Forecasters predict coldest temperatures

From Staff and Wire Reports
A new winter storm churned into the Texas Panhandle, and forecasters said it could bring high, gusty winds, sleet and snow, and the coldest temperatures of 1985.

And it could hang around for several days, the National Weather Service added.

"This will be the most extended period of cold all winter, since winter began in 1984," said forecaster Chris Sohl of Dallas.

"Before it's all said and done, it's got a reasonable chance of being the coldest day of 1985, between late Wednesday and Sunday," Sohl added.

So far, 1985's coldest day for Dallas was Jan. 20, when the temperature dipped to 10.

The front arrived in Pampa a few hours ahead of schedule with heavy snowfall beginning at mid-morning. Temperatures were around 30 this morning, but were expected to plunge sharply by tonight.

A winter storm watch has been issued for the Pampa area, with a chance of sleet and snow. The initial forecast called for an accumulation of one inch for today, with an additional one to two inches tonight and one to two inches Thursday.

The high Tuesday in Pampa reached a mild 56 degrees under sunny skies before clouds drifted in during the late afternoon. Temperatures dipped into the upper 20s this morning with light fog and had risen near freezing by mid-morning. Light snow was falling by 9 a.m. in Pampa.

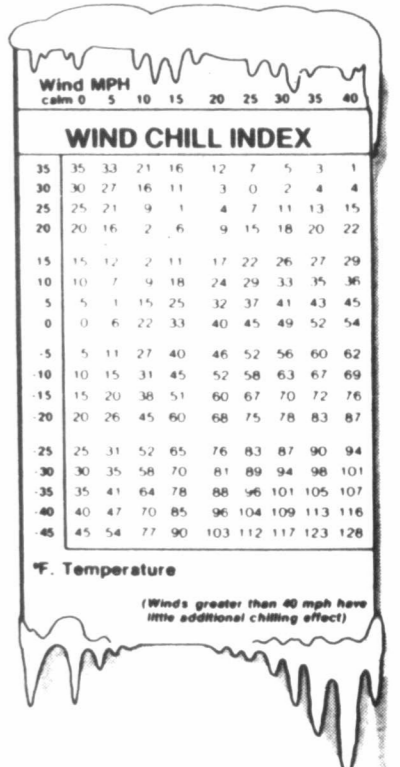

But the arrival of the front with gusty northerly winds is expected to bring a drop back into the 20s for today. The overnight low is forecast near 6 degrees, with a high Thursday in the lower teens.

With the storm's arrival, northerly gusts of up to 20 and 30 mph will replace a moderate southerly breeze, and the effect will be wind chills as low as 20 below zero throughout the northern parts of the state, Sohl said.

Accumulations of up to 4 inches of snow are expected in the Panhandle and sections of North Texas, with lesser amounts farther south.

The chance of precipitation on Thursday is 80 percent in North Texas, the weather service said.

The weather service advised precautions against freezing pipes and plants and protection from hypothermia for people and pets.

Texas had other problems today. Dense fog blanketed much of the eastern half of the state overnight, dropping visibility to near zero at Wichita Falls, along East Texas lakes, and along the Texas coast. Visibility was reported at one-sixteenth of a mile at Waco and one-fourth of a mile at Longview.

Drizzle dampened parts of South Central Texas.

Predawn temperatures were mild, with most readings in the 60s and 70s, although temperatures as low as the 30s and 40s were reported across the Panhandle and South Plains.

At 4 a.m., the temperature extremes in Texas were from 29 at Amarillo to 68 at Brownsville.

Travelers advisories were issued because of the fog.

"Caution is urged to all travelers, whether on the roads or on the lakes," the weather service said in an early morning advisory.

Because of near total saturation of an air mass, the weather service said the fog would be heavy throughout the morning drive time in metropolitan areas, with no likely relief until mid-morning.

Meanwhile, as the winter storm headed toward Texas, it left up to 4 inches of snow and brutal wind-chill factors in other states.

Whaley supports tuition hike

From Staff and Wire Reports

AUSTIN—State Rep. Foster Whaley of Pampa applauded calls for tuition increases in Texas universities and said he would support rumored proposals to hike the charges to $24 per semester hour.

Texas state universities currently charge $4 per semester hour.

"There is general agreement that increases are needed. The question is how much," Rep. Whaley said.

Rumors around the state capitol this morning were that legislative leaders would propose the increase to $24 and Rep. Whaley said that was fine with him.

"Texas ranks 44th in the nation in tuition charges and would still rank 23rd if we raised it to $24," Whaley said.

In addition to state financial woes, Rep. Whaley had two other reasons for wanting the tuition increase.

One of the reasons he cited was that many students from outside Texas move to the state, live here for a year to establish legal residence, then take advantage of the low tuition rates.

"And about 80 percent of the parents with children in college are well-off enough to afford higher tuition," he said. "I never have liked the idea of taxing people with lower incomes to pay for the education of students whose parents are better off."

Whaley said he does not want to deny anyone of the opportunity of attending college and advocated a loan program with stiff payback requirements for students from lower income families.

State University officials have been lining up to tell the House Appropriations Committee, of which Whaley is a member, how bad off they would be if lawmakers agree to a proposed 26 percent cut in higher education funds.

"If funding for our system's four universities remains as recommended by the Legislative Budget Board, serious damage will be done to the quality of instruction at those universities," said John Cargile, board chairman for the Texas State University System.

"The universities within this system are now being severely impaired due to their past efforts at efficiency," Cargile said Tuesday as the appropriations panel began a week of hearings on higher education.

The LBB, which proposes a state budget, has recommended major cuts in state college spending as part of an austerity program sparked by a money shortage of up to $1 billion.

Cargile and C. Robert Kemble, chairman of the Council of University Presidents, Tuesday told the committee that tuition hikes are needed. Neither specified how much Kemble said state university students should pay "more realistic and substantially higher tuition."

Kemble, Lamar University chancellor, said lawmakers should view state colleges as "not a drain, but an economic asset."

Texas state college tuition is among the lowest in the nation at $4 per hour.

"Higher education is being asked to bear a disproportionate share of the burden," Kemble said of the Legislature's effort to close the spending gap.

Speaker Gib Lewis said Tuesday he hopes the colleges end up with no more than a 10 percent cut.

He said tuition hikes would be the best way to find money for the universities, but he added, "That's going to be a little bit of money, not a great deal."

Texas Southern University President Leonard Spearman asked the committee for special consideration.

Victim's father views execution

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — James David Raulerson died in Florida's electric chair today for killing a policeman in a 1975 gun battle, his execution witnessed by the victim's father, who had longed for years "to see the day they pull the switch."

Raulerson, 33, was convicted of shooting to death policeman Michael Stewart, 23, during a robbery at a Jacksonville restaurant.

Raulerson was the 11th inmate to die in Florida since 1979 and the 37th put to death in the nation since the high court reinstated capital punishment in 1976. He was the fifth person executed in the nation this year.

He entered the death chamber at 6:58 a.m. and was pronounced dead at 7:11, according to Sgt. Don Gladish of the corrections staff.

In his last statement, Raulerson blamed a police officer for Stewart's death.

"I am sorry you are made a murderer through the state Mr. Dugger," Raulerson said, referring to Richard Dugger, state prison superintendent. "James English killed Michael Stewart and used Stewart's gun to murder my cousin. I am sorry for you for taking life. My family knows I love them and I love you."

James English is a police officer who was wounded in the shootout in which Stewart and Raulerson's cousin, Jerry Tant, were killed.

The victim's father, Jack Stewart, sat in the second of four rows of chairs for witnesses. After the execution, he expressed satisfaction.

"It's over. Justice has finally been served and thank God for that," the father told reporters.

He had been on the witness list twice before when executions for Raulerson were scheduled and then stayed. "I've been disappointed so many times," Stewart said last week.

At least two dozen police officers, some in uniform, drove from nearby Jacksonville to Florida State Prison near Starke and far outnumbered the handful of death penalty opponents who also staged a vigil at a pasture across the street from the prison.

In a 1981 interview, Jack Stewart said, "I hope we'll be able to live to see the day they pull the switch."

OPEC ministers agree to price cut

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — A majority of OPEC oil ministers agreed today to drop the price of top-grade oil, Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani said.

The accord, which ended three days of emergency talks of the oil producers' cartel, was not unanimous and its effect on the consumer could not be immediately assessed.

"Yes, we have an agreement," Yamani told reporters as he and several other oil ministers emerged from a final 2½-hour session.

Yamani said a majority of ministers agreed to leave the price of the cheapest crudes sold by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries at $26.50 a barrel, while setting the price of the highest-priced crudes at $2.40 above that.

That would mean top-priced oil would fall in price from $30.50 a barrel to $28.90, based on the figures mentioned by Yamani.

The Saudi minister said the deal was not unanimous, but added that OPEC would not have to meet again until its regular summer session. He declined to provide further details.

The effects for the consumer were not immediately known. Each $1 cut in the price of a barrel of oil sold in the United States is equivalent to a reduction of approximately 2½ cents in the price of a gallon of refined petroleum, such as gasoline, when the entire savings is passed on to the consumer.

OPEC accounts for about 40 percent of all imported oil in the United States, or about 13 percent of all the petroleum consumed. The agreement was announced here before most U.S. businesses were open and could be contacted for comment.

Mana Saeed Oteiba, oil minister of the United Arab Emirates, and Arturo Hernandez Grisanti, oil minister of Venezuela, said Algeria, Gabon, Libya and Iran were not part of the agreement.

But Grisanti said the deal would be implemented and claimed it would strengthen the oil market.

"This is a majority decision, and it is a valid decision," he said through an interpreter. "In the past we have had decisions that have not been unanimous decisions, but history has shown that we have been able to reach unanimity as time passes."

Grisanti also said that as part of the deal, Nigeria had agreed to restore 65 cents of the $2-a-barrel price cut it made last October. That would leave its price at $28.65.

"I am sure that OPEC will continue to battle for the stabilization of the market," Grisanti said.

The president of OPEC, Indonesian Oil Minister Subroto, later told a news conference that Saudi Arabia would cut the price of its Saudi Light crude by $1, to $28 a barrel.

Ducks learn to duck to avoid ab-duck-tion

NEW BRAUNFELS, Texas (AP) — A duck population boom at Landa Park has spurred officials to launch an Adopt-A-Duck program.

The ducks, on the other hand, have learned how to duck when round-up time comes.

About 400 ducks have overrun the park, one of New Braunfels' main tourist attractions. To trim the population, the web-footed creatures are being placed in local homes.

So far, about 60 birds have been removed and there is a waiting list for more. But the ducks have gotten wise to the project.

"The ones left in the park are extremely intelligent. We got all the dumb ducks first," chuckled Olen Elliot, New Braunfels animal shelter supervisor.

"You can drive through now and hardly see a duck. The ones that are left are scared that somebody's after them," Elliot said. "They know if they get about 10 feet out in the water, nobody's gonna get 'em." Elliot said.

Many of the people who call in wanting a duck have ponds in their yards, park officials said.

City parks director David Whatley said several varieties of duck — Muscovy, Mallards, Khaki, Campbells and other breeds — have found a home at Landa Lake.

He theorizes many of the ducks were Easter gifts that later were taken to the park.

"They're cute when they're little," he said.

"But when they get bigger, they start quacking and people have second thoughts."

Tourists and picnickers habitually feed the birds, as do local concessionaires. State biologists say the lake could support thousands of ducks.

But Whatley said he fears the ducks could take over the park.

"If you're having a picnic with your family, you can expect to be surrounded by 30 or 40 ducks," Whatley said. "Four or five — that's cute. Thirty or 40 — that's something else."

Elliot suggested that demands for the ducks as pets or for home ponds will easily keep the population explosion under control.

"We thought at first, my gosh, a couple of hundred ducks. All these ugly ducks. But I have never kept a duck out here at the (animal) shelter more than 30 minutes," Elliot said. "People ... come to get the ducks."

Ethics officer explains why report on Meese overruled

WASHINGTON (AP) - The director of the government's ethics office said in a letter made public today that a staff conclusion Attorney General-designate Edwin Meese III had violated conflict-of-interest rules was overturned after a "robust, open and free exchange" of opinions.
 Director David H. Martin, in a Monday letter to the Senate Judiciary Committee chairman, Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said that after the internal debate, "I concluded, and my staff agreed, that no conflicts of interest existed."
 Martin sent the letter as he sought to limit release of the report to committee members.
 After forcing Martin's Office of Government Ethics to publicly release the internal documents Tuesday, senators sought today to learn more about why Martin rejected the initial findings reached by staff attorneys J. Gary Davis and Nancy Feathers. Martin, Davis and Ms. Feathers were summoned to testify before the panel, which for the second time is considering whether to recommend Meese's confirmation as attorney general.

 Meese told the committee Tuesday the findings by the two lawyers were based on factual errors and misinterpretations.
 The presidential counselor, who returned for questioning today, acknowledged under oath that he asked his lawyers to take up the matter with Martin. But Meese said he saw nothing wrong with that.
 "At my request, counsel for me contacted the Office of Government Ethics and asked to be heard," Meese said. "I do feel what they did was proper."
 Martin, who was appointed by President Reagan, reiterated a Jan. 24 conclusion that Meese "was in compliance with applicable laws and regulations regarding conflicts of interest."

 "That was, and is, accurate," Martin said in a letter to the committee, which had insisted that the internal working paper by the staff lawyers be made public.
 Meese, 53, is facing confirmation hearings for the second time; his nomination was tabled last year as a court-appointed independent counsel investigated allegations that he had a role in obtaining federal jobs for people who had helped him out of a financial problems.
 The independent counsel, Jacob A. Stein, also investigated Meese's promotion in the Army Reserve; his acceptance of $10,000 from a presidential transition organization and other matters.
 At Tuesday's hearings, the senators asked about many of the same topics that they initially raised at Meese's first set of hearings.

Columnist polls men on sex

CHICAGO (AP) - The results of syndicated columnist Mike Royko's "Sex or Bowling" survey are in, with 66 percent of the men responding saying they prefer sex over "bowling, drinking, golfing, cuddling or just about anything else."

In a column titled "Cuddle Up With This Survey, Ann," the Chicago Tribune writer reported today on his poll, which he said drew responses from about 10,000 men and "several hundred angry female persons who wrote to condemn me as a male chauvinist pig."

He said the other 12 percent included men who couldn't decide "or took this as an opportunity to write a creepy note to my secretary."
 Royko's poll was inspired by advice columnist Ann Landers' recent survey in which the majority of the more than 90,000 women responding said they would be content to be held close, treated tenderly and skip sexual intercourse.

Doctors hoping transplant of morrow will save baby

HOUSTON (AP) - Doctors say they are "cautiously optimistic" that an 11-week-old girl born without the ability to fight diseases will survive an experimental bone marrow transplant.
 The infant, identified only as Agnes Theresa, was born Oct. 28 suffering from severe immune deficiency.

On Dec. 11, doctors at Texas Children's Hospital transplanted two ounces of bone marrow from the baby's 6-year-old sister in hopes that Agnes' system then would begin producing her own ability to fight infection.
 Since then, Agnes has grown four pounds and three inches and now weighs 12 pounds, 10 ounces and measures 28-1/4 inches, the hospital said in a statement released Tuesday.

"Agnes Theresa appears to be my most successful transplant patient to date," Dr. William T. Shearer, director of the David Center at Texas Children's Hospital, said.

The center is named after Houston's so-called "Bubble Boy," who also suffered from severe immune deficiency syndrome and lived virtually all of his 12 years in a plastic germ-free bubble. Complications following a bone marrow transplant forced physicians to free David from the bubble. He died last Feb. 22.

Shearer said Agnes showed a "slight rash" 10 days after her transplant but has experienced no complications.

Her progress has been so good that doctors have been able to remove a special tube in her heart that was inserted in case she needed additional drugs to combat reaction to the marrow transplant.

"The baby's growth told us weeks before the laboratory tests turned positive that an early and powerful immunological reconstitution was taken place," he said.

Poll: 'Star Wars' research opposed

LOS ANGELES (AP) - More than half the U.S. public opposes President Reagan's proposal to conduct extensive research on "Star Wars" weaponry, and by a 2-1 margin they want to ban any use of weapons in space, a Los Angeles Times says.

The Reagan administration opposes a freeze on the grounds it could not be verified and would lock the United States into military inferiority to the Soviet Union.

In the poll, published in the newspaper Wednesday, respondents said by a 2-1 margin that a space-based defense system designed to protect the United States from enemy missiles would likely tip the nuclear balance of power by threatening the opposing nation.

Fifty-five percent of those surveyed said they would ban any Star Wars research.

At the same time, just over half of those taking part in the poll say they would rather risk destruction of the United States than be governed by the Soviet Union.
 Two thirds say the Soviets can't be trusted to keep arms treaties and 55 percent agree with President Reagan's statement that the Soviet Union is an "evil empire."

But the poll, conducted among 1,847 Americans from Jan. 19 through Jan. 24, also indicated an overwhelming majority of the

Texas farm workers ask jobless benefits

AUSTIN (AP) — Two farm workers, testifying at a legislative hearing, told lawmakers they believe it's unfair for Texas law to deny them unemployment benefits.

"We wish that there would be work. We prefer work to unemployment. Why is it that the state of Texas does not want to give unemployment benefits to farm workers?" asked Edwardo Garcia, 62, a farm worker for 45 years.

"I believe that I should have rights after all these years of work," Garcia, who lives near Donna, told a House Committee on Labor and Employment Relations hearing Tuesday.

The committee chairman, Rep. Lloyd Criss, D-La Marque, has introduced a bill to provide unemployment compensation for most farm workers.

"We created a law in 1936 creating income maintenance during involuntary periods of unemployment. This exclusion discriminates against our citizens who work on farms. As a group, they are singled out for unequal treatment under the law," Criss said.

Under current law, a Texas employer must provide unemployment benefits for his workers if his quarterly payroll exceeds $1,500 and he employs one person in 20 weeks a year. For farm workers to be covered, a farmer must have a quarterly payroll of $20,000 and employ 10 people for 20 weeks in a year. Criss said only 0.5 percent of all farmers fall into that category.

Criss said his bill would apply unemployment benefits to farm workers "exactly as it is applied to all other workers," and he rejected arguments from farmers and work crew leaders who contend it would be too expensive for them.

"The average yearly expenditure each farmer can expect to make for each worker's benefits is $97.20," Criss said.

The lawmaker noted that regardless of his bill,

State District Judge Harley Clark already has ruled that the current law discriminates. The TEC will still have to pay jobless benefits to farmworkers, he said, and without the bill "other employers' taxes may increase to cover the costs for which farmers and crew leaders should be responsible."

The only opponent to the bill at Tuesday's hearing was Pat Smith, an official of the Texas Farm Bureau.

Although he had no exact figure, Smith said Criss' $97.20 cost estimate is too low, adding that farmers see good reasons they should be exempted from paying for the benefits.

"A great deal of agricultural employment ... is seasonal and temporary in nature. Seasonal workers enter employment knowing that when the crop has been picked or the field has been cultivated, that their employment with that particular farmer or rancher will end," Smith said.

"To permit unemployment claims in such a situation seems to us to be contrary to the original concept and intent of unemployment compensation," he said.

Smith said the current farm economy, in which low prices and high interest rates threaten many Texas farmers and ranchers with bankruptcy, is such that few can afford to pay the additional costs of unemployment compensation.

But a series of witnesses testifying in favor of Criss' bill said the legislation is overdue.

"Unemployment compensation is not welfare. People have to work to get unemployment benefits," said Ronald Luna, a member of the Texas Employment Commission. "It shouldn't take some court ruling to tell us that this is the right thing to do."

Sister Maureen Leach, who works with the National Farm Workers Service Center at San Juan, said few Texas farm workers understand why they can't get benefits when other workers can.

Christian group rips horse racing bill

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Baptist Christian Life Commission says Texans are being given "hokem" instead of evidence by those who want the state Legislature to approve horse race betting.

Phil Strickland, director of the group that long has opposed pari-mutuel gambling, noted that some racing bill backers estimate that betting could generate up to $200 million in annual new revenue for state government.

But that is more than twice the average of what the biggest racing states receive, Strickland said Tuesday, calling the estimate "a plateful of hokem."

Strickland said statistics from the horse racing industry show that California, the state with the largest pari-mutuel income, received $138.9 million in 1983.

The average of the four racing states with the largest incomes — California, New York, Illinois and Ohio — was just $79.6 million in 1983, he said. And in states around Texas, revenue ranged from $2.1 million for New Mexico to $22.8 million for Louisiana, he said.

"This most recent claim by the horse racing folks hurt them. They are assuming that legislators are incredibly gullible or incredibly stupid," Strickland said.

"Pari-mutuel gambling might eventually raise $200 million, but I will be riding to work in a space buggy when it happens," he said.

Reps. Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, and George Pierce, R-San Antonio, introduced the bill in the House on Monday, and Speaker Gib Lewis said the legislation's time may have arrived.

"I'll be honest with you. At one time, I was opposed to pari-mutuel betting. It's something that's overdue, especially with the financial problems we are facing in the state," Lewis said.

Given the state government's budget problems — a potential shortfall of $1 billion over the 1986-87 budget years — Lewis said gambling revenue could help.

"It's a multi-billion-dollar industry," he said, with potential windfalls not only from a cut of the bets but also from "satellite businesses that it spurs."

Horse racing legislation was approved by the Senate in 1983, but failed in the House by two votes.

Berlanga said he thinks the House will favor his bill this time.

Board stands by no pass-no play rule

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Education's "no pass, no play" rule is helping Texas students pass their grades, says Jon Brumley, board chairman.

"The board felt it should be rightfully stringent," Brumley said

Tuesday as keynote speaker to the annual School Administrators Conference on Education.

"Already we are being told that it has had a positive effect. Children want to work and they are keeping their course grades up, and that's what the rules are supposed to do," he said.

Brumley told the 2,500 Texas school superintendents and administrators the rule concerning eligibility for extracurricular activities was probably the most controversial of the 38 separate actions taken by the new 15-member body since taking office in October.

Students with grades of less than 70 in any course cannot take part in or practice for athletics or other extracurricular activity for six weeks.

Several proposals are pending in the current Legislature to change the rule.

Brumley said it is important for everyone — administrators, teachers and parents — to help students understand the importance of preparing for the future.

"They can't just think about the present, participating in extracurricular activities. It's important that, through us, our students prepare for the future," Brumley said.

Brumley said the board was particularly distressed by recent reports that Texas ranked 17th in scores on Scholastic Aptitude Tests (SAT) given prospective college students in 22 states.

"It's time to stop making excuses," he said. "We've got to improve our scores. Parents, educators and communities must work together to get the scores of our students up."

"If we have to inconvenience extracurricular activities to do that, so be it," Brumley said.

"We want to get to the point where the state is more concerned of the academic achievement of our children ... not just about the top 10 in athletics."

Have a serendipity day

Is the gray dinginess of winter getting you down? Now that the excitement of the holidays are over does it seem like forever until spring?

This sounds like the beginning of a Pepto-Bismol commercial, but believe it or not, I've found a way to bring spring to the middle of winter and I don't mean by planting a bulb in a pot, either.

It's called serendipity.

Horace Walpole discovered serendipity on a winter's day in 1754, the story goes. He was reading a Persian fairy tale about three princes of Ceylon who had set out in search of great treasures. Though they did not find the treasures they were looking for, they found something they had not anticipated at all — unexpected delights all along the way!

The ancient name of Ceylon is Serendip, the title of the story was "The Three Princes of Serendip" and from this Walpole coined the word "serendipity." He couldn't wait to write a letter about his discovery to his friend Horace Mann who was then an envoy to Florence, Italy.

Walpole told Mann that his discovery was that the best experiences occurred when and where they are least expected and these experiences were always better than what was originally planned.

I had heard about serendipity before — in fact, one group of ladies called their church bazaar last fall "Serendipity in October." But I had not paid much attention to it, and never thought of it applying to my own life. As for the word itself, there must be an easier way to get the message across, but I haven't come up with it. Maybe you can.

But the principle behind serendipity is one of the most refreshing ideas I've come across in a long time. It sort of runs along the same lines as "stopping to smell the roses."

If you open your eyes to what is going on to you each day, you'll be surprised at the many serendipitous things that are happening to you that you never noticed before.

For example, maybe you get a cheery letter from a friend or someone compliments you on how you look or your boss tells you that you've done a good job. Other serendipities might be your toddler running up for a hug and a kiss after a long hard day at work or your sister from out of state calls.

Everyone has different things happen to them every day or so that warms their hearts for a minute — a serendipity. But sometimes, it's hard not to let all the other problems of living overshadow that special moment.

That's the secret — to open yourself to completely enjoy the serendipity that happens to you. Then you can go on with everyday living.

You might find a serendipity for yourself when planning one for someone else — like sending flowers or cards to people you know are not feeling too good about themselves or doing anything else you can think of to brighten someone else's day. Isn't it fun, just knowing how happy you've made them?

But all this leads to a serendipity I encountered last Saturday. It was great!

I was out shopping when I encountered a little boy with his hands jammed into his pockets. His mother was gently telling him to take his hands out of his pockets before he pulled his pants down.

Trying to be helpful, I asked the little boy if it wouldn't be hard to shake hands with someone if he has his hands stuck in his pockets all the time. He looked me squarely in the eye and with the wisdom of a sage answered, "Well, you KNOW what my momma says ... NEVER, NEVER, EVER shake a stranger!"

You can't argue with that.

Water bill top priority for farmers, ranchers

AUSTIN (AP) — Water is the number one priority for farmers and ranchers, the president of the Texas Farm Bureau said.

S.M. True said the maintaining of existing water rights, especially those which relate to underground water take top priority of the water bill before state legislators.

"We are concerned about the bays and estuaries issue and support attempting to balance the needs between environment and legitimate water users," he said before the Texas Farm Bureau Leadership Conference on Tuesday.

Gov. Mark White, who served as guest speaker, said a good water package is in the making which should please all Texans.

He encouraged the 500 in attendance to express their views on the water bill.

White also said transportation, which is critical to agriculture, is being set high on legislators' priority lists.

"I know how important it is to have the maintenance of roads," White said about farm to market roads.

White said new companies are looking at taxes and utility rates when deciding on new locations to expand.

"We are among the lowest tax base of any industrial state in the nation. We're about 49th of all the states on tax bases," he said.

White said a new wave of economic development in Texas lies in rural areas.

"Companies are looking for places to go, a place to expand their operation and they're asking for a quality of life. What's happening in the rural parts of our state are going to be the new wave of economic development," he said.

He said 40 percent of Texans have seen lower rates in utilities in the past months because of reductions from the Public Utilities Commission.

State's budget writers call emergency meeting

AUSTIN (AP) — The Legislature's top budget writers called an emergency meeting today of the Legislative Budget Board to prepare an "alternative budget" for state spending.

Gov. Bill Hobby said Tuesday the new proposed budget would not include a tax increase but would include a tuition increase for college students. Hobby has said he favors a tuition increase for all students.

Asked if the LBB might consider a one-year budget rather than the usual two years, Hobby replied,

"Come and find out, come to the meeting."

The LBB in December approved a two-year budget proposal that would spend $35.8 billion from all funds, including taxes. The LBB document is traditionally used as the preliminary document by both the House and the Senate.

On Jan. 15, Gov. Mark White presented his no-new-taxes budget of $36.1 billion, an increase of $320.8 million over the LBB proposal.

Asked recently if a one-year budget was inevitable if the Legislature wanted to avoid new taxes and still maintain state services, Ray Farabee, a Senate leader, said:

"I don't think it's inevitable but if there was a continual shifting of revenues such as sliding oil prices, it would certainly press us to that."

State Comptroller Bob Bullock, whose job it is to project how much money state government has to spend, has said he doesn't see how the Legislature can stay away from annual sessions to plan and adopt budgets. The way the system works now, Bullock must project as far ahead as 2½ years.

Bullock's most recent revenue estimate was that the Legislature needed an extra $1.1 billion to finance state services at their current levels over the next two years.

Legislators, at White's urging, raised the state sales tax during the summer by 0.125 percent to pay for a multi-billion dollar reform of public schools and highway repairs. That was the first general tax increase in Texas in 13 years.

Many lawmakers have voiced opposition to another tax hike.

Cambodians relive fall of their country in new movie

HOUSTON (AP) — Cambodian-Americans now living in the nation's fourth largest city are flocking to see "The Killing Fields," a movie that brings back memories of friends, relatives and their homeland in the early 1970s.

Paul Messiah, manager of the Galleria Cinema, the lone Houston theater running the movie, said entire families of Cambodians are showing up to see the film.

The movie centers on the friendship between a New York Times reporter covering the war in Cambodia and his interpreter as the U.S.-backed government of Lon Nol falls to the Khmer Rouge.

"The film is wonderful and gratifying," said Kimberly Huon, whose family is among 6,000 Cambodians who have settled here.

"All of my family died in the labor camps that were 'The Killing Fields,'" added her husband, Howard, 42. "My mother, my father, my nieces and nephews."

Estimates have put the death toll at nearly 2 million in the subsequent reign of terror under the Khmer Rouge.

Huon's father, a lumber merchant, was one of the many killed in the Khmer Rouge purge.

"The rich and the educated were killed indiscriminately," said Huon, who holds an agronomy degree from Mississippi State and now is an IBM computer technician. "Those who were educated abroad were particularly suspect."

He added that "most of the friends who studied with me and graduated from American schools that year (1960) were killed, too."

Sotah Chhay, who grew up on a farm and remembered seeing people killed, was among seven people in his party of friends and family members to view the film.

"This is my story — the fighting, the killing, all of it," said the 22-year-old Chhay. "I was young."

"We were hoping to go home to Cambodia, but we heard news that people were starving," said Kouy Ang, who was 12 when her family fled by boat to a refugee camp in Thailand. "We decided to come to the United States."

She enjoys this country, she said, but "it's not like home."

Our opinion

All taxes are paid by the consumer

There is a strong possibility that all that noble sentiment about "no new taxes" that was coming out of Austin when the Legislature convened this year will last less than a month.

The Associated Press reported yesterday that leaders in the Legislature are already studying at least three new tax proposals to make up the $1 billion shortfall expected if the state continues to spend at current levels.

While the AP story indicated that the discussion was merely a "briefing" session, which included no recommendations and no decisions, you can bet that if Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis are even studying tax increases at this early date our chances of the Legislature going through this session without dipping into our pocketbooks again are not that good.

And the bad thing about it is that only one proposed tax among those trial balloons floated yesterday are likely to create much public opposition. The one that would stir up the taxpaying public most would be putting professional services under the state sales tax. That would mean that each time you went to the doctor or dentist or hired a plumber or an auto mechanic you'd have to pay an extra five percent of the bill in taxes.

That would draw opposition because it is a visible tax. The other proposals would not create much of a public furor because they would be "business taxes." That is, the new taxes would be paid by those wealthy Texas businessmen who are making all that money, not by the hard-pressed, hard-working consumer.

If you happen to view business taxes in that light, think again. It just doesn't work that way.

For example, if the Legislature were to go forward with that proposal to slap a gross receipts tax on the telephone industry, it wouldn't show up on your telephone bill each month. But that doesn't mean you wouldn't be paying it. The telephone industry would simply have to increase its charges so that it would generate enough additional revenue to pay the new taxes.

How about the tax on advertising? It would work the same way.

If the grocery stores, which are among the biggest advertisers, have to pay an additional five percent tax when they buy an ad in the newspaper, they will be forced to raise their prices and you'll be paying more for food. Or, if they reduce their advertising by five percent, they will attract less business and will have to increase prices to make up for the reduced volume.

That is something that every citizen should remember when legislators attempt to avoid public anger by telling you they're increasing taxes on business, not the consumer. The consumer always winds up paying all new taxes, regardless of whether it is a direct payment to the government or in the form of higher prices. Any politician who tells you otherwise is either an economic illiterate or a liar.

Why economists missfire

A year ago, virtually all the leading economic forecasters were confidently predicting that by the beginning of 1985 we would see the re-emergence of 8- to 10-percent inflation.

They were, thank goodness, dreadfully wrong. Instead, producer prices (PPI) were at their lowest level (1.8 percent) in twenty years, and the CPI continued to moderate at the 4-percent level.

Such common forecasting failures have made many economists even more gloomy about their "dismal science," wondering if the old fundamentalists no longer work.

A closer examination, though, reveals that economics is merely facing (though more acutely) the same two problems that afflict all other sciences, social and natural.

First, of course, is the primordial difficulty in assigning CAUSATION - the old problem of chicken or egg. Even the actual scientists are constantly discovering that what they once believed was cause is now merely effect, as the search for cause becomes more and more an elusive chase into the sub-atomic.

Second is the old problem of subjective ideological bias - the tendency for the scientist or economist to filter his observations through the screen of his beliefs - a screen that can often occlude fundamental common sense.

For example, over the past two years, "economic experts" have told us, ad nauseam, that big budget deficits cause high interest rates, and those rates make the dollar too strong. Ergo, cut the deficit, and interest rates and the dollar will fall.

Well, folks, over the past six months, the deficit has GROWN by nearly 25 percent, but interest rates have FALLEN three full percentage points, nearly 30 percent. Meanwhile, in response to this breathtaking decline in rates, the dollar has soared to new all-time HIGHS! So much for experts!

Last March 16, this column predicted that "the worst of our inflation worries is over. All of the factors that have made for low inflation are now still in place - a strong dollar, a free market in energy, and a tough new management approach to wage contracts - so low inflation could surprise us again this year."

That same day, Max Newton, one of the nation's leading financial columnists, correctly told readers of the New York Post that the growing consensus of Wall Street experts was that "roaring double-digit inflation is just around the corner," and could return by the fourth quarter of 1984. Many readers who saw both columns were understandably scornful of my optimism.

Unfortunately it was that ultimately flawed "consensus view" that undoubtedly reinforced the Federal Reserve's decision to maintain a chokehold on U.S. credit and money - so much so they nearly gave us a third recession in four years. Yet, at the very moment these "experts" were howling about inflation, all the fundamental facts and common sense were literally screaming the opposite.

Unit labor costs were rising less than 1 percent - and inflation is never more than one point above the rate of labor cost growth. Wage contracts were at 3 percent, the lowest in ten years, and productivity was rising at a 3- to 4-percent clip.

Above all, as a few of us warned all spring and summer, commodity prices, especially gold, were actually FALLING, a sure sign the big danger was not inflation but deflation.

What is fascinating is that the steady downward drift in the price of gold, from its 1983 high of $445, was fully emblazoned on every TV news screen day after day - proof positive that, like it or not, the world is now back on the gold standard, through the proxy of the free market.

Just as the old gold standard reliably warned when money was too tight when people turned their gold in for currency, and vice-versa - so, today, the gold-price trend is the best indicator of whether the Federal Reserve is producing inflation or deflation.

So even as gold steadily predicted deflation, the experts, including the Fed, predicted high inflation, and further tightened money, causing still more commodity deflation. Those who watched gold prices carefully were correct. Those who didn't and relied on monetarist ideology failed.

There was no way inflation could "re-ignite" when gold fell 20 percent in a single year, silver 29 percent, and the wholesale price of unleaded gasoline 15 percent.

This is also why all the economics "experts" were wrong this fall when interest rates fell, and, contrary to forecasts, the dollar ROSE. The dollar's rise was clearly predicted by the falling price of gold, which accurately reflected the excessively tight credit being used to stop the U.S. economic expansion.

So the real reason economics has become an even more "dismal science" than usual is NOT that the basic rules have changed, but because in the process of its "professionalization" economic common sense has been replaced by blind ideology.

Today in History

Today is Wednesday, Jan. 30, the 30th day of 1985. There are 335 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Jan. 30, 1948, Indian leader Mohandas K. Gandhi was assassinated by a Hindu fanatic in New Delhi.

On this date: Ten years ago: President Gerald R. Ford extended until March 1, 1975, the deadline for Vietnam-era draft evaders and military deserters to apply for clemency under the program he had announced the previous September.

Five years ago: Iran's foreign minister, Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, said Canada would pay "sooner or later" for spiriting six U.S. diplomats out of Iran.

One year ago: One U.S. Marine was killed and three others wounded when anti-government militias bombarded the Marine compound at Beirut International Airport.

Today's birthdays: Actor John Ireland is 71. Comedian-director Dick Martin is 63. Actress Dorothy Malone is 60. Producer-director Harold Prince is 57. Actor Gene Hackman is 54.

Manipulating the market

Investing, ignore the experts. On average, investment advisors are wrong more often than you are.

Last year the S&P 500 stocks improved 6.1 percent.

Though if you had taken the advice of the "experts" - had bought the stocks they touted - your stocks would have improved in value only 1.1 percent.

Rule 144 warns any officer or director of a corporation - or anybody holding 10 percent or more of its stock - that he is under SEC surveillance.

But no such restraints apply to the financial "opinion writers" in the media.

One whose opinions appear in 193 newspapers admits that "stocks often rise or fall when he starts preparing a story about them."

One Barrons writer can drive any stock up or down with an expression of opinion, however unsupported.

The highly responsible and especially vulnerable Wall Street Journal was embarrassed last year when one of its writers was revealed to have profited personally from trading in stocks about which he wrote.

Only some networks, newspapers and news magazines seek to impose discipline on their financial writers.

The TV program "Wall Street Week" seeks to keep the opinions of its panelists in perspective with frequent mentions of the fact that their opinions are fallible.

And sure enough, last year's score card shows that a weekend telecast of "Wall Street Week" frequently moves a stock up or down on Monday.

Usually only momentarily and, significantly, frequently to the disadvantage of the hot - tip investor.

During one period last year, following their advice, you'd have lost twice as much as did the market as a whole.

When one corporation courts another, contemplating merger or takeover, lawyers and investment bankers use their insider information to enrich themselves - even sell information to others who trade on it.

And they are in no way constrained by law.

So in which stocks should you invest?

Paul Harvey, trying to answer that question, would have no more credibility than anybody else.

If you want to play the odds you will bet on companies with a long - term consistent earnings record.

But be prepared to sit tight, because even those - responding to "analysts" - undulate.

In American industry, there is one which has outperformed all others in consistency of increased earnings over the last ten years - including last year.

Yet, one "analyst" out of Boston - last spring and again last fall - issued a pessimistic opinion which caused that stock to sell off as much as 20 percent each time.

Both times, the subsequent rally demonstrated that his pessimism was without foundation.

But stock manipulators stand to make money however prices fluctuate, up or down, in or out.

Analysts who work for investment houses - advising you what and when to buy and sell - are not supposed to be compensated based on the sales they generate.

But they are.

Emory University's law professor, Henry Manne, does not believe he can stop insider trading so we might we well recognize and legitimize it.

He thinks shareholders, watching what insiders are doing, would at least get to share the benefits.

Pending that unlikely eventuality, there remains an enormous potential for manipulating stocks, "putting them" up or down.

And any amateur in this league is outclassed. (c) 1985, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Can 'uncontrollables' be controlled

By Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The time has come to seriously consider drastic action that until now has been unthinkable when examining "entitlements" and "uncontrollable expenditures" in the federal budget.

The use of those terms over many years had led to the widespread assumption that vast numbers of people automatically are entitled to certain government benefits regardless of their personal financial status.

Thus, we have millions of retired middle- and high-income couples receiving as much as $28 in Medicare benefits for every $1 they contributed to that fund.

We have elderly millionaires collecting Social Security checks they don't need. We have former military officers receiving both substantial salaries from defense contractors and generous armed-services retirement pay.

We also have a chronic federal budget deficit of staggering proportions that seriously threatens to bankrupt the nation's economy unless our political leaders muster the courage to bring those "uncontrollables" under control.

"There is no way out of the room unless Social Security, the entitlements, the cost-of-living adjustments - all of the 'politically tough' programs are dealt with," warns former Treasury Secretary William E. Simon.

"We're talking about a whole nation biting the bullet," adds Urban Institute economist John L. Palmer.

Medicare expenditures have increased more than fivefold during the past decade - from $13 billion in 1975 to $70 billion last year. Social Security ranks as the second largest claimant (behind only military spending) of government funds.

If those costs are not brought under control, the nation's solvency and stability could be irrevocably impaired. "The longer we wait, the deeper is the hole which we are digging for ourselves," warns Palmer.

Stacy Dam prospects better

AUSTIN (AP) — Directors of the Lower Colorado River Authority say they have reached an agreement over the proposed Stacy Dam and Reservoir, thus improving the chances for the Legislature to approve a statewide water plan.

However, authority directors did not release details of their agreement, reached late Tuesday with the Colorado River Municipal Water District. The controversial dam would be built in West Texas near Big Spring.

Terms of the agreement will be announced jointly by both agencies, probably within a week, said John Williams, a spokesman for the river authority.

After a lengthy session, the authority directors released a statement saying they had instructed LCRA officers and legal counsel to prepare a definitive agreement and present it to the LCRA board of directors for approval.

A recent ruling by the Texas Supreme Court blocked construction of the project, which the municipal water district proposes to build. In 1979 the Texas Water Commission approved a permit for construction, but the river authority sued to block it.

Need volunteers to aid elderly

Dear Abby

Fight against birth defects marches on for half-century

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: This is not a question from Trivial Pursuit, but perhaps it should be: Who originated "The March of Dimes"?

Give up? Well, back in 1934, when Franklin Delano Roosevelt was president, Eddie Cantor, of vaudeville, movie and radio fame (no TV in those days), asked his millions of radio listeners to send President Roosevelt a dime for his birthday on Jan. 30. Those dimes went to benefit the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. (As a young man, Roosevelt had been stricken by polio, leaving him partially paralyzed for the duration of his life.)

Dimes poured in from all over the country, so the campaign to collect money for research to conquer polio was aptly named "The March of Dimes."

In 1955, the Salk vaccine virtually wiped out polio, so The March of Dimes turned its efforts toward researching hereditary birth defects as well as surgically correcting them in newborn babies.

There are 650 March of Dimes chapters nationwide that desperately need funds, so, inflation being what it is, be a sport and send President Reagan $1 for his birthday on Feb. 6 to help this worthy cause.

Write your check to The March of Dimes and send it to President Reagan in care of the White House, Washington, D.C. 20500. He will bless you for it, and so will millions of children who will benefit from your birthday gift to our president.

DEAR ABBY: This is a second marriage for both of us. (Both divorced.) Dick (not his real name) had three children with his first wife, and I had two by a previous marriage. Dick and I have one together. All the children are under 10 years old.

The problem is that every time we have Dick's children over, which is once a month, he lets his kids get away with murder. They do anything they please and he never disciplines them. If I try to discipline them to keep them in line, he gets mad at me.

Dick is very strict with the other kids—always correcting and punishing them. I think this is unfair to the other kids. They resent it, and are starting to develop a real hate for Dick's kids, and I can't blame them. I have tried telling him how unfair he is, and he always gives me the same excuse: "I only get to see them once a month."

What should I do? This is the only thing Dick and I ever fight about, and I can't handle it.

STEPPED-ON STEPMOTHER

DEAR STEPPED ON: Dick is being lenient with his "first family" because he wants to win their favor, and I suspect there's also some guilt involved.

Dick is not only alienating the other kids, he's cheating himself out of a normal, healthy relationship with the older children.

Urge him to get some family counseling. He needs to know why he's behaving this way. Once he understands it, I hope he'll change his tactics.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to thank a few anonymous people I hope I never meet. I'm talking about adults who buy liquor for minors while the minors wait outside the store. Thanks, fellas.

When I was 14, I knew a kid who used to stand outside a liquor store and approach people as they walked inside and ask them to buy a bottle for him.

When he was 16, he was averaging a fifth of cheap vodka a day. He'd go to school and to his after-school job drunk, and drive so loaded he couldn't see straight. It's a miracle he was never picked up by the police or had a wreck.

Now the kid attends Alcoholics Anonymous regularly and is staying sober one day at a time.

So, next time some kid asks you to buy liquor for him because he's not old enough to buy it himself, please, turn him down.

I know this is a real letter from a real person because that person is ... ME

Men and women, ages 18 and up, are needed to share a few hours of their time helping the elderly and disabled in a new volunteer program recently begun by the Gray County Human Resources Committee and the Pampa office of the Texas Department of Human Resources.

Registration for volunteers begins at 10 a.m. Wednesday, Feb. 6, at the new TDHR building, 1511 N. Banks. For more information, call Phyllis Berg, 665-1863.

Volunteers may spend as little as two to three hours a week or as many hours as they like on the program, said Marjie Holland, chairman of the committee.

Duties will include performing general services for elderly and disabled clients of the TDHR. The volunteers will check up on the client's situation to make sure everything is all right, make sure that the community's different resources and services are available to the client, provide transportation to and from appointments and helping with letters and reports on case activities.

All volunteers will complete an initial training program of about four hours before they begin working with TDHR clients. On-going training for volunteers will also be provided.

Volunteers will be supervised by the TDHR Adult Services Staff member, and the Gray County Human Resources Advisory Committee will act as a liaison to the program.

"I really feel Pampa will come through," said Holland. "Pampa's known as a doing town and I don't think they'll let us down."

"We'll need men, too, in this program. They can make small repairs that might not be much, but which many elderly people can't do. Some things that are simple for some people are too much for the elderly with their arthritic hands," Holland added.

Members of the advisory committee have been working on the volunteer project since early December. They were appointed to their positions by Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy.

Committee members in addition to Holland include Phyllis Jeffers, secretary; Timothy Gikas, Doris Hancock, Ann Loter, Micky St. Aubyn, Jimmie Ivey and Bob Hart.

Domestic violence workshop scheduled for Thursday

Domestic violence is the topic of a free workshop scheduled Wednesday and Thursday at Amarillo College, Amarillo.

Volunteers for Tralee Crisis Center or persons interested in becoming a volunteer for the program may contact the Tralee office at 669-1131 if they would like to attend the workshop on Thursday. Transportation will be arranged for those attending the workshop. Continuing education credits are available to participants of the workshop.

Volunteers and staff of the Tralee Crisis Center for Women Inc. met Jan. 16 for their regular monthly meeting.

Rosamond Reeves, director of the center, reported that a support group for victims of domestic violence is being organized. "Victims need to know that they are not alone," she said. "And sharing their experiences within a peer group can be very helpful to them."

Local training for prospective volunteers is to begin in early February. Persons interested in becoming volunteers can contact the Tralee Crisis Center office at 669-1131 for more information.

Several guests from community organizations were present at the meeting to review two filmstrips showing how children can help protect themselves from molestation and what they should do if they are molested.

"Speak Up, Say No!" a six-minute filmstrip suitable for preschool through third grade was shown, followed by "For Pete's Sake, Tell!" a 10-minute strip for third through sixth graders. Both filmstrips are available through sixth grades. Both filmstrips are available to groups or organizations by contacting Tralee's office, 669-1131.

Next meeting for volunteers is to be Feb. 13 at noon at the First Presbyterian Church educational building conference room.

Pampa's landmarks sometimes go unnoticed

Editor's note: On Sunday's Gallery page in The Pampa News, Cathy Spaulding took photographs of some of Pampa's landmarks, giving clues but not the answers to where they were located. Today as promised, Cathy reveals where these pictures were taken.

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

Give up? Most of the pictures come from downtown Pampa buildings that have been the home of many different businesses. A. This lady, a white engraving on a pale green background has graced the same building at 217 N. Cuyler for 54 years. Originally the site of a lumberyard, The Spirit of Progress building was built in 1930 and originally housed Montgomery

Ward department store until the 1960s. Thomas Gann's Showcase is now located there. B and H. What else could they be but part of the Combs Worley Building? Finished in 1931 at a cost of more than $200,000 in Depression currency, the five-story structure was designed by W.R Kaufman & Sons Architects. Picture B shows the southwest entrance at the corner of Kingsmill and Frost streets. The entrance leads into an antique shop and is no longer used. Picture H. shows the alleyway between the Combs-Worley and the Frasier Building on Kingsmill. C. The old Southwestern Public Service office at 209 N. Cuyler. The lines shooting from the black core represent electricity. Leon Gilbert opened his ladies' ready to wear store there in 1940. And it has remained for 44 years. D. One of the tall entrances at Pampa High School at the corner of Harvester and Duncan streets. The school was built as part of the Works Project Administration program during the Depression and was completed in 1941.

E. This fellow is one of four stone owls that guard the entrance of the Worley Hospital. Built in 1931, it was operated by a group of doctors until the hospital closed in the early 1970s. The owls now share their vacant home with pigeons.

F. The Rose Window at First

Presbyterian Church at the corner of Gray and Montagu Streets. The church was built there in 1940. G. Clocks were common on city halls and town squares in many small towns, but not in Pampa. This clock is on a gas station at the corner of Gray and Foster streets. Built in 1930, it was originally Pampa Lubricating Service. It is now owned by Ogden and Sons.

I.

H. Combs Worley Entrance. I. Brick work at the top of the Pampa Hotel. Built in 1927, it was originally the Schneider Hotel, one of the showplaces of the Panhandle. Owned by Alex Schneider, a Swiss immigrant, the hotel stood just north of the Santa Fe tracks and welcomed Panhandle travelers. The restaurant was well known for its food. During the early oil boom days, sandwiches were kept in a refrigerator for oil field workers. During the Depression, free soup was served at the back entrance. It later became the Pampa Hotel. The hotel, with its red tile roof, arched patio and gilded windows, has in recent years fallen into decay. The Pampa News thanks Darlene Birkes and Clotilde Thompson for their information.

Artist says touching adds to sculpture

CENTRE, Pa. (AP) — As Leonard Scott talks, he runs his fingers over the dark, bluntly angular face of the West Indies Man. Over and over, he traces the same rhythmic, soul-satisfying pattern from forehead to chin and back again. He occasionally looks at the face; he never stops caressing it. "You can't look at sculpture without feeling it," he says, "and they don't let you do it in museums. "Feel this," he says, offering the West Indies Man. "It's green serpentine stone. Easy to carve, nice to feel." Friend and poet Jack McManis of State College said, "Leonard goes to Philadelphia (Art) Museum, and he always touches the sculpture when he thinks the guard isn't looking. Of course, he always get reprimanded." But recently in the Ross Library in Lock Haven, nobody was reprimanding the Mill Hall man for touching the sculpture. After all, they were his pieces of sculpture and his one-man exhibit, and he could do with them what he wanted. Leonard Scott is 72, a lifelong resident of Clinton County and a retired house painter and stone mason who turned to sculpting 17 years ago. The Lock Haven exhibit is his first. "It's something I wanted to do all my life," he says of sculpture. "I always thought I could do it, but I was always too busy. Didn't have the time, I told myself. And I didn't know anything about it." He also spent, by his own estimate, the first half of his life in alcoholism. "I was self-employed in the painting and decorating business, but I wasn't working a whole lot and the work I did was not the best quality," says Scott, who has been sober now for 31 years. "I used to think of those 25 or 30 years as wasted, but I don't think that anymore. It took that long for me to decide I couldn't live that way any longer."

Recovering mental patients make new life

By DENISE GAMINO
Austin American-Statesman
AUSTIN (AP) — The orange and silver U-Haul truck that pulled out of the Austin State Hospital driveway was filled with a mismatched collection of suitcases, pots and pans, chairs, toothbrushes, and one color television.

The most precious cargo the moving van carried, however, was the future of six newly discharged mental patients — all under the age of 35, and all thrilled to be getting out.

The truck meandered south through the city for about 15 minutes, coming to a stop at a four-bedroom brick house in South Austin.

There, on a quiet residential street, the young former patients unpacked their freight and their new independent lives.

The six were allowed to leave Austin State Hospital as a group and begin a new life on their own because they are graduates of one of the most successful programs at the mental institution.

Unlike the general psychiatric wards, where patients are treated individually, the Capital Lodge program assigns chronically mentally ill patients to teams that are trained to live and work together.

The six were discharged only after they had formed a private janitorial company, called the Sunlight Group, and only after they had signed a one-year lease on the $600-a-month house in South Austin.

Those commitments represent significant progress for the six former patients. Before they joined the Capital Lodge, the six had a total record of 35 admissions to mental hospitals and a total of 14 years as hospital patients.

To show its affection and good wishes for the group, Austin State Hospital honored the six last week at a special graduation ceremony. In attendance were top officials of the hospital and of the Austin-Travis County community mental health center, which will provide support for the group through a program called Fairweather Lodge.

"You've compiled a new record of successes in your life," said John Brubaker, executive director of the Austin-Travis County community mental health center. "You're going to be successful in life from here on out." Allan McLaughlin, 27, like other members of the Sunlight Group, is determined to live with the group for at least one year. He believes that if he can keep his life in order that long he may never have to be hospitalized again.

"If it weren't for this program, I'd be in the Salvation Army or someplace I don't want to be," McLaughlin said.

"I don't think I would ever have gotten out of the hospital without this program," he said.

Members of the Sunlight Group expect their first year together to be somewhat difficult. They are responsible for everything from getting up in the morning to preparing their meals and getting to work on time. They also must maintain a high quality of janitorial service so they do not lose their contract with the Texas Commission on Alcoholism.

But no matter how difficult life may be, "It beats the hospital," McLaughlin said.

Darryl Smith, 31, chairman of the Sunlight Group, said: "I think the program deserves a little praise. It's not an easy program, but it does work."

Sam Shore, director of the community center Fairweather Lodge, said the regimented life the graduates lived at Austin State Hospital was necessary as preparation for independence.

"This program has been called a perfect continuity of care program and I think that's true," Shore said.

Shore said the readmission rate for Capital Lodge graduates is only about 8 percent, compared with an 86 percent readmission rate for patients who are discharged without receiving training. Also, the Fairweather Lodge program costs the state only about $10 a day per person, compared with an average daily patient cost of $100 in a state hospital, he said.

The Sunlight Group brings to eight the number of Fairweather

Lodges in operation in Austin.

The eight groups provide janitorial services for a total of 500,000 square feet of office space around town, he said, including the Texas House of Representatives, the Department of Human Resources, the Texas Historical Commission, the Texas Commission on Alcohol and mental retardation, said the Fairweather Lodge program "works because it recognizes the strength of individuals and their ability to work and be productive citizens."

"It's one of the better programs we have in the state," he said.

Conservatives credit Steinhilf for appointments

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conservatives are crediting U.S. Rep. Charles Steinhilf's threatened challenge of House Speaker Tip O'Neill for bringing new conservative voices to the pivotal Budget Committee.

Although those new appointees "carried a lot of credentials on their own," some would not have gotten onto the committee if Steinhilf had not confronted the Speaker, said Conservative Democratic Forum member, Buddy Roemer, D-La.

"I can't prove it, but I know it for a fact," Roemer said. He predicted the conservatives would continue to be "pleased" this week as more appointments are made to the Select Committee on Intelligence and to House leadership posts.

Steinhilf, D-Texas, chairman of the CDF, threatened last year to run against O'Neill, D-Mass., for Speaker. Steinhilf blamed Democratic defeats in the November election on O'Neill and his liberal leadership in the House and demanded more conservative input.

Steinhilf and his fellow conservative Democrats said they didn't want a guarantee, just a "place at the table."

O'Neill agreed to meet with Steinhilf, who dropped his challenge in exchange for concessions to the conservatives. Among the requests was assignment of more conservatives to key committees, like Budget.

"Our argument has always been that the committee is stacked too far to the left and that if we were going to get a budget out of the committee we could vote for, the committee would have to be more balanced philosophically," Steinhilf said Monday.

"For whatever reasons, we've done better this time than ever before," he said.

Ed Jenkins, D-Ga., said in a recent interview that Steinhilf's negotiation with O'Neill "very definitely was a factor" in Jenkins' selection as one of three Ways and Means Committee members to go on Budget.

With the issue of federal spending and the deficit more prominent than ever in the Congress' and the public's conscience, the Budget Committee and its power to set government spending limits is a coveted assignment.

"I don't think he would have sought the position if it wasn't for the negotiations between Steinhilf and O'Neill," said Doug Kanetze, administrative assistant to CDF member Marvin Leath of Texas who also was selected for the Budget Committee.

Steinhilf notes that Jim Slattery of Kansas was also appointed to Budget and adds that Jerry Huckaby of Louisiana only narrowly lost out to Buddy Mackay of Florida for another seat.

"This was the best shot we have gotten from a conservative philosophical standpoint — four out of eight appointees were conservatives," Steinhilf said.

Added Roemer: "We've gotten a chance to sit down at the table."

Health workers are aiding patients in many languages

By SHAWNA RILEY
Port Arthur News

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — A woman who suffers an attack of appendicitis while on a ship in the Gulf of Mexico is transported by helicopter to Port Arthur's Park Place Hospital.

After she arrives at the hospital's emergency room, she finds herself unable to communicate with doctors and nurses because she speaks only Russian.

Emergency care is administered, but discussions between the woman and those trying to care for her are delayed until two translators try their luck at interpreting the woman's words.

The problem was not that she spoke Russian, but she spoke the language in an unfamiliar dialect, and the first interpreter had trouble understanding the woman, said Pat Adams, director of community relations at Park Place.

A rabbi from Beaumont was able to understand the woman, and conversations between doctors, nurses and the patient were finally translated, according to Adams.

Most doctors and nurses in the Port Arthur area don't get to hear unfamiliar languages in unusual dialects, but some emergency care professionals find themselves face to face with people who don't understand a word of English.

The shipping industry and the arrival of refugees has provided Port Arthur with an economic base and cultural diversification, but they have also produced communication problems similar to the one with the Russian woman.

Seamen from many countries, visitors to the city and some Vietnamese residents have found themselves confronted with medical emergencies. And, many of these people face the task of communicating pain to medical professionals who do not speak the same language.

"Expressions of pain and fear are universal," said Jan Dengler, R.N., at Park Place Hospital. Talking is not always necessary when pain is evident, according to Dengler.

"Ninety-nine percent of them are seamen," said Jerry Rowley, R.N., clinical coordinator of nursing at Park Place, who said many of the non-English speaking emergency patients are not residents, but people just passing through the city.

Both Rowley and Dengler can recall various situations where they have pantomimed their way through emergency room episodes.

Family members of foreign-speaking patients can be helpful if they speak English. But, there are times when the family panics if they cannot understand what is happening to a relative under emergency care.

Ms. Dengler said she tried to comfort an alarmed mother of an injured Vietnamese man. "She freaked out," said Ms. Dengler.

The man had severely injured his leg in a cable on a shrimping boat, and he was able to talk with the hospital's medical staff, but his mother could not understand enough English to be sufficiently informed about her son.

The mother remained frightened until another family member arrived to assure her of her son's safety and condition, Ms. Dengler said.

"We usually try to bring them into the room and show them that their relative is OK," Ms. Dengler said. "We can't tell them they are OK over the phone."

"We pantomime a lot," said Ms. Dengler. "But, if it is impossible to communicate we always render emergency care."

Problems occur when a medical situation is not an emergency, but medical personnel need consent to treat someone, according to Rowley.

Obtaining information about drugs a person may be taking is an important part of the information needed before treating someone in any case, said Rowley and Ms. Dengler.

Rowley said in the case of Europeans there are many more drugs available to them than Americans, and this is an "unknown" medical staffs must deal with in treating foreign patients.

Although there are problems in treating some non-English speaking people, both Rowley and Ms. Dengler agree that communication problems will not get in the way of treatment.

Rowley, a member of the Olympic Village Polyclinic in Los Angeles, said the organization of the clinic during the Olympics enabled most people to be treated without a hitch.

A list of interpreters made it possible for most athletes to be treated without problems. Even with the many countries represented, Rowley said he remembers only one problem with communication.

A man from Tibet presented a slight problem for interpreters because of a rare dialect, but Rowley said most people who could not speak English could speak French.

The Southern influence here has enabled both Ms. Dengler and Rowley to converse in a small amount of Spanish, and a number of hospital employees are bilingual.

Ms. Dengler said doctors are good at getting medical histories from patients. And, some staff members have a knowledge of Vietnamese words that will help them diagnose a patient's problem.

Non-academy graduates rise to top Navy jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time in its history, the U.S. Naval Academy is on the brink of losing its grip as the source for a majority of America's front-line commodores and admirals.

Many officers say they welcome the development, which marks the end of an encrusted tradition that a degree from the academy was a mandatory ticket to the highest ranks of the Navy.

Of the service's 273 "unrestricted line" flag officers — those qualified for sea and air commands — 137 are graduates of the Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md., according to a list that includes promotions for the fiscal year beginning October 1985, said Lt. Stephen Pietropaoli, a Navy spokesman.

The other 136 come from college and Navy officer training and aviation cadet programs, or from the ranks of enlisted men.

The trend means that by next year, the majority of the Navy's commodores and admirals will be non-academy graduates.

"I've been predicting for years that the day would come," Elmo R. Zumwalt Jr., a former chief of Naval operations, said in an interview. "It was just a matter of time, and in a cultural sense I consider it a good development."

The change reflects a buildup of Naval ROTC and officer candidate schools that started around the time of World War II and is now turning out seven potential admirals for every one graduating from the academy.

There's never been a law that admirals had to be academy graduates. But in 1958, for example, before the post-war flood of other trainees reached admiral eligibility, all but three of 245 line admirals went to Annapolis, according to the Navy Times newspaper.

In those days, Zumwalt said, even brilliant ROTC officers often left the Navy early because of what they perceived as an unwritten rule, in a service known for its sense of tradition, that non-Annapolis grads would not be promoted to admiral.

Even among objective officers on selection boards there was a "subconscious" preference for academy graduates, Zumwalt said.

There has never been a non-academy chief of naval operations, "but that day will come too," said Zumwalt, a 1942 academy graduate.

The importance of an Annapolis degree was evident as recently as 1977, when 22 of the 28 admirals selected for the year had attended the academy.

Generals from the Army's West Point and the Air Force Academy have been fewer in number than their non-service academy colleagues for several years and there have been many Army chiefs of staff who did not attend West Point, notably George C. Marshall, who led the service during World War II.

Serve sausage that goes with the grain

Question: What could be better than sausage served on bread?

Answer: Sausage baked right into homemade bread.

The combination of sausage and fiber-rich bread is not only a flavorful and hearty blend, it is also a healthy entree. While sausage is abundant in protein, vitamins and minerals, the bread fiber promotes health and fitness, too.

HAM-IT-UP

RIBBON ROLLS

1 (13 3/4 oz.) pkg. hot roll mix
 1/2 c. hot water (about 120 degrees)
 1 (8 to 8 3/4 oz.) can crushed pineapple
 2 t. curry powder
 1 egg
 1 c. wheat germ
 Flour
 1 pound ham, sliced 1/4 to 1/2 inch thick

Combine hot roll mix with contents of yeast packet, hot water, pineapple with liquid, curry powder and egg. Mix well. Knead in wheat germ on well-floured surface. Place dough in well-greased large bowl, covered with plastic wrap, and allow to rise until double in bulk, about 45 minutes. Cut dough into 12 equal pieces. Roll out to form strips, each about 8 inches long by 2 1/2 inches wide.

Cut ham into 1 1/4 inch squares. Fold each strip of dough back and forth, layering 3 pieces of ham in folds. Place open end up in well-greased muffin pan. Cover loosely with plastic wrap. Let rise 20 minutes. Bake at 375 degrees F. for about 20 minutes, until golden brown. If desired, brush tops with melted butter.

CURRIED HAM PINEAPPLE BREAD

(makes two souffle-shaped breads)

1 (13 3/4 oz.) pkg. hot roll mix
 1 c. wheat germ
 1 (8 to 8 3/4 oz.) can crushed pineapple
 1 c. hot water (about 120 degrees)
 1 egg
 2 t. curry powder
 3/4 pound ham, cut up
 1 (20 oz.) can pineapple slices
 3 T. brown sugar
 1 T. butter

In large bowl of electric mixer, combine roll mix with contents of yeast packet, wheat germ, crushed pineapple with liquid, water, egg and curry powder. Beat at lowest speed for one minute, scraping sides of bowl often. Cover bowl with plastic wrap and keep in warm place until batter doubles in bulk, about 45 minutes.

Stir ham into batter. Evenly divide batter into two well-greased one-quart souffle dishes or casseroles. Let stand in warm place until batter is spongy, about 20 minutes. (Do not let double in bulk.)

Bake at 375 degrees F. for about 40 minutes, until golden brown. Drain pineapple slices, reserving 1 1/2 teaspoons liquid. Cut slices in half and arrange over tops of breads.

Combine reserved liquid with brown sugar and butter in small pan. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly. As soon as butter melts, pour hot mixture over pineapple on breads. Continue baking for about 10 minutes.

SAUSAGE OAT RING

(Makes 2 bread rings)
 5 1/2 c. flour, divided use
 1 c. plus 3 T. quick oats, divided use
 1 pkg. quick-rising dry yeast
 1 t. salt
 1 t. seasoned salt
 1/4 t. black pepper
 1 1/2 c. hot water (about 125 degrees)

3 T. salad oil
 2 eggs, divided use
 2 1/2 lb. kielbasa or smoked sausage or ring bologna
 1/2 c. chopped onion
 1/4 c. chopped sweet pepper
 Boiling water
 1/2 t. dry mustard
 1/4 t. ground ginger

Combine 4 1/2 c. flour with one cup oats, yeast, salt, seasoned salt and pepper; mix well. Stir in hot water, oil and one egg; mix thoroughly. Knead dough with remaining one cup flour until smooth and satiny, 6 to 8 minutes. Place dough in greased bowl, cover with plastic wrap and let rise about 30 minutes or until doubled in bulk.

Meanwhile, pierce sausage casings at one-inch intervals, then score on two opposite sides (about 1/4-inch apart and 1/2-inch deep). Roast sausage at 450 degrees F. for 15 minutes. Drain on paper towels.

Add chopped vegetables to boiling water; return to boiling. Pour off water and drain vegetables on paper towels.

Punch down dough and cut in four equal pieces. Roll out each piece into an 18x5-inch strip. Brush surface of each dough strip with beaten egg. Stir mustard and ginger into vegetables. Press 1/4 of vegetable mixture down center of each strip. Dust sausage with flour.

Cover 1 1/4 pound sausage by winding two strips of dough around it, as you would wind a bandage around a finger. Then place Sausage Oat Ring in well-greased 6 1/2 cup ring mold. (Repeat same process for remaining 1 1/4 pound sausage and two strips of dough.)

Brush tops of rings with beaten egg and sprinkle with 1 1/2 tablespoons oats. Let rise 10 minutes. Bake at 375 degrees F. for about 40 minutes, until golden. Cool on rack for 10 minutes, then remove molds. Serve warm with mustard, if desired.

Sausage oatmeal bread & pepperoni pizza bread

PEPPERONI STUFFED

PIZZA BREAD

3 c. flour
 1 pkg. quick-rising dry yeast
 1 t. salt
 1 c. hot water (about 125 degrees)
 2 T. salad oil
 6 oz. thinly sliced pepperoni
 2 1/2 c. (10 oz.) shredded mozzarella cheese

1 1/2 c. prepared spaghetti sauce
 Combine flour, yeast and salt; mix well. Stir in hot water and oil and mix thoroughly. Turn out onto floured surface and knead one minute. Let dough rest for five minutes.

Cut dough into two portions, one slightly larger than the other. Place the larger portion of dough in a well-greased 10-inch springform pan. Pat out to cover bottom and sides of pan. (Dough should be at least 1 1/4 inches up sides of pan.)

Overlap slices of pepperoni to cover bottom of dough in pan (using almost half the pepperoni). Evenly sprinkle on the cheese. Top with overlapping slices of pepperoni, reserving a few slices for garnish, if desired.

Pat out remaining portion of dough to make a circle large enough to fit into the pan. Fit circle of dough over pepperoni in pan and fold edges back. Brush edges of dough circle with water. Pinch edges of circle and sides together all around, making a "curb" around edges. Slash a few holes in top crust to allow steam to escape.

Bake at 400 degrees F. for about 40 minutes, until golden. Let cool 10 minutes, then remove sides of pan. Place on baking sheet and pour on spaghetti sauce.

LADY CATTLEMAN—Jo Ann Smith, 45, of Micanopy, Fla., is the 1985 president of the National Cattlemen's Association. The fifth-generation rancher is the first woman to hold national office in the 230,000 member organization. (AP Laserphoto)

Woman takes the reins of American Cattle Association

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — From the day her first grade teacher taped her mouth shut for talking too much, Jo Ann Smith has had something to say — but now she speaks for 230,000 American cattlemen.

For the past year as president-elect of the National Cattlemen's Association, Mrs. Smith has been preparing herself to lead the Denver-based agriculture organization which has members in all 50 states.

"It's obvious you aren't sending the 'little woman' to do a big man's job. You're sending a cattlemans to do a cattlemans job," she said in remarks prepared for delivery to the organization's national convention when she assumes the top job today.

Referring to the convention theme of "facing the challenge of change," she added: "I guess it means that I get the challenge. And you get the change."

A fifth-generation Florida rancher who married another fifth-generation rancher on a nearby spread, she can mend fences, round up strays and brand calves. But Mrs. Smith, 45, is the first association president who's also a wife and mother.

Her style is silk suits, not Stetsons, and she demurs at feminist labels. She says she's proud, though, to be a role model.

Married straight out of high school, Mrs. Smith worked long hours beside her husband, Cedrick, on their 5,000-acre ranch that sprawls around Micanopy, Fla., a post office stop near Gainesville. She kept the books, tended her vegetable and flower gardens, joined the Junior League, served on the local hospital board, and became active in the CowBelles, the association's women's auxiliary.

Her son Marty, 25, is now a lawyer in Ocala, Fla., and daughter Terri, 23, is an accountant in Nashville, Tenn.

A decade ago, Jo Ann Smith became concerned about taxes, too many of them, in her view, imposed on ranchers.

"One thing led to another, one committee to another," Mrs. Smith recalled. "Everybody can always use a worker, and I'm a hard worker. The real awakening that I might go all the way to the presidency came when a selection committee contacted me about placing my name in the hat for a national office."

"Cedrick said, 'You can try it but you probably won't get elected,' so of course, that made me determined right then and there to win."

As president of the association, she'll be lobbying in Congress for lower interest rates, increased beef exports and a reduction in the federal deficit.

Someone suggested last week, she said, that she was following in the footsteps of Sandra Day O'Connor, the first woman on the Supreme Court; Sally Ride, the first American woman astronaut; and Geraldine Ferraro, the Democratic vice presidential nominee.

'Lost' fugitive hopes for parole

CAMP HILL, Pa. (AP) — After Richard Gartner escaped from prison in 1972, he returned home, started a family and a business, and paid taxes under his own name. But in his mind, he never stopped running.

"Every day I thought that they would come. Every day for 12 1/2 years I never answered the knock on my door," he said.

They came, but not until last November. Now Gartner sits in a jail cell, hoping for parole and angry at the system that incarcerated him after more than a decade of benign neglect.

"I would say I rehabilitated myself," Gartner, 34, said in an interview at the state prison here. "I know I don't belong here. I definitely don't belong here. I belong out there supporting my family."

Raised in Bucks County near Philadelphia, Gartner joined the Marines at age 16 and did two 13-month tours of duty in Vietnam. On his return, he was assigned as a driver for military brass on a base in Georgia.

"They threw you in dress blues, all spit and shine, right out of a combat zone ... There was no deprogramming whatsoever," he said. After one day, he went home, absent without leave.

"I was mentally unstable at the time," he said.

He and a handful of others — "just a bad crowd" — went on a spree of half a dozen burglaries in Bucks County. The total take was less than $300, he said. He was arrested and convicted.

After serving five months of a six-year sentence, Gartner walked away from his prison assignment at a forestry camp in nearby Adams County.

He hitchhiked home on the Pennsylvania Turnpike; no one came after him.

After a series of odd jobs, he began working for a trash hauling firm. He got married, had four children and led "a regular family life."

He started his own trash hauling business in 1983. "It was just starting to go good when they picked me up," he said.

"I thought about turning myself in, but after the one kid and then another kid...it got harder each year to turn myself in," he said.

"I never told my children that I escaped. But I did tell them that I got in trouble when I was younger. I told them to never get into trouble, to be good," he said.

His wife, Jeannie, said she "knew right from the start" about her husband's criminal past. "He wasn't a bad person. He didn't seem like a criminal. I was right," she said.

He used his own name and his old Social Security number. For years, though, he didn't answer the phone or the front door. He was afraid to apply for a driver's license. He kept to himself.

"I didn't socialize with people because I didn't want them in some way finding out about my life ... The fear was always there. Every time a cop would come around the corner, I'd sort of like go back into the house."

One night last November, he said, "I woke my wife up and told her I feel something's wrong. We stayed up all night talking about it." The next morning, he was arrested at home, caught in the web of the Fugitive Investigative Strike Team, an operation of federal, state and local police that captured 3,300 fugitives in the Northeast over a two-month period.

Since his arrest, Gartner has been locked in solitary confinement because of the escape charge against him.

"I try to read but I can't really read because I always think of my family. They're the ones that are being punished more than me," he said. "My kids, they want their dad home. They don't understand at all," said Mrs. Gartner. The oldest child, Richard Jr., 10, is especially confused, she said.

"I don't think they had any right to pick Rick up after 12 1/2 years. It's ridiculous," Mrs. Gartner said. Gary Hartman, the Adams County district attorney who this month dropped the escape charge against Gartner, said the system often loses track of fugitives when they go from one jurisdiction to another.

"All you have to do is cross a county line and you're in another world in terms of enforcement," he said.

Thomas Lyon, a spokesman for the Pennsylvania State Police, said he didn't know why no one went after Gartner, adding: "If someone is a fugitive and we know where he is, we're certainly not going to avoid him."

"It's an unfortunate problem with the system that it does not act sooner with fugitives," said Chief Deputy U.S. Marshal Robert O'Connell, whose office helped direct last fall's unusual roundup.

The parole board interviewed Gartner last week and probably will decide next month whether to release him, according to spokesman Joseph Long.

Panel to hold hearing in Hereford on nuke dump site

WASHINGTON (AP) — Those wishing to appear at a U.S. Senate hearing in Hereford on a proposed nuclear waste repository in Deaf Smith County must write or call the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen says.

The Environment and Public Works Committee will hold a hearing Feb. 11 on the government's consideration of the site, one of three the Department of Energy is considering for the nation's first permanent nuclear dump.

The others potential sites are in Nevada and Washington state. A final decision is not expected for five years.

Bentsen said Tuesday that anyone wanting to submit written testimony or appear at the Feb. 11 hearing should write to Lee Fuller, Committee on Environment and Public Works, SD-410, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20510, or call 202-224-3241.

DOE officials held a briefing in Hereford two weeks ago, and the department plans to hold hearings for public comment on Feb. 26 in Tulsa and March 1 in Austin.

Bentsen, the ranking minority member on the Environment and Public Works Committee, said he opposes locating the dump in Texas.

"We have invited the Department of Energy to send witnesses, and while these officials are in Texas, I want them to hear our concerns and I want them to know about the very serious problems they have already created," Bentsen said in a statement.

Your social pace will pick up considerably this coming year and you are apt to have a busy calendar. Several short trips with friends, purely for pleasure, are also likely.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Be careful about revealing secrets of your trade at social gatherings today. Someone may use your words to derail something good you have going. Major changes are in store for Aquarians in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Someone who always treats you competitively will come out second best today when friends compare his attributes to your qualities.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Limit career dealings today to key people with clout. They'll help you accomplish things underlings can't.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your greatest benefits today will come from social involvements. However, do not try to mix business and pleasure at this time.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Advantages can be derived today from situations you manage for others, provided you have a clear-cut understanding in advance of who gets what.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your possibilities look promising today, but timing is extremely important. Opportunities could slip past you if you fail to act promptly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Lady Luck will favor you today in situations where you're involved with friends who have been fortunate for you previously. She may not treat newcomers as kindly.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Outside of your household, people you encounter will find you enjoyable to be around. However, family members may not share those opinions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You'll be productive today, provided you can work free from the direction of others. Straw bosses telling you what to do will inhibit your performance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You will come out on the plus side of the ledger if you personally manage important matters today. Do your own thing and delegate little or nothing to others.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Where the stakes are significant and meaningful, you'll perform heroically today. In inconsequential areas you may be a bit of a bungler.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Maintain your sense of humor today, even if someone who enjoys taking potshots at others aims a few barbs in your direction. He will be firing only blanks.

Black leaders protest that race was factor in choice

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Douglas Harman, city manager for the past nine years at Alexandria, Va., has been selected as Fort Worth's new city manager by a narrow vote over acting city manager Vernell Sturns.

The vote Tuesday was 5-4 for the 44-year-old Harman over Sturns, who has been an assistant city manager here for 12 years.

"This was the worst decision I have ever had to make. It was strictly the experience," said councilwoman Kathy Wetherby, who cast what amounted to the swing vote for Harman.

Several black community leaders, including the head of the Ministerial Alliance and the president of the NAACP's local chapter, waited out the council's long deliberations and expressed dismay at the outcome.

However, council members on both sides of the vote said the races of the men played no part in their decision, which came after a grueling 2½-hour closed-door session. Sturns is black, Harman white.

"There are those who strongly believe that perhaps our second man should become our city manager," councilman Jim Babsby, who voted for Sturns and against Harman, said afterward. "But it is my hope, irregardless, that we give Mr. Harman a chance to come here and unite the council and unite the community so we can keep moving forward."

Mayor Bob Bolen, who voted for Harman, said he telephoned Harman with the council's decision "and he was very pleased." Harman's tentative starting date in the $90,000-a-year job is March 1.

Sturns had been acting city manager since Nov. 30, when Robert Herchert resigned. Sturns stood off to the side of the council chamber drinking coffee as council members registered their votes on lighted display screens: five green yes votes for Harman, four red no votes.

In Texas, governmental bodies are allowed to consider personnel questions in executive sessions, so long as a vote is in open meeting.

Sturns said afterward, "There obviously has to be some disappointment, but that's the decision of the council. I think I knew what their decision was going to be. They are entitled to make it. I accept that."

Sturns said he would call Harman to congratulate him.

"He's the next city manager. I have no problem. I don't feel like I have anything to regret. I have no plans to do anything other than to serve as assistant city manager," Sturns told the Fort Worth (Texas) Star-Telegram.

Babsby rejected the notion that Sturns lost because council members did not want a black city manager.

"I really believe the people I work with on the council voted to the best of their ability for the person they felt was the best qualified," Babsby said.

But the Rev. L.B. George, president of the interdenominational Ministerial Alliance, said the black community may vote in the April 6 city council elections against those who voted for Harman.

"You support people who support you," George said. "We have no bitterness, just memory."

National Guard mobilized with supplies for stranded residents

KEAMS CANYON, Ariz. (AP) — As snow fell over northern Arizona today, 18,000 people on three remote Indian reservations isolated by storms awaited the arrival of five helicopters with critical supplies of food, fuel, medicine and livestock feed.

Gov. Bruce Babbitt declared a state of emergency Tuesday for four counties after Navajo, Hopi and Hualapai tribal officials said several days of rain and snow had left clay roads impassable.

The National Guard mobilized a truck convoy Tuesday in Phoenix and carried fuel and supplies northward to the Navajo Reservation for distribution to the stranded residents.

The helicopters were to leave Phoenix and rendezvous at the command post before distributing the supplies to stranded residents.

Duane Beyal, a spokesman for the Navajos, said eight people were evacuated from the western portion of the reservation over the weekend. He said Navajo County officials used a four-wheel drive vehicle to rescue a family with five children.

"Almost all the people evacuated had symptoms of high fever, dehydration and acute diarrhea,"

Corsica battling for independence

AJACCIO, Corsica (AP) — The clandestine Corsican National Liberation Front says its followers carried out 468 attacks in 1984 as part of its struggle to win the island's independence from France.

A statement called "Balance Sheet 1983-84" and sent to news organizations Tuesday said the total was down from 510 in 1983, but there were 55 attacks in continental France compared with 30 the previous year.

said Beyal, adding that eight people were hospitalized Monday night.

Sylvia Querta, vice chairman of the Hualapais, said the elderly tribal members in the rural parts of the reservation have not been able to get wood for heat. She added that livestock in the eastern part of the reservation is suffering because there is 2 feet of snow on the ground.

The four counties include Mohave in far western Arizona, north-central Coconino and Navajo and Apache near the New Mexico border.

The focus of the current operation is the northern section of the former Navajo-Hopi Joint Use area near the remote community of Pig Mountain, where between 3,000 and 4,000 Indians live, authorities said.

The tribes have most of the supplies stockpiled near the reservations, but lacked the equipment to distribute them.

Harvesters hold off fourth-quarter comeback by Canyon

BY L.D. STRATE
Pampa News Sports Editor
CANYON — Mark it down as a win. Not a pretty win, but a win, and an important district win at that.
 Pampa, leading by as many as 17 points in the third quarter, had to hold off Canyon in the final minutes for a narrow 45-42 win in District 1-4A basketball action Tuesday night.
 "We really looked good in spots and our defense looked good in spots, but we totally lost all our concentration in the last 10 minutes," said Pampa coach Garland Nichols.
 Pampa lifted its district record to 5-3, but remained tied with Lubbock Estacado for third place. These two teams meet Friday at McNeely Fieldhouse.

Pampa never trailed against Canyon, now 2-6, and ran off as many as 13 points in a row, but the Harvesters had quite a fourth-quarter scare.
 Canyon outscored Pampa, 16-8, in the final eight minutes and closed the gap to one, 43-42, on a steal and a layup by Ward Harrison with 12 seconds to go.
 However, Donovan Lewis was fouled and hit one of two foul shots for Pampa with eight seconds to go. Teammate Jeff Gaines then swiped a pass as the Eagles tried to work the ball downcourt for a final shot. John Tarpley was fouled with one second to go and he one of two from the line to put the Harvesters out of danger.
 It really looked as if the Harvesters had it put away midway in the third quarter when Pete Davis' 3-point play made the score, 35-18, a 17-point bulge.

 "We're still hanging in there," Nichols said. "That's the main thing. We've got two big games coming up against Estacado Friday night and Berger next Tuesday night."
 Rodney Young paced Pampa in scoring with 14 points while Richard Rogers came off the bench to toss in 12 points on long-range jumpers. Pete Davis added 11 points.
 Kurt Gonzales led Canyon with 13 points, followed by Bill Shaw with 10.
 As in past games, the Harvesters shot better from the floor (19-38, 50 percent) than they did from the foul line, 7-15, 46.6 percent.
 Canyon was 44.1 percent (19-43) from the floor and hit four of five shots from the foul line.

 In the girls' game, Canyon held off Pampa, 37-33, to eliminate the Lady Harvesters from a possible playoff spot.
 "We just started off real slow, but the last two quarters we played better than we ever have, especially on defense," said Pampa coach Albert Nichols.
 Pampa trailed by 27-11 at halftime, but held the Eagles to only a free throw in the third quarter to narrow the gap to 28-19 going into the fourth period.
 "We changed our defense to a 1-3-1 zone and played them real tight inside," Nichols said. "We really had the momentum going into the fourth quarter."
 Pampa outscored Canyon, 14-9, in the final eight minutes, but time ran out on the Lady Harvesters, who fell to 5-5 in district play and 10-11 in all games.

 "We just couldn't get rolling that first quarter," Nichols said.
 Pampa had only three points that first quarter and Canyon was able to build up a 9-3 advantage.
 Erin Bailey and Laryssa Bliss had nine and eight points respectively for Canyon.
 Kerri Richardson topped Pampa with 17 points and also pulled down a dozen rebounds. Melissa Nichols collected 13 rebounds along with four points.
 Sandee Greenway bounced back from a head injury in last week's game against Levelland to score eight points.
 "Sandee has more heart and desire than any player I've ever coached," Nichols said. "She plays hurt and never says a word about it."

 Regina Fly and Rotaunda Powell had two points each for Pampa.
 Canyon also defeated Pampa in both junior varsity games. Canyon won the boys' game 62-43 to drop the Shockers record to 14-6 overall and 5-3 in district.
 The score of the girls' game was 49-33.
 Tickets are going fast for the Pampa-Berger game, scheduled for Feb. 2, at McNeely Fieldhouse.
 Tickets can be purchased at the high school athletic office from 8 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.
 Reserved seats are $2.50 and general admission tickets are $2 each.

Canadian cagers lose to Perryton

PERRYTON — Canadian came from behind in the fourth quarter against Perryton in a District 1-3A girls' basketball game Tuesday night, but time ran out on the Lady Wildcats, who lost a 49-44 decision.
 Canyon had come from 14 points down with 4:12 to go to close the gap to five when time ran out.
 "I was really tickled with the way we came back," said Canadian coach Steve Zurline. "I put a couple of quick sophomores in (Tonja Vanhooser and Stephanie Harris) and they forced three turnovers and got three rebounds."
 Dana Johnson and Melinda Vanhooser had 14 and 13 points respectively to lead Canadian's scoring. Johnson also ripped off 14 rebounds while Stephanie Byard had seven points and seven rebounds.
 Lereca Schickedanz led Perryton with 19 points while Danette Raper had 11.
 Canadian is now tied with River Road for second place in district. Perryton is atop the standings.
 Perryton downed Canadian, 62-49, in the boys' game.
 Clint Dear was Perryton's top scorer with 18 points while Donny Anderson led Canadian with 15.
 Canadian hosts River Road Tuesday night with the girls' game starting at 7 p.m.

Clark, Dickens key players for Cougars

HOUSTON (AP) — Fraxton Clark, in an emotional response to sitting on the University of Houston bench, quit the team briefly last season and was greeted by boos from the home crowd when he was admitted back on the team.
 Eric Dickens never left the team but he was just as uncomfortable in his quest for more playing time last season on the talent-laden Cougar basketball team that was headed for its third straight NCAA Final Four appearance.
 But last year is gone. Clark and Dickens now are prime contributors to Houston's 13-5 season record and 5-2 league record going into tonight's Southwest Conference showdown against fourth-ranked Southern Methodist in Dallas' Reunion Arena.
 "I didn't think I'd ever get a chance to play again," said Clark, who had been the nation's leading junior college scorer prior to joining the Cougars. "But I owe it to Coach (Guy Lewis) for giving me another chance."
 Clark has started seven games for the Cougars this season and has averaged 5.8 points and 4.2 rebounds.

 Clark wants to score points only if they lead to victories.
 "I'd like to score more but we've got other guys to do that," Clark said.
 "I've had plenty of scoring achievements so my personal goal is for us to win. If I don't score a point and we win, that's fine."
 Dickens started the season with a career scoring average of 2.6 points per game but is averaging 11.6 points and finally earning some of the spotlight.
 "I wasn't needed as much before because we had Akeem (Olajuwon), Michael Young and Clyde (Drexler)," Dickens said. "That took the spotlight off me and a lot of other players on our team."
 Dickens said the support of his family and friends got him through last season.
 "I was determined to start for the University of Houston," Dickens said. "I kept it in my mind that I was as good as any of the players we had starting. My determination helped me through last year."

Dickens says he and Clark are the products of rugged workout sessions over the past two seasons.
 "In other years we worked the starters so hard in practice that it made them better and it made us better too," Dickens said.
 Dickens has been a key factor in Houston's highly successful press.
 "Eric's the best defensive player we've got, especially in the press, he's got those quick hands," Lewis said. "He gives us a little bit of pressure strength.

 Clark, Lewis said, has made a turnaround in attitude.
 "The biggest improvement in Braxton is in his attitude," Lewis said. "This year he acts like he wants to listen and he's willing to accept whatever the coach wants to do."
 "He's playing within himself and not trying to do the things he can't do."
Texas ranked number one in women's basketball
AUSTIN (AP) — The Lady Longhorns, ranked No. 1 in the Associated Press women's college basketball poll, like the spot they're in.
 "The more attention the better," Coach Jody Conradt said after the poll was released Tuesday.
 "This is what we work for. It's nice to be recognized, and we've dealt with pressure before."
 Texas, 16-2, received 25

Valenzuela inks Dodger contract

By The Associated Press
 Pitcher Fernando Valenzuela, who came away with a million-dollar contract two years ago when he first took the Los Angeles Dodgers to salary arbitration, agreed to terms for 1985 before matters got that far.
 Terms of the contract were not disclosed when the Dodgers made the announcement of Valenzuela's signing on Tuesday, although the pitcher had submitted a bid of $1.3 million for arbitration while the National League club filed a $1.1 million offer, the salary Valenzuela earned last season.
 In 1984, Valenzuela pitched 261 innings, second in the league, and compiled a 12-17 record with an earned run average of 3.03 and 240 strikeouts. His $1 million contract in 1983 is still a record for a salary decided by arbitration.

The arbitration figures submitted by Valenzuela and the Dodgers before Tuesday's agreement were one of three cases in which teams proposed salaries of $1 million a year or more for players who filed for arbitration.
 Of the 98 players who filed for arbitration, seven are seeking settlements in excess of $1 million annually, according to a report in Tuesday's New York Times. Besides Valenzuela, St. Louis Cardinals right-hander Joaquin Andujar has agreed in principle to a new three-year contract that will pay him nearly $1.5 million a year. Manager Whitey Herzog said Tuesday night at the annual St. Louis baseball writers' dinner.
 Andujar, 32, posted a 20-14 record in 1984 while earning a reported $300,000.

Celtics break Pistons' win streak

The play was simply indescribable, as Larry Bird himself said. "I don't want to describe the play," Bird said, "... we might have to use it again."

On Tuesday night, the Boston Celtics used the mystery play to beat the Detroit Pistons, 131-130, on Bird's basket at the buzzer. The loss snapped an eight-game Detroit winning streak, one short of the team record set in 1970.

The winning maneuver began with four seconds left as Bird took a short inbound pass from Dennis Johnson at halfcourt. Bird drove along the side, cut toward the basket, fended off Detroit center Kent Benson near the lane and threw the ball toward the hoop from about five feet away.

"As you could tell... I got the ball, we won," Bird said. "I was hoping I was going to get it. It's just like we know all Detroit's plays. Still, we've got to stop them."

"It is a tough way to lose, especially when you have the chance to win," Detroit guard Isiah Thomas said. "You never know until the game is over. I said to Bird, 'Nice shot.' And he smiled back."

Bird finished with 32 points, and Thomas topped Detroit with 33, including a 20-foot jumper that had given the Pistons a 130-129 lead with four seconds to play. Thomas also had 19 assists, 13 in the second half as Detroit made up a 78-64 halftime deficit.

In the rest of the National Basketball Association, Cleveland defeated the Los Angeles Clippers 110-94, Chicago beat the Kansas City 103-97, San Antonio downed New Jersey 130-127, Atlanta defeated Indiana 115-106, Denver clobbered Phoenix 128-100, Milwaukee beat Golden State 108-101 and the Los Angeles Lakers defeated Portland 122-106. Cavaliers 110, Clippers 94.

Cleveland had not beat any team by more than eight points this season until defeating the Clippers by 16. Los Angeles has lost five in a row.

World B. Free scored 26 points to lead the Cavaliers, who had five others in double figures. Junior Bridgeman led the Clippers with 30 points.

The Cavaliers broke away from a 16-16 tie in the first quarter with 12 straight points and led comfortably the rest of the way. Bulls 103, Kings 97.

Chicago won its fourth in a row for a 24-21 record, its best mark at this stage of the season in seven years. Michael Jordan scored 26 points for the Bulls, whose third-quarter surge put them ahead 83-77 going into the final period.

The Kings, who pulled within 101-97 with 58 seconds left, now have lost 18 times in 22 road games. Eddie Johnson topped the Kings with 26 points. Spurs 130, Nets 127.

George Gervin scored 47 points and Mike Mitchell had 28 as San Antonio held off several New Jersey scoring bursts.

The Spurs led by as many as 13 points in the third quarter and eight in the fourth. Hawks 115, Pacers 106.

Atlanta beat Indiana for the fourth straight time this season, getting 40 points from Dominique Wilkins and 24 more from Glenn Rivers.

With the game tied 68-68 and five minutes left in the first half, Rivers hit a pair of free throws that put the Hawks ahead for good.

Clark Kellogg had 24 points and Vern Fleming 23 for the Pacers. Nuggets 128, Suns 100.

Wayne Cooper touched off an 18-6 tear with a baseline jumper as the Nuggets pull away from a 70-70 tie en route to their rout of Phoenix. Alex English led all scorers with 27 points for Denver, which has won seven straight games.

Larry Nance paced Phoenix with 22 points.

McDaniel top MVC player

Wichita State forward Xavier McDaniel, who scored a career-high 44 points against West Texas State on Saturday, was named Missouri Valley Conference player of the week.

McDaniel, a 6-8 senior, scored 81 points and grabbed 35 rebounds last week as the Shockers defeated Creighton and West Texas State.

Besides the 44-point effort, McDaniel scored 37 points and had 19 rebounds against Creighton. He was 31 of 59 from the field and 19 of 21 from the free throw line in the two games.

Others nominated for the award were Steve Harris of Tulsa, Earl Davis of West Texas State, Indiana State's Johnny Edwards and Rickey Johnson of Illinois State.

Lady Buffaloes trip OCU

OKLAHOMA CITY — The West Texas State women's basketball team won their sixth game in a row, defeating Oklahoma City University, 68-60, in Oil Country Athletic Conference action Monday night.

Machelle Whitehead paced WT with 18 points.

Top scorer for OCU was Michelle Moore with 16.

Julie Burnham added 16 and Maria Linggi had 14 for the Lady Buffs, now 2-0 in OCAC play and 15-3 overall.

Vanessa Wells had eight assists, six rebounds, three steals and two blocked shots to go along with her six points.

OCU is 2-3 in conference and 7-14 for the year.

Crosby Pro-Am to have bigger purse

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The 44th Crosby Clambake, more formally known as the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am, features an increased purse, questionable weather and a brand-new pro.

The tournament begins Thursday on three Monterey Peninsula courses with a purse boosted to $500,000, an increase of $100,000 over the previously announced figures.

The weather, so often a vital part of this old gathering, is suspect. Rain, wind, sleet, cold and snow heavy enough to obscure the migrating whales all have their place in Crosby history. Cold temperatures are in the forecast this year. There's the possibility of rain for Friday.

"Our forecast is for rain. And then, after that, it gets bad," said one PGA Tour official.

"We defy the elements," said

Nathaniel Crosby, son of the founder and now the host.

He's also the new pro.

Nathaniel, 22, a former national amateur champion, turned pro late last year, but failed to gain his approved players' card at the PGA Tour qualifying school. In competition in Spain, however, he did qualify as a member of the European tour and will join that circuit in the spring.

Crosby said he also plans to play on the Asian circuit next month before going to Europe.

"I'm not going to be the tourist in Europe, seeing the sights and visiting museums," he said.

"I'm going over there to learn my business, to learn to play professional tournament golf. I'll be working on my game and playing golf, not sight-seeing," he said.

"I hope to gain the knowledge and experience I need to play here in the United States," Crosby said.

In view of his new status, Nathaniel divested himself of some of his duties as host and he has been working on his golf game. Those duties have been taken over by brother Harry and mother Kathryn this year.

"This is the first time I've given myself the chance to really prepare for the tournament," said Nathaniel, who, in previous years, has competed as an amateur.

Now he's listed among the 168 pros chasing a $90,000 first prize. The rookie, however, has little hope of success against a field that includes Jack Nicklaus, Tom Watson, Masters champion Ben Crenshaw, PGA champ Lee Trevino, defending Crosby titleholder Hale Irwin and Lanny Wadkins, winner of two of the first three events this season.

Among the other leading contenders are Phoenix Open winner Cal Peete, Hal Sutton, Mark O'Meara, Johnny Miller, Larry Nelson, Australian Greg Norman, Craig Stadler, Tom Kite and John Mahaffey.

The format calls for the pros and their amateur partners to play one round on each of the three courses, Pebble Beach, Cypress Point and Spyglass Hill, before the field is cut for Sunday's final round at Pebble Beach.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by CBS.

Football team needed for semi-pro league

Persons interested in organizing a semi-professional football team in Pampa are urged to contact Rob Chaney at 364-7404 or 364-8032 after 7 p.m. in Hereford.

Chaney said Pampa would become a part of the Texas Panhandle League, which was organized last year.

"We're trying to cut down our travel time by having more teams in the league," Chaney said. "Pampa is a good-sized town and a semi-pro team there would be beneficial, especially to guys who are out of school and would like to play some more football."

Chaney said teams from Amarillo, Clovis, Borger, Dumas, Wellington and Hereford have played in the league, as well as two teams from Colorado and several junior varsity college teams.

"It looks like we're going to have a 15 or 16-game schedule this year," Chaney said. "We've had a lot of pro scouts at the games, so it could be a good opportunity for a talented player," Chaney said.

Chaney said 10 teams have already been formed for this season and six more are expected to be added. Chaney said league officials would help a Pampa team with its organization.

"We'll help with securing fields and also help get big discounts on equipment," Chaney added.

As the Ice Age ended, what is today North America was roamed by nomadic tribesmen — hunters who had followed game over a land bridge from Asia. Even as they were exploring our continent, the water we use to brew Heileman's Old Style was already sealed beneath the surface of the earth.

Imagine water untouched since before the first nomadic tribes wandered across North America following vast herds of game.

Water already protected when antelope and bison grazed the grassy continental uplands.

Water kept fresh for thousands of years, by the natural filtration process of the earth itself.

This is the water — among the purest in the world — that we use in brewing our Heileman's Old Style Beer today.

FROM ANCIENT WATERS, THE PUREST OF MODERN BEERS.

At our brewery in La Crosse, Wisconsin, Heileman today uses only pure water drawn from deep within the earth.

This water is from an ancient aquifer dated more than 7,500 years old. Water that has remained untouched by the tramping traffic, scurrying commerce and the bustling industry of uncounted generations of mankind.

Adhering to our own stubborn standards, we are able to brew Heileman's Old Style with what we are convinced is the world's most naturally pure brewing water.

WE START WITH PURE WATER. THEN MAKE IT BETTER.

To these unrivalled waters, we add comparably fine beer-making ingredients: a generous amount of imported hops, and the best six-row barley available in America.

Then the water, hops and barley are subjected to a classic brewing process, called "Krausening," in which Heileman's Old Style is literally brewed twice to give it an extra smoothness and uncommon character you can see and taste.

THE RESULT: PURITY YOU CAN SEE. FRESHNESS YOU CAN TASTE.

These painstaking procedures, long ago abandoned by most major brewers, give Heileman's Old Style Beer superior taste qualities immediately apparent to even the most casual beer drinker.

Simply pour a bottle or can of Heileman's Old Style Beer into a glass.

Now, holding the glass up to the light, observe the clarity that comes from adhering to the highest standard of brewing (Krausening), and our insistence upon using pure, natural artesian water combined with the finest brewing ingredients available.

Now taste it.

FIVE REASONS WHY OLD STYLE IS AMERICA'S BEST-BREWED PREMIUM BEER.

At the HEILMAN BREWERY, we do everything possible to provide the best balance of flavor, smoothness and drinkability in our Old Style beer. To achieve these goals, the House of Heileman brews every bottle and can of Old Style with five special steps which are often neglected in the conventional brewing process:

1. We begin with only naturally pure artesian brewing water.
2. We use a generous supply of imported hops.
3. We use a brewing process which provides natural carbonation.
4. Our brewing cycle takes nearly twice as long as reported.
5. Our beer is fully Encased: the most natural way to brew beer and the most expensive. It is a time-consuming process which adds smoothness, and was once the way almost all quality beers were brewed.

We know of no major brand of beer made in America that incorporates all of these extra steps to ensure perfect quality. That is why we feel confident in saying that Heileman's Old Style is the best brewed of any major American beer.

U.S. records foreign trade deficit during the past year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States suffered a record foreign trade deficit of $123.3 billion last year as a flood of imports swamped a modest increase in exports, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the new deficit total came close to doubling the old record of $69.4 billion set in 1983 and was almost three times higher than the 1982 figure of $42.7 billion.

Analysts have blamed the strong dollar for the imbalance. Since 1980, the value of the dollar has risen by 41 percent against other major currencies, making foreign goods cheaper in this country and U.S. wares more expensive and thus more difficult to sell overseas.

The skyrocketing deficits have led to growing pressure for further import restraints among industries suffering the most from foreign competition, such as steel, autos and textiles. By one estimate, the trade deficit has cost 2.5 million U.S. jobs.

The merchandise trade deficit is a result of an imbalance between what Americans buy from overseas and what U.S. businesses sell as exports. Last year, imports soared 26.4 percent above the 1983 level while exports were rising just 8.7 percent.

In December, the deficit shrank to its lowest level for the year, $8.2 billion, compared to a November deficit of $9.9 billion. It was the lowest monthly total since a $6.7 billion deficit in December 1983.

For the year, the surge in imports was led by huge increases in shipments of iron and steel products, new cars, electrical machinery and telephones and other communications equipment.

Iron and steel imports jumped 61.1 percent last year while foreign car shipments were up 27.2 percent. Imports of electrical machinery rose by 46.5 percent and shipments of telecommunications equipment were up 41.3 percent.

The country's foreign oil bill climbed to $59.2 billion in 1984, a 7 percent increase over 1983.

Reagan meeting Kirkpatrick to discuss her future duties

WASHINGTON (AP) — After months of mystery about her future, U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick is conferring with President Reagan at a White House meeting associates believed would result in her leaving the administration.

At her request, today's session in the Oval Office was to include just the president and Mrs. Kirkpatrick. A self-described "welfare-state liberal" on domestic policy, Mrs. Kirkpatrick has been a favorite of conservative ideologues because of her hard-line views on foreign policy.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick's supporters, who had lobbied for her appointment to a top-level post, said it was likely she would leave the administration after four years in New York.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick announced last year she wanted to leave the United Nations and return to teaching government at Georgetown University. However, she indicated she would stay if Reagan offered a job she found attractive.

Conservatives waged a campaign to place her in a high-level job, such as national security adviser or secretary of state, but those jobs already were filled and the president said he wanted the incumbents to stay.

Reagan said in November he wanted her to remain in the administration but did not have a job "that would be worthy of her."

Among those rumored as the top candidates are Ambassador-at-large Vernon Walters; Frank Shakespeare, head of the Board of International Broadcasting and onetime chief of the United States Information Agency; Evan G. Galbraith, the U.S. ambassador to France; and Charles H. Price II, the U.S. ambassador to Britain.

Nation's sheep flock is declining

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American sheep inventory, generally on the decline for decades, has taken another nose dive.

As of Jan. 1, says the Agriculture Department, there were 10.4 million sheep and lambs on the nation's farms and ranches. That was down 9 percent from 11.5 million head a year earlier.

The latest figures, announced Tuesday by the department's Crop Reporting Board, showed the sheep and lamb inventory once again falling to its lowest level since U.S. records began more than a century ago.

But the value of the flock rose to an estimated $638 million, a 7 percent increase from Jan. 1 of last year, the annual report said. The average value of $61.10 per head was up from $52.10 a year earlier.

The top state was Texas, which had 1,810,000 sheep and lambs as of Jan. 1, valued at 104.1 million. A year earlier, the Texas inventory was 1,970,000 head and was worth $76.8 million.

Except for three years of increases from 1979 to 1982, the general trend in U.S. sheep numbers has been down since the early 1960s. The current inventory is the smallest since the department began keeping track of sheep and lambs in 1867 when about 46.3 million head were reported.

The decline has been due to a number of reasons, including wide variations in the world wool market, predators in the West that take a toll on the flocks, and shifts to other livestock enterprises.

Officials said the number of sheep and lambs on feed for the slaughter market as of Jan. 1 totalled 1.6 million head, down 7 percent from a year earlier. The 1984 lamb crop, at 7.77 million head, was down 5 percent from 1983.

Breeding ewes one year old and older on Jan. 1 were down 6 percent from a year earlier, the report said.

Other states in the top five, which accounted for nearly half of the total, their Jan. 1 inventories and values, compared with a year earlier, included:

California, 1,065,000 sheep and lambs on Jan. 1, a value of $75.6 million; 1,115,000 head a year earlier and a value of $73 million.

Wyoming, 860,000 head on Jan. 1, $53.3 million; 1,090,000 head a year earlier and a value of $57.8 million.

Colorado, 690,000 head on Jan. 1, $41.1 million; unchanged from 690,000 head a year earlier when the value was $34.2 million.

South Dakota, 639,000 head on Jan. 1, $33.9 million; 740,000 head a year earlier and a value of $37 million.

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time in more than five years, the Soviet Union has bought some soybean oil from the United States.

The Agriculture Department said Tuesday the order was for 25,000 metric tons and will be delivered by private exporters through Sept. 30.

According to department records, the Soviet Union's only other purchase of U.S. soybean oil was in 1979-80 when deliveries totaled 40,700 metric tons. An additional 30,000 tons were ordered, but that was cancelled by the Jan. 4, 1980, embargo ordered by President Carter.

Recent wholesale soybean oil prices in the Midwest have been around 27 cents per pound, meaning a metric ton — 2,205 pounds — would be worth about $598 on the Decatur, Ill., market. Thus, the Soviet order could be worth about $15 million, not counting transportation charges.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The dream of many farmers is to get "parity" prices for what they sell. One group of producers — those who grow navel oranges — are doing just that.

In fact, prices for navel oranges are so strong that the Agriculture Department has decided to suspend federal marketing order restrictions on the weekly sale of California and Arizona navel oranges.

The action was taken after reviewing recent freeze damage to the Florida citrus crop, and the market outlook for navel oranges covered by the marketing order. Prices of navel oranges, which normally decline this time of season, have risen instead.

However, officials said Tuesday the review was under way before the recent cold weather swept through Florida citrus groves.

James C. Hadley, administrator of the department's Agricultural Marketing Service, said that the "prorate" regulation of the California-Arizona order will be suspended as of midnight Jan. 31.

"It is the view of USDA that the suspension will not substantially disrupt the orderly marketing of the balance of the California-Arizona navel orange crop, and that price and demand will remain strong," he said.

The marketing order's prorate restricts the quantity of fresh oranges that can be sold each week to U.S. and Canadian markets. The weekly restrictions are intended to spread the total supply over a longer period to avoid market gluts and shortages.

Regulators list troublesome nuke plants

WASHINGTON (AP) — While declining to officially rank the nation's 80-odd operating atomic power plants from best to worst, government safety regulators list nuclear facilities in Alabama, California, New Jersey and Ohio as the most worrisome. Administrators of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's five regional offices list the Davis-Besse plant in Ohio, Rancho Seco in California, Salem in New Jersey and Browns Ferry in Alabama as the ones that trouble them the most.

The regional administrators, who have the field responsibility for assuring that the plants are built and operated safely, were asked by the commission during a 2 1/2-hour meeting Tuesday to specify which plants needed the most regulatory attention in 1985.

While the judgments were somewhat subjective, Davis Besse, Rancho Seco, Salem and Browns Ferry emerged as the most troublesome facilities to the day-to-day regulators.

Also coming under criticism were the Nine Mile Point plant in New York, Beaver Valley in Pennsylvania, Maine Yankee, Wolf Creek in Kansas and the San Onofre plant in California.

While the owners of all nine plants are taking steps to improve their performance, the NRC officials said their progress is sometimes "painfully slow."

The single factor mentioned most often was the ability and commitment of each utility's top officers to manage the complexities of nuclear power.

"The top half-dozen people in the company make the whole difference," said Jack Martin, administrator of the commission's Region V office near San Francisco.

James Kepler, head of the agency's Region III office in Chicago, said poor ratings in five of 11 categories in the latest evaluation on the Davis-Besse plant near Toledo "reflects badly not only on the utility but also on the NRC."

Richard Crouse, Toledo Edison Co.'s vice president for nuclear power, said his company has doubled its training staff — one of the areas criticized in the evaluation — since August and is buying a $13 million control room simulator as part of the upgrading.

"There's been a flurry of activities the past couple of months," Crouse said. "One of our problems is that we just have not done a very good job of communicating with them (the NRC)."

Rancho Seco was termed by Martin as "a real Gordian knot," with the plant's operating staff often in conflict with the elected five-member board of its owner, the Sacramento Municipal Utility District.

Kerry Shearer, a spokesman for the Sacramento utility, acknowledged "strained relations" in the past between its board and the operating staff at Rancho Seco. "The process has been worked out and we're implementing many of the consultant's recommendations now," he said.

The three-reactor Browns Ferry plant near Athens, Ala., was the site of a fire that, until the 1979 accident at the Three Mile Island plant in Pennsylvania, was viewed as the nation's worst nuclear mishap.

James O'Reilly, head of the NRC's Region II office in Atlanta, said the government-owned Tennessee Valley Authority has plowed "enormous resources" into Browns Ferry since the TMI accident.

But, partly because of its size as the nation's largest electric utility and its bureaucracy as a government agency, TVA "has not managerially been able to keep up with the rate of change that is taking place," he said.

Bruce Cadotte, a spokesman for TVA, said 150 engineers were recently transferred from the utility's headquarters in Knoxville, Tenn., to the Alabama site to help untangle Browns Ferry's problems. But he added that an improvement program launched by the utility "is still in its infancy."

Tom Murley, head of the NRC's Region I office in Pennsylvania, said a pair of emergency shutdown failures at the Salem plant in southern New Jersey in February 1983 "highlighted the operation problems there."

"There is no doubt that they want to improve and do better," Murley said. "They are now implementing what we call a 'get well' plan, but the progress is painfully slow."

Officials from Public Service Electric and Gas said they would have no immediate comment on Murley's remarks.

Things to think about

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — From America's think tanks and related institutions have come recently some items that might arouse your curiosity, provoke conversation and perhaps ignite controversy.

— Underlying every one of his books, writes Peter Drucker, is the conviction that "management" is not restricted to business management but is central to every institution of society.

It is "pure historical accident," says Drucker, once described as management's Keynes, Mohammed, Marx, Peter and Paul, "that management was first studied in the business corporation."

Writing in "New Management," a publication of Wilson Learning Corp. and the University of Southern California, Drucker thus seeks to excise still another of the most deeply entrenched notions about management.

"We are now beginning to realize that management is not something that is peculiar to business," says Drucker, 75. Instead, he continues, "management itself is the central institution of our society."

He feels strongly about the point. To emphasize the idea and make it part of modern management lore, much of which already is identified with him, Drucker announces:

"There are very few, and mostly minor, differences between managing a business, managing a diocese, managing a hospital, managing a university, managing a research lab, managing a labor union, or managing a government agency."

— Arch Patton, a pioneer authority on executive compensation, contends that in recent years there has been a "rampant rise in top management pay," and that there is a need for moderation.

Writing in the Harvard Business Review, Patton notes that salaries and cash bonuses of chief executive officers rose an average of 13.7 percent in 1983, whereas employees' hourly wages advanced only 5.9 percent.

— Most of the economic problems attributed to immigration — that, for example, immigrants cause living standards to fall for U.S. natives — are myths, says Julian Simon of the University of Maryland.

In an analysis published by the Heritage Foundation, a conservative policy study group, Simon reaches the conclusion that "just about all the individual economic objections to immigrants are without factual foundation."

Uninvited visitor says he went in with band

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House says it has tightened security but is still trying to find out how an unescorted civilian made his way into a ceremonial area of the White House by mingling with uniformed Marine Corps musicians on their way to play for President Reagan's inauguration.

"I think all parties agree that there was a mistake made," White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Tuesday after confirming a report that Robert Latta of Denver, who said he came to Washington to see the inauguration, penetrated the State Floor of the executive mansion on Jan. 20.

"I just walked in with the band," the uninvited water meter reader told The Associated Press.

Speakes said the Secret Service began an internal investigation immediately after the incident and is continuing it, looking for human or procedural error.

Speakes said Secretary of the Treasury Donald T. Regan, whose department oversees the Secret Service, gave the president a detailed briefing on Latta's escapade after it was disclosed Tuesday.

The spokesman said Reagan had been told about the incident earlier, but he did not know when. The president and his wife were attending a special inaugural church service at the time Latta was arrested. Less than two hours later, Reagan took the oath of office for his second term in a small invitation-only ceremony just a few paces from the spot where the arrest occurred.

Speakes spent nearly an hour fielding reporters' questions about how Latta could have just walked into the White House despite elaborate security precautions that include metal detectors. Security had been intensified for the inaugural weekend.

Speakes pointed out that the area in which Latta was arrested "is exactly the same area tourists go through six days a week."

Cotton industry wants lower fed deficit

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The National Cotton Council has taken aim at the federal deficit, the strong dollar and growing textile imports, offering its own solutions for the issues.

Council delegates on Tuesday endorsed without discussion a 27-page list of resolutions addressing these and other issues.

Among the top recommendations was one urging President Reagan to organize a bipartisan commission to come up with ways to reduce the federal deficit.

The delegates also called for congressional, administrative and Federal Reserve Board action to restore a balance between the value of the dollar and other currencies.

The National Cotton Council, representing farmers, ginners, warehousemen, merchants, cooperatives, oil mill crushers and textile manufacturers, concluded its 47th annual meeting Tuesday.

More than 1,400 people from 18 cotton-producing states attended the convention.

"Right now, our two major concerns are trade and the farm program, which will be taken up this year in Congress," said Dabney Wellford, assistant to the executive vice president of the Cotton Council.

The council also urged an International Trade Commission investigation into the impact imports are having on the U.S. cotton industry.

The delegates also endorsed a resolution calling for a temporary surcharge on fiber imports to help restore competitiveness in the international market.

Also endorsed was a resolution supporting a look at a tariff only on the value added by foreign processing of imports made from U.S. yard and fabrics.

Currently, the tariff is assessed on the full value of a product once it is imported back into the United States.

Council delegates also urged stepped-up public, private and industry-sponsored research to improve U.S. cotton's competitiveness and more programs to expand cotton consumption.
