Wheeler water district ponders next move

By CATHY SPAULDING Staff Writer

WHEELER - With no Sweetwater Creek Reservoir to aim for, members of the Wheeler County Water District board spent Tuesday afternoon wondering what to do next.

The future of the reservoir project was cut short Saturday when Wheeler County voters turned down a $30 million bond issue to fund construction and maintenance of the proposed 2,500 lake. The final vote tally was 886 votes for the measure to 1.027 against

The board certified the votes at a special meeting Tuesday at the Wheeler County Courthouse.

According to the official results, 41 percent of the registered Wheeler County voters turned out for the election. The issue passed in three precincts: west Shamrock, 106 to 87; east Shamrock, 259 to 187, and Heald, a community west of Shamrock, 22 to 21.

Mobeetie voters rejected the issue, 47 to 63

Wheeler followed suit, 178 to 200. Other precincts voting no were: Stanley, 129 to 196; Allison, 37 to 83; Lela, 22 to 30; Twitty, 24 to 55 and absentee, 62 to 105.

The controversial lake proposal — to build a dam on Sweetwater Creek northeast of Wheeler produced emotional debates from both sides. The lake issue failed in two previous elections, although in the latest election in August, voters approved construction of the lake but denied a maintenance

As a result of the controversy, vocal proponents and opponents packed the Wheeler County Commission office each time the water board met. But not this time. With only two representatives of the media, a representative from the archetectural firm of Parkhill, Smith and Cooper, bond consultant Kenneth Smith and lake opponent Tom Puryear sitting quietly by, the water board members discussed the negative results of the election and what they'll do next.

Newly selected board chairman Harrison Hall said he wanted to meet with state water experts to assess the water supply in the county.

"We're put here for one purpose and that's to find water," he declared, suggesting that they get a state agency - perhaps the Texas Department of Water Resources - to make a survey of ground water supplies in the county.

Hall said that lake opponents were giving people the impression that water is in abundance in the county. He questioned opponents' figures on water supply which were drawn from computer models of ground water supply made early in 1984 by the TDWR. The agency released its findings that summer in its Report 288. Using water tables from 1960 and 1980, the report projects 8.31 million acre feet of ground water supply for the year 2030

This contradicts an earlier report by the agency a report which lake proponents used - which projected a drop to 680,000 acre feet of ground water for 2030

Bond consultant Kenneth Smith, who prepared the $30 million bond package for the board in December, agreed that Report 288's findings were doubtful. TWDR report 288 is based on computer models and is not valid." he said.

Board member Melvin May of Mobeetie said some counties south of Wheeler are "already out of water" although the state projected a water supply unitl 2030

'We do need some more information," he concluded

Puryear suggested that the board can use the resources of Austin engineer Terrence Graham, who prepared a feasibility study of the lake project and the county water supply for the lake opponents.

Board members agreed to look at Graham's study. Hall suggested the board find an engineer that can be trusted by both sides.

'84 inflation just 4 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices rose a restrained 4 percent in 1984, giving the country its best three-year inflation rate since the late 1960s, the government said today

Last year's increase, which reflected an across-the-board price moderation, was only a slight deterioration from the 3.8 percent inflation rate of 1983, the lowest in more than a decade. Prices had risen 3.9 percent in 1982.

When last year began, most analysts were predicting prices would rise around 5 percent as the economy waged its second year of recovery from the recession. Despite the strongest economic growth in three decades, however, inflation came in a full 1 percentage point under expectations.

Now, analysts predict more widespread price moderation in 1985.

'We don't really see any significant price increases in any of the categories," said Donald Ratajczak, head of the economic forecasting unit at Georgia State University.

"The world trend in inflation is downward and our trend is even stronger because of the dollar

Today's report was the second round of good inflation news in 24 hours. On Tuesday, using a different method of calculation, the Commerce Department put last year's inflation rate at 3.7 percent — the best showing for that index since Today's Labor Department report said prices rose a small 0.2 percent in December.

Army's chief charged with Aquino killing

MANILA, Philippines (AP) = Agovernment prosecutor today charged the armed forces chief, Gen. Fabian C. Ver, two generals and 23 other men in the double murder of Benigno Aquino and the man the army claimed killed the opposition leader.

The assassination of Aquino on Aug. 21, 1983, as he stepped off the airliner bringing him home from three years' self-exile in the United States shocked the nation and led to year of protests against the pro-Western regime of President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

Marcos, who initially indicated he supported the military's claim that Aquino was assassinated by communist agent Rolando Galman, later appointed a five-member fact-finding board whose 10-month probe led to today's charges.

Justice Bernardo Fernandez, government ombudsman. essentially followed the recommendations of the board's majority report.

Brig. Gen. Luther Custodio, chief of aviation security, and 16 other soldiers were charged with direct participation in a military conspiracy to kill Aquino. Ver. Maj. Gen. Prospero A. Olivas and six other soldiers were accused of being accessories in a military attempt to cover up the assassination and blame it on Galman. A civilian businessman, Hermilo Gosuico, was accused of being an accomplice to the

The charges against Custodio and 16 others of being principals carry a possible death penalty.

Olivas headed an early military investigation which concluded Galman was a communist agent and that he killed Aquino.

Ver's lawyer refused to file a motion for dismissal, saying the general wanted to prove his innocence in court

Aquino, a former senator and leader of the Liberal Party, was widely considered the opposition's best chance to unseat Marcos in elections scheduled for 1987. Marcos has been in power since

Citrus losses may exceed $1 billion

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — As the mercury dipped below freezing today, citrus growers rushed their icy product to market amid predictions that their losses from a three-day cold snap could exceed the $1 billion from the 1983 killer

Gov. Bob Graham declared a state of emergency Tuesday, and federal inspectors were sent to assess damage to citrus and vegetable crops caused by the state's worst cold spell in a century

At 2 a.m. today, it was 33 degrees in Tampa, Orlando and Gainesville; 32 in Crestview and Sarasota; and 31 in Jacksonville, Daytona Beach and Melbourne, according to the National Weather Service

Today is the third consecutive day that citrus fields are being ravaged by frigid arctic air. Record lows for Jan. 22 were set in 13 Florida communities, and the weather service warned that the cold wave was not over.

Everybody expected low temperatures," Bernie Hamel of the Florida Fruit and Vegetable Association said Tuesday. "But what really hurt the most was the duration. It just got down and stayed down.

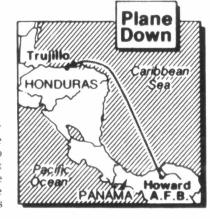

State Agriculture Commissioner Doyle Conner said reports he received Tuesday led him to believe that the freeze could rank as the worst ever in Florida. He said the damage this time is "more widespread, more crops destroyed

The 1983 freeze damaged or destroyed trees and fruit of more than 250,000 acres, causing more than $1 billion in losses, according to industry economists.

Wilson McGee, retired citrus executive, said the latest freeze has been "more democratic and systematic - it seemed to hit everywhere.

The Florida Crop and Livestock Reporting Service sampled fruit from 130 citrus belt sites on Tuesday. Eleven of the 32 citrus belt counties were not surveyed because they suffered such extensive damage during the 1983 freeze that there was not enough fruit to make a sampling valid, said Ernie Neff, a spokesman for Florida Citrus Mutual

But of those counties surveyed, 89 percent of the fruit samples contained some ice, indicating "a high percentage of the state's citrus crop was impacted," said Bobby McKown, executive vice president of Florida Citrus Mutual.

Air Force plane carrying 21 lost

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) - Fog and stormy weather during the night forced U.S. officials to interrupt the search for a U.S. Air Force plane carrying 21 Americans that went down in the Caribbean about 500 yards off Honduras' coast, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said.

Robert Callahan, the embassy's press attache, said the C-130A transport was on its way to the Honduran coastal town of Trujillo from Howard Air Force Base in Panama when it splashed into the water about 11 a.m. EST Tuesday.

The embassy spokesman said the first reports of the plane going down came from Honduran fishermen, although no wreckage was sighted by searchers.

Prosecution rests its case in Loyd Remy assault trial

BY JEFF LANGLEY Senior Staff Writer

They sat just feet apart at opposite ends of a counsel table in the cramped quarters of what's called the 'small courtroom,' a stuffy little nook on the third floor of the Gray County Courthouse.

The teenage housewife who said a rape had ruined her marriage and the bull-necked, pot-bellied suspect she identified as her assailant, a man who had the worst breath she ever smelled, didn't look at each other as the trial began

And despite the close quarters, the obvious avoidance continued when the former Pampa woman named Loyd Dean Remy as the rapist who covered his face with a nylon stocking and subjected her to a sexual assault that lasted four

Remy's trial on a charge of burglary with intent to commit sexual assault began Tuesday morning, and the state rested its case at the end of the day - long session. The defense was scheduled to present its evidence when the trial resumed at 10 a.m. today. Remy waved his right to a jury trial, and the case will be decided by 31st District Judge Grainger McIlhany

The reported victim, a 19-year-old who moved to Michigan after the alleged assault, was the first witness called by prosecutor David Hamilton

The woman said her husband left for work about 10:45 p.m. last March 27, leaving her alone inside their Lowry Street residence. About a half hour later. Remy knocked at the door and asked whether she wanted to "do some speed," she testified.

The woman said she declined the offered drugs but asked the 'acquaintance' into her den. She said Remy had been in the home with other friends twice before. She also had seen the man a couple of times at Red's Lounge, the woman

The pair talked, and the discussion turned to sex, she claimed. Remy asked whether she "fooled around," and offered her $40 for sex, she testified. She said she asked him to leave. Remy left her home and drove away about midnight, she said.

The woman said she went back to the den to work a crossword puzzle. About a half hour later, "Morris," her cat, scratched at the front door, a sign he wanted to go outside, she testified. She opened the door, which knob had previously fallen off, to let out the cat, she said.

An intruder with the nylon stocking covering his face and tube socks over his hands burst through the opened door, she said. The woman said she knew it was Remy because she recognized his tennis shoes and could distinguish his face through the stocking.

The man knocked her to the floor and tried to rip off her clothes. He managed to unbutton and unzip her blue jeans, even though the socks covered his hands, she said. She screamed and screamed, then, with all of her might, she bit the assailant's hand twice, she said. The assailant repaid the biting with blows to her face, she said.

"He told me to shut up, and I didn't. Then he asked me if I wanted to die," the woman testified.

Finally, she gave up and submitted to the sexual assault,

"I decided I shoudn't fight no more...I was afraid I wasn't going to live through it," the woman testified.

Remy dragged her by the feet into a bedroom, she said.

He ordered her to strip, then sexually assaulted her on the both

Carson gas lawsuits moved from Houston

AMARILLO - Six federal lawsuits involving natural gas ownership on Carson County leases in the West Panhandle Field have been transferred to Amarillo from Houston.

The suits filed by Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of America center on disputes over separation of natural gas drilling rights and oil rights on the leases.

Named in the suits are Energy-Agri Products, Inc., Williams Investments, Raw Hide Production Co., Tex-Well Oil and Gas Corp. and Werner Oil

The suits were transferred to Amarillo for jurisdictional reasons. Natural Gas Pipeline already has one suit filed in federal court in Amarillo.

Based in Lombard, Ill., Natural Gas charges the independent operators have wrongfully produced natural gas belonging to the firm under its ownership rights in the field. The allegations are similar to suits filed in state courts by Dorchester Gas Producing Co.

In its petition, Natural Gas claims it owns rights to several

The American economy - as measured by the gross national product, or its total output of goods and services — expanded by 6.8 percent in 1984, the strongest growth since 1951, when the rate was 8.3 percent.

In the fourth quarter alone, the Commerce Department revised upward its growth estimate to 3.9 percent from the 2.8 percent pace originally estimated.

Most economists were surprised at the intensity of the fourth-quarter spurt, which followed a sluggish 1.6 percent growth rate in the third quarter.

The improvement in large part reflected an upturn in consumer spending, which rose at an annual rate of 3.9 percent in the fourth luarter compared with a meager 0.7 percent increase in the third

With growth on a steady but not breathtaking pace, and inflation remaining low, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said interest rates should ease further during the first half of 1985 and keep the recovery moving.

Hill says trial courts ailing and need help

AUSTIN (AP) - Texas Supreme Court Chief Justice John Hill says that the Legislature must declare war on unnecessary court delays and increase court fees to pay for speedier justice.

Hill, in his first state-of-the-judiciary speech, on Tuesday described Texas trial courts as "our prime trouble area.

'I want to really underscore and emphasize today that our trial courts are ailing and need your help, said Hill. "In some areas, the situation is critical. Believe me ... the situation is bad and worsening, especially in some of our urban areas.

"Civil litigation takes too long and costs too much," said Hill. "We must declare war on unnecessary court delay at the trial level. Justice delayed is justice denied.

Spectators included state appeals judges, former chief justices Joe Greenhill and Jack Pope, Gov. Mark White and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby. Hill, a former attorney general, said the state

He said the salaries of Texas district judges rank 24th nationwide, and he recommended that they should earn 85 percent of the salary paid Supreme Court justices, which currently is $76,500.

"Before you tune me out as being out of step with your budget crunch, let me tell you that we are endorsing a reasonable filing fee increase plan for funding these appropriation requests," he said.

Hill's third major request was for a computer-aided system for transcribing court proceedings

Texas' civil filing fees rank 41st among the states, he said, adding that a bill had been prepared to raise the fees to pay for his recommendations. People "who are too poor to pay this 'user tax' will be exempt from paying," he said.

Hill recommended, on other judicial issues:

- Avoiding cases being overturned on appeal on grounds that the indictment was insufficient by submitting charges in "plain language.

- Changing the law to stop the practice of a jury impeaching its own verdict by admitting that it had discussed parole. - In many types of civil cases, using mandatory but non-binding arbitration. Mediation programs to aid in resolving family controversies.

- Raising the minimum civil jurisdiction of district courts from $500.

Guards break up violence on death row

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) -Prison authorities were questioning six inmates who allegedly were agitators in a disturbance involving one-third of the state's Death Row inmates. officials said.

About 60 inmates participated in the disturbance, which started Monday after guards began searching Death Row cells for weapons, said Texas Department of Corrections spokesman Phil Guthrie.

The inmates were upset because the search meant they were not allowed to shower, not given their usual few hours of recreation and did not receive their medication, Guthrie said Tuesday

The protest was quieted about 6:30 a.m. Tuesday by 12 guards and nine members of a prison emergency response team, Guthrie said

No injuries were reported. Although the 190 Death Row inmates were locked in their cells during the entire disturbance, they broke television sets by throwing things at them and flooded the area by stopping up sinks and toilets,

Guthrie said. He said the prisoners also set battles involved in putting together a state water package became obvious in the first day of a House committee's review of a proposal crafted by state leaders. The Sierra Club said the plan does not do enough to protect fresh water supplies for bays and estuaries along the coast. A Dallas-area organiziation said the plan properly puts a priority on water for municipal use. The House Committee on Natural Resources, headed by water bill sponsor Tom Craddick of Midland, began listening to public comment Tuesday on the package crafted by Gov. Mark White, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis.

The program includes $600 million in state bonds to fund water projects and a $250 million bond guarantee program to help local

White has tagged the measure as an "emergency" that needs quick action. Craddick's committee seems eager to get the package to the House floor for debate next

"The worst thing that could happen would be to pass a package that gives the people of Texas the impression that we are coming to grips with our water problems without really doing so," Sierra Club spokesman Ken Kramer said in his prepared remarks. "Texas needs a comprehensive water resources policy, not just the appearance of one," Kramer said Tuesday.

Specifically, the Sierra Club said the proposals do not go far enough in municipal and agricultural water conservation and bay and estuary protection.

The bays and estuaries portion of the package would dedicate 5 percent of the water from new reservoirs within 200 miles of the coast to fresh-water flow. Marine interests along the coast fear that up-river dams and reservoirs would cut needed fresh water supplies for the estuaries.

The Sierra Club said the package does not give the Parks and Wildlife Department sufficient authority to move the fresh water down stream

But the Trinity Improvement Association, an Irving-based nonprofit organization interested in Trinity Basin projects, said municipal water use should be the top priority.

Bays and estuaries play an important role in the Texas quality of life and economy in the form of commercial and sport fishing,' said I.M. Rice, executive vice president of the association

Abortion bill draws fire

AUSTIN (AP) - Increasing violence against abortion clinics is an alarming trend that must be stopped, say Texas pro-choice leaders who describe those carrying out the attacks as "terrorists.

'There is no moral ground for these bullies. We're not talking about buildings now, we are talking about the terrorism and harassment of women," G.K. Sprinkle, state president of the National Organization for Women, said Tuesday

On the 12th anniversary of the U.S. Supreme Court decision allowing the operations, the pro-choice leaders also said they oppose a Senate bill that would impose new restrictions on women seeking abortions

Pam Fridrich, executive director of the Texas Abortion Rights Action League, criticized those anti-abortion leaders who fail to decry violence against clinics.

"The so-called right-to-life groups defend the current wave of anti-choice terrorists are 'sensitive' people who cannot bear the 'killing of innocent babies'," she said.

"It is the same sensitive souls concerned about life who have . thrown gasoline in the faces of family planning clinic personnel. fired gunshots through the living room window of a clinic director while her children were watching television, held clinic workers hostage while their offices were sledgehammered, and arsoned and bombed 24 offices and clinics in just the last year," Ms. Fridrich said In a speech on the Senate floor, meanwhile, Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, also criticized abortion opponents who resort to violence.

For 12 years, the extent of that right has been tested in our courts and the Supreme Court holds fast to the principle that women have the right and freedom to make a choice," Mauzy said.

"Today we repudiate those who, in their frustration to have the laws opinions, have resorted to violence. invasion of privacy, harassment, destruction of property. intimidation and death threats. How ironic that those who advocate the right to live risk the lives of others," he told senators

Ms. Fridrich, Meg Wilson of the Texas Women's Political Caucus and Gara LaMarche of the Texas Civil Liberties Union all criticized a bill introduced in the Texas Senate that would place new restrictions on women seeking

Ms. Fridrich said she opposes the legislation, sponsored by Sens. Bob McFarland, R-Arlington, and John Sharp, D-Victoria, because of such provisions as a requirement for parental consent for teen-agers, a ban on public funding for abortion and a requirement that a woman must notify her husband in some circumstances.

Trials of a short person

By

I've got a bone to pick with that guy who wrote the song "Short People Got No Reason." As a member of the illustrious group short people, that is — I would like to point out that tall people have their short comings, too!

Back when I was a child - and I was really short then - I suffered through the usual nicknames: Shorty Peewee, Half Pint ... I didn't mind it too much, except when my own family joined in on the teasing.

My "little brother" - all six foot - plus, 225 pounds of him delighted in pointing out that I didn't have legs, but walked on stubs instead. So naturally I socked him in the shin. Another of his great joys was enveloping me in a bear hug and jumping up and down until I almost forgot my potty training. Now is that anyway to treat a short person?

Not that I'm the shortest person I know. In fact, I have had people tell me that I'm pretty tall for a short person which is just how I want

I remember reading Helen Hayes autobiography where she describes how she was told she was too short to enter show business So she proceeded to be the tallest 5'1" person in show business. I'd say she did a good job of it, too. Alan Ladd didn't let his stature keep him from becoming a show biz great. However, I'll never see how he could get through the love scenes without falling off the box he reportedly stood on when kissing his statuesque leading ladies. And look at Dudley Moore - he wasn't bothered in the least by the fact that all his leading ladies tower over him. In fact, he seems to enjoy it since he prefers tall women in his private life, as well. It's hard not to have some sort of an inferiority complex when you're surrounded by a family all quite a bit taller than you. I don't know how it happened, but I was the only one that grew up short and with dark hair. I remember people looking pityingly at me when we went anywhere as a group — I'm sure they were thinking things like, "Oh, she must be adopted" or less flatteringly, "There's the runt of Imagine how I feel every time I introduce my 5'10" sister who is eight years younger than me. Here she stands, tall, blonde, blue eyed - the picture of an Aryan athlete next to me

During my teen years, I tried hard to be on the same level as my taller friends. Fortunately, platform shoes and long pants was fashionable. So I would totter about in my three inch platforms, discreetly covered by my bell bottoms (I shudder to think I really wore those) just so I would only have to look up a couple of inches at my girl friends and less than one foot at my boyfriends. To this day, few people from my past know just how short I am

I dated a 6'3" football player for a time. I liked him a lot. I couldn't tell you much about his face, but I can describe the fourth button on

It's distressing to realize that at every family reunion my nieces are catching up and passing me in height. I dread the day when I have to look up at my own children and tell them to go to their rooms. I hope to instill the fear of God (and Momma) into them now so they won't think to back talk me when they outgrow me ... just so they don't grab me into a hug and jump around the room with me.

But I'm not making excuses for my height anymore. I'm tired of wearing "tall" shoes and falling off of them half the time. I haven't been called "shorty" in years (except when my brother comes to see me). And I think I enjoy the little ones measuring themselves with me as much as they do

They should heed their own words

Another in a continuing saga of the myriad ways government grabs your money: according to the Virginia General Assembly, charity is a taxable item.

Those folks in the Virginia revenue department aren't fooling around. Although the federal Infernal Revenue Service says contributions of merchandise to food banks, soup kitchens and missions may be tax-deductible, Virginia law requries that merchants pay sales tax on any merchandise that changes hands, even it it's a charitable transaction where no money changes hands.

For some time, that has stuck in the craw of the state's church leaders, many of whom think Virginia's businessmen might be more inclined toward charitable donations if they didn't have to pay a penalty for the

After all, what's the point in paying to give food and clothing to charity when it costs you nothing to give it to the dump?

The newly-formed Interfaith Hunger Coalition of religious leaders recently announced that it would be lobbying this year to convince the state's lawmakers to exempt charitable contributions of food and merchandise from the sale tax. It should't take too much convincing; Virginia revenuers aren't exactly hurting for money. The General Assembly posted a $150 million surplus at the end of fiscal 1984.

Unfortunately, the coalition doesn't stop there. It also has some grand plans to push for increased taxpaver funding of food and support programs for the elderly

If only coaltion members would listen to their own arguments about the benefits of private charity, and then spend the rest of their time doing good deeds under that banner, they might be surprised at how successful their programs could be.

Federal pension problem

When you consider that a one - percent drop in short - term interest rates is worth at least $10 billion in deficit reduction, you realize how foolish it is to try to balance the budget by cutting the pay of current federal workers. A five - percent federal pay cut would save only $1.5 billion, and the administration would pay many times that price in lost morale and productivity, not to mention open bureaucratic warfare from the best organized lobby in Washington.

Furthermore, the one part of the federal government that has NOT grown like a weed over the last decade is the civilian workforce. Conservatives may be shocked to learn that since 1970 the total civilian federal bureaucracy (exclusive of the Postal Service) has actually DECLINED about five percent from 2,195,437 to the current 2,081,910. Yet, in that period, the federal government's real ependitures have risen about 75 percent (in constant dollars). Clearly, the federal payroll did not cause that explosion.

For example, the Social Security Administration dished out nearly $250 billion in retirement and health care benefits in 1984 - and it's total administrative expense was about $2.5 billion - about 1 percent of total program costs. A five - percent pay cut for Social Security employees would save less than $100 million, only .03 percent on a projected total S.S. expenditure for 1986 of nearly $300 billion.

Instead of such vain gestures, the administration should attack the one federal payroll expense that has been soaring: the Civil Service Retirement System (CSRS). In Fiscal year 1986, CSRS alone, exclusive of military pensions, will cost over $26 billion - up 862 percent from $2.7 billion in 1970 - a real increase after inflation of 295 percent. This is one of the most shockingly explosive expenditures in the federal budget, especially considering that the total civilian payroll has declined 5 percent.

The primary reason for this explosion is NET costs - over 82 percent of which are paid by the general taxpayers (not employees) - is NOT that individual pensions are large (they aren't), but that the AGE at which federal employees retire is so low. Over the past decade the average federal retirement age, with no benefit reduction, has been fifty - eight, five - years lower than the average civilian retirement age: sixty - three.

In the actuarial world of pension costs, five years of added retirment benefits has an astonishing impact on pension costs. This early retirement option (thirty years at age fifty - five with no loss of full benefits) explains most of the retirement cost differential between the federal and private sectors.

In 1982, for example, 50.4 percent of the 85,083 civil service employees who retired did so at an average age of 54.1 years - implying, for them, a benefit life span in excess of twenty years, nearly double that of those retiring at sixty - five.

Today, the average private - sector pension plan (exclusive of Social Security) costs about 12 percent of total payrolls. The CSRS costs over 30 percent. One key reason for this being that, until very recently, federal employees were not in Social Security, which private employers consider a part of the employees' retirement benefits.

So, when you add Social Security (13 percent of payroll) to the private pension plan costs (12 percent), the actual retirement cost in the private sector amounts to about 25 percent of payrolls, still about five percentage points below the CSRS.

The big difference is: whereas private employees typically pay (through S.S. withholding of 13 percent, plus 6 percent on private pensions) nearly 19 percent of payrolls, or 76 percent of the total costs of their programs, the federal worker contributes 7 percent, or less than 20 percent of net pension costs

We should hasten to add that the average Civil Service retiree does NOT have an unusually high average pension. As a matter of fact, after thirty five years of service, the CSRS system replaces about 62 percent of income - while the combination of Social Security and private pension plans replace nearly 64 percent of private - sector pay.

The difference is: not only does the federal retiree draw his pension at least five - years longer, but, if he retires at fifty - five as over half now do, he is fully protected by cost - of - living benefits from inflation, and by age sixty - five many will be earning more than when they retired.

In 1970, taxpayers picked up the tab for 34 percent of the net cost of the CSRS. By 1986 that share will have soared to 82 percent. Since 1970, employee contributions have risen 176 percent, while the taxpayers' costs haver risen 2,030 percent. The administration was wrong to abandon its proposal for employees to pay a larger share of this cost - and they should also reduce the incentive for early federal retirement.

Dr. Ellett thinks with a similar reward - a tax deduction - we would contribute at least that much to amortize the national debt.

And he figures that taxes the government would lose - it would more than make up just in reduced interest payments on our debt burden.

Reagan continues to confound cynics

TAG DAY FOR UNCLE SAM

By Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) - Throughout most of President Reagan's first term, this city's self-certified insiders were thoroughly convinced that the White House actually was being run by a triumverate of senior staff members

Indeed, it became a part of contemporary political folklore that the "real power" in the Reagan administration was exercised by those three aides rather than by a passive, illinformed president with a leisurely work schedule and a penchant for delegating virtually of his authority.

But Reagan, who never ceases to amaze if not confound the cynics, now has acceded to requests from all three men to leave the White House shortly after the beginning of the president's second term.

That makes him either, one, a puppet without anybody left to pull his strings or, two, a president far more self-assured than widely assumed. The inclination here is to select the second of those alternatives.

Reagan, of course, will be far from alone in the White House. Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, designated to be the president's new chief of staff, never would have risen to become president, board chairman and chief executive officer of Merrill Lynch & Company, the nation's largest securities firm, if he did not possess first-rate management skills.

But an insecure president who lacked confidence in his own ability to perform the job without being propped up by advisers he trusted surely would have implored one or more members of the original staff troika to remain at the White House to continue guiding him.

Moreover, the dramatic reshuffling of the president's senior staff coincides with a series of other developments that will almost surely reinforce Reagan's popularity and possibly produce a far more productive second term than expected only a few months ago.

Most notable is the resumption of arms control talks with the Soviet Union, a tentative first step that could lead to a truly significant achievement - a reduction in the nuclear weapons held by the world's two military superpowers.

Mark Green, a liberal political activist with impeccable credentials as strident critic of the first Reagan administration, is optimistic enough about the prospect of mutual, verifiable disarmament to have constructed an elaborate scenario illustrating how that goal might be attained.

Green's scenario concludes in this fashion: "December 1989: Reagan and (by then Soviet Premier Mikhail) Gorbachev share the Nobel Peace Prize. Says Reagan at the Stockholm cere-'Not bad for an old

Other critics devoted much of the 1984 presidential campaign to promoting the notion that a re-elected Reagan with nothing to lose in future elections would grant unprecedented White House access to assorted rightwing zealots - but the recent staff shifts suggest that the president will continue to distance himself from hard-line conservatives.

Time magazine has just published a cover story which goes a long way toward rehabilitating the president's wife, Nancy, suggesting that she has played an important role in moving her husband "from the far right toward the political center.

Time suggests that she "has consistently allied herself with the moderates against the conservative ideologues" not because of any profound philosophical commitment but rather because "more than anything else, she wants the public to continue adoring her husband."

While they frown on questions about the fairness of an exam, the students offer willing assistance to fellow students concerned with such real life problems as social normality and acceptance, substance abuse, sexuality, and relationships with friends, parents or other relatives.

Every other Monday night, the select group gathers at Mentor High School library to review problems that have filtered to them directly or indirectly from other students, to discuss the status of the Youth Service Coordinating Council, Dan Litzinger, a guidance counselor at Mentor High School. and Linda McKay, of the Lake County PTA, sit as advisors to the advisory council.

Students are chosen for the group by guidance counselors in Lake County high schools. All council members are honor students, and many are involved in athletics or other extracurricular activities. Schools in all nine school districts in the county are involved.

Mrs. Grum, 40, a former psychiatric nurse and now a wife and mother of two children, is director of the coordinating council which has a budget of less than $40,000 to help plan and coordinate services of several local groups. The service group is funded mainly by a state agency and a local mental health board.

The advisory council, she said. is aimed at kids from age zero to 18 years. It varies, depending on problems and priorities. One of the largest priorities has been in the area of substance abuse.

"When we first set it up we felt strongly that we shouldn't plan on behalf of teen-agers without getting their input," she continued. We felt we should hear what happens in the schools and what problems they have.

"These (council) kids want to make sure that other kids know where to get help with real problems, like suicide, drugs, mental health.

She said some present advisory council members had been a part of the organization almost from its inception nearly three years ago.

"They enjoy being a part of the group," she said. "They want to give something back to the other

Participation in the council is open to students from all schools in the area - county, urban, rural, public, private or parochial.

"I was amazed to learn from some of the teen-agers about their very real concerns about nuclear power," Mrs. Grum said. "They have talked about this at some length.

"And some of the problems are things which occurred to me when I was a teen-ager - morality, dating, how to say no, how to get the trust of parents, getting parents to trust you to drive the family car safely.

"I think it is really important that we don't forget how teen-agers feel and what they are going through, that we hear from them about their problems.

Frustrated farmers could turn violent, senator says

By JIM DRINKARD

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A farm-state senator is warning that the latest wave of public protests over the plight of agriculture could take a violent turn by spring if relief — particularly credit aid — does not come soon.

Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, said Tuesday that the Reagan administration does not understand the seriousness of the farm situation, and joined with other public officials from his state in accusing the administration of failing to fulfill a campaign promise to ease farm credit.

"If nothing happens within the next 60 days ... I think the specter of widespread violence throughout the Midwest is there," Harkin told reporters.

"When you lose hope, then you take to the streets. I think you may see that in agriculture," he said.

Harkin, Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad and members of the state's congressional delegation said Reagan's promise, made on the eve of a farm-state campaign swing in September, had yet to help a significant number of farmers who are having trouble repaying bank loans.

Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, said the administration has been dragging its feet on setting final rules for promised loan guarantees, and he renewed a call for those rules to be made more flexible.

Salvadoran peace talks prospects dim

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Salvadoran rebel leaders said Tuesday that the military is pressuring President Jose Napoleon Duarte not to hold another round of peace talks with the guerrillas.

Four leaders of the five-year-old civil war against the U.S.-backed government met with reporters in the Mexican capital to discuss what they see as gloomy prospects for a negotiated peace in the near future.

They said that on Jan. 11 they sent a proposal, through the Roman Catholic church in El Salvador, to Duarte's government requesting a third round of talks but have received no reply.

"The process of dialogue is in serious danger of paralysis," said Ruben Zamora, vice president of the Democratic Revolutionary Front. The front is the political umbrella group allied with the leftist guerrilla movement in El Salvador. "We see the situation as very grave," Zamaora added.

He blamed the military for blocking the talks and said Duarte had caved in to pressures from rightists.

Government and Catholic church leaders in El Salvador recently expressed doubt that any talks will be held before elections for the National Assembly are held. The balloting is set for March 17. They blamed the breakdown in the talks on pressure on Duarte from the rightists who controll the National Assembly.

The assembly has introduced a series of bills in the last two months that seriously challenge Duarte's control of the government.

Zamora said military leaders told Duarte at a meeting in December that they would not accept peace talks dealing with questions of rebel participation in the government or that would affect current anti-guerrilla operations.

"We are efficiently after that of the control of th

"We are afraid that after the elections, the balance of power will be even more unfavorable for Duarte," he added.

Duarte's centristChristian Democratic Party, which controls 24 of the 60 assembly seats, is not expected to win a clear majority in the elections. Four conservative parties, which often act as a bloc, hold 34 seats, and the other two seats are held by a small party that joins either the conservatives or the moderates, depending on the issue.

The rebel leaders also spoke of the Reagan administration recently delivering six new attack aircraft to El Salvador and asking the U.S. Congress to appropriate $200 million in military aid for El Salvador in 1985, an increase from the $128 million it was originally seeking.

Oscar Acevedo of the Armed Forces of National Liberation said that if the Salvadoran armed forces "were truly capable of stopping our advance, they wouldn't need this escalation of new equipment."

Acevedo, in an earlier conversation with The Associated Press, said the guerrillas had attempted to buy hand-held anti-aircraft missiles on the black by bankers, including a requirement for forgiveness of at least 10 percent of loan principal, have been imposed intentionally to discourage use of the program and save government money. Instead, he said, banks should be able to make their concessions in interest rates, keeping the outstanding loan balance intact.

"Quite candidly, if you leave it the way it is, the program won't be used. And that may be their motive," Grassley said, specifically blaming Reagan's budget director, David Stockman, for the delay.

But an official of the Office of Management and Budget, who spoke only on condition he not be identified, said that was not the administration's intent. 'We're still waiting for them (the Agriculture Department) to submit something that is acceptable," the official said.

The Iowa delegation also announced plans for a rally of farmers in either Des Moines or Ames, Iowa, in February to drum up national attention for the credit problems.

A similar rally was held Monday at the state Capitol in St. Paul, Minn., and more than two dozen farmers were arrested Monday and Tuesday in protests at grain and livestock markets in Chicago.

Reagan's credit aid program, announced last Sept. 18, called for $650 million in loan guarantees to banks holding shaky farm loans if the banks would agree to write off at least 10 percent of the loan principal in order to bring payments within the reach of borrowers.

It also included deferral of up to 25 percent of unpaid principal and interest for farmers who borrowed directly, from the Farmers Home Administration, the farm lender of last resort, and help for farmers in drawing up financial managment plans.

Reagan, speaking to farmers in a barnyard in Norway, Iowa, last September, said the aid was one of many steps he had taken to help producers while the Democrats had "left the farmer stuck in the swamp."

"Even though your road to prosperity has been longer, even though the grade is steep, we are moving in the right direction again and we are closer to our goal than we were." he told the group.

An FmHA spokesman, Marlyn Aycock, said Tuesday the agency has made about $24.5 million of the promised $650 million in guaranteed loans. It has been more active in helping its own borrowers, making just over 3,000 deferrals under the credit aid program in the same period, he said.

Harkin said while lowa is at "the bottom rung of the ladder" in farm credit problems, the crunch will soon be just as serious in other farm states from the Dakotas to

"It has a ripple effect throughout the entire economy," affecting banking, small business and ultimately consumers, added Grassley.

Branstad said many farmers in his state face an immediate credit crisis, needing money to make annual lease and mortgage payments on March 1, and loans to plant spring crops.

Even if the administration were to settle on the rules for its announced credit aid, the $650 million would not be enough, said Branstad. He called for an increase in aid to $3 billion, saying it would be less expensive to do so now than to pick up the pieces of the farm economy later.

Texans win some, lose one in House committee scramble

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic Texans in Congress won some and lost one in the committee assignments sweepstakes that can mean extra goodies for districts and icing on political careers.

El Paso Congressman Ron Coleman got one of two coveted open spots on the House Appropriations Committee in the Democratic Policy and Steering Committee's voting on Tuesday, and "boll weevil" conservative Marvin Leath of Marlin was selected for the Budget Committee. But Houston's Mike Andrews lost a bid for a seat on the powerful Ways and Means Committee by a single vote.

"There was good opposition," said a disappointed Andrews, who had been working to win the seat since former Ways and Means member Kent Hance of Lubbock announced he would run for Senate instead of re-election last year. "There were very strongly supported candidates from other parts of the country and a guy from Pennsylvania won it. They just took it away from Texas."

Freshman Albert Bustamante of San Antonio got his wish for a seat on the Armed Services Committee, vital to his district with all its military installations. Bustamante defeated Abraham "Chick" Kazen of Laredo, a long-time member of Armed Services, in the Democratic primary.

The committee assignments still have to be ratified by the full House Democratic membership on Friday, but the Steering and Policy vote amounts to virtual final approval.

'I'm very pleased,'' said
Coleman. 'I wish we'd have won the other one (Ways and Means), though.''

With the exception of Andrews, the Texas Democrats seemed to have gotten what they wanted, belying predictions that the state's move toward the Republican Party would result in discrimination by the Democrats against the Texans on committee assignments.

Four of Texas' 27 congressional seats turned Republican in the 1984 elections, giving the state a total of 10 GOP House members. Republicans were scheduled to meet on their committee assignments today.

Leath's selection was an apparent bow to disgruntled conservative Democrats, known as "boll weevils," who had mounted a threat to challenge the re-election of House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill Jr.

Their candidate, Charles Stenholm of Stamford, dropped out of the Speaker race after meeting with O'Neill and extracting a promise that conservative Democrats would get more consideration for choice committee assignments.

There were 17 candidates for seven open spots on Budget.

Budget Committee assignments rotate and members can serve up to six years. They have the option of becoming "dormant" on one of their two other committees, without losing seniority. Leath said he would continue active work on Armed Services, but withdraw temporarily from Veterans Affairs.

New Republican Texas Sen. Phil Gramm, a former "boll weevil" Democrat in Congress, used the Budget Committee for his high-profile switch to the Republican Party in 1983 after clashing with the Democratic leaders over budget policy.

Leath, who was elected in 1978, predicted "politically distasteful and tough" decisions for the budget panel in the 99th Congress.

"Nonetheless, I am prepared to make that stand and I truly believe my constituents will support these efforts completely," he said in a prepared statement. "I am deeply honored that my colleagues have extended to me their trust and confidence through this vital assignment."

The Ways and Means assignments were chosen first, and Andrews said he thought his loss was Coleman's gain — i.e., Coleman got a consolation prize.

"It would certainly have affected me if Appropriations had been first," Andrews said. "I have to think it had some effect."

Coleman replaces a Texan on Appropriations, Jack Hightower of Vernon, who was defeated. Hightower had 10 years seniority, though, and served on the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee.

"Seniority takes that one," Coleman said. "It will probably take several years to get on that subcommittee."

Coleman, a veteran Texas legislator before coming to Congress, got 22 votes, more than any of the 12 other candidates.

In exchange for Appropriations, Coleman gives up both of his other committee assignments — Armed Services and Government Operations.

Negotiations collapse in mayoral fight

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — The opposition National Action Party in Coahuila state says it has rejected a proposal to let the state legislature choose a new mayor in Monclova and end a lingering election dispute there.

"The people want me to be mayor," Pedro Esquivel Medina, National Action's candidate, said in a telephone interview from his home in the northern industrial city Tuesday.

He lost the Dec. 2 mayor's race in the official results certified by the state legislature, which is controlled by the long dominant Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI.

Esquivel, whose supporters remain in control of the Monclova city hall, said his party refused the proposal to offer a list of candidates for the state legislature's consideration at a meeting Monday night with the PRI and Coahuila Gov. Jose de las Fuentes.

De las Fuentes, who is mediating the dispute, suggested that both parties offer a list of candidates for mayor as a way of resolving an election dispute taht began in late December, according to Esquivel.

Talks also are being held to resolve a similar election dispute in the Texas border city of Piedras Negras where a mob of angry citizens burned the municipal complex to protest the swearing in of a PRI mayor there of a PRI mayor there.

PRI candidates Salvador
Martinez of Monclova and Carlos
Juaristi Septien of Piedras Negras won their respective mayoral races by official results. But the PAN insists the ruling party stole the elections through vote fraud and has refused to recognize the official results.

PRI, which has controlled the presidency, Congress and all governors' offices in Mexico for more than 50 years, was awarded the victory in 35 of 38 mayors' races Dec. 2 in Coahuila.

Both Monclova and Piedras Negras remain tense, with a crowd of PAN supporters occuping the Monclova city hall where Esquivel maintains his office and protesters in Piedras Negras demanding a resolution to the conflict.

In Piedras Negras, like in Monclova, the people want me to be mayor. That is our position and we're not going to yield even one centimeter. PAN mayor candidate Eleazar Cobos told the Monterrey newspaper El Norte. Monterrey is in the neighboring state of Nuevo Leon.

In Monclova, Martinez has in established his office in a house while Juaristi runs Piedras Negras from an office in the convention center.

Carlos Robles, de las Fuentes' spokesman, would not confirm the proposal that a list of candidates be offered, saying that information would have to come from the political parties.

Although such a proposal is rare in Mexico, Robles said the process would be similar to an elected official stepping down from his position.

Martinez would have to solicit permission to leave the office and then the state legislature would vote for a new mayur from among a list of candidates presented by the parties, Robles said in a telephone interview Tuesday from Saltillo, the Coahuila state capital.

Soups, stews, chili warm up winter chill

By GAYLA MALONEY

TDA Marketing Representative Although the calendar says January, the weather in the Texas Panhandle has not been too wintery - well, not yet, anyway. However some frosty, cold, snowy days are sure to be forthcoming. Texans - naturalized or native know how to warm up, by preparing a big pot of chili, stew or

Various recipes are available for all of these dishes. Imagination and leftovers are always a help, as well. Chili is usually prepared using beef - either cubed beef or ground beef. It may or may not contain beans. Unusual chili recipes can be made by using pork, lamb, poultry or game meat such

"Chili" derives its name from spicy hot peppers which were discovered growing in America by Columbus. Most chili peppers are fresh ground for seasoning or they are used in the making of commercial chili powder. Ingredients that determine 'authentic' Texas chili is a hot issue. Some Texans believe in using only fresh ground peppers, while others say commercial chili powder is satifactory. However, most agree that true Texas chili does not contain beans.

Stews usually have a broth or tomato base and contain a variety of vegetables and one type of meat Beef and lamb are usually the main varieties of meat used in stew recipes. Pieces of white fish are also used in stews. Since almost all vegetables can be used in stews and soups, it is a good idea to save leftover vegetables, such as green beans and peas, to freeze for use in these hearty hot dishes.

Soups usually contain considerably more liquid than chili and stew. Soups may also contain a broth, tomato or cream base. Almost all meats and vegetables can be used in soups. Unlike stew and chili, soups can also be served cold. In fact, soups such as vichyssoise and gazpacho are always served cold

In warmer months when fresh fruit is available, many people enjoy fruit based soups. These soups usually contain a fresh cream or milk base and they are usually served as an appetizer before the main course.

Football glut to continue

The Super Bowl ended just in time. We wouldn't want it interfering with this week's opening of United States Football League training camps.

The glut goes on. This endless stream of football games has left the American public's demand for the sport more than satisfied. Saturated might be a better description. Instead of more games, what America needs right now is a break. Instead it will get more games

Make room for the San Antonio Gunslingers and the Portland Breakers, who are settling in their third home in as many USFL seasons. And, the Houston Gamblers and the Jacksonville Bulls, and all the rest

Even Bill Walsh, a devoted student of the game, confessed that he has had his fill of football. The coach of the champion San Francisco 49ers has packed away his projector and doesn't care if ne sees another blitz or bomb until July. He'll do some skiing, play a little tennis and give his fertile mind some well-earned time off from punts and pitchouts

And this, remember, is his business.

The public, however, gets no break. The USFL is warming up for another springtime season, iust in case Walsh gets antsy and needs a football fix in April or

The National Football League, of course, is not thrilled.

The overkill football has inflicted on the American public was eloquently demonstrated on Super Sunday

ABC, celebrating its first Super Bowl, set a record fee of $1 million per advertising minute based on its estimate that it could deliver a 50 rating to its clients.

The best previous Super Bowl rating came in 1982 when San Francisco and Cincinnati produced a 49.1. That, possibly not co-incidentally, was the last Super Bowl before the players'

Surely, after three years though, the game has recovered from that affair. People forget. This was, after all, the Super Bowl, more than just a game but an event. The NFL was celebrating a banner season with record-shattering performances by a half dozen of its biggest names including Walter Payton, Eric Dickerson and Dan Marino. Who wouldn't pay a million bucks for a minute's worth of that product?

What's more, a 50 rating would mean half of the homes having television sets would be tuned in That potentially translates into the sale of an awful lot of tires, cars, beer and hamburgers.

Girls lose

Harvesters rout Canyon

Canyon girls rudely interrupted the Pampa Lady Harvesters' bid for the runnerup spot in the District 1-4A standings Tuesday night.

Canyon scored nine points in a row in the second and third quarters and hit 22 of 28 free throws for the game to down the Lady Harvesters, 52-38, at McNeely Fieldhouse.

In the boys' game, Rodney Young and Petey Davis combined for 45 points as Pampa routed Canyon, 70-52.

"We just didn't play good defense," said Pampa girls' coach Albert Nichols. "We fouled too much. We were reaching instead of moving.'

Pampa girls trailed by only eight, 29-21, at halftime, but the Eaglettes scored the first two baskets of the second half and the Lady Harvesters just couldn't bounce back as they did earlier.

Pampa fell behind by nine, 20-11, early in the second quarter, but Rotaunda Powell ignited a rally to pull the Lady Harvesters even. Miss Powell scored on a 16-foot jumper and a fast break lavup to make it 20-15. Kerri Richardson scored two baskets sandwiched around a foul shot by Melissa Nichols to knot the score at 20-all. However, Canvon then went on its scoring spree and Pampa wasn't able to recover.

Andrea Chennault led the Eaglettes in scoring with 17 points, while Erin Bailey added

Sandee Greenway paced Pampa with 12 points. Richardson followed with nine, Nichols, seven; Powell, six, and Melanie Morgan, four. In the rebounding department, Richardson and Nichols had nine and eight rebounds respectively, but Canyon had an overall 37-28 team advantage.

"We needed to hit our outside shots, but we didn't do it," Nichols said. "It's just a mental deal. We hit them good in practice."

Canyon now has sole possession of second place with a 6-2 record. Pampa is 5-4 in district and 10-9 overall. Pampa's pressing defense forced Canyon into 16 turnovers the first half of the boys' game, helping the Harvesters outscore the visitors, 19-2, during one stretch.

Pampa had a 13-point bulge, 33-20, at halftime, and held a 20-point advantage midway through the third quarter.

Rodney Young tossed in 24 points from every angle for Pampa, while Davis was scoring most of his 21 points inside, along with pulling down nine rebounds.

Also scoring for the Harvesters were Donovan Lewis with eight, Richard Rogers, six; Paul Simpson, four; David Jackson, three: Chris Comer and Jeff Gaines, two points each. Ward Harrison and Bill Shaw led Canyon with 12 points each. The Harvesters are now 3-3 in district play and kept their hopes alive for a playoff spot with the lopsided victory. Overall, the Harvesters are 15-8, while Canyon is 11-9 and 2-4 in district. "I felt like the kids wanted to win this one for coach (Garland) Nichols," said Harvester assistant Frank McCullough.

The Shockers are now 14-4 overall and in first place in district with a 5-1 mark.

Matt Martindale and Lonnie Mills led the Shockers with 12 and 11 points respectively. Dierk Milum added 10.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Jack Nicklaus filed a last-minute entry and joined Tom Watson and Greg Norman in the 144-man field for the $400,000 Los Angeles Open golf tournament.

Watson, who acquired a record sixth Player of the Year title last season, and the Australian Norman both are opening their 1985 campaigns in the tournament that begins Thursday on the difficult, 6.946-yard, par 71 Riviera Country Club course

Watson, twice a winner of this title, collected three victories last

NEW YORK (AP) - Pitcher Dwight Gooden of the New York Mets, 1984 Rookie of the Year, still is considering a holdout during spring training if he and the club cannot come to terms on a new contract, his agent says.

And the agent, Jim Neader of St. Petersburg, Fla., says the two sides still are more than $250,000 apart.

to SMU's 15-1 success story this

"Our bench has given us a lift recently. We've developed some quality depth. We have some players we can go to now and be confident when we do it," SMU

Coach Dave Bliss said. Sophomore reserves Terry Williams and Johnny Fuller haven't received the acclaim of

Jon Koncak and Carl Wright. But they've provided the critical depth and balance needed by a team with SWC and national championship hopes Williams, a 6-foot-9 bruiser from Newburgh, N.Y., has averaged almost 10 points and 4 rebounds per game as a reserve. He's shooting 65 per cent from the field.

Pampa High boys' and girls' swim teams participated in a recent swim meet in Midland.

Pampa's only first-place individual was Amy Raymond, who won the 100 breaststroke in 1:14.79 in the girls' division.

Pauletta Morrow finished seventh in the 200 freestyle and 500 freestyle. Miss Raymond also placed third in the 100 freestyle. In the boys' division, R.H. Hupp

Fuller, a 6-1 guard from Wilmer-Hutchins, is called upon to give Wright and Butch Moore breathers. Bliss also loves Fuller's defense. He has 16 steals

For example, Fuller made two steals and contributed five points in a 60-second span during SMU's 74-70 victory over Texas Christian last Saturday

"Fuller played a great game." said Bliss, "but he's been playing a big part in a lot of ball games for us lately coming off the bench. 'Fuller is an important player for us now. He is one of our top players. We need to have someone like him as our defensive stopper." Williams almost quit the team last year but thought better of it after a chat with Bliss "Terry was a long way from home and just having trouble adjusting as a freshman' said Bliss. "He realizes his time will come as a starter. He'll have two years in there

The only other Mustang reserve to see more than just limited playing time is swingman Kevin Lewis, a 6-6 junior guard-forward from Highland Falls, N.Y.

Lewis has averaged five points and three rebounds per game

"Kevin has good court sense and has come up with some big rebounds and baskets," Bliss said. Bliss said "rankings are nice but the only one that counts is the Final Four (NCAA playoffs) results.'

Staubach makes hall of DALLAS (AP) - Quarterback Roger Staubach started out with the Dallas Cowboys in 1969 hoping he could make the team so he could draw a $25,000 a year salary.

Staubach eventually took "Next Year's Champions" to two Super Bowl victories and on Tuesday was named to professional football's Hall of Fame.

"Joe Namath (who was also voted to the Canton, Ohio, shrine) and I came out of college together in the Class of '65," Staubach, a Heisman Trophy winner at Navy, recalled. "I had four years of Navy service where I got $220 a month.

"Joe signed the biggest contract in the history of football coming out of Alabama. Economically, he got a better deal but I can tell you I'm just as happy as he is.

Staubach, a futures draft pick by the Cowboys, said "I was just hoping to be a part of the Cowboys' team. I had a family and I was just trying to make a house payment in Richardson (a Dallas suburb).

"I was just thinking of survival when I went into that first quarterback battle with Craig Morton. When I was at the Naval Academy, I couldn't have dreamed of what was going to happen to Staubach beat out Morton and in 1971 took the Cowboys to their first Super Bowl victory, a 24-3 victory over the Miami Dolphins. He was named the MVP in Super Bowl VI.

Staubach, Namath, running back O.J. Simpson, NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle and oldtime center Frank Gatski were named to the Pro Football Hall of Fame with induction ceremonies in August.

"O.J. was kidding me that alphabetically he would be the first Heisman Trophy winner in the Hall of Fame," said Staubach. "His last name is 'Si' while mine starts with 'St' and I don't even mind."

Staubach was the master of the comeback.

He brought the Cowboys from behind to victory 23 times in the fourth quarter. Fourteen times the victories came in the last two minutes.

Staubach, 42, who retired after the 1979 season, is probably best remembered for his "Hail Marv" pass to Drew Pearson to defeat the Minnesota Vikings in the 1975 playoffs.

When I found out today that I had been named to the Hall of Fame I got the same feeling inside I had in the lockerroom when we won our first Super Bowl. It made me feel awfully good," Staubach Staubach and Bob Lilly are the only Pro Football Hall of Fame members who played their careers exclusively with the Cowboys.

"It feels great to join Lilly," said Staubach.

Staubach will have to approve a sponsor to introduce him at the ceremonies and he said, "There is the obvious, Coach Tom Landry, the man who called the plays and had a big role in my career. Of course. Drew wouldn't be a bad choice, either, would he?

Staubach called his family together Monday night and cautioned them not to be overly concerned if he didn't get nominated.

'He told the kids it was' something that was not under his control," said wife Marianne Staubach. "He really didn't think he would make it the first year. He had set himself up not to be disappointed." She said Staubach pointed out that Namath and Fran Tarkenton didn't make the Hall of Fame on their first try Staubach completed 57 per cent of his passes in an 11-year career with the Dallas Cowboys. He had 153 touchdown passes against 109 interceptions.

His 83.5 rating is second best in NFL history behind Joe Montana of the San Francisco 49ers.

Flutie may sign with Generals

NEW YORK (AP) - Doug Flutie may sign a contract with the New Jersey Generals of the United States Football League by the end of the week and he said Monday the failure of the National Football League to make him an offer is making his decision easy.

Flutie, his attorney Bob Woolf and Boston College teammate Gerard Phelan had a get-acquainted lunch with Generals' owner Donald Trump in New York on Monday.

'My aim is to bring the negotiations to a head as quickly as possible," said Woolf, who represents both Flutie and Phelan. 'If negotiations go well, it's conceivable we might have something by the end of the week."

Woolf pointed out he was not negotiating a package deal with the Generals for the two players.

"They want Gerard very much," Woolf said. "They always have wanted Gerard and invited him down here. It's a unique situation where Doug and Gerard are very close and the Generals realize how important it is they play together.'

Police probe DWI padding

DALLAS (AP) - Police say eight members of a special drunk-driving task force, financed by a state grant, are the target of an investigation to determine whether arrest figures have allegedly been padded.

We have evidence of some padding, so we're investigating the whole DWI enforcement program," said internal affairs division Capt. Donald Milliken Tuesday Traffic division Chief George Reed, who oversees the program, said that the internal investigation began one week ago after a supervisor in the DWI unit alleged that two officers may have been filing reports for arrests they did not make.

'It appears we have two who might be doing a little fudging on numbers," Reed said. "I'm not confident with the way they've taken credit for some arrests. I've got some indication there may have been a little activity padding

Authorities said task force members are paid with federal funds through a grant administered through the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

Police records show that the unit is operating under a yearlong grant that began on Oct. 1. The state highway department estimated that officers involved in the program should make one arrest every six hours "in order to be cost effective," said Jim Petzold, state program coordinator in Austin.

On Monday, Mike Norwood, police fiscal affairs division director, went to Austin to inform highway department officials of the investigation, said

Federal courts asked to ban widely used food, drug dyes

WASHINGTON (AP) - A consumer group, complaining of "arbitrary and capricious" delays by the government, is asking the courts to end 24 years of health studies and order 10 widely used food, drug and cosmetic dves off the market as unsafe.

In a suit filed in U.S. District Court here Tuesday, the group Public Citizen said the Food and Drug Administration is violating both federal law and its own regulations in refusing to act on the food colorings, which the group says may cause cancer.

Under a 1960 law governing food coloring, the FDA was supposed to decide by Jan. 12, 1963, whether food, drug and cosmetic dyes were safe. Without such a finding, the dyes were supposed to be removed from the market.

But the agency never acted on the 10 dyes at issue, instead granting more than a dozen temporary extensions allowing continued use of the dyes while FDA studies the issue further. The most recent, granted last month, runs until

Public Citizen, a consumer lobbying group begun by activist Ralph Nader, said the dyes are "too dangerous for continued use by the public" because they are known to cause cancer. The FDA staff early last year recommended a ban on six of the 10 dyes; two have been banned in parts of Europe

The FDA referred reporters questions to the Department of Health and Human Services, its parent agency, which said it had no immediate

Three of the 10 dyes are food dyes -Red No. 3, used in candy and baked goods; Yellow No. 5, used in pet food, beverages and baked goods; and Yellow No. 6, used in beverages, candy-

Public Citizen said some 3.4 million pounds of the dyes were consumed last year, more than half of all food dyes used in the United States

The remaining seven dyes are used in drugs and cosmetics - Red Nos. 8, 9,

Tapes describe futile effort to 'get back on the ground'

RENO, Nev. (AP) - The pilot of tower at Reno Cannon Galaxy Airlines Flight 203 knew almost immediately after takeoff that he had serious trouble and told airport controllers in a shaking voice, "We've got to get back on the ground," flight recordings indicate Seconds later the plane skidded into a recreational vehicle dealership 2½ miles from the runway, killing 67 people on the chartered "gambler's special" and setting off a series of fiery explosions.

Three people survived the crash, the nation's worst air disaster since July 1982. Two survivors are in critical condition.

Tapes released Tuesday by the Federal Aviation Administration indicate the pilot was concerned about vibrations in the Lockheed Electra-188 and that he requested emergency vehicles for his International Airport came at 1:01.45 a.m. Monday Seconds after takeoff, the pilot reported trouble.

'Galaxy 203 would like to make a left downwind. We've got to get back on the ground," the pilot radioed at 1:03.56.

Jim Barnett, head of the National Transportation Safety Board, said a left downwind meant the pilot wanted to bank left so he could circle the airport and return.

"He would not have been turning into a dead engine," Burnett said, meaning something may have been wrong with at least one of the two turboprops on the right side of the plane. The craft veered off to the right before crashing.

Asked for more information, the pilot replied at 1:04.06: "Yes, sir. We'd like to make a left downwind (unintelligible) vibration in the aircraft.

"That's affirmative," the pilot replied, his voice quavering.

Burnett said he did not know if the pilot's voice on the tape was shaking from fear or because of the vibration aboard the plane. The pilot was not identified.

As the FAA was making its tower tapes public Tuesday, searchers recovered the two "black boxes" from the charred fuselage of the plane after removing the last of the victims. Coroner Vern McCarty said 67 bodies were recovered.

Burnett convened the safety board late Tuesday and afterward discounted speculation that a propeller had disintegrated before "The propellers were intact at the point of impact," he said. But he did not rule out a problem with a propeller as possibly contributing to the accident.

Burnett added that the extensions were proper under the rules, but the board would "have to see whether it is a good policy.

Graduation prank leads to felony charges, court battle

FAIRFIELD, Conn. (AP) - The graduation crowd roared when Tickles the Clown plastered the dean of students at Tomlinson Junior High School with a whipped cream pie.

The 320 eighth-graders, family and friends had gathered on a gentle hillside adjoining an athletic field on the school's campus. Tickles had interrupted the ceremony, saying he had a present for William Stansfield from the

After he handed over a bouquet of multicolored balloons and sang a short song, he grabbed a whipped-cream pie out of a gift-wrapped box and shoved it into Stansfield's face. Then the clown, wearing a rainbow wig and gaily colored jumpsuit, scampered

In what has become known in this Fairfield County town as "The Pie in the Face Case," the parents of one of the graduates, Allison Barbeau, find themselves facing felony charges.

Allison, co-captain of the cheerleading squad and a quarter-finalist in the Miss Connecticut Teen pageant, was described by her mother, Mary Diorio, as the kind of girl "who wouldn't do anything wrong."

Allison, 14, is Mrs. Diorio's daughter by a previous marriage. However, authorities say Mrs. Diorio, 36, paid Robert B. Fuller, the owner of a local novelty store, $34.95 plus a $10 tip to dress as a clown and throw the pie at Stansfield.

Mrs. Diorio and her 38-year-old attorney-husband, James, also threatened Fuller, authorities say, by mentioning their affiliation with the Hell's Angels motorcycle club. In addition, they say, the couple offered to pay Fuller $10,000 not to identify her as the one who ordered the prank.

Mrs. Diorio is charged with breach of peace, tampering with a witness and bribery. If convicted on all charges, she could spend 10 years in jail and pay $11,000 in

James Diorio is charged with tampering with a witness and conspiracy to commit bribery; he could spend 10 years in jail and pay $10,000 in fines. They have pleaded innocent and deny that they were the ones who ordered the pie.

Attorneys in the case are haggling over who will be tried first and are trying to find a judge who doesn't know Diorio. No trial date has been set.

As a former public defender and now lawyer in private practice, Diorio has defended mostly indigent clients - some of them were well-known Hell's Angels in the Bridgeport area for 18 years.

Fairfield police and a state prosecutor have declined to say anything that might indicate why the Diorios would want to have had a pie thrown in the face of their daughter's dean.

Ms. Gastanian said Diorio often complained about the discipline, in which Allison had to collect "points" from her teachers anniversary of abortion ruling By The Associated Press

The 12th anniversary of the Supreme Court decision which legalized abortion passed without the violence some had feared, but with the certainty that both sides would be fighting through another year and demonstrating again next

"However sweet our victory now, the only approach we can have now is endless pressure ... so stay with us," Democratic state Rep. Jolene Unsoeld told 100 abortion rights advocates in

Olympia, Wash. 'We're going to continue to take a stand," Nelson Cooney of Project Life told 350 shivering marchers at the South Carolina Statehouse on Tuesday, anniversary of the 1973 court ruling legalizing abortion. The biggest demonstration was in the nation's capital, where 71,000 people marched to the Supreme Court after hearing President Reagan support their cause. But supporters and foes of legalized abortion pressed their case in dozens of state capitals, at family planning clinics and churches from Arizona to Maine and Oregon to Alabama

"Reagan and Bush won so big partly because of their pro-life stand and Mondale and Ferraro lost so badly precisely because of their pro-abortion position," Dr. J.C. Willke, president of the National Right To Life Committee, said in Washington

"We hope that this continuing shift in public opinion will be evident to our elected officials," he

At many clinics there was tight security because of bombings at 24 such facilities in the last year, and fears that the anniversary would invite more.

In an address by telephone to the Washington rally, Reagan declared: "We cannot condone the threatening or taking of human life to protest the taking of human life by way of abortion.

"I am convinced that our response to the 12th anniversary ... must be to re-dedicate ourselves to ending the terrible national tragedy of abortion," the president

O'Neill tells president he won't block votes on key GOP proposals

WASHINGTON (AP) - House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. his eye on President Reagan's huge re-election victory, says he won't use parliamentary roadblocks to prevent congressional votes on the administration's tax or spending programs this year.

'We're not going to block him with hearings and we're not going to block him with scheduling' O'Neill told reporters Tuesday after what he described as a "love feast" meeting with the president.

They will get an opportunity through the rules to make a presentation and have a vote of the Congress," O'Neill said. "We're not going to in any way thwart the will of the American people. We're not going to be obstructionist in any Democrats in the House used parliamentary tactics to bottle up some parts of Reagan's conservative Republican program during the last session of Congress.

O'Neill said that while he won't block the road, he is not pledging Democratic support for the Reagan program. That, he said, "is a different story. The meeting was held on the first working day of the second Reagan administration and the Massachusetts Democrat said he told the president: 'We can read. You got 59 percent

"I said to him we will give him a vote on the economic domestic policies that he is interested in. There's a mandate out there demanding those things.

Meanwhile, a key Senate Republican said that even though he believes cuts in military spending must be an element in any proposal to reduce the deficit, GOP senators have "no heart for a knock-down, drag-out" fight with the president over the issue.

'In at least the few meetings I have been in with the president, he's all but indicated that if we send him a defense budget that is too low, he will veto it and take it to seen a man more popular ... And in the country," Packwood said.
