighting equipment and accessories. The other will be a recommendation from Johnson and Riemer concerning bids for other auditorium projects.

In other action, commissioners will consider a proposal for updating the master plan for the city as submitted by Merriman and Barber Consulting Engineers, Inc. Steve Vaughn, Office of Emergency Management coordinator, will give a report concerning installation of a generator in City Hall to provide emergency power capabilities.

The commission will consider two ordinances on first reading, one regarding the 1984 Electrical Code and the other amending Schedule IV of Ordinance 465 to provide yield right-of-way signs at the intersections of 20th Ave. with Dogwood Lane and Evergreen.

Policy changes urged

Bishops say country must take better care of poor

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's Catholic bishops, claiming the nation's economy as a religious issue, are pressing for official policy changes to deal with the "moral and social scandal" of poverty and unemployment in the world's richest country.

Their 112-page economic pastoral letter, released Sunday, raises many of the "fairness issues" Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale used in his efforts to portray President Reagan's administration as favoring the rich over the poor.

But the bishops mention no party or person, asserting in the first draft of the letter that the existence of 8 million jobless Americans as well as huge income gaps between rich and poor are unacceptable on simple moral grounds.

"The policy must be changed so the poor, in particular, can be taken care of, regardless of party," Archbishop Rembert Weakland of Milwaukee, the head of the drafting committee, said in a news briefing Sunday.

The draft letter will be discussed this week by the more than 300 U.S. cardinals, archbishops and bishops at the annual meeting of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops. Substantial revisions are possible before the final version is approved next November.

It marks the second time in two years that the bishops have taken on a controversial national issue, following their 1983 approval of a letter condemning nuclear war and criticizing administration policy on nuclear weapons — over the strong objection of White House officials.

The administration has yet to address the new letter, the text of which had been kept secret until after the election. The secrecy, Weakland said, was to keep it from becoming "a political football" during the campaign.

Some highlights:

— The bishops assert that "the fact that more than 15 percent of our nation's population live below the official poverty level is a social and moral scandal that cannot be ignored."

— The letter says even a goal of 6 percent unemployment is too high and calls for government job programs, even for people with few or no saleable skills. "The most urgent priority for U.S. domestic economic policy is the creation of jobs with adequate pay and decent working conditions," the letter says.

— It also declares that hunger persists in the United States and "far too many people are homeless" — contentions some administration officials have questioned.

— The bishops call for lowering taxes on the poor, preferably to zero, and for increases rather than cuts in welfare payments. And, money aside, they say the time has come for "a moratorium on rhetoric about 'welfare cheaters' and on stereotypes of welfare recipients" as lazy or crooked.

— Internationally, the letter deplores what the authors see as a switch in U.S. foreign-aid policy "from its earlier emphasis on basic human needs and social and economic development" toward a view that "makes the principal policy issue one of national security."

— Overall, it says, "We believe that the level of inequality in income and wealth in our society and even more the inequality on the world scale today must be judged morally unacceptable."

Shuttle crew grabs satellite in space first

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Free-flying astronaut Joe Allen

jetted away from shuttle Discovery today and captured a wayward satellite in a historic space salvage mission.

"Dock, dock!" he exclaimed as he inserted a 4-foot pole-like device called a "stinger" into the spent engine nozzle of the Palapa B2 satellite, securing it firmly. "Stop the clock. I've got it tied."

"Something that's never been done before," remarked Allen's fellow spacewalker, Dale Gardner.

Never before had a human being latched onto an orbiting satellite, nor had one been retrieved for return to Earth to be repaired and launched again. Allen and Gardner will be outside again Wednesday to rescue a second off-course payload.

After Allen snared Palapa, astronaut Anna Fisher, working controls inside the cabin, grabbed a grapple fixture on the stinger to bring it into the bay. But Gardner was unable to attach a second grapple fixture for proper berthing because of a protruding section of the satellite.

So Allen and Mrs. Fisher decided to exercise a backup plan in which Palapa is released from the arm and the spacewalkers berth it by hand — an exercise they had practiced many times in a water tank on Earth, just in case.

The capture was executed just 15 minutes after the untethered Allen cast free from Discovery's pen cargo bay to cross a 35-foot void between the two spacecraft.

propelling himself with a rocket backpack.

Shuttle, satellite and astronaut were streaking around the globe at 17,400 mph, 224 miles high.

Allen reported he had to conduct the docking while looking into a bright sun and that at times he could not see Palapa. "Didn't seem to affect your performance," said Mission Control. "Maybe it helped," Allen replied.

Allen, at 5-foot-6 one of the smallest astronauts, seemed dwarfed by the Palapa, measuring 21 feet high and 7 feet in diameter and weighing 1,500 pounds.

But maneuvering the big payload in space weightlessness was easy, and, with his backpack attached to the stinger, he fired its jets to stop Palapa's spin rate of 2 rpm, stabilizing it. Commander Rick Hauck and pilot David Walker triggered the ship's big and small steering jets 44 times during the pursuit of the errant satellite. They had circled the globe 64 times during the carefully calculated pursuit.

Once Palapa is secured in the cargo hold, the astronauts will set out to rescue the Westar 6 satellite, also orbiting off course about 700 miles from Palapa. That attempt will be made Wednesday, with Gardner wearing the rocket pack to jet over to the target.

Palapa and Westar, communications satellites worth about $35 million each, were left in useless orbits in February when their booster rockets misfired after they were carried into orbit and released in space.

Survivors of many wars attend veterans' ceremony

WASHINGTON (AP) — To President Reagan, the Vietnam Veterans Memorial is a national symbol of "past and current sacrifice," but to former Marine John Wisdom it's a place to shed an overdue tear.

The president and Wisdom were just two of the thousands on hand Sunday for Veterans Day ceremonies at the memorial — a statue of three servicemen and a spartan black granite wall listing the names of the 58,007 Americans killed or missing in Vietnam.

Wisdom, 37, came from Orlando, Fla., to walk along the wall with the aid of the cane he has used since 1968, when a Viet Cong mortar blast damaged nerve endings in his back.

"There's a commitment you have to go through with," he said. "It's very deep. For the first time since I came back, I cried. I found a buddy's name on the wall. I took my Purple Heart off my jacket and the American flag (patch) and left them there. That's all I could give him."

Survivors of both world wars and Korea attended Veterans Day activities in Washington, but they appeared well outnumbered by Vietnam vets — many of them clad in the same camouflage fatigues they wore in Southeast Asia.

Veteran Jim Goss, 35, of Oxford, Pa., visited the wall and found the names of 12 friends killed in Vietnam, where he served as a Navy medic south of Da Nang in 1969-70.

"I just spent a lot of time looking at them," Goss said. "The memorial means a lot. It's sort of a lost feeling — heart-rending and emotionally draining. The memorial is sort of like closing their book. It finally puts them at rest."

Reagan, making his first ceremonial appearance since a landslide re-election victory last Tuesday, called the Vietnam veterans "true patriots" and talked of the deep social and political rift caused by the controversial conflict.

"The war in Vietnam threatened to tear our society apart, and the political and philosophical disagreements that animated both sides continue to some extent," the president said. But he added, "I believe that in the decade since Vietnam the healing has begun and hope that before my days as commander in chief are over, the healing will be complete."

"This memorial is a symbol of both past and current sacrifice," Reagan said shortly before he signed a deed conveying the memorial — erected with private funds — to the U.S. government.

The president said that with the memorial formally becoming the property of all Americans, "now we can say to you (veterans) as a nation, thank you for your courage, thank you for your patience."

Also talking of healing was Jan Scruggs, president of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund Inc., the organization that raised the money to build the wall, completed in 1982, as well as the "Three Servicemen" statue unveiled last Friday and dedicated Sunday by Reagan.

"This is a time for remembrance and a time for healing the wounds of the war," Scruggs told the audience gathered at the wall near the Lincoln Memorial.

But Scruggs also said he found the ceremony "very ironical."

"The Vietnam veterans built the memorial and gave it to the government," he said. "Perhaps the government should build a memorial to give to the veterans, but Vietnam was that kind of war. We give our country back its pride. We give our country back its unity — both of which were wounded during the war."

In another ceremony Sunday, Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger placed the traditional Veterans Day wreath at the Tomb of the Unknowns in Arlington Cemetery.

He told the crowd of about 5,000 that the Vietnam Veterans Memorial is more than a tribute to the 9.8 million who wore American uniforms during the Vietnam War.

Silber: cabinet mention flattering

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — John Silber, president of Boston University and a former dean at the University of Texas, says he is interested in a position in the new Reagan administration as Secretary of Education, but declined to speculate on his chances of being appointed.

"I don't answer questions that haven't been asked," the 58-year-old Silber said in an interview published Sunday in the San Antonio Light.

He is pleased that his name has been mentioned as a possible replacement for outgoing Education Secretary Terrel H. Bell, but no one from the Reagan administration has approached him about the Cabinet post, Silber added.

"I think it's very flattering to have one's name mentioned," said the educator, who has been a controversial administrator at both the University of Texas and Boston University.

Bell announced last week that he would leave the administration at the end of the year.

Silber's most notable political involvement has been as a member of the National Bipartisan Commission on Central America, which urged continued military and economic aid from the United States to that troubled region.

Silber taught at the University of Texas between 1955 and 1970 and was dean of the college of arts and sciences.

Groom school trustees will look at suspension policy

GROOM — Suspension for Groom students will not mean vacation if school trustees approve a new in-school suspension policy.

The trustees will meet 8 p.m. Tuesday at the Groom ISD Superintendent's office to discuss approval of the new policy.

"Instead of sending the students home for suspension, we would place them in a room by themselves for the day," Superintendent Rex Peoples explained about the proposed policy.

Trustees are also expected to update the teacher evaluation to comply with new standards set by the Texas Legislature. Peoples said that the main change will be from a three level evaluation — satisfactory, unsatisfactory, —

TDC teacher pay exceeds state average, paper says

DALLAS (AP) — Teachers in Texas Department of Corrections schools are among the highest paid in the state and prison officials say the difficult teaching conditions warrant the higher salaries, the Dallas Times Herald reports.

In a story published Sunday, the newspaper said its survey of payroll and budget records reveal that teachers in prison schools will earn an average salary this year of $29,000.

Principals will receive about $45,000 under an informal agreement negotiated in 1978 by former prison director James Estelle and former state education commissioner Raymon Bynum, the newspaper said.

Prison officials defend the salaries — higher than the state average — because of the difficult teaching conditions in prisons.

But the newspaper said that some key members of the Legislature and Board of Corrections are calling for an investigation of prison school finances and new regulatory laws.

"This is one more example of the tremendous abuse of tax dollars," said state Rep. Ray Keller, R-Duncanville, the chairman of the House Law Enforcement Committee. "The Legislature in the next session should take dramatic steps to clean up this issue."

Corrections board member Harry Whittington of Austin said the panel — which also serves as the official board of education for the prison school system — has failed for years to scrutinize education expenditures, believing they were being monitored by the Texas Education Agency.

"There are no controls of any kind," Whittington said. "If this had been a private corporation, the shareholders would have removed the board for failure to discharge the responsibilities it had to shareholders, in this case the taxpayers."

In addition to the high salaries for principals and teachers, this year's prison school budget includes inmate recreation funds, high overhead costs for some programs and $65,000 to buy 130 color televisions, the Herald said.

About one-third of the current $24.55 million budget is spent on administration, which is higher than in most schools.

Prisons schools Supt. Lane Murray defended the costs, saying she needs the high pay scale to attract and retain teachers.

"If our teachers are getting paid on a par with the top districts in the state, I think that's fair," Ms. Murray said.

Agricultural Department says '84 will prove good year for farmers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department economists continue to say 1984 will turn out to have been a good year for farmers, at least from the standpoint of national statistics.

The department has not yet issued predictions for 1985, although some of those will be forthcoming next month at the USDA's annual outlook conference. As usual, those forecasts will be hedged carefully by pointing out the uncertainties in world demand and, of course, the weather.

Meanwhile, the department's Economic Research Service is mostly sticking to earlier assessments showing that farmers in 1984 are generally benefiting from better weather than they had last year when drought cut crop output dramatically.

Production of most major crops has rebounded from last year, including substantially more feed grains and soybeans, the main raw materials for the U.S. livestock industry.

Also, the agency said in a recent analysis, improvements in the economy have helped the farm sector.

Domestic demand for agricultural products continues strong, the report said. Real disposable income for 1984 is expected to be up about 7 percent from last year, while food prices are rising only moderately, about 4 percent.

Net farm income is still forecast at $29 billion to $33 billion this year, up from a 12-year low of $16.1 billion in 1983. Much of last year's decline was due to a sharp reduction in the value of farm inventories, just as much of the 1984 increase will be due to a rebuilding of those inventories.

Farm exports have improved, rebounding 9 percent to $38 billion in the fiscal year that ended on Sept. 30. Imports of agricultural products were up 15 percent to almost $19 billion.

"The volume of U.S. exports could expand during fiscal 1985, with some debt restructuring and continued recovery in the developing countries and crop shortfalls in some importing nations," the report said.

Cloud seeding considered for drought-stricken cities

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Proposals to artificially stimulate rain could become a major part of water supply plans for three drought-stricken cities next year, but a weather modification expert calls those plans "a false hope."

The cities — San Angelo, San Antonio and Corpus Christi — scrambled last summer to deal with drought conditions.

Agencies that supply water to the three cities that it may be well worth the cost for the cloud seeding project.

Others, however, are not so sure. "Often when a drought strikes, people turn to weather modification as a way to bail them out. That's a false hope," said Bob Riggio, chief of the Weather Climate Section of the Texas Department of Water Resources, which issues licenses and permits for weather modification projects.

"You need clouds to seed, and not only clouds, but particular types of clouds," Riggio told the San Angelo Standard-Times in an interview published Sunday. "During a drought, they simply do not exist."

San Angelo officials are considering plans for a program that could cost $2 million over a 10-year period to artificially stimulate rain.

"I think we're in a position where attitudes toward water will have to start changing," said San Angelo Public Works Director Cloice Whitley. "I think we should go ahead on a scientific, long-range basis."

The Edwards Underground Water District, which supplies San Antonio, is the only one of the three cities so far that has contracted a weather modification firm.

The $300,000, six-month project begins next April and the project probably will be renewed annually, said Thomas Fox, the water district's general manager.

Corpus Christi and San Angelo are in the process of deciding whether to launch projects of their own. Corpus Christi is considering joining resources with the Edwards Underground Water District.

Officials involved with each project said cloud seeding could become just as much a part of their on-going supply plans as water conservation methods and efforts to find new sources of water.

Whitley, San Angelo City Manager Stephen Brown and at least three San Angelo City Council members agree that if a cloud-seeding project is begun at all, it should continue for at least seven to 10 years.

Whitley said that San Angelo could explore the possibility of entering a cooperative agreement with the Colorado River Municipal Water District's cloud seeding project or seek government assistance to reduce the cost, Whitley said.

Weather modification experts at Texas Tech University and with the Texas Department of Water Resources emphasize the need to enter cloud seeding projects on a long-term, not short-term, basis.

Riggio, of the water resources department, said 1985 may be a good time as any to start a multi-year cloud seeding program because "it's good to have one in place when the right conditions return."

STILL WILDCATting—Glenn McCarthy, 77, who works daily in his Houston office dealing in oil and real estate, is still wildcatting. (AP Laserphoto)

McCarthy still wildcat king

HOUSTON (AP) — Glenn McCarthy remembers the days when oil prices were so low he barely turned enough of a profit to pay a well gauger.

The industry has changed a lot since then, but McCarthy, 76, is considered by some to be one of the industry's most legendary wildcatting.

"I drilled more wells than probably anyone around this part of the country in my time," McCarthy said in a Houston Post article published Sunday. "I made a big number of wild cat discoveries along the Gulf Coast. One time around 1950, someone asked me how many discoveries I made. I counted 38."

McCarthy said he's still wildcatting along the Gulf Coast, and he doesn't like to hear that the oil industry is suffering.

"Houston is supposed to be losing its background of the oil business — can you picture that?" he asked. "The oil business made Houston."

He said he's seen oil prices as low as 80 cents a barrel, which made the independent wildcatting's profits small at times.

"But somehow we made it," he said.

McCarthy is a wealthy man now, but he insists he's just like anyone else.

"Many people think I never shook hands with a poor man," McCarthy said. "But I'll bet I've got more friends that are poor than are rich. It's hard to figure out why nobody ever tied onto that idea. There's just as much to write about from that as from the side that's so flowery."

His son, oilman Glenn McCarthy Jr., said his father discovered about 30 oil fields and extended 15 to 20 more.

"The number of barrels of oil and billions of cubic feet of gas that he found are staggering," the son said. "In his day, he drilled the highest-pressure gas well ever drilled."

That well was completed in 1946 in Brazoria County. It had a potential for producing 300,000 cubic feet a day of gas at a pressure of 8,225 pounds per square inch.

"One of the things I'm proudest of is that he has completed over 800 producing wells in his lifetime," young McCarthy said. "That's more than most men in this business even drill."

M.L. Randall, who worked with McCarthy from the late 1930s to the 1970s, said McCarthy is "one of those people who can find oil."

"He started as a roughneck, got a rig and worked like hell until he had some success," Randall said. "And then he just kept on going with it."

McCarthy said Ernie Pyle, the famous World War II newspaper correspondent, once nicknamed him the "King of the Wildcatting." His son said his father's willingness to take risks is what has made him a successful man.

"If a company wanted to try something new, Dad was willing to try it on his wells," the son said. "Most oilmen don't like to do that because if something goes wrong, you could lose your well. But I never remember him being reluctant to take that chance."

One oilman told the Post that McCarthy has given the Texas oil industry "that sort of Edna Ferber 'Giant' Aroma."

"A lot of goodhearted guys who did the same thing in a business-like manner got the label of that prototype Texas oilman," said the oilman, who was not named.

McCarthy's brother, Bill, joked about his brother's legendary reputation for fighting.

"Well, he hasn't killed near as many people as they say he did," Bill McCarthy said, laughing. And his brother agrees.

Group celebrates the 10th birthday of nation's first national preserve

BIG THICKET NATIONAL PRESERVE, Texas (AP) — The sight of the gnarled, 700-year-old bald cypress towering out of a slough near Village Creek stopped the group of 30 hikers dead in their tracks.

"It's impossible to describe the feeling, to explain what it's like unless you see a tree like that with your own eyes," said one awed hiker said.

The hikers in Southeast Texas were among about 100 conservationists, businessmen, scientists and officials who traveled to the heart of the Big Thicket this weekend to celebrate the 10th anniversary of the nation's first national preserve.

The Big Thicket is called one of the most biologically diverse areas in the country. In it, hardwood and southern pine forests merge with cypress swamps, coastal plains and a host of other habitats.

"It represents a yardstick against which you can monitor the impacts of development elsewhere ... so we can understand the impacts on nature when we build homes and roads and highways, even how to deal with flooding problems," said Dr. Philip Johnson of the John Gray Institute in Beaumont.

Conservationists like Maxine Johnston and David Snell of the Big Thicket Conservation Association and Ned Fritz of Dallas also celebrated the birthday of preserve for which they and others fought for more than 40 years.

Newspaper a daily miracle

Many years ago an editor of The Pampa News, Jim Dean, referred to the production of a newspaper as a "daily miracle."

At first I didn't know what he was referring to, since I was only involved in a minor portion of the daily production of the paper — writing a few stories and turning out the pictures.

But, over the years as I worked on other papers in the Freedom group and made it slowly up from the lowly depths of reporting to that of editing — being involved in the actual production of the paper each day — I finally came to understand the full impact of Jim's statement.

What other type of manufacturing plant — even though we professional journalists don't like to admit we work at a manufacturing plant — turns out a completely new product each day?

Work on each day's paper begins several days before the actual publication when personnel in the advertising department begin preparation of the various advertisements. As each ad is prepared by a sales representative it is sent to the composing room where the type is set, screened engravings are prepared of the various pictures, and the ad is assembled by composing room personnel.

After the advertising deadline for each paper, usually two days before the paper is published, the page layouts, or dummies, for the newspaper is prepared by the advertising department. These dummies show the position of each advertisement on each of the pages of the paper.

While all of this is going on in the advertising department, newsroom personnel are still fretting with production of papers already submitted by the advertising department.

After the dummy is completed it is sent to the newsroom where copies of the layout of each of the pages are prepared. Usually this task is mine. The original dummy is then sent to the composing room where the various ads are placed on the pages.

After the newsroom dummies are prepared, they are distributed to the editors who handle the various pages: sports, lifestyles, inside news and the front page.

Because of the time needed to prepare each page, many of the pages are prepared the day prior to publication. These pages include viewpoints, lifestyles, comics and some of the inside news pages towards the back of the paper. For the Sunday edition the early pages also include entertainment, agriculture, oil and gas news, TV schedules, Gallery, etc.

Because of the necessity of production of these early pages it is necessary for the newspaper to have various deadlines for submission of information for these pages.

As the individual editor completes the layout of each page, the dummy along with the headlines and pictures are sent to the composing room. Copies of the stories are also sent by the editor, using a computer, to an electronic typesetting machine in the composing room.

There personnel take the page, on which the advertisements have previously been pasted, and place the headlines, pictures and story copy on the pages as instructed on the page layout.

When everything has been pasted on a page, it is approved and sent to the camera room where a negative is made of the page. From this negative the metal plate used on the press to make the page impression is prepared.

After all the plates are loaded on the press, in somewhat of jigsaw puzzle operation to have the pages printed in the proper sequence, the numerous stacks of papers go to the circulation department where they are bundled and taken to the numerous carriers who deliver the papers to the subscribers.

Considering that advertising and newsroom personnel can be working on several different papers at any given moment, the flow of advertisements and news copy from various areas of the plant and the many operations necessary to produce that totally new product each day, it is amazing at times that all of the tasks are completed on time each day in time for the press to begin another printing of the paper.

Yes, Jim, you were right, it is a daily miracle that we manage to print a paper each day.

Machine gun-toting bandit steals boots

DALLAS (AP) — A Balch Springs man, accused of robbing a boot store with a machine gun, remains jailed after police arrested to suspect after he wrecked his car.

The 20-year-old house painter, who had not been formally charged Sunday night, was arrested Saturday while hiding under some rusting farm machinery on the outskirts of Dallas, authorities said.

Police said the man walked into a boot store in southeast Dallas Saturday, picked up three pairs of boots and threatened employees with a Uzi submachine gun as he fled.

Officers said the man drove northward onto Interstate 20 and was driving eastward when he turned onto U.S. 352. He lost control of the car and went into a ditch. He ran into a field.

Officers found the submachine and the boots inside the wrecked automobile.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP OF TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his most capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Blain priest's spirit will live

The recovery of Father Jerzy Popieluszko's body from icy waters of a reservoir in northern Poland last week is a shudder throughout the civilized world. One can only imagine the horror of Father Popieluszko's final hours, because the precise details of his disappearance and death will probably remain a mystery. But we do know that the parish priest was dragged from his car on the night of Oct. 19 after delivering an impassioned sermon supporting Solidarity, the outlawed trade union. The suspects—three secret police officers—then presumably drove to a remote location, beat him to death, and tossed his body into the ink of their car. Whereupon they dumped the corpse into the Wloclawek Reservoir.

Although Warsaw denies any involvement in this inhuman crime, the cleric was constantly harassed by communist functionaries. Rocks were thrown through the windows of his tiny apartment in the church rectory. There were several break-ins as well as threats on his part. Earlier this year, the Polish government accused him of anti-state activities. And approximately six weeks before his disappearance, the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia scored his sermons as "anti-Soviet oadsides" and criticized Polish authorities for allowing him to speak out.

Numerous church officials cautioned Father Popieluszko about his outspokenness and the threat it posed to the Polish government. Still, the courageous priest continued to conduct the monthly "Masses for the Otherland" at St. Stanislaw Kostka Church, where overflow crowds gathered to hear his eloquent appeals for freedom and dignity.

One of his most memorable Masses was held on Sept. 19, 1983, when he concluded his message with these words: "Only a nation that is spiritual and which loves truth can go on and create for the future. Where the lie is, the way officially cultivated there is no room for truth."

Father Popieluszko's prophetic words will continue to haunt communist officials as they discover they can kill a charismatic priest, but they cannot kill his spirit.

Cashless society emerging

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The often-promoted but long-delayed checkless, cashless society is rapidly emerging — in a form which will cause many consumers to rue its arrival.

Linking virtually all retail customers' financial transactions directly with their bank accounts will be the "debit card," a plastic card superficially identical to a credit card.

There is, however, one very important difference: When a store makes a sale to a customer using a debit card, the purchase price is immediately debited to the buyer's account and credited to the merchant's account.

Credit cards, on the other hand, have a built-in "float" — the period between the purchase and the actual transfer of funds from buyer to seller — which typically ranges from 30 to 45 days. Those who pay by check enjoy the benefit of a shorter float, usually from two to four days.

Thus, there's little enthusiasm among consumers for debit cards — and that's one reason why their introduction in the late 1970s was a marketing disaster.

Nevertheless, the banks which issue debit cards and the businesses which accept them now have mounted a new campaign to gain consumer acceptance because all-electronic transactions using debit cards are cheaper to process than any other form of payment.

One survey of service station expenses in handling an $18 gasoline purchase found that it cost 54 cents to handle a cash payment, 60 cents to $1 for a check, $1 for a credit card — and 10 cents for a debit card.

Automatic teller machines or ATMs already are in thousands of banks and are rapidly spreading to shopping centers, supermarkets, airports and other locations. Millions of bank depositors have been persuaded to rely upon them, as an alternative to dealing directly with tellers, for making deposits, withdrawals and intra-account transfers.

When the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta recently surveyed the 35 largest grocery and convenience store chains in the Southeast, it found that two-thirds of those stores expected to have ATMs installed within the next two years.

The instrument used to gain access to ATMs is a debit card — although banks have carefully avoided identifying it as such and instead have promoted its ability to provide "instant cash."

But ATMs located in retail outlets also are only one step away from the cash register — the point of sale or POS — where merchants can instantly collect the full purchase price from customers' bank accounts.

Approximately 1,700 POS locations currently either are operational or expected to be functioning by the end of the year in California, Texas, Florida, Ohio and a half-dozen other states.

Food chains now preparing to conduct POS transactions on a trial basis include Safeway Stores and Giant Food here in the Washington, D.C., area, Kroger Co. in Ohio and Publix Supermarkets in Florida.

The oil industry is moving even more rapidly toward POS use of debit cards. Experimental installations have been made by Arco in California, Gulf and Amoco in Pennsylvania and Exxon in Texas and California.

Mobil expects to have more than 1,000 of its service stations in California, Florida and the Washington, D.C., area equipped to handle POS transactions by the end of this year. By 1985, it plans to have 2,400 outlets linked to a POS network.

Credit card users who long have enjoyed a delay of a month or longer in paying their bills may resist the trend. But retail outlets relying upon instant electronic funds transfers will become increasingly difficult to avoid.

Today in History

Today is Monday, Nov. 12, the 317th day of 1984. There are 49 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Nov. 12, 1927, Joseph Stalin became the undisputed ruler of the Soviet Union as Leon Trotsky was expelled from the Communist Party.

On this date: Ten years ago: The Ford administration said publicly for the first time that it appeared the country was moving into a recession.

Five years ago: With the hostage crisis in Tehran continuing, President Jimmy Carter suspended U.S. oil imports from Iran.

One year ago: President Reagan addressed the South Korean National Assembly, assuring his audience that "America is your friend and we are with you."

Today's birthdays: Supreme Court Justice Harry Blackmun is 76. Actress Kim Hunter is 62. Musician-songwriter Neil Young is 39. Romanian gymnast Nadia Comaneci is 23.

Thought for today: "Truth is such a rare thing, it is delightful to tell it." — Emily Dickinson, American poet (1830-1886).

Alternatives to live animals

A professional newperson without feeling is uncivilized.

A newperson with feeling is vulnerable. Ernie Pyle reported on the GIs of World War II with much feeling until eventually he was overwhelmed by it.

He said, "I think if I see one more dead body I'll go nuts."

It was but days after he said that that he stood up in a foxhole.

Two subjects are too heavy for me: cruelty to children and cruelty to animals.

Admittedly, I avoid these subjects whenever I can. Sometimes I can't.

I hope we are becoming less calloused, more civilized. I hear of many heretofore inveterate hunters racking their guns.

I hear of 2 million Americans in 400 organizations urging consideration for the rights of animals.

Yet, in our medical laboratories 71 million animals each year die, usually slowly, frequently in agony.

Please do not write to me about the debt we humans owe to animal experimentation. My own wife's life was once saved by a serum developed from animal experiments.

All I've said is that I "hope" we are becoming more civilized and that where it is possible to update animal experiments with something better — we will.

We can.

One researcher at Michael Reese Hospital, Chicago, is using rat cells in lab experiments which formerly required live animals.

Researcher David Miletech says such methods are "cheaper and more precise" than when live animals are used.

Congress recently funded a study on alternatives to animal research.

The Johns Hopkins Center for Alternatives to Animal Testing is coordinating 22 separate projects directed toward that objective.

Already the Draize test in which cosmetics and industrial products were placed directly into the eyes of lab rabbits, frequently causing much suffering — that test has been supplanted by an alternative method developed at Rockefeller University, using cells rather than live animals.

Results from the cell tests are more uniform, more reliable.

At Duke University physical and chemical changes in the body are reduced to mathematical equations and thus many experiments which formerly required live animals are now simulated by computer.

The Humane Society of the United States estimates that alternative methods could save up to 80 percent of the animals now being killed in research.

Under sustained pressure, medical science is moving in that direction.

"You PROMISED not to bring up the deficit while he was eating!"

Names change, but tax debate the same

BY RICHARD LESHER

WASHINGTON — What do John F. Kennedy, Calvin Coolidge and Japan have in common? And why do they disagree with Herbert Hoover, Lyndon Baines Johnson and France?

And what do all these people and nations have to do with an argument between Tip O'Neill and Jack Kemp?

It may seem at first glance to be an unlikely alliance: Calvin Coolidge, the silent president of the 1920s; John F. Kennedy, the young aggressive president of the 1960s; and the island nation of Japan. What's the common thread? All three reduced taxes and created tremendous economic growth as a result.

Calvin Coolidge took office upon the death of President Harding. The United States had just come out of World War I and tax rates were prohibitively high. Coolidge cut the marginal tax rates, year after year, until the top rate was down from a wartime high of 75 percent to 26 percent. And what happened? Did the government run out of money? No. Each year revenue actually increased as lower tax rates created strong and sustained economic growth. America responded to tax cuts with the Roaring Twenties.

John F. Kennedy did the same thing in the 1960s when his proposed tax cuts were enacted, dropping the top rate from 70 percent to 50 percent. Again, the nation responded with strong growth, job creation and additional revenues flowing into the treasury. Tax revenue climbed, not because the tax rates were raised, but because increasing the number of Americans at work expanded the tax base.

The nation of Japan followed the path laid out by Calvin Coolidge and John F. Kennedy. Japan repeatedly cut taxes on individuals and businesses. It has no capital gains tax and almost no tax on savings and investment. As a result, the people of Japan have invested heavily in their own future and the resulting economic growth is no secret to the American people. Between 1952 and 1972, the Japanese economy grew from $16 billion to $300 billion. Solid, strong, and consistent growth due to tax cuts each and every year.

Now, on to Team B. What do Herbert Hoover, Lyndon Johnson and France have in common? They each raised taxes.

Herbert Hoover, the engineer from the liberal wing of the Republican Party, was elected President after Calvin Coolidge. Hoover refused to continue the successful tax-cutting strategy of Coolidge. Instead, he signed the Smoot-Hawley Tariff Act of 1930, drastically increasing taxes on imported goods. When the nation hit a recession, he increased the personal income tax and a great many other taxes. His goal was to "eliminate the deficit." Sound familiar? The deficit, of course, grew because the tax increase only served to torpedo an already floundering economy.

The result of Hoover's high tax, big spending policies was a depression. The Great Depression.

Lyndon Baines Johnson became president after the tragic death of John Kennedy. But rather than continuing the successful policy of the Kennedy tax cut, Johnson turned around and placed a surtax on the incomes of Americans to pay for his Great Society spending programs. Runaway spending and higher taxes brought us the recession of 1969 and future tax increases, particularly on capital gains, brought us the stagflation of the 1970s.

France, under President Mitterand, chose to follow the path of Hoover and Johnson. Higher taxes in France, as in the United States only served to slow economic growth and throw people out of work.

Throughout history the names change. The policy choices that face us remain the same. Tip O'Neill and Jack Kemp are debating the same issues that faced France and Japan, Hoover and Coolidge, Johnson and Kennedy.

So, once again we must choose either the path of low taxes and real economic growth or high taxes and economic decline. Let us hope we have learned from history.

Will can protect your children

Dear Abby

Same rooms are not recommended for brother, sister older than 10

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: You recently answered a reader's query regarding a brother and sister sleeping in the same room at the ages of 14 and 11 by saying, "My experts say children of the opposite sex require their privacy after age 10."

Granted, I am not an expert, but I do have a daughter, 16, and a son, 15, who have been sharing a bedroom since they were born, and I think this has been good for them.

One of the greatest joys I have received from sleeping in the same room with my husband is the joy of sharing in the peacefulness of a darkened room, experiences, thoughts and feelings that have occurred during the day.

Many evenings, my husband and I have stood in the hallway and heard the children talking about their friends, teachers, relatives, even us; sharing ideas and discussing problems.

When children share a bedroom, they learn to cooperate, share and compromise.

As a final note, I do not feel there is any difference in having a brother and sister share a bedroom as opposed to two brothers or two sisters.

Thanks for allowing me to state my dissenting opinion.

I would appreciate knowing what you think about my ideas. Just call me ...

MOTHER OF TWO

DEAR MOTHER OF TWO: There is a big difference between a husband and wife sharing a bedroom and two teen-age children of the opposite sex sharing one.

It's obvious that you are ignoring (or denying) the power of natural and very strong sexual urges in that period in the life of a normal teen-age boy and girl.

To subject them to the nightly stress of such close physical proximity is not only unfair to them, but also presents a greater risk of subjecting them to a potentially traumatic and incestuous experience.

My psychiatric consultants tell me that brother and sister incest is probably the most common form of incest and the least frequently reported; and it is most likely to occur when brothers and sisters share sleeping quarters.

All the positive aspects—the beauty of sharing ideas, discussing problems, and learning to cooperate and compromise—are quite irrelevant. Brothers and sisters can learn these things without sharing sleeping quarters.

The husband-wife relationship is vastly different from the brother-sister relationship, and to compare one with the other is sure to create serious confusion in the minds of the children.

DEAR ABBY: Last weekend I had a date with a man I didn't know very well. (I had met him in a bar the night before and gave him my phone number.) He took me out for dinner so we could get better acquainted. He came on to me pretty strong, and there was something about him I didn't like (bad vibes).

When he took me home, I planned on saying goodnight at the door because I really didn't want this man in my apartment. (I live alone.) When I said goodnight, he asked if he could use my bathroom. What could I say? After he used the bathroom, he sat himself down in my living room and asked if I would make him a cup of coffee. I was beginning to get the idea, but didn't want to be rude. He sipped his coffee slowly, and kept looking at me in a way that made me uncomfortable. After the coffee, he made a grab for me. I pulled away from him, said I had to get up early for work, then I asked him to leave. I was trembling inside for fear I had a rapist on my hands. Thank God he didn't give me any trouble.

Please print this to let other women know that "May I use your bathroom?" is one way a man can get into a woman's apartment. Now I'm sorry I didn't say, "Sorry, find a gasoline station."

LUCKY IN DALLAS

DEAR LUCKY: Your first mistake was letting the man know where you lived before you got to know him better. You should have met him somewhere to get better acquainted, then taken a taxi home when the vibes were bad.

DEAR BRUCE WILLIAMS — You have said many times that every adult needs a will. We are in our late 20s and have two small children. Very frankly, that's all we have. We just don't have any money. Someday we will, maybe, but not now. Do you think we need a will as well? — S.L. HUTCHINSON, KAN.

DEAR S.L. — You bet your life you do. You said all you have is your children, but I suspect they are extremely precious to you.

What happens if both you and your wife exit this vale of tears together? Who takes care of the kids? You may say that your mother or father or somebody will grab them. Well, that may be, but a court will have to make that determination and the court could award them to somebody you are not too enthusiastic about.

Furthermore let's assume you are killed by a very well-insured but a very careless and drunk driver. Although you didn't have great wealth in life, you may leave a very wealthy estate. Two things are going to happen. One, somebody will have to be appointed guardian of those children. Two, it's likely that a friendly court will make your children the financial wards of a deserving politician. This way he gets a piece of the action every year for managing your children's financial affairs.

SMART MONEY

Now, the whole problem can be overcome by naming your children's guardians in your will after consultation with the individuals involved. No surprises — don't name people without having asked them. Once they have agreed to look after your youngsters in the event of your unforeseen demise, have it spelled out correctly in a will, properly drawn by an attorney. You will sleep better for it.

DEAR BRUCE WILLIAMS — I have tried to purchase an umbrella policy since I first heard you speak of it. My husband and I own three cars and three homes. Even though my husband is a non-smoker, he did develop emphysema. Now we cannot buy the umbrella. Please help us. — M.H., WASHINGTON, D.C.

DEAR M.H. — I believe I can. First, let's sort things out.

An umbrella policy is a liability contract that picks up where other liability policies stop. In order to work properly, your regular homeowners' insurance, automobile insurance and so forth must be designed to mesh with your umbrella to give you a million dollars or more of uninterrupted liability coverage.

What is puzzling me, however, is that, with few exceptions, health is not a factor when underwriting this type of risk. I suspect you may have confused this liability coverage with some type of hospitalization, which is strongly related to the health of the applicant.

Given all the facts, a competent insurance broker should be able to write you up an umbrella. Hospitalization, unhappily, is another matter. Given your husband's physical condition, you may have trouble buying regular hospitalization or major medical. Why not try Blue Cross and Blue Shield during an open enrollment period. Although there will be a waiting period for pre-existing conditions, you will in most cases be offered the coverage you request.

ment period. Although there will be a waiting period for pre-existing conditions, you will in most cases be offered the coverage you request.

Diabetes topic of meeting

Dr. Roger Oskvig, associate professor of medicine from the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center in Amarillo is to present the program to the Gray County chapter of the American Diabetes Association, Tuesday, Nov. 13, at the First United Methodist Church Patio Room.

Dr. Oskvig has served in private practice and group practice, as well as in his current teaching position. He has been a diplomat of the American Board of Inter al Medicine since 1977. Special interests of his include sports medicine in addition to diabetes, cancer, and heart diseases. Of course, his program will relate especially to diabetes and care for the diabetic patient during the Tuesday meeting. Dr. Oskvig will include a question and answer period during his program. The public is encouraged to attend this and every meeting of the ADA.

The Gray County chapter has recently completed its third annual "Great Skate." The 55 skaters participating in the event raised $4,000. Dr. Keith Teague's dental office was top money raiser, bringing in $1,000.

Operating room nurses honored

The Top of Texas chapter of the Association of Operating Room Nurses is planning special activities for Nov. 14 to celebrate Operating Room Nurses Day.

An open house for hospital employees is set for 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. The operating room staff is to display various instruments and products and let employees guess their uses.

"Of all the masked faces hovering over the patient during surgery, the operating room nurse has a special role," said Cindy Grundler, RN, president of the local chapter of AORN, and operating room supervisor at Coronado Community Hospital.

"When the patient arrives in surgery, the nurse is there to greet him and provide emotional support as he is anesthetized," she said. "We are there as the patient's advocate.

"Surgery does not really begin and end in the operating room. Before surgery, patients may be fearful and distraught. Afterward they need to know how to participate in their own recovery," Grundler said. "More and more, we're coming out of the operating rooms to meet with patients before and after their operations to teach and reassure them."

Operating Room Nurse Day is sponsored by the national AORN, a professional specialty nursing organization with more than 30,000 members.

Cowboys use defense to bump off Cardinals

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Randy White was playing the old "in-your-face-disgrace" game with Neil Lomax, and the Dallas Cowboys knocked the St. Louis Cardinals out of a tie for the lead in the National Football Conference's East Division.

While the Miami Dolphins were remaining undefeated — by the grace of a blocked extra point — and the Houston Oilers were winning their first game, the Cowboys were doing what they've done for nearly two decades.

With a 24-17 victory over St. Louis, the Cowboys took a share of the division lead Sunday with the Washington Redskins, who beat Detroit 28-14. The Cardinals and the New York Giants, who had started the day in a four-way tie with Dallas and Washington, fell a game back. The Giants lost 20-17 to Tampa Bay.

White, the Cowboys' all-Pro defensive tackle, led the way as the Cowboys sacked Lomax six times, forced six St. Louis turnovers and blocked a field goal attempt. The winning points came on Gary Hogeboom's 26-yard touchdown pass to Ron Springs with 9:03 left, breaking a 17-17 tie.

The Dolphins went 11-0 with a 24-23 victory over Philadelphia, blocking an extra point attempt with 1:52 to play. Miami can clinch the American Conference East with one victory in its remaining five games, or a loss by New England.

In the rest of the NFL, Houston edged Kansas City 17-16, Denver defeated San Diego 16-13, San Francisco clobbered Cleveland 41-7, Cincinnati defeated Pittsburgh 22-20, the Los Angeles Rams beat Chicago 29-13, Indianapolis downed the New York Jets 9-5, New Orleans defeated Atlanta 17-13, New England beat Buffalo 38-10 and Green Bay downed Minnesota 45-17.

Tonight's game has the Los Angeles Raiders at Seattle.

Redskins 28, Lions 14

The Redskins held onto their share of the division lead, handling Detroit rather easily with some good backup work from running backs Otis Wonsley and Keith Griffin. Wonsley scored three touchdowns and Griffin, a rookie, rushed for 114 yards as Washington beat Detroit for the ninth straight time.

Washington fullback John Riggins was out with a bad back.

Buccaneers 20, Giants 17
Quarterback Steve DeBerg and Kevin House teamed to lead Tampa Bay on a second-half rally that erased a 10-3 New York lead. A 10-yard touchdown pass from DeBerg to House forged a 10-10 tie late in the third quarter, and DeBerg completed a 42-yarder to House by James Wilder 4:42 into the fourth quarter. That gave the Bucs a 17-10 lead.

Obed Ariri's 20-yard field goal later in the period provided Tampa Bay with the eventual winning points.

Dolphins 24, Eagles 23
The Eagles appeared to be headed for overtime with Miami until Dolphins defensive end Doug Betters blocked the extra-point attempt by Paul McFadden with 1:52 to play.

Betters said the Dolphins had noticed a weakness in the middle of the Eagles' line on placekicks by studying game films.

"We've been working on this," Betters said.

Oilers 17, Chiefs 9
Houston won its first game of the season behind the passing and running of quarterback Warren Moon. Moon threw a 2-yard touchdown pass in the second quarter and scored on a 1-yard run with 12:29 left to put the Oilers ahead 14-9.

The Oilers had lost an NFL record 23 straight games on the road before beating Kansas City, 5-6. The victory also broke an 11-game losing streak that began with their last game of the 1983-84 season.

Broncos 16, Chargers 13

Denver won its ninth straight game, on a 1-yard touchdown run by Sammy Winder with 38 seconds left. That kept the Broncos, 10-1, on top of the AFC West, 1 1/2 games ahead of Seattle and 2 1/2 in front of the Raiders.

Winder's TD plunge capped a 77-yard drive during which Broncos quarterback John Elway completed four of six passes.

San Francisco 41, Cleveland 7
Joe Montana passed for two touchdowns to Freddie Solomon and completed 24 of 30 attempts in heavy rain as the 49ers beat Cleveland. San Francisco, at 10-1, leads the Rams by three games in the NFC West. Cleveland fell to 2-9.

Bengals 22, Steelers 20
Reserve quarterback Turk Schonert guided Cincinnati on a 49-yard drive that began with less than six minutes to play, and fullback Larry Kinnebrew scored the winning touchdown from the 3-yard line with 35 seconds left.

Schonert took over when starter Ken Anderson sustained a bruised shoulder in the third quarter. Schonert completed seven of his 10 passes for 113 yards.

The Steelers still lead the AFC Central with a 6-5 record, while Cincinnati is 4-7 in the division.

Rams 29, Bears 13
Eric Dickerson rushed for 149 yards and scored twice against Chicago's top-rated defense to win a duel of two of the NFL's best running backs. The Rams held Walter Payton of Chicago to just 60 yards on 13 carries.

Despite their 7-4 record, the Bears still lead the NFC Central by three games over Tampa Bay and Green Bay. The Rams, in the hunt for an NFC wild card berth, are 7-4.

Colts 9, Jets 5
Indianapolis held the Jets without a touchdown in a rain-soaked game, and Raul Allegre kicked three field goals as the Colts improved their record to 4-7 by handing New York its third straight loss.

Allegre kicked two of his field goals in the first half, and the Colts led 6-2 at intermission. The Jets had only 37 yards total offense in the first half.

Saints 17, Falcons 13
Richard Todd's second touchdown pass to Hoby Brenner erased a 13-10 Atlanta lead with 12:11 to play. The pass covered 17 yards. Todd's other TD pass to Brenner covered 37 yards as New Orleans, 5-6, won for only the second time in its past six games. Atlanta, 3-8, has lost five in a row.

The winning drive started on New Orleans' 13-yard line with a minute to play.

Patriots 38, Bills 10
Tony Collins scored twice within three minutes on short runs late in the third quarter as New England opened a big lead and handed the winless Bills their 11th loss. Tony Eason threw three touchdown passes for the Patriots, 7-4.

Packers 45, Vikings 17
Green Bay won its third straight game and dropped the Vikings into last place in the NFC Central with a 3-8 record. The Packers are 4-7 in the division.

Lynn Dickey passed for 303 yards and four touchdowns.

Showdown in Cowtown Saturday

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

Texas Christian football coach Jim Wacker is saying something "I sure as heck wouldn't have said" at the start of the season — that his Horned Frogs will go into Saturday's "Showdown in Cowtown" against the Texas Longhorns all even.

"I believe now all the chips are on the table for next week," said Wacker, whose amazing Horned Frogs are just one victory away from their first Cotton Bowl game in 25 years.

TCU came from behind Saturday to knock down the Texas Tech Red Raiders 27-16 while the Longhorns saw their No. 3 ranking go down the tubes with a 29-15 loss to the Houston Cougars.

As a result, TCU now leads the SWC with a 5-1 record, a half game ahead of Texas, which is at 4-1. Houston, SMU and Arkansas all have two conference losses.

Lakers finally get their act together

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers finally seem to have gotten their act together. And it hasn't come too soon for Coach Pat Riley.

"I think the Portland game Friday night was a springboard for us," Riley said after the Lakers whipped the visiting New Jersey Nets 121-111 Sunday night. "We play six of our next nine at home and it's a good time to make hay before we have to go and play back East."

In the other National Basketball Association game Sunday night, Portland defeated Golden State 109-97.

The Lakers were 3-5 after suffering a 122-106 setback at Golden State Thursday night. Riley made a couple of lineup changes, making forward Larry Spriggs and guard Michael Cooper starters, and it paid off as Los Angeles won at Portland 130-126 Friday night.

Spriggs and Cooper started again against New Jersey, but Riley pointed to a couple of reserves as key factors for his team.

"Kurt Rambis and Mitch Kupchak did a great job for us," Riley said. "They were strong on the boards and played very well on defense."

Rambis, a starter at the beginning of the season, had eight points and seven rebounds.

News in brief

WASHINGTON (AP) — A drop in interest rates and a conservative inclination among homebuyers is leading to a spurt of popularity for 15-year, fixed-rate mortgages, says the president of the Mortgage Bankers Association.

The trend toward adjustable-rate mortgages, which jumped to as much as 65 percent of the market in just a few years, has reversed in the last few months as buyers find they can afford to pay for the certainty of a more expensive fixed-rate loan.

"It all comes full circle," said Robert J. Spiller, president of the bankers association and chairman of the Boston Five Cents Savings Bank. Nationwide, he said, "we're starting to see some of these people asking for shorter terms."

He added that "what is more significant... is the fact that the adjustable rate mortgage has become the instrument of the future."

WASHINGTON (AP) — A decade after the first hospice was formed and one year after Medicare benefits were extended to cover their services, hospices have spread to every state and are offering services daily to nearly 19,000 terminally ill patients and their families, according to a new survey.

The National Hospice Organization's first hospice census showed that 935 American hospices are being operated and another 410 are being planned. Executive director Jay Mahoney said the number of hospices is growing at a rate of one a day and that the rate may pick up because of the availability of Medicare coverage.

Hospice care places its emphasis on pain management rather than on curative treatment and involves family members, not just medical and other support staff, in the care of the dying.

PINEDALE, Wyo. (AP) — Residents of this ranching town will have to check their guns at the bar if an ordinance banning firearms from taverns gets final approval from the Town Council.

Council members voted 4-1 last week to approve the measure, which will face three more votes before it can become law. The proposal was prompted by at least one non-fatal shooting during an annual mountain man pageant in the town of 1,066 people.

"Why wait until someone gets killed to solve the problem?" said police chief Win Farnsworth. "Let's close the gate before the horse gets out."

MEMORIAL CEREMONY—President Reagan, with his wife Nancy alongside, addresses a ceremony at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington Sunday, officially taking over ownership of the structure in behalf of the National Park Service. The black granite walls listing the 58,007 Americans killed or missing in Vietnam and a statue of three servicemen were erected through private funds raised by the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund Inc.

Veterans Day services remember war dead, make call for peace

By The Associated Press

Americans marked Veterans Day by vowing in graveside ceremonies, vigils for peace and with parades "never to forget" the sacrifices of those who served their country in war, and to make sure "it never happens again."

An estimated 25,000 people turned out in steady rain Sunday for Boston's annual Veterans Day parade, a two-hour spectacle through downtown streets and past the Statehouse, involving dozens of veterans' groups and bands.

In Washington, D.C., thousands of veterans gathered at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial to pay homage to their dead colleagues, and veterans' memorials were dedicated in Greenville, S.C., and New Orleans.

In Chicago, Mayor Harold Washington and other black leaders appeared at a war memorial ceremony attended by about 400 people, using the occasion to lash out at whites who drove a black family from their apartment last week by hurling bricks and racial slurs.

About 600 people gathered in the Massachusetts Statehouse Hall of Flags for a ceremony commemorating the signing of the 1918 armistice ending World War I and the 50 Massachusetts soldiers still listed as missing in Vietnam.

The holiday was known as Armistice Day until 1954, when Veterans Day was officially adopted to honor all veterans.

"We'll never forget the sacrifices made by veterans and the sacrifices made by their children and their loved ones," said Massachusetts House Speaker Thomas McGee, a former Marine.

"It isn't just enough to remember," said Gov. Michael S. Dukakis. "We've got a solemn responsibility to you and your sons... to make sure it never happens again."

Meanwhile, 96 members of New England Writers for Survival began a 24-hour reading from world literature on war and peace at the First Congregational Church in Cambridge, Mass. The vigil is to end at 6 p.m. today.

President Reagan called the Washington memorial "a symbol of both past and current sacrifice" and said that disagreements engendered by the Vietnam War "threatened to tear our society apart" and "continue to some extent."

But he added, "I believe that in the decade since Vietnam the healing has begun and hope that before my days as commander in chief are over, the healing will be complete."

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said in a message that "a nation that forgets the sacrifices of its heroes risks its very existence."

Sunday's activities in Washington also included the traditional placing of red, white and blue flowers at the Tomb of the Unknowns at Arlington National Cemetery.

In Bridgewater, N.J., the two survivors of a club formed by 50 World War I servicemen popped the cork on a 59-year-old bottle of champagne to fulfill a pact they made with their buddies in the Last Man's Club in 1925.

"I never expected to be here," said John Field, 89, of Bridgewater, who met 88-year-old Jay Vosseller, of Shepton, Pa., at a nursing home for the Veterans Day ceremony.

Engineers on ground scrambled to save satellites for rescue attempt

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The toughest part of history's first mission to recover a satellite from space may have been in the months before the shuttle astronauts were even launched, when earthbound workers scrambled to control two satellites in wildly erratic orbits.

The two communications satellites, Palapa B2 and Westar 6, in February experienced rocket engine misfires that left them in useless, unstable orbits.

They were moving at speeds that would outrun a bullet, swinging from a high point of about 700 miles above the Earth to an atmosphere-brushing 161 miles.

The virtually identical satellites had to be brought under control and guided to precise orbits by ground workers before a space salvage mission could be attempted.

And the 50 rpm spin of the satellites had to be slowed to a bare 2 rpm and held rock steady in low orbits to make capture by the space shuttle possible.

It was a task that had never before been attempted and it required maneuvers that the Hughes Aircraft Co.'s HS376 communications satellites were not designed to perform.

"I really didn't know for sure if we could do it," said Jeremiah Salvatore, the chief scientist at Hughes.

Salvatore and a team of Hughes engineers in ground control stations took on the job in a last-ditch effort to save the $35 million satellites.

Starting Monday, their efforts may be rewarded when the astronauts of Discovery will attempt to capture Palapa and place it in the shuttle cargo bay for a return to Earth. On Wednesday, the astronauts will go after Westar.

Preparation for the rescue began within hours of the rocket failures.

Salvatore said his team first had to guide the satellites from their extreme elliptical orbits to stable orbits away from the Earth's atmosphere. Otherwise, atmospheric drag would turn the craft into shooting stars.

To do this, the Hughes engineers first had to find the satellites. After a long radar search, they located Westar and determined that its batteries were already critically depleted.

Commands were quickly sent to order the satellite to start recharging itself with sunlight. Palapa was then found and also oriented to sunlight.

In May, commands were sent to fire powerful rockets on the satellites that caused the low point of their orbits to rise from 161 miles to about 720 miles. They were left in these "storage" orbits while NASA and Hughes engineers figured out how to rescue the craft.

Westar 6 was slightly lower than Palapa. Earth's gravity pulls more strongly on the lower satellite, causing it to move faster. By early August, the two satellites were close together.

When they were at their closest point, commands were sent to fire small thrusters to settle the craft into the same orbit, with Palapa half a world behind Westar.

The satellites remained in the stable orbits until five weeks ago when Salvatore and his team started the complex, round-the-clock task of lowering the orbits to where the space shuttle could reach them.

To move the satellites, Hughes engineers had to send commands to fire small thrusters that produced only one pound of thrust. The thrusters were designed only to control the orientation of the satellites, but they were now being asked to actually move the craft.

The spacecraft were moving overhead at about 17,000 mph, and Salvatore said the controllers had to send continuous commands to make the thrusters fire as long as possible.

By the time Discovery was launched, the satellites were ready: orbiting at 230 miles and their spin rate down to 2 rpm. Just three hours before Discovery attempts rendezvous, a final command will be sent, turning off the satellites. After that, it's up to the astronauts and Discovery.

Dale Gardner, one of two astronauts who are to walk in space to capture the satellites, said of the Hughes engineers: "They are the real heroes of this salvage mission."

Baby Fae has first rejection problems

LOMA LINDA, Calif. (AP) — Baby Fae is improving after briefly trying to reject the baboon heart she has had longer than her own, but doctors say they are seeking a human heart in case the month-old infant needs a second transplant.

"We have diagnosed an episode of rejection and have already started treating her, and she is showing a good response to treatment," said Dr. Robin Doroshov. She said the baby's condition was "not at all" critical.

"Baby Fae continues to do well clinically, feeding well, behaving normally and showing normal heart functions," said Loma Linda University Medical Center spokeswoman Jayne McGill in a statement.

"As of this morning, Baby Fae showed no new signs of rejection. She shows no signs of infection and antibiotics have been discontinued," she said.

The 5-pound baby, whose identity has been kept secret at her parents' request, was in serious but stable condition Sunday, as she has been since the week after her Oct. 26 surgery, said Ms. McGill.

Doctors had expected the infant's immune system to try to reject the baboon heart as a foreign tissue, but had said they hoped to control rejection with drugs.

Strike stalls south Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A general strike was staged in south Lebanon today to protest arrests made by Israel's occupation army that prompted the Lebanese government to suspend negotiations on the withdrawal of Israeli troops.

Work came to a standstill in all major towns in the occupied southern third of Lebanon in response to a call for a general strike issued by Amal, Lebanon's largest Shiite Moslem militia, the state radio said.

The radio reported that demonstrators staged protests in Sidon's Haret Saida neighborhood, where the arrests were made, and in the southernmost port of Tyre, where they blocked several roads with burning tires.

Israeli troops and allied militiamen of the South Lebanon Army set up checkpoints on all major intersections in Sidon and watched the demonstrators from rooftops.

Schools, banks and businesses were closed to protest the arrest of three senior Amal leaders and a bodyguard in Sidon, the provincial capital of south Lebanon, last Thursday, the radio said.

The Lebanese government announced Saturday it was suspending troop withdrawal negotiations begun under U.N. auspices last Thursday until the four Amal activists were released.

But Israeli officials said the activists would not be freed and the second session of negotiations set for today in the border town of Naqoura was not held.

Israel contends the activists were involved in guerrilla warfare against its army in south Lebanon.

Canadian union ratifies Ford pact

TORONTO (AP) — Following the lead of their colleagues at General Motors Corp., United Auto Workers members in Canada have overwhelmingly approved a new contract with Ford Motor Co.

Union members voted 4,283 to 895, or 82.7 percent, in favor of a contract closely resembling the pact reached after a 12-day strike last month by workers at General Motors Canada Ltd.

Robert White, the UAW's Canadian director, attributed Sunday's low vote turnout among the approximately 14,200 hourly

Ford workers to the belief by many in the union that the contract would be ratified.

Despite wildcat strikes last week at three Ford plants, White expressed confidence that work would resume normally today.

The approval rate for the Ford pact fell short of the 87 percent margin given the GM settlement, but White said he was "very satisfied."

He said the approval rate was one of the highest his independent-minded union ever recorded for a pattern contract — one modeled after an agreement reached during talks with a different company.

At GM, the Canadian wing of the UAW went on strike after refusing to accept an offer it said was a "rubber-stamp copy" of the agreement reached in the United States. The initial offer called for a wage increase only in the first year, followed by lump-sum payments in the second and third years.

The Canadian contracts with GM and Ford provide for wage increases in all three years.

El Salvador proposes building a $1.5 million dairy with U.S. funds

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The government of El Salvador has contracted with Price's Dairies Inc. in El Paso to take the first steps in setting up a 200-cow model dairy using U.S. government funds, an executive of the dairy says.

Last week, the Salvadoran government signed a letter of intent for the dairy company to conduct a feasibility study on building a $1.5 million dairy operation in that country, said Robert B. Price III, president of Price's Dairies, Inc.

The El Salvador project would be the first dairy Price's has built outside the United States. Price said the company is working on other international projects, primarily in China and Ecuador.

Dilip Pathak, market director for Price's, said the Salvadoran government indicated it was interested in setting up 70 more dairies in El Salvador after the initial model dairy is in operation.

"It would serve as a model plant, where they could train their dairy managers and build other dairies around the country if it worked well," Price told the El Paso Times.

Pathak said the operation "could turn into a $200 million contract."

The model dairy, which could be in operation within two years, would be paid for by the Salvadoran government with funds from the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Price said the civil war in El Salvador has reduced the cattle population to about 500,000, from 1.5 million two years ago.

Cattle in El Salvador produce a daily average of 30 glasses of milk, Price said. Cows from Price's herd — which he said has one of the highest average milk production levels in the world — produce 140 glasses per day.

By bringing a better breed of dairy cows to El Salvador, the government will be able to make better use of its grazing land, Pathak said.

"It takes two to three acres to feed a cow per year," he said. "So if you can have the same cow producing 1 1/2 times what the other cows produce, then it saves management and feed."

Pathak said Third World countries spend millions of dollars annually buying powdered milk. That money leaves the country without producing any domestic income.

"Instead of buying the fish every day, we want to give them the fishing rod and teach them how to fish," Pathak said.

If the dairy negotiations go beyond the planning stage, then Salvadoran technicians will be brought to El Paso to go through a one-to-two-year training program in dairy management.

Operation of the dairies could be a joint venture between Price's and the Salvadoran government, or the government could buy Price's out eventually, Pathak said.

One aspect of the feasibility study will focus on locating the dairy in an area unlikely to be reached by rebel guerrillas who have waged a five-year war in El Salvador.

Price said he thought the chances were excellent that they would set up the dairy in El Salvador. But he said it would depend on whether the feasibility study showed that his employees would be safe there.

"I understand they have made some strong headways in providing for civilian security," Price said.

Pathak said that without the backing of the Agriculture Department, Price's would not be able to consider setting up the operation in the unsettled country. Price estimated the USDA would foot 70 percent of the cost of the model dairy.

Rev. Martin Luther King Sr. dies

ATLANTA (AP) — The Rev. Martin Luther King Sr., the civil rights pioneer who never surrendered to hate even though he saw his wife and his son, Nobel Peace Prize winner Martin Luther King Jr., fall to assassins' bullets, has died. He was 84.

"I don't know anyone 84 who has lived a better life," the Rev. Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, said following King's death at Crawford Long Hospital on Sunday.

King fell ill of an apparent heart attack at his home Sunday afternoon and was taken to the hospital, where "extensive resuscitation efforts were taken," Christine King Farris, his daughter and only surviving child, told a hospital news conference.

Dr. Bernard Bridges, King's personal physician, said the minister died at 5:41 p.m. of an apparent heart attack. King, who suffered from chronic heart disease, was hospitalized in critical condition last month when a lung infection aggravated his ailment.

"On behalf of the King family I want to express my profound gratitude for the love, concern, sympathy and support and we appreciate the fervent prayers over the last few weeks," said Mrs. Farris, who was surrounded by about 20 relatives and black leaders, including Lowery and Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young.

King, the son of a Georgia sharecropper, fought for civil rights in Atlanta and was an inspiration for those who joined the struggle. Known as "Daddy King," he preached non-violence, which was a hallmark of his son's efforts in the cause.

"He lived through many tragedies... but always said 'Hate is too great a burden to bear,'" said Young.

King's son, who won the Nobel Peace Prize for his crusade for civil rights in the 1950s and 1960s, was assassinated in Memphis, Tenn., in April 1968. The next year, his other son, A.D., drowned in a backyard swimming pool. In 1974, his wife, Alberta, was cut down by gunshots in the church as she played the organ at Ebenezer Baptist Church in Atlanta, where both King Jr. and King Sr. were pastors.

"More than anything else, I will remember that he tried to instill in us certain values," including strength in hard times, said Martin Luther King III, the son of King Jr.

"It's no accident that Martin or my other son didn't hate anybody. I taught them to love everyone, rich, poor, high or low," King Sr. once said in an interview.

"Those privileged to bask in his sunshine were richly blessed," Lowery said.

GOING TO HEAR BORGE—Nicaraguans fill the only street leading to the central plaza in the provincial capital of Matagalpa, Nicaragua, 80 miles northeast of Managua, where Interior Minister Borge Sunday said that Nicaragua has the right to punish U.S. aggression against Nicaragua any place in the world. (AP Laserphoto)

Sandinista leaders defend policy

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Soviet freighter that sparked a tense U.S.-Nicaraguan confrontation left port after unloading its cargo, and Sandinista leaders said U.S. suggestions that warplanes had been aboard were fabricated to make Nicaragua appear threatening.

As the freighter Bakuriani sailed from the Pacific port of Corinto on Sunday, sonic booms were heard across Nicaragua for the fourth straight day. The leftist government's Voice of Nicaragua radio station said the two booms were caused by a U.S. SR-71 high-altitude spy plane.

Last week, U.S. intelligence sources said the Bakuriani might have been delivering MiG fighter planes to Nicaragua, but Sandinista officials denied these reports and U.S. officials have subsequently indicated they doubt warplanes were on board.

The exact nature of the cargo remained unknown, but a source in Managua, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said the Bakuriani brought two Soviet Mi8 combat helicopters and one Mi24 transport helicopter.

Nicaraguan Interior Minister

Tomas Borge, in a speech Sunday, said the Reagan administration is using "propaganda that is sophisticated and without impunity to make Nicaragua look like a threat to the internal security of the United States."

Speaking in Matagalpa, about 90 miles north of Managua, Borge said the threat of a U.S. invasion "is increasing."

He said that if Nicaragua is invaded, "we feel we have the right and the duty to punish the aggressors in whatever part of the world." He did not elaborate.

Managua's Roman Catholic archbishop, Miguel Obando y Bravo, a frequent critic of the Sandinistas, said in a homily, "There can be no peace while those who govern us talk of the desire for peace while talking of violence at the time."

A U.S. State Department spokesman, John Hughes, accompanying Secretary of State George P. Shultz to a meeting of the Organization of American States in Brasilia, Brazil, said Sunday that talk of a U.S. invasion was "absolute nonsense."

Hughes also said that whoever told reporters that the Bakuriani was under surveillance "should be prosecuted."

Last week, U.S. intelligence officials leaked to the news media that the ship was being monitored and that the United States would not rule out a strike to prevent MiGs from being delivered.

U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press" that there was "no confirmation" that there had been MiGs aboard the Bakuriani.

A second Soviet vessel, the fishing trawler Ekliptika, arrived in Corinto at midday Saturday and left sometime that night, according to Bernardo Lang, an official with the Vassalli Shipping Co. in that port, which is about 105 miles northwest of the capital.

The arrival of Soviet boats "is nothing new," Lang said.
