Modesta Good To Be Queen Of Carnival

Court To Be Composed Of Twelve Popular High School Girls

Modesta Good was elected queen of the Museum Carnival in a very exciting popularity race at the high school over the past week-end and Monday. Miss Good will preside over the evening activities of the carnival accompanied by her court of honor. The maids composing this court have been selected from the four classes of high school. They are: Senior: Hazel Smith, Madeline Black, Mary Settles and Jane Tinsley; Junior: Eva Mae O'Neal, Eva Todd and Dorothy Rockhold; sophomore: Lula Ashley, Hattie Bell Mullins and Bobby Gordon; freshman, Bonnie Miller and Minnie Belle Williamson. A special program has been arranged in the queen's honor with special dances. This will take the place of the big parade originally scheduled and promises to be one of the most popular features of the whole day's program. Further announcements will be made from day to day concerning the evening and afternoon programs. The carnival will be held Saturday in the Deats' Storage Garage.

Diplomatic Shake-Ups

A great shake-up in our diplomatic services occurs every four or eight years, according to the outcome of our presidential election. Election of a new president, especially if he belongs to a political party different from that of his predecessor, is the signal for a clean sweep in the diplomatic corps among the higher-ups. We have few "career" men for that reason, except among the secretaries and minor embassy attaches. France reports a great shake-up in her diplomatic service, but whereas our custom calls for a clean sweep, France handles it by shifting ambassadors from country to country. Thus Paul Claudel the poet-ambassador to Washington, is transferred from Washington to Brussels. To Washington comes a personal friend of President Roosevelt, Andre LaFevre de la Boulaye, who has been an assistant director in the foreign ministry at Paris. From Brussels, France transfers Charles Corbin to London, where a vacancy exists owing to the retirement of Count Francois Robert de Jean. By this system, France retains the services of experienced men, men long trained in the diplomatic service of the republic. The United States follows a haphazard system of rewarding political support with important diplomatic posts, with the result that we seldom have experienced diplomats in highly important posts. Perhaps that is why American diplomats are so often beaten in games of wit by their European colleagues.

Speculating With Depositors' Funds Must Stop Among Bankers, Those Watching Public Sentiment Declare

By RAYMOND CLAPPER United Press Staff Correspondent (Copyright, 1933, by United Press) WASHINGTON, (UP)—Speculating with funds of depositors must be stamped out of the banking business, in the opinion of those now considering bank reforms as a result of the recent crisis. This view was strengthened by recent disclosures of what insiders did in the National City Bank and its affiliated investment selling organization. President Roosevelt gave further momentum to it in his inaugural address when he declared speculation with depositors' money must stop. The necessity for action in this direction will increase further if the present tendency toward strong nationalized banking and absorption of state banks into the federal system continues. Such a centralizing tendency would throw the nation's banking activities more and more into the hands of big city banks, making more costly than ever losses and unsuccessful speculation such as has been seen in recent years. The most powerful blow to all this has been struck by one of the high priests of high finance, Winthrop W. Aldrich, head of Chase National Bank and a brother-in-law of John D. Rockefeller, Jr. More emphatically than most congressional critics of speculating bankers, Aldrich declared recently that banks "holding depositors' funds—the regular commercial bank—must divest themselves of stock market operations, stock and bond selling activities and the other speculative enterprises which have been responsible for heavy losses. This is one of the objects of the Glass banking bill. President Roosevelt is understood to be thoroughly in favor of prompt action on this point. Many big banks have maintained subsidiaries, with identical officers, and separated only by the technical legal hair-line required by law. They have made huge industrial or foreign loans and then, seeing them turning bad, have sold stock and "balled out the bank." Depositors went to the bank to put their money in safe hands, trusting to their banker to advise them wisely as to safe investments. Double Role But the banker in some cases was playing a double role, he was taking their money and presumably advising them as to sound investments. At the same time he was acting as a stock promoter, committed to selling as much stock as he could in issues sponsored by his bank. He was serving two masters and as it has frequently turned out, the depositor was served last. Sentiment is growing rapidly for rigid laws which will compel bankers to divide into two classes—"The commercial bankers" who accept deposits and make their money by reinvesting the money safely as trustees for their depositors, and the "investment bankers" who are frankly sellers of stocks and bonds. The former would then be clearly trustees for depositors. The latter would be simply merchants.

"On receiving word of the attack we went to the aid of the train. There were 31 of us. We had one cannon. "We routed the band. Our only casualties were a few mules. "A few days later, another train, owned by Sidro Armijo, was attacked by 260 Indians. Before we got to the place they had killed the entire outfit. We found 18 dead men. CHAPTER XIII

Janet mounted the top step. "What's the excitement?" she asked.

Mollie's yellow hair lay in gleaming, newly marcelled waves. She pulled the faded blue silk negligee more closely about her and said, "Come on into my room and I'll tell you. Gee, I'm glad you got here! I called the office but they said you were out. I've been listening for you for the last half hour."

Even before they were inside the room Janet had a swift presentiment of what was to come. She would have drawn back but that seemed impossible. Mollie's room, reflecting the owner's taste in decoration, always had a look of disorder. There were dolls with inlaid faces and wide, brightly colored taffeta skirts lolling in chairs and on theavenport. There were ruffled and lace-trimmed bonnet pillows in profusion, a clutter of ash trays, candy boxes and magazines over the tables. Pictures crowded the walls—some of them hanging crookedly. Today the impression of confusion was increased by dresser drawers pulled out, their contents spilling over the edges. There were garments draped on chairs and on the floor. A bright green silk frock was spread out on the bed and a pair of green kid slippers perched on top of the radio.

Mollie shut the door behind her and turned. There was a sort of suppressed eagerness about her. "Listen, honey," she began. "I want you to do something for me. Will you?"

"Let's hear what it is."

"It's Al, the boy friend," Mollie went on rather irrelevantly. "I've got a date with him. Not just an ordinary date."

"And you want to borrow something? Why, of course!"

The other girl shook her head. "No," she said. "It's not that. You see, Al has a friend in town for the pharmacists' convention. They're meeting here today and tomorrow. Al's on the road, you know. She named a company manufacturing drugs and said that was the firm he worked for. "This other fellow—Frank Mullin is his name—is from Spruce City. He's a customer of Al's and an awfully nice fellow. Well, when Al found out he was coming for the convention he wanted to show Frank a good time. So I called Helen ramer and the four of us are going out together. But this morning Helen fell down some steps and sprained her ankle. Can't get out of a chair for a week! So I tried to get another girl but everyone I knew was tied up with something or other. Then I thought of you and tried to telephone. Janet's premonition had been correct. Mollie wanted her to take the spend it. Janet would be sure to like him.

Mollie was still talking as Janet hurried to her own room. It was nearly six. Perhaps the fact that there was no little time was partly responsible for the flush in Janet's cheeks. Perhaps it was the look of those unexpected words. "Mourning over a two-timer," was she? She'd show Mollie Lambert! She'd show the whole world!

She threw off her clothes and slipped into a bathrobe. Ten minutes later she was back from a quick tubbing, getting into fresh underthings, stockings and slippers. There was only one dress in Janet's wardrobe that was in the least "partied"—a thin blue crepe with a draped neckline and brief sleeves. She had bought it late last summer at a sale price but it was a flattering shade. Janet had a little blue hat to go with it.

She stood before the mirror and with vigorous, aggressive dabs added rouge to her cheeks. Oh, yes, she'd show them how much she cared for Rolf Carlyle! Something Rolf had said came back to her. "I like to have a good time and you don't care about that sort of thing."

"But I'm going to have a good time!" Janet assured herself firmly. "I'll show Mollie!"

What she really meant was "I'll show Rolf!" but she didn't say that. She dashed on powder and touched her eyelids with cream to make them glisten. Then she made her lips into a bright, crimson bow. The tiny blue hat went on at a jaunty angle. Yes, the hat was becoming. Janet was fluffing her curls below the hat when there was a knock at the door.

It was Mollie, a vision of gold and bright enamel. "I'm ready," Janet told her over her shoulder. "Just as soon as I get my coat now—" She disappeared into the clothes closet and was back with the coat. It was the shabby black coat she had worn daily in the office for two years.

Mollie came into the room. Over one arm was something black. "Look," she said. "I thought maybe you'd like to wear my new spring coat. I bought it Saturday but I think my old green one is better with this green dress. It'll be a little large but you can sort of wrap it around you."

"Oh, Mollie—not your new coat!" It was a smart black wool with wide hands of fox on the collar.

Tailor-Made Saddles Demanded By Men Riding Southwest Ranges

By VERNON A. MOORE, United Press Staff Correspondent, FORT WORTH, (UP)—Tailor-made saddles, like shoes and clothes made to order, is the latest fashion note for the man who rides through western meadow thickets and hills in search of straying ducks.

Cowboys want their saddles to fit snug and tight like the rumble seat of an automobile. A. B. Eddleman, maker of saddles since 1855, has found.

"Every man has his own ideas about how he wants to ride," explained Eddleman, who is also mayor of Graham, Tex., when he's not busy fashioning a form-fitting saddle for some chunky cowboy.

"Years ago when cowboys rode over rough country, they wanted roomy comfortable saddles and narrow stirrups that fitted against their heels. Now they do a lot of riding on the road. They want a snug-fitting saddle and a broad two-inch stirrup that fits the ball of the foot."

Eddleman's saddles are made of the toughest materials he can find—sufficient to hold up beneath the weight of a falling horse or the crushing wheel of a chuck wagon. He has found that even the most simply, plug-ugly, hard working men from the cowpans want ornament, lots of it, on their riding equipment. Some saddles cost as much as the horses beneath.

Graham's mayor pointed to one $105 model with a concave cantle or back, part of his exhibit at the Southwestern Exposition and Fair show here. The saddle leather was liberally covered with an ornate leaf design. Eight days of constant labor were required to fashion it.

Ten years ago the same saddle would have sold for about $100, Eddleman explained it thus:

When the farmer turned out the old gray mare, hung up the harness, and drove a tractor or automobile in the barn several years ago leather tanners hiked their prices. The slump in harness sales cut down profits. They had to maintain their tanneries by increasing the price of the leather they could sell.

But that episode was only temporary, Eddleman believes.

The farmer is out looking for the gray mare now. He has learned he can no longer grow food, sell it, and buy gasoline. The cowboy has taken his horse out of the corral. He has found you can't rope a calf or cut out a steer from the rumble seat of a fiver.

The Eddleman Brothers Saddleery has sold more saddles in the last eight months than during the previous four years. Saddles, for-fitting, are coming back.

Side-saddles? Eddleman smiled. He did remember seeing a few his neighbors took on of their barn lots for a county fair sometime ago. But he hasn't sold a side-saddle in 25 years. Why? They were unmodest.

"It's a lot more modest for a woman to ride astride. Why when a woman sat on one of those old saddles, the wind would blow, and well..."

Eddleman makes ladies saddles, with quilted seats as comfortable as the living room divan.

now about the business cut. That is especially true of men and women in the street who do not know the technical difficulties ahead. They are confident Mr. Roosevelt can fight his way out. A different atmosphere is noted throughout the business district. Department stores are calling back their help. Sales are improving.

From the inside it looks like a long hard pull. Measures already taken are only a beginning. A vast amount of executive and legislative work remains to be done before industrial wheels start turning at anything like their old-time pace.

The government experts will tell you privately their estimates of future business are hardly worth anything. They are based on cold prospects for steel, the railroads, automobiles and farmers from a statistical standpoint. These are cold indeed.

All that can be changed by a new public psychology. Meanwhile, hopefully optimistic caution seems to be in order.

Arrived from a tax on race track gambling. The bill provided that a portion of the revenue be allotted to the school fund. Graves declared the bill would be a "pitfall for the weak" and that it would lead to untold trouble and misery. He criticized Waggoner's interest in the bill.

No Possible Good

"There is not a single food feature about the bill," Graves stated. "It never had any good features and never will. It will corrupt the morals of every boy and girl in Texas. If it is such a good idea to repeal the statute against gambling on horse races, why not repeal all the gambling statutes? If it is passed it will be an evil as long as it remains on the statute books."

The purported activities of "political preachers" was scored by Representatives T. H. McGregor of Austin and John M. Mathis, Sr., of Houston.

Representative A. B. Tarwater of Plainview, leader of the agricultural bloc, denounced the bill. Tarwater said sponsors had misrepresented the benefits that would be derived by the farmers from the development of racing in Texas and that it was a subterfuge to hold out the hope of increased agricultural prosperity because of its provisions.

Medical Congress In Dallas Gets Greetings From Pres. Roosevelt

DALLAS—Leading medical authorities of two continents were gathering in Dallas for the fourth annual congress of the Pan-American Medical association, the opening sessions of which were held Tuesday. Dr. John O. McReynolds, president of the association, is in charge. A message of greeting from President Franklin D. Roosevelt was received by Dr. McReynolds during the day. It read: "I extend to you and your fellow members of the Pan-American government cordial greetings on this occasion of the opening of your fourth congress, the first to be held in an English-speaking nation. Deeply interested in the medical fraternity of the United States of America is deeply interested in the accomplishments of this meeting which means so much to the health and welfare of the human race, to say nothing of promotion of friendly relations and mutual understanding between the United States and its sister republics of Latin America. I am confident that you will find a most hearty welcome by the American medical profession and an earnest desire to cooperate with you in every way in furthering the high objects of the congress. I wish the members of the fourth congress of the Pan-American Medical association every success in their great undertaking."

Stock Market—

Brokers were amazed at the rush of customers who open new accounts with cash on re-opening, day. Apparently a good many of the holders chose this method of getting rid of their load instead of going shamefacedly back to the banks. Nearly all such customers felt bullish.

Another interesting feature of the re-opening market was the almost complete absence of pool manipulation. Senatorial bloodhounds are sniffing around and the professionals decided that this was no time to be performing sleight-of-hand tricks. The only important exception was a group which included a well-known Democratic financier, who stood by to give first aid in case the market developed sagging tendencies. They were as surprised as any layman at the breadth and speed of the rise and at last reports were standing by to help put on the brakes if needed.

Competition—

Fairly large banks near New York are getting sore at the big city because they believe suburban depositors are carrying their money from the neighborhood banks to the big town. They say: "These New York bankers have always been hogs." They think Roosevelt now too many New York bankers and not enough in New Jersey or Connecticut.

Sidelights—

Jus before the holiday Bank of United States stockholders were besought by their protective committee to shell out money for the common good. Checks were made payable to the depository, Harriman Nation Bank (now closed). The rush to de-hoard gold boomed the armored truck business. They were harder to get than a taxi on a wet night in the opera. An Equita Building elevator quiet under one de-hoarder's load. It weighed 3,700 pounds and was worth over $900,000.

FINAL PASSAGE—

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1) adopting 3.2 per cent as the alcoholic limitation instead of 3.05. As the roll was called, the balloting was so close that sponsors of the bill were somewhat fearful of the outcome. Three senators who voted for the measure last Thursday when it provided for 3.05 per cent alcohol, switched and voted against the revised measure. They were Senators Black (Dem., Ala.); Norris (Rep., Neb.), and Fletcher (Dem., Fla.). Senator Bankhead (Dem., Ala.), who voted for the 3.05 per cent bill was paired against the measure. Ten republicans combined with 33 democrats, however, to adopt the conference report, with 19 democrats and 17 republicans opposed. Senator Erickson, new democratic member from Montana, who was sworn in Monday, cast his first vote for the bill. The galleries were crowded for the brief debate which preceded the vote.

Borah Takes Floor

Borah took the floor as soon as Chairman Harrison of the finance committee submitted the conference report. Pointing to the provision of the bill prohibiting importation of the beverage into dry states, the Idahoan asked: "Upon what possible theory can you exclude it from interstate commerce except on the theory it is intoxicating?" He contended that a product can only be excluded from interstate commerce if it is "deleterious" or "dangerous" and asked: "The only foundation on which this provision rests is that the beer is in some way harmful to society."

Senator Barkley (Dem., Ky.), and Wagner (Dem., N. Y.), led in opposing Borah's view. Borah said he had offered the amendment forbidding sale of the beer and wine to children because whether or not 3.2 per cent beverages were intoxicating for adults he held the evidence was overwhelming that it was intoxicating for children. He quoted a New York representative of the brewing interests as saying within the past few days that the proposed beer was "as good or better than pre-prohibition beer."

View of Brewer

A Richmond, Va. brewer, he added, said: "It is a good beer. A real beer. A better and stronger beer than in pre-prohibition days."

Senator Walsh (Dem., Mass.) explained the conference had agreed to throw out the Borah amendment because its participants believed the states should be left to deal with the beverage after it is manufactured.

To still permit the federal government to maintain and the prohibition bureau agents to enforce this provision of the law would be a duplication of effort and an extra expense to the government," Walsh said the house group maintained.

"It was their belief that this matter should be left solely within the hands of the states," he added. A few moments before the senate voted, the conference report was filed in the house by Chairman Ragon of the conference committee. His report recommended house acceptance, and plans were made for speedy action.

rectors of the organization. The convention program will also attract city and county officials, labor organizations, relief organizations, farm leaders, and the local chambers of commerce of West Texas.

While the convention will follow the general plan of the past three years, and be dominantly a business meeting, it will not be without its gay side, and its typical color. Already bands all over West Texas are beginning their practice in order to head town delegations. Anton, a city of four hundred on the South Plains, and the home of the Anton Gypsy Band, the official 1932-33 band of the West Texas Chamber, has already notified Big Spring officials that it will send a large delegation and its band. The University of Texas Longhorn Band is also planning to visit the convention—for the first time in the history of the West Texas Chamber.

Big Spring is planning to have an outstanding entertainment program each night during the convention. Chairman Blomshield and Mary have not announced what the entertainment will be, but promise it will be different and characteristic of West Texas.

Tired of Hypocrisy "The American people are tired of the hypocrisy and people should be allowed to exercise their own consciences and determine what is right and what is wrong." Duvall is from Tarrant county where W. T. Waggoner, wealthy Texas sportsman, has established an extensive racing plant. He asserted when the bill was up two years ago, it was represented to him that the people of his county were against the bill and that he had been "deceived," Duvall said. Betting on horse races has been prohibited in Texas since 1909. A racing meet was held last spring at Arlington Downs and a test was made of the status against betting. The court of criminal appeals held the contribution system, used in the test case was illegal. Bitter Contest "Throughout the day, speakers took the floor alternately for and against the bill. It was bitterly contested from start to finish. The first assault was made by Representative H. H. Ray of Troy, who offered an amendment to strike out the enacting clause, but later withdrew it. Ray termed the bill "iniquitous" and said that it was "so sugarcoated and that it sounds like a Sunday school meeting" and that he would rather see the schools close than have them operated on money as the "hidden quart" THAT STAYS UP IN YOUR MOTOR AND NEVER DRAINS AWAY. FOUND! ...Mechanic Elder Schaffner Found the Hidden Quart... Also that Without it, Motors Show 50% to 60% Greater Wear ...So He Switched to Conoco. * The Germ Process (exclusive Conoco patent) imparts to this motor oil that peculiar ability to penetrate and combine with metal surfaces. Of the first filling about one quart will "hide" itself up in your motor's precious working parts. This hidden quart never drains away. It becomes a part of the motor itself, worth its weight in gold.

MECHANIC SCHAFFNER REPORTS ON DISCOVERY: "I never did believe what Conoco Germ Processed oil would do; not until an Essex owner, with 25,000 miles on his speedometer, asked me to check his motor and put in new parts where necessary. It surely surprised me; clearance of pistons was only four 1-thousandths; of bearings only three 1-thousandths of an inch. "This owner said he had used Conoco Germ Processed oil since the car was new. I have overhauled many another Essex at 25,000 miles, which has not used this oil, and found the wear 50% to 60% greater. Now I recommend Conoco Germ Processed Oil to my friends, and have changed to it in my own car."—Elder Schaffner, Highland, Ill.

Stop Cruel Motor Wear . . . Escape its Painful Cost Don't Wait Another Day to Drain and Refill With Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil

To a motor, lack of lubrication is cruelty indeed. You are too "humane" to permit it, if only you knew the truth. But motors suffer in silence till costly damage is done. Then you pay . . . and pay . . . and pay. This is proved. Even with the crankcase empty, due to accident, users of this oil have driven many miles, without damage, on the "hidden quart" alone.

Isn't it smart and thrifty to have a "hidden quart" up in the parts of your motor, where you are sure it cannot fail? It is so simple to be safe so foolhardy to be in doubt. Tend to it today. Go now, drain and refill with the "hidden-quart" oil. Do it for safety's sake.

Oil Industry 'Czar' May Be Asked, Says New York Petroleum Engineer

'Major Companies Have Done Their Best' He Concludes—Charges Texas Commission For 'Inability Or Unwillingness' To Enforce Laws

NEW YORK, (UP)—Unless conditions in the oil industry change materially, President Roosevelt will be asked to appoint a "czar" to govern petroleum activities, T. B. Hoss, petroleum engineer, said. "This situation," Hoss said, "which will be highly distasteful to some of the oil companies, is brought about solely by the inability or the unwillingness, for petty political reasons, of the Texas Railroad Commission to enforce provisions in the East Texas field, and the fact that they are being bluffed by the oil racketeer. "The major oil companies have done their part. They have reduced crude oil to 50 per cent of what they are willing to pay, but these racketeers are causing crude in the midcontinent area to bring a million dollars a day less than this price. "These racketeers are running a little over 100,000 barrels of illegal crude oil in a day in the East Texas field, selling it at 25 cents less than the market price, thus causing the price of crude in other states, which have the matter well in hand, and in all of the other fields in Texas, to be 50 cents a barrel less than big buyers admit it is worth."

DRUG STORE ROBBED
FORT WORTH (UP)—Two bandits robbed a drug store of $43 here after herding four employees and an ice man in the prescription room. Enforcement —Not Repeal

IS THE SALOON COMING BACK?

H. Besenbump, Dallas, Texas.

It most certainly will, if the wets succeed in their liquor program which they have inaugurated and which has culminated in the recent action of Congress submitting repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment to the states. It has lately been demonstrated that the liquor interests know no political party and are not actuated by sentiments of patriotism. Their sole purpose is greed, and nothing is too sacred to sacrifice for that end, and no methods too dishonest, or base, for them to employ. The colossal lie of all American political history and the most stupendous fraud ever perpetrated upon the American public is the propaganda put out by the wets of both parties with reference to the return of the saloon. They all said, "We will not allow the saloon to come back." It was iterated and reiterated millions of times and injected by the wets into the deliberations of both political parties. By this slogan they fooled multitudes of voters, who well know the wickedness and corruption that is always inseparably connected with the saloon. The wets have falsely charged that prohibition has made hypocrites, but their promise to prevent the return of the saloon is the most arrogant and shameless piece of hypocrisy and deception ever exhibited in American politics. The solemn warnings of the drys were not effectual to stem the tide, and now a wet Congress has provided for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, and a legalized liquor traffic, without the slightest provision, or effort, to prevent the return of the saloon, which is sure to follow the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment should that unfortunate catastrophe come to pass, which may the good Lord and the good people of this country prevent. It is now clear that the wets never intended to prevent the return of the saloon. They were lying about it all the time, willfully and designedly, for the sole purpose of throwing out bait to gullible American voters. This was brought out clearly at the hearings of the Senate lobby committee in 1930 in a letter written by Mr. Irene DuPont on this subject, in which he said to his correspondent:

"If we should find the public more receptive to complete state control than we have at first hoped, IT WOULD BE EASY TO STRIKE OUT THE WORDS, 'Provided that all such liquors (said) shall be in packages not to be opened or consumed on the premises where sold.' (Capital letters are mine.)

What he said, in substance, was: "We will at first promise them liquor sold under state control, in places where it is not to be consumed on the premises (which would, of course, make it a saloon), and if the public falls for the idea, we can easily, and stily, scratch out the provision that it shall not be consumed on the premises and so we will have the saloon back after all which is what we want and what the brewers distillers and millionaire tax-dodgers have paid their money to get."

Having examined thoroughly the record of Congressional action in the sessions and committee hearings the writer was impressed with the fact that Congress was faithfully and vigorously reminded of these things and warned against the dishonorable step contemplated. There were brave and honorable men in both Houses who dared to stand for honor honesty and sobriety. They rebuked the fraud. They had the moral courage to rebuke and exhortate the liquor forces as they had promised and upon which promises they were elected to office. This indictment and exhortation which was severe but undoubtedly based on undisputed facts it seems would have made any participant in this dishonorable act hang his head in shame and confusion if he had any honesty and honor left in him; but it didn't face these wet hirelings of the brewers distillers and millionaire tax-dodgers whom the drys accused of "raising the hue and cry of paid propagandists." The wets had no thought for anything but the "repeal" ordered by their party platform the interests of millionaires tax-dodgers and the brewers and distillers who swarmed into Washington like black birds to see that the liquor bill was written to suit them and whose money had been used to bring about this wet legislation. The wets seemed to shed crocodile tears over the wicked "speakeasy" but paid no attention to the indisputable historical proof brought out that the speakeasy and bootlegger have always flourished where the saloon exists. They insisted strongly on the revenue to be collected from liquor sales for the support of the government but that this meant corruption to American politics prostitution of character and the debauching of our manhood womanhood and childhood did not have a feather's weight with them. They pooh-poohed the idea that they had promised that the saloon shall not come back—one wet congressman saying "this talk of the return of the saloon is nothing but subterfuge."

All possible considerations of reason, logic and common sense, to say nothing of morals, are against the liquor traffic. If one were to offer a million dollars for a single good reason, or a single real argument for the licensed traffic in beverage alcohol that would stand the test of logic and morality, the most salute wet in America could not earn a copper cent.
