City Council Studies Plans For Warnings

By TEX DEWEESE
News Staff Writer

Several proposals for a tornado warning system for Pampa were discussed at today's City Commission meeting and Mayor Milo Carlson asked members of the body to be ready for action at the next council meeting on May 12.

Meanwhile, a committee comprising Police Chief Jim Conner, Fire Chief Finace Dyer and Bill Leonard, civil defense coordinator for Gray County, has been designated to determine necessary procedures for the City and other agencies to qualify for Civil Defense standby electric generators and warning devices.

City Manager Charles Hill told commissioners it had been determined that Pampa's current one-warning siren now in use was not effective during the recent tornado due to the lack of notice of the impending tornado and the power blackout which resulted from the tornado itself.

A proposal that seemed to hold much interest in today's discussion of warning possibilities was what was described as a "hot line" system to warn selected institutions at certain locations in the community.

It would consist of a special telephone network with push-button operation from Central Police Station.

A push of the button would ring these approximately 40 or 50 telephones for 15 minutes. They would send a recorded message warning of an approaching tornado.

It was suggested that the hot line network would be used in with radio stations, Cable TV, hospitals, fire stations, newspaper, sheriff's department, and other alert points throughout the city.

Installation of warning sirens on each of the city's elementary school buildings is another possibility, Hill stated.

Also discussed were emergency power for Central Fire Station and the two local radio stations, and a weather teletype for the Police Department.

Hill said it is anticipated that when a better determination as to the eligibility of the City to participate in Civil Defense emergency warning and electrical generator systems has been made, a follow up report will be made to the mayor and City Commission.

Councilmen Look At Bids

Bids on seal coating city streets, water meters, gasoline and oil, and meals for city jail prisoners were opened at today's city commission meeting in City Hall.

Only one bid was received to furnish prisoners meal. Patrick's, 314 N. Cuyler, bid 79 cents per meal for three meals a day.

The three other items received multiple bids. They will be studied and contract awards will be made at the May 12 meetings.

The commission also approved acceptance of roadway and drainage easements from Western Beef, Inc. in the Recreation Park area.

Auditorium Moves Closer To Reality

A civic auditorium for Pampa moved another step toward realization today when the City Commission agreed in principle to the proposal of the M.K. Brown Foundation to finance building of the structure.

A motion was approved authorizing the City to enter negotiations with the Foundation trustees for carrying out the plan.

The Foundation proposal provides $400,000 in cash and pledges approximately $60,000 a year income for retirement of proposed revenue bonds to pay the remaining cost.

City Manager Charles Hill outlined to commissioners the city's sequence of procedure.

In summarizing the Brown Foundation proposal Hill pointed out that the City would hire an architect, bond attorney, make a fiscal evaluation of proposed auditorium operations revenue and funds from the Foundation to determine fiscal capability.

Hill suggested that the City appoint a committee to work with the General Memorial Auditorium that is headed by E.L. Green Jr. and with the chamber of commerce.

This combined committee, it was anticipated, would determine what to build and recommend an architect for the preliminary plans from which total cost of the project would be determined.

Hill stated a revenue bond issue, and possibly tax bonds, would be proposed to the public with 30 days notice required to hold an election.

764-PAGE TRANSCRIPT Kopechne Document Due Airing Today

BOSTON (UPI) — Documents from the secret inquest into the death of Mary Jo Kopechne will be released Wednesday afternoon, nine months after the blonde secretary died in a midnight auto accident involving Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

Into the death of Mary Jo Kopechne will be released Wednesday afternoon, nine months after the blonde secretary died in a midnight auto accident involving Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

The documents will be distributed to bearers of a small white piece of paper stamped "Receipt for $75 Transcript & Report Death of Mary Jo Kopechne" at 3 p.m. EDT in a courtroom of the Suffolk Superior Court.

What the public will get a chance to see are two documents—the 764-page transcript of testimony and the 12-page report of inquest Judge James A. Boyle of the Eastern District Court, where the closed-door investigation ended Jan. 8.

Kennedy, who reportedly opposed making the inquest secret in the first place, repeatedly has told friends he is anxious to have the documents made public. Last week, the surviving Kennedy son petitioned the Massachusetts Supreme Court for the speedy release of the documents, whose status had become snarled in a complicated legal battle over who had the right to reproduce and sell copies of the transcript to the news media.

Apparently reacting to the growing public outcry about the squabble in the state and federal courts over the distribution rights case, Chief Justice G. Joseph Tauro of the Massachusetts Superior Court moved quickly Monday to put an end to the controversy.

He took possession of the documents from the Suffolk Superior Court, where they had been impounded since Feb. 18 when Boyle filed his report, and relieved its clerk, Edward V. Keating of any responsibility for their release.

Tauro then announced he would make the documents public at the estimated cost of reproduction—about $75—"as a public service." He rejected the claim of two court stenographers who transcribed the inquest to having property rights to the transcripts.

The stenographers' $150,000 damage suit, however, is pending in the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Tauro disputed the jurisdiction of the federal courts in the case and said, "The release of the report and transcripts and copies of both is now exclusively an internal administrative affair of the Superior Court."

Two Pampa High School seniors were singled out for honors Monday night as the two top students in the 1970 senior class of 345 students.

Miss Debbie Veale, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J.B. Veale, north of city, was named valedictorian with a grade point average of 96.6794.

Miss Gayle Griffin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Griffin west of city was named salutatorian with a grade point average of 95.9230.

The annual Honors Night Reception was held Monday night in the high school.

Top 10 students in the Senior Class named Monday were Miss Veale, Miss Griffin, Jay Losher, 95.2105; Berkley Evans, 94.1126; Todd Lemons, 93.8450; Sharon McCauley, 93.6133; Randy Marsh, 93.500; Debbie Malson, 93.3076; Jane Dingus, 93.0649; and Gail Wilson, 93.0394.

Students earning honor grades during the Spring semester of 1969-70 included 49 boys and 97 girls in Junior and Senior classes.

Attempts To Untangle Legislative Hang Up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Post Office Committee today starts drafting a new postal reform bill as two independent union leaders threatened another round of postal worker strikes if the Nixon administration's reform bill is enacted.

Rep. Thaddeus L. Lusk, D-N.Y., the chairman, called his committee into secret session to hammer out a bill before the end of the week. The Senate Post Office Committee was expected to approve another type of reform before the week's end.

The House committee earlier this year approved by a 17-6 vote a reform bill nearly identical with the administration's original proposal to turn the post office over to a public corporation.

But thousands of Postal workers went on strike in mid-March and in negotiations that ended the strike, the administration modified its reform measure so the department would be operated by an 11-member commission which would appoint the postmaster-general without Cabinet rank.

The Senate committee is considering a bill under which the postmaster-general would continue to be appointed by the president but he would serve an eight-year term and not be a member of the Cabinet. The postmaster general serves at the pleasure of the president.

The tangled legislative situation was further muddled Monday. The National Postal Union (NPU) and the National Alliance of Postal and Federal Employees warned Congress its going to be widespread in their members are ready to strike if the administration bill.

drafted with agreement from seven other rival postal unions recognized by the government, is enacted.

Asbury Smith, president of the 45,000 member Alliance, said he had been "mandated" by his union to call a strike. David Silvergeld, president of the 80,000-member NPU, said "we are standing with the Alliance in whatever action it takes."

Postmaster General Winton M. Blount told the National Press Club Monday the nation may suffer another—and even more serious mail stoppage unless congress quickly approves postal reform.

"Make no mistake, the situation is urgent, and we are going to have some more labor problems," Blount said. "We are going to have chaos, and it's going to be widespread in the postal system, if we don't change the system."

Space Probe Underway To Cause Of Apollo Blowup

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI)—Space agency officials trying to piece together the elusive details of what caused an oxygen tank explosion aboard the ill-fated Apollo 13 mission carried their investigation to this Colorado Rockies foothill community today.

Engineers from the Apollo spacecraft program office and from the staff of the official Apollo 13 accident review board planned to spend the day at the Beech Aircraft Corp. plant where the life-sustaining oxygen tanks were built.

A spokesman for the space agency said the engineers and investigators would witness the assembly of an Apollo service module oxygen tank during the visit.

Yarborough, Bentsen, Morris Battle For Senate Seat Goes Unabated

By United Press International

U. S. Sen. Ralph Yarborough told a Texarkana crowd Monday Texans will soon be getting more take-home pay because of legislation he helped put through Congress.

Yarborough's Democratic primary opponent, however, called the senator a "champion spender and champion promoter."

The Republican primary had its share of heat too in this last week before the May 2 primary elections. Dr. Robert Morris of Plano chided U. S. Rep. George Bush, R-Tex., for his "ultraliberal stands" on welfare and congressional seniority.

Bush told Austin newsmen he is confident of defeating Morris in the GOP senatorial primary, and is becoming more optimistic about winning in the November general election. But he noted a "regrettable degree of apathy" in both primaries.

The Houston congressman said aid to Cambodia should be limited to material and not men, but he said he favored such material aid. He said the U.S. could help Cambodia without slowing the withdrawal of American troops from Vietnam.

Yarborough told an East Texas group progress was being made in creation of a Big Thicket national park.

Earlier in the day he accused Bentsen of "polluting the airways" with his television commercials linking Yarborough with violent antiwar demonstrators.

"I abhor violence of all kinds and that includes the violence to the truth which my opponent committed in his television commercials," Yarborough said. "This airway's pollution is one form of pollution my opponent can end right now. All he has to do is have his public relations firm remove the television commercials which they have labeled 'violence.'"

Bentsen said of Yarborough, "I think America in the 1970's needs more than promises and spenders in the halls of Congress." He suggested in Brownsville that federal revenue sharing programs and tax incentives to attract industry to small towns would help decentralize the population and the government.

'Mother's Day For Trees' Staged On Houston Campus

HOUSTON (UPI) — Monday was "Mother's Day for trees" at the University of Houston campus, where students have launched a drive to save the trees on the construction site of a $3.9 million arts building.

Administration representatives met with 150 young people to discuss the future of "People's Park II," named for a park near the University of California at Berkeley campus where National Guardsmen and crowds of young people clashed in 1968.

Coulson Tough, UH vice president for faculty, held a question and answer session with the conservationists, who submitted three demands: —Construction (destruction) cease immediately on the site... and this area be designated as a sanctuary open to all. —Students must have equal representation concerning land use on campus. —Arthur Beckey be reinstated to his former position with UH.

Beckey, 18, of Deer Park, is a tree trimmer who quit his job with Tellepsen Construction Co. when he was ordered to "drive through" a group of protesters Friday.

The conservationist student group continued to camp at the construction site, erecting makeshift tents of blankets thrown over arches of hogwire. They also set-up a chuckwagon.

They carried signs reading: "If the trees die, we die." "Power to the trees." "Monday is Mother's Day for trees" and "You did it to Berkeley (California), you did it to UT (University of Texas at Austin), but you ain't gonna do it here."

The squatters pulled down wood squares marking trees to be saved and used the squares for firewood.

The UH administration said it would continue to have dialogue with the group.

Burned Groom Boy Rushed To Galveston

A two-year-old Groom boy was playing with a friend near the electrical appliance Perry LeFors Field this morning after suffering second and third degree burns at his home Monday.

Billy Wayne Shivers, son of Mr. and Mrs. B.D. Shivers of Groom, was burned by grease when a deep-fryer fell on him Monday afternoon.

Witnesses said the Shivers boy was playing with a friend near the electrical appliance Perry LeFors Field this morning after suffering second and third degree burns at his home Monday.

He was flown to Galveston for treatment at the Shriners' Burn Institute.

Officials of the Pampa Shrine Association said local Shriners are financing the trip to the boy and his mother.

The child was taken to Groom Hospital and was transferred to the Pampa airfield this morning by Carmichael Whalley ambulance.

MEDICAL FIRST INSIDE TODAY'S NEWS

PARIS (UPI) — Doctors for the first time in medical history Monday used an atom-powered heart stimulator to stabilize the heartbeat of a 58-year-old woman.

Until now, heart stimulators have been run by electricity and the batteries had to be replaced every 18 months. An atomic battery last 10 years.

The Health Ministry said a surgical team headed by Dr. Armand Pivnicka, 40, had implanted the heart stimulator running on plutonium 238 in a woman at Broussais Hospital.

Urge Immediate Rebuilding Of County Annex

Chamber of Commerce directors in a meeting preceding Monday's regular membership luncheon in Coronado Inn unanimously adopted a resolution "strongly urging the Gray County commissioners' court to rebuild the Court House Annex and restore offices" destroyed in the April 18 tornado.

County Judge Sherman Lenning told the directors the commissioners court will meet again Friday to discuss rebuilding plans.

"We were covered by insurance on 80 per cent loss," Lenning said. "We will collect $83,200 in insurance. If President Nixon should declare us a disaster area we would receive 100 per cent loss and an additional $20,000 from the federal government."

Lenning said the President was expected to give his decision within the next few days.

The county judge said the commissioners court had received requests to rebuild on the same site with some additional construction including the possibility of moving the State Highway Patrol into the new structure.

"We intend to explore all possibilities," Lenning said.

Chamber president Don Lane said it was not the intention of the chamber's directors to dictate the policy of the commissioners court, but simply to call attention to the importance of the Court House Annex offices related to agri-business and the importance of agriculture to the area's economy.

The director also heard a progress report from John Gattis, one of the co-chairmen, on the three-phase pride in Pampa Program now underway in connection with the city-wide clean-up. Paint-up fix-up campaign and the chamber's Retail Trade Committee promotion of Pampa as the shopping hub and trade center of the Top O' Texas area.

The Card Detective Speaker Here

The members of the Knife & Fork Club will have as their next guest speaker Michael MacDougal, probably the best informed card detective in the U.S., and an excellent man on the platform, according to Les Hart who is in charge of the affair.

The dinner will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Coronado Inn.

MacDougal started his career as the boy at the top of the rope in the Indian Rope Trick at the age when most kids are interested in shooting marbles. Anyone starting out in such a fashion might well end anywhere.

Therefore, it isn't surprising that now Michael MacDougal has become a card detective, or rather, THE card detective. It is generally conceded that there is no man in the country — quite likely in the world — who can smoke out a "mechagic" as quickly as Mickey" can.

His skill, however, does not rest with cards. He knows all about "galloping dominos". He will pay any man $10,000 if he can't detect a pair of crooked bone dice loaded with tungsten amalgam, by their rattle, 30 feet away.

McHenry Lane will introduce the guest speaker.

Members are urged to make their reservations by Wednesday noon at Malone Pharmacy.

Trash Pickup Times Given

Pampa's annual cleanup campaign, as far as the city pickup of trash is concerned, will be geared to give Pampans time to collect rubbish on their property during weekends and have it ready for alley collection on the following Monday morning.

The city trucks will start May 4 and continue the trash collection in Pampa's four wards during May.

Public Works Director R.B. Cooke said today the following cleanup schedule has been set:

Ward 1 — week of May 4.

Ward 2 — week of May 11.

Ward 3 — week of May 18, and Ward 4 — week of May 25.

Car-Truck Collide On Lefors Hwy.

A car-truck accident four miles south of Pampa Monday resulted in minor injuries to two persons and an estimated $1800 in damages.

Highway Patrolmen at the scene of the accident on the Lefors Highway said Mrs. Ida Hartman of Lefors was traveling north on the highway when her vehicle collided with a Southwestern Public Service Co. truck driven by Edward M. Culberson, 217 Miami St., of Pampa.

Officers said Culberson was southbound and was about to make a left turn onto a dirt road when the accident occurred.

Mrs. Hartman was taken to Groom Hospital by an emergency ambulance from Lefors. Hospital officials said she was treated for minor injuries and released. Officers estimated $1100 in damages to her car.

Culberson was brought to Purviance Clinic in Pampa by a Southwestern Public Service Co. truck. He was treated for minor injuries and released. Damages to the company's truck were estimated at $700.

New Way Found To Stop Hair Loss Grow More Hair

HOUSTON, Texas—If you don't suffer from male pattern baldness, you can now stop your hair loss . . . and grow more hair.

For years "they" said it couldn't be done. But now a firm of laboratory consultants has developed a treatment for both men and women, that is not only stopping hair loss but is really growing hair!

They don't even ask you to take their word for it. They invite you to try it for 32 days and see for yourself.

Naturally, they would not offer this opportunity unless the treatment worked. However, it is impossible to help everyone.

The great majority of cases of excessive hair fall and baldness are the beginning and more fully developed stages of male pattern baldness and cannot be helped.

But, if you are not already listed below.

DO NOT NEED VIEW

(UPI)—Builders of a new housing development have agreed to replace plain bathroom windows with frosted ones after complaints from a group of women tenants. A spokesman said the plain windows were installed on the advice of an "international architect" who argued that residents should have a view from their bathroom.

SPACE AGE MIRROR

LONDON (UPI)—Harrod's Department Store moved into the space age Monday with an "electronic mirror." Customers in the store's "way-in" boutique now can try on an outfit and then take a whirl in front of a closed circuit television camera. They see themselves modeling when the videotape is played back.

Kienast Quints Escorted Home

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Kienast quintuplets went home in a special police-escorted ambulance today, nine weeks after they were born at Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center.

Dr. Stanley James, the pediatrician who has been attending the three girls and two boys, said they are "completely normal, healthy infants."

The babies, born Feb. 24 to Mrs. Margaret Kienast who had taken fertility medication, spent about 10 days in the intensive care unit at the hospital but since then have been in a regular nursery with normal children.

While waiting for Amy, Sarah, William, Abigail and Edward to be discharged from the hospital, neighbors helped the Kienasts to build a new wing on their converted farmhouse in the Liberty Corners section of Far Hills, N.J.

Mrs. Kienast and her husband, William, a plastics salesman, have two other children.

Mrs. Irene Webb has returned home from a visit with her daughter, Mrs. Millett Viucich, Mr. Viucich and children.

Inside Washington

By GEORGE J. MARDER
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The new head of the Selective Service System is torn between capsules and computers for the next draft lottery.

Draft Director Curtis W. Tarr has been reading statistical reports until he sees numbers in his sleep.

Capsules were used in the Dec. 1 birth date lottery, but many statisticians complained that the way it was handled was something less than random, and therefore not fair to all young men.

Tarr decided he had better look into the situation and now has reports from statisticians on how to make the lottery truly random so that all will have an equal chance of being drafted or avoiding the draft.

Most Equitable Way
The statistical experts agreed that the most equitable way of handling it would be to base the lottery on a statistical table of numbers.

It would then be a simple matter to program the table into a computer which could spew out the numbers to decide the order of draft.

Tarr found two things wrong with that:

—The statisticians could not agree on a single table. (One group favored one type of table as the most random; another pushed a different statistical table of probabilities.)

—Possibly even more important, he saw something based solely on a statistical table or by operations of a computer as entirely too impersonal for a matter so vital to the nation and to its young.

Must Have Confidence
Tarr feels that the nation not only must have total confidence in the fairness of the lottery, but that there must be physical sign of its fairness. He feels the young would resent having their draft dates determined by a computer.

The lottery will increase in importance if Congress goes along with Nixon's proposed reforms. The President has recommended that Congress end the system of local draft board quotas, making each month's call a national quota on lottery numbers alone.

The proposed new system would eliminate the confusion which results when one draft board has to drop to a certain lottery number to raise its quota while another local board may not have to go nearly as far down the list to meet its quota.

By RICK DU BROW
HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—There are those of us who can never turn off television reruns of the classic, 1943 Oscar-winning movie "Casablanca," starring Humphrey Bogart and Ingrid Bergman.

"So," she recalled, "I said: 'Well, the thought is very nice, but I must have something to say, and there isn't a word of dialogue.' But there was Bogart, and, she told Cavett: "Who could resist him?" "I had certain love scenes to play—you remember I had Paul Henreid; he played my husband whom I thought was dead and then came back." And there was her other love, Bogart.

"And I said: 'Well now, which one of these two men do I stay with at the end, and who am I really in love with?' and they said they didn't know."

Ending Still Undecided
"We came to the very end, and you remember the shot with the airplane, and Paul Henreid is flying off, and there I came, and I don't want to leave Humphrey Bogart, and there he stands with Claude Rains. I remember the scene so well, and I said: 'Now, well really, you have to make up your mind.'"

"So they said: 'Well, we still haven't made up our minds, so we will shoot it both ways.' So fine. Now I do the first scene saying goodbye to Humphrey and I go into the plane, and I look at him, and we fly off, and Humphrey walked away into the clouds, and they said: 'Print it—that's the end. We don't have to do the other version.'"

Said Cavett: "It's a wonderful lesson in how to make a successful movie."

New Vocational Nurses Classes Starting At Highland General

Applications will be taken through May 8 for the 1970-1971 class of Vocational Nurses of Highland General Hospital.

"The total cost of the program, $310, includes tuition fee, uniforms, textbooks and graduation expense. An L.V.N. can expect to earn between $4,300 - $4,800 per year, after graduation," Vermell Meador, RN, director of nursing service, said.

"Highland General Hospital School of Vocational Nursing is a state accredited school. This means the school is one that has met the requirements established by the State Board of Vocational Nurse Examiners. The Hospital School has had 52 graduates and presently has 13 students who will graduate in August and will be eligible to take the exam given by the State Board of Vocational Nurse Examiners. Upon successful completion of this exam the vocational nurse becomes an L.V.N. A $10 application fee is required for the school application, but if the applicant is not accepted, the fee is refunded," she said.

Purpose of this program is to train men and women as Vocational Nurses to give nursing care under the supervision of professional registered nurses or a physician. The school is 40 hours per week for 12 months. Applicants must be between the ages of 18 and 55 years; have completed the 10th grade or the equivalent; be a U.S. citizen; be in good physical and mental health; and be able to pass the Texas Employment Commission test. If interested, please contact the Vocational School for an application, Miss Meador said.

NO WORMS, BUT—
GOSHEN, Ind. (UPI)—He may not catch many fish with it, but a Goshen man caught the interest of police with what he found while digging for worms.
The man, who was not identified, told police he dug up several cases of dynamite buried on the outskirts of the city.
Police said Monday the explosives had apparently been underground for quite a while.

By RICHARD C. LONGWORTH
VIENNA (UPI)—"The working class has no country," Karl Marx once proclaimed. And V. I. Lenin predicted that the curse of nationalism would mellow into a proletarian brotherhood of man once communism was established.
Maybe so. But 25 years after the Communists began seizing Eastern Europe, the area's political life has more to do with nationalism and national rivalries than with brotherhood.
Many experts believe nationalism in the end, will prove stronger than communism. And that's not necessarily good.

National feuds in Eastern Europe led directly to World War I and helped start World War II. The tiny nations have been at each other's throats for centuries, which explains much of the area's backwardness.
If Russia has accomplished anything positive in Eastern Europe, it may be the banking of these nationalistic fires by its demand for "proletarian internationalism" — that is, knee-jerk loyalty to Moscow.
That "internationalism" is wearing increasingly thin and nationalism has begun to rear its head—sometimes with explosive potential.

Romania, the bloc's current maverick, is openly trumpeting the need for nationalism and boasting of its history as a nation with a pre-Communist past rather than as a unit in the international movement.
Other nations—notably Poland and Hungary—have chastised Romania for overdoing it. But their leaders have begun some quiet flag-waving of their own, having found that nationalism wins more public support than communism.

Less obvious notes of nationalism also are growing anti-Semitism, an old East European reflex, which recently had a brief season in Poland. Less offensively, every East European nation is putting new stress on its historical ruins, its folk art and dances—even its churches. All this increases a feeling of nationhood, while playing down communism.
Against this background, the spats and jealousies within the two big Communist alliances—the Warsaw Pact and Comecon—can be seen as a failure of trust and cooperation in an area traditionally shot of both.

Another Crude Oil Reduction Would Sound Death Knell

Any action by the Federal government to cut the price of crude oil would deal a severe blow to the economy of Pampa and other oil producing areas, George W. Sall of Tulsa, executive manager of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, told guests at the monthly membership luncheon of the Chamber of Commerce yesterday afternoon in Coronado Inn.

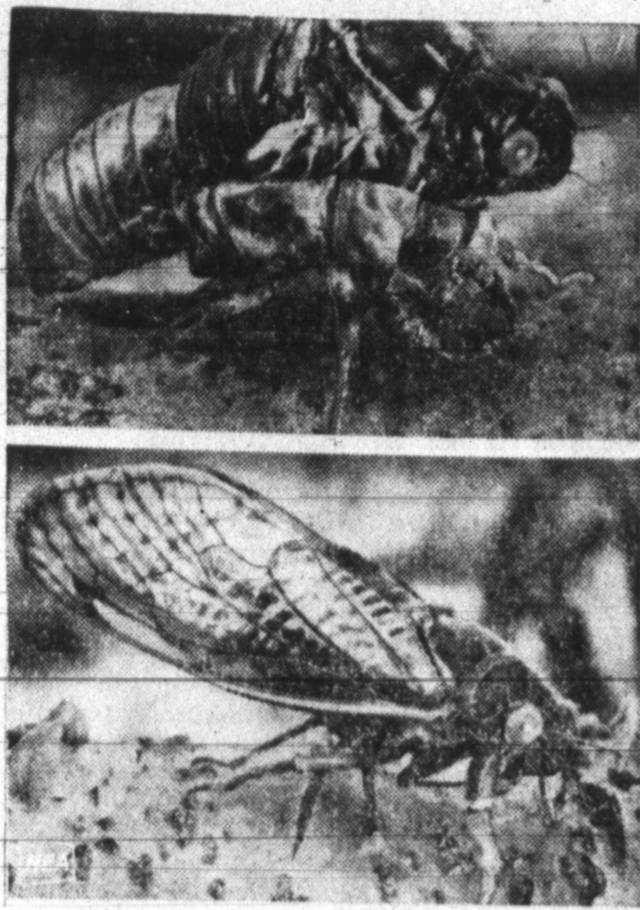

Sall urged that the Chamber of Commerce assign a task force to investigate just what a 30-cent per barrel cut in the price of crude oil would do to the oil producers in the Pampa area.
"Armed with information about who would stay in business, who would have to quit and who would curtail activity," Sall said, "you can determine how much the business community would suffer because of the reduced purchasing power in the area."

Similarly, Sall stated, the facts would determine what would happen to Pampa's tax base.
The Tulsa oil man said when the facts are collected they should be sent to local representatives and senators in Congress to provide them with more factual information in their battle to halt government proposals to open the oil import gates, thereby cutting the price of domestic crude.

Sall said the fight is one that must be carried on by every oil producing area in the U.S.
Everyone who earns his livelihood in Pampa should understand, the speaker said, that each individual has a definite stake in the outcome of the battle over the future of the Mandatory Oil Import Program, in which the petroleum industry currently is engaged.

Those who want to open the import gates, Sall said, believe that would mean about lower gasoline prices and ease the pinch on their pocketbooks.
What it would actually do, Sall went on to say, would be to raise taxes in Pampa, or substantially reduce the standard of education of children in the oil producing area.
He pointed out that 121 school districts in Texas get more than half their money from oil property taxes of all kinds.

"It doesn't take much imagination to see what would happen to these communities if their school systems' tax base is reduced."
Sall was introduced to the luncheon audience by C.D. Ziomke, chairman of the chamber's Oil and Gas Committee.

THIS IS THE YEAR of the 17-year locust. This spring, billions of the large insects, which actually are cicadas, will crawl out of the ground, responding to a biological clock that ticks off one of the insect world's longest and strangest life cycles. These photos show an adult cicada molting its old skin, top, and after the process, bottom. Larvae will dig into the ground to begin 17 years of tunneling, hibernating and growth, emerging again in 1987.

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI)—If we are really serious about a nationwide commitment to cleaning up the environment, the automobile internal combustion engine may have to be the first to go.—Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis.

"At about the time Nelson was making that statement in Atlantic City at the United Auto Workers Convention, I was deep in conference with Joseph Dargent, information director for French Champagne producers."

I contacted Dargent, who was in Washington on a business trip to discuss with him my plan for harnessing the energy of champagne and using it to propel automobiles.

The conversation went swimmingly at first. Dargent informed me that champagne builds up a pressure of five kilos per square centimeter inside the bottle. He also confided that the French now have "300 million bottles of champagne on hand."

Adds Up To Source
That obviously adds up to a tremendous potential source of energy. But Dargent seemed reluctant for some reason to tap it.

"Now let me see if I HAVE THIS STRAIGHT," HE SAID. "You have in mind replacing the automobile internal combustion engine with an internal carbonation engine. Is that correct?"

"Exactly," I said. "I have in mind a new kind of car called a fizzyobile. Instead of gasoline tank, it would have a wine cellar. And instead of a carburetor, it would have a carbonator.

"The carbonator would mix yeast and sugar with the wine to produce carbonic acid gas, such as is found in champagne bottles. Instead of a throttle, the car would have a cockscrew that would release enough of the gas to propel the car."

"Mon Dieu!" Dargent exclaimed, rolling his eyes.
"There would still be exhaust fumes, of course," I continued, "but nobody would mind inhaling these fumes. In fact, many motorists probably would go out of their way to get caught in traffic jams."
"And instead of carbon monoxide, these fumes would contain carbon dioxide, which is what plants breathe. So rather than pollute the air, the fizzyobile would promote the growth of vegetation."

"Sacre bleu!" Dargent said, edging toward the door.

Bush Names Mrs. Curtis Co-Chairman

Congressman George Bush of Houston has announced the appointment of Mrs. Joe E. Curtis as his co-chairman for the Bush for U.S. Senate campaign in Gray County.
Bush previously announced Warren Fatheree of Pampa would serve as chairman.
Bush was elected to Congress in 1966 and re-elected without opposition in 1968.

He is presently chairman of the Republican Task Force on Earth Resources and Population and a member of the Ways and Means Committee, the most powerful committee in the House.
Mrs. Curtis, a housewife, received her bachelor of science degree from Louisiana State University.

She is a member of the First United Methodist Church, the Republican Women's Club, and the Pampa Garden Club.

DOUBLY Welcome

These Eventful Days!

THESE are days when the arrival of your smiling, hustling carrier-boy is one of the most welcome sights in the world. DEAR ABBY: Your answer to "Sexy But Lonely" left a lot to be desired. (She's the "lucky" one who's 31, but looks 30, has naturally flaming red hair, wears bikinis, and causes photographers' hands to shake.) She also has a husband who gets drunk every night and is no good for sex.

All you could offer her was the advice that her husband needs help and should seek out Alcoholics Anonymous. I agree, he needs help, but I suspect he also needs to be rescued from a self-centered wife who is so wrapped up in her "youthful" appearance that she has probably driven the poor guy to drink and impotence. She went on for two graphic paragraphs, describing how young-looking and gorgeous she was.

Maybe a psychiatrist could help her to understand that a youthful appearance at 31 is indeed fortunate, but not nearly as important as consideration for her husband's welfare. The latter will stand her in much better stead than a model's figure.

I think you short-changed that poor husband, and I hope you will add this to your advice.

SYMPATHETIC IN MASSACHUSETTS DEAR SYMPATHETIC: I just have. Thank you.

DEAR ABBY: Can you give me some help on how to keep my big mouth shut? I repeat everything I hear even if it hurts myself or other people. I would like to be the kind of person who can keep a confidence, but I am not. The minute I hear some gossip, I can't wait to tell it to somebody. I am 41, married and have children, and I really know better but I can't seem to help myself. What is wrong with me?

GOSSIP DEAR GOSSIP: Most gossips suffer from a feeling of insecurity, and they use gossip to ingratiate themselves with those whom they inform. Perhaps if you realized that people of quality do not indulge in gossip, and avoid those who do, it would help you to keep your mouth shut. Also, if someone starts to give you a piece of gossip, it would help immeasurably to cut him off in mid-sentence with "That's none of my business." Try it. It works.

DEAR ABBY: This letter may be of interest to housewives who are constantly complaining about rising food costs.

I am a clerk in a chain grocery store. Yesterday I spent three hours picking up items off shelves where they didn't belong, because somebody decided they didn't want them after all, and just dropped them wherever they happened to be.

Now, just who do you think is paying me for three hours labor to do this? The consumer.

All right, forget the wages — let's talk about the TV dinner someone left in the cereal aisle? When found, it was partially thawed out and not fit for resale. Or the milk but was left standing out of the cooler for half a day? Or the cellophane-wrapped pork chops someone had set on top of the spices? These items are spoiled and must be thrown out.

But who pays for them? You do, lady! I would guess that about one out of every 10 shoppers is guilty of the above, at least occasionally.

So next time you go marketing, put those unwanted items back where they belong and keep prices down. And it might not be a bad idea for a grocery store manager to post this up on the cash register, it may help.

DEAR WANTS: It may not help, but it can't hurt.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "Second Time Around": — Marriage is like the army. Everybody complains about it but you'd be amazed at the number who reenlist.

Area Class Has

Bible Lesson

SKELLYTOWN (Sp) — The Women's Weekly Bible Class of the Church of Christ met at the church for Bible Study recently as Mrs. Melvin Beighle led the songs.

Mrs. Sadie Lane gave the invocation. The lesson "Our Children" was taught by Mrs. Jean Douglas. The meeting ended with a prayer by Mrs. Flora Harbin.

Attending were Meses. Jean Douglas, Flora Harbin, Earl Lane, Melvin Beighle, Mamie Varnon, F.C. Horner, Grace Smith, Bill Martin, Bennie Woodward and daughter Darla.

The only way to travel these days is to take a "knit trip." Even the tropics won't wilt your cool in the long, clinging knit in horizontal stripes (left) with a scooped-out neckline and slits up the sides. This is designed by Lynn Stuart for LGS in Celarol, an acetate knit. You can have on-the-beach savvy in the wrap-around (right) in boucle knit.

Republican Women Sponsor Program For Candidates

Top of Texas Republican Women's Club sponsored a program recently at the Pioneer Natural Gas Flame Room to introduce Republican candidates for office. Special guest for the "Meet Your Candidates" program was Dr. Robert Morris, Republican candidate for United States Senator.

Dr. Morris, attending with his state campaign chairman, Bill Hayes, spoke on his opposition to the "guaranteed annual income and new welfare program recently passed in the Senate," and explained his views on the cause and effect of the Vietnam War, the threat of internal security, inflation, defense plant protection, moral pollution, and the checks and balance system being used to restrain the Supreme Court.

Pampa Republican candidates attending were Judge Bruce Parker, candidate for 31st district court judge; Vernon Watkins, candidate for county commissioner, precinct two; Frank Converse, candidate for precinct two, place two, justice of the peace.

Also attending were both

Lenning and Frances Lenning, and guests, Mrs. G.W. Taylor, Mrs. W.S. Dixon, and Mrs. Jack Curtis. After the meeting, a luncheon was held in Furr's Cafeteria.

Hart also spoke to those attending and said he "is opposed to a state income tax being levied upon the people," and suggested a "tax on natural gas going out of state to help raise money Texas needs for its continued operation."

Your Horoscope

JEANE DIXON

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 29
Your birthday, Wednesday: — The coming year is one of experiment, mostly successful concerning finer points of your regular chosen activities. Next year comes the application of the results, expanding responsibility and the power that goes with it. For the present many interesting and productive surprises are shaping up, including some in personalities and emotional commitments.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): — You're now free to let up a bit on the constant pressure and get enjoyment out of your supervisor. Push your self a little more go get work instead.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20): — You are your own sternest task master and can get a really satisfying amount done.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): — Make more detailed plans for a longer range future. Correspondence is at hand awaiting your attention.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): — You are likely to find yourself low in energy. This is easy enough to correct if you will remember how much depends on and what you stand to achieve by doing the work right the first time.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): — Your willingness to cooperate turns out to be the most important factor Wednesday.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): — Continue on with a clearance project; get all neglected and confused matters set to rights.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): — Family connections take some of your attention on this quiet but highly productive day.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): — Preparatory to a coming change of policy, put forth consistent drive to resolve old issues in your regular work. Family affairs are increasingly important to attend this week, so get on with whatever is needed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): — You are somewhat freer to concentrate on what you would like most to do. Much now falls readily into place where nothing quite fitted before.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): — Collect all you can of whatever is due you and add it to your savings accounts. Straighten out any recent errors.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): — Private concerns should be explained to nobody. Just attend to them quietly and thoroughly.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): — Welcome a dull day in which you can finally clear away various matters in proper order.

Scientists believe 4 P.M. is the best time of day to spray cockroaches. Insects are evidently more active then than at any other hour. Be sure to direct spray in such hiding places as under kitchen, behind baseboards, inside walls, appliances, stove, or radio and television cabinets.

Lakers Even NBA Series

NEW YORK (UPI)—Wilt Chamberlain went to the movies Monday night and made the New York Knicks pay the price of omission.

Los Angeles Coach Joe Mullaney, after trying all day to get film clips of the Lakers' opening game loss, finally landed a reel an hour before the game.

Chamberlain watched half the film and then walked out saying: "I know how the rest of it turned out." He also strode away feeling he hadn't played as badly as he thought when he landed Wills Reed to pop his shots from the outside.

Reed may have been lured by Chamberlain's preference to guard the Knick pivotman. The New York team captain continued to shoot from the outside and it worked for the first quarter as he scored 13 points. But Chamberlain held Reed to 16 the rest of the way as Los Angeles edged the Knicks, 105-103, on Jerry West's two free throws with 46 seconds remaining.

Reed got only 12 baskets in 29 attempts and was outrebounded by Chamberlain, 24-15. In scoring, Reed tallied 29 points to 19 for Wilt.

There was no alibi offered by Reed for his failure to show a strong second half. He said his left shoulder, injured in the first game, did not hamper his play. His shooting simply grew cold after a hot first period.

West, the National Basketball Association scoring champion, tallied 34 points as the Lakers squared the best-of-seven final playoff series at one game apiece. He hit 10 of 15 foul shots, including eight in the final period when he induced each of New York's backcourt tandem of Walt Frazier and Dick Barnett to commit a fifth personal foul.

Frazier managed just 11 points, only two in the second half. His former southern Illinois teammate Dick Garrett guarded Walt who agreed that the Knicks' inability to drive inside cost them the game.

Garrett himself contributed 17 points to the Lakers' winning effort. He was deadily from the foul-line with seven of eight and in general harassed the Knicks into hurrying their shots with his tight guarding.

No Brave Enthusiasm Yet

By NOLAN ZAVORAL
MILWAUKEE, Wis. (NEA) — The small plug-in radio was pounded and shaken, its dials twisted and tugged. Grown men swore and were answered by static. More pounding and shaking. For Milwaukee, this was violence.

Finally, Joe the bartender, a merciful and erudite sort, demanded an end to the savagery. He told the attackers to accept the fact that, though the Milwaukee Brewers (nee the Seattle Pilots) were playing baseball a few miles away in County Stadium, the radio wouldn't surrender, the play-by-play from a local station.

The men grumbled back to their bar stools. Joe adjusted his blue-and-white bow tie that looked like a butterfly clinging to his Adam's apple.

"As I assess it," he said, "there is a salient lesson to be learned from all this. Namely, that our interest in the Braves was very emotional, contrary to what our interest in the Brewers is. Granted, some of the fellows here tried to get the Brewers' game on the radio, but they gave up. Believe you me, I couldn't have stopped them from trying to tune in a Braves' game. No way."

Many Milwaukeeans agree with Joe that the gut loyalty and enthusiasm shown the Braves during most of their 13 years here won't be accorded the Brewers in such large doses. History and personnel, they feel, work against it.

When the Braves moved from Boston to Milwaukee in 1953, it was the first major league franchise shift in more than 50 years and, as any hula hoop manufacturer knows, a novelty just naturally attracts the paying public. Four times in 13 years the Braves' attendance exceeded two million. Brewers officials are praying for one million in 1970, the team's first season in Milwaukee and second as an expansion team in the American League's West Division.

This figure would not be unreasonable, except that the team must defeat a city hardened by the Braves' move to Atlanta after the 1965 season. Milwaukeeans still resent the major leagues for allowing the team to be spirited south by Chicago interests. Bob Allen, former publicity director for the Milwaukee Braves, said, "It was a dastardly deed. I compare it to Pearl Harbor. A lot of other people do, too."

Finally, there is the matter of personnel. The Braves, unlike the Brewers, came to Milwaukee with several players familiar to the city. Among them were Eddie Mathews, Billy Bruton and Johnny Logan, all of whom had played with Milwaukee's entry in the American Association.

Never have a few familiar faces meant so much to 80

many. This partially explained why thousands of Milwaukeeans would turn out at the airport to welcome the team back from a road trip, and why the cheering never ceased at Braves' home games. As one visiting writer noted, "County Stadium is an insane asylum with bases."

Said Logan, who now sells commercial time for a local radio station, "Our fans would cheer anything we did. Like one of our players ticking off a pitch. Maybe everybody thought it was a hit. Don't ask me. It was crazy out there."

The Milwaukee Braves won two National League pennants and one World Series with a team about as young as the Brewers. "But," said Logan, "the Brewers don't have quite the depth and experience we had. I'm not worried — they'll learn. I just hope they have some places for old Braves in the organization."

won their 11th straight game Monday night.

The significance is that the last time they won 11 straight was in 1945. And those long-suffering Cub fans can't forget that's the last time they won the pennant.

Of course, they remember even better the last time they lost the pennant. That happened last year. That's why the Cubs tried not to get too excited when they beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 1-0, for their 11th straight.

The Cubs scored their only run on an error and were nursing that run in the ninth inning when the Pirates had runners on first and third and one out. Bob Oliver hit a one-bouncer at pitcher Hank Aguirre, who only had to turn and fire to second to start the game-ending double play.

Plays It Safe
Aguirre played it safe and tossed to third to trap the lead runner who was caught in a rundown. Phil Regan then came on and got the final out and the strategy worked.

"The decision was made before I threw a pitch," Aguirre said after he relieved rookie Joe Decker. "I was told to look (Roberto) Clemente back if I got the ball because the batter (Oliver) is a fast kid."

Clemente tripled with one out for the sixth hit off Decker who got credit for his second major league win. Aguirre came on and walked pinch-hitter Bob Robertson. Oliver then hit the bouncer at Aguirre, who tossed to third baseman Ron Santo to start the rundown that nailed Clemente. Regal then retired Jerry May on a fielder's choice at third to end the game.

In the only other National League game, Philadelphia edged Los Angeles, 4-3. The Montreal at San Diego game was rained out. In the American League, Washington edged Milwaukee, 6-5, in 10 innings. Cleveland downed Minnesota, 5-1, and Boston topped Oakland, 4-3.

Rick Wise and Joe Hoerner scattered nine hits as the Phils beat the Dodgers' Wise last night in 6-13 innings and Hoerner finished up. Don Sutton took the loss. Wise sigled in the run in the fourth that gave the Phils a 4-0 lead and it stood up for the deciding run.

Clemente tripled with one out for the sixth hit off Decker who got credit for his second major league win. Aguirre came on and walked pinch-hitter Bob Robertson. Oliver then hit the bouncer at Aguirre, who tossed to third baseman Ron Santo to start the rundown that nailed Clemente. Regal then retired Jerry May on a fielder's choice at third to end the game.

In the only other National League game, Philadelphia edged Los Angeles, 4-3. The Montreal at San Diego game was rained out. In the American League, Washington edged Milwaukee, 6-5, in 10 innings. Cleveland downed Minnesota, 5-1, and Boston topped Oakland, 4-3.

Rick Wise and Joe Hoerner scattered nine hits as the Phils beat the Dodgers' Wise last night in 6-13 innings and Hoerner finished up. Don Sutton took the loss. Wise sigled in the run in the fourth that gave the Phils a 4-0 lead and it stood up for the deciding run.

Of course, they remember even better the last time they lost the pennant. That happened last year. That's why the Cubs tried not to get too excited when they beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 1-0, for their 11th straight.

The Cubs scored their only run on an error and were nursing that run in the ninth inning when the Pirates had runners on first and third and one out. Bob Oliver hit a one-bouncer at pitcher Hank Aguirre, who only had to turn and fire to second to start the game-ending double play.

Plays It Safe
Aguirre played it safe and tossed to third to trap the lead runner who was caught in a rundown. Phil Regan then came on and got the final out and the strategy worked.

"The decision was made before I threw a pitch," Aguirre said after he relieved rookie Joe Decker. "I was told to look (Roberto) Clemente back if I got the ball because the batter (Oliver) is a fast kid."

What Price College?

Young people concluding their high school careers are commencing to hear from universities and colleges regarding their acceptance for further study in those institutions.

Listening to their remarks, one cannot help but notice the difference between their lack of enthusiasm and that of students in times past. During the span of America's history attitudes have ranged from regarding higher education as "impossible," the privilege of a few rare scholars; to a hard-won possibility for those who became, if not scholars, at least good students, diligent and industrious; to a "MUST" for professional employment; to the expected thing for "status," with those not going considered as therefore inferior mentally and socially; to an unwanted hardship for furthering parents' desires; to a method of draft evasion; to, as presently, a tool for rejection and revolt.

Somewhere in the melange of trying to increase schools in number and to make them available to more and more people, the original goal of "higher learning" has been submerged. Scholarship has given way to methodology, and the processes of thinking to games of follow-the-leader. When the leader swears or sticks out his tongue, all swear and stick out their tongues.

What has happened? To increase the number of schools for greater and greater numbers of people, it was decided to put them on the tax-dole. Schools, not scholarship, became the goal — they are not the same at all — and the support became tax-theft, not user-pay (tuition).

The new goal was soon caught on to by the students. Shift in emphasis was noted by the phrase that they were "going on to school." The former idea of going to pursue a particular field of knowledge, or to study with a certain wise professor, disappeared.

When they went on to school, they found standardized curricula, much of which they resented as unnecessary and not a direct line to their ultimate field of endeavor. Since they are not buying the schooling they want; they are forced to take what the state offers. This standardization has left little room for individualization, has nourished mediocrity and boredom. And this has set an atmosphere favorable to mobocracy and rebellion.

We foresee that there may be a pronounced change in attitude toward the colleges. This will come from both those who have been forced to support them through taxes and from the students themselves. Most students do not wish to be embroiled in acts of dissidence, but want to get on with learning that they may help themselves and the world around them.

We may find that we are turning almost full circle, that instead of revering the college grads, employers and others may look for assistance to noncollege lads who are willing to work and eager to learn.

As one of our readers pointed out recently:

"There is a formidable array of men whose names are listed in halls of fame who owe their success to the fortunate circumstance of having been kicked out of school. For most students, college scatters their efforts on so many subjects that they may never make a success of any."

Here are a few thinkers who got the boot: Sir Walter Scott neglected higher education. Robert Fulton was low in his classes because his thoughts were elsewhere. Herbert Spencer, Goethe, Emerson, William Cullen Bryant, George Eliot, Thackeray, Gladstone, Byron, Hegel, Samuel Johnson, James Russell Lowell, all were failures in school.

Mark Twain hated school. Darwin had to drop out. Sir Isaac Newton was taken out of school because he was so low in his classes and was sent to work on a farm.

So, if some young applicant receives notification that college admission is closed or refused, he can still take heart. He may, without the schools, join the illustrious ranks of the above.

Statistical Sleight Of Hand

For the information of those who think that the President's Violence Commission report on guns contains a dangerous truth about handguns, please observe.

The commission statement reads: "Though only one quarter of all firearms owned in the United States are handguns, they are used in three quarters of the homicides."

This is a piece of slick obfuscation. Most people misinterpret it to say that three-fourths of all handguns are used by criminals. It says no such thing. What it is doing is comparing handguns with homicides — like comparing apples with peanuts. They are several orders of magnitude different.

Take it bit by bit: only one quarter of all firearms in the U.S. are handguns, that is, out of 100 million privately owned firearms, 25 million are handguns. They are used in three-fourths of the homicides, it is claimed. But homicides totaled fewer than 6,000; hence handguns figured in 4,500 homicides — that is 4,500 handguns out of 25 million, were used for killing. That is 0.18 per cent. In short, 99.82 per cent of all handguns are not used for homicides.

It now becomes clear that the big scare statement by the commission fizzes down to a fractional percentage so small as to pose neither danger nor worry to the vast majority of American citizens. Evidently, seeing that the statistic did not hear out its point of view, the commission juggled the method of stating it to make it sound more impressive by many times than it actually is.

This is phony, and must be brought home at every opportunity, because the commission's demand for the confiscation of handguns rests on this one point — without it, its entire argument collapses.

Wit and Whimsy

Two motorists had stopped beside the road in New England to eat lunch. The crows were especially noisy, prompting a discussion as to whether the "caws" which varied so in tone constituted a language. Seeing a farmer nearby, they asked his opinion.

Farmer Perkins — Sure, they talk. Just talked with one.

Mr. Price (one of motorists) — You mean to say you talk crow talk with them?

Farmer Perkins — Nope. Crow spoke English. He flapped down onto a branch o' that elm over there and looked down at me and asked, "Cawn?"

Farmer Perkins — I looked up at him and said, "Nope, beans."

"Aw," he said, and off he flew."

Once there was a lion tamer who said that his father-before-him had also been a lion tamer.

Mr. Stone — Did you ever put your head in a lion's mouth?

Mr. Smith — Only once, to look for Dad.

H. L. Hunt Writes

SOCIALIST MENACE IN PERU

A report by Jose Norman, a leader of the Cuban exile community in the U.S., indicates that the military junta now ruling Peru is duplicating the actions taken by Fidel Castro when he seized power in Cuba.

Immediately after taking control, the junta in Peru took over the International Petroleum Corporation, a company owned by U.S. businessmen. The takeover was justified on the grounds that this company had exploited Peru, yet the corporation had shown continuing concern for its employees' welfare. For example, it had created a model town for 60,000 people near its oil refinery, with good homes, twelve schools, a hospital and recreational facilities.

The junta is pursuing a policy of "agrarian reform," modeled exactly on Castro's program of land confiscation. The confiscations began shortly after Peru opened diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union.

The Peruvian government has promised to pay for confiscated lands with long-term government bonds. Castro's government made an identical promise but has never made a single payment.

Mr. Norman spoke with some of the Peruvian people whose land was taken. One of them was himself a Cuban, who had left his country after Castro had seized his land. Now in Peru he saw his land taken in the same way a second time.

When communist and socialist governments come into power, they claim to be inaugurating policies "for the good of the poor." Yet the people in Cuba are much poorer now than before, since the Cuban economy is in a state of near collapse. The people of Peru may face the same fate if the ruling junta continues to pursue its present Castroite policies.

The liberal lynch mob in the Senate went after Carswell's scalp — and got it...

His acceptance would have perhaps tipped the balance toward decisions which would have prevented less government intervention, a less friendly attitude toward labor unions, more sympathy toward police and less sympathy for the rights of criminals and protesters. That wouldn't do —

Those senators who voted against him voted for the encouraging of criminals and political acts of terrorism. It won't bother their conscience any — they have no conscience.

And just take a look at who questioned Carswell's qualifications! Sen. Ed Kennedy, that fine, upright pillar of integrity and moralistic virtue who is the paragon of Chappaquiddick; chuckled out of Harvard for "cheating;" and tried to set Frances X. Morrissey upon the federal bench, the one who was rejected by the American Bar Assn. Kennedy had the gall to say that Carswell is "unworthy of respect!"

Then there's Birch Bayh, labor's pawn in the senate, who won the "man of distinction" award in 1951 from the Alpha Tau Omega at Purdue when its charter limited membership to "white Christian males."

Arthur Goldberg was a high-priced union lawyer much of his life and had no judicial experience when he ascended to the High Court.

In his so-called "mediocre" career, Judge Carswell has had three times the combined bench experience of all the Kennedy-Johnson appointees to the Supreme Court.

Qualifications had nothing to do with Carswell's defeat. Fear of a return to reason, away from the liberal expansionist policies which have been laid down over the past 17 years by the Warren Court is the only thing that beat him.

And this country will suffer for decades...

PINE TREE FEATURES Basic Evil Of Unionism

By ROBERT LEFEVRE

Some people still have difficulty in grasping the basic evil of labor unions. Their supposition, of course, is that employers are too powerful and therefore some agency or organization ought to exist with enough power to oppose employers successfully. Now, with the nation still reeling from a postal strike, with travelers running hours late, due to difficulties at airports, with the movement and hauling of freight bogging down and with price hikes staring us in the face all across the nation, perhaps a few will be willing to listen. When did employers ever cause problems like these?

Take a look at employers as a group. Have you heard of the time they decided not to provide some good or service? Remember when they set it was a good thing to shut up all the businesses and go home? You don't remember — these instances? Well, curiously, from time to time a given employer does feel that way and acts it out. But in spite of unions and government, we still have some segments of a free market left, so when an employer decides he is going to take a step like that, other employers will jump into the breach and the first thing you know, that particular employer has retired for his health.

The basic evil of the union is that it wants to profit at the expense of the buying public. So union activities are invariably extortionate. Unions produce nothing in the way of a useful good or service. They simply conduct small-scale vendettas and minor riots called picket lines, in an effort to use force to get some advantages they can't get any other way.

But don't employers want to profit at the expense of the buying public? No, they don't. They want to profit, you bet. But they know that the only way they have of making a profit is by providing a good or service the public will WILLINGLY BUY. And that's not the same thing. Of course, some businessmen are willing to accept government subsidy — which puts them in a false position. Even so, they must still depend on private, voluntary choices from customers for most of their support.

The union profits by taking things away from people. The employers profit by making and distributing things to people. But on the one hand, profits arise out of destruction and injury. So blackmail and extortion is paid in order to reduce or eliminate the injury. That's the union. When you come to the employers, profits arise out of goods and services provided for those who will voluntarily purchase them.

It has been said that employers are cruel and heartless to workers; that they won't pay them all they earn; that the workers are exploited, first because the employer won't give them jobs and second, because even after workers are hired, the employer works them too hard and doesn't pay them enough.

How about taking a good look into your own experience? Did you ever go into a store only to find the clerk insulting you? Take a good look. Was the clerk the employer or an employee? I have occasionally run across employers who were indifferent to my business and who treated me unfairly. But 99 per cent of the time, if there was a lack of interest in waiting on me, and indifference to my requirements or a mistake — made in process, it wasn't the employer who made it. It was the employee. And how much should that kind of an employee be paid? You have doubtless had just such dealings yourself.

Perhaps the problem in the country is that, due to unions, employers are themselves the victims of exploitation and so they don't crack down on their employees enough in order to get them to provide good, courteous service.

Recently, Time magazine came out in a special issue called "America the Inefficient." It was apparent, as their research indicated, that the entire nation is in the grip of slipshod, irresponsible behavior on the part of some of the workers.

Management may be involved, true. But in the final analysis, it is the employee who puts the pieces together. And if they don't fit, it's a fair bet that the employer was trying to do a good job and the employee just didn't care.

That's the kind of thinking and acting that comes fundamentally from the labor union. The unions have done a great deal of harm already. Perhaps you ought to change your mind about the employers. They may not be perfect, but they are on your side. The labor union is on no side but its own. And therefore the public will always be damaged by them.

Q — Our 9-month-old baby has blisters on her buttocks. Nothing we have tried has helped. What could be the cause and what treatment do you advise?

A — If the blisters are more than a half-inch in diameter, your daughter may have a form of pemphigus or epidermolysis bullosa and had best be treated by a skin specialist. Smaller blisters localized in one area would suggest a contact dermatitis due to an allergy to something touching the affected skin. A series of patch tests should help to identify the irritant — a fabric, soap, powder or oil.

Ted Warned on Douglas: Open Mind, Not Mouth

JOHN GOLDSMITH
 WASHINGTON — Sen. Edward Kennedy's precipitate defense of impeachment-threatened Justice William O. Douglas has no surprise to intimates of both men.

The ultra-liberal peacenik jurist has been a close personal, legal and political adviser of members of the Kennedy family for some 35 years.

Similarly, it was no surprise to insiders that former Justice Abe Fortas rushed to the support of Douglas. They long were close friends before Fortas went on the Supreme Court, and he consulted Douglas repeatedly before deciding to quit to avoid impeachment.

Among insiders, Douglas has long been known as the "household attorney of the Kennedys."

As a young member of the faculty of Yale Law School, Douglas was brought to Washington by the late Joseph Kennedy, head of the family and at that time chairman of the newly-established Securities and Exchange Commission. Several years later, Douglas succeeded him in that job through Kennedy's influence with President Roosevelt.

Years later, when John Kennedy became President and Robert Kennedy attorney general, both frequently consulted Douglas on a wide range of problems.

It was at Douglas' urging that they launched the nationwide drive to ransom for $65 million the botched and disastrous Bay of Pigs invasion attempt.

Similarly, Douglas had a great deal to do with "Bobby" Kennedy's jumping into the Democratic presidential race in the spring of 1968. Douglas had wanted him to run before Sen. Eugene McCarthy announced. When the latter made an unexpectedly strong showing in the New Hampshire primary, Douglas resumed his prodding and this time "Bobby" heeded him.

After the latter's death, "Teddy" turned to Douglas for counsel and guidance.

Douglas was consulted during the still-spitting Chappaquiddick affair, and on related matters since then. Last month, Douglas reportedly advised "Teddy" to discreetly revive his presidential aspirations with attacks on the Nixon Administration's handling of the tortious Vietnam problem and domestic economy policies.

It is significant that in the last few weeks Kennedy has done a lot of talking in the Senate and at political meetings along these lines. Sources close to him indicate there will be more of these partisan attacks. "TALKING OUT OF TURN—" "Teddy's" precipitate defense of Douglas backfired fast and stingingly in the Senate and elsewhere.

Senate Republican Whip Robert Griffin, Mich., sharply rebuked Kennedy for speaking out of turn and, in effect, disregarding his constitutional obligation to keep his mouth shut.

"A statement in the Senate," caustically pointed out Griffin, "questioning the motives of House members comes dangerously close to giving the appearance of prejudgment on the merits. In order for the Senate to be in a position to carry out its solemn responsibility under the Constitution, senators should be particularly aware at this time of the importance, not only of keeping an open mind, but also of refraining from public statements which give the appearance of having prejudged the case against Justice Douglas.

"If the House should vote to impeach Justice Douglas, then the Senate, under the Constitution, has the sole and solemn responsibility to sit as judge and jurors to hear the evidence and to determine the guilt or innocence of the accused. That is why each senator should realize that it would be a serious breach of his obligation under the Constitution to involve himself in public discussion of the merits or demerits of the possible impeachment of a Supreme Court justice... Certain restraints are imposed upon senators under the Constitution in a situation such as this."

Since Griffin's forceful reminder, Kennedy has been publicly silent. Privately he has continued to berate the strongly bipartisan move in the House to bring about Douglas' impeachment.

Already there are backstage intimations that should the House vote impeachment and the case go to the Senate for trial and judgement, a formal demand may be made that Kennedy be required to abstain from participating on the ground of publicly-voiced-bias-and-prejudgment.

Throughout the nearly 200-year-old history of the Supreme Court, only one member, Justice Samuel Chase was impeached by the House and tried by the Senate. He was acquitted by the Senate. A two-thirds vote of that chamber is required to convict.

Nobody Wins Wars Now

By PAUL HARVEY

Could wars have been less honorable yet more honest in the days when the victor vanquished his adversary, smashed his weapons, stole his gold and carried off his women? Anyway, nobody wins wars any more. We pounded Japan and Germany to their knees, then helped them to their feet.

But if Americans have needed an incontrovertible example of the futility of overextending ourselves, this thing in Vietnam should be that.

Whatever the outcome of our involvement in Vietnam, we will suffer dreadfully debilitating side effects from this war for generations.

We count as casualties of war only the dead and wounded. What of malleable boys who are able to march home in legions but with a monkey on their backs?

According to official estimates, 80 per cent of our Vietnam GIs have smoked marijuana, 60 percent regularly do."

How many men bring home an addiction to harder drugs, more readily available in Asiatic war than in any war heretofore, is inestimable.

Congress hears testimony that the incidence of venereal disease among our Saigon-area troops is "unprecedented."

Mental problems deriving from the no-win nature of this conflict are "unprecedented."

The desertion rate in this war is "unprecedented."

An never before from war have Americans sent home guns to be used against Americans!

They do from this one. Customs cannot examine every inbound mail shipment, but one day in the one port of San Francisco they did open everything. They found 62 weapons and 6 grenades. This indicates that rifles, pistols and packages of explosives are being mailed home by GIs, hundreds each week.

Some, traced by our FBI, are intended for the armories of revolutionaries.

In no war heretofore has the enemy been so indistinguishable that the woman pushing the perambulator may be smuggling weapons, the boy on the bike any moment may toss a grenade.

If an American soldier shoots last, he may be dead; if he shoots first he may face court-martial.

But of all the noxious fallout from this pulled-punches war, none is more devastating than its disillusioning and disruptive effect on home-front morale.

Every war heretofore has pulled us together; this one is tearing us apart.

Congress on the White House dispute the responsibility.

Students find repugnant the hypocrisy of fighting Communists in Asia and tolerating them in Cuba. Some blame a vaguely defined "Establishment"; others openly blame our country, renounce our-ism, profane our flag.

There is only one way we can come home "winners" from this war and that is if we have learned from what not to do next time.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—One reason so many problems remain involved in this democracy is that the public has a short attention span.

In all age groups, and particularly among the idealistic young, there is a tendency to flit from cause to cause, without pursuing any of them to a successful conclusion.

At the moment, pollution is the "in" issue. Citizens young and old are making histrionic gestures to dramatize their concern.

The concern indubitably is justified. The question is whether it will continue long enough to have any real impact on this complex and difficult problem.

Offers Little Optimism

Past experience offers little ground for optimism. Many of the same people now parading against pollution were demonstrating last year against the war in Vietnam.

If you ask them why that issue is suddenly out of style, they explain that the get-out-of-Vietnam crusade has already attained its objective, so they now can turn their attention to something else.

This response overlooks the fact that there still are about 434,000 U.S. troops in Vietnam.

NEW YORK (UPI)—No immediate end to the general market decline is in sight, according to Gould's Position. It insists that better buying opportunities are still in the future and suggests that investors accumulate reserves for what is to come.

The lack of buying in the stock market is attributed to "everybody... waiting for the other guy to get his feet wet," according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. The analyst says the market now is "in a bottoming out phase," with some testing of recent laws "but no major selloff." Therefore, the company adds, investors should make "selectivity" their guiding principle, with any buying limited "to high grade stocks with low price-earnings ratios."
