TODAY and TOMORROW

By WALTER LIPPMANN
The Right Direction

With the proposals of Speaker Garner to invest the President with extraordinary powers over expenditures, it may be said that the new administration has begun seriously to get down to business. It is true that Mr. Shell is shocked at the dictatorial powers which it is proposed to place in the hands of the President, and a word of caution may perhaps appropriately be injected by reminding the Speaker that in drafting his proposals it will be well to consult the best constitutional authorities in order to forestall a conflict with the courts at some later time. But in principle the proposals are not shocking. What is shocking is the tal with which any jeweler could make beautiful articles. Consequently, it kept its value through whatever upheaval society might suffer.

We have traveled a long way since then, however, Gold today isn't valuable because of those properties. Not one-thousandth of the gold that is mined ever finds its way to a goldsmith's, or ever will. No man, possessing a $30 gold piece in his pocket, ever reflects that if worse comes to worst he can always have the gold made into a neat pair of earrings and exchange them for food with the nearest major general.

Yet gold is still the base of our currency; and because it fluctuates in value just as any other commodity does, we get times like the present when our money system simply refuses to work the way it should.

This "electric dollar" of Dr. Norton's is at least a scheme that would bring our currency up to date. We would no longer finance a scientific age with money left over from the "early bronze age." This particular proposal may not, of course, be the one we want; but suggestions of this kind deserve a good deal of serious consideration.

Spreadable Butter

Commerce—particularly overseas commerce—is compounded of a thousand and one little factors which go to make up a complicated whole.

We have just been reading a dispatch from Auckland, New Zealand, and one of the countries "down under." The New Zealanders have been puzzled as to why the British housewives at home in England should at certain times of the year prefer Danish butter to the New Zealand variety.

A long investigation brought out that the preference went to Danish butter during the colder months of the year simply because of its "spreadability." English housewives must be sparing with their butter, which calls for very thing spreads on toast and otherwise. They discovered that butter from Denmark could be made go farther than the New Zealand variety.

Not to be stumped, the New Zealanders have now worked out a method of handling which makes their butter quite as spreadable as the Danish kind and pretty soon the Danes will discover that their butter sales in merry England have gone into a tailspin.

The battle for world trade has become just as bitterly competitive as all that.

What can be said against this strategy? It can be said that it is "dictatorial." But the word should frighten no one. The man in whom it is proposed to vest these dictatorial powers has just received a mandate from the voters. He can exercise no special powers that Congress and the caucus do not grant him. He is bound by the Constitution as the courts interpret it. His party must face the electorate in less than two years. If ever the circumstances were such as to justify a resort to extraordinary powers under popular government, those circumstances now exist. All the safeguards of criticism would remain; all that would be suspended would be the power of Congress to delay and to obstruct.

To those who object that such powers should not be vested in the Executive the proper answer is that the will of the people, as expressed by their votes, cannot be made effective if minorities, special interests, factions, and private influence are allowed to take advantage of the procedure of Congress to nullify the will of the people. Under ordinary conditions it is no doubt best to legislate slowly; after every effort has been made to persuade all the diverse interests affected. But under conditions like these it is necessary to legislate promptly enough to produce results before another winter arrives. There is not time to persuade everybody. Time is the essence of the matter for delay is equivalent to defeat.

Speaker Garner, acting as we may suppose for the President-elect, has taken hold of the situation at the right point. The problem before the country is not how to devise a program. The problem is how to put that program through Congress without unnecessary delay. That is the problem which has to be solved if any other problem is to be solved, and there is

Nervous Condition Improved After Woman Took Cardui

"I found myself in a weak, run-down condition, and very nervous, so much so that at times I felt like I wanted to scream," writes Mrs. J. T. E. Thomas, of Spartanburg, S. C. "The least noise would make me tremble and feel weak and nervous. I read where Cardui had helped other weak women, and decided to try it myself. I felt better after I began taking Cardui, and decided to keep it up. I took six bottles in all, and I was in a better condition after taking Cardui. My nerves were more settled."

Cardui, the purely vegetable medicine which so many women take and recommend, is sold by local druggists.

Young Couple Honored By Nice Shower

The Young People of the First Christian Church entertained with a Valentine party and shower for Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Bell, newly married couple. The party was held in the parlors of the First Christian church.

Each guest was given admission upon the presentation of a potato. Miss Flora Bell Williamson acted as hostess for the evening. Among the many games played were "Do What You Are Asked," "Exchanging Compliments," "Fortune game with Valentine Wheel," "Broken Heart Puzzle."

Miss Williamson was awarded a large box of candy by being elected Valentine Queen for the evening. Each one was given a key with a number to open the queen's heart. Mrs. Lindley won the lucky number and opened the queen's heart. A prize was awarded a Valentine box of candy.

At the conclusion of the games, the honorees were selected to follow the string of the rainbow. At the end of the rainbow, they found a pot of gold which happened to be a sack of potatoes. By the side of the potatoes, they found a note directing them to a large box, containing presents from their many friends.

When the guests had looked at the presents, they were invited to the banquet room, decorated with Valentine. J. H. Smith acted as toast master for the evening. Comical jokes, pep talks, song songs and special music kept the banquet room filled with laughter.

Hot coffee and Valentine's were served with jello and whipped cream to the following persons: Miss Flora Bell Williamson, hostess; Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Bell, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Creath; Misses Mary Alice Leslie, Ina Deason, Mildred Creth, Faye Runyan, Marian Gregory, Pauline Hart, Ruth Cotton, Louise Squires, Lou Ella Woodson, Arminia Popejoy, Ruth Dodson, Mozelle Stevenson, Marguerite Watson, Ruth Bugge, Messrs. SPOTLIGHT

CHAPTER XXXVI

The company arrived in Houston this morning. Sheila found the little note on her desk on last year's birthday. She remembered that in Houston Jappy had had a sign that a precious possession and a stagehand had found it. The two girls had discovered a dressmaker there to remodel some of their frocks.

Sunday, the first day in town, dawned in a rain. There was no Sunday performance and Sheila did not venture out of her hotel room except for a walk in the late afternoon. She gave herself a shampoo and a manicure. She wrote a long letter to Jappy, out of a job now, and enclosed a bill. Monday was uneventful. Preparations for the evening show kept the company busy. The performance passed without a hitch. "You're looking fine tonight," the comedian told Sheila, the next evening. "I believe you've fallen in love."

"Something like that."

"Glad, what is like this?"

Fifteen minutes after the final curtain Sheila was back in her room at the hotel. The clock in its little green leather case on the dressing table pointed to 11:30. Almost any time now the telephone might ring. Jerry had said he would telephone Tuesday after the performance.

Sheila undressed, bathed, brushed her hair and slipped into pajamas. The telephone stood beside the bed and she threw herself down on the pillow, she watched it, glowing, black and silent.

A wonderful thing—a telephone! Through its medium she would soon, in spite of the miles between them, hear Jerry's voice. She could imagine him smiling at her, thrill to the tenderness of his tone, if only the call would come.

The other members of the company were having a party somewhere. Maybe the telephone operator thought Sheila was with them and would not put the call thru.

Sheila took down the receiver and instantly the operator's voice responded, "Number, please?"

Sheila said, "This is Miss Shayne. If there is a message for me I'll be here in my room."

"Yes, Miss Shayne."

Some explanation seemed necessary. Feeling rather foolish, Sheila continued, "I had planned to remain later at the theater. I thought perhaps someone might have asked you to transfer a call."

"If there's a call I'll ring you, Miss Shayne."

Well, the operator had probably encountered anxious guests over the wire before. "You'll ring me right away?" Sheila urged.

"Of course, Miss Shayne. I'll see that the message reaches you." Sheila put down the telephone. Fifteen minutes passed without interruption. She decided to try to read the magazine she selected proved uninteresting. Why did magazine stories always turn out well when life was an unkind? Why didn't Jerry call?

The hands of the clock pointed to 12 o'clock now. Maybe if she counted off the seconds they would pass more quickly. Maybe if she had something to eat, occupied herself at something like arranging the dresser, drawers, time would go more quickly.

Taking up the telephone again, Sheila asked for room service and ordered milk toast and tea sent up. It occurred to her that Jerry might have been on the wire while she was giving the order. Well, that would be all right. She did not want him to guess how anxious she was. When the telephone did ring she would count 10 before she took down the receiver. She would make her voice sound casual.

"That's right—you did say you'd call!" She would say that to Jerry and pretend to be surprised.

The little clock ticked away for another quarter of an hour. Then there was a light knock at the door. Springing to open it, Sheila confronted the waiter, a carefully laid table serving from the tray. She smiled in amazement, then understood.

"Put it down there," Sheila said, smiling.

Taking a coin from her purse, she gave it to the man, scribbling her name at the foot of the bill he proffered. Tea and toast with a little silver pitcher of hot milk. If she ate slowly, drank the tea in sips, it would help the time to pass. Why, oh why, didn't Jerry's call come?

Twelve-thirty arrived and then one o'clock. The telephone maintained its sullen silence. Sheila remembered then that Jerry had said he might not call her. He said that he would be sure to come Wednesday whether he talked to her again or no. That was it. He was coming anyhow. More than likely he had been delayed, thought that a message would disturb her, and decided not to call. She snapped the light and needed beneath the soft down quilt. If she were to drop off to sleep would she hear the telephone ring? Better not chance it. Sheila turned on the light, arose and moved about the room. Finally she sat down at the little desk.

She would write letters. But to whom? Not to Jappy because she had sent her a note on Sunday. Not to Myrt. There was nothing she could say to Myrt in such a mood. Besides Myrt owed her two letters. She must write to someone, though. Must keep herself busy.

Suddenly Sheila drew a sheet of paper toward her. "Dear Dick," she began, "How is the second act coming?"

Jerry Wyman did not telephone nor did he appear at the theater the following evening. Sheila tried desperately to conceal the hurt in her heart. She reproached herself for her foolishness, worked harder, made every effort to forget.

The tour continued with good weeks and bad. The weeks stretched into months and still Sheila did not hear from Jerry. There was no way she could have heard from him because he would not know how to reach her.

The company reached the middle-west, circled and headed toward New York again. Then the bookings were cut short and presently they were back there.

On the first day in Manhattan Sheila met Jappy tripping along 48th street. Jappy said that Tommy Slocum was holding a try-out at the Holyoak Club. Did Sheila want to come along?

"I'm resting," Sheila smiled. "Going to look around room, though."

"I didn't think you'd be interested in this job," Jappy admitted. "Just wanted to do Tommy a good turn."

"Then take the job yourself," Jappy laughed a little bitterly at his. "Sure. If I get the chance!" They walked along together past the City school, the laundries, intermingled with garish doors of night clubs, silent and gloomy at mid-day.

"How was the boy friend of last year?" asked Jappy idly. "The one who gave you such a rush in Spencer?"

"You mean Jerry Wyman?"

"That's the one. You know I thought he was really serious. For a while I thought you were serious about him, too."

Jappy's level eyes were on her friend. Sheila carefully shifted her gaze, and looked across the street.

"Jerry was a nice boy," she answered finally.

They walked on. Presently Jappy's hand closed over the other girl's. Their eyes did not meet but

Radford Company Handed For Fiftieth Year By Founder

ABILENE—Prices to retailers in food lines were reduced 15 to 20 per cent last year under 1933, with reduction in money volume of 30 to 15 per cent, in spite of which the J. M. Radford Grocery company "came out on the right side of the ledger," it was revealed yesterday in the annual meeting of Radford company stockholders.

Stockholders met in the golden anniversary session. The business was established in Abilene 50 years ago, and has become one of the great wholesale grocery concerns of the South. Home offices always have been maintained here.

Reelect Radford

The founder, J. M. Radford, was re-elected to the presidency, and his son, O. E. Radford, was again elected vice-president and general manager. Other officers re-elected were Rupert Harkrider, secretary, and H. M. Harrison, treasurer. These four, with the following three others were re-elected to the board of directors: Oscar Clitt, CEO; R. E. McDonald, Stamford; Joe Burgess, Alpine. The last three named are branch house managers.

The J. M. Radford company, in company with all other businesses regardless of character, grappled with many trying problems during 1932, but, in spite of difficulties, "came out on the right side of the ledger," O. E. Radford, son of the founder, told the Reporter.

"We have no complaint as to their steps traced together perfectly."

"Let's go inside here, Sheila," Jappy indicated a coffee shop just ahead. "I've got something to tell you, honey, before someone else does."

She drew the other girl after her into a tiny shop and ordered coffee for two.

"Listen, Sheila," Jappy began slowly. "You've got to know this. Jerry Wyman is married and has been for three months. That girl you saw him with last summer—the one he said was his sister—well, she's Mrs. Wyman now. I thought, I'd better tell you, but—oh, please, Sheila—don't look like that!"

PRESIDENT-ELECT—

We had gone a couple of blocks he was afraid Cermak would not last.

Got His Pulse
"I, too, was fearful. Just then Cermak straightened up and I got his pulse. That was surprising. For three blocks I actually believe his heart had stopped.

"I held him all the way to the hospital and his pulse constantly improved. It seemed like 25 miles to the hospital. I talked to him all the way. I remember I said 'Tony don't move—keep quiet—it won't hurt if you keep quiet and remain perfectly still!'

"I found that a bullet—the one probably that hit Cermak—grazed the top of Clark's hand. His hand was all bloody and scratched.

"You know I knew Bill Sinnott. I kidded him at the hospital this morning and told him they couldn't hurt him with a bullet in the head. It would just bounce off. I left orders for them to starve him and take off at least 10 pounds."

Worried Over Salaries

Mayor Cermak appeared "more worried over the teachers' salary situation in Chicago" than over his own critical condition, Roosevelt said.

He described his visit to the bedside of the Chicago mayor and commented on Cermak's worry over the financial situation in his city.

The president-elect told his graphic story as his special roared northward over the Florida East Coast railroad.

When the train reached Palm Beach and stopped for a few minutes John McCooey, veteran democratic leader of Brooklyn, boarded for a brief but earnest conference.

strong possibility for the navy portfolio in the Roosevelt cabinet, also seems ahead.

Of the 25,000 persons who crowded around the bandstand to welcome Mr. Roosevelt, only a few hundred were in a position actually to see Zangara fire. And, characteristically, no two agreed exactly on what happened.

Other Eye Witnesses

The man whose view was nearest like that of Mr. Roosevelt and Mayor Cermak was William Wood, member of the Dade county, Florida, democratic committee. He was standing beside Cermak, on the side toward Zangara, when the shots were fired. The bullet which hit Cermak must have missed Wood.

"I was holding a lapel microphone, passing over a cable for a radio announcer, when the shooting began," Wood said.

"The first shot went over my shoulder just as the president-elect reached over another man to shake hands with Mayor Cermak and remark jovially, 'hello, Tony.'"

"A cameraman had just cried 'action' as a signal to other photographers.

"Then the shots rang out," Roy A. Dohs, Johnson City, N. Y., said he was seated directly behind Zangara in the temporary stands erected near the bandstand.

Sw Assassin Elze

"As Mr. Roosevelt sat down, I saw the would-be assassin half rise and shoot from just above his hip between the heads of those in front of us," he said. "From this position, he fired two shots. Someone grabbed at his arm. He climbed on a chair as other shots were fired. Then a woman tackled him around the knees. The chair collapsed and the police came.

Mrs. Kathleen Dunbar was sitting just in front of Zangara. Dr. Carl Deederer of Miami was beside her.

"The floodlights were so strong they blinded me, and I turned my head away from the Roosevelt automobile," she said. "I looked around just in time to see the man aim his gun. I saw the flash of the shots. Dr. Deederer was the first to attempt to subdue him, and then the crowd closed in around him."

Dr. R. C. Woodward, superintendent of the hospital, met the president-elect at the entrance Thursday morning, and escorted him to the room where Chicago's mayor was resting.

Yield Hospital

Mr. Roosevelt was wheeled into the room, and going to the mayor's bedside, remained with him for about five minutes, speaking words of comfort and encouragement.

At the end of his brief chat, he was taken to the second floor where Mrs. Joseph E. Gill, also critically wounded, was lying.

Mrs. Gill had undergone a blood transfusion only a few moments before the president-elect made his appearance in her room. But she was conscious when Mr. Roosevelt was wheeled through the entrance, and smiled weakly at him as he offered expressions of sympathy and hope.

Encouraged by medical reports of the victim's condition, the president-elect decided to return to New York by train at 10:15 a. m.

Before leaving the hospital, however, he insisted upon visiting the three other persons suffering from bullet wounds intended for himself.

Other Patients

These hospital patients were Miss Margaret Krulis, of Newark, N. J., suffering from a scalp wound; William Sinnott, of the New York detective force, who has a bullet wound in the head, and Russell Caldwell, 22, who is suffering from a slight flesh wound.

Passing down the hospital corridors, Mr. Roosevelt waved cheerfully to the patients who were able to sit up and see him, and emerged to receive a greeting from crowds lining the driveway.

The president-elect and his party were then driven rapidly to the train, scheduled to leave within half an hour for the north.

In the last hours of his stay in Miami, he learned of the courageous action of Mrs. W. L. Cross, wife of a Miami physician, who seized the would-be killer's arm as he was pumping shots at the Roosevelt party, and deflected the bullets from their course.

Mrs. Cross, who pitted her 100 pounds against the armed maniac, was credited by police with having prevented injury and perhaps death of the next president.

Informality

There was an air of informality in the hospital from the moment Mr. Roosevelt passed up his palm-fringed walks and entered the open door, where a large staff of resident physicians greeted him.

Every patient able to leave his bed, or to sit up, waved to the president-elect as he was wheeled along the corridor to the pavilion where Mayor Cermak was lying.

As he reached the side of the mayor, Mr. Roosevelt looked down and smiled. "You look fine," he said. "I hope you will be back on your feet soon—certainly in time for the inauguration."

The physicians giving Mrs. Gill a blood transfusion just as the president-elect entered never stopped their work. Mr. Roosevelt watched silently, and then uttered a brief expression of hope.

Ten minutes later he was on his way out to the car, which was driven rapidly to the station.

For a moment, arriving at the railroad station, he stood on the rear platform of his private car which was crowded with detectives and uniformed policemen, and waved his hand to the crowd.

COMMISSION—

know the full facts. In the early part of last year certain counties made known to Cose Johnson, a member of the highway commission, that the bank in which their funds were deposited was in such condition that the counties were unable to meet their obligations to the highway department. After consultation with the county judges of those counties and the attorney general's department, Mr. Johnson made an arrangement by which the counties were to deposit in escrow for the security of the highway department the collateral which their depository bank had placed with the counties as security for county deposits. The only other alternative was to demand that the counties proceed against their depository bank and sell out at a sacrifice the securities which the depository bank had placed with counties for depository county funds.

Serious Loss

"This would have entailed a serious loss to the counties. The highway department had nothing to do with the sale of the county bonds or selection of the depository of these several counties, nor with the selection or approval of the collateral which the depository bank placed with the counties to secure the county funds.

The collateral held by these counties is as good now as it was then and we are informed it is of the type and kind which the law requires a county depository to pledge as security for county funds. If these securities had been sold then or if sold now it would result in heavy losses to the taxpayers of these twenty-odd counties. When we learned of Mr. Johnson's arrangement with the counties we approved it then and we approve it now, and are perfectly willing to be held personally and officially responsible for the arrangement which he made. We think it was wise and that it was a proper thing to be done, and we accept full responsibility for it. The state of Texas has not lost and cannot lose one penny by reason of this arrangement."

"Since that time, the legislature has wisely provided that the state cannot call on counties for further contributions on highway construction and has arranged to repay to the counties the money which they have put into state highway construction.

If Collected Then

"If this money had been collected from the counties at the time, the state under the law would now

Beware the Cough or Cold that Hangs On

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Cromulsion, an emulsion of croceol, that is pleasant to take. Cromulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, croceol is recognized by high authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Cromulsion contains, in addition to croceol, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the croceol goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Cromulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for soothing the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (Adv.)

Cameron County Farmers Strike Leader Gathers Forces For 'Big Push'

HARLINGEN (UP).—Col. C. W. Hill, chairman of the Cameron County Producers Association, marshaled his forces for the zero hour in the lower Rio Grande strike for higher vegetable prices.

"The zero hour is here," said Colonel Hill in urging members to call upon farmers who are not complying with the appeal to leave crops unharvested until scale prices of producers are met.

SENATOR—

She said these men on conversation "afraid in substance the facts set forth in my message."

Rules of Procedure

Rules of procedure for the inquiry were adopted before the senate resolved itself into a committee of the whole. Both Governor Ferguson and the highway commission will be allowed counsel if they desire it. The attorney general will be asked to advise the senate and will be privileged to question witnesses.

The committee of the whole was empowered to subpoena witnesses from anywhere in the state and to compel them to bring books or records. The committee was given the powers of a district court in punishing for contempt.

W. R. Ely of Abilene, chairman, and D. K. Martin of San Antonio, members of the highway commission, were here to defend the commission's actions. It was expected that they would be among the first witnesses.

be repaying to those counties this same money.

"No one is short. No one has been hurt; but, on the contrary, the counties have been saved serious losses by reason of the wise and business-like arrangement for which Mr. Johnson is entitled to credit and for which we assume full responsibility.

"The state paid for these highways in conformity with its now established policy. The state has completed the highways and the people are now using them.

"We have nothing to conceal and nothing to fear. Our records are open to the public and are available to the committee, and we welcome the fullest investigation."

When yesterday might as well be marked 'B.C.' and tomorrow is pushing impatiently to prove today passe. Now is the time for every one to be informed... to know what is going on—not merely in the political, social, and athletic world—but in the business and commercial world as well.

Bulldog Gift For Cermak Consigned Via American Airways, Ordered Delayed

Shipment via American Airways of a fine bulldog, consigned to Mayor Anton Cermak of Chicago, was delayed Thursday because of the wounding of Cermak in the attempted assassination of President-elect Roosevelt.

The local American Airways station at the airport was informed by radio Thursday shipment of the dog would be delayed.

COUNTY JUDGES CALLED

COLEMAN (UP).—West Texas county judges were called to meet March 24 and 25 at Wichita Falls, Judge A. O. Newman of this city, who is president of the West Texas County Judges Association, issued the call.

Earlier convention of members will be held due to important legislation, now pending before the legislature, affecting the counties, Judge Newman said.

Earnings—

Twenty-five out of 200 companies which have issued 1932 statements show increased profits for that year over 1931. Twelve others show smaller losses. In sum, 18% of companies reporting to date did better last year than the year before.

The largest companies to show increased profits are Standard Brands (Morgan) and Atlantic Refining (Rockefeller). Curiously there are two railroads on the list—Bangor & Aroostook and New York, Ontario and Western. Butler Brothers, Baldwin Locomotive and Pacific Mills were among those to reduce their losses.

Quite a few companies did nearly as well in 1932 as in 1931. This list includes Chesapeake & Ohio, National Biscuit, Public Service of New Jersey, Liggett and Myers and Reynolds Tobacco.

Tobacco—

The Wall Street whisper has it that American Can is dickering with the big four tobacco companies to supply them with new tin containers of 25 cigarette capacity. The long rumored price cut may come about this way. It is worth noting that the manufacturers have used up their high-priced tobacco stocks and can now take advantage of the lower prices prevailing in the last two years.

Republicans—

The Republican Assembly caucus at Albany came within a whisker of taking a vote of confidence on State Chairman Macy's leadership. If this had happened it would have ousted the Republican majority in the Assembly wide open. It was headed off by snappy work on the part of Speaker McGinnies who saw his own job endangered. But this scrap is bound to come to life again soon.

Several prominent Wall Street men are making frantic efforts to organize a big celebration on March 4th either at New York or as part of the inaugural festivities in DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UP)—Those young men who have a hankering for meteorology but who cannot afford a year or two at a first class observatory should attend an attempt upon the world's land speed record such as Sir Malcolm Campbell is now making.

Two weeks here, and you become the complete meteorologist. As the condition of the beach depends entirely upon the weather, the natives from the mayor to the bootlegger, talk of nothing else. You soon learn all about the tides, the wind and the moon.

We have been here only ten days or so, but we feel perfectly capable of taking over any weather bureau in the country and running it without a hitch. What is more, the bureau we took over wouldn't need any expensive equipment, so adept have we become at interpreting nature's signs.

Take the wind for example. We will take the wind because it is the most important item, not excepting the driver, at a speed trial.

Unless the wind comes from the northeast the beach never will become packed and smooth.

All we need to read the wind is a palm tree and an index finger. We hadn't been in Daytona Beach half an hour before some thoughtful citizen advised us to waste no time in securing a palm tree. It seems that the moment the town learns a driver is coming for a record run, each citizen gallops out and stakes a claim on a palm tree with which to gauge the wind.

Once a man claims a tree for his own, it is the best we could get without going outside the county. Four times a day, 4 a. m., 8 a. m., noon and midnight, we visit our palm and study its swaying branches to determine where the wind is coming from. As a check against the tree, we are continually wiggling our index finger and peking it into the air after the manner of a man hailing a taxi.

Tomorrow we will tell you about the moon and the tides, and why Kate Smith hasn't one chance in a million of ever getting the four over the mountain.

John McCormack To Appear February 24 In Abilene Concert

ABILENE—John McCormack, celebrated Irish tenor, will sing in concert at the Simmons university auditorium here on the evening of Friday, February 24, it is announced by the Simmons university artist course, sponsors of the attraction.

McCormack is now in his sixteenth season of singing in America and other countries. He began his transcontinental tour at Boston with a concert on January 15 and will wind up on the Pacific coast shortly before Easter. He is appearing in only two or three Texas cities.

Called by many "the world's most beloved tenor," McCormack is famous for the heart-appeal of his singing, which nevertheless is characterized most artistically cultivated of the present generation. McCormack can sing Mozart and Irish folk songs in the same program and do both well. His appeal was shown in a concert in New York City last spring—his 130th concert in the metropolis—when he sang before a packed house in Carnegie hall. Not only was every seat taken, but chairs had to be placed on the stage.

Tickets for the concert have been on sale several days, and, according to the local direction, are going at a fast rate.

Sadler To Bring New Plays To Big Spring

Harley Sadler, who has been called the Belasco of West Texas, brings a new idea in the presentation of stage plays when he brings his new company to the Municipal Auditorium next week. Every part of his show reflects the influence of the new show world.

A great many people are of the opinion that a tent show in West Texas isn't supposed to be listed among the best in the country and are only traveling this territory for a general amusement of those who care to attend, but if you could be carried to the dramatic centers of the east, you would be greatly surprised. Mr. Sadler is as well known in Kansas City, Chicago and New York as he is in West Texas and is held in such high esteem by show people that when Ethel Brymore resigned her position as vice president of Equity Actors association and went to California to join her famous brothers, John and Lionel, Mr. Sadler was selected to fill her place.

All of the plays to be presented in Big Spring next week are new and are from some of the best authors of stage plays now writing. These stories have been cut right down to the best there are in them and make the action fast and full of fire without the least bit of drag. All the players in the new company have been selected for their particular ability to portray certain types of roles. Mr. Sadler will of course handle all the major comedy roles in his own inimitable way.

Tulia Officers Gather Evidence In Chief's Death

TULIA (UP)—L. G. McDonald, chief deputy sheriff of Swisher county, said he had positive evidence to convict John (Perch Mo-h) Stanton and Glen Hunsucker as slayers of John C. Moseley, late sheriff shot down in January by two men here.

Stanton and Hunsucker, accused at Deatur of killing Deputy Sheriff Joe Brown of Rhome, were charged here ten days ago with murder of Moseley but the charges remained secret until publication of circulars offering $2,000 reward for their capture.

McDonald said "we have positive evidence to convict them of murdering the Swisher county sheriff if caught. There is no doubt about it." He said he had no indication where the men are now hiding.

Castro county commissioners yesterday added $100 to the reward for apprehension of the Moseley slayers.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UP)—A possible maximum penitentiary sentence of 100 years could be imposed upon Giuseppe Zangara, who attempted to assassinate President-elect Roosevelt at Miami, Cary D. Landis, attorney general of Florida, said.

"Death in the electric chair is reserved for outright murder and for criminal assault in Florida," Landis told the United Press, "but for attempting to murder, twenty years' imprisonment is the maximum."

"With five persons shot by Zangara, he could be sentenced to 20 years each."

A Feeling of Security-- When You Return to a Brilliantly Lighted Home

It certainly makes you feel safer and more secure to know that you and your family will return to a brightly lighted home. Shadows and dark places offer perfect hiding places for prowlers and violence and crime are prevalent today in poorly lighted communities and around poorly lighted homes.
