Money main issue as Legislature convenes

AUSTIN (AP) — The 181 members of the 69th Texas Legislature gathered here today to embark on a 140-day tangle with money, shopping, drinking and gambling.

The session was scheduled to open at noon with simultaneous gavels by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby in the Senate and Secretary of State Myra McDaniel in the House

Quoting American Revolutionary political writer Thomas Paine, Ms. McDaniel said, "These are the times that try men's souls."

They also will be times that try men's calculators. Comptroller Bob Bullock forecasts a budget shortage of just over $1 billion. Federal courts have slapped Texas with an expensive list of reforms in state prisons, hospitals and schools for the mentally retarded.

In addition to the spending questions, the Legislature will consider bills legalizing parimutuel gambling, raising the drinking age from 19 to 21 and killing the Blue Law that effectively closes most stores on Sunday.

Lawmakers also will take another look at the education reform package they approved last year.

Texans are "sophisticated and intelligent," said Ms. McDaniel, the first black ever to call the Texas House into session, in her opening remarks. "They are not asking, nor will they believe, that government can instantaneously solve all the ills of our state.

"Texans are petitioning you as our elected representatives to address our problems with common sense, hard work and straight talk."

On Monday, Ms. McDaniel said she felt the "excitement" of her task, but not the history of it.

"I think for any person, anywhere to be able to perform that duty is very exciting," she said. "But perform that duty is very exciting," she said. "But it's always hard to feel historic. That's kind of how you think of George Washington."

Ms. McDaniel is an appointee of Gov. Mark White.

The Texas Constitution gives her the opening gavel job in the House. She'll be in charge until the House elects its speaker. Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, is expected to face no opposition in his bid for a second term at the House helm.

Lewis' anticipated re-election begins with a nominating speech by his close friend, Rep. Charles Evans, D-Hurst. As is customary, seconding speeches will come from a variety of House members, including a Republican, a woman, a Mexican-American and a black.

Scheduled to offer seconding speeches are Reps. Fred Agnich, R-Dallas; Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice; Al Luna, D-Houston; and Paul Ragsdale, D-Dallas.

The 150 House members — including a record 52 Republicans — will include two incumbents whose November victories are being contested. The fates of Reps. Mike McKinney, D-Centerville, and Ed Kuempel, R-Seguin, will be decided by the House. McKinney's 47-vote victory is under contest from Republican Sam Walsh.

Kuempel was certified winner by about 21,000 votes. Loser George Bigley of New Braunfels is contesting the outcome Committee appointments probably will be announced by the speaker next week. Senate committees will be announced by Hobby today.

Cold, snow on the way

By The Associated Press After several pleasant days, more wintry weather is expected tonight in the Texas Panhandle.

The National Weather Service said freezing rain or snow showers will be falling in the Panhandle this evening and in the South Plains tonight, with snow accumulation of up to 3 inches likely in the northern Panhandle by early Wednesday.

Mild weather over the weekend was attributed to a lingering high-pressure system, but things were changing today, and an area of low pressure was developing over West Texas.

As a result, light rain showers were reported across the northern third of the Panhandle early today, while dense fog reduced visibility to one-half mile in the lower Rio Grande Valley.

Southerly winds of 10 mph or less returned to most of West Texas, while light northeasterly winds breezed Temperatures before daybreak were mostly in the 30s, except along the Rio Grande Valley, where readings were in the 40s. At 4 a.m., temperatures ranged from 32 at Sanderson and 50 at McAllen.

Today's highs were expected to be in the upper 30s in the Panhandle, but in the 70s in South Texas.

City agrees to join gas prices challenge

By LARRY HOLLIS Staff Writer

Pampa city commissioners are supporting Energas' challenge against Cabot Corporation and Westar Transmission Company over wholesale rate costs for natural gas.

At their regular meeting this morning, the commissioners approved city participation in support of an Energas complaint filed with the Texas Railroad Commission against Cabot and Westar Energas says it has reason to believe higher priced gas purchased from affiliated producers or suppliers of the two firms was delivered to Energas instead of lower priced gas supplies that may have been available.

The gas utility claims Cabot and Westar have failed or refused to provide information required to substantiate the accuracy and appropriateness of its changes for gas supplied to Energas on the October bill.

If the complaint is resolved in Energas' favor, it would eventually mean a refund to its customers, company officials have said.

Acting City Manager Allyn Moore said the steering committee of the West Texas City Plant System supplied by Energas has asked the cities in the system to "serve as a watchdog" on gas Moore said the city's participation in the complaint filed with the RRC would be in line with the request from the steering

In other matters, the commission authorized the submission of a grant application for matching federal funds for a proposed recreational area on the south side of the city.

John Euland, head of the Parks and Recreation Department, said the department is applying for funds for a Marcus Sanders Pool and Recreational Area to be located in the Prairie Village Park area. The former Marcus Sanders Pool was closed this past summer because of deterioration.

Euland said the department was considering building an L-shaped swimming pool in the area, similar to the M. K. Brown Pool which opened this past summer.

Estimated cost of the project, including the pool, related facilities and construction costs, would be $737,000, Euland said. The grant, if approved, would provide matching funds on a one-to-one basis between the city and federal funds.

Moore said, "We feel there's need for recreational facilities on the south side of the city." He said the north side "is pretty well taken care of."

Commissioner Bob Curry questioned the need for the project, saying the previous pool had been little used. He also complained about adding additional budget expenditures for the pool, saying there's "a lot of priorities ahead of

Curry also said the city can't keep up with its current parks system now, with more budget expenses needed there before taking on any other projects. "We should direct our attention to taking care of what we've got," he said.

Commissioner David McDaniel said the city ought to at least apply for the grant and see if there's any interest among residents in the area for the project.

Commissioner E. L. "Smiley" Henderson agreed, saying the commission should show the residents in that area "that we have an interest and concern" for recreational facilities there.

Mayor Calvin Whatley said he agreed with McDaniel and Henderson.

Euland noted the grant is not binding; the city would have the option of not accepting the funds if the grant is approved. He said the deadline for submission of the grant, which also requires approval by the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission, is Friday

The commission approved the grant application, with Curry voting no.

White Deer audit report approved

By CATHY SPAULDING Staff Writer

WHITE DEER — Despite the lack of a city budget for fiscal year 1984, auditors gave the city a fairly clean slate in its 1984 audit.

At their Monday meeting, White Deer city officials approved the audit, prepared by the Amarillo firm of Cornell & Co. In their cover letter, the auditors found that the city was operating within the law and within generally accepted accounting principles.

The auditors admitted that they were hampered by the lack of past White Deer city budgets. As a result, the auditors said they could not compare the actual amount spent on various items with the budgeted amounts.

The audit pointed out that the city has prepared its statements on a cash basis for operations and on a modified cash basis to determine its financial position.

Now that the audit is out of the way, Mayor R.W. Standefer said he can concentrate on preparing a budget for FY 1985. A representative from the Texas State Comptroller's office is working with Standefer and city clerks to set up accounting proceedures.

"They (state tax officials) keep telling us not to worry about it," he said, hoping to get the budget completed within about 40 days.

According to the audit, the city had $1,421,789 in assets at the end of September, 1984. Liabilities totaled $445,578. In addition to the liabilities, the city has a fund equity of $976,211, making the total liabilities and fund equity $1,421,789.

The audit added that the city had total revenues of $180,224, with $107,338 of that coming from property taxes, $40,447 coming from sales and use taxes and $10,892 coming from fines.

Operating expenditures totalled $156,066 with $39,634 going to salary, $26,107 going to general maintenance and repair and $12,453 going to street lights. Total capital expenditures were $166,659.

At the end of FY 1984, the city was left with a fund balance of $76.369.

In other business, city officials wondered whether or not they should charge for the use of the White Deer Community Center. They took no action.

Built in the 1970s from area donations, the center is maintained by the city of White Deer but is governed by a committee of seven city residents. The committee allows residents to use the center free of charge for such non-commercial activities as dances, practices, parties and social luncheons.

Alderman Dwight Huffman questioned whether the city should apply the no-charge policy for an area band which uses the center for practice. Council members shared concern that non-residents were using the center, even though one of the group members may be a White Deer resident.

"An occaisional party doesn't bother me, but when someone consistently uses it every week-end, that does" he said.

City secretary Paulette Craig said that a user cannot book the community center for consecutive weeks, unless there is an opening at the center.

Standefer said the city spends about $150 per month to furnish bathroom supplies, maintain the building and pay utilities.

"We just finished putting in four new doors," he said.

The mayor suggested working with the community center committee to review the center policies.

City officials ignored a proposal by the Texas Department of Human Resources to assist customers who could not pay utility bills.

"We did this a few years ago and it was a headache," Craig told aldermen. "You wouldn't believe the forms we had to fill out."

City officials also agreed to go out for bids on a half-ton pick-up with a V-8 engine, heater and a heavy duty transmission.

Gray petroleum sales top $200 million in '83

The sale of crude oil and natural gas from Gray County wells contributes over $200 million annually to the county's economy, according to the annual report of the Texas Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association released today.

The report shows that petroleum sales amounted to $200.9 million in 1983, ranking the county 57th among the state's 254 counties in the value of its marketed petroleum production.

In its annual survey of the ecomonic impact of oil and gas industry operations in the significant producing counties in Texas, the association said Gray County Wells produced 3.6 million barrels of crude oil valued at $107.4 million in 1983. Natural gas production was 41.5 billion cubic feet, valued at $93.5 million.

Owners of royalty in the county received $25.1 million as their share of the output, the association noted.

"These figures give evidence that the petroleum industry continues to play a role of great importance to the economics of those counties throughout the state with significant production," said Association Chairman J.C. Walter, Jr., of Houston.

In addition to paying property taxes to cities, counties and school districts, producers in the county provided state government with production tax payments estimated at $11.9 million, the survey showed. Crude oil taxes amounted to $4.9 million, while natural gas levies totaled $7 million.

Based on Texas Employment Commission figures, 1,814 oil and gas industry employees in the county received wages of about $43.5 million.

In the search for new petroleum reserves in the county, oil and gas producers spend a reported $96.6 million in the drilling of 162 wells. This effort resulted in the successful completion of 142 oil wells and 11 gas wells, although some $5.3 million was lost in the drilling of nine dry holes.

As of April 1, 1984, the county had 4,505 producing wells, 3,589 oill and 916 gas.

Arms talks progress suggested

negotiations.

Shultz arrived at the Soviet diplomatic mission at 9:28 a.m. (3:28 a.m. EST) for his third session in two days with Gromyko. U.S. officials said they expected there would be a fourth and final session later today and that Shultz would likely hold a news conference, but there was no formal announcement of the day's agenda.

However, the chill that developed between the two countries during the Reagan administration's first term appeared to be yielding to cordiality and conciliation after 61/2 hours of talks between the two men on Monday.

Dropping their usual reserve, Shultz and Gromyko were a.most playful in posing for pictures Monday, while a mutually agreed on news blackout hinted that they could be at a critical point in trying to set up future arms talks beyond the two-day session in Geneva. In previous sessions between the two, Shultz has promptly made public his differences with Gromyko.

Both sides have been careful to portray the sessions as exploratory, stressing that they are not arms negotiations. The Soviets broke off two sets of nuclear missile talks 13 months ago.

Apart from the arms control issues — both nuclear arsenals and space weapons — the two governments may be approaching an agreement on a joint space venture.

The idea, which already has the endorsement of President Reagan and Robert C. McFarlane, his national security adviser, has gained "new currency," said a U.S. official.

President Reagan, in a surprise announcement today, said he will appoint his chief of staff, Jim Baker, to become secretary of the President to name Baker as secretary of treasury

WASHINGTON (AP) -President Reagan announced today he is naming his chief of staff, James A. Baker III, to be secretary of treasury and is bringing Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan into the White House to take Baker's place as the president's top staff aide. Reagan said both had asked for January 1984, James A. Baker III told a reporter that four years in the job as President Reagan's chief of staff was "the absolute cutoff.

Groom holdup probe to include hypnosis

GROOM - Hoping to get a more detailed description of two men who robbed a convenience store here Friday, law enforcement officers plan to hypnotize a clerk who was victim of the armed robbery.

According to the Carson County Sheriff's office, two white men robbed the Allsup's Convenience Store, located at the I-40 and U.S. 66 exit west of Groom, at about 7:20 p.m. Friday. Deputy Jerry Gaines said that one of the two suspects pointed a gun at the clerk and ordered her to take all the money from the cash register and put it in a box of soda straws. The men made off with about $200, Gaines

"They apparently parked in the rear, nobody saw them leave," Gaines said

"We're going to try to hypnotize the clerk to get a composite picture of the suspects," Gaines said, declining to identify the clerk

Gaines explained that a person's memory is often blocked by a traumatic incident such as an armed robbery

The deputy also hopes the hypnosis will at least help law enforcement officers determine whether the suspects were area residents. If the suspects are local, anyone fr Panhandle, Gaines said there's a good chance they could be tracked down. He said it would be harder to track down the suspects if they "just dropped off the interstate.

The manager of the Groom convenience store identified the two suspects as white males, abour 18-19 years of age. She said they did not appear to be local residents.

Bullock: next three years to be hard on state's economy

AUSTIN (AP) - Despite higher employment and personal income, the next three years "will not be an easy period for the Texas economy," says State Comptroller Bob Bullock

Bullock on the eve of the Legislature made public Monday his revenue estimate for 1986-87 and forecast the state's economy by regions.

He said starting with a Christmas shopping surge in 1983 Texas "made a sharp turnaround" that carried on through 1984.

"Job growth was strong," and retail sales "were up sharply" last year, Bullock said Monday.

The comptroller estimated Texas would receive $36.6 billion in revenue from all sources in 1986-87.

This would be an increase of $4.6 billion, or 14.5 percent, from 1984-85 but would still be over $1 billion short of the money needed to pay for a two-year no-growth budget, Bullock said.

From September 1983 to August 1984, Bullock said in his report to the Legislature, the Texas economy added 133,000 nonfarm jobs, and the state's unemployment rate dropped from 8.4 percent to 5.7 percent.

'Texas personal income - a key barometer of state economic progress — is expected to grow at about 8 percent annually over the three years," Bullock said. Groups: don't weaken rules

AUSTIN (AP) - State Oversight, science panels proposed lawmakers shouldn't try to weaken new farm pesticide safety rules as some farm and chemical groups want, according to a coalition of environmentalists and others.

'What we've got to fight for is that the health of the citizens of this state is more important than business that wants to run without being regulated," said Annmarie Jensen of the interreligious coalition Texas Impact.

"Every other business in this state has, by and large, had health and safety regulations applied to it. But because Texas has for so long been a big agricultural state, the big agricultural interests have controlled the important committees," she said.

Ken Kramer, lobbyist for the Sierra Club, told a news conference Monday that his group is worried over indications that some legislators "may try to subvert the new rules by passing legislation that would restrict the TDA's (Texas Department of Agriculture) authority to regulate pesticide use Ms. Jensen said her organization shares that concern

'The Texas Legislature must determine whether or not sufficient funds are available to adequately enforce these regulations. We will be working to encourage them to fund such enforcement, and to ensure that these regulations are not watered down legislatively.

'We feel that the health of many of our rural citizens is at stake.

The TDA late last year wrote rules requiring farmers to notify neighbors when they intended to spray fields with pesticides, and setting limits on how quickly farmworkers could re-enter treated fields.

The rules have been opposed by a number of farm and chemcial industry officials, including the Texas Farm Bureau and the Agricultural Chemicals Association, who contend the regulations are unnecessary and will add to farmers' costs.

Backers of the rules say they are needed to protect the safety of farmworkers, and some say even more regulations are needed to protect consumers.

Tani Adams, an official of the Texas Center for Rural Studies and its Texas Pesticide Project, said the rules don't go far enough.

"Today, the major problems facing the average Texan have not begun to be addressed. When you go to the grocery store today to buy Texas produce, none of that food will have been tested for pesticide residues." she said.

Everybody have pencils ready?

Time to jot down some Dates to Remember for 1985, courtesy the new Hallmark Date Book

I got my free date book last Christmas and I was amazed at all the important (?) information that is packed inside this wallet-sized

The first page features a handy guide of things to give women, girls, men and boys: things like address books, calendars, diaries, thoughtfulness" albums, jigsaw puzzles, and Little Gallery Gifts (whatever they are). Funny, but fruit and clothing aren't even

The date book also features a listing of Important Phone Numbers including police, fire department, dentist, clergy, school and Hallmark Store. I can just hear it now: "Hello, Julie's Cards and Gifts? . . . I know it's three a.m., but tomorrow's my mother's .birthday and if I don't find a card for her, I'll just go to pieces."

The calendar part of the date book gives the flower and birthstone of each month. There are also spaces for daily memos that are just big enough to put an "x" through. Also featured is a listing of traditional and modern wedding anniversary gifts. The traditional First Anniversary gift used to be paper. But when more and more of the First Anniversary paper gifts began reading "Divorce Granted," the gift was switched to clocks. By the time the list gets up to the 40th anniversary, the Hallmark folks run out of ideas and fall back on the stand-by ruby, sapphire, gold and diamond gifts

Then comes the list of 1985 Dates to Remember — to remember to run to your nearest card shop and buy gifts. Jan. 7 is the Julian Calendar Christmas. What a handy idea for people who don't send their Christmas Cards on time.

There's nothing new in February. Lincoln was still born on the 12th and St. Val is still honored on the 14th. But Washington's Birthday remains in doubt. When George was born in the 1730s, his birthdate was Feb. 11. But sometime between then and now, Father Time moved GW's birthday 11 days later. Not long ago, the government moved his birthday to the third Monday of the month. When I get to heaven, I'm going to ask George Washington's mother when he was

April 24 is Secretaries Day. That's a good idea, secretaries deserve redit. Still, I wonder when someone will come up with a Payroll Clerks' Day or a Sales Managers' day. How about a Reporter's Day? Friendship Day is Aug. 4. Sept. 8 is Grandparents' Day, but I probably won't send Granny a card. She thinks Grandparents' Day is a silly idea, so I'll bypass the card and just call or write a letter because I love her. Sept. 17 is Citizenship Day: send a card to every citizen in the country. October is reserved for Boss's Day and Mother-in-Law's Day (uou've got to be kidding.) On Oct. 19, there is something called Sweetest Day, which one Hallmark store clerk said allows a person

Since May, the Bryners have been raising Pecos, a 9-month-old ellow Labrador retriever. But Pecos is no ordinary dog; he's an aspiring seeing-eye dog for the blind Nathan Bryner, 11, received Pecos, who was then 3 months old, from Guide Dogs for the Blind Inc., of San Rafael, Calif., through a program with the Utah 4-H Clubs.

Although Pecos is officially Nathan's responsibility, he said he gets plenty of help from his parents, Paul and Barbara Bryner; his brother, Andrew; and his four sisters, Lisa, Rebecca, Rachel and Sarah Nathan, now a member of the Tropy 4-H club, said Pecos will be returned to Guide Dogs for the Blind after spending a year of basic obedience training.

About 95 percent of the dogs are placed as 4-H projects, he added.

"The dogs have to spend one year learning how to live in a human environment," he said. "Pecos has lived almost his whole life indoors.

Pecos will be taught to heel, sit, stand, lie and stay on command, Nathan said.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmosi capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

All quiet on the conservative front

Conservatives have been sort of quiet lately. They were going to change everything by trooping to the polls and voting for the Reagan Revolution. You know, cut taxes, cut back government, fight Washington-that sort of stuff. Well, the GOP succeeded in picking up some seats in the House and managed to maintain a majority in the Senate.

Then came the time for Senate Republicans to elect their new leadership.

The new majority leader? Big-tax, status quo Republican Robert Dole. Sen. John Chafeee, one of the more liberal Republicans, was selected (by Republican senators, mind you, not by liberal Democrats) to head the GOP conference

Not-so-conservative Sen. Alan Simpson was selected majority whip. Liberal Sen. John Heinz edged out a conservative to become chairman of the National Republican Senatorial Committee. Liberal Sen. Bob Packwood moved into Dole's old position as chairman of the key Senate Finance Committee.

It is business as usual in the Washington establishment. As we have long argued, political solutions are basically no solutions. Politicians like, first of all, their own power and perks. If they ever actually solved the nation's problems, they would be out of a job. Much better to keep the problems growing ever-worse so the politicians can tell us how desperately we need them at their stations, fighting off the crises as only they know

Even if some political types once actually believed in fighting shoulder to shoulder with Ronald Reagan to cut back on government, they soon begin, once they set down roots along the Potomac, to identify themselves with government and defense of government.

When you buy into political solutions, you gets politics, not solutions. Big-government liberals have always known that, and liked it. Maybe the conservatives will learn, one day

"Got anything for the Westmoreland or Sharon trials?"

Warren T. Brookes

Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone was quite right, though hypocritical, to resist furher protectionist "quotas" when he met with President Reagan last week. Japan has demonstrated to the world that low taxes, high productivity, and free world trade are the supply side route to economic prosperity, and they are not about to give up that path without a struggle -

Instead of fretting over Japan's economic success, we should emulate it. And, through serious tax reform, we now have a marvelous opportunity to do just that - and then some.

nor should we

Throughout the last four years, Americans have been told that to save our industrial economy, 'Look East, young man." Japan has been held up as the model to follow - and, that model, we have been told, calls for what Harvard's Ezra Vogel describes as "more central leadership.

Vogel, Harvard's Robert Reich and George Cabot Lodge have been warning that this nation needs a central planning elite similar to Japan's Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI), which they contend has been the chief architect of Japan's "economic miracle." But, a funny thing has been happening. Even as we have begun 'looking East,' Japan's MITI has increasingly been 'looking West' at America's own developing economic miracle, especially our phenomenal boom in new business formations

And, even as Japan's fantastic productivity and investment growth rates of the early 1970s have slowed sharply in the 1980s, America's economy is suddenly on a new business "roll.

One reason: Even as Japan's tax burden has been soaring over the last five years, America's total tax burden has begun to fall, and the gap between them is narrowing by the year. As a result, America, not Japan, is now on the upcurve for the entrepreneur, while Japan's historic corporate centralism is being challenged by our more decentralized and individualistic economy.

HIS FIRST WORDS WERE THE SAME

AS OURS - "CAN'T SOMEBODY DO

SOMETHING ABOUT THAT?

We should emulate Japan

In 1981, the respected Japanese monthly Bungei Shuniu admitted "a feeling of crisis is spreading among Japan's technological experts. The closer engineers and researchers are to the factory floor, the fewer there are who think Japan has forged ahead of the U.S."

In 1982, the Osaka Junior Chamber of Commerce returned from a trip to Silicon Valley and warned: "We should pay more attention to this enterprise system. Japan's problems cannot be solved solely by our large institutions. In order to cope with these problems without losing the vitality of a 'free economic system' we must encourage high - risk entrepreneurship.

As Frank Kline, president of Pacific Technology Venture Management, told Donald Gervitz, author of "Business Plan for America, "There is a new generation in Japan. They don't want to join the traditional centralized bureaucracies. They want to become entrepreneurs, and they are looking for a way to do it.

But, these budding Japanese entrepreneurs are striking out during a time when the "capital friendly" Japanese tax system is finally being challenged by the U.S. With or without tax reform, by 1986, there may well be less than four percentage points separating Japan's total tax burden (including social security insurance) and that of the U.S.

During the heyday of Japan's growth and competitive domination that tax differential with the U.S. reached as much as eleven points. At that time ('60s and '70s), the Japanese economy was growing at three times the average annual rate of

While Japan's own subtle protectionism and MITI's targeted investment policies undoubtedly contributed something to its remarkable post war development. America's liberal economists have almost totally ignored the extraordinary role of Japan's deliberate low - tax policy on the behavior of the Japanese worker and economy.

In a detailed study for the Joint Economic Committee of Congress (JEC), Allen Mendelowitz of the General Accounting Office (GAO) reported back on September 24, 1984

"Limits on (Japan's) tax burdens were of paramount importance to encourage economic growth through the tax system. The Japanese government sought to limit taxes to 20 percent of national income. From the early 1950s until 1977. Japanese taxes were cut annually in several ways, including rate reductions, increased exemptions, or special measures (tax loopholes).'

But, in the mid - 1970s Japanese expenditures, especially on social insurance programs, began to pick up steam, and the pattern of annual tax reductions without expenditure cuts began to drive the Japanese deficits to a higher level than even the U.S. now faces.

As a result, the tax burden climbed sharply from less than 20 percent in 1970 to its current (1983) level of nearly 27 percent. In that same period the U.S. tax burden also rose, but more modestly, from 30.5 to 32 percent in 1980, before starting to decline in 1982 falling to 31.3 percent in 1983, and to a projected 30.8 percent in 1985.

Thus, Japan is now worried. It sees in the U.S. a nation determined to restore its entrepreneurial edge through lower tax rates - and serious tax reform could wipe out Japan's supremacy.

Spice for halftime shows

Now that we are in the midst of football's grand finale, it is time once again I made my plea for better halftime shows

I've been watching football games for 30 years. Rarely, have I seen a halftime show that was the least bit original or entertaining

Television has figured this out. At halftime of most games that are televised, the network switches you back to Brent Mushberger in New York so you don't have to watch another drill halftime show.

Brent Mushberger is about as exciting as a holding penalty, but I'll take him over another 100 people banging drums and blowing on flutes

Who's idea was it to turn over halftime to a bunch of musicians anyway? I've just spent 15 or 20 bucks to watch a horde of well - conditioned atheletes beat on each other's heads and suddenly I have to take 15 minutes out to watch music majors play "On Wisconsin." If it was music I had, wanted, I would have found me a jukebox somewhere and sat in the shade.

The only band I've ever seen at halftime of a football game that didn't bore me to tears is the Florida A. & M. Rattler Band from Tallahasee. Fla., that features 300 - pound tuba players who do splits and, as I have stated before, more soul than you'd find in downtown heaven But the Florida A. & M. band can't be everywhere at once, so usually I get a field full of kids in silly hats doing a Gershwin tribute that sounds more like a Slim Whitman medley.

I like the kind of halftime show I saw at the Citrus Bowl in Orlando, Fla., the other day. The Citrus Bowl paid the Walt Disney people a lot of money and what the Disney people came up with were fireworks, marching toy soldiers, Goofy dressed as Santa Claus and the Disney Air Force that circled the stadium in hot - air balloons and all sorts of tiney little airplanes

Add all the other planes circling above pulling signs advertising auto dealerships, and the sky wasn's that crowded the morning the Japanese

Come on. We can do better halftime shows if we just put our minds to it

How about wet T - shirt contests featuring the cheerleaders? How about majorette mud wrestling? Or how about bingo games, a pony raffle, or a foot race between Phyllis George and Jimmy the Greek?

I saw a dog chase a Frisbee at halftime of a Super Bowl once. The dog was better than the gall game. Bring him back and have Pete Rozelle Pepper Rodgers, head coach of the USFL's Memphis Showboats, shares my feelings about halftime shows.

"You know what we ought to do?" he asked me once."We ought to put the best running back in the game out on the field at halftime and give guys a chance to come out of the stands and try to tackle him for prizes. Think how many guys would try to tackle Herschel Walker to impress their girlfriends and win a Toyota?'

Great idea, and you could even include music in that kind of shows. "Taps." Back to you, Brent, while we ponder this subject

Raising funds to restore Lady Liberty

BY OSCAR COOLEY

Want to buy a replica of the Statue of Liberty? You can for $2,500. It's 19 inches high and, made of bronze, should be as durable as the Lady herself, who at nearly 100 is taking a new lease on life.
Two New Yorkers, Howard Goldstein and

Mervin Bendewald, are making and selling the miniatures, which are copies of the original terra cotta model fashioned by F. A. Bartholdi. They are selling the models both to inculcate liberty and to raise money to help pay for the refurbishing of the Statue on Bedloe's Island in New York harbor, a job that is expected to cost $250 million.

The location is appropriate, Liberty holding high the torch that lights the way of immigrants into a free country.

The idea of erecting such a symbol was first suggested by Edouard Laboulayem a Frenchman who recalled that his countrymen had helped the Americans gain their liberty from Britain in 1776 -81, and who thought this fact should be celebrated. France bore much of the cost of the Statue, and Bartholdi, a French sculptor, was the designer. It was made of copper sheets in France. The sheets were brought to America in 1885 and assembled on a pedestal erected on the island which immigrant ships passed as they entered the harbor. The pedestal, made of concrete faced with granite, is 150 feet high, and the Statue from foot to crown is another 152 feet.

Visitors go by boat which docks at the island. An elevator takes them up to the top of the pedestal, and those with strong hearts can continue on by interior stairs up through the Statue to the crown.

"Liberty Enlightening the World," the Statue was first called. Soon modesty overcame this sweeping claim and the Lady was content to be designated merely The Statue of Liberty. Laboulayem's original idea still is a brilliant one.

The restoration of the Statue is expected to be complete by Oct. 28, 1986, which will be the 100th anniversary of the Statue's dedication.

Our hunch is that so many of the 19 - inch Liberties will be sold that the Statue's restoration cost will be fully met, and Goldstein and Bendewald will make a profit. They deserve to, for their 19 - inch Liberties, located in homes, schoolrooms, public institutions, and places of business throughout the U.S. - and France? - will enlighten the world more completely than has the Lady who, in the words of Emma Lazarus - "lifts her lamp beside the golden door." Americans need reminding of the liberty which they are blessed with. No large nation of people has ever been endowed with so much liberty and invested with the responsibility of preserving and sharing it

Bits of history

In 1937, the first feature-length cartoon using the Technicolor process, Walt Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," was shown for the first time, in Los Angeles.

In 1956, the Hungarian revolt against Stalinist policy began. (It was subsequently crushed by Soviet troops.)

In 1973, in a surprising reversal, President Richard M. Nixon agreed to turn over White House tape recordings to Judge John J. Sirica.

Ten years ago: George Papadopoulos and four other leaders of Greece's 1967 military coup were arrested and sent into exile.

Five years ago: The Shah of Iran, said to be suffering from cancer, underwent tests in a New York City hospital. The shah had arrived the day before, after living in exile in Mexico since June.

Aids say Reagan's deficit plan will miss his target

AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The budget President Reagan sends to Congress next month likely will miss his goal of slicing projected $200 billion deficits in half by 1988, according to administration

But these officals are claiming success by setting the agenda for this year's upcoming budget debate. And they add that the short-term goal of holding federal red ink to about $170 billion next year can be met.

Less than two months ago, Reagan decided to seek a deficit-reduction plan that would bring deficits down to about $99 billion by 1988 - a level equal to about 2 percent of the Gross National Product.

Current administration projections show that the deficit for the current fiscal year at about $218 billion.

This industrial city of about 300,000 people 155 miles south of the Texas border at Piedras Negras remained governed Monday by both Esquivel and Salvador Martinez of the dominant Institutional Revolutionary Party.

Martinez was declared the official winner in the Dec. 2 elections. But PAN claims the Revolutionary Party, known as the PRI, stole the election through vote fraud and refuses to vacate the mayor's office it held through two previous administrations

In making the preliminary decisions on the budget that Reagan will send Congress on Feb. 4, the president agreed to a broad plan to freeze, reduce or eliminate most domestic spending programs. But Reagan also rejected proposals from his top budget advisers for deep reductions in the planned Pentagon buildup.

In addition, administration officials have increased their projections of how large the deficits will be.

Thus, administration documents being used in recent briefings for Republican members of Congress show that the administration's budget for the 1986 fiscal year that begins Oct. 1 will be $10 billion short of the president's deficit-reduction target for next year, $31 billion short for 1987 and $41 billion short for 1988.

Administration officials who discussed the budget plan on condition they not be quoted by name insisted that the current set of estimates will change by the time Reagan submits his budget to Congress next month.

They added that with re-estimates and other changes, the targets for 1986 likely will be met in the spending plan.

"For '86 we stand a good chance of meeting the most important goal, which is to hold total program spending (federal outlays for everything except interest on the national debt) in '86 no higher than 85" spending, said an administration official.

Excluding the interest on the national debt, that would be about $830 billion with a deficit of about $170 billion.

But the new budget is unlikely to meet administration goals for 1987 "It is perfectly clear as of now that those out years (1987 and 1988) will not, probably, hit the target in the budget," the official said. According to administration estimates being shown to GOP legislators, the projected deficit for 1988 - when Reagan wanted to have the red ink trimmed to about $99 billion — will be about $139

Ferraro's husband says that he pleaded guilty to spare his family

Zaccaro, the husband of Democratic vice-presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro, pleaded guilty to participating in a fraudulent real estate scheme to spare his family the publicity and 'anguish' of a trial, his lawyer

Zaccaro was accused of inflating the value of five apartment buildings he was helping a client purchase, altering a property appraisal in attempting to secure financing for the deal and overstating his net worth by nearly $18 million

Ms. Ferraro was not involved in the transaction in question, but questions about her husband's financial dealings haunted her vice presidential campaign. Campaign financial disclosure documents filed in August said Zaccaro was worth about $3 million, while Ms. Ferraro was said to be worth

If the deal had been consummated, Zaccaro would have received a $333,000 commission plus more than 8 percent ownership in the buildings, authorities said. The buildings were to have been converted into condominiums, but the deal never went through.

"I believe he had a defensible case," Arthur Liman, Zaccaro's lawyer, said Monday. "But he wanted to spare his family the publicity, anguish and legal proceedings that would have ensued, so he entered this plea

Judge George Roberts said that under an agreement between Zaccaro and the district attorney, he would not impose a jail sentence unless Zaccaro committed another crime before sentencing on Feb. 20.

The charge against Zaccaro, a misdemeanor, is punishable by up to a year in jail and a $1,000 fine. Liman said the most Zaccaro faces is the fine and probation. Zaccaro was released without bail

In a statement issued by Liman. Zaccaro said, "My plea hopefully puts an end to the inquiries and the microscopic attention given to my personal and business affairs."

Ms. Ferraro issued a statement saying that her husband "has freely admitted his mistake and for this I am proud of him. John is a decent, honorable man and today's events do nothing to change him in the eyes of his family and friends.

We love him very much." District Attorney Robert Morgenthau said the charges would have been filed even if Ms. Ferraro had not been a candidate. But Liman said, "We may have a disagreement on that ... With women running for office, we hold their spouses to the highest standards."

The real estate investor who was Zaccaro's client, John DeLorenzo, cooperated with authorities and was not charged, according to Morgenthau.

Liman said Zaccaro did not know the real estate contract was inflated and that incorrect parts were submitted by mistake. He also said Zaccaro only changed two things on the appraisal document - the date and the addressee - so a new appraisal would not have to be carried out. The actual appraisal of the buildings was correct, he said.

Dear Abby

Bright kids who are pushed ahead may be pushed too far

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I must comment on pushing bright students through school too fast. I speak from

It's no fun being the only kid in the showers with no pubic hair, the only kid in the class whose voice hasn't changed, and one of the last to be chosen for a team. I hated gym. I couldn't hack it in sports, so I made it big in debate, drama, the school paper, etc.

After I married, my kids were also good students, but I made sure they stayed in classes with kids their

DEAR ABBY: I am a 36-year-old man scheduled for elective surgery in a few months.

My wife and I happen to know several women (socially) who are registered nurses, and my wife's younger sister is also an R.N.

My wife wants me to engage one or more of these women as my private-duty nurses during my hospitalization. I told her I prefer nurses who are strangers to me. She says if I engage strangers, her sister and our friends will feel insulted.

Knowing the intimate care nurses must give their patients, I'd feel more comfortable having nurses I'll never see socially. I would hate to sit across a dinner table from a woman who had given me a bath, etc.

If you understand how I feel, please explain it to my wife. She simply doesn't get my point.

DEAR SHY: I understand how you feel. Your feelings in this matter outrank those of your wife's sister and the nurses you As a boy I attended an excellent know socially. As a matter of elementary school in the Midwest fact, they also outrank your wife's. Select your own nurses

Decorating in the English style

By BARBARA MAYER AP Newsfeatures

Tea and scones by an open fire on a wet winter's day, the sweet aroma of roses at a cottage door. jolly outdoorsy weekends in the country: to any reader of novels these scenes say England.

The ready appeal of these symbols of English homes is one of the reasons why English-style decorating is currently popular in the United States, says Suzanne Slesin, co-author of "English Style," a new book which documents the design elements in English homes.

'Americans feel comfortable with English decor. It offers a certain grandness but on a more modest scale. It's personal, a little sloppy, not too rigid and it makes room for collections that you add to over the years," she said. Furthermore, English style is easy to live with, doesn't take lots of money, great antiques or large spaces to reproduce, she added.

The pre-eminent (but not the only) example of English style is the country house. Another style currently being emulated in this country is a more pared-down version which she calls simplified plainness. A third strand - the stately mansion is "wonderful to visit but impossible to reproduce unless you have endless amounts of money, time and space.

Some design details that are typical of English country homes include comfortable sofas and easy chairs covered in floral patterned chintz or unpolished cotton, faded oriental rugs on the floor, painted walls or walls papered with a small flowered print or

There is a warm and cozy feeling engendered by the presence of many family pictures, pillows and throws on the sofa and easy chairs, paintings of dogs and horses, table lamps and a grouping of furniture around the fireplace.

In the kitchen, you'd find a pantry or larder; The room itself would be larger than American kitchens but not as streamlined. On open shelves there would be many utensils and objects in daily use teapots, toast racks, milk pitchers, polished copper pols.

All in all, the home would be comfortable, homey, perhaps a little shabby, certainly far from perfect. "Americans tend to throw things out when they become faded or dusty or frayed at the edges." But to the English that's just when they begin to take on the right patina, she

Some tips for creating an English country room in one's American home: "stick to a basic color scheme, perhaps blue or red or pink with white. Recover your upholstered furniture in a suitable English style fabric. Then find another fabric with the same colors to use for pillows and lampshades," she suggested.

If you can afford, it, buy a stripped pine piece such as a Welsh cupboard which has drawers or shelves below and an open display rack above to display decorative objects. You can also paint the walls using a decorative technique such as stippling, marbling or sponging.

For some people, the cheerful clutter and confusion of an English country home is too messy. They may opt for a more contemporary furniture and plain, simple primitive fabrics and decorative objects predominate.

In England, some style-conscious people are finding an older house and instead of doing it up in the right period, simplifying. They keep all the architectural details, but paint them white. They may select a few pieces of modern furniture, minimal accessories, fabrics such as sisal rugs for the floors, and baskets and patchwork quilts, she said. As housing gets scarcer and more expensive, small cottages are being converted to modern living, leading to odd and quirky spaces, small rooms with wooden beams in the ceiling, slate floors, tiny windows, low

Each of the English styles is easy to duplicate in the United States, she says, because of the many sources for contemporary and older English furnishings In their book, she and co-author Stafford Cliff have included a catalog of resources for English-style objects.

The current book is the second style" book she has produced (the first was "French Style." also co-authored by Cliff).

"The purpose of these books is really to allow people to see real interiors so that they can see what they like and how it has been put together. I am for people opening their eyes to all sorts of styles, selecting what . thy like and figuring out how to make it work for them," she said.

But this time the piece of old furniture is mostly vertical. How can the liquid do its work while running down the legs and other parts of the furniture? Is there a paste varnish remover and. if so, where can it be purchased?

A - So-called paste varnish remover is available wherever the liquid can be bought. The term so-called is used because it isn't fully a paste, but more of a thick liquid. It will cling long enough for you to do the work. But get into the habit of turning the work so that it is as much horizontal as you can get it. Student combines study, mechanic's job

By JOHN LUNDQUIST Associated Press Writer

NORTHFIELD, Minn. (AP) - If the aim of a liberal arts school is to produce a well-rounded student, St. Olaf College can be proud of Jay Johnson.

Johnson, an English major in the classroom, is a grease monkey in the parking lots in his spare time.

Packing his tool box out of his 1961 Convair van, the 24-year-old Johnson tunes up the junkies and the sports cars that college kids bring along to the campus.

While Johnson may not be a typical English major student, he puts a prime value on one facet of his collegiate studies: communications.

"The way I see it, you can slide into any kind of communications job, public relations, any place where writing talent can be used," said Johnson, garbed in work clothes and mechanics cap.

"If you can communicate, you can do just about anything. That's the truth in just about any kind of business."

The son of a machinist, Johnson passed up college when he graduated from Rockford High School and instead went to North Hennepin Vocational Technical School in suburban Minneapolis. That, despite the fact he ranked fifth scholastically in his graduating class of 67.

"I was disillusioned about education because of all the favoritism and cliquishness I saw in high school," he recalled.

While studying mechanics 40 hours a week, he also put in up to 40 more on a job, and earned his certificate as a qualified auto

He was hired by Jim Lupient Oldsmobile of Golden Valley and worked his way into fulltime status. "He's a very good mechanic," said Tom Morris, service manager at the dealership.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Since mid-1981, there's been a decline in the number of Americans who earn a living by making goods and a sharp rise in the ranks of those whose work is providing services for people.

At the same time, the Information Age, replete with robots and desktop computers, has arrived, offering only mixed future employment prospects; high-technology and automation will likely wipe out many jobs.

All of these factors and others, such as the likelihood that women and minorities will constitute a disproportionate share of new job-seekers, make future job prospects in America uncertain, economists say. But declining birth rates should ease pressures on business to furnish enough jobs, analysts generally agree.

It is difficult to assess how many jobs will be needed in 1985 and in ensuing years to maintain a high level of civilian employment and a tolerable level of joblessness.

The labor force - a sum of the number of people working and those who say they're looking for jobs - stood at 106.1 million in June 1981. It has grown by about 7 million since then. But government statisticians and demographers have given few precise figures forecasting the size of the labor force in the years ahead. But it is clear that the growth of the labor force is slowing. In 1983, for instance, 1.3 million people joined the roster of those searching for jobs, and that was the slowest growth rate since the early 1960s.

Behind the unemployment rate the sensitive monthly government indicator that gets most of the attention - are a host of trends which concern economists in and out of government. From June 1981 through last September:

The number of Americans employed in the manufacturing of durable and non-durable goods fell from 26.1 million to 25.5 million.

The total number of people who earn a living providing services to others, such as medical, legal, hotel, restaurant and banking, soared from 66.2 million to 69.6 million.

- The number of Americans who accepted part-time jobs rose from 3.7 million to 5.5 million.

The loss of hundreds of thousands of jobs in heavy manufacturing throughout the so-called "Rust Belt" during the long business slump has fueled sharp arguments about where jobs will come from in the future.

"Contrary to some popular reports, manufacturing industries will still be an important source of new jobs during the next decade. says the Bureau of Labor

Career opportunities expand in banking

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) - The financial services industry is changing dramatically, creating career opportunities for people with widely varied backgrounds, according to a Rhode Island banking personnel officer.

"Contrary to the rather narrow view some people have of this field, there is something in banking to appeal to a wide range of abilities and interests," says David J. Farley, senior vice president of personnel at Fleet National Bank in Providence.

"Business students may become research economists or financial analysts who chart and study trends affecting the banking business," Farley adds. "Technical school graduates are also in demand, due to the increased automation that has led to banking's technological revolution.

'From global-minded individuals who coordinate international banking to creative writers and artists who staff public relations and marketing departments, banking offers broad career choices.

Farley says that at a recent meeting of Fleet's department and subsidiary heads to discuss college recruiting needs, the "ideal recruit" for banking was described this way

"An individual with strong oral and written communications skills. a reasonable, outgoing personality, an ability to sell oneself, and a track record of success and leadership. Some managers mentioned a willingness to relocate; a few desired some accounting, business or data processing courses

"All were willing to hire liberal arts majors."

manufacturing, led by such industries as computers and instruments, is expected to account for one new job in six between now

That was the prospectus contained in a BLS report carried in the November 1983 edition of the Labor Department's "Monthly Labor Review.

In a speech last June to the International Personnel Management Association, however, Commissioner of Labor Statistics Janet L. Norwood said: "The effect of new technology on the future is difficult to quantify."

"There are those who believe that the move toward high-tech industries will solve all industrial adjustment problems," she said, "and there are those who believe that the new technology will create serious labor surpluses.

Just such a conclusion was reached by the AFL-CIO's Committee on the Evolution of

In an August 1983 report to the labor federation's policymaking executive council, the committee estimated that by 1990, there may be up to 100,000 robots and 20 million computers in use.

"As computers and robots take over more and more functions in the factory and the office," it said, 'a two-tiered work force is

"At the top will be a few executives, scientists and engineers, professionals and managers, performing high-level, creative, high-paid full-time jobs in a good work environment.... At the bottom will be low-paid workers performing relatively simple, low-skill, dull, routine, high-turnover jobs in a poor work environment," the AFL-CIO report

This doesn't worry Alan Schonberg, president of Management Recruiters International Inc. in Cleveland, a large talent-search organization, who said in an interview that "the demand for mid-management people has exploded.

But Schonberg acknowledged that this demand "is not in the industrial sector, it's in the service That's precisely the point that Barry Bluestone, a Boston College economist, made in a grim report last May, titled "Storm Clouds on of worker dislocation (in smokestack industries) in recent years were not shared equally by all Americans.

"Rather, they have fallen disproportionately on particular regions of the country, on urban areas, on minorities, and increasingly on the blue-collar middle-class," he said. "The fact that 63 percent of all the new jobs created in America between 1969 and 1982 were in industries paying an average annual wage of less than $12,500 spells real trouble for stability Bluestone's argument mirrors the AFL-CIO position that overall U.S. civilian employment, which is above 105 million, masks a trend in which new jobs, lower-paying, service-oriented jobs, are gradually supplanting the higher-wage jobs in manufacturing.

future political and economic

Sar Levitan, an economist at George Washington University here, scoffed at that

"We're going to have more and more jobs in secretarial and semi-skilled and common occupations," he said in an interview. But bevitan said he doesn't believe things are as bleak as Bluestone suggests and that Bluestone's study focused too heavily on the auto and steel industries.

"We have lost more jobs in apparel and textiles to Taiwan and Korea" than have disappeared in heavy manufacturing, Levitan maintained

But he, too, said the emergence of a high-technology economy would not solve U.S. employment problems.

Levitan said jobs in the high-technology field and related industries "will likely represent only a fraction of a percent of the jobs available" in the coming

News executives see little need for 'White House News Service'

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The White House doesn't need its own "news service" because it already tightly controls the public perception of President Reagan by restricting press access to him, some reporters and news executives say.

"I think the press has bent over backwards to be fair to this president," Sara Fritz, president of the White House Correspondents Association and a reporter for the Los Angeles Times, said Monday. "Look at it. He's gotten very, very good press coverage. He's credited with being a master of the media.

Ted M. Natt, editor and publisher of The Daily News in Longview, Wash., and immediate past president of the Associated Press Managing Editors Association, said the president's views are articulated through the media because the president's staffers "so carefully stage-manage that

Guerrillas lose headquarters

ARANYAPRATHET, Thailand (AP) — Outgunned Cambodian guerrillas gave up the last portionof their headquarters camp today after battling for two days against an overwhelming Vietnamese Fighters of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front were ordered at 11 a.m. to withdraw "to keep the KPNLF troops intact for further struggle," a statement from the resistance command said.

The command ordered the tactical withd-awal from the overrun camp near the Thai border to an undisclosed location for the purpose of "carrying out a more successful guerrilla struggle," the statement said.

The non-communist resistance fighters at Ampil had fought through Monday night and half the day today to hang on to one-quarter of the sprawling area that the Vietnamese troops had driven through Monday in one of the most intense battles in the six-year

Slop Bowl lives up to its name

FREEPORT, Texas (AP) - The Slop Bowl may not appeal to many people, but the 1,900-acre marsh is a haven for wildlife, conservationists say.

"It's almost impassable country. It's a mess to get through, but it's a tremendous habitat for waterfowl," Andrew Sansom, director of the conservancy, said in a recent interview.

Sun Exploration and Production Co. sold the Slop Bowl to the Texas Nature Conservancy after deciding the tract didn't suit the firm's exploration needs

A U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service study several years ago ranked the Slop Bowl as one of the state's most valuable marshes for conservation purposes, said Bill Hawthorne, assistant supervisor for national wildlife refuges in the area.

Sansom said the Slop Bowl will soon be open for birdwatchers. "It's an incredible birding location," he said.

Some of the species that spend winter in the area innclude mottled ducks, geese and sandhill cranes, said Ben Brown of the Texas Natural Heritage Program.

Sun Exploration sold the Slop Bowl and other tracts - a total of about 10,000 acres - to the conservancy for $750,000, but the land was worth about $7 million, Sansom said.

The firm first offered the land to the conservancy in 1982.

"The conservancy couldn't have asked for a better Christmas present," said Charles J. Hedlund, chairman of the board for the conservation group

"We'll manage it like most of our preserves - with volunteer labor," Sansom said. They'll do whatever needs to be done.

Senior Thai generals said earlier the guerrillas group had little hope of turning the tide against the Vietnamese, whose artillery kept pounding as the guerrillas fighters tried to regroup.

"Ampil has fallen. It fell yesterday," the Thai armed forces commander, Gen. Arthit Kamlang-ek, told reporters today.

Rebel fighters said Vietnamese units attempted a pincer from the north and south today and were met with strong resistance from the remaining defenders today before the pullout was ordered. Many of the estimated 5,000 non-communist guerrillas at Ampil fled across the Thai border Monday as tanks spearheaded the multi-pronged Vietnamese attack on positions already softened up by artillery bombardment.

Arthit told reporters in Bangkok that an A-37 fighter-bomber was scrambled today to attack Vietnamese intruders near Obok in Buriram province, but was shot down. Arthit gave no other details of the incursion.

Associated Press photographer Pichai Nippittavit, who was in Ampil when the Soviet-supplied T-54 tanks broke through Monday, said hundreds of the guerrillas fled across the nearby Thai border and took refuge in an anti-tank ditch.

Lt. Gen. Pichitr Kullavanijaya, commander of Thailand's 1st Army Region, said the defenders destroyed seven armored vehicles as they pulled back.

The assault coincided with Jan. 7 celebrations of the sixth anniversary of the Vietnamese capture of Phnom Penh and the installation of the pro-Hanoi Heng Samrin regime in Cambodia. In Bangkok, Khmer Liberation Front spokesman Abdul Gaffar said about 7,000 Vietnamese and Cambodian government troops were attacking Ampil, equipped with 27 tanks, other armored vehicles, and 18 artillery pieces.

The guerrilla forces have no tanks or artillery. The largest weapons in their arsenal are 82mm recoilless rifles. The defenders also relied on mortars, machine guns and B-40 rocket-propelled grenades. Individual guerrillas were armed mostly with AK-47 assault rifles.

Ampil, 175 miles east of Bangkok, was the Khmer Liberation Front headquarters camp and was the fifth camp to be overrun by the Vietnamese.

Authorities mystified by rich vagrant's death

TOTOWA, N.J. (AP) - Milton Naruta was a loner who just "quit the world," a quiet man whose rag-clothed body was found frozen in a fetal position in a desolate field. Clutched in his lifeless arms was a bag containing $75,000 in uncashed checks and investments.

Nobody can really explain why Naruta ended up the way he did. One friend says maybe the 65-year-old vagrant just saw too many people die young and 'couldn't cope.

For police in this suburban northern New Jersey town, the discovery of Naruta's body on Nov. 18 was the beginning of a search for relatives.

"It is intriguing to me why he would disassociate with other family members and why he wouldn't maintain normal responsibilities like updating insurance policies and cashing paychecks and keeping up with his union dues," said police Detective Daniel Ramm.

Next to Naruta's body, authorities found a small prayer book, a pocket notebook, an old Christmas card, uncashed paychecks, $183 in cash, U.S. savings bonds and a bank book for a money market account estimated to be worth $25,000.

There were also life insurance policies, papers with addresses written on them and soiled photographs. Police learned Naruta never applied for his Social Security benefits or his pension, which could be collected by heirs.

"He admitted he couldn't cope, said Michael Beerson of San Leandro, Calif., an old friend of Naruta. 'We had a lot of friends who died young, and I guess he never learned to handle it. I guess you could say he quit the world," said Beerson, who said he last talked to Naruta in the mid-1970s at a funeral of a mutual friend. "It speaks for itself the way they found Ramm said he has learned that a niece of Naruta lives in Greece and a nephew moved out of Brooklyn, N.Y., several years ago.

Police said that until March 1983, Naruta, a World War II veteran, worked as a truck loader for the S.B. Thomas Baking Co., where he was remembered by co-workers as a loner who only became talkative around World Series time.

He had a great love of baseball," said Ray Mooney, who supervised Naruta at the baking company. Naruta lived at the Ryle Park Hotel in West Paterson until January 1978 when a fire destroyed the rooming house. He was trapped for 21/2 hours inside the burning hotel before being rescued. From 1978 until May 1984, Naruta rented a small room at the YMCA in Paterson, said Joe Fuller, the YMCA residence director. On May 4, a year after he quit working, he took to the streets.

"He left on his own," said Fuller. 'He wouldn't take care of himself. He wouldn't be bothered.'

Deputy Attorney General Robert P. Krenkowitz said his office annually handles from 160 to 180 cases of people who have not left a will and have no close relatives claiming their inheritance.

Tip' O'Neill is never at a loss for words

By TOM RAUM Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - When Rep. Thomas P. O'Neill was re-elected to a fifth and final term as House speaker, his longtime adversary, Minority Leader Robert Michel, couldn't resist a golden opportunity to get in a dig.

By tradition, the vote for speaker at the start of each two-year session is by party-line vote. Running against O'Neill, as he has in the past sessions, was Michel.

O'Neill, of course, won hands down, since Democrats control the House 252 to 182 (with one

It is up to the loser in speaker's contests to preside briefly over the House to introduce the victor. That gave Michel a rare chance to wield the gavel and to transfer it to O'Neill, who has announced he will retire after his current term.

Michel used what was supposed to be a ceremonial occasion to get in a few partisan points, claiming that even though Republicans were in the minority, in the November congressional elections "there were only 40,000 more Democratic votes cast than Repubican votes."

That, suggested the Illinois Republican, "suggests a much more evenly divided American sentiment out there than is actually represented here by the numbers.'

Michel went on to lament his "loss" to O'Neill for the speakership. "If only we could have waged this contest out there on the golf course, I think I could have made it," he said.

allowed that "Bob gives me about eight or 10 strokes on the golf "But the interesting thing is that

O'Neill, never at a loss for words, shady or he interprets them wrong. That is quite all right, Bob." O'Neill then presented Michel with the gavel - also a tradition.

'We want you to have it for your mementos," the Massachusetts Democrat told Michel. "We always hope, of course, Bob, that in two years you will be in exactly the same position that you are in

Meanwhile, House Republicans are peeved that their representation on House committees doesn't always reflect their true ratio to Democrats in the overall chamber and are threatening to boycott most committees entirely.

The GOP panel charged with picking Republican members to committees, the 21-member Republican Executive Committee on Committees, has thus far refused to submit names of Republicans for most committees until and unless Democratic leaders create more GOP committee slots.

"We won't be bought off any more by the crumb of an additional seat here and there," said Rep. Jim Courter, R-N.J., an executive committee member. He said, if necessary, one Republican - and only one - will be sent to committees if they try to meet before the impasse is resolved.

However, Minority Leader Michel appears to be urging fellow Republicans to cool it, at least for

He is still negotiating with Democratic leaders on committee ratios and is hopeful things can be worked out without resorting to such dramatic tactics, said Michel spokesman Mike Johnson VAGRANT'S WEALTH—Detective Daniel Ramm with bonds and uncashed checks found beside vagrant's body near Totowa, N.J. Authorities tentatively identified the man as Milton Naruta, 65. Police found Naruta's body in mid-November in a wooded field with a plastic bag clutched in his arms. Inside the bag were various items and uncashed payroll checks, U.S. Savings Bonds and a $19,000 money market account passbook. Police discovered the man has been living in poverty while sheltering a sizable nest egg, now estimated at more than $75,000. (AP Laserphote)

City folk unsettled by isolation of Antarctic

By RICHARD BOUDREAUX

Associated Press Writer VILLA LAS ESTRELLAS, Antarctica (AP) - In search of adventure, Ana Maria Martino de Camacho gave up her nursing job, two servants and a spacious suburban home.

Next, she took a snow survival course in the Andes and moved her family to Antarctica to reinforce Chile's claims to a portion of the continent.

As the Camachos and five other air force families approached their ew base on King George Island ast March, a snowstorm turned heir transport plane back to South America. The colony's delayed start seemed an omen that hostile climate would rule its existence. But today, after a surprisingly mild first winter (low temperature: 1 above zero), the city-bred volunteers say they feel less unsettled by the cold than by the isolation and awkwardness of communal frontier life in this cluster of pre-fab houses called

Village of the Stars. To a recent visitor, Mrs. Camacho, 34, an ebullient, dark-haired woman, told how the willage's beauty and silence had provided the peace she needed to carry her third child, a son born Nov. 21, Chile's first native Antarctican. She also spoke of a new closeness with her husband and two older sons. Then she totaled up the price of escape from Santiago, Chile's smoggy, agitated capital: She misses fresh meat. Her children long for old playmates. The extended family so important to Chileans is broken up, since grandparents are left behind. Although she is surrounded by ice, water must be chemically treated and tightly rationed.

Mail and fresh produce are supposed to arrive monthly, but sometimes the vegetables freeze between the air strip and the oil-heated storehouse. Once all the eggs came broken. During two dark winter months the plane didn't come at all.

The discontent, at times, is too much for the little colony to contain. Raised voices are heard by everyone. The bickering can defy military discipline, Mrs. Camacho said, so some families simply avoid speaking to each

"The Chilean woman can adapt to anything," Mrs. Camacho said over tea in her small but comfortable white home on stilts, with tiny orange-framed windows and freezer doors. "But if they told me I could leave now, I would go back tomorrow to what I had."

Her sentiment is shared by other settlers, but the colony endures. When the original six families end their two-year assignments, air prce officials say, 20 more will be aking a turn here. The newcomers will have a new supermarket, a gym and two professional teachers for the one-room schoolhouse.

Under a 1961 treaty, which set the southern continent aside for peaceful purposes, Antarctic claims by seven nations were suspended for at least 30 years. Today 16 countries have year-round scientific stations in Antarctica, whose 6 million square miles of land form 10.3 percent of the world's land area. Europe, by contrast, occupies 3.3 percent of the global land area.

But only Chile and Argentina, whose wedge-shaped claims overlap, are using families with children to enhance those claims if the treaty ever expires.

"We are going to show we can maintain a village with a life practically like any that exists on the continent," said Hernan Huidobro, the air force colonel who runs the colonization campaign from Defense Ministry headquarters in Santiago.

So far, however, Chile's settlement, like a similar one maintained by up to eight Argentine families on the nearby Antarctic Peninsula since 1977, has failed to break an important psychological barrier.

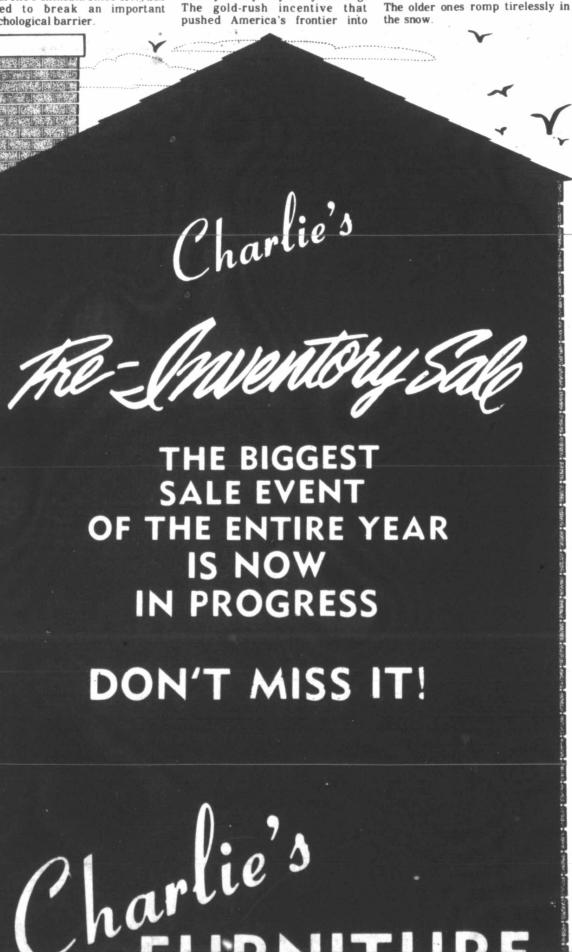

After 90 years of near-continuous exploration, Antarctica remains a remote white expanse where people go not to stay but only to visit, huddled in tiny clusters for a year or two at most, surviving on the knowledge they will return to a hospitable part of the world.

In interviews, the settlers talk about "the real world" back in Chile, where a third of the population lives in the capital. Some worry their children will fall behind in the highly competitive school system or be frightened by the city if they stay away too long.

similar latitudes of Alaska, they note, is absent here.

"I cannot see large numbers of people ever wanting to live here permanently," said Dr. German Camacho, an air force surgeon who volunteered for Antarctic duty out of a sense of patriotism. "It still sounds like science fiction to me."

Meanwhile, the innocent pawns of Chilean sovereignty, eight children aged 2 months to 8 years, wear bright-colored clothing so their mothers don't lose sight of them through the tiny windows.

The loss dropped Pampa to 1-2 in district play and 12-7 overall while Borger, whose only loss was to top-ranked Cleburne, takes the loop lead with a 2-0 mark.

The Harvesters took their only lead on the first bucket of the game - a rebounded shot by Dunivan Lewis - but the Bulldogs ran off the next 10 points, and Pampa spent the rest of the night playing catch up. Pampa almost did catch up, cutting the lead to three points seven times the second half, but the Bulldogs' 6-5 Anthony Jones and 6-2 Terry Whitcher had other ideas.

Jones canned 23 points and helped the taller Bulldogs control the boards. Whitcher had 15 points, including 11 in the second half to help hold off Harvester rallies.

Jones' three-point play midway in the fourth quarter gave Borger a five-point lead (45-39), and signaled the beginning of the end for the Harvesters, who never got any closer.

Rodney Young and Petey Davis led the Harvesters in scoring with 15 and 14 points respectively. Lewis and Jeff Gaines had eight and seven points respectively. Gaines had 11 rebounds for Pampa.

Both teams shot poorly from the floor and foul line, but the Bulldogs tenacious defense and their work on the boards proved to be the difference.

Pampa downed only 16 of 47 floor attempts (34.0 percent), including a 3 of 15 first-quarter which helped the Bulldogs roll to a 16-6 first-quarter bulge. Borger was 20 of 47 (42.5 percent) and was 3 of 8 from the floor and 0-4 from the foul line the second quarter when Pampa cut the gap to 22-17 at halftime. Both teams hit 50 percent of their foul shots with Borger hitting four more attempts than the

"We made a good run at them, but a couple of critical turnovers and not blocking out on rebounds hurt us," said Pampa coach Garland Nichols. "I thought we played them tough, but they had just a little too much size for us." In the girls' game, Pampa breezed to a 49-34 victory over

After leading by only 10-9 at the end of the first quarter, the Lady Harvesters applied a fullcourt press that held Borger to only two points and forced several turnovers in the second quarter.

Pampa led by 24-11 at halftime and then held off a Borger comeback in the second half as the Lady Bulldogs pulled within six, 38-32, with 4:19 to go in the game.

"I was real proud of the way the girls kept their composure," said Pampa coach Albert Nichols. "We coming back on us.'

Nichols said the turning point in the game was the second quarter, when Pampa held Borger to only a field goal.

"Our press really did a good job on them," Nichols added.

Kerri Richardson was Pampa's top scorer with 17 points. Rotounda Powell added nine points, while Jackie Reed had eight, Melissa Nichols, five; Dana Wood, four, and Melanie Morgan, two. Nichols led Pampa on the boards with nine rebounds Danyale Burse led Borger with 11 points.

Pampa girls also won the junior varsity game, 45-43. The JV girls are coached by Allison Ott.

Pampa's Shockers came from behind in the fourth quarter to edge Borger, 56-52, in the junior varsity Terry Jeffrey and Lonnie Mills had 17 and 16 points respectively, while Mike Lynn added 11. The Shockers are now 11-3 overall and 2-1 in district play. The Shockers had to overcome a poor night at the foul line, hitting only 18 shots in 43 trips.

"That was really an amazing thing about the game," said Shockers' coach Sparky Roberts. "We missed 25 fouls shots and still

"Our press really hurt them though. Our kids showed a lot of composure to come back and win."

Cowboys' Pearson may return

DALLAS (AP) - Drew Pearson, the all-time leading receiver for the Dallas Cowboys who was forced to end his 11-year career last July because of injuries suffered in an automobile accident, has indicated he may come out of retirement in 1985 if he is given medical clearance

"I played football for a long time. There's no question it is still in my system," Pearson said in an interview with a Dallas television station Monday night.

Pearson, who worked as an analyst for CBS's National Football League coverage last season, will be 34 on Saturday.

"I don't know if training camp, practices or coach (Tom) Landry's Monday meetings are in my system, but I still want to play. The desire is not dead yet, and that's because of the way it ended for me," Pearson told WFAA-TV.

The news caught Landry by surprise. But both he and general manager Tex Schramm said if Pearson is cleared by doctors to play and reports to training camp in good condition, he would be welcomed.

Without Pearson, the Cowboys finished 9-7 last season and missed the playoffs for the first time in a decade. No one came close to filling Pearson's shoes, and Landry said recently that getting a top receiver is the Cowboys' biggest need in the 1985 college draft. "Realistically, he has a chance. Drew is not someone who would get much out of shape," Landry said Monday night.

"But whether he can get back into playing condition, you never know. The older you are, the more difficult it is to come back. But sure, it's possible. We will listen if he is really serious about it.

He added, "He could help us in a lot of ways. He was a gifted receiver. If he is not overly concerned about how much he would play, it could work out. He was a great leader for us.'

Landry said he would insist that Pearson be given a green light from doctors.

"It would be foolish for him to play if there is any kind of doubt." Landry said.

Pearson fell asleep at the wheel on March 22, 1984 in Dallas while driving home shortly after he and other members of the Cowboys had returned home by bus from a basketball game they had played in. His younger brother, Carey, was killed, and Pearson was seriously injured.

His doctor refused to clear him for play last season because of a 7-centimeter hole in his liver.

Pearson said he has not met with his physician, Dr. Lee Bourland, or the Cowboys doctors to determine if his liver has healed. A year ago, Bourland had told him it would be mid-October of 1984 at the earliest before he could safely begin full-contact practices.

At the time of his retirement, Pearson said "At my age, I didn't feel I could realistically spend a year out of the game and expect to come back and play up to the standards I had set for myself."

But after hearing players and Landry say throughout last season how much he was missed, Pearson apparently began to give some thought to a comeback.

"The No. 1 thing that hurt the Dallas Cowboys offense last year was the loss of Drew Pearson. That made me feel good," Pearson saidin the television interview.

Schramm said, "If he gets a clean bill of health, I would like, nothing better than to have him,

Brock named to baseball hall of fame

NEW YORK (AP) Base-stealing king Lou Brock and knuckleballer Hoyt Wilhelm have joined the immortals in Baseball's Hall of Fame, but the late Nellie Fox was denied the honor in the closest of calls

Bing Devine, who was the St. Louis general manager in 1964 when Brock came to the Cardinals in a controversial trade with the Chicago Cubs, said he was not surprised Brock won election Monday night in his first year of eligibility.

"It would come as more of a surprise if he didn't than if he did," Devine said of Brock, whose 938 career stolen bases is a record.

"The Hall of Fame is getting kind of classy now that they have added Hoyt Wilhelm," said Bill Rigney, who managed the New York Giants and California Angels when the pitcher was on those clubs, and also was his teammate on the Giants.

"He was a solid guy and he was ready to pitch at any time . . . He was a manager's pitcher because of the way he went about his business," said Rigney.

Brock, the 15th player to win election in his first year of eligibility, "deserved it for everything he did," Devine said. "He was a hard worker. He worked very hard to become the expert base-stealer he was. The base-stealing is the dramatic thing all-around ballplayer.

Devine remembered Brock's ability to come through in the clutch, particularly the outstanding performances in three World Series with the Cardinals.

"He was as good as I've ever seen rising to the occasion,' Devine said. When he heard that Wilhelm had won election, Rigney, at his home in Walnut Grove, Calif., recalled the pitcher's first shot at the majors.

"The first year he came to us, which was '52, he almost didn't make the ballclub. I don't think Leo (Manager Leo Durocher) really thought that a knuckleballer could get the job done.

'He pitched that day against the Cubs in Mesa, Ariz., in an exhibition game," Rigney continued. "The butterfly was going all over the place, every which way. They couldn't hit it and we couldn't catch it. The only guy who could catch him really good was Wes Westrum.'

Brock was named on 315 of the 395 ballots cast - 79.5 percent. while Wilhelm, who pitched in the major leagues for 21 years and is the first reliever to be elected to the Hall, was named on 331 ballots -83.7 percent. Seventy-five percent of the total vote is required for election.

But Fox, a slick-fielding second baseman who died in 1975, failed to make it into the baseball shrine at Cooperstown, N.Y., by just two votes - the closest call in the history of the balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of Even an unprecedented appeal by officials of the BBWAA to the director of the Hall of Fame failed to get Fox through the doors in Cooperstown..

Stallings may leave Cowboys' staff

DALLAS (AP) - Gene Stallings, secondary coach of the Dallas Cowboys, has confirmed that he has talked with officials of the Indianapolis Colts about the team's vacant head coaching job.

Stallings said Monday night that he discussed the position with general manager Jimmy Irsay, son of owner Bob Irsay. He declined to comment about the meeting, however, saying "anything" about his connection to the job should come from the Colts, The Dallas Morning News

76ers win squeaker over Suns

By WIELIAM R. BARNARD

AP Sports Writer The Phoenix Suns knew they couldn't outrun the Philadelphia 76ers, so they slowed the game down and tried to outshoot them.

The strategy almost worked well enough to keep the 76ers from winning their eighth straight

"It was the only answer," Suns Coach John MacLeod said after his team's 100-99 loss in a National Basketball Association game Monday night. "We came in here last year and tried to run up and down with Philadelphia and fell behind by 30 points. We did not want them to start flying up and down the court."

The Suns hit 58.6 percent of their shots and held the 76ers to just 66 field-goal attempts, 20 under their average. But Philadelphia won by making 57.6 percent of its shots and outscoring the Suns 24-15 at the free throw line.

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Boston 108, New York 97; Dallas 102, Seattle 84; Kansas City 110, Golden State 101 and Los Angeles Clippers 116, Utah 106.

Phoenix often waited until only 10 seconds showed on the 24-second clock to start its offense. Time after time, the Suns scored just before the shot clock expired.

'What made it so effective was the way they shot the basketball,' 76ers Coach Billy Cunningham said. "With the shot clock running down they continued to make the big baskets." Celtics 108, Knicks 97

Boston, whose 29-6 record is a half-game better than Philadelphia's, got 26 second-half points from Larry Bird and 17 first-quarter points from Robert Parish to outlast New York.

Parish, who finished with 21 points, paced the Celtics to a 37-25 lead after the opening period, but Boston scored only 13 points in the second quarter as New York cut the deficit to 50-48 and kept Bird scoreless in the first half.

Bird, who finished with 10 rebounds and 10 assists, then hit nine of 11 shots in the second half to keep New York, which tied the score three times but never took the lead in the final two quarters,

Bernard King led the Knicks with 22 points, 11 under his league-leading average. Mavericks 102, Sonics 84

Dallas, despite playing without top rebounder and second-leading scorer Jay Vincent, beat Seattle in the Kingdome for the first time in 10 tries.

The Mavericks, who got 19 points each from Brad Davis and Rolando Blackman, scored the first 11 points of the game and the SuperSonics never caught up.

Kings 110, Warriors 101 Kansas City scored the last 13 points of the game to overtake Golden State and hand the Warriors their fourth straight loss.

Eric Floyd's field goal gave Golden State a 101-97 edge with 21/2 minutes left, but a pair of free throws by Mike Woodson, who led the Kings with 24 points, and two baskets by Eddie Johnson gave Kansas City the lead for good.

Purvis Short had 38 points for the Warriors to lead all scorers.

Clippers 116, Jazz 106 Los Angeles got 20 points from Marques Johnson and 19 from Derek Smith in its wire-to-wire victory over Utah.

The Clippers took a 33-19 lead after one quarter and the Jazz never caught up.

Utah was hampered with foul trouble by its center, NBA shot-blocking leader Mark Eaton, who played only 13 minutes before

Georgetown cagers still number 1

By JIM O'CONNELL AP Sports Writer

Georgetown, which was taken into overtime by Boston College. remained the No. 1 team in the Associated Press' college basketball poll today, but for the first time in a month, the Hoyas were not the unamimous choice.

Georgetown, 13-0, was forced into the extra session by Boston College before prevailing 82-80 Saturday and the defending national champions received 63 of the 64 first-place votes and 1,-279 points from the nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Duke, which held second place for the fourth consecutive week as it improved its record to 10-0, had the other first-place vote and 1,214 points

St. John's improved one place from last week as the Redmen were third with 1,101 points, followed by Southern Methodist. 1.049, and North Carolina, 987 Southern Methodist, 11-1, improved from seventh last week, while the Tar Heels, 10-1, jumped from ninth place.

Memphis State, which lost for the first time in 10 games last week when South Carolina edged it 60-58, was sixth with 937 points. The Tigers had been third in the balloting for the past three polls. Syracuse was seventh with 740 points, while Oklahoma, 632; Georgia Tech, 625; and Kansas, 613, round out the Top Ten.

Syracuse, which was fifth last week, also lost for the first time this season, 82-70 to Villanova. Oklahoma jumped from 13th last week, while Georgia Tech fell one place and Kansas improved one spot, despite losing one of its three games last week - 92-89 to Kentucky.

The Second Ten welcomed five new teams to the Top Twenty, two each from the Big East and Big Ten conferences and one from the

Indiana leads the way in the Second Ten, followed by Boston College, DePaul, Louisiana Tech, Illinois, Villanova, Michigan State, Virginia Commonwealth, Iowa and Oregon State.

Last week the Second Ten was: Kansas, Indiana, Oklahoma, Louisiana State, Washington, Michigan, North Carolina State, Louisiana Tech, Maryland and Virginia Commonwealth.

Boston College, 10-1, ignored by the voters in the first seven polls, caught the nation's eye with the overtime tussle with Georgetown. Like Boston College, Villanova, also a member of the Big East which has five ranked teams, was noticed after its convincing victory over then No. 5 Syracuse.

But the Wildcats stumbled in theor initial outing as a ranked club, dropping a 76-71 decision to St. John's Monday night.

Michigan State, 11-1, joined the Top Twenty after its seven-pointvictory over Indiana, while fellow Big Ten representative Iowa, 13-2, beat Illinois 64-60 Saturday and matched last season's victory total. Oregon State, 11-1 and a 52-45 winner over Washington, was the other new team to join the Top Twenty.

Falling from the ranks of the ranked after losses were Louisiana State, Washington, Michigan, North Carolina State and Maryland. North Carolina State, in fact, was beaten twice, by Maryland and Kentucky.

Sundberg may return to Rangers

ARLINGTON. Texas (AP) - contract demands, but none he Milwaukee Brewers catcher Jim considers outrageous. Sundberg said he'll have something to say by the end of the week regarding discussions with the Texas Rangers regarding a possible return to his old team.

"I didn't say it would be a decision. I said I'll have something for you," Sundberg said Monday in Arlington, where he has continued to live permanently despite the December 1983 trade that sent him to Milwaukee.

When the Rangers got rid of

Sundberg, Texas manager Doug

Rader had harsh words for him, and the wounds inflicted at that time have come into play in the recent talks between Sundberg and the Rangers. After half a dozen meetings with Texas Rangers owner Eddie Chiles, club President Mike Stone and General Manager Tom Grieve - all since a sit-down with Rader before Christmas that received heavy publicity locally - Sundberg said he is near a decision on whether he wants to return to the Rangers. 'The process is not completed yet," Sundberg said. "I should have something by the end of this week. There seems to be a question about whether the relationship is workable. There's been so many meetings and talks, I've lost track to do something like that," Grieve

Sundberg has two years left on the original contract he signed with

Texas, plus four years of deferred payments (two of which the Rangers are responsible for, even if he stays in Milwaukee). If he decides he would like to return to of them all.

"There's a lot of variables involved in the whole thing that I don't want to go into, ' Grieve said "What would make Jim feel comfortable coming back is what it boils down to. Certainly some (variables) involve Doug. "When Sunny left (a year ago in December), he had some pretty deep wounds," Grieve continued "He wants to be sure that his final answer is well-thought out. Sundberg's ultimate decision may be a moot point anyway. Even if he agrees to return, the Rangers and Brewers must get together on a trade and Grieve is not optimistic after several discussions with Milwaukee General Manager trade talks with Milwaukee, though I realize they were just preliminary," Grieve said. "I don't think we can meet their trade demands, unless they change. The Brewers are interested in packaging Sundberg with several secondary players (pitcher Bob McClure, outfielder Mark

"I'm not very encouraged by the Romero) in hopes of landing pitcher Danny Darwin and outfielder Gary Ward. 'We're just absolutely not going said. "I'd like to keep it as simple as possible. The more players that get involved, the higher quality

Brouhard, utility infielder Ed players they seem to want from "If we can get him back, that would be great," Rader said last week. "But if we have to give up

Texas, he will make some new too much, we can't do it. Period.' Cowboys' Breunig to retire

DALLAS (AP) - The Dallas Cowboys scheduled a news conference today to announce the retirement of 10-year veteran middle linebacker Bob Breunig. Breunig, a third-round draft choice in 1975 out of Arizona State, was only the third starting middle.

linebacker in the Cowboys' 25-year history. He started 117 straight games going into the last season, but developed severe back spasms after six games, which limited his play. Rookie Eugene Lockhart took over. Three times, Breunig was voted to the Pro Bowl. He led the Cowboys in tackles in six of the Bowl to Pittsburgh. In his second season, he became time called Breunig's transition "remarkable" and said it "was one of the reasons we were able to win past seven years and he served as defensive captain for the past four. Bruenig was one of the "dirty dozen" that the Cowboys drafted in 1975 who led them to a losing Super

a starting strongside linebacker and was converted to middle linebacker in 1977 to succeed retired Lee Roy Jordan. Dallas Coach Tom Landry at the our second Super Bowl (1978)."

Breunig had a team record 167

tackles in 1979.
