

Proposed law would let candidates run in both parties

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — As far as state Sen. Grant Jones is concerned, in a conservative state like Texas a political candidate should be allowed to seek office in both the Democratic and Republican primaries.

Jones, D-Abilene, said that often people get swept into office on the strength of another candidate's popularity.

Jones told the Abilene Reporter-News he is giving serious consideration to introducing a bill to bring back cross-filing in Texas elections.

Under that system, a candidate could file in the primaries of more than one party.

"I think it will have more romance this session than it has had in other sessions," Jones said.

Democrats throughout Texas were beaten in November's general election by Republicans riding the popularity of President Reagan and Phil Gramm against liberal opponents, Jones said.

"We've seen that in many instances, people are voting on a party position rather than for the individual candidates," said Jones, who has tried on other occasions to pass bills that would let a candidate's name be on more than one ballot in primary, runoff and general elections.

His intention is to make state government less partisan, he said.

Republicans' strength in the 150-member Texas House has grown from 37 to 52, Jones noted. His fear, he said, is that the Legislature will become too partisan.

"It's unfortunate because frequently where you have strong party organizations, you find people opposing things because the other party proposed it," he said.

November's strong straight-party voting showed that party positions or one candidate's popularity could override the individual in the minds of voters, he said.

"This is one reason when we were changing from the two-year to four-year term for governor, I fought real hard to have our election for governor in the off-presidential years," he said, "because I don't think it's a good idea to elect anybody based on the popularity of a candidate in another office."

Cross-filing is not new to Texas, Jones said, noting that in 1951, Gov. Allan Shivers pushed such a bill so he and other Democrats — then in revolt against the "liberal" national party — could run as both Democrats and Republicans in the 1952 election.

"Bill Clements used to talk about being the first Republican governor in Texas in 105 years," Jones said. "He was failing to remember that we used to have a cross-filing system and Allan Shivers, and most statewide candidates that year, were on (the ballot) for both parties."

De-salting Meredith could take a decade

From Staff and Wire Reports

It could take up to 10 years to lower the high level of salt in Lake Meredith, according to a federal agency's draft report on a project proposed to stop the salt contamination of the principal water supply for Pampa and 10 other Panhandle and South Plains cities.

The draft report by the Department of Interior's Bureau of Reclamation blames much of the problem on a salt water aquifer near Logan, N.M.

The underground pool of salt water has been leaking chlorides and sulfates into the Canadian River and eventually into Lake Meredith, about 100 miles to the northeast, the report says.

The aquifer is under artesian pressure. The salt water bubbles up to the surface, contaminating the river basin and the lake it feeds. About 70 percent of the salt in Lake Meredith can be traced to the aquifer, according to the draft report.

To solve the problem, the report suggests drilling wells to pump out the aquifer and then disposing of the brine water. The salt water would be dumped into a disposal well about 5,000 feet deep. The pumping would relieve the pressure on the pool and keep the brine water from reaching the surface, the report predicts.

It says one well to pump the aquifer and a pipeline feeding one disposal well would cost about $3.3 million to build. But it could take three wells costing $7.7 million to get the job done, the bureau indicates.

Even if proposals to cut off the flow are implemented, the 11 cities supplied with water from the lake may not see any improvement for another decade because of the existing heavy buildup of chloride and sulfate sediment in the river bed.

However, Nick Palacios, a project engineer with the bureau in Amarillo, also said the benefits from the project could be "immediate" if the basin receives the "good flushing action" of heavy rains.

"(The salt) has been there for eons. We might see some results before 10 years. How long it's going to take, we don't know," Palacios said.

The bureau engineer said it wouldn't be known how many pumping and disposal wells are needed until one is drilled and the results measured.

Pampa, Borger, Amarillo, Lubbock, Plainview, Brownfield, Lamesa, O'Donnell, Slaton, Tahoka and Levelland receive most of their water from Lake Meredith, created by Sanford Dam on the Canadian River.

"Since impoundment began in 1965, Lake Meredith has experienced a gradual decline in water quality," the draft says.

The preliminary report has been sent to the Canadian River

Municipal Water Authority, the operator of the lake supplying the 11 member cities. The cities also are reviewing it.

Palacios said the cities on the lake system would likely pay for the project. He said either the bureau or CRMWA could handle the work, or it could be turned over to a private contractor.

He said a the project could be operating within a year after the money is raised.

Public Works Director-City Engineer Allyn Moore said the report has been forwarded to new City Manager Bob Hart. Moore said city officials haven't thoroughly reviewed the draft.

Moore said on a first glance of the predicted cost, "the numbers don't scare me."

He said if the cost is financed over many years and spread among the thousands of customers in the member cities, the resulting increase in water rates probably would be quite small.

"It wouldn't bother me too much to spend the money, if we get a definite benefit from it," Moore said.

Palacios said the bureau is waiting on suggestions about the report from the CRMWA and cities. Once the authority and cities make their recommendations, the report will be forwarded to the agency's Denver office for a technical review. The final report should be completed and released some time in March or April.

UAR delegate walks out

Price cuts anger OPEC minister

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — An emergency OPEC meeting appeared in danger of collapse today when a key Arab oil minister walked out of the conference and said he was leaving Geneva.

Mana Saed Oteiba, the minister of the United Arab Emirates, told reporters his country's full delegation was leaving in protest of Nigeria's stance in the price deliberations.

"We have withdrawn" from the conference, Oteiba said. He left the meeting less than an hour after it began, while the other ministers stayed in session.

Oteiba indicated his country was angered by the support of Tam David-West, oil minister of Nigeria, for a substantial cut in the cartel's prices.

"He is stabbing OPEC in the back, and I am not going to stay with him in the conference," Oteiba said as he stormed out of the closed-door meeting.

Although David-West has refused to divulge his country's position on the price question, conference sources said he favored a cut of at least $2 a barrel from the current $29 level.

At the outset of the meeting, Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the oil minister of Saudi Arabia, said he expected agreement on a small reduction in oil prices.

Asked by reporters if oil consumers should expect a sharp drop in prices, Yamani said, "No, not really a sharp fall. If you take the weighted average (of prices), the adjustment will be just cents."

Yamani declined to be more specific, saying the 13-nation cartel was opening discussions on "two or three" different proposals for realigning the group's multi-layered pricing system.

On Sunday, conference sources said a majority of OPEC ministers had acknowledged the need to cut the price of Saudi Light oil, which serves as the benchmark around which prices for other OPEC oils are arranged.

The sources said some ministers favored a cut of $2.50 a barrel from the current price of $29.

But the Iranian oil minister, Mohammad Gharazi, told reporters this morning that "we will never agree" to any reduction in the benchmark price. Algeria also is known to oppose a price cut.

A cut of $1 a barrel in the price of crude oil would reduce the price of gasoline by about 2½ cents a gallon, if all the cut were passed through to consumers. A barrel equals 42 gallons.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries called today's meeting as part of its efforts to prevent prices from collapsing under the pressure of diminished oil demand, especially by the United States and Western Europe, and aggressive competition from Britain and other non-OPEC petroleum producers.

As prices have fallen irregularly for more than three years with decreased demand for oil, non-OPEC countries such as Egypt and Britain have stepped up production.

OPEC's share of the oil being sold in the non-Communist world has plunged to about 22 percent of the total volume from its 1979 level, when it cornered about two-thirds of that market.

Livestock contest named for Frank M. Carter

The board of the directors of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce approved a name change for a livestock judging contest and named committee chairmen during a recent meeting.

The directors approved changing the name of the Top o' Texas Judging Contest to the Frank M. Carter Memorial Judging Contest beginning this year.

Carter had been the main person responsible for beginning the contest more than 30 years ago for Area I of Future Farmers of America, which covers the Texas Panhandle. He also had funded a scholarship awarded to agriculture students during a luncheon held in conjunction with the show.

Over the years Carter provided funding for the contest and scholarships. Chamber officials noted Carter had felt so close to the team judging show that he had included in his will funding provisions for its continuance after his death.

The contest will be held Saturday, March 16, in conjunction with the annual Top o' Texas Junior Livestock Show.

The directors approved chairmen and co-chairmen for 19 committees and one subcommittee to serve in the coming year of Chamber operations.

Chairmen include Kenny Smith, Agriculture; Milo Carlson, Aviation; Gene Barber, Civic Improvements; Thelma Bray and Larry Hollis, Festival of Trees

Subcommittee: Roy Webb, Conventions and Tourism; John English, Education; Curt Beck, Environment and Energy; and Jack Skelly, Fine Arts.

Others are L. D. Godfrey, J. D. Ray and J. J. Ryzman, Fire Prevention and Safety; Jim Guest and Mike Ward, Free Enterprise; Linda Haynes, Health Services; Larry Gilbert, Highways and Transportation; Paul Turner, Industrial and Community Relations; and Darrell Nordeen and W. A. Morgan, Legislative Affairs.

Also selected to head committees are Verl Hagaman and Mike Hutcherson, Membership; Charles Cooley, Oil and Gas; Ken Dulaney, Clara Sailor and Darrell Sehorn, Public Relations; Bob Chambers, Herb Smith, Wayne Stribling, Wanda Talley and Virginia Wilkerson, Retail Trade Cabinet; and Randy Harris, Sports and Recreation.

Heading up the special Texas Sesquicentennial Committee is Darlene Birkes.

Chamber President Claude Cone submitted his resignation, effective Feb. 15. Rev. Cone, who has served as pastor of First Baptist Church for more than 12 years, will be moving to Albuquerque, N.M., to become executive director of the Baptist Convention of New Mexico.

manufacturing the drugs. At best it is extremely difficult to construct a good case against the dealers of drugs and requires a great deal of law enforcement hours to make a case that is presentable enough to go to trial.

Because of this, the cooperation of citizens is a must in combating the drug problem. The Board of Directors of Crime Stoppers urges anyone having information about drug usage or trafficking to report it immediately.

Crime Stoppers will pay $500 for information leading to the arrest and indictment of persons manufacturing drugs in our community. Rewards are available for information about other criminal activity. Call Crime Stoppers at 669-2222.

Mystery mission dubbed a success

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Four more shuttle flights can proceed as scheduled this year after the success of Discovery's secrecy-cloaked military mission in lifting a spy satellite into orbit with a once-troubled booster, space officials said.

The mysterious mission ended Sunday afternoon with a perfect landing just three miles from the launch pad where the flight began Thursday.

Left behind in orbit 22,300 miles above the equator, south of the Soviet Union, was a $300 million satellite sources say is capable of monitoring Soviet missile tests and eavesdropping on selected military and diplomatic communications in much of Europe, Asia and Africa.

The five astronauts, all military officers, flew back to their training base in Houston Sunday night for briefing sessions today. In keeping with the secrecy imposed by the Air Force on much of the mission, they did not make the usual public departure statements.

The commander, Navy Capt. Thomas K. Mattingly, is hanging up his flight suit after three space missions to become space program director with the Naval Electronic Systems Command. The other crew members were Air Force Lt. Col. Loren Shriver, Marine Lt. Col. James Buchli and Air Force majors Ellison Onizuka and Gary Payton.

Throughout the flight, the astronauts' voices were not heard on the space-to-ground circuit normally opened for the news media. Their transmissions from space were encoded to prevent anyone from listening in.

MANILA DEMONSTRATION—Riot police arrest several demonstrators after breaking up a protest rally by 200 youths supporting a strike by drivers of Philippine jeepneys, modified transport jeeps, in Metropolitan Manila Monday. One of the protesters arrested is shown bleeding from a head wound. Several other demonstrators were also wounded.

Was CIA 'fooled' by Nicaraguan rebels?

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Honduran allegations linking Nicaraguan rebels to the murders of political dissidents in Honduras have brought to light apparent discrepancies on when an implicated rebel officer left the insurgent movement. Reagan administration officials, who insisted on anonymity, said rebel leaders assured the CIA that the officer allegedly involved in the abuses had been expelled two years ago from the U.S.-backed Nicaraguan Democratic Force, known by its Spanish initials FDN. The U.S. officials expressed surprise this past week when informed that according to statements by two rebel leaders, the supposedly purged officer, Col. Ricardo "Chino" Lau, was still with the FDN at least until last year. "If Lau was there after January 1983, it was clearly deceptive," said one official familiar with U.S. efforts to rid the FDN of Lau and other National Guard officers who fought for longtime dictator Anastasio Somoza before his overthrow in 1979. The official said FDN leaders, opposed to the purge, apparently decided to "fool the gringos" by shifting Lau from a public to a secret position. Another official said the incident showed that while the CIA had direct command and control over certain operations, such as the mining of Nicaragua's harbors, the agency had only limited influence over the FDN's inner workings. In an interview with The Associated Press, Edgar Chamorro, former FDN propaganda chief, said Lau was never ousted from the rebel group, as the CIA was told, but was simply moved from his post as the FDN's intelligence officer to head of the rebels' counterintelligence unit. Chamorro said Lau's new job was a "more obscure position" but gave him broad power within the FDN as he and his team of 20 to 40 men sought out infiltrators suspected of working for Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government. Chamorro said he believed Lau's continued presence was known to some CIA personnel in the field, despite claims from administration officials in Washington that they thought Lau had been purged. Lau's current whereabouts could not be ascertained, and CIA spokesman George Lauder refused to discuss the matter. Lau's name surfaced inside the administration this month in connection with a Honduran military investigation of the killings and disappearances of about 250 opponents of the pro-American Honduran government. Honduran sources close to the investigation have told the AP and other news organizations that since 1980, Nicaraguan rebels had killed 15 to 18 dissidents on behalf of the Honduran military. One source said Lau was involved in some of those actions.

Proposal would end subsidies to airlines serving 135 small cities

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration plans to ask Congress to end subsidies that guarantee commercial air service for 135 small communities, hoping to save $45 million next fiscal year, according to congressional and administration sources. The plan for ending the Essential Air Service program will be included in the administration's proposed fiscal 1986 budget for the Transportation Department, said the sources, who spoke on the condition they not be identified by name. The president is to send his proposed budget to Congress next Monday. Elimination of the air subsidies is expected to run into stiff opposition in Congress since many legislators represent communities whose daily service by commuter airlines depends on the federal money. Among those who have favored the subsidies are Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., chairwoman of the Senate aviation subcommittee, whose home state has a number of towns benefiting from the program, and Rep. Norman Mineta, D-Calif., chairman of the House aviation subcommittee, whose state has among the highest number of essential service points. Legislation ending the program must move through both of the aviation subcommittees. If the program is halted, government and industry sources estimated that about 100 of the 135 communities now being served by subsidized carriers will lose all air transportation. The rest most likely will have the number of flights reduced or other cutbacks to enable the carrier to save money.

Tulinda Deegan, vice president for government relations of the Regional Airline Association, said elimination of the subsidies is unlikely to seriously affect the commuter airlines that serve the communities, since they often would rather concentrate on self-sustaining markets. She said, however, a few airlines, especially those serving some sparsely populated Western states such as Montana, are heavily dependent on the subsidized operations. The program, created in 1978 as part of the law that deregulated the airline industry, is aimed at providing a period of transition for certain small communities, which had air service at the time but lost it when large airlines pulled out. According to the law, the subsidies are scheduled to be phased out by the end of 1988.

Robots in schools: games or learning?

TALENT, Ore. (AP) — In the center of a circle of 24 sixth-graders at Talent Elementary School stood a squat little domed cylinder. Pam Sessions, the school librarian, plugged a computer chip into a panel. Red and green lights flashed under the clear plastic dome. Motors whirred, and the cylinder rolled forward and back, turned and spun. "I am going to test your math skills," a synthesized voice said. "Please press the bumper for the number of players. Please press the desired skill level." The children squealed with nervousness and excitement. "The kids want to talk to it, hug it and kiss it," said Ms. Sessions. Kids notice them, but as yet robots in the classroom haven't drawn much attention from the federal Department of Education, said Arthur S. Melmed, director of the department's education technology staff. "To some extent we take our cues from the inputs we get from the schools, and I have not detected any landslide in this direction," he said. Nevertheless, robots like the one at Talent Elementary School — an RB5X made by RB Robot of Golden, Colo. — are finding their way into classrooms. Sharon Smith, a spokeswoman for RB Robot, said about 800 robots had been sold, with about 80 percent of them going to some educational purpose. Other robots used in classrooms include Topo by Androbot Inc., Hero I and Hero Jr. by The Heath Co., and Hubot by Hubotics Inc. The RB5X can play music or a game of "Simon Says," in which it instructs children to perform feats such as somersaults. In one game, "Hop To It," it tells children to stand a specified distance away and then measures the distance with a sonar sensor.

Elderly woman dies in fire

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Fire investigators say a discarded cigarette likely was the cause of a house blaze that claimed the life of an elderly woman. Julia Ashman, 66, was found lying face up on the floor of her three-bedroom home in the fashionable Terrell Hills section of San Antonio.

Terrell Hills arson investigator Columbus Stutes said burns covered 100 percent of her body.

Five arrested in check ring

DALLAS (AP) — Five people have been arrested in connection with a scheme to pass counterfeit cashier's checks for expensive watches and diamond jewelry at area stores. Secret Service agents confiscated about $300,000 in fake cashier's checks made out to area stores and arrested the two women and three male suspects, said David M. Humphrey, special agent in charge of the Dallas office.

Jim Rich, a Secret Service agent in Dallas, said that merchants had been alerted to the bogus check scheme by store managers in Houston, where an operation has continued since early January. Rich said the women arrested Friday had been shopping at Dallas-area stores since Wednesday for diamond jewelry and expensive watches. The items were to be picked up Saturday, he said.

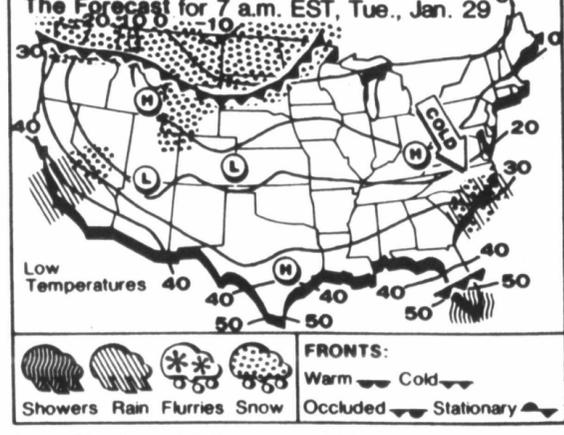

"They had a nice big Lincoln Town car they had rented and mink coats and lots of jewelry," Humphrey said of the suspects. "They dressed the part very well." The Secret Service, assisted by store managers, prepared to apprehend the suspects Friday night, when authorities say most counterfeit checks are cashed because banks are closed and cannot be called to refute bogus checks.

A good excuse is required to get out of speeding tickets

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Veteran San Antonio traffic officers say after having pulled over thousands of speeding drivers, they've heard a lot of outrageous excuses from people hoping to get off with a warning.

However, the more unusual and outlandish the excuse they hear, the more likely they are to let the motorist off, they admit.

"I never give a ticket to a person that has a good excuse," traffic Sgt. Charles Dickinson told the San Antonio Light.

"I only give them tickets for the standard excuse. If they tell me they were speeding because they had to go to the bathroom, I just write all the faster. That has to be the oldest excuse."

A 15-year veteran traffic officer said he was left speechless by a story given him by a harried motorist who had been dodging through downtown traffic to get home.

"I have to get home quickly," the distraught businessman said after being pulled over for speeding. "I have to get home to make my wife pregnant."

The officer stood there for a minute, pondering the man's story.

"My wife and I use natural birth control methods," the motorist continued, looking the officer straight in the eye. "She had just taken her temperature and had called me at the office. It was time."

"I let him go," the officer said. "That was an original excuse — I had never heard anything like it."

Patrolman Gerald Marple, a 27-year veteran of the traffic division, said one man he had stopped for speeding told him he was hurrying home because burglars had broken into his house three weeks earlier and beaten his wife so badly she had to be hospitalized. The driver said his wife was now staying with her mother, but was afraid to go home.

"Then he came to the point," Marple said.

"He said he was speeding to get home because he had two prize bulldogs and he was afraid the burglars would return to the house and castrate them.

"I gave him a ticket," Marple said.

Another driver, stopped after being clocked at 100 mph on Loop 410 in San Antonio, told Marple "he had just gotten out of the car wash and was trying to blow dry his car. That would have been all right, but he was hiding behind a building to avoid me," Marple said.

Patrolman Mike Beers, a 16-year veteran of the traffic beat, said he had problems convincing himself to give a ticket to man who had no hands and drove with his feet.

Ruling of 'apparent suicide' draws protest from doctor

ALICE, Texas (AP) — A medical examiner ruled that veteran court reporter Ben Sala apparently committed suicide before his body was found with a pair of scissors embedded in his chest in his office at the Jim Wells County Courthouse.

But the ruling is being challenged by Sala's family physician.

"The pope would have a harem before this would be a suicide," said Dr. Phil Dunlap, who along with his father, Dr. B.E. Dunlap, had served as Sala's physician for about 25 years.

Sala, 55, had been the court reporter for the 79th Judicial District Court, which includes Brooks and Jim Wells counties, for 37 years and secretary of the Coastal Bend Bar Association for more than 20 years.

Sala, whose body was found Friday, had been the "right and left hands" for State District Judge C. Woodrow Laughlin for many years, said another court reporter, Sonia Trevino.

"The man was universally liked, he was very bright. He had troubles, little troubles like everybody else, but his death certainly was not suicide," Dunlap said.

"He wasn't a closet gambler, he didn't run around, and he was distressingly free of vices. He was healthier than a proverbial horse," Dunlap said.

Dr. Joseph Rupp, who serves as medical examiner for several area counties, said there was nothing about the wounds to suggest Sala was murdered.

"Because of the evidence that we found, we ruled it an apparent suicide," Rupp said. "It's all compatible with a suicide," he said.

But he said the case is still under investigation.

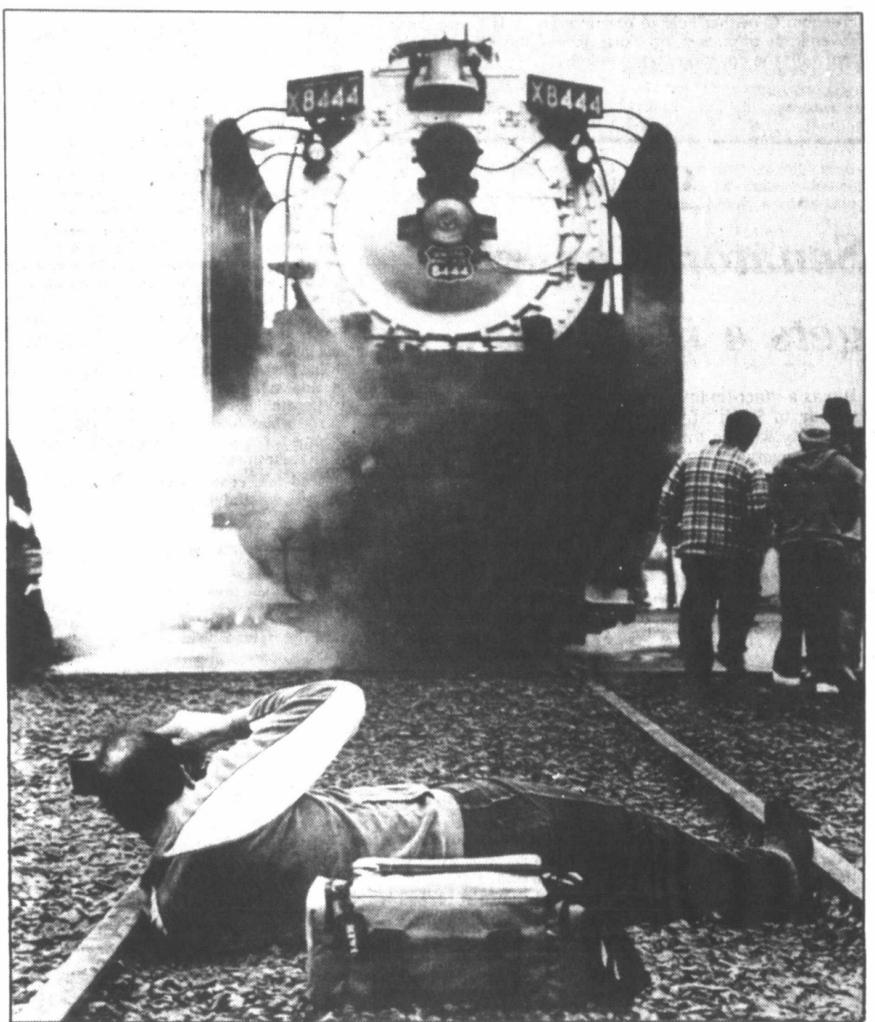

Jim Wells County Sheriff Oscar Lopez said he concurs with Rupp's ruling, but added, "It's going to be tough either way, we have no motive for suicide or murder. What you've got here is a man well-known in the community and well-liked."

Attorney John Mullen, who called Sala "my best friend," said he arrived at Sala's office shortly after another attorney, Allen Ramirez, found the body about 3:45 p.m.

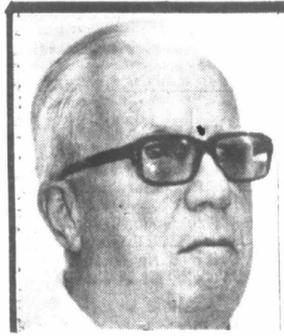

"He had a big pair of office scissors in his chest," Mullen said.

Nothing else in the office seemed disturbed, Mullen said.

Court officials said Sala was in court all morning Friday, but that another court reporter took Sala's place after the noon recess.

The dumpster phenomenon

Being a resident of one of the older sections of our city has its advantages, but it also has some disadvantages.

Among the advantages, for me anyway, is being close to the downtown area and the office. It doesn't take very long to get to work early in the morning and therefore I can sleep later.

But, the closeness to the downtown area, which meant one could easily walk to all of the major stores in town when the neighborhood was new, now means I must drive a considerable distance to reach the shopping centers and most of the stores in town.

Those large, old shade trees which have been growing for more than 50 years are a blessing on hot summer days, providing cooling shade — but in the winter they can be a headache when heavy ice coatings rip limbs from the monsters and litter the yard and driveway.

One of the major disadvantages to living where I do — in my way of thinking — is that there is no alley behind my house. Of course, there is a utility easement with the usual utility poles and for the gas, water and sewer lines, but this area is too narrow for the placement of garbage dumpsters.

This means that the dumpsters are located next to the curb in front of the houses on my street.

This has resulted in some observations on my part during the past year or so, resulting in what I term the "dumpster phenomenon." If the dumpster was located in the alley, I probably would not have made these observations since the monster would have been hidden.

One of the things I have noticed while sitting on my front porch or gazing out a living room window is that the fiberglass lids are designed in such a way as to permit the strong Panhandle winds, when blowing from certain directions, to lift the lids.

I know that the lids must be made of material light enough to permit easy opening by those persons desiring to empty trash into the dumpsters. But, there should be some way of keeping them closed on windy days.

When the lids fly open on windy days, the loose paper in the dumpsters is blown out and is carried by the winds throughout the neighborhood, catching on the first object to get in its way. This is usually the chain link fence around my yard.

Could this be a reason for the paper and other debris which usually litters alleys in other sections of the city?

Another of the observations regarding the dumpster concerns small children being sent by their parents to empty the trash. For some of these "munchkins," it is about all they can do to raise the lids. Then, because they do not yet have sufficient height, they are unable to dump the trash into the dumpster without spilling some of it. This helps add to the trash being blown about the neighborhood by the winds.

Of course, where the dumpster sits between the curb and the sidewalk means that no grass will grow there. This wouldn't be so bad if the guy operating the garbage truck would put the dumpster back in the same place each time it is emptied.

I cannot figure out why, when the truck is parked during the operation of lifting the dumpster onto the truck and dumping it, how the dumpster can be placed a foot from the spot where it was when the truck arrived.

So, this means bare spots along either side of the dumpster, which also adds to the unattractiveness of having the monster in the front yard.

The one major conclusion I have reached in recent weeks concerns those little labels placed on the dumpsters by Clean Pampa Inc. which tell us to "Pick It Up Pampa."

While they are a good idea, the stickers are in the wrong place in my opinion. They were placed on the dumpsters where the only people who see them are the ones who are placing their trash in the dumpsters. The persons who use the dumpsters don't have to be reminded to do so.

But, the ones who are littering our streets and yards apparently never get close enough to the dumpsters to read these labels. Maybe the message should be posted someplace else.

What has made this obvious to me is the Sunday morning task of removing shattered glass from a six-pack thrown in my driveway. This debris was only eight feet from the dumpster in front of my house. The person responsible for this littering could have placed it in the dumpster without even leaving their comfortable car.

Could it be that the persons who throw their trash on the streets are the ones who live in the neighborhoods where the dumpsters are located in the alleys, therefore making the task of cleaning out their cars more difficult?

Maybe having the dumpster in front of the house, next to the driveway, is a blessing. I just park the car next to the dumpster and have the junk into it.

Man released after two days of questioning

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A free-lance photographer questioned in connection with a series of rapes, slayings and disappearances of nine young women has been released because his blood did not match the rapist's, a prosecutor said.

"Unless we have new evidence that develops, we have no interest in looking at him further," Tarrant County Assistant District Attorney Larry Moore said Sunday.

Remsen Newbold Wolff, 44, was freed about 6:30 p.m. Saturday from the city jail after authorities decided not to file charges.

Wolff, a 1964 Harvard graduate, had been arrested in connection with a 1984 sexual assault after the victim had picked him from two separate lineups, authorities said.

But blood tests conducted on Wolff and compared to laboratory results obtained after the rape of a 15-year-old girl showed that Wolff was not the man who raped her, authorities said.

"The tests went a long way in our decision to release him," said Moore, adding that Wolff was no longer a suspect.

Wolff was scheduled to stand trial today on a charge of sexually assaulting a 4-year-old boy on Oct. 20, 1983, but Moore said he expected the trial to be delayed 30 to 60 days. Wolff was freed on a $20,000 bond in that case.

Wolff was the second man arrested and questioned in connection with the disappearances and slayings. Authorities arrested a 25-year-old man Jan. 12, then released him four days later when a murder charge was dropped.

Wolff has an unpublished telephone number and could not be contacted by The Associated Press.

Paper: Sarah Weddington misuses her office

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Sarah Weddington, the state's lobbyist in Washington, was able to keep a hectic speaking schedule by taking 1,072 hours in overtime compensation since taking office two years ago, according to a published report.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram said also that several former aides also accused Ms. Weddington of occasionally using employees for political tasks and personal errands. In one instance, a former intern said she was dispatched to the Library of Congress on state time to research Ms. Weddington's book on women and leadership, the newspaper reported Sunday.

The 19-member Office of State-Federal Relations, funded by a state appropriation, serves as a liaison between state and federal officials.

"I didn't think it was right, but I didn't see any way to get out of it," the former intern, who asked not to be identified, told the newspaper. "I did know it wasn't directly pertaining to state business."

Ms. Weddington, 39, said she does not remember the assignment and would never use employees "to do personal things on state time." She also disputed claims that her absences have hurt her state work.

State auditors found nothing wrong with the practice of taking the compensation time, the Star-Telegram reported.

"No one who knows me doubts I work hard, that I'm here after people leave and before they get here," Ms. Weddington said. "I religiously document my hours. I am abiding expressly by state rules."

According to information supplied by her agent and former employers, Ms. Weddington earns close to $50,000 annually as a speaker, the Star-Telegram said.

But Ms. Weddington, who earns $49,700 in her state job, said her speaking earnings are "not that high." During an interview in her Washington office Friday, she was unable to provide exact figures on her earnings, the newspaper said.

Ms. Weddington, who successfully argued in 1973 a landmark case before the Supreme Court legalizing abortion, frequently uses her "comp time" to travel to speaking engagements before college students, women's organizations and business groups.

She employs the same agent that handles Jimmy Carter, Charleton Heston and William F. Buckley.

Agent Jim Keppler said Ms. Weddington gives about 30 speeches a year, collecting "in the range of $2,000 to $4,000" for each appearance.

Ms. Weddington does not report her speaking income on her state financial disclosure form, contending that the fees are unrelated to state business. She also said her duty as the state's lobbyist is her top priority.

Bill aimed at stopping low-level dump for South Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — Two Texas legislators said they would introduce legislation today to try to stop a state agency from locating a low-level radioactive waste dump in McMullen County.

Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice, told the Austin American-Statesman that she and Rep. Larry Don Shaw, D-Spring, would introduce a bill to prevent purchase of a dump site until further investigation.

"We don't want any kind of toxic-wastes in the watershed. We all drink that water," Ms. Glossbrenner said.

A low-level radioactive waste site would not handle the same material as the high-level site proposed near Hereford for spent nuclear fuel and other highly radioactive products.

Low-level waste includes materials used in medicine or research such as gloves, paper, wood or bogs. It also includes some waste from nuclear power plants, such as resin beads used to clean the coolant waters.

Rick Jacobi, general manager of the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority, revealed Saturday at a meeting of the Texas Environmental Coalition that the 365-acre McMullen site, 60 miles south of San Antonio, was the prime choice of the authority's staff.

Jacobi said the staff will recommend that the authority stop considering a second site in Dimmit County.

A final decision on location of the dump will be up to the six-member authority board.

Jacobi told the environmental group a public hearing would be held in May in McMullen County before purchase of the land for about $688,000.

After that, he said, there would be environmental studies by the state Department of Health, with the possibility an operating license for the dump could be issued by 1988.

Jacobi said the McMullen County site is attractive because thick clay under the surface would provide an excellent seal on materials placed there. He said the area is mostly ranchland where many residents earn money leasing their property for deer hunting.

"Everybody here is horrified that we have no control of our destiny anymore," Jeff Sibley, director of the Nueces Basin Conservation Group, told the American-Statesman. Sibley's family owns a 6,000-acre ranch next to the proposed disposal site.

Senator Kennedy gets a message

It was a "fact-finding tour" that took Sen. Edward M. Kennedy to South Africa. The most important fact he found may well be this: That the racial issue in South African society is not as simple as many of his American admirers would like to believe.

As the senator traveled the country preaching against apartheid and declaring his sympathy for segregated blacks, he was met by demonstrators—blacks telling him to go home. The chief of the Zulus told him it would be "madness" and harmful to both blacks and whites for U.S. companies to pull investments out of South Africa as a protest against the government's racial policies, no matter how justified we are in condemning those policies.

By the end of this visit, Kennedy had the rare distinction of being attacked by political leaders and newspapers on the right and the left and in the middle of the road. After implying that poor blacks in South Africa were denied adequate medical care, he was challenged by famed heart surgeon Dr. Christiaan Barnard to show whether health care available to poor blacks in America was any better.

What seems to have united South Africans of diverse background in criticism of the American senator was his holier-than-thou attitude—a presumption on his part that we Americans are morally superior to South Africans because of the progress we have made in overcoming racial prejudice and discrimination in our society.

Americans can indeed be proud of the progress made in this directions, but comparisons are risky, as Kennedy found out.

If a foreigner came to our shores and asked us to explain the disparities in the unemployment rates for whites and blacks, or why American Indians now occupy only reservations in a land that was once all their own, we'd have to tell them that the answers are complicated and require an understanding of history.

That's what the South Africans seem to have told the senate from Massachusetts.

BY CHARLES VAN EATON

Corporations paid only 6.2 percent of total U.S. taxes collected in 1983, down from 12.5 percent in 1980 and 26.5 percent in 1950. That part of the 1983 drop was due to the lingering effects of the 1981-82 recession is seen by the fact that corporate taxes rose to 8.5 percent of the total in fiscal year 1984.

But most of the decline was due to the effects of accelerated depreciation and the investment tax credit - both of which were part of the 1981 Reagan tax cuts. As a result the effective corporate tax rate - the amount actually paid as a percent of income - was 16.7 percent in 1983 while the statutory rate - the figure written in the tax laws - remained at 46 percent.

Some politicians see this as a bad thing and want legislation to increase corporate tax rates. I don't see it that way at all. To me it's good news. If corporations paid only 6.2 percent of total taxes in 1983 and only 8.5 percent in 1984, I see no reason to retain the subterfuge of having a corporate income tax at all. It's time for that useless and destructive tax to be eliminated once and for all.

But the conventional wisdom has it that the American people wouldn't stand for elimination of the corporate income tax. Public opinion polls indicate that most people strongly prefer corporate taxes to personal taxes. That's not surprising; everyone prefers that others be taxed. But I wonder what their attitude would be toward lower interest rates? Lower product prices? Larger and more secure retirement pensions? Better employment prospects for their children and grandchildren?

The answers to these questions is obvious. What is not sufficiently recognized is that higher corporate income taxes make such outcomes less likely while lower or non-existent corporate income taxes could very well assure improvement in all these areas.

Academic economists - economists who spend their lives studying the way economic systems actually work - are almost unanimous in the view that the corporate income tax is inefficient. Corporations are not a "thing" which can be taxed. In fact, corporations are not a "thing" at all - they're only a legal entity: a legal contrivance which has evolved over the centuries to expedite the forming of contracts between customers, suppliers; creditors, employees and owners. Any tax levied on this legal entity is going to fall on those who are parties to the contract - customers, suppliers, creditors, employees and owners - not on the corporation as such.

Suppose the corporate income tax had not been in existence in fiscal year 1984. What would have happened? Some might say that federal revenues would have been 8.5 percent lower. But that answer is static - it assumes that nothing different would have happened in the absence of a corporate income tax than actually did happen. Given the way a market economy actually works, such an answer is not admissible. A lot of things would have happened. What are some of those things?

If the corporate income tax had not been in place in 1984 the first thing which would have been different is that net corporate earnings would have been greater than they actually were. What would that have meant for corporations?

First of all, corporations could have paid higher dividends to their shareholders. Since dividend income is subject to the income tax, government would have collected some tax revenue. But a large block of American corporate stock is held by employee pension funds and insurance companies - the poor man's major source of claims against future income. With higher dividend income these institutional owners of corporate stock would be able to build a more secure base from which to pay pensions and claims.

With higher dividend potential people would want to invest their savings in common stock. Without a corporate income tax against which interest on bonded indebtedness could be deducted, corporations would find the issuance of corporate stock a far more efficient way of raising new capital than issuing bonds. Given the thoroughly documented fact that the stock market is a far more efficient instrument for evaluating the performance of corporate managers than is the bond market, corporate management efficiency would be constantly subject to market review.

Secondly, in the absence of a corporate income tax firms could pay higher wages. Through the personal income tax government would collect a portion of this higher income.

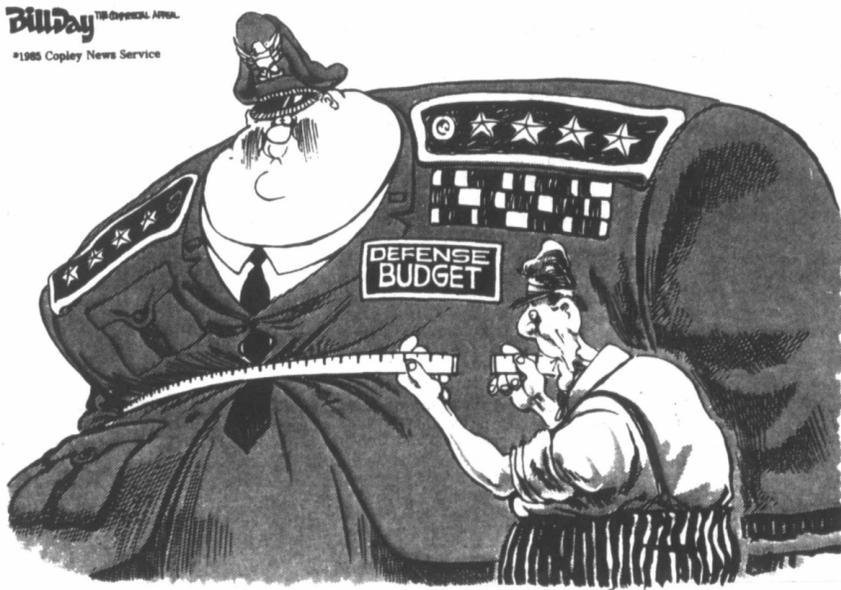

Or corporations could reduce their product prices. Certainly with all their rivals now in a position to experience higher net income from every sale, competitive pressures could only lead in the direction of lower product prices.

But perhaps the most important thing which elimination of the corporate tax would do is to increase the flow of funds available to firms for the internal financing of their operations. With greater ability to internally finance capital expansion and inventories from earnings, corporations would have less need to enter the credit markets. With this, interest rates should fall causing the cost of capital and the cost of holding inventories to fall. Certainly no one could see this as anything but a good result since, with reduced costs, a firm is in a better position to expand its output and increase employment.

The corporate income tax makes little sense economically. Its only justification seems to be political - i.e. "the big corporations are made to pay taxes." But such a view is, at best, primitive. The corporate income tax - for whatever political satisfaction it may engender - does too little good and too much harm to keep. Now is the time to get rid of it.

Starvation is a weapon

Americans now have eyes and ears all over the world. We see and hear as never before the suffering of the wretched in Cambodia and Brazil and Ethiopia and some seek to transplant the world's misery here. Blinded by tears.

American relief agencies, church and secular, public and private, have been falling over one another in a pell-mell race to rescue the starving babies of Ethiopia.

Ninety percent of all outside aid to Ethiopia, funneled through that Marxist government, never gets to the people who need it most.

Worse, the ugliest truth about Ethiopia is being whitewashed by some large Western charities and some newspeople and by the U.N.

The Wall Street Journal has confirmed through American diplomats, Ethiopian natives and European relief workers that the Soviet-backed government of Ethiopia is using that famine as a weapon.

At least six ethnic groups are fighting in all corners of Ethiopia. The unity the Communists have not been able to accomplish with helicopter gunships and rocket launchers they may be able to accomplish by systematically starving their enemies.

They've also employed starvation as a weapon in Cambodia and in Afghanistan - restricting relief, fire-bombing crops, depopulating the countryside, starving adversaries into submission.

The Marxist government of Ethiopia refuses to allow our Western relief agencies to help feed anybody outside the areas of government control.

The worst starvation is in Tigre Province in the north. Almost none of our food gets through to Tigre Province; the occasional truckload which has been able to get through has had to move by night or it, too, would be bombed by government forces.

The Ethiopian government claims the noblest motives, moving people from over-farmed areas to potentially productive areas - a new start in a more fertile area - and some novice newspeople on the scene have swallowed and parroted that phony premise.

On TV we are shown government-controlled feeding centers in government-controlled areas. We have not seen the starving who braved battle lines seeking food only to be denied food, mistreated, harassed - sometimes beaten - merely because they came from rebel-held areas.

The Journal's Dan Connell calls it "political manipulation of a terrible human tragedy; murder by hunger."

60 governments still guilty of torture

By Don Gruff

Anna Chertkova, a Soviet citizen, is a victim of the hypocrisy of her own government.

So, in neighboring Turkey, is Sema Ogur.

Anna Chertkova is a member of a religious sect Soviet authorities do not recognize and which she refuses to renounce. She is, therefore, judged a danger to Soviet society and, for the past 11 years, she has been locked up in a psychiatric hospital. There she is subjected to injections of powerful anti-psychotic drugs that cause pain and disorientation.

Sema Ogur, arrested on suspicion of membership in an organization outlawed by Turkey's then-military government, was subjected to beatings and electric shocks. Bound to ceiling pipes at one point, she was left hanging in a crucifixion position in such pain that it was "as if my arms were coming off."

The constitutions of both the Soviet Union and Turkey extol human rights and prohibit abuses. Further, both countries are members of the United Nations, which, in a resolution adopted by the General Assembly in 1975, condemned torture as cruel, inhuman and degrading, "an offense to human dignity... no state may permit or tolerate."

There is, unfortunately, nothing unusual about the discrepancy between promises and performance in the cases of the Soviet Union and Turkey. Torture is so widely condemned these days, observes Amnesty International, that no government would ever publicly acknowledge practicing it.

And yet, the human rights group in the past year alone has received reports of torture inflicted on prisoners in some 60 countries - more than a third of the U.N. membership.

Turkey, for example, which recently returned to quasi-civilian rule. The constitution that guarantees human rights, James David Barber, chairman of Amnesty's U.S. board of directors, points out, is suspended in 34 provinces still under martial law. There, contrary to the constitution, prisoners may be held incommunicado for extended periods.

"That is when torture is inflicted," says Barber, "day after day."

Torture is not a speciality of any one political system. It is practiced in the Soviet Union and China, in Chile and Brazil.

It is not unknown in Canada. An Amnesty investigation found "reasonable ground to believe" inmates had been mistreated following a 1982 prison riot in Quebec. Tear gas was reported to have been sprayed directly into prisoners' mouths. Guards were said to have choked some with wet towels.

Amnesty is at the mid-point of a two-year campaign to focus attention on the persistence of torture and to press for greater efforts toward abolition.

It would seem to be having some effect. Congress has passed and the president has signed a resolution incorporating several Amnesty recommendations. It specifies, among other things, that training programs for foreign military and law enforcement personnel include instruction on human rights standards and U.S. policy against torture.

Its probable effectiveness may be questioned, considering the fidelity of so many U.N. members to their 1975 pledge. As it was, the draft was approved only after a compromise, suggested by Byelorussia, permitting a government to ratify the treaty without recognizing the competence of the torture committee.

But Barber thinks that is missing the more important point. And that is the strengthened commitment to the principle of stopping torture and the greater visibility the new measures afford to efforts toward that end.

Amnesty prefers to accentuate the positive. Hope, after all, springs eternal.

Dear Abby

Wife wants distant husband to reach out and touch her

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for eight years and have two beautiful children. My husband is a very loving father, but he never expresses any affection for me. For instance, I always have to go to him for a hug or kiss. He never reaches out to touch me, or even take my hand. I am naturally very affectionate. He is not. He's always been that way, but I thought after we were married he would change. We've talked about it, and he says it's just not "in him" to be demonstrative.

Last night he said, "When you were in the kitchen washing dishes, I wanted to sneak up behind you and put my arms around you, but I just couldn't do it."

I thought, how sad! If only he had done it, he would have made me the happiest woman in the world.

Abby, is it because of the way he was brought up? Nobody in his family touches or kisses much. My family is just the opposite.

How can I make him change? I know he loves me, but it's really painful living with a man who never shows any affection.

HUNGRY FOR AFFECTION

DEAR HUNGRY: You can't make him change; only he can change himself. He's inhibited because (you guessed it) that's the way he was brought up.

You don't have to spend the rest of your life hungering for affection. Verbalize your need to be touched, hugged and kissed, and stress that he can learn to express his feelings without embarrassment. Then ask your family physician to recommend a therapist who specializes in behavior modification.

Other options: Call your local mental health facility and inquire about sex therapy. If you live near a university whose medical school has a human sexuality program, you're in luck.

DEAR ABBY: After 40 years of a beautiful marriage, I lost my husband. We were a childless couple with no relatives living nearby; I had to take care of everything. When going through his chest of drawers, I found a large plastic bag of keys, a few with identifying labels, but most without.

Abby, I am going crazy trying to find out what these keys are for. I don't think I should just toss them out because I'm sure my husband wouldn't have kept them unless they were of some use.

Abby, you could save your readers a lot of unnecessary grief by advising them to label every key they have right now! And if a key is no longer useful, to throw it away.

KEY CRAZY IN SUN CITY

DEAR KEY CRAZY: I wouldn't recommend labeling keys. Should you be burgled, the labeled keys would save the thief a lot of time. More practical advice would be, label keys in a code known only to family members, and toss out keys that aren't currently useful.

DEAR ABBY: "New Mom," whose baby had been born with a strawberry birthmark on her forehead, was tired of being asked, "What's wrong with your baby?"

"Mom" handled such rude and insensitive questions with, "Nothing. What's wrong with you?" My grandmother was born with one arm—a condition that never seemed to be a handicap to her. Once when I was small and traveling with Granny, a lady came up to her and said, "Honey, did you lose an arm?"

Granny smiled and replied, "Why, honey, did you find one?"

I was very proud of the way she handled those rude and insensitive people. I'm sending this in loving memory of "Granny Grump." If you use this, sign me ...

Panic attacks can be prevented

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Researchers believe they have discovered why more than one million Americans a year will, for no apparent reason, suddenly begin to tremble, break into a cold sweat and even fear they are about to die.

Recent studies indicate that a difference in blood flow between the right and left sides of a specific part of the brain may cause sudden episodes of panic, according to Dr. Eli Robins, a professor of psychiatry at the Washington University School of Medicine.

The condition, known as panic disorder, occurs in a region of the brain believed to control emotions, researchers said.

"It was like pouring gasoline on a fire," said Tom Tlapek, a victim of panic disorder who participated in a study at the university. "Your heart begins racing, and the fear you feel — the fear that you're going to die — only causes your heart to beat more wildly."

Robins and his colleagues said their finding on panic disorder may spur research into possible biochemical or biophysical causes of such illnesses as schizophrenia and depression.

Dr. Eric Reiman, a psychiatry instructor at the university, said panic disorder affects 2 percent to 5 percent of the population, with women stricken twice as often as men. The condition is characterized by recurrent attacks of anxiety in the absence of something frightening.

"A very strong sense of fear is mixed with sensations like lightheadedness, numbness and tingling in the hands or feet, a choking sensation or chest discomfort," Reiman said. "The heart races or pounds and there is often severe trembling and sweating."

The syndrome has been recognized for centuries under many names, including "soldier's heart." Doctors have offered a number of odd and interesting theories about its cause.

Badly adjusted soldiers' backpacks, various wounds and defective hearts were considered possible causes in the 19th century. Dr. Sigmund Freud, the founder of psychoanalysis, thought it was related to sexual frustration or masturbation.

To study the syndrome further, radiologists used a scanner to study the brains of panic victims.

After chemically inducing the symptoms in the subjects, doctors compared the results of the scans with brain images of people without the condition and found a startling difference.

"Data from the scan showed a marked difference in blood flow between the right and left sides in one area," said Dr. Marcus Raichle, professor of radiation sciences at the university's Mallinckrodt Institute of Radiology. "This asymmetry is located in a region of the brain believed to control emotions."

Given that knowledge, the doctors were able to prescribe a drug that has been effective in treating the disorder.

The disorder rarely leads to death, but it does cause other problems, the researchers said.

Tlapek, for instance, withdrew and became fearful of leaving his home. He also suffered from depression.

Graduate responsible for student loans

DEAR BRUCE WILLIAMS — I graduated from college 10 years ago and had some outstanding student loans.

I've moved several times, it's true, but I've never heard from the loan company. Now, they're telling me that I must pay the entire amount.

Isn't there some kind of statute of limitations here? After all, I would have paid them had they contacted me. — H.T., JACKSON, MISS.

DEAR H.T. — Come on, who are you kidding?

You knew you owed the money, and you knew to whom you owed that money. By your own account, you moved around a good deal and it's possible their letters did not catch up with you.

Morally and legally you owe them money. It's folks like you who make it difficult for the current college crop to borrow money. I encourage you to pay it.

DEAR BRUCE WILLIAMS — My wife and I have recently purchased our first home.

Although it's not our dream home, we certainly are proud to have acquired our own place at such a young age. I am 24 and my wife is 23, and we have no children.

Ever since we bought the house we've been bombarded by people trying to sell us mortgage insurance. We're not sure whether we can buy this insurance or what company to buy it from. The prices are amazingly different from company to company.

We hope you can shed some light on what is a very confusing situation for us. — L.K. HARTFORD, CONN.

DEAR L.K. — The likelihood is that most of the salespeople are trying to sell you reducing term insurance.

It works something like this: There is a base amount of insurance that stays exactly the same, say $5,000, and you'll have that forever as long as you pay the premiums. However, the balance of the insurance reduces as you pay off your mortgage.

For example, if you owe $75,000 on your house initially, should you drop dead tomorrow the policy would pay $75,000. But as time passes and you continue to pay the same amount of money every month, the amount of insurance reduces as you pay off the mortgage.

Do you need insurance? You mentioned that you are both young and have no children. If one of you were to pass away, do you want the other person to have the house free and clear? If the answer is yes, you might want to consider life insurance on both of your lives instead of mortgage-reduction insurance.

SMART MONEY

It might behoove you not to pay off the mortgage. For example, suppose your mortgage is written at 11 percent, a very favorable rate now.

Let's further assume that you could invest your money for 13 percent. Why in the world would you pay off an 11 percent obligation when you could get 13 percent by investing the money yourself?

You don't want to lock yourself into a circumstance where it's necessary to pay off the mortgage. You're buying insurance to see that the money is there if you or your wife wishes to pay off the mortgage.

Be aware that if the full amount is too difficult to carry, nothing is preventing you from carrying just a portion of it.

DEAR BRUCE WILLIAMS — A friend told me that I shouldn't buy a used car because I'd be buying somebody else's problems.

I must tell you, though, that my car problems began with my first new car, which I bought six months ago. I've had it back for repairs seven times. They can't seem to fix it.

What do you suggest? — S.I., CASPER, WYO.

DEAR S.I. — Your problem happens too often.

Happily, many states have been adopting what are called "lemon" laws to protect buyers from bad cars. If your state has no such law, you might want to lobby your state legislators for one.

The first line of attack is your dealer, where you purchased the car. If you fail to get satisfaction there, you should contact the local zone office of the auto company. The dealer can tell you how to make contact.

Unfortunately, many zone officers will swear that they've never heard of such a problem before when this is actually the seventh one they've handled that morning.

If you get nowhere at both the dealer and the zone level, I would urge you to consider a lawsuit against the company, the service manager, the salesman, the zone officer and anybody else you can name.

Make them all defendants; that will get their attention. They might even be willing to bargain with you to avoid an expensive court proceeding. Some attorneys specialize in such cases. If you're unable to locate one in your area, contact your county bar association.

The last thing you should do is lie down and play dead. The American public has been ignoring this problem for too long.

DEAR BRUCE WILLIAMS — I need your advice on what I can do with my life savings of $5,000.

How would you suggest I invest it to get the highest return possible? — D.B. TWIN FALLS, IDAHO.

DEAR D.B. — I think your investment should bring the highest return possible commensurate with safety and liquidity.

In other words, this is money that you can't afford to lose and should be able to get at instantly if you need it. Having set those conditions, the number of investment vehicles are somewhat limited.

I suggest you consider a traditional money market mutual fund, or a money market fund at your local bank. In the second case, be certain that there are no penalties for making early withdrawals.

In either case, your money is quite safe and absolutely liquid.

HOME IDEAS—A model shows off a jacuzzi bath to some of the 50,000 contractors and suppliers attending the 41st annual National Association of Home Builders convention in the Astrodome in Houston. It is the largest trade show in the country, according to the HAHB. (AP Laserphoto)

Realtor predicts good business in 1985

HOUSTON (AP) — Part of a tax reform proposed by the Treasury Department could hurt the future of the first-time home buyer market, the president of a realtors' group says.

The proposed legislation would eliminate the tax-exempt revenue mortgage bonds that have made home owning possible for many young buyers, David G. Roberts, president of the National Association of Realtors, said Sunday.

Roberts, a Mobile, Ala., real estate agent, joined some 50,000 home builders and suppliers this weekend at the 41st convention of the National Association of Home Builders in the Astrodome.

On Friday, the realtors association reported sales of existing single-family homes rose 5.5 percent in 1984, the highest level in four years.

Roberts attributed the increased sales to "improved housing affordability" resulting from lower interest rates on fixed-rate mortgages and a climb in the use of adjustable rate mortgages.

However, he said, "We are concerned about some of the things that are happening in the field of tax legislation."

For example, he said, the Treasury Department proposal would eliminate mortgage revenue bonds. Such bonds cut the costs of home ownership by 18 to 23 percent for a typical homebuyer, according to report by the home builders association.

"The first-time home buyer activity is so heavily dependent upon what happens in the mortgage revenue programs that are being sponsored by the various states," Roberts said. "If they don't destroy the mortgage revenue bond program, we expect the first-time home buyer program to be very, very strong in 1985."

Roberts said he expects the housing industry to remain healthy during the first six months of 1985, but declined to predict what will happen the rest of the year.

"This year we're looking for a very good year," Roberts said at a news conference. "But we don't know what the situation is going to be in '86 and '87 — probably not as much activity as in the first six months of '85."

However, he said, the health of the industry after the first half of this year will depend on interest rates and on the state of the federal budget.

"If there's a strong, sincere effort made toward the reaction of the federal deficit, this will do more to keep interest rates down and provide a more viable real estate market in this country than any other one thing," Roberts said.

Ranger: cracking West Virginia murder was satisfying

GEORGETOWN, Texas (AP) — Henry Lee Lucas has been linked to about 100 slayings across the United States, but solving the murder of a West Virginia policeman that some thought had killed himself was most satisfying to a Texas Ranger charged with helping solve the crimes.

"Of all the cases so far, this one stands out. This one makes you feel good," said Sgt. Bob Prince, a member of the three-man task force that charts Lucas involvement in mayhem.

Clemmie Curtis, a Huntington, W.Va. patrolman, was found shot to death on Aug. 3, 1976 on a lover's lane off Interstate 64.

Curtis, a 30-year-old father of two, was handcuffed and had been shot once in the chest with his .38-caliber service revolver, which was found lying between his legs.

A note, scrawled at an angle across an accident investigation form and addressed to his wife, was on the ground nearby.

The Austin American-Statesman reported Sunday that the note was short and chilling.

"Paula ... buy the house, then sell it ... move away ... kiss the girls for me ... I think he's going to kill me..."

For eight years, though some officers doubted it, Curtis' death was considered a well-planned suicide. The theory was that Curtis wrote the note to make it appear he died in the line of duty so his wife could collect his life insurance. The couple had been in the process of buying a house.

A county coroner said there was an 80 percent chance the death had been self-inflicted — a 20 percent chance it was homicide. The case was reopened in 1982, but the conclusion was the same.

But Lucas, who claims to have killed at least 360 people across the United States over a 10-year period, began talking last August about police officers he had killed in West Virginia and Kentucky.

At first, Prince, Williamson County Sheriff Jim Boutwell, and Texas Ranger Clayton Smith — members of the task force coordinating a national investigation into slayings Lucas claimed involvement in — could find no record of an unsolved killing of a police officer in West Virginia.

But when they added that Lucas claimed to have handcuffed the officer and shot him with his own gun, Curtis' "suicide" came to mind, and two West Virginia officers quickly got on a plane for Texas.

They brought with them pictures of Curtis and seven other Huntington police officers. Lucas immediately identified Curtis as the officer he had killed, told what kind of weapon the officer had, and drew a map of where Curtis' body was found, Huntington police detective Tom Bevins said.

Last week, Lucas flew to West Virginia, where he pleaded guilty to Curtis' murder and was sentenced to life in prison without the possibility of parole. He has been convicted of several other murders and has been sentenced to die for a Texas killing.

West Virginia officers say they now are 100 percent satisfied that Lucas and Ottis Toole, his frequent traveling companion, killed Curtis.

As members of the Lucas task force, Prince, Smith and Boutwell — with the help of a secretary — act as a clearinghouse for information. Investigators from 27 states have confirmed 207 homicides and 10 other felonies committed by Lucas and Toole, and Prince said the number could reach 500.

Lucas began a string of confessions after he was arrested in Montague County in North Texas in 1983.

More than 3,000 murder cases have been discussed with Lucas. About 600 officers have already talked with Lucas, and officers of 89 agencies in 29 states plus Canada have appointments to see him, officials say.

In the task force's small office in the Williamson County sheriff's office, the number of pins in a large U.S. map grows steadily. Each pin represents a killing claimed by Lucas or Toole or both together.

Iraq announces attack across border

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq announced today it has launched its first attack across the disputed border with Iran in two years, calling it a pre-emptive strike against Iranian forces in the southern desert sector.

An Iraqi military spokesman, reading a communique over the state radio, said the three-branched attack was launched "last evening and before dawn today."

"Our forces advanced along three axes in the southern sector and occupied the determined enemy targets," the spokesman said.

Iraq has said Iran was massing hundreds of thousands of troops in the marshy, southern area of the border for a major assault.

PAPAL COMMUNION—During an outdoor mass late Sunday night in Maracaibo, Venezuela. Pope John Paul II holds a wafer and a cup of wine as he offers communion to a few of the several hundred thousand people in attendance. (AP Laserphoto)

Pope speaks about fidelity, education, traditional values

MARACAIBO, Venezuela (AP) — Pope John Paul II, emphasizing discipline and fidelity to church teaching on his tour of Latin America, heads for the university town of Merida today after an overnight stop in this oil center.

Hundreds of people began arriving Sunday night in Merida, a town of 100,000 in the Andes highlands. Many planned to camp by the steep, red-carpeted altar set up for the pontiff's morning Mass.

The Vatican describes Merida, the home of the University of the Andes, as one of the most religious areas in Venezuela. It has been the seat of a bishop since 1778.

John Paul II also planned to attend a youth gathering tonight at a stadium in Caracas, the Venezuelan capital, and to meet with members of the Latin American Ecclesiastic Conference, which includes archbishops Arturo Rivera Damas of San Salvador, El Salvador, and Miguel Obando y Bravo of Managua, Nicaragua. The pontiff welcomed them during a Mass celebrated Sunday night.

John Paul has offered to mediate the Central American conflicts, and Obando y Bravo has held frequent talks with him about the tense church-state relations in Nicaragua and the four priests in the leftist government. The church recently suspended the four after they refused appeals to resign their posts.

More than 1 million people turned out for papal Masses on Sunday in Caracas and on a muggy evening in Maracaibo, whose offshore oil production has brought Venezuela one of the highest standards of living in South America.

Since arriving in this nation of 16 million people on Saturday to start a 12-day, four-nation tour, the pontiff has restated traditional teaching on family issues and told the country's Roman Catholic bishops to discipline theologians who deviate from church doctrine.

In a Mass on the theme of the family, celebrated near a poor Caracas neighborhood, the pope condemned contraception, abortion, euthanasia and divorce.

He said the "plague of divorce" ruins families and told the huge throng: "Remember, it is never legal to end a human life with abortion or euthanasia."

In Maracaibo, John Paul, the first pope ever to visit Venezuela, stressed the importance of Catholic education.

On the eve of his departure from the Vatican, the pontiff announced that an extraordinary meeting of the world's bishops would be held in Rome in November to examine the changes in the church in the 20 years since the Second Vatican Council.

John Paul gave an insight into his thinking on Sunday when, responding to the greeting of a rabbi at an ecumenical meeting in Caracas, he said, "Doctrine is not just on paper, but is an expression of faith, an inspiration of the spirit, a law to follow."

The pope, in a speech to bishops on Saturday night, set the tone for his tour of the region, where a number of priests and theologians have adopted Marxist theories in the struggle to help the poor. The pontiff warned against those who "disfigure the evangelical message, using it as the service of ideologies and political strategies in search of an illusory earthly liberation."

The pontiff also will travel to Ecuador, Peru and the Republic of Trinidad and Tobago.

Talks resume on resort border dispute

BEERSHEBA, Israel (AP) — Israeli and Egyptian delegations began a second round of talks today on the status of a beach resort entangled in a border dispute since 1982.

Israeli delegation sources said they doubted a deal could be wrapped up in the three days allotted for the talks in this Negev Desert city. If the two sides fail to reach agreement, the talks could shift to the Suez Canal city of Ismailia in Egypt.

The major stumbling block was over who would police Taba, a 250-acre stretch of beach on the Red Sea which is currently controlled by Israel's paramilitary border police.

Although the subjects were limited and technical, the talks signaled a resumption of the dialogue between Egypt and Israel since relations were frozen by Israel's June 1982 invasion of Lebanon. The only negotiation since then was a single unsuccessful attempt to resolve the Taba issue in March 1983.

Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, in a television interview, said: "We see in any meeting like this a positive event that should and can contribute to improving and deepening relations."

The Israeli delegation sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Israel proposed a plan to reduce the visibility of the border police, who are stationed outside Taba but patrol the area with jeeps and foot patrols.

Both sides agree that the 11-nation Multinational Force and Observers, the peacekeeping force deployed in the Sinai peninsula after Israel's withdrawal in 1982, should be sent into Taba. But they disagree on the role the force would play.

Jewish twins reenact 'death march' of 40 years ago

OSWIECIM, Poland (AP) — Four sets of Jewish twins who survived the cruel experiments of Dr. Josef Mengele returned to Auschwitz to recall the day 40 years ago when the Nazi concentration camp was liberated.

Many of the twins wept Sunday as they stood on the railway ramp, remembering it as the spot where Mengele, known as the "Angel of Death," separated them forever from their parents, sisters, brothers and grandparents.

The relatives were sent to die in gas chambers, while the twins were subjected to painful experiments as Mengele tried to further the "master" Aryan race promoted by Hitler.

Of 750 pairs of twins, only 180 children survived Mengele's medical torments.

In the weeks before Soviet troops arrived to free the prisoners, the Germans herded thousands out of the smaller camp at Birkenau, transferring them to the main camp two miles away at Auschwitz or to other concentration camps in Germany.

The Nazis attempted to destroy Birkenau to hide evidence of the camp. The Soviets arrived about midday on Jan. 27, 1945, and the Nazis fled, leaving several thousand emaciated prisoners at Auschwitz or marching on the road between the two centers.

On Sunday, the four sets of twins re-enacted the march, and snow fell on them as it did 40 years ago.

"Only half the people who began the march at Birkenau 40 years ago finished it," said Eva Kor, 50, of Terre Haute, Ind. "When we began in the middle of the night we could hear the explosions as the Nazis blew up the crematoria. It was snowing, very cold and they were shooting anyone who did not run fast enough."

For Mrs. Kor, Sunday was a time to draw close to the mother she never saw again.

"Mother, here I am with my sister and our children," she said, wiping tears from her eyes as she recalled the day in 1944 when she arrived with a transport of Hungarian Jews.

"We have finally come to say good-bye to you. We have never forgotten you, and we will never let the world forget what was here," said Mrs. Kor.

Two other marchers besides Mrs. Kor were from the United States.

Times: multiple errors led to Bhopal leak

NEW YORK (AP) — Inoperable safety systems, undertrained workers and inadequate warning sirens were among violations that led to the deaths of more than 2,000 people from a gas leak at Union Carbide Corp.'s plant in Bhopal, India. The New York Times reported today.

The Times said a seven-week investigation of the deadly Dec. 3 leak of methyl isocyanate gas revealed at least 10 procedural violations by Union Carbide and its Indian-run subsidiary.

Among the irregularities reported by The Times were:

- Employees who discovered a methyl isocyanate leak reported it to a supervisor, who was quoted by one worker as saying he would deal with it after his tea break. The supervisor said he was informed only of a water leak.
- In violation of plant procedures, a refrigeration unit designed to keep the chemical cool and inhibit reactions was shut down by managers several months before the accident, employees said.
- There were no effective public warnings of the disaster. The alarm used the night of the accident was similar or identical to alarms sounded as many as 20 times a week for practice drills and other non-urgent activities.
- Training levels and experience requirements for plant workers were cut back, in part for budgetary reasons.
- One of the three safety systems at the plant had been inoperable for several days and a second was taken out of service for maintenance several weeks earlier.

Union Carbide told The Times it would be several weeks before its team of investigators finished their inquiry into the accident.

"Anyone who attempts to state what caused the accident would be only speculating unless he has more facts than we have and has done more analysis, tests and experiments than we have," the company said in a statement.

The newspaper cited company documents and interviews with present and former Union Carbide employees and chemical experts in its report. It said the company declined to make top executives or scientific experts available, but released previously unpublicized documents in response to questions.

WARNING TO THE CITIZENS OF PAMPA

On January 16, 1985, Judge Brenda Murray of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission issued a recommendation which will be approved or disapproved by the Commissioners of FERC.

Please be aware that should this recommendation be approved, the economic consequences to the City of Pampa will be devastating.

How could something like this happen, you ask yourselves? One of the main reasons is due to the fact that The Texas Railroad Commission has not become involved. They have refused to defend the rights of The State of Texas. Again we have seen the Federal Bureaucrats trample over our state rights.

It's not too late to head off this disaster. What can you do? Please write one or all of the following Texas Railroad Commissioners and let them know your feelings. They have been elected to defend the rights of The State of Texas and you expect them to do their job. Their name and address is:

Several meaningful relationships will be established in the year ahead. These associations will not be of a fleeting nature. They'll enrich your life for many years to come.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) The rewards may start coming your way today from something long overdue. Your past effort entitles you to what you'll receive. Major changes are in store for Aquarians in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your wisdom, as well as your dependability, will be apparent to friends who need your help today. Your gestures will put them firmly in your corner.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Much can be accomplished in a joint venture today if you work from behind the scenes. The uninformed do not have to know your business.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) It will be to your advantage today to team up with a strong ally in a venture of mutual interest. Collective efforts produce the best results.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Personal ambitions can be furthered today if you work with familiar methods and procedures. Don't attempt any shortcuts.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Business and pleasure blend well today. Mingle socially with people whose cooperation is essential to your present needs.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Go ahead and make those long-considered changes you believe will benefit your family. The results should please all concerned.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A meeting of the minds is possible today with someone who, up until now, has been unreasonable. Take advantage of this opportunity to restate your case.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your best chances for personal gains today will come from situations where you put your talents and abilities at the disposal of others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) A wise and loving friend may be instrumental today in helping you resolve a social problem you haven't been able to rectify yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You possess a profound sense of duty today with no thoughts of personal gratification. These qualities will be respected by people you deal with.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Take a break from your regular routines today and do something fun and different. However, be sure to include old friends.

The No. 2 ranked Southern Methodist Mustangs ran into "Buzzsaw Bubba" in Lubbock to suffer their first Southwest Conference basketball loss but the Texas Aggies presented them with a big present just hours later.

SMU retained the SWC leadership by a game with a 6-1 ledger but the Aggies, Houston and Texas Tech are all tied for second just a game out.

SMU lost 64-63 to Texas Tech Saturday night as Bubba Jennings hit 13 of 18 shots and scored 26 points.

But on a regionally televised Sunday game from College Station, Texas A&M tripped the defending champion Cougars 71-69 behind Don Marbury's 20 points. The red-hot Aggies have now won their last four SWC games.

Alvin Franklin had 31 points for Houston. Houston and SMU collide on Wednesday night in Dallas in the biggest game of the upcoming week.

In non-conference game Sunday, Arkansas fell 54-52 to Virginia. Arkansas is 4-3 in conference play followed by Texas 3-5, TCU 2-5, and Rice and Baylor 1-6.

TCU whipped Texas 53-45 and Baylor won its first league game with a 65-56 victory over Rice in Houston.

SMU blew a chance to move higher in The Associated Press poll because No. 1 ranked Georgetown was bumped off by St. John's, also by a point.

It was SMU's first loss on the mainland after having fallen to Chaminade in Hawaii on Christmas Day.

"This is probably the biggest win we've had," said

Tech Coach Gerald Myers. "On the other hand it's too bad SMU wasn't playing someone else so I could pull for them."

"With Georgetown getting beat they might have had a chance to be No. 1. They've done a lot for our conference and have been great representatives for the SWC. I'm sure they'll still be a force to reckon with this season."

Texas Tech's Tony Benford 10-foot baseline jumper with three seconds left was the Pony killer. SMU Coach Dave Bliss was philosophical about the loss.

"It's difficult to go undefeated on the road and have everything go your way," said Bliss. "We had our chances and missed some free throws at the end. We had our opportunities."

The Mustangs had to play the final 6:48 without starting center Jon Koncak who fouled out with only six points.

It was only SMU's second loss of the season with 16 victories.

"It was a great win against a super team," said Jennings. "This is the kind of win you think about when you first start playing basketball. I was hot and some of the shots I took weren't that good but they went in."

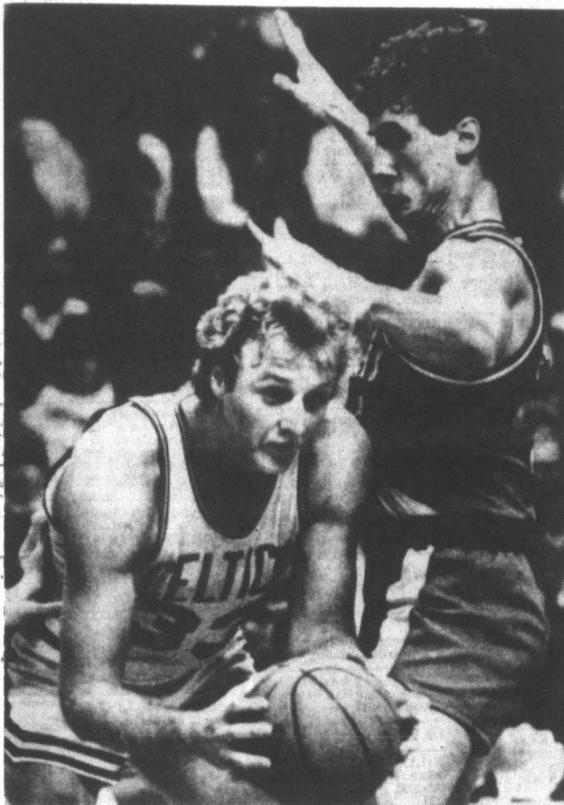

The TCU-Tech game has been moved to Tuesday night this week for television purposes.

In other Wednesday night action, Texas A&M is at Rice and Arkansas is at Baylor.

On Friday, Texas A&M is at Arkansas and TCU is at Houston.

Tech is at Texas on Saturday.

On Sunday, Rice is at SMU, Houston hosts Illinois and Arkansas is at Georgetown.

Bird sneaks past Paxson

Gastineau could have danced all day

HONOLULU (AP) — Mark Gastineau's "Sack Dance" was outlawed by National Football League rulesmakers this season. His ability to get to quarterbacks continues undiminished.

The New York Jets' defensive end, who led the NFL with 22 sacks in the regular season, added four more Sunday as the American Conference beat the National Conference 22-14 in the annual Pro Bowl game.

He also dumped the Los Angeles Rams' Eric Dickerson in the end zone for a safety that produced the first score of the game with 4:10 left in a first half that was so dominated by defense it appeared it might end in a scoreless tie.

"In a game like this, with only one week's preparation, the defense will have that advantage," Gastineau said after the game. "That was obvious with the number of sacks today."

The number of sacks, in fact, was 17, a Pro Bowl record for the two teams. Nine were by the AFC, eight by the NFC, for which Chicago's Richard Dent played Gastineau by dumping AFC quarterbacks three times.

Overall, 19 of the AFC's 22 points were set up the defense or special teams, including the play that turned the game around, an 83-yard run with a Neil Lomax fumble by Kansas City defensive end Art Still that turned a 14-12 AFC deficit into a 19-14 lead with 5:24 left in the game.

The fumble resulted from the kind of play common to all-star contests.

On a third down and three from the AFC 15, Lomax tried to hand off to Dickerson. But the two collided, the ball came loose and Still fell on it. He was pushed to his feet by Seattle's Joe Nash and the Los Angeles Raiders' Rod Martin.

Pampa Optimist team wins Jim Foran cage tourney

AMARILLO—The Pampa Optimist Club team became the first team from Pampa to win the annual Jim Foran Basketball Tournament in Amarillo, claiming the title with an overtime victory over the weekend.

The Pampa team downed Wolfen, 39-32, in the championship game after regulation play ended in a 32-32 deadlock.

Brad Cryer was top scorer for Pampa with 16 points, followed by Jayson Williams with 10 and Rodney Brown with seven.

It was the second victory for Pampa over Wolfen in the double-elimination. Pampa downed Wolfen 39-28 in the semifinals, with Quincy Williams scoring 15, Rodney Brown 14 and Jayson Williams 10. Pampa had opened the tournament by thrashing River Road 56-6. Brown was high scorer in that game with 18; Colby Harris hit 10, Quincy Williams 8 and Jayson Williams 7.

In the second round of the tournament, Pampa cruised past Canyon 36-16, with Quincy Williams scoring 10, Brown 8, Jayson Williams 7 and Larry Reed 5.

Team members other than those already mentioned included Cedric Welbon, Junior Busby, Chris Howard, Craig Stevens and Justin Cross. Coaches were Wayne Barkley, James Lee and Artis Betts.

Bird's buzzer basket makes K.C. an all-star

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Larry Bird, who put himself in the National Basketball Association All-Star game with his all-around excellence this season, gave K.C. Jones a ticket to Indianapolis with one stroke of brilliance.

The coach of the Eastern Conference in the All-Star game in Indianapolis Feb. 10 is determined by which team has the best record after games of Jan. 27. Before Boston met Portland Sunday, both the Celtics and idle Philadelphia were 35-8.

With three seconds to go, Portland took a 127-126 lead on a basket by Clyde Drexler. But Bird connected on a basket from deep in the corner as the final buzzer sounded, giving him 48 points and the Celtics a 128-127 triumph.

A loss by the Celtics would have sent 76ers Coach Billy Cunningham to the All-Star game, but Bird's basket means Jones will go instead.

In the only other NBA games, Detroit tripped Washington 115-105 and Milwaukee beat San Antonio 106-93.

Bird hit 17 of 28 field-goal attempts, including a pair of three-point bombs, and all 12 free throws in equalling his scoring high for the season. He also grabbed 10 rebounds.

Robert Parish added 30 points for the Celtics, who are now 20-2 at home and 31-0 in games that they've led after three periods.

The Trail Blazers, who got 25 points from Jim Paxson, 21 from Kiki Vandeweghe, 20 from Mychal Thompson and 19 from Drexler, trailed by seven points with less than four minutes remaining.

But Drexler's 15-footer and free throw climaxed a rally that put Portland ahead 125-124. A layup by Bird with seven seconds remaining preceded Drexler's go-ahead shot with three seconds left.

Pistons 115, Bullets 105

Detroit won its eighth straight game as Bill Laimbeer had 27 points and 16 rebounds and John Long added 21 points against Washington.

The Pistons, after leading by seven points at the half, started the third quarter with a 16-7 streak to take a comfortable 80-63 lead.

Jeff Malone, who scored 12 of his game-high 32 points in the period, helped the Bullets cut the deficit to 90-78 going into the final period, but Washington could get no closer than 10 points the rest of the way.

Bucks 106, Spurs 93 Milwaukee also won its eighth straight as Terry Cummings scored 30 points, seven of them in a 26-8 run at the end of the first half that carried the Bucks past San Antonio.

The Central Division-leading Bucks hit 59 percent from the field in the second quarter while outscoring the Spurs 30-23 in the period for a 65-54 halftime lead.

Mike Mitchell led all scorers with 35 points for San Antonio.

GOLF
LOS ANGELES (AP)—Lanny Wadkins fired a closing 7-under 64 to win the Los Angeles Open Golf Tournament by seven shots Sunday.

It was his second tour victory in three weeks and his $72,000 top prize pushed his winnings to $172,350.

DEERFIELD BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Hollis Stacy's 20-foot birdie putt on the final hole broke a three-way tie and gave her the title in the $200,000 Mazda Classic Sunday.

Ayako Okamoto failed to force a playoff when her 20-foot putt on the 18th hole rimmed the cup and stopped three inches away. Stacy won $30,000, finishing with a 67 for the day and an 8-under 72 hole total of 280.

TENNIS
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Top-seeded John McEnroe beat the "Upset Kid," Miloslav Mecir of Czechoslovakia, in straight sets Sunday, 6-3, 7-6 (7-5), 6-1, to win the $300,000 U.S. Pro Indoor Tennis Championship for the fourth straight year.

McEnroe, 25, earned the $54,000 first prize while the 20-year-old Mecir took home $27,000 from the 24th annual tournament. The young Czech's earnings for this tournament were more than half of the $53,897 he won last year.

KEY BISCAIYNE, Fla. (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd beat Martina Navratilova 6-2, 6-4 in the final of the Virginia Slims of Florida women's tennis tournament Sunday, ending more than two years of frustrating losses against the top-seeded player.

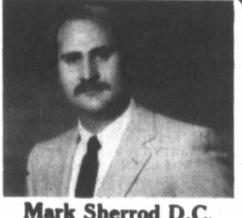

Navratilova, ranked No. 1 in the world, had beaten No. 2-ranked Lloyd 13 consecutive times

Pampa-Borger game tickets to be sold

Tickets for the second clash between the Borger and Pampa basketball team, scheduled for Tuesday, Feb. 5, will go on sale at 8 a.m. Wednesday at the athletic office, Coach Garland Nichols announced.

Coach Nichols said Pampa had to provide 500 tickets for Borger and there won't be many left. He said a few reserved seats are available at $2.50 each and a few general admission tickets will be sold at $2 each.

The Democrats are coming to town

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)— Now that the Republicans have finished the inaugural parties marking the start of President Reagan's second term, it's the Democrats' turn to come to town. But their annual meeting is likely to look more like a death watch than a celebration.

The three-day meeting of the Democratic National Committee opens Wednesday and there is certain to be a lot of brave talk about how the party picked up two Senate seats and retained control of the House despite President Reagan's landslide victory last November.

Some brave souls might even predict the Democrats are a good bet to regain control of the Senate in 1986 when 22 Republican seats will be contested compared to only 12 now held by Democrats. And the historic pattern is for the out-of-power party to make strong gains in congressional elections during a president's second term.

But the fact is Democratic

control of the Senate may prove harder to attain than the party's optimists are ready to admit. Not only are the Democrats down, they may have serious problems bouncing back very soon.

The Democrats will elect a new chairman on Friday in a race that has generated little excitement, even in this slow political season.

The meeting also will see the reappearance of the Rev. Jesse Jackson in party affairs. He is expected to attend a meeting of the black caucus and might become involved in debates over the makeup of the commission that will examine the rules that governed the campaign for the 1984 presidential nomination.

More important than the fight over the chairmanship or the rules may be how the party deals with the substantive issues of the next two years.

"We're not going to in any way thwart the will of the American people," House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said last week.

NOUMEA. New Caledonia (AP) — A state of emergency has been reimposed in this troubled French Pacific territory after a three-day curfew, although the curfew accompanying it was shortened by two hours.

The state of emergency, which by law can last until June 30, went into effect at noon Sunday after High Commissioner Edgard Pisani signed an order re-establishing it.

A state of emergency lasting 12 days was announced Jan. 12 following violence between native Melanesians seeking independence and European settlers who want the territory to remain French. Twenty people have been killed since mid-November.

The French Parliament

voted Friday to extend the state of emergency as a means of restoring normal economic activity. However, owners of restaurants, the Noumea casino and other businesses protested the 9 p.m. curfew time. The new order sets the nightly curfew at 11 p.m. until 5 a.m.

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — An Australian state government has banned chocolate imports from New Zealand to protest New Zealand's refusal to admit U.S. nuclear-powered or nuclear-armed warships into its waters.

"I don't expect our action will make the New Zealand government change its mind but at least it will highlight their naive anti-nuclear policies," Queensland state's premier, Joh Bjelke-Petersen, said Sunday after the state impounded a shipment of New Zealand chocolates.

"It's no good running around saying don't use nuclear weapons and then pleading with an attacker. You have to be strong," the premier said.

The New Zealand government banned nuclear-powered and nuclear-armed vessels in July, saying they made the country a nuclear target. The United States has said the ban could wreck the ANZUS alliance linking the two nations and Australia.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Mayor William H. Hudnut, a Presbyterian minister, and a private foundation have invited four Protestant denominations to move their headquarters to Indianapolis, reportedly offering millions of dollars.

Hudnut said Friday that city officials and the Lilly Endowment Inc. have talked with The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Wallace says he's getting older and "will begin to back off," which is one reason Diane Sawyer signed on to CBS' "60 Minutes" last year, but Ms. Sawyer says Wallace "can't leave."
"I'm going to have my teeth in his ankles to prevent him from going out the door," she says in an interview with Playboy magazine. Wallace, Morley Safer, Ed Bradley and Harry Reasoner also discussed the highly rated new show in the magazine's March issue.

The 66-year-old Wallace, who has signed a new contract with the network for a reported $1 million, told Playboy he is "getting a little older and (I) don't travel the way I used to."
"What will happen, and has been happening is that I will begin to back off. That's one of the reasons Sawyer is aboard."

Key congressman vows to fight Reagan farm policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The man the Reagan administration will have to reckon with in its effort to pass controversial farm legislation this year says the president's proposals are ill-timed, and he will fight them.

Instead of the radical surgery the administration has proposed as a way to bring farm program costs under control, American agriculture needs "an emergency blood transfusion," says House Agriculture Committee Chairman Kika de la Garza, D-Texas.

"This is not the time for a radical philosophical changeover," said de la Garza, interviewed last week about the administration's plans for a leaner, more "market-oriented" federal farm policy.

"All I've heard from the administration is, 'You've got to reduce the costs,'" de la Garza said. "And then they coin this phrase of 'market-oriented' program, but there is no market." The Reagan plan is to eliminate, over a period of three to five years, most of the price-support and production-controlling mechanisms that have been the backbone of U.S. farm policy for decades.

Such action, the thinking goes, will remove farmers' incentives to overproduce — the phenomenon that has caused huge price-depressing stockpiles to accumulate — and will bring prices that will be more attractive on the world market.

While the administration idea is to rely more heavily on world markets as a source of U.S. farm income, export markets remain depressed because of other forces, including a strong dollar and continuing world recession.

Because of that, and because of low prices and declining land values at home, farmers in many parts of the country are in their worst financial shape since the Depression.

De la Garza said he recognizes the budget pressures on Congress, and expects his colleagues to go along with some cuts.

"I would put a hold on for a year or 18 months and see where we are," de la Garza said, adding that abolition of price supports in the current climate would cause "utter chaos."

"That they mention agriculture first (for cuts) when commodity programs are 1 percent of the federal budget — we have a cheap food policy," he said.

"I could shout it from the top of the Capitol dome and nobody would listen. We in agriculture have been reducing expenditures. We haven't gotten headlines. We've done it quietly."

He said current farm programs do not need to be fundamentally changed.

"We set the loan rate and the target price. We can't control the weather, we can't control insects, we can't control whether it freezes in Florida or South Texas, and that throws the whole thing out of kilter."

De la Garza is the most strategically important member of Congress so far to express skepticism about the administration plans.

Many farmers face harvest of despair, agony this year

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — This year could be a harvest of despair for Taylor County farmer Jan Burkhard and thousands like him — if there's a harvest at all.

With spring planting just a few months away, Burkhard says he may not be able to borrow money for seed on his 600-acre corn and soybean farm in southwestern Iowa.

"I have $65,000 worth of land payments I won't be able to make, about $70,000 is owed to the bank and I have a $10,000 John Deere payment to make," said Burkhard, 37, who's been farming since 1971.

Thousands of farmers in Iowa and throughout the Farm Belt, squeezed by high interest rates and low commodity prices, face similar problems.

Neil Harl, an economist at Iowa State University, estimates that 10 to 15 percent of the state's 115,000 farmers will be unable to borrow money for spring planting in the next 60 to 70 days.

Burkhard says he needs to borrow at least $90,000 to get his crop in the ground, including $12,000 for seed.

Last year, with too much rain in the spring and none in the summer, his crop barely covered his expenses at harvest time.

His debt now is $730,000, including the money he borrowed to buy 450 acres of land in 1976, at $800 per acre, and another 130 acres in 1980 for $900 an acre. Today, with Iowa land values declining sharply, he says his farm is worth no more than $325 an acre.

"The only thing I can hope for is to try and sit down with the people I owe money to and say I can't make the payments, but I'll try to spread them out," he said.

His wife is working as a registered nurse. "Otherwise we wouldn't be eating now," Burkhard said.

This month, about 10,000 farmers gathered at the Minnesota state capitol in St. Paul, demanding a moratorium on farm and small business foreclosures. About 200 farmers protested at the Chicago Board of Trade's Mercantile Exchange, and 5,000 farmers crowded the Sioux City auditorium to demonstrate against high interest rates and low commodity prices.

"The scope of the problem is much broader than farms," Harl said. "Today it threatens to engulf the entire rural community."

Iowa Banking Superintendent Tom Huston said 133 state banks have "more than the usual problems." Three failed last year and Iowa has 48 problem banks on the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. list, compared to two in 1980, he said.

"There are banks today in the state that are doing all they can to get rid of farmer customers," said Huston. "But there are others who are too lenient and face problems because of it."

"But most are in the middle and they're trying ... to help the farmer through difficult financial times."
