By LARRY HOLLIS Staff Writer

The William L. Hallerberg family, 2128 Christine, was named Family of the Year during a program Thursday night sponsored by the local Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Hallerberg, his wife Betty, and their children, Eric. 16, and Alex, 14. were presented the award by 223rd District Judge Don Cain at the awards program held in the Heritage Room at M. K. Brown Auditorium

The church presents the award yearly to honor local families displaying outstanding achievements relating to family unity, high moral standards and involvement in church and community activities.

The Hallerbergs were among six families selected as finalists for the fifth annual presentation of the honor, given as a community service by the church

Other families honored last night were Steve and Karen Schneider and their children. Jake and Jennifer; Dwight and Erie Head, Shane, Dameron, Jeffrey and Angela; Rocky and Glynis Meyer, Carlie and Mandy; Dave and Sally Brummett and Clayton; and Clyde and Virginia Carruth, who have two sons, three daughters, 16 grandchildren and 16 great-grandchildren. Commending the church for sponsoring the award, Judge Cain noted many families today "are being torn apart" by drugs, alcohol, crime and other deteriorating values.

"It takes commitment, it takes love, and it takes hard work" to make a strong family today, he said. He also commended the families for being examples to others and showing religious

Robert A. Wood, presiding at the program, said, "These families are all super" and praised them for the "fine work you're doing with your families."

Mr. and Mrs. Hallerberg are both elders in the First Presbyterian Church. Hallerberg, vice president of metallurgy at Ingersoll-Rand. was a governing elder for three vears. They both sing in the choir and have both taught Sunday

Hallerberg has served on the county's airport board, the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce and the board of the Pampa Sheltered Workshop. Mrs. Hallerberg has taught at St. Matthew's Episcopal Day School, served as president of the Pampa Community Concerts Association and is involved in Act I, local theatre group.

David Rindlishacher a member of the stake presidency and an art instructor at West Texas State University in Canyon, spoke on "Family Togetherness.

A strong family requires sacrifice and dedication, he observed. Today's economic situations often necessitate a fragmented family, separated by distances as the members depart to various locations for career opportunities. But "love in the heart" can still keep a sense of family unity, he said

Though separated by distance. families can keep in touch with telephones, tape recorders and letters, he noted. These means of communication, coupled with family memorabilia such as photo albums, family heirlooms, stories passed on and other items, "can generate memory and kindle love" even though apart, he said.

A short film, "The Mailbox was shown during the program. The film stressed the importance of children remaining in contact with their older parents while living far away.

Theme for the program was The Place to Save Home: Society

Presenting entertainment were the members of the Pampa High School Concert Choir, under the direction of Fred Mays. The choir sung "A New Psalm." "Love at Home" and "Let Thy Holy Spirit

The invocation was delivered by Bishop Dale Thorum, with Roger Roundy giving the benediction.

Union Carbide memo causes safety scare

WASHINGTON (AP) - Union Carbide Corp. safety inspectors concluded there was "real potential" for the type of toxic gas leak that killed more than 2,000 people in Bhopal, India, to occur at a company pesticide plant in West Virginia.

'A real potential for a serious incident exists," a company safety team concluded in a memo last September after inspecting Union Carbide's Institute. W Va pesticide plant where methyl isocyanate was manufactured until the Dec. 3 disaster at a sister plant in Bhopal

Dick Henderson, a spokesman at the Institute plant, said the safety team - which stated that the problems were not "imminent hazards requiring immediate correction - plays "a devil's advocate. They take the worst-case scenario. The report cited the "possibility of a runaway reaction" if water mixed with the chemical and warned that "response to such a situation would not be timely or effective enough to prevent catastrophic failure of the (MIC

In its investigation of the Bhopal tragedy, the Indian government concluded that water came into contact with stored MIC, creating a chemical reaction that ruptured a storage tank and released an estimated 45 tons of poisonous gas

The safety report was made public Thursday by Rep. Henry A. Waxman, D-Calif., who demanded to know whether corrective action had been taken in Institute or whether an alert was sent to the operators of the Bhopal plant.

'They're warning about the exact same thing that happened in Bhopal," Waxman told a news conference. "It looks like there's a possibility Bhopal could have been avoided. If nothing was done, I find this a very distressing situation.

The safety memo surfaced a day after the Environmental Protection Agency released a report saying that 28 unreported spills of MIC had occurred since 1980 at the Institute plant, which chemical industry critics describe as one of the best-operated U.S.

Insurance salesmen pose as social security agents

Con artists trying to sell insurance policies to elderly residents may be operating in Pampa, according to police and a representative of the local social security office.

Men who claim to be social security representatives have phoned elderly residents about alleged problems with their Medicare coverage, according to reports received by the officials. The men then make an pointment to meet the senior citizens in their homes, where they try to sell them insurance policies, according to the reports. Shirley Nicholson, a claims representative with the Pampa cial security office, pointed out that the agency doesn't sell insurance policies. She warned residents not to believe insurance salesmen who claim to be social security representatives. She asked residents to help protect elderly relatives from the apparent scam going on in Don't leave that person alone. Call the police or something. We don't have anyone trying to sell insurance," Nicholson said.

"If we have this going on in our community, it needs to be stopped. This is how elderly people are victimized,"

A relative of an resident approached by salesmen earlier this week reported the incident to Pampa police.

The social security agency administers the Medicare program for people ages 85 and Nicholson said the local office has received three separate complaints about the false sales tactic this week.

"About three months ago, t same situation happened Borger," she said.

Both sides claim they won suit

NEW YORK (AP) - Both sides claimed victory after the jury in Ariel Sharon's $50 million libel suit against Time Inc. said the magazine acted "negligently and carelessly" but ruled against the former Israeli defense minister on the crucial issue of actual malice.

The verdict Thursday meant that even though the panel had earlier found the Time article about Sharon's alleged role in the massacre of hundreds of Palestinians to be false and defamatory, it decided the piece did not libel Sharon.

We find that certain Time employees, particularly correspondent David Halevy, acted negligently and carelessly in reporting and verifying the information which ultimately found its way into the published paragraph of interest in this case," the jury said in an unusual statement released after the verdict was announced. Halevy was Time's Jerusalem correspondent "He (Halevy) was careless, and we found him to be careless, but we didn't think he was actually out to hurt Sharon with malice," juror Patricia DeLoatch, 27, said after the verdict. Another juror, Lydia Burdick, 35, said. "The bottom line was that he believed what he had written was true, which meant he did not act with actual malice.

Sharon on way to news conference

The verdict gave both sides an opportunity to claim victory

'There's no question we won, Ray Cave, Time's managing editor, said after the ruling ended a 10-week trial. "You can only have one verdict in a legal case - either you win it or you lose it.

'We came in order to prove that Time magazine lied and we managed to prove that they lied," said Sharon, now Israel's minister of industry and commerce.

The jury decided a disputed paragraph published by Time on Feb. 21, 1983, was defamatory and false, but did not show evidence of "actual malice" - that Time published the paragraph knowing was false, or with "reckless disregard" for whether it was true or false

Sharon claimed the Time cover story libeled him by saying he reportly had "discussed" revenge for the assassination of Lebanese president-elect Bashir Gemayel head of the Phalangists - one day before the Christian militiamen massacred hundreds of Palestinians at two refugee camps in Israeli-occupied West Beirut. At issue in the trial which began Nov. 13 were the confidential sources of an internal memo from Halevy on Dec. 6, 1982, reporting that Sharon had given the Phalangists "the feeling" he understood their need for vengeance.

Sarpalius introduces bill easing grade requirements

AUSTIN (AP) - Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Amarillo, says he has a revision of the recently passed school reform bill that will be welcomed by the state's 'borderline' students.

Sarpalius' bill, introduced Thursday, would ease the grade requirements for students who want to take part in athletics or other extracurricular activities.

"We've got to realize that not every student in this tate is going to be a college graduate." Sarpalius said. "Many students are looking to high school to provide them with a foundation for survival in the real world, not a preparation for college

The proposed measure would do away with the requirement in the public school reform bill passed by the summer special session that a student must make a passing grade in five academic courses to be eligible

Sarpalius proposed that students only be required to pass five

"state-approved" courses Academic courses include

English, math, science and history. "We voted for education reform, but we never wanted it to be unfair," he said. "All we're trying to do with this bill is make the world of extra-curricular activities available to all students, not just those headed for college. He said his bill still requires a student to pass five courses "but would not limit the requirement to academic courses.

Forgery suspects arrested

A forgery ring consisting of three adults and two juveniles and accused of passing worthless checks in 11 Texas towns, including Pampa, Borger and Wheeler, was busted Wednesday in Shamrock, authorities said.

The group was arrested after two of the members tried to cash a forged check at a Shamrock grocery store, Wheeler County Sheriff Lonnie Miller reported.

Jackie Dwayne Thomas, 19, and his mother, Alta Bien Teague, 39, both of Abilene: Mary Catherine Roe, 36, of Dallas; and two girls ages 11 and 15, were taken into custody in connection with a spree of passing forged checks.

The checks cashed by the forgers were taken in a Perryton burglary, the authorities said. The checks belong to a Perryton business, Dana's Exteriors. The officers recovered more than 400 of the checks with the arrest of the suspects. Also found were dozens of checks belonging to an Eastland business, Jones Insurance Agency, the sheriff said

Wheeler County Justice of the Peace Herbert Stacy set a $43,000 bond for Teague and a $38,000 bond for Roe. Thomas's bond was set at $10,000, but he also is wanted on a charge of violating probation in Taylor County. Bond on that count was denied

The group struck in Pampa about two weeks ago, detective Sgt. Ken Neal said, Forged Dana's Exteriors checks were passed at several businesses, including three grocery stores, the officer said. Total loss from the worthless checks passed here is about $1,200. Neal said He said the information on the forged checks was typed. The detective said the forged business checks were not embossed with a 'check protector'' stamp. however

Members of the group also passed forged checks or pulled burglaries in Stratford, Quanah, Childress, Wichita Falls. Jacksboro and Cisco, according to the authorities.

The group was traveling from town to town in a 1984 customized van stolen from Fuller Motor Company in Eastland, the officers said. At one time, the group also towed a U-Haul trailer stolen from Borger, Neal said.

as Texas bank goes under

CLARKSVILLE. Texas (AP) -As early as Monday, Mayor L.D. Williamson said, rumors were rampant "that there was going to be a bank failure" in this agricultural community of 4.900 people The Clarksville City Council and the Detroit Independent School District both quickly obtained insurance coverage for $50,000 in unsecured deposits they had on deposit above the FDIC's $100,000 coverage limit at the First National Bank of Clarksville

R.B. Tolson, superintendent of schools at Detroit, 11 miles east of Clarksville, said bank officials suggested to him that the district protect $50,000 in uninsured deposits, which the school district did Tuesday

Neither of the other two school districts in the county had funds at the bank, nor did the county hospital Clarksville has one other bank and one savings and loan association.

Clarksville, the county seat of Red River County, is about 50 miles west of Texarkana.

A spokesman for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. said the bank would reopen today under new ownership and under a new name, "Citizens Bank.

The order to shut down First National Bank of Clarksville came from H. Joe Selby, senior deputy controller for bank supervision Olcheski said

'Over the past year, the bank experienced substantial deterioration in the quality of its loan portfolio. The bank was unable to remedy its problems, and losses finally exhausted the bank's capital funds, resulting in its insolvency." Selby said in a statement released by the FDIC.

Kent Hance may run for governor AUSTIN (AP) - Kent Hance, the Hance, who has a debt of more than a half-million dollars from his bid for the Democratic nomination for U.S. Senate last year, has been Incumbent Democratic Gov Mark White hasn't officially announced whether he will seek re-election, but collected nearly $2 million in political funds during the last six months of 1984. His term expires in 1986.

Hance, a conservative from Lubbock, was the top vote-getter in the Democratic Senate primary, but was edged by liberal Lloyd Doggett of Austin in the runoff.

Wage increases under 539 contracts covering 2.3 million workers averaged just 2.4 percent for the first year of the agreements and 2.3 percent annually over the life of the pacts, both new lows.

The bureau also said that wages increased an average of 3.7 percent in 1984 for 7.3 million workers covered by collective bargaining agreements negotiated last year and in previous years. The 3.7 percent increase also is the lowest on record, the bureau said

Settlements in 1984 provided the smallest average wage boosts and the largest average wage decreases on record, the bureau said. Three-fourths of the workers received wage increases of 3.8 percent in the first year of the contract, nearly 20 percent had no wage change and the remainder took pay cuts

Aggie male bastions tumble before women

HOUSTON (AP) - An Air Force officer who sued to force Texas A&M University to let women in its band and an elite corps of cadets unit says she's "thrilled" with a federal judge's action in the case.

U.S. District Judge Ross Sterling approved a settlement Thursday which orders the school to actively encourage women to join the groups.

Regents of the school issued a written statement complaining that Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox settled the case without their approval. They charged that Mattox "is not a fighter.

Capt. Melanie Zentgraf filed the lawsuit in 1979, when she was a senior at Texas A&M in College Station. Ms. Zentgraf was not accepted for membership in the Ross Volunteers, a group of elite cadets who serve as the honor guard for the state "It's over, but it's just begun," Ms. Zentgraf said. Ms. Zentgraf was shunned by many Texas A&M students and faculty members after she filed her suit. At May 1980 graduation exercises, former President Jarvis Miller shook hands with every student receiving a diploma except Ms. Zentgraf.

She said she never learned why her application for membership in the Ross Volunteers was turned down, but assumed she had been blackballed because she had been openly critical of the male-only policies.

As far as she knows, she said, no woman has ever tried to join the band "because they knew they would be publicly harassed if they tried. You lost friends by even talking about it. It will be very difficult for the first woman member.

She said she is still the subject of criticism

"I'm very proud of what I've done, but I don't announce it to people when I meet them," she said.

Sterling's order became effective immediately. "I find it fair, just and reasonable," Sterling said of the decree. "I understand the feelings of the alumni and students on this. There is a great deal of tradition, but tradition changes.' Aggie regents were irate. The fighting Texas Aggie Band is worth preserving as a very distinctive and unique organization unlike any other volunteer organization in the country," the regents said in a prepared

John Tyler, a Houston lawyer and a 1975 A&M graduate, vowed he would appeal Sterling's decision to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Mattox, who decided last year to settle the lawsuit, said Sterling's ruling will "bring the university's band in line with long-standing practices at other Texas universities.

"This settlement upholds our Texas constitution and its equal rights amendment. That is important to all citizens of Texas, no matter whether they are male or female because it says there is equal opportunity for everyone and that persons will be judged upon their own merits and not their sex, Mattox said in a prepared statement.

In the suit, Ms. Zentgraf asked that the corps be forbidden from blocking the members of women in such organization as the Aggie Band; the Ross Volunteers, an elite military honors group; the Fish Drill Team, a freshman organization; and the Color

White is 'concerned' over prison pact

Skeletal remains identified as missing victim

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) -Human bones found in a field near a railroad track have been identified as those of one of five women missing or found slain over the past four months.

The skeletal remains found Wednesday afternoon by a construction crew were those of Catherine Davis, 23, said James Seaberry, an investigator for the Tarrant County Medical Examiner's office.

The woman was reported missing Sept. 30 after her tiny garage apartment was destroyed in a fire. Her car was found later in an apartment complex parking lot.

Four of the five missing women now have been found dead. Unaccounted for is Angela Ewert, 21, who disappeared Dec. 10 on her way home from her fiance's house. Her car was found parked alongside Southeast Loop 820. She was last seen buying gasoline at a

this avowed foe of big government, this champion of individual freedom, this foe of federal spending would suddenly liberate the American people from Big Brother and transform a wasteful government into a model of thrift and efficiency

Four years later, government is spending even more above its income than when the president took office. "I expect to go back to Casa Romero and continue working there," Elder, the director of the halfway house for Central Americans in San Benito, said Thursday.

Elder, 41, was charged with transporting three Salvadoran illegal aliens from the shelter to a bus station in Harlingen.

He sat stoically throughout five days of pretrial hearings and three

In closing arguments, he urged the jury to find Elder guilty, saying Elder knew that the three Salvadorans had entered the country illegally and that they wanted a ride to the bus station to get to Houston.

They said the government failed to prove that Elder tried to further the illegal journey of the Salvadorans.

Different view on 'civil rights'

Activist conservatives on Capitol Hill reportedly plan to "change the focus of debate on civil rights" in the new session of Congress. The kinds of changes they're talking about would be welcome.

They plan to stress giving blacks a chance to improve their own economic status—largely by seeking to remove government-imposed barriers to economic activities. These barriers were not intended to be racists, but they have had the effect of closing paths of advancement to minorities. It's about time to remove them.

The activist conservatives aren't out to repeal old civil right laws, but have targeted economic regulations that have had an especially adverse impact on minorities.

Among items under consideration are elimination of government regulation of minority businesses and housing, promotion of the administration's "enterprise zone" concept to revitalize inner cities and adoption of the "youth opportunity wage" to increase employment among minority teenagers. Numerous other possibilities to peel away government interference are also being weighed.

For the most part, state governments rather than the federal government impose and administer occupational licensure laws that make going into business for yourself that much more difficult, but repealing or liberalizing such laws could be a great boon for would-be minority business people

A paper being circulated among members of the House's Conservative Opportunity Society argues that whites can't solve blacks' problems, they can only get out of the way" and allow blacks to demonstrate that they know what they're doing and how to do it without federal suffocation.

Big-government activists have their own "civil rights" agenda for this congressional session, with the emphasis on increased federal control over educational institutions already suffocating in red tape. It is timely for a different breed of activisits to insist on changing the focus, in light of past failures of "civil rights" laws to confer dignity on

One may hope that these activitis' tactics will light a fire under an allegedly conservative, anti-big government White House and inspire it to prove what it really stand for

Not plunging into poverty

Shortly before the New Year, newspapers and television gave heavy coverage to the death of a World War II veteran who froze to death in the shadow of the White House. A number of news articles and editorials suggested that the veteran's death was the nation's fault

It was no such thing. As detailed reporting revealed, the man in question was an alcoholic who had decided many years ago to live on the streets. He refused efforts to reintegrate him into a normal life pattern. Nevertheless, the preacher at his funeral ignored this fact and went on to allege that there are millions of similarly situated homeless people in the United States. Again, this

A protest group called the Community for Creative Non - Violence helped organize media events in connection with the death of the alcholic drifter in Washington, D.C. This organization contributes nothing to a clear understanding of the problem of homeless people.

The American people deserve a realistic, accurate portrayal of this problem. There are several distinct elements in the homeless population

First of all, there are chronic alcoholics who have become derelicts in society. Countless social service agencies endeavor to help these people. Mission organizations in cities provide food and shelter, but the alcoholics usually return to the bottle after a short spell in a mission. Police pick up drunks and take them to detoxification centers and hospitals where they receive costly treatment at public expense. These people usually return to their old way of life immediately upon being released from treatment.

A sizable part of the homeless population is made up of mentally disturbed people who have been deinstitutionalized. They aren't fit to assume a normal role in society. Therefore, the states may have to return these people to mental health

The third element in the homeless population are the truly poor and economically unfit. Many of these people are young mothers who are unmarried or young men who have become involved in drugs. These people are the hardest to help. What does society do to provide permanent help to a mother of four who is in her twenties, who is without skills, without housing or the ability to provide food, clothing and medical care? Obviously, she has to be helped. It's equally obvious that the United States is paying for the permissive social attitudes of the past quarter century. These attitudes have produced millions of broken or unformed families.

However, it's important to view the problem of the poor and homeless in perspective. As Dr. Michael Novak recently pointed out, among intact families with two wage earners, only five percent of white families and nine percent of black families are poor. The nation is not being engulfed by a tidal wave of poor, homeless people

What's needed today is an intelligent, discriminating analysis of the composition of the poverty - stricken element in American society. It's well to remember, however, that the U.S. is not a country that is plunging into poverty.

Today in History

Today is Friday, Jan. 25, the 25th day of 1985. There are 340 days left in the year

Today's highlight in history: On Jan. 25, 1915, the inventor of the telephone, Alexander Graham Bell, inaugurated transcontinental phone service in the United States. Bell, in New York, repeated his famous words from 1876, "Mr. Watson, come here, I want you." to his assistant, who was in San Francisco

On this date:

Ten years ago: The major oil-exporting countries agreed to meet in Algiers in about five weeks, thereby postponing any decisions on negotiating with oil consumers.

Five years ago: The U.S. Labor Department reported that the Consumer Price Index rose 13.3 percent for all of 1979. It was the biggest annual increase in 33

One year ago: President Reagan, in his State of the Union address, said, "America is back standing tall." He called for bipartisan support in cutting projected Federal budget deficits by $100 billion over the next three

Paul Harvey

How times have changed

Once upon a time when the mayor of Chicago was Richard J. Daley he was confronted at a news conference with a challenging question.

The young lady with bobbed hair, horn - rimmed glasses and a sharp pencil said, "Mr. Mayor, are you aware that street repair contracts have been let to one of your own in - laws without any competitive bids being considered? His Honor appeared incredulous.

To the reporter he said, "Young lady, what kind of a man would I be if I didn't look after my kin!'

Now the reporter has two choices. She can make a public issue of the paying contracts, criticize the mayor for looking after his kin in a city where that was expected.

Or she can drop the subject. She dropped the subject.

I was reflecting on how far we have not come only about $4 million between then and now when I received the most recent update on the trial of John Zaccaro On Feb. 20 John Zaccaro, having confessed to fraud, will be sentenced. The financial shuffle which got him into trouble is not unique.

He and friends wanted to buy some buildings with money borrowed from Prudential - Bache. He altered a copy of an appraisal of the property to make it appear worth more, to make the loan appear more secure. His document said the apartments were worth $15.5 million when, in fact, they had been appraised for only $11.9 million, Further to impress the lender with what a good credit risk he, Zaccaro, is - he listed his personal net worth at $21.6 million when, in fact, he is worth

Had Zaccaro been able to get away with these two counts of "scheming to defraud" he would have received $333,000 commission plus 8 percent ownership in the five apartment buildings.

I'm told that Zaccaro, in a deal with the DA, was willing to plead guilty to this one offense in order to escape jail on other charges.

Scheming to defraud on a real - estate contract in New York is a misdemeanor, nothing more

That means Zaccaro, Feb. 20, will get off with no more than a $1,000 fine - and perhaps less. Nor will he necessarily forfeit his real estate license, under New York law The grand jury continues to investigate Zaccaro and friends, conceivably could yet find grounds for felony conviction. But so far he has "beat the rap."

No earthly reason for raising taxes

BY ROBERT W. POOLE

The advocates of big government are at it again. Their latest ploy is the claim that we must have a tax increase in order to reduce an unending stream of federal budget deficits. Indeed, dismay over the deficit projections is leading even reasonable people to conclude that, while spending cuts are needed, there's no way to balance the budget without a tax increase as well.

This ostensibly neutral conclusion is actually an endorsement of bigger government. It ignores the fact that federal revenues have grown enormously over the past four years, keeping pace with the growth of gross national product (GNP). The problem is simply that government spending grew even faster, as Congress proved unable to discipline itself and stop giving away our money to every interst group in sight.

Numerous analyses during the past few months have shown that modest, achievable reductions in the growth of federal spending, combined with normal postwar rates of economic growth, can eliminate the deficit entirely in a few years, with no tax increase.

New York economic consultant A. Gary Schilling, for example, shows what happens if the growth of federal spending is limited to just the rate of inflation (that is, zero real growth) for four years. Assuming real GNP growth of 4 percent a year and modest (3 percent) inflation, the deficit would be nearly zero by 1990. And if interest rates declined significantly, a balanced budget could occur as early as 1988. Even a two - year freeze only on nondefense discretionary spending (that is, excluding Social Security, Medicare, as well as the defense budget) plus 4 percent GNP growth would shrink the deficit to $58 billion by 1989, according to a special study by the Congressional Budget Office. The key to achieving either of these results is to prevent government from growing faster than the economy. And the two essentials for doing that are (1) to control federal spending, and (2) to resist incentive - killing tax increases.

The latest Washington buzzword is a "one - year spending freeze" - holding expenditure levels constant for a year to allow revenues time to catch up. The advantage of this tactic is that it short circuits the special - interest constituencies for each particular spending program, by going after all programs at once. But this would only be a stopgap. It would leave every single spending program in place, to rise up again the following

The sad fact is that there are hundreds of programs for which there is no real justification and which should be eliminated, not frozen. Why should $7 billion of our tax dollars be loaned or given to middle - class college students each year? Why should $20 billion be doled out to farmers not to grow crops? On what grounds should a handful of urban transit riders (or an even smaller handful of Amtrak riders) be able to get cheap rides at everyone else's expense? Questions like these could fill volumes, accounting for well over $100 billion of grants and subsidies each year

Then there are the so - called entitlement programs - some $400 billion worth. Only about $60 billion of that is aid to poor people, where the recipient has to pass a means test to get aid. The other $340 billion goes to anyone: Social Security (all you have to do is be old, not poor), Medicare (same thing), and federal pensions (you have to have been a soldier or bureaucrat). All of these programs are out of control, paying out far more than their recipients ever paid in. They represent an open - ended claim on our children and their children - the kind of claim that prompted Peter Grace's ads showing a baby saddled with a $50,000. burden. While a freeze on these heretofore sacrosanct programs would be a welcome first step, all must be fundamentally reformed. It's. high time Congress faced the issue - which they'll refuse to do if bailed out by another tax increase.

Finally, there are the hundreds of businesses that are run by the federal government. Some were identified by the Grace Commission: hydroelectric plants, military commissaries, the Washington, D.C., airports, veterans' hospitals. Others include huge commercial forests, grazing lands, the postal and weather services, printing plants, and hundreds more. A massive privatization program, on the scale of Margaret Thatcher's, should be drafted to sell off all these businesses, with the proceeds (as in England) applied to the national debt.

In short, there is no earthly reason for increasing the government's tax take. Just getting rid of a fraction of the federal government's vast assortment of subsidies and boondoggles would easily reduce federal spending below the level of federal revenues. And normal economic growth if not hobbled by new taxes - will do the rest.

Obviously, we had to replace the toy chest, but I certainly wasn't going to waste any more money on cardboard. This wooden deacon's bench toy chest performs the task admirably; its very sturdy construction provides both toy storage and seating space, and it is a truly handsome piece of furniture.

The easy - to - build toy chest is a simple design: rectangular base with splined walls, a hinged seat, backrest and arms. Corner molding is used to cover all nail and screw heads, and heart shaped cutouts decorate the backrest and arms. The overall dimensions are 22 x 38 x 49 inches.

You can make a deacon's bench toy chest in a single weekend using our fully illustrated plans. They include a complete materials list, step - by - step instructions, cutting and assembly diagrams, and scale drawings.

If you would like to order the plans, please specify Project No. 521-4 and include $3.95. Mail your order to Kid's Stuff, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla., 74008.

Begin by constructing the base support assembly, which is a 21/2 x 22 x 49 -inch reinforced frame that supports the floor of the storage

On top of the base, attach % x % inch wooden strips to form a second rectangle that is slightly smaller than the first. The splined 14 - inch side, back and front boards are attached to the % inch strips. Glue and clamp the assembly overnight.

To make the support for the seat, construct a rectangular 191/2 x 46 inch mitered frame from boards that are four inches wide. Nail it to the top inside the perimeter of the 14 - inch boards.

Cover the top with boards, allowing the center boards to open for access to the inner storage area. Use brass hinges to fasten it to the seat base.

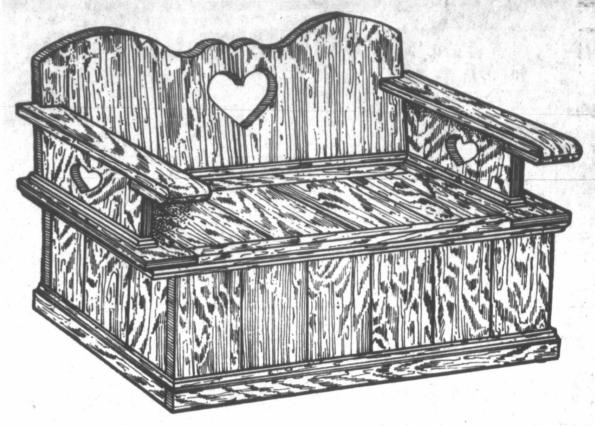

Cut and spline together boards form the 1814 x 461/2 inch seat back. Nail a 3x45 - inch board across the seat back for support. For more comfort, the seat back should slant slightly towards the back.

The 9x18 inch armrests are attached to the seat back using screws, and then toenailed to the seat base using recessed nails.

Use a finishing material such as Danish oil to bring out the beauty of the wood grain; or simply paint and then add decorative trim or tole - painted accents.

D. IN NEVADA

DEAR D.: In order for a transsexual to marry, he or she must be examined by a physician, who then must verify that the transsexual is medically of the opposite sex from the person he or she wants to marry. (Same-sex marriages are not legal.) A female-to-male transsexual is not considered a male, medically, unless her ovaries have been removed. And a male-tofemale transsexual is not considered a female, medically, until his testes have been removed. For more information on this subject, write to the Janus Information Facility, 1952 Union

St., San Francisco, Calif. 94123. This is a non-profit service, so please include a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAR ABBY: If I don't tell someone, I am going to explode! One day last week, a neighbor came over to visit me. She is an intelligent, educated woman who has a good job, but apparently not much common sense. She said she'd called in sick because she had a bad cold and a cough or "whatever was going around"-so she came over to spend the afternoon with me.

My daughter brought her baby over that afternoon, and you guessed it. The next day the baby came down with whatever it was my neighbor had, and so did I. I am furious with her for coming to my place to spread her germs. Please print this as a warning to thoughtless, stupid people who go visiting when they're too sick to go MAD IN MANHATTAN

DEAR MAD: You should be furious with yourself for having lacked the courage (and good sense) to tell your ailing neighbor as soon as she showed up at your door that you didn't want to risk catching whatever it was she had. And to have allowed your grandchild to be exposed to whatever was "going around" was inexcusable.

DEAR ABBY: Several months ago I mailed a birthday card with a generous check to my granddaughter. I heard nothing from her, but when she visited me at Christmas, I asked her in a nice, polite way if she had received my card and check. She said she had. Then I said, also in a nice, polite way, that I had half expected her to let me know that it had been received.

Then she said, "Oh, that's not done anymore! That old custom has faded away"-or words along that I was flabbergasted. She is a smart girl, Phi Beta Kappa and a last-year medical student

I am an old man, but I still have all my marbles (I think), and I cannot believe that the common courtesy of acknowledging a gift has "faded away"—at least not in our Western civilization. Or am I

Also, what do you think my attitude should be regarding future gifts to this granddaughter?

DEAR GRANDPA: Nothing has faded away—except perhaps your granddaughter's good manners. As for future gifts: When the resentment over an unacknowledged gift exceeds the pleasure of having given it, it's time to quit giving, Grandpa.

News industry hails verdict, but some criticize Time's practices

By The Associated Press

A ruling that Time Inc. published a false article that defamed but did not libel Ariel Sharon was a partial victory for Time Inc., but may add to public suspicions about the credibility of the news they read and hear, some news industry executives say.

A federal court jury, which earlier had found that the former Israeli defense minister was defamed by a Time article, decided Thursday that Time had not recklessly or maliciously published a false story linking him with a massacre of Palestinians, the basis for his $50 million libel suit.

San Jose (Calif.) Mercury News president and publisher Tony Ridder welcomed the verdict, saying "It was careless reporting, but not malicious.'

William F. Thomas, editor and executive vice president of the Los Angeles Times, said Time "lost more than they would like to lose." Noting the jury found that the story was false and defamatory, Thomas said, "How can you feel great about that? 'It's a good verdict. The law and justice prevailed," said Richard J.V. Johnson, president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association and president of the Houston Chronicle.

Johnson said the case helped educate the public about libel but he also said he feared a backlash to Time's victory.

"The concept of actual malice and state of mind are fuzzy and vague and very subjective things. The problem is that the public could decide to support legislation that would make it (libel) easier to prove," he said. "We've got to be accurate. Otherwise we'll be facing a public outcry for tighter controls on the media.

In an editorial today, The New York Times said: "Public officials remain on notice that they cannot easily punish criticism with libel suits. The press is on notice that it can nonetheless be held accountable - and that it needs to provide better forums of rebuttal and redress.

Dave Mack, managing editor for news at the Binghamton (N.Y.) Press, said it was clear that 'mistakes were made and there was some carelessness involved.

'The thing I think is important is that the decision preserves that essential distinction between mistakes - honest mistakes - and vicious abuse of our power, the power of the press.

"I think the whole trial serves as a pretty blunt reminder to everybody in the news business that our credibility is on the line every day and that we have to do a much better job of safeguarding against any form of carelessness and inaccuracy.

The jurors said in a unanimous statement that they believed certain Time employees, especially Jerusalem correspondent David Halevy, acted "negligently and even carelessly.

"I'm not quite sure what the jury had in mind when it called our employees negligent or careless. because it didn't specify," Time's editor-in-chief Henry Grunwald said on the McNeil-Lehrer News Hour. "I myself when I reflect on the matter feel that we made one mistake, a mistake we corrected when we finally had clear evidence that it was in fact a mistake ..

David Brown, executive editor of The Commercial Appeal in Memphis, said the decision was "a relief from the point of view of a citizen's right to know the facts and the press' right to report the facts.

"But neither should the magazine company nor members of the press across the country feel too smug," Brown added. "The case proves once again that accuracy and fair play must be tantamount in journalism.

William A. Hilliard, executive editor of The Oregonian in Portland, said the case is "a warning to be more sensitive and more careful in reporting

"It seems to me that the Sullivan Rule of the New York Times case has once again proved its worth. said John B. Johnson, editor and publisher of the Watertown (N.Y.) Times. The Supreme Court's 1964 decision in New York Times vs. Sullivan held that public officials cannot recover damages for a report related to their official duties unless they prove actual

Radio Marti still silent, the backers irked

WASHINGTON (AP) - Radio Marti, the Reagan administration's bid to broadcast directly to the people of Cuba, is still on the drawing board 14 months after being authorized. generating impatience, puzzlement, and consternation among its backers. The delay has angered members of the Florida congressional delegation and other legislators as well as some officials who have been working on the project since the outset.

'We are ready to go on the air six to seven hours a day," said one official at the Voice of America, the agency responsible for station.

Six weeks ago, Rep. Dante Fascell, a Miami Democrat who is chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, wrote a letter to President Reagan expressing "deep disappointment" over the delay. He asked the president for an explanation but an aide said Thursday no reply has been received. Also expressing concern to Reagan have been Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., Sen. Steve Symms. R-Idaho, and Rep. Jack Kemp,

R-N.Y, among others. Rogene Waite, a VOA spokeswoman, said the problem relates partly to getting security clearances for scores of prospective employees, many of whom were born in Cuba. Ensuring that those hired will be trustworthy is a "horrendous" task, she said, adding, "The hiring process takes

A USIA official, who insisted on anonymity, said that when Radio Marti began recruiting employees, the Cuban government made an attempt to plant spies in the operation. Ms. Waite said she was unaware of any such activity.

Of the 188 employees authorized by Congress, the station has hired about 100, Ms. Waite said. The candidates for the remaining positions, she added, are undergoing security checks or are under evaluation.

The station, named after 19th-century Cuban patriot Jose Marti who fought Spanish rule, also has had management problems.

One prospective director was dropped last year after failing to reach an agreement with VOA over moving his family to Washington. In December, veteran broadcaster Paul Drew was named director but left the post for unexplained reasons after just a month on the job. A replacement has not yet

The official purpose of Radio Marti is to give the people of Cuba an alternate source of information. Since the revolution, all media in Cuba has been under strict government control.

The delay has prompted some to suspect that the Reagan administration has opened secret negotiations with Cuba, using Radio Marti as a bargaining chip.

New Caesarean guidelines issued

WASHINGTON (AP) - Many women who had babies by Caesarean section may be able to deliver subsequent children vaginally without fear of serious complications, according to new medical guidelines released today.

The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists said it is loosening similar guidelines released three years ago because of greater confidence that vaginal delivery is safe for many of these women.

Women with previous Caesareans may try labor and vaginal delivery when they have no recurring conditions that require surgical delivery, and if they had a low, horizontal incision instead of a vertical one for their prior delivery, according to the guidelines

'We estimate that between 50 to 80 percent of these women who choose a trial of labor can deliver vaginally and still maintain the present low infant and maternal death rates," said Dr. Luella Klein, president of ACOG

The professor of obstetrics and gynecology at Emory University Medical School said the guidelines would "over a period of time help stop the rise in the nation's Caesarean delivery rate and result in a decreased number of repeat Caesareans.

The benefits of vaginal deliveries include no surgical risks, less anesthesia, no post-operative complications, shortened hospital stays and decreased costs, she

Federal health statistics show that surgical deliveries have increased from 5.5 percent of all births in 1970 to 10.4 percent in 1975 and 20.3 percent in 1983, the last figures available

From 1980 to 1983, 55 percent of the increase in these operations were repeat Caesareans in women who had previous surgical deliveries, 24 percent for prolonged labor, 13 percent for fetal distress and 5 percent for breech

The traditional worry about vaginal delivery after a Caesarean has been that the scar on the womb could rupture under the pressure of labor and bleed, endangering the life of the mother and the fetus.

The ACOG recommendations said such a rupture could occur, but it is rarely catastrophic. The guidelines call for continuous electronic monitoring of the fetal heart and uterine contractions.

"As long as we have modern fetal monitoring, anesthesia, and obstetrical support services," said the ACOG president, "the mother's health and safety, and that of her infant, are protected.'

IRS may ease its strict record-keeping rule

WASHINGTON (AP) -Farmers, businesses and moonlighters who have been flooding the mail with complaints about tough new Internal Revenue Service record-keeping requirements are about to get some relief.

The regulations, which went into effect Jan. 1, require that 'adequate contemporaneous records" be kept to substantiate claims for business deductions for motor vehicles, home computers, entertainment equipment and the like. No deduction will be allowed without detailed logs; claiming the writeoff without the records can result in a 5 percent penalty for underpayment and conceivably a 50 percent penalty for fraud.

Once farmers and business executives became aware of the rules, members of Congress began demanding a change. Dozens of bills have been introduced to repeal the rule; one repeal bill has the support of a majority of the Senate Finance Committee

"We are going to be making some changes on that ... in the near future," Mimi Feller, deputy assistant secretary of the treasury, told a tax seminar Thursday. "It should be within the next couple

She noted the issue was raised by several senators Wednesday when James A. Baker III, the White House chief of staff, went before the Senate Finance Committee in his bid to be confirmed as secretary of the treasury. "He noted a letter from some poor guy who takes his wife to dinner in his pickup truck" and fears he will have to keep records of that mileage, Ms. Feller recalled.

The Treasury Department has not decided what changes to make in the rules, she said. However, she added, one option being considered would simply allow a person to declare that a mininum share of mileage on a vehicle - perhaps 10 percent - was for personal use without having to keep detailed logs. A deduction could then be claimed for the 90 percent business disguise personal expenses as tax-deductible business expenses: Before the new rules went into effect, a taxpayer was not required to keep a detailed log of how equipment was used, although substantiation was required.

The regulation was imposed by the Internal Revenue Service after Congress last year ordered a crackdown on taxpayers who

Under the new rules, records must be kept "at or near the time the ... property is actually used." A single use, such as a round trip in a car, may be accounted for by a single entry, the rules say, but they do not say, for example, whether every stop a farmer makes during the day must be logged separately

The first hearing, on Saturday, Feb. 2, concerns the law enacted last summer requiring school districts to develop a Discipline Management Program in which parents, school administrators, teachers and students will set guidelines for appropriate student

The law also calls for districts to train all teachers and other key members of the discipline management teams. To some extent, the law changes the direction of student discipline in Texas schools. For the first time in the state's history, disciplining students will become a cooperative responsibility. The focus of the discipline will be supportive, exploring a variety of discipline techniques and alternative classroom programs designed to keep students in school.

Recommendations on proposed rules to implement the law will be held at the hearing from 9:30 a.m. to noon in the Texas Education Agency Board Room, 1200 E.

Anderson Lane, in Austin. The public will be invited to comment on essential aspects of the program, the role of key members of the teams, training, alternative educational settings for students and procedures for determining incorrigibility and assessing discipline actions. Persons may preregister to testify or to receive copies of discussion documents by contacting Walter Rambo at 1-512-475-6838

At 1:30 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 7, Texas residents will be invited to present opinions on what they believe should be contained in textbooks used in public schools.

The state board will have a hearing concerning description of textbook content called for in Textbook Proclamation 62. The session will be held in the Board Room at TEA North, 1200 E. Anderson Lane.

The description of textbook content is used by publishers who produce books to be considered for use in Texas schools and by the board in its review of texts.

Among texts to be considered for use in the 1987-1988 school year are a basal reading series in English and Spanish, Texas history and geography, earth science, typewriting, chemistry, U.S. government and computer science.

Copies of the proclamation are available for review at the state's 20 regional education service centers, including Region XVI Education Service Center, 1601 S. Cleveland, Amarillo.

Individuals desiring to testify at the hearing must register by 5 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 31, by contacting Grace Grimes, TEA deputy commissioner for Professional Development and Support, at 1-512-475-8691. Speakers, limited to five minutes, are asked to bring 20 written copies of their testimony for distribution to board members. The Texas State Board of Vocational Education will have a hearing Friday, Feb. 8, beginning at 8:30 a.m. in the board room. Discussion will center on the vocational education master plan. the state plan for vocational education and the state plan for adult education.

Specific topics to be addressed are the proposed Five-Year Master Plan for Vocational Education for fiscal years 1986-1990, the State Plan for Vocation Education for 1986-1988 and the State Plan for Adult Education for 1986-1988.

Copies of the proposed plans may be reviewed at the TEA office for Occupational Education and Technology at TEA North.

Persons who want more information about the plans or who want to present testimony at the hearing should register with Paul W. Lindsey, TEA associate commissioner for OET, at 1-512-834-4298 before 5 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 7.

Join Us In Worship IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God:

To every child there comes a time when they begin to wonder . . . Where did I come from? Who made the trees? Who made the mountains? EVERYONE has a desire to know their creator. "O GOD, thou art my God; early will I seek thee: my soul thirsteth for thee ... " This longing for knowledge of God should be satisfied at an early age. "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it." Plan NOW to attend church with your family.

Church schedules missionary speaker

Rev. David D. Smith, missionary to Kenya, East Africa, will be the guest speaker at the 10:45 a.m. service Sunday at Lamar Full Gospel Assembly, 1200 S. Sumner.

During their past term of missionary service, Smith and his wife Rebecca were involved in evangelism, church extension, Bible School work and youth ministries in Kenya, Rev. Gene Allen, pastor, said.

They also participated in the opening of a new evangelistic center in Mombasa, the second largest city of Kenya.

WASHINGTON (AP) Perennially proposed — but thus far unsuccessful - measures to permit prayer in the public schools and restrict abortion have been introduced in the opening days of the new 99th Congress.

Whether it will consider them anytime soon, however, with the main focus on budgetary matters remained in doubt. Sponsors of the bills were mostly the same lawmakers who pushed them in the last Congress. including Sens. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, and Strom Thurmond. R-S.C., who proposed constitutional amendments to reverse present policy banning public school prayer and allowing abortion.

Proposals by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., would strip the federal courts of jurisdiction in school prayer cases, and put Congress on record as finding that the Constitution does not sanction the right to abortion as held by the U.S. Supreme Court.

SEATTLE (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service has collected $813 of the wages of Seattle's Roman . Catholic Archbishop Raymond G. Hunthausen in payment for part of his 1982 and 1983 income taxes that he had withheld in protest against the nuclear arms race.

His office says it paid the assessment after the IRS indicated steps to garnishee his wages for the amount, but that the archbishop plans to continue withholding a portion of his taxes.

"I'm not freely giving to something which I find totally out of keeping with my conviction," he says.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - The American Bapist Churches have decided to postpone for four years? a controversial vote on whether to continue membership in the National Council of Churches and the World Council of Churches.

The delay was voted 152-22 by the general board of the 1.6 million; nomination to allow time for it to monitor changes projected for both councils and for broader discussion on the matter in Baptist congregations.

The issue came to a head last year as a result of charges in the Readers' Digest and on a CBS show, "60 Minutes," that the councils were supporting leftist revolutionary groups

ODESSA, Texas (AP) - Call Lucille Grindle anything from job-search agent to surrogate mother, and she won't bridle. But say something derogatory about her roughneck customers, and she'll put up a fight.

For the last 23 years; the 62-year-old former beautician has owned and operated Trade-Way Grocery, 1503 West County Road, a "mom-and-pop" convenience store known in oil drilling rig circles as 'the roughneck store.'

Up to 50 rig crews file through the store daily near shift changes at 4 a.m., 12:30 and 8:30 p.m., Mrs. Grindle said last week.

And with a livelihood so dependent on the oil industry, the diminuitive Mrs. Grindle admitted she's quick to defend her customers — especially those who do the hands-on work in the oil

"When they get talking bad about roughnecks, I bristle up," she said. "What would we do without them? We couldn't drive our cars or heat our homes without them. It's a shame the word 'roughneck' had to be attached to them."

Besides selling - or, on occasion, giving away - lunch, coffee, cigarettes and thick gloves to the rig hands, Mrs. Grindle said she also provides an employment service of sorts for up to 100 jobless at a time.

Eleven-year rig floor worker John R. Hatfield of Odessa recalled he first heard about the store through a friend.

"He said if I wanted to get a job here I'd have to put my name on the wall," the 40-year-old Hatfield said. "I did, and I've been getting jobs here ever since.

"Drillers stop in here if they're shorthanded. They look on the board, see somebody they like and follow it up," he added.

Inside the corner grocery and former delicatessen, Mrs. Grindle hung a cork board on which out-of-work chain hands, lead tong men, derrick men and other rig workers post their names, experience and phone numbers.

Drillers and toolpushers scan the handwritten, often barely legible paper scraps for likely job candidates, then ask Mrs. Grindle for her description of the job-seekers.

She knows most by name and reputation. Mrs. Grindle estimated she's made thousands of recommendations in her informal employment service's 12-year

Hatfield said he's found 30 roughnecking jobs through Trade-Way since he began visiting the store in 1974. He takes breaks from the work, said Hatfield, because, "You can't keep working seven days a week at the same job. It's day-in, day-out, heavy work."

Posting his name on the Trade-Way board for the first time, roughneck Lee Olliff, 19, said he had been referred to the store as a means by which to gain employment.

"People out at the rig said this was the place to come to find a job. They said, 'Go put your name up. Some driller will hire you in a day or two,''' said Olliff, who's been roughnecking for eight months.

Mrs. Grindle's service began with drillers' pleas to, "Find me a roughneck, Lucille," the store owner said.

She said she initially obliged by keeping a list of rig workers' names behind the cash register, later moving the cache onto a peg board after the roster quickly began to grow. Word-of-mouth spread like a West Texas grass fire, and Mrs. Grindle said she's gotten calls from job-seekers as far away as recession-ravaged Marquette, Mich. That was particularly true during Odessa's oil and gas boom of 1981 and 1982.

Some who were placed in jobs still write letters and send Christmas gifts, the store owner said, while the mothers of others worried by a distant son's long silence - call her for confirmation of the offspring's well-being. Concern for the workers' welfare comes naturally to the mother of three, Mrs. Grindle said.

After putting her own daughter and two sons through college, Mrs. Grindle said, she tries especially hard to find jobs for would-be roughnecks working their way through school.

And while she stoutly defends oil workers, the businesswoman said she always hopes younger roughnecks will go on to a less rugged way of life.

She also endeavors to lessen growing pains for homesick youths, Mrs. Grindle said.

"These boys come in and tell me their problems," Mrs. Grindle "They're away from home and need someone to talk to. I always ask, 'Have you called your

Mrs. Grindle said she sometimes doles out financial support along with maternal guidance. The job-seekers "tried hard, and they were nice and courteous. And a lot of them would be without money, so I 'financed' them with food, or sometimes by setting them up in apartments," she said, adding that most never took advantage of the generosity.

That's despite the fact that roughneck beneficiaries ranged from pre-med students to ex-convicts, Mrs. Grindle said, quickly noting that rig workers fit no stereotypes.

And despite her 5-foot-3-inch. 112-pound frame, Mrs. Grindle said, she rarely feels threatened dealing with the burly roughnecks.

"They talk rough, but when another man starts swearing, they'll call him down. They'll say, 'Cut it out. There's a lady present," Mrs. Grindle said. "Some of them are the best family men in the world. You see them out on the rig, and see them come in here on a Sunday, and they don't look like the same person."

Many rig hands defend her as they would their own mothers, Mrs. Grindle said.

Describing an armed robbery of the store, she said a drilling crew chided her for not shouting as the thieves fled. But Mrs. Grindle said she choked back cries for help, reasoning the robbers might shoot at her would-be saviors.

In addition to her part-time jobs as counselor and job liaison, Mrs.Grindle said she provides a clearinghouse of oil industry

Medieval art develops into business for Texas woman

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (AP) - The smells of Joan Gilbert's business welcome visitors at the door. Gold brocade fabric is spread out over the breakfast bar. Boxes of dried herbs and flowers cover a table. On the walls, on the mantle, in every corner are examples of what Mrs. Gilbert makes with potpourri. The making of potpourri goes back to the Middle Ages, Mrs. Gilbert says. Recipes for some of her favorite combinations come from medieval times, others from the Elizabethan period. Other recipes are her own.

"I've become a little unorthodox," she said. "I like for it to be colorful."

Some of the recipes combine 20 ingredients all designed to blend for their smell and to make the smell last.

Mrs. Gilbert, 55, got involved with potpourri when she started drying flowers. Her hobby grew into a full-time business that she

associated with potpourri. But she also decorates straw hats with the dried flowers and herbs. Or wreaths made of grapevine woven into shapes and then decorated with the dried materials. Or baskets, lined with heirloom material, and scented with rose petals. Or decorations for Christmas that are not only pretty but fill the house with perfume.

Most of the work she does is custom designed for someone. "I don't want it to become like an assembly line," she said. "That's what makes it fun being in your own business, you can accommodate people.'

Mrs. Gilbert moved to Grand

Prairie from New York City while working for the telephone company. A year ago she took early retirement and began working full-time on Elegancees.

"The American crafts are a part of our history," Mrs. Gilbert said, noting that many women are getting back into crafts again. "It inspires me that the pioneer women would take these flowers in the summer to have charm and beauty during the winters."

'I love it so much; it has so much history." she said

Mrs. Gilbert makes and sells her work in her home. She also has work for sale in several shops in the area. Some of her work has been used in "Good Housekeeping magazine for craft ideas. She offers lectures and seminars in making and using potpourri to women's and garden clubs. A middle school art class asked her to talk about her craft.

And as she runs her fingers through the dried herbs, she talks about more projects - writing a book, recreating the old-fashioned still rooms where potpourri was made in the Middle Ages, finding new uses of potpourri.

'You get ideas from everything,' she said 'Then you make it yourself; you do your own thing. You put your own creativity into it, and it is so rewarding.

TULSA - West Texas State led at halftime, but Tulsa went on a school record scoring spree the second half to down the Buffaloes, 110-90, Thursday night in Missouri Valley Conference basketball action

Steve Harris paced Tulsa with 30 points as the Hurricanes set a new school record for most points in the second half, 72. It was also the second highest in Missouri Valley History. The Buffs set the record earlier this season with the 79 points they scored in the second half of their 140-70 win over New Mexico Highlands.

Earl Davis scored 18 of his 20 points in the first half as WT took a 40-38 lead at intermission. However, the Hurricanes outscored the Buffs, 14-2, in the second half the WT could pull no closer than six points.

The Hurricanes were leading by four, 36-32, with 2:38 until intermission when the Buffs came back to score 8 of the last 10 points to take a two-point lead.

Eric Carmon added 16 points for the Buffs while Fobbs chipped in 15 for the Hurricanes. Orlando Graham added 11 points and Glen Jamison had 10 for the Buffs.

Davis' 20 points was a career high as he hit 9 of 12 field goal attempts. He also had four assists, three steals and two rebounds

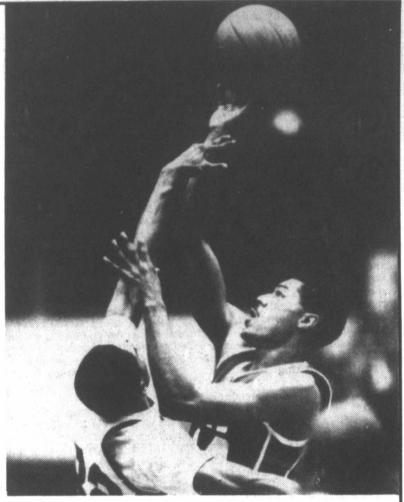

Harris, who is Tulsa's all-team leading scorer, got 19 of his 30 points in the second half. He was 11 of 16 from the floor and 8 of 9 from the charity stripe. He also contributed nine assists and three steals.

Tulsa now has the nation's longest winning streak at 12 in a row. Tulsa is unbeaten conference play at 6-0, while overall the Hurricanes are 15-2.

Pro Bowl Outlook

Lomax, Wilder labored in obscurity

HONOLULU (AP) - When Neil Lomax and James Wilder take the field for the NFC in Sunday's Pro Bowl game, they'll do it as backups - Lomax to Joe Montana and Wilder to Eric Dickerson and Walter Payton.

But there's nothing second-string about either.

While Montana was leading the San Francisco 49ers to the Super Bowl title and Dan Marino was shattering passing records for the Miami Dolphins; while Payton was taking over the National Football League's all-time rushing lead and Dickerson was shattering the single-season mark. Wilder and Lomax were having seasons almost as impressive.

But they were doing it in obscurity — Wilder with the 5-11 Tampa Bay Bucs; Lomax with a 9-7 St. Louis team that faded quickly from national conciousness when it lost by two points to Washington in its final game and lost a shot at the title in the four-team jumble that was the

"I think the recognition is beginning to come. With the stats I get, people can't overlook me too much," says Wilder.

True enough. Those stats include 1.544 yards rushing and 85 receptions for another 685 yards this season and games of the kind that caused linebacker Lawrence Taylor of the New York Giants to call Wilder the best running back he'd ever played against.

Lomax' stats also tell a story - a 61.6 completion percentage, 4,614t passing yards and 28 touchdown passes. The yardage was second in the NFL to Marino's and the fourth-best of all time, and the touchdown passes tied him with Montana for second-best this season behind Marino's record-busting 48.

"I wouldn't be playing if I didn't think I was as good as those guys, Lomax says of Marino and Montana.

Lomax and Wilder have several things in common besides their second-string superstar status.

Both are in their fourth year and their first Pro Bowl. They were selected a few picks apart in the second round of the highly fertile 1981 draft - 16 of the 82 players here come from the class of 1981. including two-time NFL defensive player of the year Taylor and Seattle's Kenny Easley, who won the award this season.

Wilder had the harder time this year. The Bucs got off to an 0-3 start and were never really in contention for even a wild-card playoff spot, leaving him with nothing but personal achievement to pursue

"It was tough," he says. "When you don't have a good season as a team, it's hard to get up every week. You always have to remind yourself how hard you have to work to do your best.'

Some of the notice Wilder got came under rather bizarre circumstances - in the final game of the season, when outgoing Coach John McKay, with a comfortable lead, ordered his defense to let the New York Jets score in order to give Wilder a shot at the record for combined rushing-receiving yards in a season. He didn't get it, which was all right with him.

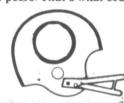

"If they're gonna lay down to give me a record, I don't want it," he says.

As for Lomax, he feels better things are coming.

"If we'd gotten to the playoffs, I'd have gotten more attention," he says. "That's the way it goes in this league. We've got a good young team and we're coming on. I think my time is near."

Meanwhile, they're happy for at least the Pro Bowl recognition.

"It's quite a thrill the first time," says Lomax. "You're chosen by your peers. That's what counts.

Cougars outlast Baylor

HOUSTON (AP) - Houston's Eric Dickens felt so comfortable shooting from the outside that the Cougar's Southwest Conference basketball game seemed almost like practice.

Dickens in his performance of the season, scored a career high 26 points and the Cougars emerged from a foul-filled second half to defeat the Bears 81-71 Thursday night.

"I felt pretty confident in my jump shot tonight," Dickens said. "I was just doing the things I do in practice. I was going in tonight. I knew we wer down. The main thing I wanted to do was to get us ahead. The loss extended the Bears' losing string to nine consecutive games and dropped them to a 7-10 overall record and 0-6 in SWC games. The defending champion Cougars are 13-4 and 5-1. Despite the growing losing string, Baylor Coach Jim Haller saw some bright spots.

"If we hit our free throws, we win the game," he said. "As ironic as it may sound, we could have been the first team to win here in 43 games if we'd hit 50 to 60 percent of our free throws."

The Bears missed six free throws during Houston's foul-plagued early second half and allowed the Cougars to get off the hook. Baylor hit 15 of 31 free throws for a 48 percent average.

Dickens hit 20 of his points in the first half, including seven in a row at one point, as the Cougars took a 45-38 lead at the half.

Houston started the second half by capitalizing on a double technical foul against Haller, but the Cougars then ran into a series of fouls that ended with starters Greg Anderson fouling out of the game with 17:13 to play and Rickie Winslow drawing his fourth infraction at 19:14.

Houston regained control. however, with three straight baskets by Braxton Clark, who scored 14 points. Alvin Franklin added 16 points and Winslow finished with 12 points for the Cougars.

Baylor's Carlos Briggs and Robert McLemore led the Bears with 19 points each and freshman Michael Williams added 17.

SMU may sign Jones

DALLAS (AP) - Bill Jones, one of the nation's most sought-after running backs, has made a verbal commitment to join the Southern Methodist University football

"I want to be part of Pony Express III," the Corsicana player told the Dallas Times Herald.

In 34 varsity football games spanning more than three seasons, Jones rushed for 3,100 yards and 38 touchdowns on 464 carries. He was courted by 90 schools and rated the best running back out of Texas by the Southwest Conference coaches. The 6-21/2-foot, 215-pound Jones also was a track standout. He earned All-American status last season as a member of Corsicana's 400-meter relay team and runs the 40 meters in 4.5 seconds. "I expect big things," Jones told the Dallas Morning News. "I want to go in my first year and contribute as much as possible. I liked SMU because (it) features the tailback in the 'I' formation."

Lewis leads Boilermakers to victory over Hoosiers

By KEN RAPPOPORT AP Sports Writer

Purdue guard Troy Lewis was a nervous wreck preparing for the Indiana game - and then went out and helped to wreck the Hoosiers.

"I was nervous when I got up in the morning," the freshman said. "I've got a lot of friends on the Indiana team." When the chips were down, however, Lewis was up - helping to bring the Boilermakers back from an eight-point deficit and a 62-52 victory over the nation's 13th-ranked college basketball team.

"The crowd (in Purdue's Mackey Arena) brought me back to my high school days - the Anderson gym is just as noisy as Mackey,'' said Lewis, who averaged 35.3 points a game as a senior at Anderson High School last year and shared the "Mr. Basketball" title with Delray Brooks, now a freshman at Indiana Lewis, a 56 per cent shooter with a 9.3 scoring average going into the game, finished with 12 points, hitting five of 10 from the field and both of his free throw attempts. "I always have confidence I can hit," said Lewis. "That's why I'm at Purdue - to shoot the ball.'

In other games involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 10 Oregon State beat Arizona 59-55; No. 12 Louisiana Tech tripped McNeese State 88-69; No. 17 Tulsa defeated West Texas State 110-90; No. 18 Michigan stopped Michigan State 86-75; No. 19 Virginia Commonwealth beat South Alabama 71-70, and No. 20 Nevada-Las Vegas routed New Mexico State 92-70.

Dean Derrah sank a pair of free throws with 10 seconds left as Oregon State held off Arizona. The Beavers never trailed after bolting to an 8-0 lead, but had to withstand a late rally that narrowed the margin to one point with 23 seconds to play.

Louisiana Tech, led by Karl Malone's 21 points and 14 rebounds, outscored McNeese State 30-9 en route to a runaway Southland Conference victory.

College Basketball

"They were awesome," said McNeese Coach Glenn Duhon.

Steve Harris scored 30 points and dished out nine assists as Tulsa defeated West Texas State. Trailing by two points at halftime; Tulsa took a 54-53 lead at 15:58 of the second half and never trailed again.

Roy Tarpley scored 17 points and Gary Grant keyed a ferocious Michigan defense with three steals as the Wolverines defeated Michigan State. Michigan led 37-28 at halftime and opened the second half with a 13-2 scoring spurt.

Rolando Lamb collected 25 points, 10 assists, three steals and five rebounds as Virginia Commonwealth nipped South Alabama.

Richie Adams scored 22 points and collected 14 rebounds to lead Nevada-Las Vegas over New Mexico State. The victory was the 13th straight for the Rebels.

"We took a gamble playing (guard Sidney) Moncrief in the second half with four fouls," Nelson said. "He didn't get his fifth until late in the game, and I didn't think we could win without him, so I left him in."

Moncrief scored 28 points, while Terry Cummings led Milwaukee with 34, including the game-winning basket, as the Bucks edged Kansas City 120-119 Thursday night in their National Basketball Association game.

"I'm playing an up-tempo game," Nelson said, talking about another gamble. "I'm not sure it was the right decision, but we won. I was afraid that if it got into a low-scoring game, it might end up who had the best shooters.'

In other NBA games, Detroit clobbered Golden State 137-118. Washington nipped Dallas 93-92, Cleveland edged Utah 110-109 and Denver defeated New Jersey

After LaSalle Thompson sank two free throws, Eddie Johnson hit a basket to give Kansas City a 119-118 lead with 48 seconds left. But Cummings sank a jump shot from the top of the key eight seconds later to give Milwaukee

"Our game plan was to run them," Cummings said. "We know that they are a running team, but at times they tend to tire near the latter part of the game. But what we tried to do was run them and maybe wear them down, and I think it kind of worked in our favor.

Kansas City had one last chance at the victory, but Reggie Theus' shot from three-point range was short and Otis Thorpe's tip-in was discounted the officials ruling it came after the final buzzer.

"Anyone got an extra second? We could have used one," said Kings Coach Phil Johnson. Bullets 93, Mavericks 92

The Bullets played without injured frontcourt players Jeff Ruland, Rich Mahorn and Cliff Robinson. Tom McMillen, Washington's biggest player at 6-foot-11, fouled out with 4:04 remaining.

Greg Ballard, at 6-7, was forced to play center, and he responded with a career-high 20 rebounds.

Gus Williams led Washington with 31 points, while Dallas was paced by Mark Aguirre with 28.

Wadkins leads L.A. Open LOS ANGELES (AP) - Tom has ever yielded.

Watson opened his 1985 PGA Tour season with a 67, 4- under-par on one of golf's better courses. That's good, he said.

But he's four shots off the pace after the first round of the Los Angeles Open.

That's bad. He's four shots back of Lanny Wadkins.

'He's playing really, really Watson said Thursday 'Right now he's at the top of his game. And when Lanny gets it on a roll, he can shoot numbers as low as anybody. You never want to overlook Lanny.

He missed one putt from about 6 feet and lipped out four others.

"We caught Riviera on a very vulnerable day," Wadkins said. "The greens were soft, the tees were up and there was practically no wind.

Watson agreed.

Tony Sills, who once caddied at Riviera, chipped in for an eagle-3 on the first hole and used that start as a springboard to a 65 that tied him for second with Pat Lindsey, two shots back.

Hal Sutton, who won the PGA title at Riviera two years ago, was another stroke behind at 66 and was tied with Bruce Lietzke, Bob Gilder, Gary Koch and Scott Simpson.

"It's more of a frame of mind thing than anything else," Yeoman said. "It allows us to attack any problem with a great deal of enthusiasm and gives the coaches on the road a feeling of permanence."

Yeoman's teams had slipped to a 5-5-1 record in 1982 and 4-7 in 1983 and his job was rumored on the line following an early season loss to Louisville. But the Cougars rallied to a 7-4 finish, tied for the Southwest Conference title and lost to Boston College in the Cotton

More controversy came at the Cotton Bowl when Ford announced that Yeoman had been recommended for a contract

Regent Don Sanders said Thursday that the UH Board of Regents' decision on Yeoman's contract was unanimous although two other regents earlier reacted angrily to the manner in which Yeoman's contract was announced

Regent Charles B. Marino said the initial decicion on Yeoman's contract was made without the entire board's advice. Marino claimed 50 per cent of the regents were unaware of the decision.

Regent John E. Kolb said the board had no advance knowledge of the proposed contract extension.

Prior to Thursday's announcement, Marino said "The problem is we can't go out on a five-year contract when the last three years haven't been winning. We want to set a policy that we can use for all our other head coaches that have a long history of winning.

On January 16, 1985, Judge Brenda Murray of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission issued a recommendation which will be approved or disapproved by the Commissioners of FERC.

Please be aware that should this recommendation be approved, the economic consequences to the City of Pampa will be devastating.

How could something like this happen, you ask yourselves? One of the main reasons is due to the fact that The Texas Railroad Commission has not become involved. They have refused to defend the rights of The State of Texas. Again we have seen the Federal Bureaucrats trample over our state rights.

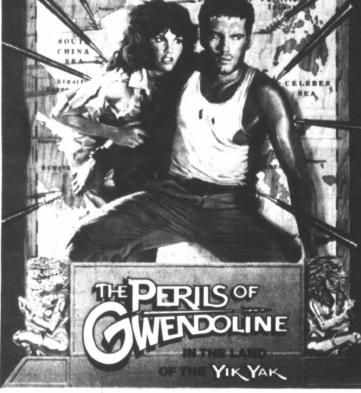

It's not too late to head off this disaster. What can you do? Please write one or all of the following Texas Railroad Commissioners and let them know your feelings. They have been elected to defend the rights of The State of Texas and you expect them to do their job. Their name and address is:

"Other departments may have to suffer," Rep. Ray Keller, R-Duncanville, warned after touring several state prisons on Thursday.

Keller and members of his committee, which oversees the Corrections Department, along with the House Criminal Jurisprudence Committee, were briefed by Department of Corrections Director Raymond Procunier, who served as tour guide for the inspection.

Procunier also put in a pitch for an "astronomical number" of staff additions to put his department in said that while the department is "headed toward a solution." Procunier probably would not get his requests granted in a single year. "This is a growing process,"

Blackwood said. Legislators, however, were unanimous in their support for Procounier, now on the job for about nine months.

"I'm pleased with the improvements," Keller said. "We've come a long way. But there is some way to go.

"It has quite an effect on you," Rep. Bob Melton, of Gatesville, said, walking down corridors and peering into cells at the Ellis II Unit, one of several prisons visited by lawmakers.

"I'm pleased with his openess," he said of Procunier. "They showed us everything we wanted.'

Previous visits before Procunier took over were "sanitized," legislators said

"He seems to be the right man," said Rep. Mike Millsap of Fort Worth.

"It's a miracle we have had as few problems as we have," Procunier said. "And I know that sounds strange."

The prison system has been rocked by disturbances and hundreds of inmate stabbings over the past year.

Procunier told legislators how he reorganized the administration of each prison unit, how he is reclassifying inmates so similar prisoners are housed together, and what challenges faced him when he arrived.

"There was not one department procedure in a procedure manual," he said. Now, he said, 25 training captains are on the job to make sure people know procedures.

"All I know is the old system is illegal," he said. "The 'con boss' system is not bad. It's just illegal."

The building tenders were replaced by guards, he said, but administrators failed to take into consideration that the inmate

The first installment of the show will deal with abortion, Tidwell said. It will be broadcast on Atlanta "super-station" WTBS and originate from Falwell's study in his Thomas Road Baptist Church at 11:05 p.m. Sunday.

NEW YORK (AP) - California divorce lawyer Marvin Mitchelson denies a federal judge's ruling that he neglected his duty to a client with an inept challenge to producer Darryl Zanuck's will.

U.S. District Judge John F. Keenan deferred a final judgment Thursday until California courts reconsider former actress Genevieve Gillaizeau's challenge of the Zanuck will.

Ms. Gillaizeau, who is suing Mitchelson for legal malpractice, lived with Zanuck from 1965 to 1973, when he underwent surgery for cancer, moved in with relatives and essentially cut her out of his satellite aboard the space shuttle Discovery, which Defense Department officials suggest have harmed national security.

"There are a number of investigations under way to try to find the source of the leaks, Pentagon spokesman Michael Burch told reporters Thursday

He said no lie detector tests had yet been administered in the investigations. He also said the current investigations are "limited to our side of the fence" and no journalists were being questioned.

The shuttle flight beginning Thursday afternoon was the first time in 46 space missions that an information blackout had been drawn over a U.S. launch.

In discussing the ground rules last month for coverage of the flight, Air Force Brig. Gen. Richard Abel said news stories that "speculate" on the the secret payload aboard Discovery might be investigated as a breach of national security.

Two days later, the Washington Post published details of the mission, saying Discovery would carry aloft a new satellite that will fly in a stationary orbit over the Soviet Union so it can intercept communications.

Several other news organizations, including The Associated Press, quickly followed the Post with their own stories about the mission.

Burch said "the type of information being leaked was particularly damaging to national security," but he refused to detail how. He said, "I'm led to believe" the Soviets gained information from the Post story about the mission which they didn't already have. He declined to elaborate.

Names in briefs

WASHINGTON (AP) -Thirty-nine anti-apartheid demonstrators, including members of a Baltimore church group, face misdemeanor charges after being arrested outside the South African Embassy in the ongoing protest against that nation's racial policies.

They were among about 150 protesters who marched outside the embassy Thursday to show their opposition to the apartheid policy of strict racial separation, police spokesman Wendell Samuels said. Those arrested were charged with demonstrating within 500 feet of an embassy.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senate Minority Leader Robert Byrd is trying to persuade his colleagues to follow the lead of the U.S. House in allowing televising of their deliberations.

"Without television coverages the Senate is rapidly becoming the invisible half of Congress," the West Virginia Democrat told hearing of the Senate Rules Committee on Thursday.

Firm will challenge record $6.8 million fine by EPA

CHICAGO (AP) - Chemical Waste Management Inc. says it will challenge an "unreasonable" $6.8 million fine, the largest of its kind ever sought by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, for allegedly mishandling a cancer-causing substance.

The EPA charged Thursday that Chemical Waste Management employees in Vickery, Ohio, violated incineration laws by illegally discharging high levels of PCBs into waste lagoons and sold more than 6 million gallons of waste oil laced with PCBs.

Harold Gershowitz, senior vice president of Waste Management Inc., Chemical Waste Management's parent company, called the proposed penalty "unreasonable" and said it would be challenged during administrative hearings

"We felt there's no justification for it, based on other EPA settlements in the region, especially in cases involving substantial environmental damage." Gershowitz said. "This is a case of no environmental damage

In a civil administrative complaint filed with EPA's regional hearing clerk, the EPA alleges that Chemical Waste Management of suburban Oak Brook violated federal regulations governing the "use, recordkeeping and marking of PCBs between 1980 and 1983.

The complaint is the culmination of an 18-month federal investigation into PCB handling and storage practices at the company's Vickery facility, Ms. Donohua said.

The EPA contends Chemical Waste Management employees illegally discharged high levels of PCBs into waste lagoons to dilute the PCBs and avoid the federal regulation requiring PCB fluids to be destroyed by incineration, Ms. Donohua said.

The agency charges more than 6 million gallons of contaminated liquid later were sold by the company as reclaimed oil.

Another Canadian cooler is blasting upper Midwest

By The Associated Press

A "very potent" storm packing 60 mph wind gusts that made it feel like 56 below blasted the upper Midwest today, triggering blizzard warnings in the Dakotas and Minnesota where National Guardsmen patrolling snow-choked roads rescued marooned motorists.

The fast moving storm from central Canada pushed the mercury to 11 degrees below zero in Warroad, Minn., today as it headed toward the central Plains and Ohio Valley. In Fargo, N.D., 30 mph winds made the 5 below reading feel like 56 below.

On Thursday night, 60 mph winds ripped through Fargo and Alexandria, Minn., the National Weather Service said. It came on the heels of a bone-numbing cold snap that has been blamed for 173 deaths in 23 states and the District of Columbia in the past week.

The storm was expected to bring freezing temperatures back to Florida by Saturday, said Jack Hales of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo. "It is a very potent winter storm with very strong winds and rapidly falling temperatures," Hales said. Snow was falling today from the Great Lakes through the central Appalachians, much of the Ohio Valley, the upper Mississippi Valley and South Dakota. Blizzard Dakotas, Minnesota and part of

In Preston County, W.Va., roughly half the mountainous county's 30,000 residents have been stranded since Jan. 18 when an arctic cold front dubbed the Alberta Clipper plowed into the state with sub-zero temperatures and almost daily snow showers.

Gov. Arch Moore on Wednesday ordered the National Guard to send four endloaders and a six-wheeled all-terrain vehicle in to help clear Preston County

Some residents mounted snowmobiles to overcome the drifting snows and reach stores for food, fuel and medical supplies, but many others have been left pinned in their homes.

Block seeking farm policy support warnings were posted today for the Agriculture Secretary John Block is taking his case for a lean, austere farm program to the public, preaching its free market gospel on television and in frequent news interviews.

On Thursday, Block appeared on network television and in a satellite hookup with Farm Belt TV stations, and produced an opinion column for The Washington Post.

In all of them, the message was the same: the nation can no longer sustain policies that lead to for salvation.

The forces hurting U.S. farmers, from declining land values to a strong dollar that dampens farm exports, "are huge, and are bigger than a farm bill, they're bigger than a secretary of agriculture, and honestly they're probably bigger than the Congress and the president," Block said.

"For the country, or farmers, or agribusinessmen, or whoever, to always look when they have tough times to the secretary of agriculture or the government, and say, 'What are you going to do to save us?' - As much as I would like to say, I've got the solution, honestly I don't have it," he told

Block said the administration's long-term farm bill, to be sent to Congress the second week in February, will gradually phase out government's role in influencing markets and production and will apply to all crops that now benefit from price supports, from cotton to tobacco to wheat.

He also said it will include an absolute upper limit on farm spending "so that it cannot get away from us" like it did in 1983.

He pledged the farm bill will provide enough aid to producers to see them through the transition to reliance on markets instead of federal price supports.
