Reagan outlines his second-term agenda

WASHINGTON (AP) -President Reagan, forced indoors by the harsh reality of a record Capital freeze, issued an inaugural rededication of his conservative principles today, declaring "We are creating a new America, a rising nation.

As Washington shivered in 25-below wind chills, Reagan moved his inaugural reenactment indoors, scrapped the traditional Pennsylvania Avenue parade. From the Rotunda under the Capitol dome, he told about 1,000 dignataries — not the 140,000 invited guests - that "there are many mountains yet to climb.

Reagan said he had succeeded in implementing the "new beginning" promised in 1981 and laid down this second-term

- "We must simplify our tax system, make it more fair and bring tax rates down.

'A new American Emancipation — a great national drive to tear down economic barriers and liberate the spirit of enterprise in the most distressed areas of our country.

-"For the sake of each child in every corner of the globe, we seek, one day, the total elimination of nuclear weapons from the face of

"I will shortly submit a budget to the Congress aimed at frezing government program spending for the next year...Let us make it unconstitutional for the federal government to spend more than it takes in.

-"We must think anew and move with new boldness, so every American who seeks work can find

With a risk of frostbite facing hundreds of thousands of parade marchers, spectators and guests at an outdoor swearing in ceremony, Reagan accepted the advice of inaugural planners and doctors and canceled the most spectacular events in a four-day, $12-million extravaganza

The cancellation of the outdoor festivities disappointed thousands who came to Washington to take part in the 50th public installation in office of an American chief of state. The president, who began his day at a worship service, was to spend an hour after lunch at Capital Centre, a suburban coliseum that was being hastily converted to an indoor parade ground for bands to play indoors with no fear of frostbite.

They were really broken up about it," said Peter LaFlamme said after his Spartan Drum and Bugle Corps from Nashua, N.H., heard of the parade cancellation. He said, however, when the corps practiced Sunday night "all the horns froze in the kids hand.

'It's a tragedy,'' said Jake Hansen, director of the American Conservative Union. "...(But) you can't get mad at God.

Reagan took the oath inside the White House at noon Sunday, the day for inaugurals fixed by the Constitution. Today's events were a public affirmation of an oath that Reagan said today "alone is cause for rejoicing.

First Lady Nancy Reagan, in a television interview, said term two would be much like term one, and she insisted that Reagan is still

"We both got a a little tired of reading that he's manipulated and somebody else makes decisions and he just sits there as sort of a puppet, or whatever, when that's not true at all," she said.

These will be years of American renewal," the president said, restating the principles that twice elected him to office, and expressing satisfaction with the results of his first term

'Government," he said, "is not our master but our servant. And, looking forward:

"We are creating a new America, a rising nation once again vibrant, robus, and alive. But the promise of our revolution was meant for all people for all future time." he said.

"There are many mountains yet to climb. We will not rest until every American, from countryside to inner city, enjoys the fullness of freedom, dignity and opportunity which is our birthright as citizens of this great Republic.

New city manager assumes position

City Manager Bob Hart assumed his new position in Pampa Monday morning as he occupied his new office and prepared for his first city commission meeting here.

Hart was in Pampa early last week meeting with department heads and other city officials for two days, reviewing the 1984 city audit and otherwise "getting a feel" for his work here.

He then returned to Sweetwater, where he was serving as city manager before accepting the job here, to "pack up things" and move to his new home in Pampa Saturday

Hart said he planned to review the audit closely to get familiar with city operations and expenses. He said he had already "learned a lot from reviewing it" while he was here last week and sees areas "that need some work the meeting at city hall. Commissioners will hold a public hearing on a request to annex land near the Coronado Community Hospital and to change its zoning from agriculture to planned development. The annexation and zoning change are requested for the development of businesses related to health care.

The panel also will consider setting a public hearing for Feb. 12 for a zoning change in the Briarwood Place addition. A zoning change from agriculture to Single Family 2 has been requested for the construction of residences and a proposed new building for the Lamar Full Gospel Assembly Church. The area includes Blocks 1 through 5 in the addition. Also scheduled for consideration Tuesday is the addition's final plat.

Commissioners will consider giving second and final approval of a zoning variance for the expansion of an existing building. The special use permit is being considered for the building in Section 101. Block 3.

Shivers sent across nation

By MARK BERNS Associated Press Writer

A brutal arctic storm blamed for at least 29 deaths brought record cold to dozens of cities today, pushing the mercury to 17 below zero in Tennessee and into the single digits in Florida, as the blast of frigid air dubbed the Alberta Clipper sent shivers across the eastern half of the nation.

Snow, meanwhile, stretched from the Mississippi Valley to the Atlantic, stranding motorists and turning highways into ribbons of

"It would probably rank as one of the major cold snaps of the century, said forecaster John Hendrickson in Indianapolis.

Temperatures as low as 9 degrees in Milton, Fla., today and 12 degrees in Tallahassee, posed a major threat to the state's citrus industry and promised a repeat of the 1983 a freeze that killed 120,000 acres of trees.

Record low temperatures for the date were set Sunday in at least 57 cities, and by 2 a.m. today.

Ingersoll-Rand gets army contract

Texas Senator Phil Gramm has announced the awarding of a $6.8 million U.S. Army contract to Pampa's Ingersoll - Rand Co.

The contract awarded to the Pampa plant calls for the manufacture of 760 steel, 120mm cannon barrels.

Larry Neal, an aide to Gramm, announced the awarding of the Army contract on Friday

Neal called the $6.8 million contract "significant," and said it "should help" the local plant in a time of depressed steel markets. The Ingersoll - Rand Oilfield Products Co. is an autonomous subsidiary of the Ingersoll - Rand Corp., based in New Jersey. The plant. Pampa's largest employer, manufactures high quality specialty steel and mobile oilfield drilling rigs in two separate divisions.

Cause of fire remains a mystery

By CATHY SPAULDING Staff Writer

One week after a sudden fire devastated the Rustic Inn Restaurant, investigators are saying they still have no idea what caused the late-night flames.

Meanwhile, Rustic Inn owner Jim Hayden announced plans to build a new cafe at the same site as the old building at 318 Brown. The restaurant, built in the mid 40s, was a popular meeting place of Pampa civic groups before fire destroyed it Jan. 12.

"It's just like it was before still under investigation," said Pampa Fire Marshall Floyd Steele. don't know how long it will be before anybody knows what happened.

Fire investigators with the fire and police departments speculate that the fire started in the dining room in the southeast part of the restaurant at about 11 p.m. Saturday, less than one hour after employees closed the place for the

Although they have an estimate of where it started, investigators are wondering how it started.

Steele has no idea on the cause. 'That's what we're trying to determine," he said, adding that he has no plans to call the state fire

Investigator Jack Stroup of Ethridge Claims, which represents the restaurant, said the police and fire investigators would be the ones to determine the cause.

Havden, who has owned the Rustic Inn since October, 1983, said he's getting ready to tear the remains of the building down. The night fire caused the roof to cave in and at least two outside walls to crumble. All that's left standing are the front and west outside walls, the office, the kitchen and a tall brick fire place which dominated the southwest dining

"We'll begin to tear down the walls next week," Hayden said, estimating that the damage was right about a $300,000 loss.

Steele said that he spent about a week clearing the place out and that he plans on calling for the city building inspector this week to oversee the tearing down of the walls

While he doesn't know the cause or yet how much damage can be claimed, Stroup was able to recall some of the history of the restaurant

'That thing started in 1946 by Jim Poole," Stroup recalled. "He put in a meet locker and a food processor. Stroup said that through several Fire chief J.D. Ray said that because of the severity of the fire. his first priority was to protect the

"I'd say the building was a total loss 15 minutes before we got there," he said, adding that when the roof collapsed at about 11:30 p.m. Saturday, "I decided to sacrifice the building and concentrate on protecting

The loss of the Rustic Inn was especially great for some Pampa civic clubs. A spokesman for the Pampa Evening Lions Club said his organization lost about $300 worth of awards, medals and memorabilia, including a wooden podium which was used by other civic groups.

Farmers speak out on farm legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) - While various lobbyists and interest groups are rushing to register their opinions on directions for new farm legislation, some researchers have gone back to the grass roots to see what farmers themselves think.

What they found in an Agriculture Department sponsored survey of more than 8.000 producers from 17 states may have strong implications for the shape of a new four-year farm bill to be hammered out by the new 99th Congress

While there was a broad diversity of opinion in response to general questions about farm policy, some clear choices emerged when farmers were asked about specific policy tools for price supports, production controls, export enhancement and soil conservation.

The survey found, for example, that the current target price system, which pays farmers direct subsidies when the market price for their crop dips below a pre-set target level, is a popular one.

In all but two states (Wisconsin and Maryland), more producers favored continuation of the system than wanted to scrap it - as the Reagan administration will seek to do in the farm proposals it will send Congress in early February. A sizable majority favored either leaving the targets the same or raising them, with only a small segment preferring lower target prices.

As might be expected, the strongest support for target prices came from grain farmers and from those with relatively large annual sales volumes, who reap the largest benefits

In 16 of the 17 surveyed states, more farmers wanted to see the farmer-owned grain reserve continued than wanted to eliminate The reserve is a loan-and-storage device established in 1977 to help insulate farmers from sudden fluctuations in world markets and to create a stock for humanitarian uses. In Washington, producers were evenly split on the question.

That opinion also was at odds with the administration's proposal, which advocates doing away with the reserve. Strongest support came from farmers in the North Central and Southern states, and from those with gross annual sales greater than $200,000.

Yet another area where farmers disagreed with an administration proposal was the issue of limiting direct subsidy payments to producers. The most frequently expressed opinion in 13 of the 17 states was to make no change in the current $50,000-a-year limit.

Reagan's farm proposal reportedly will seek to lower the cap to $20,000. Farmers in four states - Ohio, Wisconsin, Alabama and Maryland - agreed that the limit should be lower Despite sentiment for retaining such income-support mechanisms, the report noted, "a majority in every state favored balancing the budget by cutting all government programs, including farm price supports.

In one important area, farmers were in agreement with the administration: the setting of price-support loan rates for commodities like wheat, corn, cotton and rice.

The first family - together again for the inauguration

WASHINGTON (AP) - The one-half guests in the hall. White House is bulging with Reagan relatives, a rare reunion for a first family with some well-publicized differences. And despite the inauguration, the president is having to share the spotlight with his 20-month-old granddaughter.

Guests on hand for the inauguration include President Reagan's brother, first lady Nancy Reagan's brother, the Reagans' two children, the two children of his first marriage, a niece and nephew and various in-laws.

But much of the focus is on 20-month-old Ashley Reagan, the granddaughter the president had never seen until Dec. 28 when he met with son Michael in Los Angeles to settle a highly publicized family scrap.

The first lady's press secretary, Sheila Tate, briefing reporters on plans for Sunday's private but televised swearing-in, told reporters there would be 96 and The half, she said, would be

Ashley on her father's knee. The line got a laugh, and also drew attention to the presence at the White House of Michael, whom Nancy Reagan described in November as estranged from his Actually, there were 94 guests and, instead of sitting on her dad's knee. Ashley was sucking on a bottle in the arms of a baby-sitter in the huge Cross Hall, adjoining the State Floor where the ceremony was held.

Ashley's 6-year-old brother Cameron was the youngest guest at the oath-taking itself. He got last-minute instructions and a kiss on the head from his father before they walked in to take their seats.

In a pre-Thanksgiving interview, Mrs. Reagan said there had been an estrangement between the president and Michael, 39, the adopted son of Reagan and his first wife, actress Jane Wyman.

Michael had been absent from a number of family gatherings since Reagan's election in 1980 and had complained publicly that his father and stepmother did not spend enough time with their grandchildren.

After the holiday season get-together at a Los Angeles hotel, Mrs. Reagan issued a statement saying, "There are no differences; all is resolved. Maureen Reagan, 44, the president's daughter by his first marriage, and her husband, Dennis Revell, were put up in the Lincoln bedroom.

Also on hand was Ronald Prescott Reagan, 26, writer son of the president and first lady, and his wife, Doria. His sister, actress Patti Davis, 32, was flying to Washington from California Sunday night. Her husband of five months, yoga instructor Paul Grilley, could not come because he has a new job, Ms. Tate said

Building a miniature world

To most people model railroading is nothing more than adults

But, to the dedicated model railroader, it is considerably more - it is the building of a portion of a miniature world and being able to work at various skills not normally used in one's daily life.

Of course, there is the thrill of operating the trains, including the switching of freight cars from one location to another on the model railroad la vout

Over the years I have known numerous model railroaders, and each one has a separate interest in modeling. For some it is the challenge of construction of accurate scenery, while for others construction of accurately scaled, super - detailed buildings and houses is the fascination. For these operation of the trains is

For others, train operation and construction of super - detailed models are the key factor, with only enough time spent on the scenery and buildings to make a satisfactory covering for the bare structure supporting the railroad layout. These modelers lavish hours of attention to smooth operation of the trains, including installation of fancy block signals, train detection gear and other fancy items to make operation of their model trains as near to the methods use on a "real" railroad.

But, for me, it is the combination of everything that goes into the model railroad and all of the skills necessary for completion of the layout and smooth operation of the model trains.

While there are various sizes of scale trains, ranging from the "0" guage which is 1-48th the size of the real thing down to the "Z" or 'Zed' scale which is 1-240th of the full size, the most popular in the United States is the "HO" which is 1-87th the size of full-size trains. Of course, many modelers, limited for space, model in the "N

Working in the HO scale means that everything must be constructed on the ratio of 3.5 millimeters equals one foot.

When beginning to construct a new model railroad layout, it is necessary to first design the track layout, remembering that curves cannot be too sharp and grades cannot be too steep if the trains are to operate properly. A good knowledge of the actual construction methods and workings of a real railroad is helpful at this point

In addition to having a basic knowledge of railroad engineering, the modeler must also understand something about geology, if the terrian and rock outcroppings on the model railroad layout are to seem authentic. Most moderlers like mountain scenery, so some research on the type of mountains and other scenery to be modeled becomes necessary

First comes construction of the benchwood, the wooden frame which will support the track and scenery. When the benchwork is completed, the layout of the roadbed for the track, sidings and rail yards comes next. After many hours of tedious work, the track is finally installed, but still the trains are not not ready to roll

At this point, the modeler must switch from being a civil engineer and track layer to that of being an electrical engineer and electrician. The task of wiring the electrical circuits to the various sections of track and construction and wiring of the control panel now occupies his or her time for numerous evenings and weekends.

When the electrical system is operational, it is finally time to try operating a train. But, the experience modeler doesn't risk a fancy train at this point. Usually an old, easy running locomotive which cannot easily be damaged it used to test all of the track

This is when the modeler finds the spots where the track guage is either too narrow or too wide; where the turnouts are not working properly; the curves which do not have smooth transitions to and from the straight track; the sharp dips or bumps which bounce the locomotive off the track; and numerous other problems. Hopefully the locomotive hasn't been dumped on the floor too often

Of course, there is always a section which is improperly wired and no current is fed to the locomotive.

When all of these problems are solved and the track is perfect and the electrical system operates without problems, the modeler can begin to enjoy his model railroad — but there is still much work to do. Next comes the scenery, with the first step construction of the basework. While there are numerous methods of construction, most modelers use chicken wire and plaster to form the base

The chicken wire is tacked to the wooden benchwork as it is bent and curved to the contour planned for the landscape. Where flat areas are to be located, such as towns and other low - lying areas, plywood or other flat material is used.

After the chicken wire is installed, the completed track and the floor is covered and pieces of paper soaked in a mixture or plaster are placed over the chicken wire. Sometimes several layers of the paster soaked paper are necessary to form the needed ground

At this point, it doesn't look much like anything, but with the plaster painted a "muddy" shade, it starts to take shape. At this point most modelers will begin "super-detailing" a small portion of

First come the rocks, made either by cutting the rock design into layers of plaster or by casting of rocks in rubber molds made from actual rocks. Many modelers use chunks of coal for making of their

After the rock work is completed, the trees, grass, shrubs and other scenery, made from ground foam, colored dry plaster, weeds, and a variety of other items, is "planted" and the buildings are installed. As each area is completed, the modeler moves on to another area and hopefully the layout is completed someday. While most model railroad layouts are built by the individual modeler, lucky is the person who has a family which is also interested in the hobby. Some of the best scenery and buildings I have viewed over the years have been constructed by the wives and daughters of the modelers. The hobby isn't just for fathers and sons.

For some modelers the layout is never "finished." These are the ones who decide that as they built their layout, they learned by doing and refined their skills - finding that the part build in the beginning can be improved upon. Sometimes a new design will make the model railroad better.

Ii have met model railroaders who have been working on one layout for more than 30 years and some model railroad clubs who have been tearing apart portions of their large layouts and rebuilding them for almost as long

Like the real world, which is imperfect, it seems model railroads can always be improved

Yes, I admit I "like to play with trains," - but that is only a small part of the enjoyment. For me the real enjoyment is attempting to build a miniature world, complete with the steam locomotives I knew

State inspectors seek help

EL PASO, Texas (AP) - State liquor- and cigarette-tax collection stations along the Texas-Mexico border have not been paying for themselves since 1979, a state

But they might do much better if federal inspectors in El Paso cooperated more with the state inspectors, said Ruben Pena, port supervisor for the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission.

Many Americans bring cigarettes and liquor from Mexico through El Paso border stations without paying state tax on them.

Chilling temperatures are likely for several more days, forecaster says

By The Associated Press

A bone-chilling arctic storm raced through Texas and was well off the Texas coast today, but a frigid air mass that funneled in behind the front will keep temperatures across the state chilly for several more days, weather experts said.

"It looks like we're going to remain in a very cold pattern for much of the week," said National Weather Service forecaster Bill Alexander.

The front arrived Saturday, dropping temperatures 30 degrees in a matter of a few hours.

The following air mass, described by forecasters as a "cold dome," kept the frosty air in Texas and the hot air out. Early today, the center of the air mass was located over extreme South Texas. meteorologists said.

"It's very deep, very dense, and there's nothing to push it out of the way," Alexander said.

Freezing temperatures were evident as far south as the lower valley, where readings were generally in the upper 20s.

Elsewhere, temperatures were in the mid-to-upper teens over most of North Texas and West Texas, with readings in the lower to middle 20s along the coast.

The temperature at Port Arthur fell to 20 degrees just before 4 a.m. breaking the previous record low of 21 degrees set in 1935.

Winds had subsided to light and variable across much of the state except for South Texas, where a northerly wind at 15 to 20 mph drove wind chill factors to 5 below

But temperatures were expected to head upward after daybreak, with the day's highs likely to range from the 30s in the north to the 40s over South Texas. However, temperatures were expected to drop into the upper teens again tonight for much of Texas.

Two temperature records fell Sunday at Dallas-Fort Worth Airport. At 7:50 a.m., the temperature fell to 10 degrees. breaking the previous record low for the date of 12 set in 1963. Sunday's high climbed only to 22, for the date of 29 set in 1978.

Damaged and downed power lines stole electricity from about 15.000 Dallas County residents, some for as long as five hours, and plumbers said they were flooded with reports of frozen water pipes.

The homeless, meanwhile, headed to inner-city shelters. Fred Claussen, a 34-year-old transient said he abandoned plans to walk from Fort Worth to Dallas after temperatures plummeted Saturday night from a balmy 67 degrees to below freezing.

Instead, he took refuge in the back of an empty moving van, he said. By Sunday, a wind chill factor below zero drove him to the Dallas Life Foundation mission in downtown Dallas.

"I came to North Texas because I didn't think I could handle living on the street in the northern United States during the winter, and I didn't want to resort to living in missions," Claussen said. 'But I don't think anyone should have to endanger themselves with frostbite or stay out in the cold just because they don't have the money to stay somewhere," he said.

'I haven't really counted it, but it looks like (we have) 115, maybe 120, and we're not through letting them in yet," a mission spokesman said. There were only 72 beds, so others were sleeping in the chapel or the kitchen

In Abilene, a 45-year-old man and his 19-year-old daughter survived nearly 16 hours in the cold after their single-engine plane crashed about 10 miles from the

A 58-year-old Dallas man was believed to have drowned after his boat capsized in heavy winds on Proctor Lake in Comanche County. Wind gusts of more than 50 mph and temperatures well below freezing left hundreds of homes west of Austin without electricity Sunday. The weather also was blamed for a fire that claimed the life of an elderly Austin resident.

The power outage, reported about 8:15 a.m., darkened 300 to 500 homes in the Rob Roy, Davenport Ranch, and Rivercrest subdivisions in West Austin, said Sam Jones, manager of system control for the city Electric Department.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmosi capabilities

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Take these stories with grain of salt

One of the things that makes it difficult to assess news stories from our nation's capital is that politicians, journalists, bureaucrats, lobbyists and a corps of assorted hangers-on and aspirants for power and celebrity are constantly using one another.

Sometimes it's a conscious and mutually agreeable process, sometimes one party is pulling wool over somebody's eyes. Many of the so-called news story have more behind them than simply relaying the news to the

Take a recent flurry of stories about members of Congress and other govenment officials coming upon reports that Nicaraguan rebels have been guilty of atrocities like rape, torture and murder of unarmed civilians. There's probably truth in the reports, but it's hardly a revelation. We may like to pretend otherwise, but any revolutionary movement commits excesses and harbors freebooters and sadists.

The story made the news because congressional committee have been holding hearings on the ill-advised CIA manual for Nicaraguan revolutionaries. The CIA has come up with the disingenuous explanation that the Nicaraguan rebels were nasties and the CIA wants to help them run their revolution like Boy Scouts. Congressmen scoffed.

The scoffing, however, was somewhat contrived. Congress suspended U.S. aid to the Nicaragua rebels last year, but there sure to be a move this spring to resume it. The release of information about rebel misdeeds has the air of a gambit by those who would oppose aid to the anti-Santinista forces, even if they were trustworthy, loyal, helpful and all that. It's understandably easier to oppose aid to a bunch of murderous thungs than to a bunch of irrepressible freedom fighters. The freedom fighters are learning to play the Washington game, too. Bosco Matamoros, a rebel official, has admitted there have been some excesses, but he claims the rebels are getting better. "We have a voluminous file on Sandinista atrocities," as well, he said. No doubt they do, and no doubt many of them are

So the game goes on. All sides try to present the issue in black-and-white terms-irreproachable good guys vs.

The truth is that revolution is a messy business. One of the prices we pay when "our" government decides to support a revolution is an increase in hypocristy—trying to pretend its a sanitized, neat and orderly process.

All of those wheels within wheels make it difficult for the average person to make much sense out of the newspaper stories or television reports. Our advise is to take it all with several grains of salt.

Pay cut not worth trouble

With the politically savvy James Baker leaving the White House, the president and his new chief, Don Regan, will need all the help they can get on Capitol Hill They should, therefore, abandon David Stockman's foolish plan to cut federal employees' pay five percent. One of the greatest dangers for any administration is the innate power of an entrenched bureaucracy to sabotage efforts to reduce or curtail government's size and

As the Heritage Foundation's "Mandate for Leadership II" points out in its final chapter, "The bureaucratic entrepreneur will not be content merely to clock administration proposals: he wishes to impose his own policy agenda on an unwary administration.

His resources "will generally exceed that of the politically appointed executive (over him), including a sizeable staff of loyal careerists; and a well - established network of influential persons connected to the policy area, both inside and outside of government (Congress, the media, academe, etc.).

Given this, a smart conservative administration will avoid deliberately antagonizing the bureaucracy, unless the gains are very large, and the potential for winning clear. On this test, the $1.5 - billion federal pay cut fails completely. It is one thing to try to hold down the mission of government - it is quite another to savage those who are merely carrying out that mission as authorized by Congress. We may, for example, think weather forecasting should be privatized, but in the meantime, we should not beat up, unnecessarily, on the loyal employees of the U.S. Weather Service.

The rationale for this pay - cut proposal is that federal civil service pay scales are higher than the average for all U.S. workers. In 1982, the average federal salary was $22,963, the average private wage - salary was $13,880, and for manufacturing workers $17,192. But, overall, federal agencies employ a much higher percentage of professional, technical, and managerial personnel than the private sector.

The Grace Commission has rightly focussed attention on the tendency of federal agencies to practice "bracket - creep," namely, awarding much higher grade status to a much larger share of their specific professional and technical employees than does the private sector. But, Grace found "bracket creep" amounted to less than 5 percent between 1974 and 1982. Even with it, the average real pay of federal civilian workers fell about 7 percent, compared to about 4 percent in the private sector as a whole, 1974 - 82.

More important, the greatest decline in real pay among federal workers came at the lowest grades, 1 through 9, which lost an average of 12 percent in constant - dollar buying power (using the GNP deflator) from 1974 - 82 - three times the relative loss of the individual private - sector job.

For example, the average Grade 3 clerk earned $6,916 in 1974, and $10,915 in 1982. But, after inflation, the 1982 pay falls to $6,072 in 1974 buying power, a 12 - percent decline. And the average Grade 9 administrator - professional earned $13,736 in 1974, and $21,811 in 1982 - but because of inflation his 1982 "real" pay was worth only $12,133 in 1974 buying power.

Many federal agencies are now losing their best career executives and professionals at the top grades either to early retirement or to competitive opportunities in the private sector, because, over the last five years, in particular, the top four grades (15 - 18) have been "capped." According to the Grace Commission, these executives have received pay increases some 27 - percent below even the modest increases granted in grades 1 - 14.

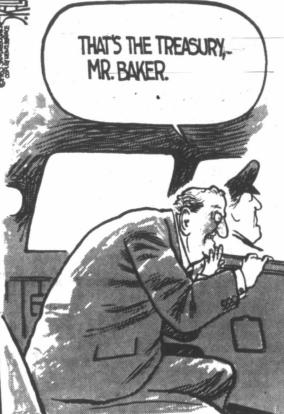

"Because of pay caps," Grace's researcher writes, "federal executives at the peak of their managerial careers are retiring at an alarmingly high rate. For example, 3,137 career executives retired in 1980, 6.2 times the 508 who retired in

While conservatives might well rejoice at such an exodus, they should be alarmed that the same process is killing management quality at the Pentagon, as well as at Health and Human Services. We may not like a $900 - billion government, but we had better not leave the government in the hands of under - qualified executives. Ironically, the administration has apparently abandoned its far more financially productive, and less politically risky, plans to raise employee contribution levels to the Civil Service Retirement System (CSRS) - and they have proposed nothing to curb its over - generous early retirement provision, which are driving so many workers to pension out early

Eat less and live longer

Americans, starting early enough, can expect to live a healthy, active 120 years merely by avoiding

Dr. Roy Walford, University of California, has written five books on how to maximize the human life span. He has meticulously re-researched the findings of a score of scholars on the subject before stating "the case for undernutrition.

"Undernutrition" is not to be confused with "malnutrition." the former requires adequate and critical nutrients - vitamins, amino acids, fatty acids and minerals, but with reduced caloric intake - either by eating less each meal or by fasting one or two days a week.

His personal regimen is total abstinence from food for two successive days each week and a healthy supplemented diet the other five days.

What's the evidence it works?

In lab rats, among fully - fed rats, 50 percent developed cancers of one sort or another. Among mice on the restricted diet only 13 percent developed cancer

In some strains of mice the incidence of breast cancer was reduced from 60 percent to zero - just by long - term underfeeding.

The incidence of cancer of lymphatic tissue is 30 times greater in fully - fed animals. Kidney disease, vascular disease and heart disease are similarly reduced by underfeeding...from 100 percent, 63 percent and 98 percent to 25 percent, 10 percent and 26 percent. Pigeons, susceptible to arteriosclerosis, have much less susceptibility when underfed.

VA researchers find that lab rats exposed to high doses of X - ray suffer 100 percent incidence of cancer - except when their food intake is cut in half. Then the cancer rate is reduced to 31 percent for females, 6.7 percent for males

Controlled testing which can be accomplished in weeks in lab animals requires a lifetime in humans.

And how many humans are willing to undereat for a lifetime?

But Dr. Walford says some nonacademic dietary advocates are ahead of the medical schools in encouraging restricted diets: Pritikin, Scarsdale, Atkins, others

In the lab, aside from the lesser propensity to disease, biochemical measurements show that animals on a curtailed diet stay younger longer.

Pretty convincing evidence that we could. (c) 1985, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Reagan learns facts about South Africa

By Don Graff

Desmond Tutu had some surprising news for Ronald Reagan.

The Nobel Peace Prize winner and Anglican bishop of Johannesburg, now back home in South Africa, reports that during his much-publicized chat with the president in Washington last month he revealed that he did not have a South African passport, only a document describing his nationality as "indeterminable.

The president, according to the bishop, was "visibly shaken.

Welcome to the reality of South Africa, Mr. President. Presumably there are some around the White House and State Department who know what's going on but they obviously hadn't bothered to clue you in.

That's "quiet diplomacy" for you. Bishop Tutu cannot get a passport because he is black, as is three-quarters of the South African population. Blacks legally are not citizens of South Africa but of scattered and largely meaningless tribal "homelands." These homelands are a legal fiction invented by the white regime to deny the black majority political legitimacy and freedom of movement

It is a fiction the bishop refuses to accept. South Africa, he reiterates in defiance of Pretoria's efforts to decree otherwise, is "my country.

Neither is he willing to accept other things about his country, such as the legitimacy of the "vicious system" itself.

And he has harsh words - "evil, immoral and un-Christian," he says he told the president - for the current American policy of seeking to change that system by quiet persuasion rather than public pressure. The practical effect of this policy, he believes, is to reinforce the status quo in South Africa.

'We have a moral issue here. You have a system that treats human beings as less than human beings. It's a question of whether you support justice or oppose justice," he says.

Defiance and outspokenness have earned Bishp Tutu a reputation among white South Africans as a radical and an advocate of violence. He is distressed that he should be so misunderstood and emphasizes his commitment to peaceful change. He is, he says, "desperate" to avert the 'ghastly alternative.'

When a pile of cups is tottering on the edge of the table and you warn that they will crash to the ground, in South Africa you are blamed when that happens, when your warning was meant to cause people to move the cups to the center of the table, away from disaster," he said in an eloquent, even for him, statement on his return to Johannesburg at the new year.

"For goodness sakes, will they hear, will white people hear what we are trying to say? Please, all we are asking you to do is to recognize that we are humans, too. When you scratch us, we bleed. When you tickle us, we laugh.'

Eloquence, ecclesiastical status and Nobel celebrity have thrust Bishop Tutu into the leadership of South Africa's blacks. But he is, in his own estimation, "a leader by default, only because nature does not allow a vacuum." The vacuum resulted from imprisonment or exile of so many others who have sought to speak for the black majority.

So he is now it, and possibly all that still stands between white South Africa and the violent revolution it so

The bishop is himself surprised that radical blacks are still willing to acknowledge moderate leadership such as his

"What have we got to show for all our talk of peaceful change?" he asks. "Nothing.

If Washington's practioners of quiet diplomacy are really honest with themselves, they are asking the same question

And getting the same answer.

Daughter's secret abortion is mother's secret burden

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Our beautiful college sophomore came home for the Christmas holidays, and her father and I were thrilled to see her. We live in the Midwest, and she goes to an Eastern college where she's a top

Now for the bombshell. She told me that she had had an abortion two months ago! I nearly dropped dead. I didn't even know she wasn't still a virgin. She said she had been intimate with two boys-both college students. Worse yet, she wasn't sure which one got her pregnant. (I am shaking so hard as I write this, I can hardly hold the pen.)

Of course I forgave her, and I told her to go to confession. She said she had already gone. She begged me not to tell her father.

Why, oh why did she tell me? There is nothing I can do about it except feel rotten. How I wish she hadn't told me! Should I tell my husband? He would be crushed. I feel very guilty keeping this from him because we've always been so

Please tell me what to do. I don't think I can handle this alone. SICK AT HEART

DEAR SICK: Tell your priest, tell your God, and if that doesn't lighten your burden, talk to a counselor, but please don't tell your husband. It would be a kindness to spare him the heartache you are experiencing.

DEAR ABBY: Although this is too late for Christmas, I have some advice for your readers that is applicable all year:

When the mail carrier leaves mail for someone not living at your address, i.e. mail for 913 South Elm St. delivered to 913 North Elm St., do not write "Wrong Address" on the envelope and drop it into a mailbox!

A postal employee may not know that the letter was delivered to the wrong address-he may assume that it was incorrectly addressed, in which case the letter will be returned to sender, if there is a return address on the envelope. If there is no return address on the envelope, it will go to the dead-letter office.

So instead of writing "Wrong Address" or "Not for This Address" on the letter (or package), write "Delivered to Wrong Address," then place it where your mail carrier, who probably made the error in the first place, can see it and deliver it to the

Turn jewelry into cash

DEAR BRUCE WILLIAMS — I have a fairly expensive engagement ring from a first marriage and very frankly, while it's valuable, it's not something I have any affection for.

I'd feel better if I could turn it into

I'm reluctant to put an ad in the newspaper and have strangers coming into my home knowing that I have an expensive ring in my possession. Can you give me an idea how I can dispose of this ring at a fair price without putting myself and my family in jeopardy? — L.B., Denver, Colo.

DEAR L.B. — There are a few courses of action open to you. There are a number of jewelers who actively solicit the secondary jewelry market. These jewelers purchase rings like yours at the best price they can get, then resell them.

But be wary of the jeweler who says, "How much do you want for this ring?" The jeweler should say he will give you so much for the ring rather than trying to have you establish the price. He's the one who is supposed to know what the value of jewelry is and how much he can afford to pay for it.

Another option you might wish to explore is the jeweler who will act as a broker. The jeweler-broker will take your ring in his store and give you a receipt for it. Many jewelers can fingerprint your diamond so it can never be substituted, and, of course, this jeweler should be bonded and insured.

He will attempt to sell your ring wholesale or retail and take a 10 percent commission for the sale.

Remember, this is not instant cash: it may take a week or several months to find the appropriate buyer. There is no cost to you until the sale is completed. In the event that there is no sale, the jewelry is returned to you, and you and the jeweler have no claim on one another.

The old saying, "If you don't know ewelry then know your jeweler," certainly applies in the sale as well as the purchase of jewelry.

The diamond and jewelry market is an extremely volatile one; prices can fluctuate wildly. Investigate the credentials of the jeweler you're dealing with very, very carefully

DEAR D.B. - I certainly do.

A furnace as old as your's has to be grossly inefficient no matter how well it's maintained. When oil was very, very inexpensive this inefficiency could be tolerated. But now with $1-a-gallon-plus oil, you really can't afford to have as inefficient a unit as you presently are harboring.

AIDS - or acquired immune deficiency syndrome, a disease that destroys the body's ability to fight disease - used to plague only cities with large homosexual populations such as New York and San Francisco.

But recently, the disease has been spreading to Texas and other states across the nation. Texas now ranks fifth among other states in the number of cases reported, recording at least 357 among the nation's 7,788 cases.

"It is the highest priority research item in the public health services at the moment," said Wilmon Rushing, AIDS program management officer at the national Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta

Last week, two scientific groups independently reported completing analyses of the genetic material of the virus that is believed to cause the deadly disease.

Recently, the federal Food and Drug Administration said it expects to approve a commercial blood test soon that can determine whether a person has been exposed to AIDS or may be a carrier.

But still, scientists say, there is no medical cure or preventive vaccination in sight, which is alarming since nearly 100 new AIDS cases are reported each week to the CDC's headquarters.

Across the country, an average of 168 people die every month, officials add. In Dallas County, epidemiologists say, AIDS deaths now are occurring at the rate of one every 10 days.

"A year and a half ago, it was somebody else getting AIDS. Now it is people we know — friends or lovers," said Bill Appleman, executive director of a counseling center in Dallas' gay community.

So far, the virus has shown a fatality rate of about 80 percent, killing some victims quickly and causing others to suffer for two or

"We've been hit so many times, it's getting to be ridiculous," Steve Johnson, a spokesman for the Texas Citrus and Vegetable Association, said Sunday

Ray Prewett, executive vice president of Texas Citrus Mutual, said the extent of the damage would depend on how long the cold spell lasts

"It could suddenly be worse than anything we've had this winter.' Prewett said

Equipment moved to new line

EDITOR'S NOTE - The following story was submitted to the Israeli military censor, who ordered several changes.

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) - The Israeli army in Lebanon has begun dismantling installations and moving equipment in the first phase of its planned pullout, and two Israeli newspapers said today the initial operation may be completed before the announced Feb. 18 deadline

Lebanese and Israeli negotiators have agreed to resume talks on Tuesday about details of the withdrawal, which Prime Minister Shimon Peres of Israel says could be finished by late summer.

The Israelis have said the withdrawal will have three phases, with the first stage being an 18-mile pullback to the south.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Sunday that Israel will pull out of the Sidon area of south Lebanon by Feb. 18 "with or without coordination with the United Nations and the Lebanese. The Jerusalem Post quoted military sources as saying that the first stage of the pullout could be completed before Feb. 18 if Tuesday's talks yield progress on the orderly transition of security duties to either U.N.-peacekeeping troops or the Lebanese army.

The daily Davar reported that Israel will try to accelerate its withdrawal operation because a speedy pullout lowers the risk of guerrilla attacks on the retreating

An Israeli military source who spoke on condition he not be identified said today that if the dismantling of non-essential installations and shifting of equipment goes smoothly, and if the U.N. peacekeeping force purchases some of the heavy equipment, then the soldiers could complete the operation ahead of schedule.

But the source said the dismantling operation would have little effect on the withdrawal of troops and combat gear.

Israel invaded Lebanon, its northern neighbor, in June 1982, saying it sought to drive out Palestinian terrorists who were launching cross-border attacks.

Abortion supporters, opponents demonstrate toward red-letter date

By The Associated Press

Pro-choice supporters maintained vigils today in 18 states on the eve of the 12th anniversary of the legalization of abortion after activists in North Dakota formed a human chain in sub-zero temperatures and demonstrators who thronged to Washington, D.C., were driven from a clinic by a bomb threat.

More than a hundred counter-demonstrating abortion foes also appeared at the Fargo, N.D., clinic, and anti-abortionists in many states took to the streets.

Meanwhile, three men were under arrest in connection with eight anti-abortion bombings in Washington, D.C., Virginia and Maryland in the past year.

At least 24 such attacks have occurred since January 1984, and the National Organization for Women has sponsored the round-the-clock vigils that continued today at 25 family planning centers and abortion clinics in 18 states to protest the

Duck hunter missing, presumed drowned

COMANCHE, Texas (AP) — The search for a 58-year-old engineer missing after sudden wind gusts capsized his boat is scheduled to resume today in Proctor Lake, officials say.

Lloyd Lauderdale of Dallas, an E-Systems Inc. employee, apparently lost consciousness almost immediately after being dumped into sub-freezing waters at about 6:30 p.m. Saturday, according to Richard Booker, park ranger for the Army Corps of Engineers.

The boat's motor died, and gusting winds whipped the boat around and capsized it in the lake that is about 100 miles southwest of Fort Worth, the official said.

James Wakefield, 44, of Dallas tried to tie Lauderdale onto the boat but couldn't hold onto him,

Montana leaves Marino's shadow

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) -When the San Francisco defense went after Dan Marino, he had nowhere to go. When the Miami defense went after Joe Montana, he went wherever he wanted.

When you hear all week long. Miami, Miami, how're you gonna stop Miami? you get to feeling overlooked, Montana said. 'Nobody was asking, 'How're they gonna stop us?

Miami still doesn't have an answer

Neither, for that matter, does any other team in the National Football League - save for the Pittsburgh Steelers. But for that loss last Oct. 14, the 49ers would have finished this season 19-0.

Instead, Sunday's 38-16 victory was San Francisco's 18th of the season, an NFL record, and the 49ers' second Super Bowl victory in four years.

Dan Marino is a great quarterback, a great young quarterback, 49er coach Bill Walsh said, "but in my mind, Joe Montana is the best quarterback in the game today and maybe of all

It was supposed to be the greatest Super Bowlever.

Instead, just as last year's pre-game publicity blitz bombed under the weight of the Los Angeles Raiders' 38-9 blowout of the Washington Redskins, so did Sunday's super-hyped meeting disintegrate by halftime.

Montana said hè didn't have anything to prove, but the 49ers' quarterback ended up proving that his two strong legs are every bit the equal of Marino's one rifle arm

"He's bigger, stronger than I am," Montana said. But not faster.

The Dolphins rushed just nine times, a Super Bowl low, for 25 yards, and Marino was forced to go to the air 50 times, a Super Bowl

'All we heard all week was what a quick release Dan Marino had and what a good offensive line they had," said Gary Johnson, one of San Francisco's shuttling defensive linemen. "I guess we took it personally."

When the 49ers' secondary took away his deep receivers, the immobile Marino was all but helpless - sacked four times, the most in any game in his two-year pro career and the first time his sacks outnumbered his touchdown passes (one). Montana also was sacked. Once. For five yards.

When it didn't matter.

"Not their fault," he said, absolving his offensive line of all guilt. Sheepishly, he added: "I slipped.

When Montar 's receivers were covered, he could always call his own number. He did — five times, rushing for 59 yards, a Super Bowl record for a quarterback, and a touchdown

Not that his receivers were covered all that often. Montana completed 24 of 35 passes for 331 yards, another Super Bowl record, and three touchdowns.

If Montana didn't feel like passing or running himself, he had Wendell Tyler and Roger Craig behind him. They plowed through the Miami defense for 123 of the 49ers' 211 yards on the ground.

The 49ers' offense in general and as San Francisco won its second Super Bowl and Montana his second most valuable player

The game began somewhat like the grand battle everyone expected it to be. Miami scored the first time it had the ball, on Uwe Von Schamann's 37-yard field goal. San Francisco scored on its second possession, on Montana's 33-yard pass to Carl Monroe. And Miami scored on its second possession, on Marino's 2-yard pass to Dan Johnson

The first quarter ended with Miami on top 10-7. But the end of the quarter also signaled the end of Dolphins' offense.

They had rushed for 12 yards; they got 13 the rest of the way.

Montana in particular did just about anything they felt like doing downs; they got 12 the rest of the way. Marino had passed for 103 yards; he got 215 the rest of the way, more than half of that when the game was out of reach in the fourth quarter.

They got two field goals - one an outright gift — in the final 12 seconds of the second period after the 49ers had punched in three more touchdowns on Montana's 8-yard pass to Craig, Montana's 6-yard run and Craig's 2-yard run.

The 10 points in the third quarter - Ray Wersching's 27-yard field goal and Montana's 16-yard pass to Craig, giving him a Super Bowl-record three TDs and 18 points - enabled the 49ers to tie the Raiders' year-old Super Bowl record for the most points in a

49ers may not stop with one Super win

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Just winning Super Bowl XIX may not be enough for the San Francisco

"Maybe we started something out there. Maybe a dynasty," said running back Wendell Tyler after the shattering 38-16 victory Sunday over the Miami

If not what they started, 49ers Coach Bill Walsh would like people to know how they finished.

"It was a truly great performance by a truly great team." he said. "I think it's one of the best teams of all time.

Certainly one of the best teams in a Super Bowl, as the record book will attest.

The 49ers ran up a record 537 yards on offense, and the San Francisco defense humbled the NFL's highest-scoring team. The 38 points tied the Super Bowl record set last year by the Los Angeles Raiders. Joe Montana had a double-record day with 331 yards passing and 59 running, the most yards by a quarterback on the ground. Running back Roger Craig's three touchdowns, two on passes and one on a run, also set a record, as did his 18 points.

And by finishing the season with a 12-game winning streak for their second title in four years. the 49ers became the first NFL team to win 18 games

To hear Walsh, there wasn't even anything very difficult about it.

'At one point, I think the Dolphins knew they'd have to move the ball and score every time, because we were moving the ball so well." Walsh said. "There was no turning point other than rolling up the

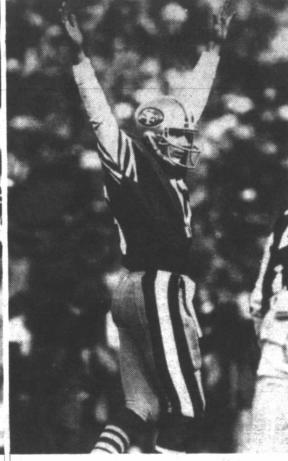

If there was a turning point, however, it could well have been early in the second period when the 49ers' defense forced the Dolphins, then leading 10-7, to punt from their 10-yard line.

The agony...

Dolphins' defeat hard to swallow

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) - Miami's Bob Baumhower paused a moment and then reflected on the road to Super Bowl XIX.

He recalled all the hard work, the thrill of going 16-2 to reach Sunday's National Football League's championship game, and then the disappointment of

"It tough. It's the last game of the year and very hard to swallow," the 265-pound nose tackle said after the San Francisco 49ers whipped the Dolphins 38-16 in Stanford Stadium.

The loss was the Dolphins' second in three years in the Super Bowl and Coach Don Shula's fourth in a record six appearances.

"It's a sad thing for a team to end the season this way," Shula said. "When we get home, we'll look at areas where we need to improve. We're a young team that's going to get better.

Quarterback Dan Marino also looked ahead. "I hope we get another chance. You don't get here often," he said.

"Emotionally, we had a great year as a team overall, but this kind of takes away from it," Marino added. "It's a shame we can't be the world champs because we did play well. "It's hard to describe what I'm feeling ... I don't think a physical injury could hurt as much," guard Roy Foster said. "Everybody wants to be No. 1 and this time it's them. We're going to have to put this on the back burner, come back and try to be No. 1 next

The 49ers, capping an 18-1 campaign with their second Super Bowl title in four seasons, outplayed Miami offensively, defensively and on special teams.

San Francisco amassed 537 total yards against the Dolphins' Killer B's defense and held Marino, who averaged three touchdown passes a game during the regular season, to only one TD pass.

Superman Dan' tranformed into mere mortal by 49ers

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers tugged on Superman's cape and it came off right in their hands

Dan Marino turned out to be merely mortal, and that was not nearly good enough against a defense getting a teeny bit tired of hearing his name and numbers preached to it all week.

Most Valuable Player. The first 5.000-yard season in history. A record 48 touchdown passes.

It was all anybody wanted to talk about in the days before this Super Bowl. The 49ers heard much more than they cared to about Dangerous Dan.

"He destroyed defenses all year," noted Lawrence Pillers, resident philosopher of the San Francisco front. "But he didn't play the 49ers. Nobody else has got a defense like we do.

On the Dolphins' first possession Sunday, Marino came out firing. His first play from scrimmage was a 25-yard pass to Tony Nathan. He completed nine of his first 10 attempts, including a string of seven straight and a touchdown.

"It made us sort of mad," Pillers observed. "We think we're pretty good.

And from then on, they were. Five of Marino's next six passes were incomplete. His next hot streak, five straight completions, came on the last series of the Even when he had time, he was underthrowing, overthrowing or throwing behind his receivers.

"The chances we did have, when guys were open, sometimes I didn't hit them." he said. "We didn't play as well as we're capable of playing offensively. That's probably because they dictated some things to us as far as their four-man line and playing five, six and seven defensive backs. It's tough to throw against seven defensive backs." The 49ers started the game with a three-man rush and went to the four-man front on the third series, after Marino had led the Dolphins to a field goal and a touchdown.

We had scored. We knew he'd have to put it up in the air. We felt confident with what we can do," tackle Manu Tuiasosopo said. "We weren't going to concede anything to Marino. They were going to have to earn it.

The four-man front is the Elephant Defense in the 49ers' lexicon, a tribute to 232-pound Fred Dean, the designated pass-rusher who is a trifle more lightfooted than your average pachyderm.

We used Fred more on a regular basis than in situations, because the situation was pass all day long," Coach Bill Walsh said. In the secondary, the 49er defensive backs celebrated the thundering arrival of the elephants. Regardless of the nickel defense or six defensive backs we used, the key was the four-man rush," cornerback Ronnie Lott said. "We used it all the time on passing situations. Suddenly the foot races Miami wide receivers Mark Clayton and Mark Duper had been winning with cornerbacks and safeties all season became manageable jogs because Marino was busy running away from the elephants.

Clayton caught six passes, but only three after the first quarter. Duper's only catch was in the first

"I don't know if he got rattled," linebacker Keena Turner said. But he got lot of pressure. That's the way to defend a guy like that. The defensive line made it

Four times in the second half, the elephants sacked Marino. He had gone down that way only 14 times

Twice, the San Francisco secondary intercepted him. "The defensive backs were on a personal vendetta to stop Clayton and Duper," linebacker Riki Ellison said. "And Marino, too.

Marino had been bouncy and jovial at the start of the game. By the time the elephants were done, though, he was coming off the field throwing his hands up, as if to ask, What can I do?"

"Dan Marino had some problems," Coach Don Shula said. The offense had a tough time. We hadn't been stopped all year, but we were stopped today.

But what about the fast-improving Texas Tech Red Raiders?

about us out in West Texas," said the Red Raiders' Quentin Anderson. "When we've been beaten this season, it was by good teams like Washington, Iowa, Nebraska and Houston. And two of the games were in overtime."

Tech gets its chance for some national publicity this week when it hosts the high-flying Mustangs on Saturday night.

SMU should be ranked No. 2 in the nation by then.

The third-ranked Mustangs, who outlasted stubborn Texas Christian 74-70 on Saturday, will probably pass Duke in The Associated Press poll.

The Blue Devils lost two games last week and the Mustangs should settle into the No. 2 spot behind unbeaten Georgetown.

No SMU basketball team has ever been ranked that high.

"Whether we deserve to be ranked that high is up to the writers and broadcasters but I believe we've earned it," said SMU center Jon Koncak.

"We've done all we've been asked to do so far," said guard

Baylor Coach Jim Haller said don't overlook the Red Raiders, who gave Arkansas a severe beating last week.

I was tremendously impressed," said Haller. "I don't think any team could have stopped Tech. Nothing worked against them

Tech Coach Gerald Myers said the Red Raiders aren't looking to far ahead.

"We're looking at a real tough game against A&M on Wednesday night and not even thinking about SMU." Myers said.

SMU is now 15-1 and off to the best start in the school's history. The Mustangs are the only unbeaten team in Southwest Conference play with a 5-0 ledger. Houston and Texas Tech are tied

The Cougars bounced Arkansas 78-73 in Hofheinz Pavilion, Texas Tech routed Baylor 92-71 in Heart O' Texas Coliseum in Waco, and Texas A&M sped past Texas 66-61 in Austin

The speedy Mustangs will get two severe road tests this week.

On Wednesday, SMU will be at Texas and must travel to Lubbock on Saturday.

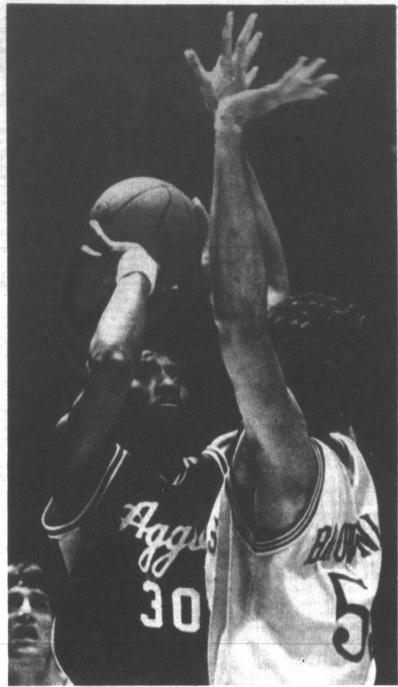

Houston and Tech are 4-1. Houston hosts Baylor on Thursday and is at Texas A&M on Sunday. Tech is at A&M on Wednesday before hosting the Mustangs.

Arkansas dropped to 3-3 with the loss to Houston.

"This week we really ran into a buzzsaw at Texas Tech and Houston," said Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton. "We're not out of the race yet but we certainly can't afford to lose many, if any more."

SMU may have found a star in sophomore guard Johnny Fuller who came off the bench to score 11 points and contribute two steals.

"Fuller is an important player for us now," said SMU Coach Dave Bliss. "He is one of our top players. We need him defensively and he can score, too."

Wheeler players 2nd team all-state

Two members of the Wheeler Mustangs' football team which lost only to the eventual state champion were named to second-team spots on the Class A all-state team chosen by the Texas Sports Writers Association.

Stephen Snapp was a second-team defensive back position and Wade Bentley was named a linebacker on the second team.

Although both players were also offensive stars and made all-district both ways, they were also key members of Wheeler's

"Black Death" defensive unit.

Bentley, 6-2, 190, was the leading tackler on the team that lost to state champion Munday by only three points in the regional round of the state playoffs. A senior, he started for the Mustangs for three years and played guard on offense.

Snapp, a three-year starter at quarterback and an all-district selection at that position, was one of the leading tacklers on the team, although he played in the secondary.

"We normally don't play our quarterback on defense, by Snapp had so much ability we couldn't afford not to," said Wheeler Coach Preston Smith.

The only other Pampa area player named on the all-state teams released doday was halfback Wes Wood of Panhandle, who made the Class AA second team on offense.

Peete beats problems

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Calvin Peete, suffering from a painful eye irritation, thought seriously on Saturday of withdrawing from the Phoenix Open golf tournament.

He also had just about made up his mind to skip the PGA Tour's Western swing next year.

Things changed on Sunday.
"Well, I'll make it out to the West again next year," Peete said after he had scored his ninth career victory in Phoenix's 50th anniversary tournament.

Peete, stopping occasionally to administer eye drops, won with a closing 3-under-par 68 and a 270 total, 14 shots under par.

"Under the circumstances, I'd have to say this was my best tournament," said the 41-year-old Peete, the most successful black golfer the game has produced.

The circumstances involved:

-Peete, playing near flawless golf, completing the first 36 holes without a bogey and a 5-shot lead.

—An eye irritation, which he blamed on a problem with his contact lense caused by sun glare and dry desert air, which almost forced him out of the tournament.

—A last-round comeback in which he made up two strokes on the leading Doug Tewell, gained a share of the lead at the turn and then won it when Tewell fell victim to a triple bogey-7 on the 14th hole.

The victory, worth $81,000 from the total purse of $450,000, provided Peete with the fastest start of his career and changed his plans. He will compete in both the Los Angeles Open this week and the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am the following week.

"And I'll be back to Phoenix next year," he said

Tewell, with a closing 72, tied for second with Morris Hatalsky at 272. Hatalsky had an erratic 70 over the last 18 holes.

Secret shuttle countdown begins

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) America's first top-secret space shuttle mission edged toward reality today as officials began the countdown to a Wednesday liftoff timed to avoid the prying eyes and ears of Soviet spy satellites.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the Pentagon will say only that Discovery will take off between 1:15 p.m. and 4:15 p.m. Wednesday. Officials are considering opening the countdown to reporters nine minutes before the liftoff, but did not indicate when they would decide.

The Defense Department argues that keeping the precise time classified will make it more difficult for spy satellites and Russian trawlers sitting offshore to monitor the flight. Pentagon officials are especially concerned about photo-reconnaissance or electronic eavesdropping satellites that could record the release of the secret payload carried in the shuttle's cargo bay.

Sources say the liftoff is timed to ensure that no Russian spacecraft is in the area when the payload is deployed.

Once the payload has been released, it will be rocketed into a 22,300-mile-high stationary orbit. out of range of the Soviet satellites.

The countdown, which started at 4 a.m. today, provides no clue to the launch time because the count includes several "hold" periods of unannounced length during which the clock is stopped.

The Defense Department tried to keep the shuttle payload secret, but sources report it is an advanced intelligence-gathering satellite capable of monitoring Soviet missile tests and intercepting radio, radio-telephone, microwave and satellite communications.

The satellite, the sources say, is to be parked over the equator south of the Soviet Union, where it will be able to listen in on military and diplomatic communications in much of Europe, Asia and Africa.

The five astronauts, all military officers, arrived here Sunday afternoon from their training base at Houston's Johnson Space Center. In keeping with the secret nature of the flight, they skipped the usual statements to reporters.

Navy Capt. Thomas K. Mattingly, a veteran of two previous space flights, is flight commander. The other crew members are Air Force Lt. Col. Loren Shriver, Marine Lt. Col. James Buchli and Air Force Majs. Ellison Onizuka and Gary Payton.

The astronauts did not hold the usual 30-days-before-launch news conference or grant interviews.

The news media will not be able to monitor space-to-ground communications during the flight, reversing years of normal practice. Nor has the length of the mission been disclosed. Reporters have been told only that they will receive 16 hours advance notice of Discovery's landing here.

The secrecy is a new experience for NASA after 24 years of conducting an open information policy through 45 man-in-space respect for Soucek and his family." Soucek was to drop into a water tank about 9 feet deep and 12 feet wide, Becker said. But workers said that after Soucek was nailed into the barrel, there were problems stabilizing it.

"It started spinning real bad. After a while the people started getting so impatient, that we went ahead and dropped him." said one worker, who asked that his name not be used. "Just as we started to release the barrel, it started spinning again.

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) - John Wavne's sons Ethan and Patrick are teaming up for a dinner-theater production of "Come Blow Your Horn," but they're no "pilgrims" - they made their debut last year in the same play. The appearance by Ethan Wayne, 22, and Patrick Wayne, 45, is being billed by the Grand Dinner Theater as "The Sons of John Wayne Together for the First Time," despite their appearance in the Neil Simon comedy in Amarillo, Texas. John Wayne died of cancer in 1979 at age 72. "Sure, being his sons has opened up doors in the industry," said Patrick, who has appeared in movies and television since 1956. You can't ignore that factor. But I feel I've accomplished a lot on my own, that I'm not just John Wayne's son.

LONDON (AP) - Bob Geldof of the Boomtown Rats, who organized the rockers' Band Aid production of "Do They Know It's Christmas?" to raise money for African famine relief, plans a rock concert and worldwide telecast he says could generate another $85 million.

"The idea is in a very early shape, and nothing has been confirmed yet," Geldof told London's Mail on Sunday newspaper, which said that many of the stars who performed in the hit single could do so again June 6.

Geldof told the newspaper the telecast would alternate between London's Wembley Stadium and Shea Stadium in New York City, "where acts such as Michael Jackson and Bruce Springsteen" could perform.

"classic '60s drop-out" - but he did it in the '80s after several years without good roles - and now he's glad to be back, with two movies currently in theaters.
