Dallas bar raked by gunman's fire

DALLAS (AP) — A 61-year-old man was in custody today after allegedly walking into a northwest Dallas bar and opening fire on patrons with a high-powered semi-automatic rifle, killing one and wounding five others, authorities said.

Charles W. "Doc" Morrison was arrested about 10:45 p.m. after eluding police for nearly five hours, according to Denton County Sheriff Kenneth George. He was arrested in Denton County, about 30 miles north of Dallas, as he drove on a back road, George said.

Police recovered a weapon believed used in the shooting, the sheriff said.

"He was arrested on the road out of his car. He put up no resistance," George said.

The man was arraigned before Justice of the Peace James Erwin on a Dallas County murder warrant, said George. He was being held in the Denton County Jail on $200,000 bond.

Earlier in the evening Morrison allegedly walked into the Webb Lounge in northwest Dallas and fired about 10 rounds from what police thought was an M-16 military assault rifle, according to Dallas Police Lt. David Bonicard.

Clifford Smith, 55, a patron in the bar, died shortly after being rushed to Parkland Memorial Hospital about 6 p.m., according to hospital spokesman Claude McCain. His wife, Michelle Smith, 55, was also wounded in the shooting. She was listed in fair condition at St. Paul Hospital, said a spokeswoman who declined to be named.

Three other shooting victims were listed in serious condition at Parkland Hospital after undergoing surgery, McCain said. The extent of their injuries was not released.

The fifth victim, the bar manager, was treated for a gunshot wound to the side and released, officials said.

Bonicard said the suspect had been drinking in the bar about 5:30 p.m. Witnesses said the man left the bar and returned a few minutes later carrying the gun in a brown paper wrapper.

About 15 people were in the bar when the shootings occurred, Bonicard said.

"Apparently he went out to his car and got the gun and walked in with the loaded magazine already in place. One witness said the first thing they heard was the gun cocking. Then they started diving for cover," Bonicard said.

Lounge 'old-time family hangout'

DALLAS (AP) — The "regulars" were mostly over 50 and had been coming to the Harry Hines "strip" from dry suburbs such as Irving, Farmers Branch and Lewisville to drink beer for years. Sometimes they barbecued hot dogs on a grill in back of the Webb Lounge.

About 15 of them were in the lounge Monday evening when a man suddenly opened fire with an automatic weapon.

When the shooting stopped, witnesses estimated it lasted between 30 seconds and a minute, six of the 15 had been shot. One person was dead and five others wounded.

Denton County authorities arrested Charles Walter "Doc" Morrison, 61, of Farmers Branch on a back road in Denton County about five hours later. He was being held in lieu of $200,000 bond.

D.C. Collins, son-in-law of two of the shooting victims, told the Dallas Times Herald, "This was an old-time family hangout."

Georgette Collins, whose stepfather, Clifford Smith, 55, died in the shooting and whose mother, Michelle Smith, 55, was wounded, said, the Smiths, who lived at Lewisville, had just dropped into the lounge and were preparing to leave when the shooting started.

Mrs. Collins quoted her mother as saying she "just heard a boom, boom, and everyone hit the floor."

"They both got under the bar stools. She knew she was hit in the arm. She said she called out to (her husband) but he didn't answer," Mrs. Collins added.

The "regulars" were close and often fished together, Mrs. Collins said.

"Whenever they came into town, they'd go in and have a beer. There was nothing to worry about. It was so small and everybody knew everyone else. I loved those people down there," she added.

A veteran policeman agreed with Mrs. Collins about the bar being a safe place where patrons shouldn't have anything to worry about.

Mexico body search goes on MEXICO CITY (AP) — Troops on alert for looters sealed off devastated areas of Tlalneptlantla and anxious survivors waited today at crowded relief centers for word of relatives missing after one of the worst natural gas explosions on record.

By early today 264 bodies had been recovered. Red Cross and police officials said at least 500 people were seriously injured by the explosions and flames that turned the working-class district into an inferno Monday.

Army troops patrolling the Mexico City suburb arrested 20 looters who were trying to take advantage of the chaos that followed the blasts, which Federal Police deputy spokesman Hector Garcia Vasquez said forced evacuation of more than 100,000 people.

The troops refused to allow evacuees to return to their homes while the search for bodies continued.

Officials said the death count was expected to rise today because the toll did not include people taken to hospitals who may have died later or workers at the liquefied natural gas storage site where the explosions occurred.

Homes on about 20 square blocks were destroyed or badly damaged and Mexico state officials said more than half a square mile was evacuated.

Mexico City Police Chief Ramon Mota Sanchez said the blaze was under control at mid-day Monday, but flames from one tank still lit the night sky as the fire burned itself out.

Witnesses and residents said one tremendous blast shook the crowded suburb at 5:42 a.m. (6:42 a.m. EST), followed by perhaps a dozen more explosions. Balls of fire shot into the air and rained fiery debris on homes and businesses. Plumes of dark smoke rose a mile into the sky as the fire raged out of control for more than seven hours.

A spokesman for the government-run petroleum monopoly PEMEX said a gas truck apparently exploded, touching off subsequent blasts, first at Unigas Co natural gas holding tanks and then at the adjoining PEMEX natural gas storage and distribution center, built in 1961.

Mota Sanchez said four storage tanks holding more than 3 million gallons of liquefied gas each exploded, and two others burned. Authorities had feared the fire would trigger more explosions at nearby tanks, but none occurred.

PEMEX technicians burned off 80,000 barrels of gas to avoid new explosions, the company said. Officials said the operation and main pipeline were closed to prevent further explosions.

The death toll exceeded the 135 killed Oct. 21, 1944, when a gas storage tank exploded in Cleveland, Ohio — the worst such disaster on record in the United States. More than 1,000 people are believed to have died when a gasoline tanker exploded inside Slammg Tunnel in Afghanistan in November 1982.

President Miguel de la Madrid issued a statement Monday night expressing sorrow for those killed and urging the public to aid the victims.

The government put into action an emergency aid program that included the distribution of clothing and other necessities and installation of mobile kitchens to feed those evacuated. Lira Mora said the state of Mexico will pay for the funerals.

Throughout the day, ambulances and rescue trucks raced in and out of the area, carrying the injured to seven nearby hospitals and several emergency centers.

At the neighborhood police station, charred bodies in plastic bags were carried into the patio area where they remained until they could be carried to a civic center.

"There was an explosion. Then more explosions and we all started running towards the hill. There were balls of fire going up in the sky and rocks started flying down from the hill," said Guadalupe Bonilla Miryeva, a resident.

"There were people coming out of there all ablaze," said Isidro Escamilla, a rescue worker.

In the neighborhood, piles of rubble were heaped where some homes once stood and shards of glass and smoldering debris littered the dirt streets.

At the nearby Basílica of Our Lady of Guadalupe, thousands of evacuated residents waited throughout the day for word that they could return home.

Pampa man sentenced on child sex charges

A Pampa grandfather has pleaded guilty in connection with rape of a child charges.

Charles Niblett, 65, of 517 Elm, pleaded guilty earlier this month to two charges of having sexual intercourse with a teenage girl.

The incidents occurred on Dec. 31, 1982, and on July 31 of this year, according to the pleas.

223rd District Judge Don Cain sentenced Niblett to two years in prison on one count and ordered 10 years probation and a $500 fine on the other.

Niblett is to begin serving the probed term and pay the fine following his expected release from prison, according to the disposition of the case.

Seven others also have pleaded guilty to charges in the Pampa district courts so far this month.

Jeff Walker pleaded guilty to a charge of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle committed on June 17. Walker's five-year probation term on a previous conviction related to vehicle theft was revoked. Walker was ordered to serve the five-year sentence given for the Aug. 30, 1983 vehicle theft in Donley County.

Roy Bright pleaded guilty to a charge of forgery by passing committed on March 22. He was given four years probation and a $400 fine, and a similar charge was dismissed.

Penni Denise Jackson pleaded guilty to a charge of burglary of a building committed on Sept. 22. She was given two years probation and a $300 fine, and a similar charge was dismissed.

Laura North pleaded guilty to a charge of burglary of a habitation committed on Aug. 18. She was given six years probation and a $600 fine.

Darla Austin pleaded guilty to a charge of unlawful possession of a controlled substance committed on Oct. 24. She was given 10 years probation and a $2,000 fine.

Armando Borunda Morales pleaded guilty to a charge of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon committed on June 7. He was given five years probation and a $500 fine.

Martha Ferris Jackson Segura pleaded guilty to a felony charge of unlawful possession of marijuana committed on Sept. 15. She was given two years probation and a $200 fine, and a charge of aggravated perjury was dismissed.

Citizens to vote on issues

Miami residents will get their say

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

MIAMI — For several months, city officials have been bombarded with discussion on such issues as animal control, trash pick-up, ambulance service and a lack of enforcement of city ordinances.

Starting Dec. 3, the city will turn such issues over to the people through an informal, non-binding referendum. City officials are asking residents age 18 or older to come to Miami City Hall from Dec. 3-14 to vote on local issues ranging from obtaining a trash pick-up or dumpster service to starting a city ambulance service.

City officials spent Monday night critiquing, cutting and correcting a cover letter mailed to city residents which explains the issues they would be voting on.

Miami mayor Paul Goodman said the referendum is an informal, non-binding poll of local opinion on issues facing city officials. They will discuss the referendum results at their next regular meeting Dec. 18.

One issue that stirred sentiment at past city meetings is dog control and the restriction of livestock within city limits. In June, city officials attempted to revive and update a 1967 dog ordinance and considered building an animal shelter north of town. However, the plans faded away after city worker Larry Bryant returned from an animal control seminar and reported that it would not be feasible for a town as small as Miami to build a shelter. Pampa and Canadian, both 25 miles away, have animal shelters.

The referendum's animal control question also proposed an ordinance against such livestock as horses, sheep and cattle within the city limits. The issue came to a head at a July city council meeting as residents exchanged complaints about odor or flies and charges that the animals do not draw more flies or odor than garbage, sewage or dogs.

Another question deals with a proposed ordinance restricting such vehicles as boats, trailers and trucks on city streets. Some residents expressed concern that the street parking hinders traffic and obscures vision. The ordinance would authorize the towing away of offending vehicles.

Enforcement of such ordinances would require a city marshal, city officials feel. The referendum will ask city residents whether or not they want the city to hire a marshal. If they do, should it be full-time or part-time. The question also proposes a part-time municipal judge, although Roberts County Justice of the Peace Mildred Cunningham recently said she would take on city duties.

City officials estimate that would take between $5,000 and $8,000 to outfit a police department or marshal with a used car, radar and other equipment, plus about $30,000 per year for the marshal and municipal judge.

City officials are also asking residents about forming a city ambulance service. Residents have expressed concern that valuable time may be lost when an ambulance must be called from Canadian or Pampa. Other residents, including city physician Dr. S.J. Montgomery, feel an ambulance service is not crucial.

The city is also asking residents if it would be okay to purchase maintenance equipment and to raise city taxes to fund the equipment purchase, ambulance service, and city marshal's salary.

City officials are also asking residents their opinion on a proposal to buy the water service from Consolidated Utilities.

Economy grew slower than first believed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy went into a more pronounced slump from July through September than previously thought, growing at a sluggish rate of 1.9 percent, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the gross national product — the broadest measure of the country's economic health — advanced at the slowest pace since the fourth quarter of 1982, the end of the last recession.

The Reagan administration has described the slowdown as a momentary lull and not the beginning of another recession, but many private economists have said that at the very least the country has entered a growth recession.

In a growth recession, the economy expands at such a low rate that unemployment also rises.

In an actual recession, the economy does not grow at all.

The 1.9 percent figure for growth in the third quarter marked the second time the government has revised downward this estimate of economic activity. It first said third quarter growth would come in at 3.6 percent and then last month that was revised to 2.7 percent.

While many economists were expecting another downward revision, few were predicting the rate would fall below 2 percent. That meant the economy expanded at less than one-fourth the pace it had exhibited in the first six months of the year.

From January through March, the GNP surged ahead at an annual rate of 10.1 percent. From April through June, the rate was a still-robust 7.1 percent.

Judge keeps pre-trial hearing open to public despite motion

PRE-TRIAL MOTIONS—David Port, 17, sits in the courtroom after court was recessed for the day Monday by Judge I.D. McMasters in Houston in the hearing of pre-trial motions in the case where Port is charged in the death of mail carrier Debora Sue Schatz. (AP Laserphoto)

HOUSTON (AP) — A judge has refused to close portions of pre-trial testimony in the case of a teen-ager accused of murdering a Houston letter carrier.

But State District Judge I.D. McMasters said he would rule today on a request by attorneys for 17-year-old David Port to suppress items obtained in a police search of Port's house.

"Even if the police warrant were valid, they (police) seized items that weren't authorized to be seized," said defense attorney Jack Zimmermann.

Zimmermann contends that seven items seized from the house were not included in the search warrant and thus could not be admitted as evidence.

Although defense attorneys also argued that some evidence gathered from Port's 1976 Chevrolet Malibu should not be admitted, McMasters ruled that the items were seized legally.

Port is charged in the shooting death of Debora Sue Schatz, who disappeared June 7 while helping a co-worker deliver mail in the affluent westside neighborhood where the Port family lives.

On Monday, McMasters ruled he would wait until after a jury is selected and sequestered before he decides whether oral statements allegedly taken by police from Port can be admitted as evidence.

Zimmermann objected to McMasters' decision, saying the testimony could be "very, very damaging."

Police, who arrested the teen-ager the following day, said he told officers he killed Ms. Schatz and then dumped her body in a bayou. The 23-year-old postal worker's body was found June 9 in a muddy, wooded area north of Houston.

Prosecutors have said the trial could begin early next year, but no firm date has yet been set.

Zimmermann, who said he plans to file a motion today for a change of venue, contends his client's trial should be moved to another city because the case has "become the story of the decade" since the teen-ager's parents were jailed for refusing to testify before a grand jury.

"Look at the letters to the editors in the papers, the calls into radio talk shows," he said. "People have strong feelings about this case."

While David Port awaited a docket call in McMasters' court, attorney Randy Schaffer repeated arguments he had presented earlier this month in the contempt of court case against the teen-ager's parents, Bernard and Odette Port.

Schaffer said the legal arguments had to be repeated because no court reporter was present when McMasters freed Bernard Port from jail on Nov. 9. Mrs. Port remains in the Harris County jail and Schaffer is appealing her case to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

Panel recommends look at waste tax

AUSTIN (AP) — The 1985 Legislature should consider a hazardous waste tax to pay for cleaning up abandoned dumpsites, a House-Senate panel says.

But the Joint Committee on Hazardous Waste Disposal could not agree Monday whether to tax the generation or the disposal of the wastes.

In lieu of a definitive recommendation, the committee voted to ask the Legislature to "consider" a new tax to raise money for enforcement of hazardous waste dump laws, research and clean-up projects.

Two committee members offered tax plans. Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, wants a $5-per-ton tax on the disposal of hazardous wastes. Truan said a disposal tax could create an incentive to "neutralize" hazardous wastes.

But Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, said a $2-per-ton tax on hazardous waste generation would be a better system. Sixty-three million tons of the wastes were generated in the state in 1983, according to the Texas Department of Water Resources.

"At the point of generation you have much more reputable folks to deal with," said Stiles. "If we have a disposal tax, we are going to have a lot of illegal dumping."

The committee decided to approve a resolution without specifics about the proposed tax. The revenue would be used, in part, to create a state fund to pay for clean-ups not funded by the federal government's "Superfund" or the entity that caused the problem.

Also, Stiles won approval of a call for a two-year moratorium on new commercial waste dumps. There are presently three in the state, in Corpus Christi, Texas City and Port Arthur.

Most of the hazardous wastes are dumped at the site where they are generated — not at the commercial dumps, officials say.

Three children die in fire

ORANGE, Texas (AP) — Three children ranging in age from three months to five years old died in a fire that may have been started by one of the youngsters playing with matches.

The dead were identified as Erica Monroe, 3 months; Anthony Atkinson, 14 months; and Lester Chargios, 5.

The fire started on a couch in the first level of a 10-unit Orange Housing Authority apartment complex, said Orange fire marshal Don Blanchette.

Blanchette said two of the children were playing near the couch, but then ran upstairs after the fire started. Their bodies were found in an upstairs bedroom.

Bingo industry investigated

AUSTIN (AP) — Two lawmakers who spearheaded legislation legalizing bingo in Texas are concerned that charities may be shortchanged by commercial operators who are dividing up the lion's share of millions of dollars in proceeds from the game.

The bulk of the $261.6 million paid out by bingo players since January 1983 went for prizes and to promoters who leased the halls and operated the concessions, according to records of the state comptroller's office.

Of that amount, $24.2 million, or 9.24 percent, actually was channeled for charitable purposes. The Dallas Morning News reported.

Criss said he has ordered his staff to review the situation.

Claudia Stravato, the deputy state comptroller who oversees bingo regulation, said the comptroller's staff is reviewing the bingo law and may recommend that the 1985 Legislature rewrite the entire bingo act.

Billy Burchfield, chairman of the Texas Bingo Operators Association, claims that "commercial" promoters — some from out of state — are squeezing out the small charities the law was designed to benefit.

amendment legalizing bingo for charitable groups in 1980. State law allows only non-profit, tax-exempt veterans', fraternal and other bona fide charity groups to be licensed to play bingo for money.

The Texas Bingo Operators Association also claims that the lure of potentially large bingo profits is attracting out-of-state operators to a business that already is keenly competitive.

'Ettes' by any other name

I saw an item on the sports desk: "White Deer Does begin basketball season."

"That's nice," I said to the sports editor. "I would be upset if White Deer doesn't begin basketball season."

L.D. looked at me. "That's doe. It's a deer, a female deer."

And before I could sing "ray, a drop of golden sun," he explained how embarrassing it would be to call the girls' basketball and volleyball teams the White Deer Bucks.

No longer confused, I remembered that things were not much different when I was a student at Deer Creek High School, home of the Fighting Antlers. The Antlers were guys to be reckoned with when it came to high school basketball. The field-house was decked in bold blue banners proclaiming Oklahoma state championships from 1970 and 1974 and reserve championships from 1971 and 1975. The Antlers made the state play-offs at least once since I graduated in 1977.

The girls' team, which had only one state title from 1965, was known as the Antlerettes. But when we cheered them on to their occasional victories, we still called them the Antlers. The cheerleader sponsor liked calling the girls and boys teams by the same name because it made ordering spirit ribbons less expensive.

Of course a purist would stress that only bucks grow antlers. Does do not have antlers, much less antlerettes.

At Central State University, the girls' basketball team was the Bronchettes. But the girls' volleyball coach hated the term and called her girls the Bronchos, just like the boys' teams. That left area sports editors confused.

The French use the suffix "ette" to make something little. It turns a cigar into a cigarette. It also makes words more feminine: from major to majorette.

But I wonder if "ette" fits the modern image of the girl athlete. Groom and McLean schools ought to be proud of their Tigerettes. But the correct term for a female tiger — tigress — gives the impression of being more sleek and sly than the male counterpart. And if Patty Smyth of the rock group Scandal can boldly call herself "The Warrior," so can a girl athlete at Miami High School.

Pampa and other area high schools have a different designation than "ette" for their girls' teams. They address their female athletes as Lady: Lady Harvesters, Lady Pirates, Lady Mustangs, Lady Wildcats.

Mobeette calls its girls the Lady Hornets, not the Hornettes, lest people think they are a back-up singing group for Tina Turner. And Berger High School is wise to call its team the Lady Bulldogs, not the Still, I tend to associate Lady with a royal court, not a basketball court.

Regardless of what they're called, girls' teams deserve every bit of support, enthusiasm and funding that the boys do. Our Antlerettes may not have won every game, but they always gave their fans something to watch, like the way one guard could snatch a rebound and hurl the basketball clear across the court to a ready forward.

Now, thanks to the victories of the Olympic women's basketball and volleyball teams — not to mention that miracle marathon — people are discovering girls' athletics. Recent television and newspaper coverage has shown that girls' volleyball can be just as exciting as football.

Now it's time for the lady basketballers to shine. Whether she's a Tigerette, Warriorette or a Lady Harvester, Hornet, Pirate, Mustang or Wildcat, that young athlete hustles hard for your pride and support.

And that player with the White Deer Does does, too.

Spaulding is a staff writer of The Pampa News.

When the prize money — $188.6 million since 1983 — is deducted from the gross, the charities' share jumps to 32 percent, she said.

Libyan plot details sought by Britain

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Britain is seeking details about two Britons accused of serving on a Libyan assassination squad and about allegations that Libya was plotting to kill British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, sources said today.

The British sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said British Ambassador Michael Weir met with Egyptian Foreign Ministry officials on Monday after the arrest last weekend of Anthony William Gill, 48, and Godfrey Philip Shiner, 47, both of London.

Egypt has accused Shiner and Gill of being part of a four-member Libyan "hit team" sent to Cairo by Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy to kill former Libyan Prime Minister Abdel-Hamid Bakoush.

Libya, in turn, broadcast an appeal on its state-run radio Monday for the overthrow of Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak.

The British sources said Britain was seeking information about Shiner and Gill and statements by Mubarak and Egyptian officials that Libya was plotting to kill Mrs. Thatcher.

But the sources refused to give details of the meeting or say whether Weir received information substantiating the claims that the suspects had related Libyan plans to assassinate Mrs. Thatcher, Chancellor Helmut Kohl of West Germany, King Fahd of Saudi Arabia and several other world leaders.

Mubarak has said Libya also may have been involved in the Oct. 31 assassination of Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

Gill, Shiner and two Maltese were arrested Saturday shortly before Mubarak announced that Egyptian security had used faked photographs showing Bakoush in a pool of blood to trick Libya into believing he had been killed.

Egypt said the Libyan agents, who were to have hired Egyptian collaborators to carry out the killing, hired undercover police who staged a sham abduction and shooting of Bakoush.

Guidebook sent new congressmen

By BILL McCLOSKEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Avoid hiring the mayor's idiot son" — that's rule No. 3 in a handy new guidebook prepared for freshman members of Congress.

The book is being sent to more than 40 new members of the House of Representatives who, come Jan. 3, will find themselves on the bottom rung of the seniority ladder, with offices at the longest distance from the House floor.

With major issues such as the deficit and the fate of the MX missile scheduled for early votes, the new member has little chance for on-the-job training. But there is much to be done getting started.

From overcrowded offices, America's new House members will find themselves running million-dollar-a-year operations with a Washington office, a branch office back home, and an avalanche of mail from people who will have an opportunity to vote against him or her in less than two years.

"One of the basic, omnipresent, sometimes oppressive, facts of congressional life is the mail," the management guide warns the newcomers. The mail is delivered four times a day, five days a week, every week. And in bold-faced type, the new member is warned to come to grips with mail handling right away.

The book, titled, "Setting Course: A Congressional Management Guide" was published by the American University Congressional Management Project in cooperation with the Congressional Management Foundation.

In addition to receiving the handbook, each new member of Congress has also been invited to bring an aide and come to a free seminar next week to learn more from the experiences of the Class of 1982, last term's freshmen.

Deborah Szekeley, who made her money with the Golden Door fitness spa in California, set up a foundation to fund the effort.

The authors say: "Choices made in the first hectic days can haunt a member throughout his or her career. Indeed, these initial choices have some impact of whether that career is long or short."

Passing This Test Could Mean Failure.

Kids who pass this conventional school eye test may see the blackboard fine from the back of the room. But how about up close? Studies prove your child may be one of 15 million school-aged children with reading disabilities due to a visual deficiency this test can't detect.

Is your child giving you any of these early detection warnings?

- Book held only 7 or 8 inches from the eyes
- Makes errors when copying

- Uses finger to trace lines in highbooks
- Writes or prints poorly
- Short attention span while reading
- Closes or covers one eye

Proper vision therapy using a series of vision exercises and sometimes combined with proper corrective lenses can successfully help many of these problems. Don't take chances with your child's sight. Nov. 21, 1984

The year ahead could be quite unusual because you will reap greater rewards from seeds sown in the past than you might from your newer ventures. Don't write off past efforts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) The secret to success in your endeavors today is to focus on their positive aspects and possibilities. Don't give negative thoughts a chance to dilute your hopes. Major changes are in store for Scorpios in the coming year. Send for your predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It looks like you might reap some dividends today from a situation controlled by others. Don't make waves if all is going smoothly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A hope has a good possibility of becoming a reality today if you go after your dream in a pragmatic fashion. Be a realistic visionary.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Try to be neither obvious nor devious about your intentions today. If you're too transparent, it will tip your hand. If you're devious, you'll lose your respect.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Do not play a lone hand today, especially if you're involved in something beneficial. Share any good that befalls you with as many friends as possible.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Changes are in the offing today where an important matter is concerned. They can be used to your advantage, so be prepared to move with the tide.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) In partnership situations today, talk everything over in detail before either party renders a judgment or takes a specific action. Two heads are better than one.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If things have not been to your liking at work, take positive measures today to improve conditions. Your destiny is in your hands.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Someone who normally opposes your views can be swung around to your way of thinking today. Use your powers of persuasion to make this person an ally.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be industrious today because you will derive pride from your accomplishments. A good time to complete projects around the home you've thus far left unfinished.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today you could be rather lucky in involvements that contain slight elements of chance. Be bold, but do not take outlandish risks.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You are presently in a cycle where you can add to resources and increase earnings. Opportunities are around you, but you must be alert to perceive them.

Time for holiday decorations

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

With winter holidays just around the corner, this is a good time to begin thinking about creating holiday decorations.

It's a charming custom to bring out a special tablecloth or centerpiece or wall hanging. But to do so, you generally have to plan ahead to finish the work before the inevitable busy round of parties and gift-buying chores.

One technique that seems to be increasingly popular for holiday decorations made inexpensively at home is to dye them. Sales figures from one company indicate a 10 percent increase in sales of powdered and liquid dye within the last three years.

You can dye most fabrics, including cotton, linen, nylon, rayon, silk, wool and blends, and many natural materials such as cork, cornhusks, weeds and grasses. You can also dye beans, macaroni and rice, wood, string, seashells, wicker and straw, among other materials.

The technique is particularly suited to creating countrystyle projects, according to Kate Williams, home decorating consultant for RIT Dye. She suggests applying dye which is transparent to create a burnished effect typical of old wood. This can be done by using several different colors in a manner similar to antiquing.

Following directions to the letter for projects will give good results, but she offers some additional tips for working with dye. First of all, use natural materials if possible as a base, since they take color best.

If you're working with fabric, start with plain white muslin or sheeting and wash it with detergent to get rid of any surface treatment.

When working with wicker, straw or wood, use unfinished materials as light in color as possible. When the project has been completed, follow dye package directions to set the color on fabrics. With other materials, spray on several coats of polyurethane so the dyed surface won't run when it comes in contact with moisture.

For simple clean-up, wear rubber gloves when working with dye and line table surfaces with plastic garbage bags and newspaper. Use disposable receptacles such as one-pound coffee cans to mix dye and then discard them when you are finished.

What simple projects can you make for the holidays? Ms. Williams suggests creating a tablecloth and matching napkins or a set of placemats and napkins for the holiday table. You can also dye wicker trivets and wooden napkin holders to make an even grander holiday table. Another idea is to dye unfinished wicker baskets and then place seasonal arrangements of dried flowers, grasses, pine cones and other materials in them.

The easiest dye technique is to paint freehand a design or pattern on a white surface. For example, you might create a small holly sprig with a green leaf, a red berry and a brown stalk and then in a few brush strokes transfer the motif onto a white sheet cut and hemmed to fit the table. Paint the same pattern on white handkerchiefs and use them as matching napkins.

A rewarding and inexpensive project is to dye small wicker baskets, spray with polyurethane to set the color, and then fill with cookies, bubble bath or soap as gifts. The project is suitable for children. Another project for kids is making small tree ornaments. Use balsa wood, if available, and dip the wood ornaments into a dye bath. Or, make bread dough ornaments, bake and then paint with dye, suggests Ms. Williams.

Techniques for working with dye include solid-color hand dyeing, which is done in a sink, pot or other container. You dip the item into the dye bath for about 20 minutes for light colors, longer for dark colors, and then rinse it in clear water to set the dye.

Ombre dyeing produces a multicolored piece of fabric and involves dipping sections of the project into several successively darker dye baths. You start with the lightest shade and end with the darkest.

Tie dyeing is done by bunching or tying together several portions of the fabric, then dipping to create a multicolored fabric.

Splatter dyeing is done with a paint brush which splatters the dye in an abstract pattern. You can also use the paint brush to apply more precise patterns on a surface. Stencil dyeing employs a stenciled pattern against which you apply the dye with a brush.

Batik is a wax-resist method in which a design is "painted" onto a fabric with melted wax. The waxed portion resists absorbing color from a dye bath. Then, when the wax is removed, the design remains clear or it can be filled in with another dye color using a paint brush.

(Readers can obtain free information on dyeing in general and on specific projects mentioned here by requesting it from RITHDAP, P.O. Box 307, Coventry, CT 06238.

Dear Abby

Girl's bully boyfriend should be told to beat it

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: There's this guy I've been going with for nearly three years. Well, the problem is that he hits me. He started last year. He has done it only four or five times, but each time it was worse than the time before. Every time he hit me it was because he thought I was flirting. (I wasn't.)

Last time, he accused me of coming on to a friend of his. First he called me a lot of dirty names, then he punched my face so bad it left me with a black eye and black-and-blue bruises over half my face. It was very noticeable, so I told my folks that the car I was riding in stopped suddenly and my face hit the windshield.

Abby, he's 19 and I'm 17, and already I feel like an old married lady who lets her husband push her around.

I haven't spoken to him since this happened. He keeps begging me to give him one more chance. I think I've given him enough chances. Should I keep avoiding him or what?
BLACK AND BLUE

DEAR BLACK AND BLUE: Avoid him forever. Guys who punch their girlfriends and get away with it become wife beaters. Say goodbye to this bully and make it stick.

DEAR ABBY: A reader signed "Pushing for the Gold" said his wife refused to celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary because they had not been married to each other for 50 years. (He had three different wives in 46 years, but she had been married to him for only four years.)

That woman doesn't know what she's missing! My husband of 13 years came up with this idea six years ago, and it's been copied by many of our friends. Our invitation read as follows:

SCORECARD

HE	SHE
7 years with showgirl	10 years with engineer
7 years with tennis player	13 years with ole fatso
13 years with blonde
27 years	23 years

So, 27 years plus 23 years totals 50, doesn't it? You are invited to our 50th Fool's Gold Anniversary celebration!

Abby, over 100 guests helped us celebrate this happy excuse for a party. Two of the "ex's" were invited, but only one could make it.

MAY AND MARSHALL R.
VICTORIA, B.C., CANADA

DEAR ABBY: Why did you have to go and put that big headline "Grandma Claims Sex Is the Price Women Pay for Marriage" on top of your column?

My husband doesn't usually read your column, but when he sees a headline like this one, he is determined to read it.

After he read it, he thought he was 22 again. I'm a grandma, too, and I am too old and too tired for sex.

Please, Abby, no more headlines like this. I will stop taking the newspaper if it happens again.

TIRED IN TEXAS

DEAR TIRED: Not guilty as charged. I am responsible only for the content of this column—not the headlines. They are written either by my syndicate editors or by copy editors at this paper.

Harvesters win cage opener

By L.D. STRATE
Pampa News Sports Editor

Pampa's basketball opener with Palo Duro looked like it was going to be one of those down to the wire type thrillers. But the Harvesters scored six unanswered points early in the fourth quarter and posted a 50-52 win Monday night in Clifton McNeely Fieldhouse.

In a game that had 14 lead changes, neither team managed more than a six-point lead — until 3:50 into the fourth quarter. That's when baskets by Dunivan Lewis, Vibrant Ryan and Pety Davis gave the Harvesters a 50-43 advantage, their largest lead up until then. Palo Duro did cut the lead to three, 52-49, on a Eugene Sims goal, but with 1:20 left the Dons had to start fouling. John Tarpley hit four foul shots, sandwiched around a Davis layup, in the final minute, and the Harvesters had won their first game of the 1984-85 season.

Davis, who scored six of his 10 points in the second half, was a rally-breaker for the Harvesters. Palo Duro jumped out to an early lead in the third quarter and were ahead by three, 39-36, when Davis hit a short hook and then came back with a driving layup after two Dons' misses, to put Pampa in front again.

Jeff Gaines sparked the Harvesters in the first half, scoring 12 of his 14-game high points, and missing only once in seven attempts. Gaines, a 6-5½ senior, scored six of Pampa's eight points late in the first quarter, to give the Harvesters their biggest lead (18-12) until the fourth period.

"Gaines and Davis hadn't been playing that well in practice, but they came through like we needed them to last night," said Pampa head coach Garland Nichols. "They're both very aggressive players. Vibrant Ryan came in the second half and got some critical rebounds for us."

Although the Harvesters were a little ragged around the edges in the passing and ballhanding department, they still shot a respectable 48.9 percent (23 of 47) from the floor. Foul line accuracy could stand an improvement. The Harvesters hit only 14 of 24 attempts.

"We played sloppy the first half. We had 13 turnovers the first half and just six the second, but we're a young ballclub and we're going to make mistakes," Nichols said. "I thought all the kids played well."

Rodney Young and Tarpley added 11 and 10 points respectively to the Harvesters' balanced attack. Lewis had six points, Chris Comer three, and Richard Rogers, Clyde Steele and Ryan, two points each.

"We've got to keep improving. We're going to look for improvement in every practice and every game," Nichols said.

Sims, Glen Hayes and Rod Steger had 11 points each to lead the Dons.

The Harvesters travel to Amarillo this Friday night to take on a tough Amarillo High team. Gametime is 7:30 p.m.

"According to the TABC (Texas Association of Basketball Coaches), the Sandies are supposed to be at the state tournament this season," Nichols said. "Allen Simpson does an excellent job of coaching and he's got four or five returnees off that very tough team he had last year."

Pampa also won the junior varsity game, 46-43.

"The kids were a little nervous since this was their first game and most of them had never played JV ball before, but they hung in there and did real well," said Shockers' coach Sparky Roberts.

Roberts said the Palo Duro JVs had trouble handling the Shockers' fullcourt press in the third quarter.

Lonnie Mills and Terry Jeffrey had 10 points each to lead Pampa.

The Shockers play the Amarillo High JVs at 6 p.m. Friday night in Amarillo.

Basketball parents to hold meeting

There will be a meeting of basketball parents tonight at 7:30 p.m. tonight in Clifton McNeely Fieldhouse. The meeting is for parents of players from the seventh grade through high school.

Saints hold off Steelers

By AUSTIN WILSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A half-hour after the game, Derland Moore was still in full uniform, sitting at his locker in the clamorous New Orleans Saints dressing room savoring his team's first Monday victory ever.

"I'm afraid to take it off," said the 12-year National Football League veteran. "I'm afraid I'll wake up and find out it's all a dream."

"I've been through more of them than anybody. It was a long time coming."

New Orleans beat the Pittsburgh Steelers 27-24 for the first Monday victory in the 18-year history of the franchise. They were 0-7 in prime time going into the game.

Moore said he knew the Saints were going to win — no question about it.

"It was the darndest feeling I've ever had on the sidelines. We just knew we were going to win," said the veteran nose tackle. "As the game went on, we just got better and better."

Quarterback Richard Todd, who provided most of the Saints' offense, credited the defense for the victory.

"We had good field good position most of the game," he said. "They kept getting us the ball in good position. We didn't always do anything with it, but they just kept getting us the ball."

Todd threw for 223 yards and two touchdowns, hitting 18 of 31 attempts and getting two picked off by Steeler cornerback Dwayne Woodruff. He was also sacked six times.

The Steelers scored on a 76-yard punt return by Louis Lipps and a 14-yard pass from Mark Malone to John Stallworth in the second quarter, a 21-yard field goal by Gary Anderson early in the fourth quarter and a 25-yard pass from Scott Campbell to Lipps with 1:17 left in the game.

But the Saints kept coming up with big defensive plays. Linebacker Rickey Jackson forced two fumbles and constantly harried Steeler quarterbacks into throwing early and off balance.

Defensive end Bruce Clark recovered two fumbles and intercepted a pass when Malone tried a screen over the middle.

"I was just in the right place at the right time," said Clark.

"The interception was pure luck," he said. "It was a bad pass rush. I opened my eyes, and the ball was there."

DALLAS (AP) — The Thanksgiving Day game between the Dallas Cowboys and the New England Patriots was declared a sellout Monday, team officials said.

Dallas radio station KVIL purchased the remaining 1,200 tickets before the 3 p.m. deadline, thus clearing the way for the National Football League game to be telecast locally, said Cowboys spokesman Doug Todd.

The game, which kicks off at 3 p.m. CST, will be telecast nationally by NBC.

Tax shelters under attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — Did you pay more than $2,500 in federal income taxes in each of the last three years? Would you like a 100 percent refund?

That's part of the come-on for a tax shelter aimed at attracting low- and middle-income Americans — a plan that has been drawing the attention of the Internal Revenue Service for several months. Now, the states are joining in the battle.

Securities administrators in eight states have announced action against a dozen promoters of these shelters, which require investors to put up a minimum amount of cash — or simply to pledge part of their federal tax refund — to buy a share of a videojape or of an equipment-leasing program.

"This particular promotion is typical of the new breed of shelters preying on unsophisticated investors in the ranks of blue-collar and middle-income taxpayers," Wayne Howell, director of the Georgia Securities Division, told a news conference Monday.

Added Nancy Loftin of the Arizona Corporation Commission: "They are told that this is their chance to get into what the big boys have been doing all along."

Howell offered this advice: "If the deal ... seems too good to be true, it probably is."

Howell said Arizona, California, Indiana, Washington, Iowa, New Mexico, Utah and Alaska took administrative action against promoters of the video tape or leasing shelter or both late last week. Ms. Loftin said those promotions involved more than $10 million of tax benefits and well over 275 investors in 18 states.

Feds close largest manhunt after netting more than 3,000 fugitives

NEW YORK (AP) — The largest manhunt in U.S. history has led to the capture of more than 3,000 fugitives wanted for crimes ranging from murder and rape to bail jumping and parole violations, according to sources close to the two-month investigation.

More than 100 U.S. Marshals Service inspectors conducted the investigation that rounded up numerous "repeated violent criminals," working alongside local and state police in eight Eastern states.

The FIST operation — the letters stand for Fugitive Investigative Strike Teams — was the seventh conducted by the federal marshals, according to the sources.

The sources, marshals and police officers who worked on the operation, spoke on condition they not be identified until the investigation was revealed officially.

The U.S. Justice Department scheduled a news conference today in Manhattan. Officials said

Attorney General William French Smith would announce the results of the probe along with Stanley E. Morris, director of the marshals service.

FIST 7 was coordinated in secrecy from an otherwise abandoned building at Fort Totten in the borough of Queens, which is headquarters for the 77th U.S. Army Reserve Command.

From there, FIST teams swooped down on fugitives throughout New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Maryland, Massachusetts and Connecticut. Sources said the agents also developed evidence that led to arrests in California, Florida and Tennessee.

FIST teams operated in the five boroughs of New York City and upstate in Albany, Syracuse, Rochester and Buffalo, according to the sources. There also were FIST subdivisions in Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Scranton, Pa., and Hartford, Conn., according to the sources.

One of those arrested, wanted in an execution-style slaying that police said occurred during a drug deal gone sour, was traced to Miami, where marshals and Dade County SWAT team members captured him after a lengthy foot chase.

Another, accused of killing his brother and wounding his mother and another brother, was arrested in Philadelphia.

"You're talking about guys who are violent criminals, repeated violent criminals," said one marshals service inspector who worked on the operation. "Many of these guys are career criminals."

In Connecticut, fugitives were contacted and told they had won a radio station contest for a limousine tour of Hartford and free tickets to an upcoming rock concert.

According to the sources, two other sting operations, conducted in the New York City area, netted about 80 arrests.

Advisers pessimistic about deficit cutting

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan's budget advisers are privately expressing alarm at what they view as the near impossibility of significantly reducing the federal deficit without violating Reagan's campaign promise against raising taxes.

One administration official, speaking on the condition that he remain anonymous, questioned why Reagan issued a firm no-tax-increase campaign pledge in the face of overwhelming odds that he would have been re-elected without it.

At the beginning of the campaign in August, the president said he would raise taxes only as a last resort. But as he continued to berate Democratic challenger Walter F. Mondale for suggesting there would be no way to cut the deficit without a tax increase, Reagan's pledge became more and more firm.

Finally, a few days before the Nov. 6 election, Reagan declared taxes would be raised "over my dead body."

The official said the 12 high-level officials who form the group developing a 1986 fiscal year budget appear to be hopelessly deadlocked as they seek ways to achieve $50 billion in spending cuts.

The group includes the administration's leading pragmatists, such as White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III, Budget Director David Stockman and presidential assistant Richard G. Darman, along with its leading conservative, Counselor Edwin Meese and his sometime ally, Treasury Secretary Donald Regan.

Meese, who will be nominated again in January to succeed William French Smith as attorney general, apparently believes the budget process is his last chance to lay out a conservative agenda for Reagan to follow in his second term.

While the group agreed to a target deficit of roughly $160 billion in 1986, declining to just over $100 billion in 1988, it currently has no idea where the $50 billion savings will come from.

Without further action, the 1986 deficit currently is projected at $206 billion.

Although the group met for more than 12 hours last week, the official said some of the time was wasted with various statements of the obvious, such as "the government needs to make more money."

The quandary the group is facing is that the big-ticket items where the most significant savings could be achieved have been ruled off limits by Reagan.

For instance, the president promised during the campaign not to reduce Social Security benefits, and deputy press secretary Marlin Fitzwater reiterated that pledge again Monday.

Defense spending is another area where it appears unlikely Reagan would agree to reductions as he pursues his massive military buildup.

The budget group members disagree on whether to continue to increase defense spending, and if so, by how much.

The Washington Post and The New York Times reported in today's editions that among cost-cutting measures, the administration was considering ways to curb the cost of veterans' benefits by restricting free medical care to service-related ailments. The Post also reported the administration was continuing to seriously consider asking Congress to scale back farm price and income supports.

The budget group is expected to submit recommendations to Reagan next week on where the budget should be cut and on what the deficit target figure should be.
