

Congress flooded with vehicle records rule protests

WASHINGTON (AP) — The hands that milk the cows are getting writer's cramp.

Farmers say new car and truck record-keeping requirements imposed by the Internal Revenue Service are so burdensome that their livelihoods are threatened. A partial relaxation of the rules on Jan. 25 helped little, they say, but they're mad — and so are a lot of business people. And when they get mad, Congress gets the jitters.

Here's what one Montana farmer wrote his congressman:

"I made the following five entries in my truck log this morning before 9 a.m. and they total only 4 miles. Barn to heifer pen — picked up calf and back to barn. Barn to east pasture to put out salt and mineral blocks, then to shop. Shop to corral to fix broken gate, then to house to call bank about loan. House to stock pond to bust up ice so cattle can drink, back to shop for parts. Shop to tractor with new brake parts."

That farmer's congressman, Rep. Ron Marlenee, R-Mont., told colleagues: "There is a revolution brewing. Just one more little shove by the IRS; one more little abuse by the tax collectors; one more push by Congress, which should be responsible for regulations, and we will lose the voluntary tax system."

Many lawmakers say they haven't seen so much mail since 1983, when as many as 30 million postcards and letters flooded the Capitol with demands for repeal of a law requiring that taxes be withheld on interest and dividends. It was repealed.

Like that withholding law, the new record-keeping rules grew out of Congress' effort to stop tax cheats — in this case, to make it more difficult for people to disguise personal use of cars and trucks as tax-deductible business use. The regulations essentially require farmers and business people to log all their business mileage at the time it is run up; if there are no contemporaneous records, no deduction will be allowed.

The regulations took effect Jan. 1, and 24 days later the IRS issued a news release saying the rules would be watered down. For example, only one entry will be required to record a continuous use of a vehicle — perhaps a week-long trip or a day-long series of deliveries. A farmer may avoid record-keeping by stipulating that only 80 percent of a truck's use was for business. A vehicle used most of the time for deliveries, visiting job sites and the like is in compliance if only personal uses are logged.

But even with those preliminary changes, says Sen. James Abdnor, R-S.D., who is leading the fight to repeal the rules, too much record-keeping is still required. He's waiting with constituents to see the final wording of the changes.

Horse racing bonanza seen by Hightower

AUSTIN (AP) — While black lawmakers and a citizens' group are criticizing horse racing legislation, the Texas Department of Agriculture says legalizing gambling on the sport would generate millions of dollars for farmers.

Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower unveiled a study Thursday estimating that racing would give farmers up to $230 million directly within 15 years and would generate a total of $712 million for the state.

"If the Texas Legislature decides in its wisdom during this session that we can play 'Call to the Post' at Texas tracks, one sure winner is going to be Texas agriculture," Hightower said.

"If there is to be pari-mutuel wagering in Texas, it would mean direct economic benefits for horse raisers, hay farmers, corn growers and wheat producers," he said.

While Hightower released the study, the Anti-Crime Council of Texas said horse racing would bring more illegal gambling to Texas, fail to bring promised economic benefits and lead to more corruption of public officials.

Abner McCall of Waco, chairman of the council, said the state's experience with legalized bingo — in which charities are getting only a small percentage of bingo proceeds although they were supposed to be the chief beneficiaries — should prove that Texas couldn't control horse racing.

"If we can't control bingo, with just peanuts involved there, how do we expect to control something bigger like parimutuel betting or lotteries or something like that?" said McCall, chancellor of Baylor University.

The group claims Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry and former Gov. Price Daniel among its members.

The Legislative Black Caucus, led by Rep. Paul Ragsdale, D-Dallas, also criticized the horse racing bill as introduced by Rep. Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi.

Ragsdale complained that, unlike past racing legislation, the 1985 bill fails to dedicate part of the state's proceeds to financial aid for families with dependent children.

"Pari-mutuel is a pastime for the wealthy. Poor people clean up at the stables, not at the $50 window," Ragsdale said.

"Two years ago, we could vote for a pari-mutuel knowing that it meant food and medical care and schoolbooks for the poorest kids in Texas. Now we're being told that it's time for the jet set to party down at the track, and for the poor kids to be swept under the rug," he said.

Gov. Mark White repeated his insistence that any racing bill include three key elements — a statewide vote on whether to allow racing at all, a county vote before a track could be built and protections against the influence of organized crime. The same goes for dog racing or a state lottery, White said.

Berlanga's horse racing bill lacks a statewide referendum.

Koreans 'rough up' dissident leader

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Dissident leader Kim Dae-jung said police used "violence" to separate him from his American supporters upon arrival from two years of self-imposed exile today, and said he had been placed under house arrest.

Americans accompanying Kim said he and his wife were forcibly separated from them upon arrival at Kimpo International Airport outside Seoul. The Americans said they also were roughed up by security forces.

"Police used violence against me. They pushed me. I felt as if I was beaten," Kim, 59, said at a news conference at his home in Seoul.

Patricia Derian, former assistant secretary of state for human rights in the Carter administration, said earlier that Kim was "battered and beaten up. It was thuggery at its height."

"The conduct of officials of the South Korean government today was inexcusable and unnecessary," said Rep. Ed Feighan, D-Ohio, also among those who escorted Kim home. He said he and Rep. Thomas Foglietta, D-Penn., were demanding that the U.S. Embassy in Seoul lodge a formal complaint against the South Korean government.

Kim has said he was returning to support a newly formed opposition party vying for seats in the National Assembly elections Tuesday.

President Chun Doo-hwan's government said it would not return Kim to prison to finish the remaining 17½ years of a 20-year sentence on a sedition conviction, but it added that he would be banned from participating in politics.

Kim said he and his wife left the plane with the two congressmen, Ms. Derian, former U.S. Ambassador to El Salvador Robert White and William Butler, International Commission of Jurists president.

Kim said that when he refused to enter an elevator with police, saying he wanted to go through regular entrance procedures,

"they forcibly pushed me very violently. I felt beaten, but I'm not sure if I was beaten. The situation was so confused."

Kim said his outrage was not as great as that of the Americans because "I'm familiar with the Korean government."

U.S. Embassy spokesman David Fitzgerald said in a statement: "If the allegations are true it is a matter of serious concern. We have sent a stern note to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs requesting a full explanation."

Seoul Metropolitan Police issued a statement saying they "merely separated Mr. Kim and his family from those accompanying them and escorted them to an elevator in order to ensure his safety. No beating of Mr. Kim or any of the people accompanying him took place."

In Washington, White House spokesman Mark Weinberg said: "We have reports, which although they indicate heavy security, do not indicate any violence."

Kim's wife, Lee Hee-ho, said earlier in a telephone interview that "there was no beating." She said the couple was "shoved" into the elevator and later into a bus, and taken on a "strange route" home.

Kim said that upon his return home a local police official "told me that I couldn't go out. I asked him if this was house arrest and he didn't deny it."

Barbara Webber, a spokeswoman in Washington for the Center for Development Policy which sponsored the return trip, said Kim was under house arrest, but government officials would not confirm the report.

Kim said only relatives would be allowed to visit him, but members of his delegation and foreign reporters were allowed into the home.

Kim was sentenced to death on sedition charges in 1980. The government, under international pressure, later reduced his sentence to 20 years. He had been in the United States since being allowed to leave the country for "medical treatment" in December 1982.

More teachers needed

Lefors okays computer math system

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

LEFORS - Trustees of the Lefors Independent School District approved implementation of a computer math teaching system and discussed the need to hire more teachers for the next school year during their regular meeting Thursday night.

Jess Baker, elementary school principal, presented the computer system as part of a five-year accreditation program for improving the mathematics skills of Lefors students.

Baker said there had been problems with some students not reaching the desired standards of mastery of math objectives as established by the state. The problem exists at all grade levels in the district, he said.

A self-study committee studied the problems and assessed student, program and teacher needs, Baker reported. The committee felt more coordination of curriculum was needed among all the grades, with clearly defined objectives established.

The committee also felt teachers and students would benefit if the teachers had more time for instruction. One way to do this would be in cutting back on the time the teachers spend on records keeping, Baker said.

More instruction time also would allow for more individualized instruction of students, he stated.

Baker said the committee had looked at the Systematic Teaching and Measurement of Mathematics (STAMM) computer program and felt it would be very useful in helping the district reach its objectives in math instruction.

By grading tests through the STAMM system, teachers would get computer print-outs which would allow them to better assess student needs, determine which areas students are weak in, plan for more individualized instruction and provide documentation to show the state that the district is making progress in math objectives, Baker said.

Teachers can spend more time on class instruction since the computer would grade the tests and compile the reports for analysis, Baker said. That all has to be done by hand now, he explained.

"This doesn't rule out teacher creativity," Baker said.

Teachers can devise their own tests or teach other concepts not in the textbooks, he said. Teachers still have to effectively teach the objectives; the computer doesn't replace in-class instruction. And some objectives can't be measured on the computer, with the teacher having to make personal observation of the students in some areas.

Board member Joe Watson generally approved the computer system, but he expressed concerns about whether the system could "assess the whole picture," revealing areas where the teaching was weak and needed improvement.

Baker implied that if a number of students consistently failed to master an objective, that would indicate perhaps the problem existed in the method of instruction.

The STAMM system initially would require a scanner, program disks, a printer and supplies costing approximately $6,000. In addition, an additional person

Crime prevention officer starts job

By JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

A former secret service agent has been hired to try to prevent crimes in the 25 counties represented by the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission (PRPC).

Amarillo native John Bradshaw, 44, will work with Panhandle law enforcement agencies to set up crime prevention programs or as an advisor to those already in operation.

Bradshaw was introduced to the Pampa media in a news conference Thursday with Pampa crime prevention officer Bruce Denham.

The new PRPC official worked 15 years as a secret service agent. During that service, he helped protect Presidents Johnson, Nixon, Ford, Carter and Reagan.

Bradshaw's job at the PRPC, the Panhandle's administrative funnel for federal funds and programs, was created by a one-year grant from the governor's office.

In a nutshell, his job is to help establish programs designed to "reduce the crime rate," he said. "Crime prevention seeks to remove the opportunity for individuals to commit crimes, primarily property crimes," Bradshaw said.

The officer said he will help establish programs such as Neighborhood Watch in Panhandle cities that ask for his help. He said it takes cooperation between police and citizens to make the crime prevention programs work.

"Obviously, here in Pampa, there is a great rapport between the police and the citizens," he said, adding that the city's existing crime prevention efforts have been "very active" and successful in keeping down the crime rate.

Bradshaw said he will be available to assist cities such as Pampa, but most of his work will be in towns that have no programs, he indicated. He used the town of Bovina as an example of a place that needs help.

He said a "rash of burglaries" in the tiny town had Bovina residents "up in arms." Bradshaw said he and the local police officer arranged a crime watch meeting, hoping that 50 residents would attend. But 110 people showed up for the first meeting, and 200 have signed up for the next one, indicating citizens there are fed up with crime and want to do something about it.

Like most of the secret service agents, Bradshaw at various

minor accidents

The Pampa Police Department reported two minor accidents in the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.
THURSDAY, February 7
10:45 a.m. — A 1982 Ford, driven by Robert Taylor Thomas, 1708 Dogwood, swerved to avoid a collision with an improperly turning 1973 Dodge, driven by Jimmy Coy Carter, 116 1/2 W. Foster, then struck a legally parked car at 400 S. Cuyler. Carter was cited for unsafe turning, no driver's license and failure to show proof of liability insurance.
10:55 a.m. — A 1979 Cadillac, driven by Malcolm Stewart McDaniel, 865 W. Foster, collided with a 1978 Ford, driven by Sharon Cann, 1125 Seneca, at 100 E. Foster. No citations were issued.

would be needed to run the computer to free the teachers for more in-class instruction time, Baker explained.
In other business, Gene Gee, high school principal, presented a report on curriculum revisions for the 1985-1986 school year.
He said under state rules passed in House Bill 246, the school district must make additional courses available for students beginning next year.
All the courses must be available for students to take, he explained. If no students register for a class, then it doesn't have to be taught that semester. But if one student signs up for the course, it must be taught, he said.
The additional courses would require at least two more teaching personnel, Gee said. Reassignment of some teachers has been considered, but it won't take care of all the new course offerings, he said.
"We don't have enough people to cover it all. It's that simple," Gee stated.

New courses to be added in the next school year include English IV academic; Correlated Language Arts I, II, III and IV; consumer math, plus an optional pre-calculus course; child development (in place of Home Ec III); fine arts, with a choice of two from art, music or theatre arts; world history; personal business management; introductory physical science and introductory biology; Spanish I and II; and computer literacy and computer science.
Instead of the current 45 courses offerings in high school, the district now has to offer 58, Gee noted.
Supt. Jimmy Collins told the board no action was required on the report. He said the report was being presented now so the trustees would be aware of what will be coming up in budget planning sessions for next year.
In other matters, the board times was assigned to protect all of the presidents since Johnson. He was briefly assigned to help protect Ronald Reagan during a campaign.

But he was permanently assigned to LBJ, putting him in daily contact with one of the more colorful characters to ever occupy the oval office. Bradshaw admits that after the years of sticking with Johnson like glue, he was likely closer to the man than any cabinet officer.
Getting the former secret service agent to tell an LBJ story, however, may be likened to pulling teeth. Asked to tell a few "war stories" about the wrath of LBJ, the former agent mostly declines, saying he is obligated under national security agreements not to tell.
Did LBJ accept the Warren

Commission's finding that Lee Harvey Oswald was the lone assassin of President Kennedy?
"Even if I knew, I couldn't tell you," Bradshaw answered the question with a smile.
He said the secret service accepts the Warren report, and that official position stands as the former agent's opinion on the matter.
What about the recent allegation made by Billie Sol Estes that President Johnson ordered the reported "murder" of a grain administrator privy to Estes' bogus grain deals?
Billie Sol Estes' reputation for telling the truth speaks for itself, the former agent responded.
"LBJ was not a murderer," he said. "He was an individual, and he got things done."

Crowd shows appreciation for performance by ACT I

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Lifestyles Editor
"Last of the Red Hot Lovers," Neil Simon's sometimes cynical, sometimes philosophical, comedy, presented by Pampa's ACT I community theatre group, opened last night to an appreciative crowd at the Coronado Inn Starlight Room.
Although the play was at times slow and stilted, the audience appeared to enjoy Neil Simon's inimitable wit as portrayed by actors S. Laverne Hinson, Diane Williams, Pam McNeely and Marva Salisbury, all of Pampa.
Hinson was perfectly cast as Barney Cashman, a 47-year-old married restaurant owner who wanted to get more out of life. Although at the beginning of the first act, he and the actress playing opposite him seemed to take a few moments to get used to each other's rhythm. Once that was done, their comedic timing was excellent and the subtle nuance of a gesture or an outright one-liner was never lost.
Whether it was opening - night jitters or excellent acting, Hinson's shaking hands and sweaty face as he prepared the scene for his first illicit love encounter set the mood perfectly.

In review

Williams, as the worldly Elaine Navazio, coolly worked her way through the first scene, the longest of the three, and at times the slowest. She was quite believable in the character of a woman who had "a husband who would break both my arms and both my legs if he knew I was here," and who was out for one thing — sex. She was far too experienced for poor Barney who kept trying to reach to Navazio's personal feelings, not her sexual ones. Navazio put him in his place though with "You soul searching, finger - smelling hypocrite!" — a line that was typical of her character.
Bobbie Michele, the aspiring actress, and Barney's second encounter was played by Pam McNeely. She did not have quite the polish of Williams (who is her mother in real life), but her character as a dizzy blonde was not supposed to be too believable anyway. Barney had found Bobbie in the park the day before and had asked her to his mother's apartment (where all the trysts were held, by the way, while his mother was doing volunteer work at a hospital).

Marva Salisbury, the last of Cashman's encounters, was played by Jeanette Fisher. As Barney said of himself "You sure know how to pick 'em." This time, he picked his wife's best friend of 18 years. Salisbury nailed Fisher's character from the moment she walked into the room, straight as a poker, stiff as a board, clutching her purse for dear life, loudly pronouncing, "What am I doing here?" And from then on continued to remind Barney that she did not find him "physically attractive," although she added she had nothing against obesity, "I just don't find you physically attractive."

"Last of the Red Hot Lovers," is funny and if you read between the lines, has a few, almost sad, points to make about life and living. I would recommend it as a different type of entertainment for Friday night. It is definitely an adult play, about adult subjects, and not for children.

The final performance of "Last of the Red Hot Lovers," is to be tonight beginning with dinner at 6:45 p.m. The play begins at 8 p.m. For more information, call Jim Guest, president, at 665-6434, or contact any ACT I member.

Doubleday strikes out in court

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — After an hour of chaotic testimony in which nobody swore to tell the truth, a judge ruled that New York sportsman Alexander Cartwright, not the legendary Abner Doubleday, invented baseball about 140 years ago.
"The weight of the evidence comes down on the side of Alexander Cartwright... He shall have his due," Superior Court Judge Roy L. Wonder declared Thursday during the 34th session of San Francisco's mock Court of Historical Review and Appeals.
The judge ordered copies of his ruling filed with the San Francisco Main Library and the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y. But it wasn't the first time Doubleday struck out as the inventor of baseball.
Some historians say Cartwright, who came to San Francisco in 1849 looking for gold, drew up the first baseball diamond in 1845. The first game using his rules was played on a cricket field in Hoboken, N.J., on June 19, 1846.

In 1969, a lengthy article in Sports Illustrated magazine made it clear that the Doubleday legend had to be taken with a big grain of salt, concluding that the story of the Civil War hero as baseball's creator was a myth.
Wonder said he gave great weight to the testimony of surprise anti-Doubleday witness Sam Bercovich, a local baseball fan for more than 50 years.
Bercovich was called to the stand by the pro-Doubleday forces, but quickly made it clear he was a Cartwright man. City Supervisor Louise Renne, who represented Cartwright's interests, beamed. City Public Defender Jeff Brown, counsel for Doubleday's ghost, scowled. The judge yawned.

"After research many years ago, I was convinced that Alexander Cartwright was the founder of baseball," Bercovich testified. "I was also convinced that Doubleday stole the (baseball) diamond from Mr. Cartwright and used it during the Civil War... (Doubleday) was a cadet at West Point during the period 1838-1840," when baseball is said to have been invented.
Bercovich contended that the first recorded game of baseball was played on the site of New York City's Madison Square Garden in 1842 and noted that Doubleday does not mention the game he supposedly created in any of the dozens of diaries found following his death in 1893.
Brown earned a hail of hisses and boos with a disparaging remark about the local team's skills, so the judge held everyone in contempt, even though the San Francisco Giants were the worst team in the major leagues last season with a 65-95 record.
Somewhat inconclusive testimony came from E. Wyman Spalding, great grand-nephew of A.G. Spalding, an early promoter of baseball who founded a sporting goods empire. Spalding, who entered books and other memorabilia into evidence, was dressed in an old-time baseball uniform.
San Francisco Police Capt. Frank Jordan, testifying in defense of the legend, claimed that Doubleday was in a San Francisco sandlot in 1850, inventing "sandlot baseball," when a ball flew into centerfield and landed amidst a bunch of pigs.
The courtroom audience sneered as Jordan added, "The ball was eaten by a pig and declared an inside-the-pork homer."

Filibuster threat blocks Senate bill debate

AUSTIN (AP) — A clash of legislative wills between two state senators has stalled, and perhaps killed, a bill that would delay for at least 2½ years the licensing of a low-level nuclear waste dump in Texas.

Sen. John Traeger asked the Senate for permission Thursday to bring up his low-level bill but said he would oppose an amendment by Sen. Carlos Truan, which was approved in committee 4-3. Truan, D-Corpus Christi, said without his amendment, which also would delay for 2½ years the purchase of a disposal site, Traeger's bill was "nothing but window dressing" for South Texans worried about possible contamination of their water supply.

The Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority has indicated that a 365-acre site in McMullen County is its No. 1 choice for a disposal facility. The site is 12 miles from the Choke Canyon reservoir, which supplies water for 21 communities and 500,000 people.

Truan said if the Senate should vote to suspend its rules and debate Traeger's bill, Truan would filibuster for hours.

Traeger needed 25 votes, and was far short at 14. "Folks will vote any way to keep from listening to a Truan filibuster," Traeger quipped afterward.

Traeger was asked if he might try to bring the bill up again, and he replied, "Not unless Sen. Truan gets up and says he will not try to put his amendment on and works the floor to change votes. I'm not going to push it any further."

"Right now, I'd say it's dead — and any other bill, which means the site will probably go on," Traeger said.

He said without a bill the low-level authority "will immediately purchase (land) and start construction on a disposal site."

Asked why he couldn't go along with Truan's amendment, Traeger said, "Because it won't pass, that's why. His amendment demolishes" the low-level authority. "It puts them completely out of business. It doesn't even allow them to go out and explore."

Truan told reporters, "If my amendment is not on, Traeger's bill is nothing more than a toothless tiger. ... If Sen. Traeger's concerned about contamination, he ought to support my amendment."

Traeger was asked, "Do you have a gentleman's agreement if your bill passed without Truan's amendment that they (the low-level authority) would not ahead and purchase land?"

He responded: "Well, I can't say there was a binding agreement, but they had indicated to me that they would certainly take a long time before they purchased in the face of a legislative mandate."

Truan said, "I will do everything to prevent the authority from purchasing that land in McMullen County."

He said even if the authority's board votes to buy the McMullen County land, the mayor of Corpus Christi "has already served notice" that the city "is ready to file suit" to stop the purchase.

In other action Thursday, the Senate approved and sent to the House bills that would:

— Change the day for observing the Memorial Day holiday from the last Monday in May to May 30. Congress shortly after the Civil War set May 30 as the date to honor the dead of American wars. But in 1971, the day was changed to the last Monday in May.

Sen. Lindon Williams, D-Houston and the bill sponsor, said 16 states had passed similar measures and after a majority do so, Congress would change the date. His bill, which was approved on voice vote, would become effective in 1986.

— Allow, but not require, the Board of Pardons and Paroles to include "as a condition for parole" that the prisoner pay fees and other costs incurred in sentencing the prisoner. Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Mesquite and the bill sponsor, referred to his measure as a "user fee from criminals." It was approved 29-0.

Hightower raps Stockman

AUSTIN (AP) — President Reagan and his budget director don't understand farmers or their problems, and the administration's new farm proposals prove it, the Texas agriculture commissioner says.

"It isn't just a matter of budget and numbers and statistics and (budget director) David Stockman's madness. It's a deliberate policy of economic genocide," Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said Thursday.

"It's a killer. At least a third of the commercial operators in this state and across the country will be bankrupt within a year under that program. It's going to destroy the family farm sector," he said in an interview.

Reagan's plans, presented this week to Congress, aim to cut, limit or eliminate price supports, income and loan subsidies, federal farm loans, soil and water conservation, cost-sharing funds, acreage set-asides and many other farm programs. If adopted, farm state legislators say the Reagan plan would reduce federal outlays to agriculture by 37 percent.

In addition, Stockman made a stinging attack on farm loan aid, saying he can't understand why the government should "refinance bad debt that was willingly incurred by consenting adults." He said farm state congressmen "blackmailed" the administration into action on farm credit problems.

Hightower said Stockman's criticism and the Reagan program demonstrate that they don't understand farm economics.

The agriculture commissioner noted that grain embargos and other federal policies made the federal government a key player in the farm economy.

Stockman's criticism, Hightower said, "is a typical pointy headed bureaucratic sort of view. It's, 'Well, damn the farmers.' It's typical."

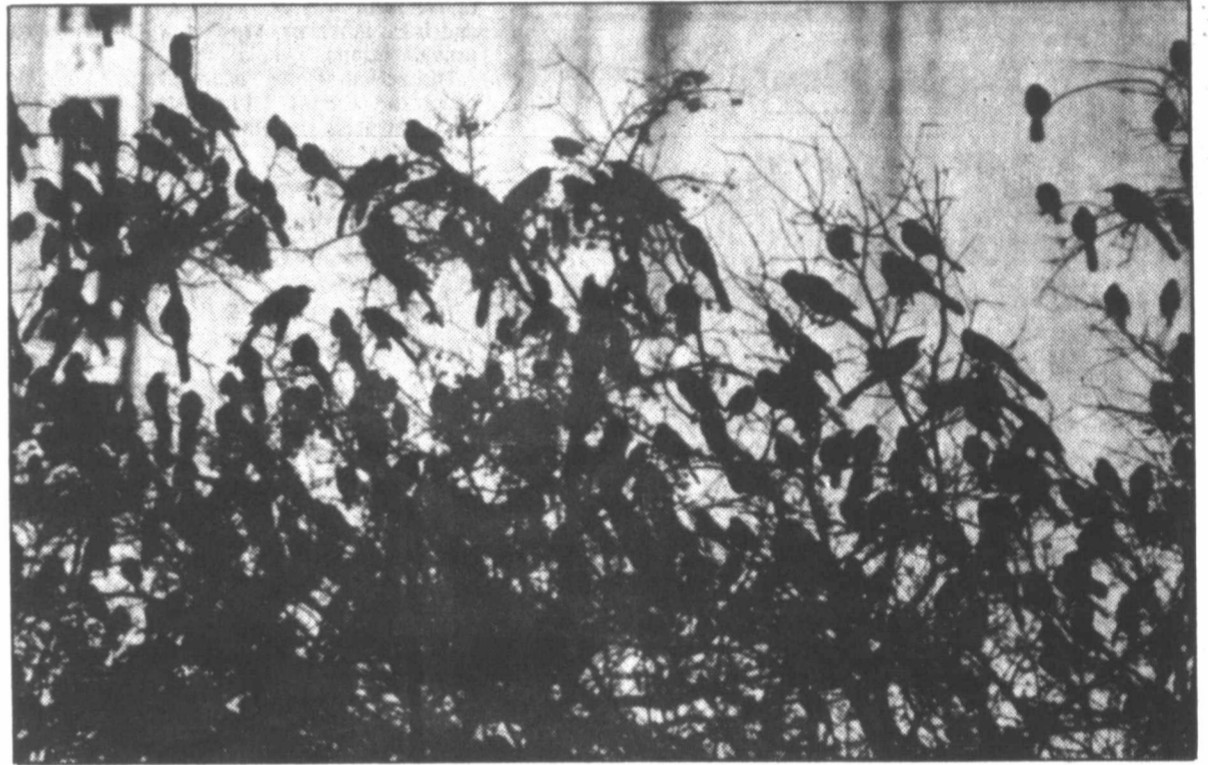

The federal government

"establishes an economic policy that drives them out of business" and then government officials "point the finger of blame at them," Hightower said. "That's been done before. That's what (President Herbert) Hoover did during the Depression."

Hightower, who was a close adviser to Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale on farm policy, also criticized the Reagan administration's plan to expand federal aid to financially strapped farmers.

The plan would allow bankers to offer farmers lower interest rates on loans backed by federal guarantees. About $625 million of the $650 million in loan guarantees unveiled by Reagan last autumn have gone unused as many lenders refused to accept the requirement that they write off 10 percent of the value of the troubled loans.

Hightower called the plan "a joke" because banks won't do it and farmers still aren't getting high enough prices for crops

White tries to dissuade switch

AUSTIN (AP) — U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm's Republicanization of Texas was expected to continue today at a Dallas news conference where an announcement was to be made that several Democratic judges would switch parties.

Democratic Gov. Mark White tried to dissuade the judges Thursday in a 90-minute closed-door session during which he spoke of loyalty and his plans to seek re-election next year.

Gramm, himself a former Democrat, scheduled an afternoon news conference in Dallas.

White said he failed to draw a commitment from any of the five Dallas County judges. After the meeting, State District Judge Don Koons said he had not made up his mind. But Koons indicated that political survival might dictate a switch.

"I think as a Republican there's probably a better chance for re-election in a countywide race in Dallas County," he said.

Ten of Dallas County's 68 judges are Democrats.

"I would be comfortable as a conservative in either party," Koons said, adding, however, "I'm interested in continuing some of the programs I've started. I'd like to stay on board if I can."

The judge said White was "optimistic" that the Democrats could make a strong comeback next year.

"He said he expected to be" a candidate for re-election, Koons said of White. "He indicated he probably would expect to file and if he did that would help the ticket."

White said he told the judges, "I've always said loyalty had a high priority with me. We talked about that at some length."

Also at the meeting were State District Judges Ron Chapman and Thomas Thorpe and County Judges Bill Coker and Mike Schwillie. Those four could not be located for comment after the meeting.

Earlier this week, Schwillie said the Democratic Party had "gotten too liberal for old rock-bottom conservatives to tolerate."

"That's as far as I'm going to go. You'll know Friday," he said.

White said the judges were concerned about "whimsical change in the top of the ballot having a whiplash at the bottom of the ballot and turning altogether very capable judges out of office and not necessarily putting capable ones into office."

Koons and White said changes are needed in the judicial selection process. "It's pretty difficult to ask a voter to sort through a list of 120 to 130 people and pick the 68 you think are best qualified," the judge said.

Also at his weekly news conference, White offered cautious endorsement to the recent selection of Paul Kirk as national chairman of the Democratic Party. White had favored the selection of a Texan for the post. Kirk is a former aide to U.S. Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts.

"He is going to be a forceful, aggressive leader for the party. If he isn't, it's going to be a terrible mistake," White said of Kirk.

"I think Kirk can read election returns. I think the man is going to be very aggressive in trying to bring together all elements of the Democratic Party and make it a true reflection of American society," the governor added. "If he does he is going to be an outstanding leader. If he doesn't he will not be there very long."

FDA is meddling again

A few weeks ago the Food and Drug Administration announced it plans to issue regulations making it unlawful for anyone to sell products they claim will cure baldness or improve sexual performance.

I didn't like that bit of news, although I will not be personally affected right now. I still have a full head of hair and have never had to worry about making it grow. It is none of your business whether or not I've ever thought about buying that other stuff.

But despite the fact that I have plenty of hair now, I would hate to see all the products that's supposed to make it grow taken off the market.

You see, my hairline starts pretty far back on my head and that is cause for concern, even though it has always been in the same place. But because of where it starts, I have been assured by family and friends ever since I was 18 that that I would be bald by the time I was 30. My hair outlived their predictions some years ago, but that doesn't mean it won't eventually start falling out.

If it ever does, I would be one of the funniest-looking bald-headed people you've ever seen because of that way I comb my hair.

My daughters have always made fun of my hairstyle. They say I'm the only man they've ever seen who makes what they call a little ball of hair on the front of his head. But I started combing it that way years ago and I've never found an acceptable alternative. It is my version of what they used to call a pompadour.

The problem I face, you see, is that if my hairline starts receding, I'd have to comb that little ball of hair farther and farther back on my head. And if you think a ball of hair looks funny in the front, just think of how it would look on the back of your head.

So if the FDA goes forward with its plan to outlaw hair-growing products, and if my hair starts receding, I will have no hope whatsoever. A modern hair style that requires maintenance with a blow dryer is out of the question. The day you see me using a blow dryer or hair spray on my head, just hit me between the eyes with a two-by-four and put me out of misery because you can be assured I have gone off the deep end.

Super glue, which will make nearly anything stick, might be a better answer to baldness than any of those cures you see offered in magazines. But even using that might not be possible if baldness ever does strike.

The reason? Even though super glue has been credited with saving lives when used to patch blood vessel defects, the FDA has also refused to approve its use for medical treatment. And it would probably take the agency years to decide if baldness is a disease.

Primitive method works best with pesty blackbirds

DALLAS (AP) — Lately, when the sun begins to set in downtown Dallas and the stream of rush-hour traffic empties the city's streets, swarms of blackbirds are singing in the dead of night.

Like clockwork, the grackles loom above the historic Texas Schoolbook Depository, where Lee Harvey Oswald allegedly fired the shot that killed President John F. Kennedy. They loop around nearby Dealey Plaza and invade City Hall.

But city officials aren't using chemicals or sonic waves to tackle the grackle problem that has left city parks smelly and full of cackling. Instead of such high-tech tactics, park workers decked in raincoats sneak up behind the blackbirds, banging boards and yelling.

"At 6:15 they'll be here. Thousands of 'em. You wait," said James Trollinger, a worker with the Park and Recreation Department who spent a good part of Thursday evening trying to keep the birds from landing on the rows of live oak trees lining the sidewalks.

So did Felix Thomas and Ramiro Tiliانو. Together, the trio watched the sky above Dealey Plaza and knowingly waited for the grackles' prompt arrival.

When the sky blackened and the gawking noise of birds deafened the men's ears, the three workers, armed with 12-inch wooden boards strapped and taped to their wrists, split up into separate areas.

Thomas took the book depository building. Trollinger manned Dealey Plaza and Ramiro headed toward the Old County Courthouse.

They weren't the only ones. Another crew of workers manned Ferris Plaza, while another armed City Hall.

"It's like if you got robbed in one place, you would never go back there again," said Trollinger. "What we're trying to do is upset their roosting patterns — just like starving them. Eventually they get the message."

They clapped their boards together, ran back and forth and they yelled. It got to be a contest of wills.

The birds yelled back. Sometimes they landed. But not for long.

"They'll never land as long as there's a racket," said Trollinger, who was ready for anything in his yellow rubber rain suit and matching boots. "Sometimes they get you."

As tourists and passerbys walk in front of the site where Kennedy was assassinated, Trollinger raises a few eyebrows.

"A lot of people think we're a bunch of nuts," he said. "They must think Dallas is strange."

But Trollinger can tolerate that misconception. He'd rather live with that for a couple of hours a night than scrape two inches of bird-droppings in the morning.

Opinion

Sound and fury meaning nothing

A great deal of rhetoric about "ethics in government" poured forth from the Senate Judiciary Committee as it argued about the confirmation of Edwin Meese as attorney general.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, a committee member and outspoken critic of the Meese appointment, believes incidents in which Meese allegedly traded a $40,000 loan and assistance in selling his home for two appointments to government jobs were unethical.

Indeed the rule cited by Metzenbaum bars government employees from any action that "might result in, or create the appearance of, using public office for private gain, giving preferential treatment to any person and losing complete independence and impartiality...."

The rule, however, could effectively bar almost everyone from government service. Perhaps the only thing Metzenbaum and his colleagues proved by trying to use it against Meese is that the process of government itself is unethical.

After all, hasn't it always been accepted practice to reward political cronies for their campaign help? Of course it has. That's why Meese was on the White House staff to begin with. That's why John F. Kennedy had brother Bobby as his attorney general.

Independence and impartiality? How many bills that pass through Congress in a year are designed to help certain of the folks back home—almost always at the expense of others? Yet that's accepted practice.

If you really want to discuss ethics with Metzenbaum, ask him why he would consistently vote for bills that spend everyone else's hard-earned dollars, yet fight the IRS tooth and nail over a 1969 tax return that left him owing nothing. We'd be the first to applaud anyone who fights the IRS, but not someone who expects everyone else to ante up.

Meese probably is no better or worse a man than any other who wants to hold high public office. His confirmation hearing is just another charade to provide entertainment for the masses—at their expense.

'Crazy states' pose threat

While President Reagan has instituted improvements in America's defense forces which should deter the Soviet Union, an unsolved problem is that posed by what have been called the "crazy states."

The term "crazy states" was coined by Brian Crozier, the British author and writer on defense issues. Examples of this category are Libya under Gaddafi and Iran under Khomeini. "These are by definition," Mr. Crozier wrote in "Encounter" magazine, "less predictable and therefore more difficult to guard against."

Americans need to be aware of the destabilizing potential of the "crazy states." The Soviet Union, for all its threatening might, is cautious. It responds to Western deterrent measures. Libya and Iran, however, aren't responsible to rational considerations.

The action of one "crazy state," Iran, brought down the Carter administration. The Reagan administration, for its part, has been on the alert to the "crazy states" menace. The bombings in Lebanon, which had their origins in fanatical movements in the Middle East, came close to rocking the Reagan administration. One can't tell what public reaction would be if there were another disaster similar to the terrorist bombing which killed the American Marines.

The outbreak of religious and communal violence in India is another reminder of the power of fanatics in a world that is not truly modern. The enmity of India and Pakistan, of Hindu and Muslim, has an explosive potential. Both of these nations will have nuclear weapons in the not distant future. There appears no way to pose nuclear disarmament on these unstable powers in the Third World.

In terms of global problems, the "crazy states" represent secondary threats. Unfortunately, they may come to represent a much more threatening category. Iran long has threatened to block the Strait of Hormuz and thereby cut off oil supplies to Western Europe and Japan. It's still possible that the Iranian regime may attempt such reckless action. If Libya were to acquire even one nuclear weapon, disaster could result. Argentina is another unstable nation which is reportedly aiming at development of nuclear weapons. Nothing in the postwar history of that country leads one to believe that it could enter the nuclear "club" and behave in a responsible way.

Most nations of the world lack the technological know-how and industrial resources for nuclear arms. The unstable states, of which there are many in the world, all have a potential for utilizing the weapon of terrorism, the danger of which is evidenced by the bomb campaigns employed by the criminal IRA organization in Ireland. The IRA recently came close to killing the British Prime Minister and her entire Cabinet.

This type of shadow threat poses extreme difficulties for a responsible state. And even if we determine that Libya is behind some future outrage, how shall we respond? Madmen, including international madmen, create the worst crises.

Today in History

Today is Friday, Feb. 8, the 39th day of 1985. There are 326 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Feb. 8, 1910, the Boy Scouts of America was incorporated in Washington, D.C.

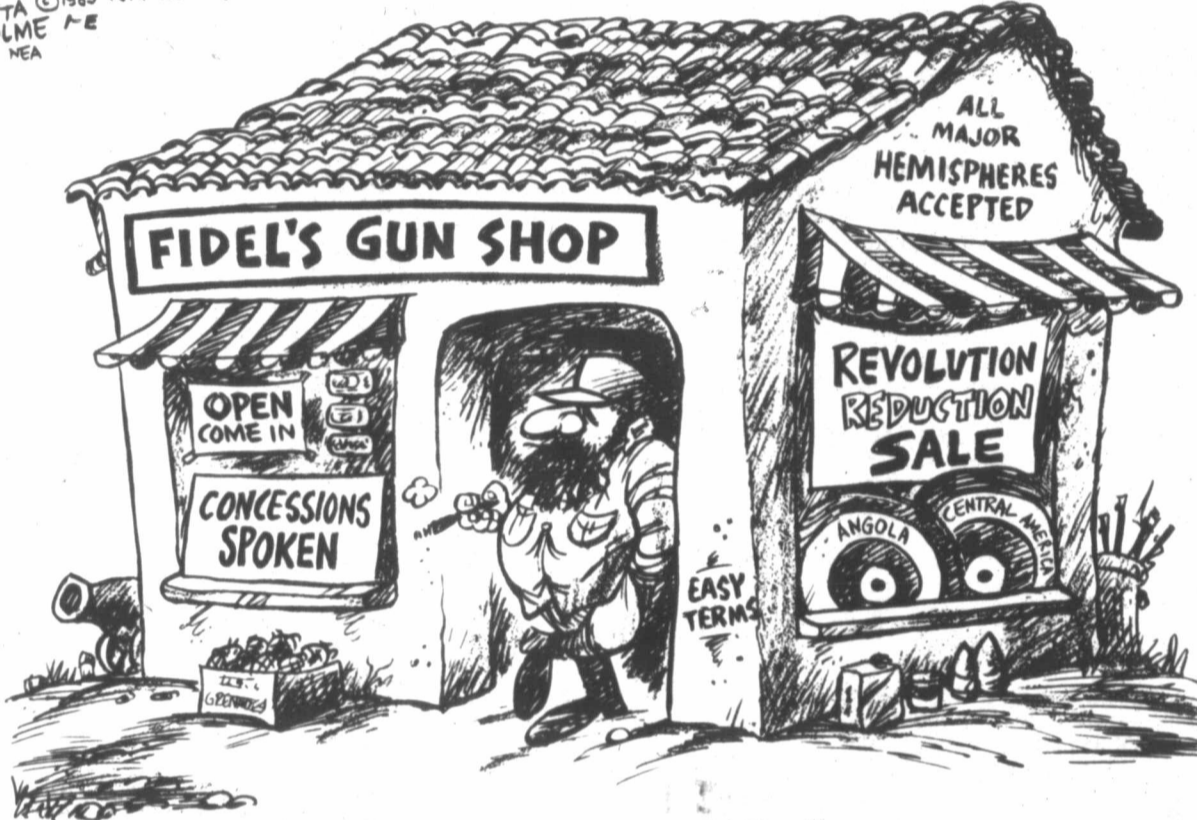

On this date: Ten years ago: It was revealed that several hundred former members of the U.S. Special Forces and other Vietnam War veterans were being recruited by a private American contractor to train Saudi Arabian troops to protect oil fields.

Five years ago: President Jimmy Carter issued a plan for draft registration that included both young men and women. Carter said the objective of the proposal was "to deter Soviet aggression."

One year ago: Britain began pulling its peacekeeping troops out of Lebanon, one day after President Reagan announced his decision to withdraw U.S. forces. Italy, which also had troops in Lebanon, announced plans for a phased withdrawal.

Today's birthdays: Actress Lana Turner is 65. Actor Jack Lemmon is 60. Actor Alejandro Rey is 55.

Uncle Sam needs to diet

Paul Volcker says if Congress and the president will cooperate to reduce our bloated national budget by $50 billion, that will be enough to justify lower interest rates. But $50 billion? That is a lot of fat!

The Grace Commission has presented the Congress a list of fats and starches which Uncle Sam can and must do without:

The Office of Micronesian Status Negotiations...
The Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations...

Each with a director and star demanding to be perpetuated...

And you can multiply those by scores of government agencies which are not worth their upkeep.

Americans imagine as sacrosanct such agencies as the Department of Health and the Department of Energy and the Department of Transportation—though none of these existed 20 years ago.

Vermont Royster, since the holidays, has been trying to diet. He is not enjoying the withdrawal.

The pounds that went on so easily are going off so arduously.

That he knows losing weight will be good for him, enables him to live healthier and longer, doesn't help much.

He misses the shortcake.

And he remembers from when he was a publisher of The Wall Street Journal how easy it was, corporatively, to keep hiring more and more personnel during prosperous times, letting expenses grow—until one day the big bulge was more than the business could support.

Nationally, make no mistake, a big part of our overload is military hardware.

A Commander-in-Chief, with ultimate responsibility for our nation's security, dares not allow our nation even to "appear invitingly weak" to the world's carnivores.

Neither, however, can he jeopardize our internal strength with unlimited military spending.

Some of our overload results from public money to prop up home building, to subsidize dairying though we have more milk than we need, to subsidize the growing of more tobacco which—in fact—is killing us.

Highway builders and schools and the list is limitless—of the buy-now-pay-later desirables which simply are not worth going bankrupt for.

Uncle Sam will ensure the discomfort of any dieter this year, but at year's end he and we will be leaner, stronger and ready to resume the climb.

The abuse of science

NEW YORK (NEA) — One of the less remarked but more serious scandals of our time is the extent to which people with scientific training and careers have taken to prostituting their scientific credentials to the service of their political opinions. The deservedly high reputation of science in our era is going to take a beating in the long run as a result, and the many honorable scientists who don't indulge in this cheap politicizing of their discipline had better start resisting the practice before worse damage is done.

Objectively, there is no reason to assume that a highly respected astronomer's views on (say) the Baader-Meinhof gang are entitled to any more credence than those of a ranking West German police official on the Great Nebula in Andromeda. To be sure, basic principles of the scientific method may theoretically be applicable to some political or social issues, but many a noted scientist is the veriest child on subjects outside his own narrow field. "The law," Voltaire noted, "sharpen a man's mind by narrowing it," and the law is far from being the only specialty that has that effect.

Nonetheless, we are all to some extent children of the Enlightenment, and we tend to listen to a white-smocked "scientist" with the same reverence that earlier generations displayed toward those who wore a clerical collar. Advertisers have known this for quite a while, and have accordingly assailed us with medical testimony concerning the consequences of all sorts of things.

But it was the increasingly complex technological aspects of public issues, especially in the years since World War II, that brought out of the woodwork today's vast array of scientist-politicians. One can forgive the physicists who invented the A-bomb and H-bomb for being appalled at the ongoing political implications of what they had done: They would have been less than human not to want to influence the social impact of their creation. Unfortunately most (though not all) of them were politically naive leftists, and their contributions to U.S. foreign policy tended to reduce to the proposition that it had been all right to build atomic weapons to drop on Germany and Japan, but they were definitely not for use against Russia.

In any case, physicists were the darlings of the campus left up until the late 1960s when environmentalism became all the rage and many a biology professor (feel, eg, no doubt, that every dog has his day) suddenly blossomed forth as an "ecologist," raining anathemas down on polluters. Recently, however, the liberal physicists and various of their allies have been making a comeback, spearheaded by Dr. Carl Sagan. Sagan, a pop cosmologist up at Cornell, has ingeniously begun terrorizing the populace with his concept of a "nuclear winter"—the ghastly (supposed) consequence of a broad nuclear exchange between the superpowers. On a related front, a remarkably small group of "scientists" with strikingly slender qualifications in the field of nuclear physics has been able to bring new orders for nuclear power plants in this country to a standstill by the adroit manipulation of alleged cancer probability statistics.

Perhaps the worst scandal of all is what has happened to the science of genetics, which has been all but paralyzed by the supposed socio-political implications of the heredity vs. environment controversy.

None of these hot-eyed political dilettantes is likely to do irreparable damage to national policy, let alone permanently halt the advance of genuine scientific knowledge, even on a relatively narrow front like genetics. But their chronic abuse of the scientific image will sooner or later tarnish the public reputation of the scientific discipline as a whole. Objective and reputable scientists should blow the whistle on such practices while there is yet time.

Blind are learning to ski

HARDWICK, Vt. (AP) — Weary cross-country skiers trudge in from a morning in the snowy fields and head for the fireplace. A few are anxious to graduate to tougher trails. Others can't wait to retire their skis for the day.

Plans are made for afternoon skiing or a warm, dry evening by the fire.

In a corner near a television, a young boy tunes out the chatter and listens carefully to cartoons. A Braille Monopoly board awaits post-lunch players. A seeing-eye dog greets his master.

At Camp Wapanacki, a recreation camp run by the New York Institute for the Education of the Blind, summer students hike up green mountainsides. In the camp's new winter program, the blind take on the hills when the ground is frozen and the snow is knee-deep.

These skiers have more to think about than the cold.

Twelve-year-old Stephanie Pieck of Altamont, N.Y., is a picture of concentration as she makes her way along a ski trail, head bent and thin frame moving swiftly. She can't see the bumps and turns, or the steep hill edging the trail.

Her link to her surroundings is Melinda Friedman, the sighted guide who is skiing by her side. Stephanie absorbs the guide's directions and warnings, turning them into her own way of seeing what's ahead.

"Tips left, a little more to the left. Now there's a 45-degree turn coming up and then we'll go straight for quite a bit," Ms. Friedman says, huffing and puffing as they move along. The two falter only when they come to an icy uphill incline.

Stephanie falls, but gets up quickly and goes on.

"She's doing just great," said Ms. Friedman, a University of New Hampshire student who is one of the volunteer guides for the camp's ski weekends this winter.

To train for the weekends, the guides wore blindfolds and skied with a partner. Then they switched places. Guides said the exercise gave them the experience of skiing without being able to see, as well as giving them a chance to practice instructing a sightless skier.

"You have to establish that communication and get a set of signals that really works. You have to define things clearly and think about what you're going to say," said camp director Joe Ingram.

"We learned quickly. One guy fell in a gully because I didn't keep him out of it," said Ms. Friedman.

Down the trail from Stephanie, a dog romped and rolled in the snow. He jumped around the ski poles of his owner, Patti Overholt, who explained he isn't used to such freedom. The dog is usually in a harness and guiding her along Burlington's city streets.

Ms. Overholt was one of the few blind adults skiing on this particular weekend, which is reserved mostly for visually impaired youngsters and their families. Some weekends are reserved for adults only.

A few weekend programs include outings to the downhill slopes of a ski resort. On the slopes, the camp students wear bibs that have the words "blind skier" written on them. But Ingram joked that they might get less attention if they didn't wear the bibs.

"A woman saw one of our skiers coming down a hill and this look of horror came over her face as her lips formed the words 'blind skier.' She got all flustered and stepped right into the skier's path," he recalled of one downhill episode.

During the cross-country weekend, several of the half dozen youths were on skis for the first time. A 9-year-old Eden boy gave up and turned his skis in after a few falls. Brendan Smith, 13, of Stoneham, Mass., was making his second attempt at cross-country skiing.

He did well, said his mother, Nancy Smith, as she wiped the snow from her pants and coat. He even skied better than his parents, she laughed.

Ingram said most people are surprised to hear that skiing is one of the best sports for the visually impaired.

Gena on Genealogy

By GENA WALLS

The Lewis and Clark Expedition crossed the state of MONTANA enroute west in 1805 and on the return trip in 1806. Many have traced their heritage to the Indians living in the area during that time. The discovery of gold in 1862 brought miners to the region. Many workers were brought in from the European countries and people that did not want to become involved in the Civil War tried moving their families to Montana. If you have "lost" ancestors during this time period it might be worth the effort to check the Montana records. Before 1864 you will need to check the surrounding areas, Missouri, Nebraska, Oregon, Washington, and Idaho would be possibilities. The Central Montana Genealogy Society, 701 W. Main Street, Lewistown, Mont., 59457 is helpful and usually prompt in answering queries.

A section of Montana became part of NEBRASKA in the mid-1850s. After the Civil War, many veterans were able to buy land in that area for low prices. Search Nebraska for your Civil War ancestors and German ancestors. Especially if family tradition has your German families coming from Russia to America. A large group of these people settled Lancaster county with many descendants still living in the area. The Nebraska census for 1870 also includes a census for the Winnebago Indian Reservation. Many records are available to prove Indian lineage and should not be overlooked. A good portion of Americans today have some Indian lines in the family lineage and is often worth tracing even if it is a very minute part. Definitely worth passing to our children.

Brown Auditorium. Hodges, a college junior, plans to pursue a career in fashion merchandising. She is to sing "I'll Never Love This Way Again" as her talent.

ANDREA MARIE CHENAULT of Canyon is to compete for the title of Miss Top O' Texas at the scholarship pageant Saturday, 7:30 p.m. in M.K. Brown Auditorium. The high school senior is the 17 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Chenault of Canyon. Her ambition is to become a top New York model and to earn a degree in fashion merchandising. She is to sing in the talent portion of the competition.

Dear Abby

Parents raise a stink over boy's foul mouth

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Several of us mothers have a common problem. It concerns a boy (I'll call him Billy) who is a bad influence on our children. They are all in the third grade, but this Billy is wise beyond his years. He gets his information (about sex) from hanging around his older brother, then spreads around what he has heard to the boys in his class. He tells them things about sex that most adults have never experienced, and his language is pure filth!

Our sons want to invite Billy to stay overnight, but we're afraid of what Billy might teach them. Besides, most of us have younger children at home, and we don't want Billy here talking about Lord knows what.

I understand Billy's parents are very liberal-minded, so don't suggest we talk to them. Maybe if they read this, they will understand why their son is shunned by his peers.

STUMPED

DEAR STUMPED: If your son and his classmates want Billy to stay overnight, then obviously Billy isn't "shunned by his peers"—it's their parents who don't want him around.

Liberal-minded parents love their children as much as you love yours, so please share your concerns with Billy's parents.

It's not unusual for a child to entertain his peers with X-rated information in a bid for popularity. Don't panic; it's neither contagious nor fatal.

DEAR ABBY: I am the owner of a profitable retail hardware store with a good number of employees. There's one woman who has been with me for 22 years. I have to admit she's loyal, honest and efficient. She started as a bookkeeper, but now she's a self-appointed "office manager." She used to call me "Mr."

but now she calls me by my first name. She's very bossy, acts like she owns the place and, to tell you the truth, she's beginning to get on my nerves.

We don't have a retirement age around here, but I wish she'd retire (she's old enough) so I could replace her with a younger woman who isn't so bossy. They say a new broom sweeps clean. What do you say?

THE BOSS

DEAR BOSS: A new broom may sweep clean, but the old broom knows where the dirt is.

***

DEAR ABBY: Last June, I lent my girlfriend my jacket, and she lost it at the restaurant where she was working. In September she gave me $50 to replace the jacket, but I spent the $50 on something else.

Well, just before Christmas there was a fire at that restaurant, and while they were cleaning up, my jacket was found in the basement. My girlfriend had it cleaned and monogrammed with my initials and gave it to me as a surprise Christmas present.

The problem: My girlfriend says now that I got the jacket back, I should return her $50. I feel that she was irresponsible in the first place, and it shouldn't matter that the jacket was found six months later.

A friend of mine suggested I give her the jacket back instead of the money, but now that it's monogrammed, I want to keep it.

I told my girlfriend that I will do anything Abigail Van Buren thinks is right.

JACKET BACK

DEAR JACKET BACK: She lost your jacket, and you accepted $50 restitution. Fair enough. Six months later, she gave you the jacket, monogrammed as a gift; she didn't sell it to you. You are not obligated to pay for a gift.

Youthful performers offer religion's lighter side

MADISON LAKE, Minn. (AP) — To Tom Leech and Harold Armstrong, religion can indeed be a laughing matter.

Leech and Armstrong, who make up a Christian-oriented comedy team called the New Life Players, see laughter and wit as a way to entertain young adults while spreading the word of Jesus Christ.

The two 25-year-olds formed the New Life Players, based in Madison Lake, and began performing for junior and senior high school youth groups in December 1982.

"Our priority is to show that religion can be fun," Leech said, "and to leave 'em with a message. The best way to do that is through entertaining."

Their shows include scores of one-liners, mock musical acts, and a couple of standard underdog characters who overcome self-doubt through faith.

One such character is a nerd-like high school student, played by Armstrong, who is encouraged by his macho-type friend, Leech, to get with the flow of everyone else — ditch his Bible.

Through such characters, the New Life Players address the problem of peer pressure and how their audience can deal with it.

You are invited to a showing of day into evening dresses from the 1985 Spring and Summer collection of Helga.

Our personal representative, Hadley Davis, will be here to assist you with your selections Saturday, February 9, Noon to 5:00 p.m. Monday, February 11, 10:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Tuesday, February 12, 10:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m.

MILLIONS CONFISCATED—Customs agents escort three men charged Thursday with conspiracy to transport more than $10,000 out of the United States. Altogether, $5.8 million was confiscated along with a $3 million twin-engine jet aircraft. The men were arrested about midnight Wednesday at the Kleberg County airport near Kingsville. (AP Laserphoto)

Three are held without bond after $5 million cash seized

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Three men arrested while allegedly trying to leave the country with more than $5 million cash were held without bond today pending a federal court hearing.

The three — Gus Maestrales, 38, Oscar Rodriguez-Feo, 48, and Francisco Guirola-Beeche, 34 — made an initial appearance Thursday before U.S. Magistrate Eduardo de Ases who ordered them held until a bond hearing Monday morning.

A federal complaint said the three last month took the same plane to El Salvador after filing a flight plan from Texas to Florida.

A fourth man, Arturo Guerra, 50, was released after being questioned Thursday by federal officials, U.S. Customs spokesman Charles Conroy of Houston said.

"We determined he had no knowledge of the situation and was just hired as a co-pilot," said Ernest Allison of Brownsville, resident district agent in charge of criminal investigation for the U. S. Customs Service.

Maestrales gave his residence as Boca Raton, Fla. Rodriguez-Feo is a native of Cuba, but now lives in Miami. Francisco Guirola-Beeche, gave addresses in Albuquerque, N.M., and Costa Rica, a clerk in the magistrate's office said.

The three are in the Nueces County Jail.

They were arrested by U.S. Customs and Immigration and Naturalization Service agents about midnight Wednesday at Kleberg County Airport as they boarded a T-39 Sabreliner.

They were charged with violating the Currency and Foreign Transaction Reporting Act, which requires anyone taking more than $10,000 in or out of the country to report it to customs agents, Conroy said.

He said customs agents, acting on a tip as well as on information from an on-going investigation of drug smuggling and currency violations, arrested the men.

Department of Public Safety agents and Kleberg County Sheriff's deputies also participated in the arrests.

In addition to the cash, government officials also seized the aircraft, worth an estimated $3 million.

Reports on the exact amount carried by the four differ. DPS records show $5,818,000 was seized, while McAllen Border Patrol headquarters chief Silvestre Reyes said the amount was $5,625,000.

The money displayed at the Customs Service office in Corpus Christi Thursday was packed in seven large suitcases, each guarded by federal agents carrying M-16 rifles.

Each suitcase contained a number of brown paper packages with $10 and $100 bills.

Maestrales was identified as the owner of the Commercial Aviation Enterprises in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., and is believed to be the owner of the confiscated T-39 Sabreliner twin-engine jet.

A section of the complaint form filed by the U.S. Customs Service said that in January one or more of the defendants transported about $1 million in unreported money from the U.S. to Panama using the same jet plane.

Defendant says he wasn't rational

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — A man accused of attempted murder and aggravated kidnapping says he beat, bound and gagged William Miles Hegwood Jr. because the victim had assaulted him and attempted to rape his wife.

"I wasn't thinking rationally," Bernard Stephen Winslow testified Thursday. "I was only trying to protect the innocence of my wife."

Winslow, 35, and his wife Kathleen, 24, are on trial on two-count indictments alleging attempted murder and aggravated kidnapping.

Winslow said he also cut off Hegwood's hair and sprayed him with pruning paint, but denied torturing Hegwood with battery acid.

He said both he and Hegwood came in contact with spilled acid when they were fighting "tooth and toenail."

When he came to from being knocked unconscious, he said, "My mind had already kicked into a different gear. It wasn't passion. It was anger. I don't remember all I did to him. I lost my composure completely."

Winslow said he didn't realize "how badly I'd abused the man" until he saw some two dozen photographs of Hegwood presented at the trial.

The pictures showed Hegwood with both eyes swollen shut and his body covered with bruises and burns.

Search for explosives continues

SHERMAN, Texas (AP) — Search crews are combing the roadsides to find several pounds of plastic explosives strewn along the path of a high-speed police chase that left one man dead and slightly injured one woman, authorities said.

Thomas Francis Woods Jr., 40, of Roanoke, was shot to death Wednesday after he led authorities on a 45-minute, 100-mph chase through Grayson County north of Dallas, said Grayson County Sheriff Jack Driscoll.

As police pursued him down Texas Highway 82, Woods fired shots and hurled about 15 bags of the explosive at police cars, Driscoll said. None exploded because they weren't wired properly, Driscoll said.

"We gave him every opportunity to stop, and we didn't even return fire when he threw those devices," Driscoll said. "But when he opened on my men, I ordered them to open on him."

Theresa Weiler, 25, who was slightly injured in the shootout after police sent Woods' van careening off the road, was taken to the local jail after brief hospital treatment, Driscoll said.

Police have since recovered seven chunks of the white, jelly-like Tovex explosive, the sheriff said.

The rest hasn't been found partly because it blends in so well with the remnants of last week's snow storm, he said.

Police still have no explanation for why Woods was carrying more than 32 pounds of Tovex — most of which authorities destroyed Wednesday night. On Thursday, police were questioning the woman who was riding with Woods during the chase.

"We don't know anything for sure yet," Driscoll said. "We're trying to develop that now."

Although authorities think the remaining Tovex probably wasn't wired to explode, Driscoll urged caution to anyone who might find it.

Tovex is usually used for rock-quarry blasting or oil field seismic work and no permit is required to buy it, the sheriff said.

Woods was pronounced dead at a site four miles east of here about 45 minutes after officials spotted his van, believed to be stolen, and gave chase about 10 a.m. Wednesday.

Driscoll said an informant had led police to the Denison residence.

Construction errors at nuclear plant

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The Comanche Peak nuclear power project has a history of construction and engineering mistakes, and changes at the plant will be made under the direction of independent consultants, a top official of Texas Utilities says.

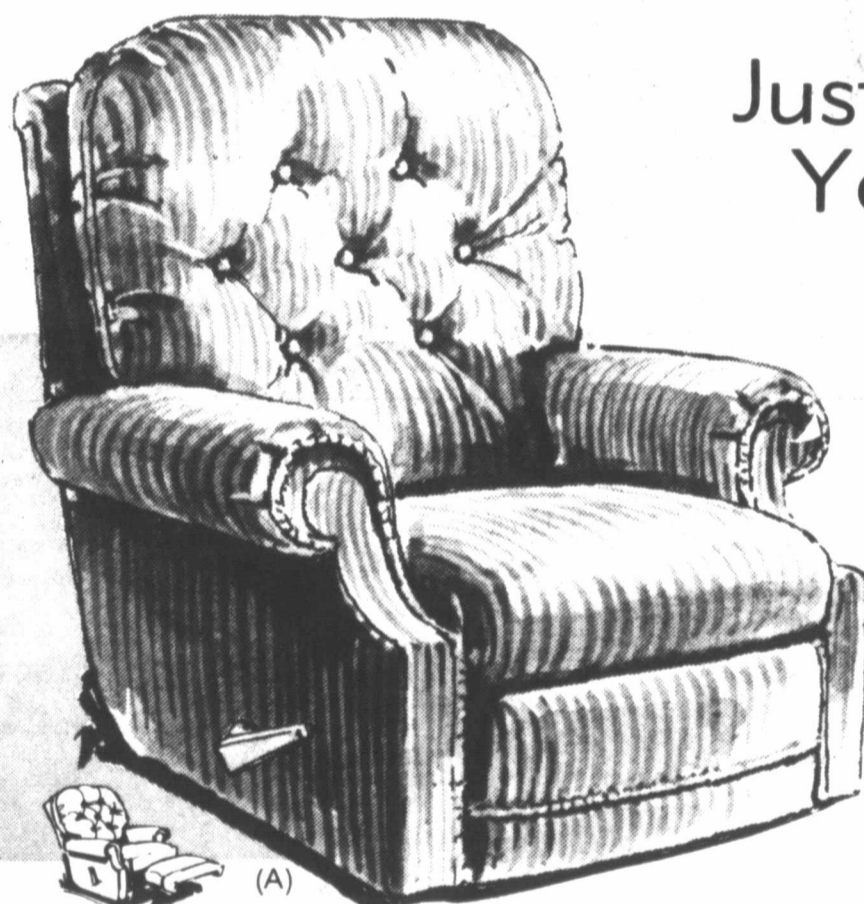

"Comanche Peak has been down a rather rocky road in the last several months," said Michael Spence, president of Texas Utilities Generating Co. "Construction has been under way for 10 years now. Over that 10-year period of time, there have been construction and engineering deficiencies that arose, and we have aggressively worked to clear those up."

Join Us In Worship IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

Dad's steady influence is needed for... LIFE'S OBSTACLES

We can easily see physical obstacles such as logs, boulders, and many other things that may be too difficult for our children to handle, but things that are not physical are not always so obvious. A young child needs help from his parents in spiritual matters too. The church can be an influence on children's lives, but when you, a parent, are taking part in church worship, you can be an even greater influence. Give your children, the leaders of the future, a hand now when they need it most. Take them to church regularly... and you too, will have a fuller and better life.

ATTEND CHURCH

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny, the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Health fair set tonight

The local Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormons) will sponsor a public health fair at 7 p.m. today in the ward building, 731 Sloan.

The fair will feature displays and information on a variety of health-related subjects.

Topics to be presented include emergencies in the home, physical fitness, diet, eye care, dental health and other health matters.

Those attending the fair will be able to receive free blood pressure checks.

Bishop Dale Thorum said the public is invited.

Young, old aid famine in Ethiopia

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

"I am doing this to help the children. Because I know I could have been one of them. And I would want help." So wrote a young girl, Manda, sending her $26 of bank savings for Ethiopian relief.

"It is nice to help," she wrote to Lutheran World Relief. "Feed as many children as you can. God bless the children."

The letter and gift typified the spontaneous outpouring of compassion and generosity that church agencies say has welled among American people, young and old, to ease the travail in sub-Saharan Africa.

Much of the response, both large and small, has come unexpectedly from individuals and groups rather than through regular church channels, simply people stirred in their consciences to do something.

"It has been truly overwhelming," says Norma Kehrberg, head of the United Methodist Committee on Relief.

That impression of a wave of instinctive, active goodheartedness of people across the country, wanting to help, has been reported by the various major church relief organizations.

"American generosity has been overwhelming," says Lawrence A. Pezzullo, executive director of Catholic Relief Services, which says people have donated $25 million to its Ethiopian Emergency Fund in the last two months.

That giving impulse also reportedly has profited some questionable organizations doing little, if any, work in the stricken region. But contributions to the experienced, low-overhead church agencies get to the needy.

Altogether, Ethiopian aid by Catholic Relief Services, Lutheran World Relief and Church World Service, relief arm of the National Council of Churches embracing most major Protestant and Eastern Orthodox Churches, last year totaled more than $30 million.

Administrative or overhead costs for these major church agencies average less than 5 percent, far less than for most aid organizations. The church agencies also have local channels, coordinated in Ethiopia by a joint association.

The crisis there stirred various initiatives at America grass roots.

An Iowa statewide fund-raising drive backed by Gov. Terry Branstad and spearheaded by a major newspaper, the Des Moines Register, collected $668,000 for CWS and CRS, $334,000 each.

In that productive farm state of America's "bread basket," the plight of the starving in Ethiopia has "really touched people," says the paper's editor, James P. Gannon.

Noting that many of Iowa farmers are themselves in economic distress, the Rev. Stephen Orr, chancellor of the Des Moines Roman Catholic diocese, said "some of the hardest hit areas in Iowa were the most generous."

Religion Roundup

DENVER (AP) - Former United Methodist Bishop James Armstrong, who in late 1983 resigned suddenly both as a bishop and president of the National Council of Churches, says he found that "acknowledgement of guilt is not enough."

That, by itself, "leads down an alley to a dead end," he said in a lecture at the Iliff School of Theology, his first public address in the 14 months since his abrupt resignations. He said admitting guilt must be followed with wholesome self-acceptance, forgiveness and grace.

The "benefits of grace come from beyond ourselves," he said. At the time of the resignations, Armstrong referred to "personal failings." His wife, Phyllis, initiated divorce proceedings in March of 1984, but has dropped them. He said they are now rebuilding their lives together.

Priest calls for 'ideological battle'

TORUN, Poland (AP) — A priest has urged Roman Catholics to prepare for an "ideological battle" against the Communist regime following the convictions of four secret police officers in the abduction and murder of a pro-Solidarity cleric.

The appeal, made hours after the trial judges' announced their verdict Thursday, was delivered in the same Warsaw church where the slain priest, the Rev. Jerzy Popielusko, 37, preached sermons in staunch defense of Solidarity, the outlawed independent trade union.

Popielusko was abducted on a highway near Torun, in northern Poland, on Oct. 19, and his body was found, bound, gagged and severely beaten, in a reservoir of the Vistula River 11 days later.

After a six-week trial, the five judges sentenced two of the defendants to 25 years in prison — the most severe penalty in Poland short of execution by hanging.

Chief Judge Artur Kujawa told the court the defendants "soiled the good name of the Polish People's Republic. They put in shame the state's political system."

Kujawa's remarks were broadcast in full by state radio and television.

Col. Adam Pietruszka, the highest-ranking Interior Ministry official charged in the killing, received a 25-year prison sentence for aiding and abetting his three subordinates.

"Pietruszka's aid was a necessary condition for the success of the whole operation," Kujawa said.

The court convicted Capt. Grzegorz Piotrowski of kidnapping and murdering the priest and sentenced him to 25 years in jail, rejecting a prosecution request for the death sentence.

Piotrowski's two subordinates, Lts. Leszek Pekala and Waldemar Chmielewski, were found guilty of murder but received lighter prison terms because they were the "victims of actions by their superiors," in the words of the court. Pekala was sentenced to 15 years; Chmielewski, 14.

More than 1,500 people gathered for a Mass Thursday evening at St. Stanislaw Kostka Church in Warsaw where Popielusko's monthly sermons used to draw thousands of Solidarity sympathizers.

Kim: police placed him under house arrest

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Dissident leader Kim Dae-jung said police used "violence" to separate him from his American supporters upon arrival from two years of self-imposed exile today, and said he had been placed under house arrest.

Americans accompanying Kim said he and his wife were forcibly separated from them upon arrival at Kimpo International Airport outside Seoul. The Americans said they also were roughed up by security forces.

"Police used violence against me. They pushed me. I felt as if I was beaten," Kim, 59, said at a news conference at his home in Seoul.

Patricia Derian, former assistant secretary of state for human rights in the Carter administration, said earlier that Kim was "battered and beaten up. It was thuggery at its height."

"The conduct of officials of the South Korean government today was inexcusable and unnecessary," said Rep. Ed Feighan, D-Ohio, also among those who escorted Kim home.

He said he and Rep. Thomas

Foglietta, D-Penn., were "demanding that the U.S. Embassy in Seoul lodge a formal complaint against the South Korean government."

Kim has said he was returning to support a newly formed opposition party vying for seats in the National Assembly elections Tuesday. MORE

President Chun Doo-hwan's government said it would not return Kim to prison to finish the remaining 17 1/2 years of a 20-year sentence on a sedition conviction, but it added that he would be banned from participating in politics.

Kim said he and his wife left the plane with the two congressmen, Ms. Derian, former U.S. Ambassador to El Salvador Robert White and William Butler, International Commission of Jurists president.

Kim said that when he refused to enter an elevator with police, saying he wanted to go through regular entrance procedures, "they forcibly pushed me very violently. I felt beaten, but I'm not sure if I was beaten. The situation was so confused."

Kim said his outrage was not as great as that of the Americans because "I'm familiar with the Korean government."

U.S. Embassy spokesman David Fitzgerald said in a statement: "If the allegations are true it is a matter of serious concern. ... We have sent a stern note to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs requesting a full explanation."

Seoul Metropolitan Police issued a statement saying they "merely separated Mr. Kim and his family from those accompanying them and escorted them to an elevator in order to ensure his safety. No beating of Mr. Kim or any of the people accompanying him took place."

In Washington, White House spokesman Mark Weinberg said: "We have reports, which although they indicate heavy security, do not indicate any violence."

Kim's wife, Lee Hee-ho, said earlier in a telephone interview that "there was no beating."

Cockfighting still popular in Puerto Rico

EDITOR'S NOTE — There are more than 100 cockfighting rings in Puerto Rico, where the bloody sport which dates back to the Spanish conquistadores is legal. This was the scene at one of the cockpits on a recent Sunday.

By SID MOODY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

CAYEY, Puerto Rico (AP) — A swift tropical dawn pries the lid of night off the steep mountain valley. It is Sunday, Domingo, a day of rest. But the roosters have long been up and crowing their morningsong. It rides up the valley on the trade wind that fans the palm trees and dries their dew.

Some of the birds will sing no more. This is cockfighting day in Puerto Rico.

Justino Rodriguez has opened his country grocery store for half a day. He will close at noon, hide for a few minutes from just-too-late customers, then slip out the back door and head over the mountains for the Coliseo Gallisticos in Cayey. He has two cocks fighting this Domingo.

There are over 100 rings in Puerto Rico, where cockfighting is legal. The contest dates back to the Spanish conquistadores.

Because Justino must mind the store, he has sent someone else to the Coliseo to arrange a match. It is not for the innocent.

Some 60 birds have been brought in at 9 a.m. this Sunday. The best are about 3½ pounds. The best of the best, the Spaniards, are rust colored on the neck, black on the body. They are alert, feisty, lean; as far from the barnyard as the fighting bull is from the dairy.

They are weighed. Birds fight at equal weights. In seconds the handlers size up the competition. They look for a bird that is shorter than theirs. Height is an edge. They look for inferior feathering. Feathers cushion blows. They look for a shaved spur above the cock's beak. Such a spur means the cock has fought before. It is where the wicked-looking artificial spur is attached. They look for pronounced rings of callous on the shins. This is how you tell a cock's age. It does not tell you if the bird is wiser, ring wiser. Nothing does. You must, at the end, guess.

An owner may wear shabby clothes and cut his bird's feathers coarsely to delude you into thinking he and his cock are bumpkins, pushovers.

All this your eye must take in, for you are here for one thing: to bet. A man who thinks he has a superior bird will taunt. "Is that a chicken?" He means the bird. But he means you, too. At the same time, the "chicken" owner may drag his heels, play the coward hoping to pump up the size of the bet.

It is a ceremony of gamesmanship.

Justino's man finally agrees to match his bird with another for $50. A bearded stranger from San Juan goes a local into betting $500. The aficionados nod their heads. They won't miss this one.

Justino's bird, like all the others, has been bred for one thing: to fight. He has never known a hen.

"It weakens them, just like a boxer," says Wilfredo, a friend of Justino's who also fights cocks.

The birds are fed a special diet of high protein dog food and corn. They are injected with vitamins. Once a week they spar, without the deadly spurs and with their beaks sealed, with an inferior partner. When they begin training, at about a year, they weigh four pounds. Training reduces them half a pound to fighting trim.

Justino doesn't look Latin. He looks like Rod Steiger. Not long ago he grappled a gun away from two men who tried to hold up his store. He shot them both. They recovered and are suing him for assault.

In the parking lot of the Coliseo, among the muddy pickups and new Japanese cars, Justino produces a velvet-lined man's jewelry box. Inside are six artificial spurs. They are about 1½ inches long, rounded and curved to a sharp point. A spur maker can take a week to turn out a set. They can cost $200.

The Coliseo is a plain white cinderblock building. In front there is a cafe. Along one wall is a worn wooden bar. The kitchen is serving fried chicken, barnyard chicken, through a window next to it. Men crowd the bar for a last beer before the fighting begins. They wear flowered sports shirts and embroidered Filipino ones, tails out, and talk animatedly about their bets. There are a few women, one with a babe in arms.

The high rollers, the men who have bought $7 ringside seats, have sized up the cocks, crowing challengingly in cages behind the arena, have sized up who's betting today, have sized up the wads in their billfolds.

Everything is in cash. The odds change as the fortunes of the cocks in the ring ebb and flow. A bettor may have half a dozen or more bets going at varying odds as the fight progresses. He remembers them all. He pays off, in cash, at fight's end. It is unthinkable to do otherwise.

"It is the ethics of the sportsman," says Randolph.

Justino goes into the side room where the cocks are readied. He holds his bird while an assistant, his face creased with ring wisdom, whittles the natural spurs down to a nub. He aligns the wicked-looking artificial spurs just so, then tapes them. The bird is ready.

Justino gives his bird to a teen-ager in a green and white T-shirt. It says "Coliseo Gallisticos, Cayey" across the front. The cock's comb has been cut off to deprive an opponent of a beak hold. Its legs have been plucked to distribute the musculature evenly. So has its stomach, to find and patch wounds should it survive. Its back is plucked, too, to reduce weight.

The boys put the birds in facing plastic cages.

Sampson scores 42

Rockets hold off Warriors

Warriors' guard Steve Burtt tries for a steal against the Rockets' Lionel Hollins.

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Rockets didn't have the killer instinct against Golden State Thursday night but they had Ralph Sampson.

The Rockets, against the team with the worst record in the National Basketball Association, had to depend on 42 points and 15 rebounds from Sampson to score a 112-105 victory that appeared to be falling apart in the third quarter.

The Rockets blasted to an 18-point lead early in the third quarter but started to falter when Sampson broke out of the blocks, missing his career high by only one point.

"I think we're much better than the 21 losses indicate," forward Robert Reid said of Houston's 28-21 record at the All-Star break. "We don't have the killer instinct. We're not putting teams away. We've lost a lot of games we should have won."

Sampson's 31-point second half performance earned the rare praise of Rockets Coach Bill Fitch.

"The first five minutes of the ball game you could have bought him cheap," Fitch said. "But the reason I can come down on him is he came back and bailed us out with some great play. If you're going to be a leader, this is where you have to do it."

The Rockets spurred to a 50-38 halftime lead and expanded it to 60-42 early in the third quarter before a trio of Warriors, Purvis Short, Jerome Whitehead and Eric Floyd, pulled Golden State to a 69-65 deficit with 2:31 left in the period and a 79-70 disadvantage at the end of the quarter.

Sampson scored nine of Houston's last 10 points to keep the lead.

"We'll take the bottom line, the win, no matter how it looked," Sampson said. "Our record could be better but hopefully we'll come back a lot stronger."

Whitehead spent much of his game trying to slow down Sampson.

"At 7-4, there's not much I can do about him," Whitehead said. "I don't like to make excuses but he's tough because he's so long and so tall. You always need backside help and (Rodney) McCray and Akeem (Olajuwon) and all the guards know they can throw the alley oop to him at any time."

Sampson's performance overshadowed the season high 25 points, nine rebounds and eight assists by McCray.

"I get up for games like this because I know we have to play well here," Sampson said. "I'm scared they'll have that one good game."

North shares lead in Hawaiian Golf Open

HONOLULU (AP) — Former U.S. Open champ Andy North, sniffing and snuffling with a heavy cold, said he was feeling so poorly it helped him play well.

"I was just kind of staggering around out there," he said after a fast finish — five birdies on the last six holes — put the cap on a no-bogey round of 66 and gave him a share of the first round lead Thursday in the $500,000 Hawaiian Open golf tournament.

"It often happens that when I'm not feeling well I play better. I just kind of forget about how I stand and what anybody else is doing and just play the one shot at a time," North said.

"I didn't start thinking about it until the 15th. I was thinking, 'hey, I'm three under and if I birdie 18 I can finish four under.'"

And he followed with a pair of 10-foot birdie putts on the last two holes that lifted him into a share of the top spot with Hal Sutton, Scott Simpson and Canadian Dan Halldorson.

Mark O'Meara, winner of last week's Bing Crosby National Pro-Am, led a group at 67, five under par on the Wai'aleae Country Club course and a single shot off the lead.

Also at that figure were Fred Couples, Dan Pohl, Vance Heafner, Larry Mize and Mike Smith. Andy Bean, who often plays well in this event, and Craig Stadler topped the big group at 68.

With soft greens, temperatures reaching near 80 and the prevailing trade winds making the par 5s play a little shorter, the scores were extremely low. More than 30 players were locked within three shots of the lead.

Masters champion Ben Crenshaw was among them, with a 69. Tom Watson was not. After going four under par on his front side, he had putting problems on the back, required 39 strokes coming home and had to settle for a 71. Jack Renner, who has finished first and second in this event in the last two years, also was one under par.

Arnold Palmer, 55, who now spends most of his time on the Seniors Tour, shot 74.

"Magic" watches Spartans post upset

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

The "Magic" was back at Michigan State.

And it helped carry the Spartans to a 65-56 upset of ninth-ranked Illinois, keeping Michigan State alive in the Big Ten Conference race.

It all happened as the man who led Michigan State to the 1979 NCAA title, Earvin "Magic" Johnson, sat on the bench. Johnson had stopped off in East Lansing, Mich., on his way to Sunday's National Basketball Association All-Star game in Indianapolis, where he will represent the Los Angeles Lakers.

"I think the fact that Earvin was here gave our kids a lift," Michigan State Coach Jud Heathcote said. "I also think it gave the coaching staff a lift, especially the old coach."

Michigan State and Illinois now both have 6-4 Big Ten records, two games behind conference co-leaders Iowa and Michigan. Illinois is 18-6 overall.

In another Big Ten game, eighth-ranked Michigan defeated Purdue 95-84. Also, No. 11 Nevada-Las Vegas beat Pacific 97-72, No. 14 Louisiana Tech downed Texas-Arlington 86-61 and 15th-ranked North Carolina beat Virginia 82-73. Top Ten

Michigan won its eighth straight game, going 17-3 overall and 8-2 to tie Iowa for the Big Ten lead. Junior center Roy Tarpley scored 21 of his career-high 31 points in the second half as the Wolverines turned a 41-35 halftime lead into a 69-45 advantage with about 10 minutes to play. Second Ten

Nevada-Las Vegas extended the longest current winning streak in the nation to 17 with an easy Pacific Coast Athletic Association victory over Pacific. Ed Catchings scored 12 of his 16 points in the second half for UNLV, and the Runnin' Rebels blew the game open late in the first half with a 19-10 scoring burst. The victory gave UNLV an 18-2 mark, 11-0 in the PCAA.

Louisiana Tech chalked up its third straight victory with help from the inside work of Robert Goldbolt and Willie Simmons. Goldbolt had 17 points, seven rebounds and five assists, while Simmons had six blocked shots in the Southland Conference victory over Texas-Arlington. Tech trails SLC-leading Lamar by a half game with a 6-1 conference record. The Bulldogs are 19-2 overall.

North Carolina had to hold off a late rally by Virginia before winning the Atlantic Coast Conference game. Virginia whittled away at a 16-point lead until cutting the margin to 73-71 with nearly two minutes left, but the Tar Heels scored the next nine points, five from the free-throw line, to win going away.

Pampa High swim teams place in Amarillo meet

The Pampa High swim teams are now preparing for the district meet after last weekend's action in the Amarillo Invitational Meet.

Both Pampa boys and girls finished eighth in the Amarillo meet.

The Pampa girls were led by Amy Raymond, who won both the 100 freestyle (1:00.27) and the 100 breaststroke (1:13.89).

No other Pampa swimmer in the girls' division placed above ninth. Renita Hill placed ninth in both the 100 backstroke and 100 breaststroke.

Pauletta Morrow placed ninth in the 200 freestyle and Betsy Chambers was ninth in the 50 freestyle.

In the boys' division, John Edwards was Pampa's top swimmer. Edwards placed sixth in the 100 freestyle and eighth in the 100 backstroke.

The 200 medley relay of Edwards, R.F. Hupp, Brad Pope and Patt Richards placed seventh.

Pampa rips Canadian in opening round of JV girls' tournament

Pampa rolled past Canadian, 46-28, Thursday night in the opening round of the White Deer Junior Varsity Girls Tournament.

Pampa held Canadian to just two points in the second quarter while rolling up a 21-7 halftime lead.

Brandi Michael led Pampa in scoring with 12 points, followed by Camilla Brown with 9.

Jaco led Canadian with 9 points. Pampa goes against Fritch in second-round action at 6 p.m. tonight. The Pampa JVs are coached by Allison Ott.

Baseball Hall of Fame shortstop Rabbit Maranville was only 5-5 in height.

Estes' death still haunts family, friends

Twenty years ago, Wayne Estes played the basketball game of his career, three hours later he died.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Twenty years ago, Wayne Estes played the best game of his basketball career. Three hours later, he died, under circumstances so bizarre that friends and family are still haunted by the memory. — By MIKE CLARK AP Sports Writer

Maybe if Wayne Estes had been an inch or two shorter, he wouldn't have been an All-American. Maybe he wouldn't have been a scoring machine. But, then, maybe he would be alive today.

"As far as I'm concerned, if Wayne Estes hadn't been killed, he'd be almost forgotten today, even though he was one of the greatest players ever to play basketball," Del Lyons said. "I feel bad that a person has to die to be remembered."

Lyons and Estes were classmates, roommates and teammates on Utah State's strong basketball teams of the mid-1960s. They spent practically every waking hour together.

"I did the cooking and Wayne did the cleaning up," said Lyons, now an insurance agent in Logan, Utah.

On Feb. 8, 1965, Estes, a 6-foot-6, 225-pound forward, was averaging almost 34 points a game. He had just scored a field house-record 48 points to boost his career total to 2,001.

Three hours later, he died.

"I can say without fear of contradiction that he was the greatest variety shooter who ever lived," said his coach, Ladell Anderson, now head coach at Brigham Young. "Maybe Bird is as good, I don't know."

"There's guys who get a million dollars for being able to dunk and maybe hit a few jumpers, but there's never been anybody who had such a command of all the shots that he did."

Estes, Lyons and Mike Murray went for a post-game pizza after Wayne's record-setting show against the University of Denver. The players felt like celebrating. Estes took a break to call his folks in Anaconda, Mont.

On their way home, they noticed the remains of a car wreck.

Two cars loaded with students had raced along a snow-slick street near the Utah State campus. One went out of control and smashed into a power pole, killing a passenger and splaying high-voltage lines across the roadway.

Richard Wright, now a lieutenant with the Logan Police Dept. and one of the officers at the accident scene, recalls being concerned about those downed wires. He called a power company workman to turn off the juice.

"The guy came and said there wasn't any problem, that as soon as the wire hit the street, a relay switched and the power was off," Wright said. "And then he just rolled up that wire and went away."

Wright didn't realize that another wire, also knocked loose by the wreck, was dangling nearby.

"There'd been hundreds of people walking under it all night long," Wright said. "Of course, nobody else was 6-6."

Lyons, a 6-2 guard, saw the wire. Estes didn't.

"I told Wayne to duck," Lyons said. "But the wire brushed his head, and he swatted at it. If I'd been an inch taller, I'd probably have gotten it, not him."

The electricity shot through Estes' massive frame, his hand locking around the wire as he fell to the ground. Murray reached for Estes but Lyons pushed him away, then kicked the wire clear. Estes was probably dead when he hit the ground.

Joseph Estes, who retired after 31 years at the Anaconda Corp. smelting plant, was working the night shift.

"I had stayed home because I knew they were playing and he always called after a game," Wayne's father said. "I talked to him, then gave the phone to his mother and I went to work."

"Later, my brother-in-law came to get me at work. He told me Wayne had been killed in a car wreck. It wasn't until I got home and Ladell Anderson called that we found out what really happened."

Wayne had just made the first payment on a $10,000 triple-indemnity life insurance policy. And, in an interview after that last game, he had talked of numbness in his hands and arms.

"He told us that, too," Joseph Estes said. "He said he was shooting the ball, but somebody else was putting it in. They kept writing stories, making a big deal out of this, like Wayne had some kind of premonition of death. We finally had our attorney talk to them."

"And that insurance policy. We told him he should wait until he turned pro — you know, the Lakers were after him — and he said he signed because this salesman wouldn't leave him alone. He'd be out playing ball with some little kids in the playgrounds and here'd come this guy. Wayne said he finally signed it just to get the guy off his back."

"Hey, we were 21 years old! We never talked about dying," Lyons said. "We were excited to be there. Back then, it was a big thrill just to get a basketball scholarship to play at Utah State University."

"I remember I used to get sick before games and I couldn't wait to get into the locker room at halftime and throw up again. It was the same thing with Wayne. His hands were numb because he was so excited."

After Estes arrived at Utah State, Greg Hansen, now a sports columnist with the Arizona Daily Star in Tucson, was one of the "gym rats" who liked to shadow him around.

"Remember when you'd have playground games, how you'd pretend to be some big star? Well, you had to stand in line for three weeks to be Wayne Estes," Hansen recalls. "It's hard to explain the hold he had on the young audience. He was just captivating. He was so big, but he was so gentle."

"I was in the eighth grade when he died," Hansen continues. "I remember the morning after the game, my mother came in to wake me up, and I could see her eyes were red, that she'd been crying. It took her five minutes to tell me what had happened."

"On the street corner waiting for the bus, it was the same thing. Even the little girls who didn't know anything about basketball were crying."

Joseph Estes remembers his son as "one of the best. He was just a good kid."

"There's not a day goes by we don't talk about Wayne. It's been 20 years and it doesn't seem like any time at all."

Jurors side with Campbell

HOUSTON (AP) — Jurors took less than 10 minutes to decide that All-Pro running back Earl Campbell does not owe a Houston security company $10,000 for a burglar alarm that was installed in his home four years ago.

Campbell, who was traded by the Houston Oilers to the New Orleans Saints last season, said the case taught him a tough lesson about making gentlemen's agreements.

"I've learned one thing. Everything is to be in black and white. Shaking hands is just not good enough," he said.

The state court jury unanimously ruled Thursday that Campbell did not owe the security firm any money because no contract, written or oral, existed.

After court adjourned, Campbell shook hands with the jurors and signed autographs.

James Sinclair, owner of Saturn Security Services, testified he installed two security systems for Campbell free of charge in 1982 in exchange for the athlete's permission to use his name for promotional purposes.

Sinclair said that after the firm installed a third system, Campbell asked his name no longer be used.

Sinclair claimed Campbell refused to allow it to remove the equipment and also would not pay for or lease it. He said Campbell ignored requests for the equipment to be returned until legal action was taken.

After the trial, Sinclair said the verdict "didn't prove he didn't owe me. He just proved we didn't have a valid contract."

Driver dies from injuries

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — 34-year-old Francis Affleck, a race car driver from Charlotte, N.C., died when his Ford crashed on the backstretch of the Daytona International Speedway and flipped several times, raceway officials said.

Affleck, a native of St. Lambert, Quebec, suffered massive head injuries and was pronounced dead at the Halifax Medical Center in Daytona Beach shortly after the 1:15 p.m. EST accident.

Oilers to increase ticket prices

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers have announced they will raise ticket prices by an average of $3 next season.

"We held the line longer than other teams," Herzog said. "We have the smallest seating capacity in the league. The average capacity in the NFL is 67,200. The Astrodome holds 47,652 spectators.

The increase means about 40,000 seats in the Houston Astrodome now will be priced at $17, up from $14 last year. Club-level seats will be $23 and pavilion tickets will be $14.

Herzog said about one-third of the increase — $1.04 — covers the cost of a state amusement tax.

CONFRONTATION—A group of blind activists attempt to block an exit gate at Washington National Airport Thursday night, in protest over USAir's refusal to seat a blind passenger near one of a jetliner's emergency exits. The protesters, sponsored by the National Federation of the Blind, delayed departure of a USAir flight by 30 minutes and then staged a noisy demonstration inside the airport. (AP Laserphoto)

Denied certain seats, blind activists protest airline rule

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of 30 blind activists protesting USAir's refusal to seat handicapped passengers near emergency exits say they are tired of getting second-class treatment — even if they are traveling coach.

At issue is a USAir policy, similar to that of other airlines, that prohibits certain people — including the handicapped, the elderly and young children — from taking seats near emergency exits.

The protesters, members of the National Federation of the Blind, delayed a USAir flight for 30 minutes Thursday night and accused the airline of a civil rights violation for forcing the president of the group's Indianapolis chapter off a plane a day earlier at National because he would not vacate his seat adjacent to an emergency exit.

Attorney Russell Anderson, the chapter president, returned to the airport Thursday with 30 members of the Baltimore-based group and demanded a seat in one of the emergency-exit rows in the coach section of a USAir Flight 463 bound for Columbus, Ohio and Indianapolis.

USAir personnel again refused to seat Anderson in any of the 10 seats in emergency exit aisles, although they offered him his choice of all other available seats. Anderson declined an alternate seat.

"The seat doesn't matter," Anderson said. "It's the principle. Blind people will continue to be threatened if we don't stand up for our rights."

No arrests were made at the demonstration, but federation lawyer Marc Maurer promised the protesters would return today to resume picketing in front of the USAir ticket counter.

"We won't stop until this problem is solved," said Maurer. "We do not insist upon preferential treatment, but we will not tolerate being forced into second-class status."

Meanwhile, USAir spokesman Dave Shipley told reporters, "We welcome (Anderson) to board the plane. But it is our policy not to seat handicapped people near emergency exits."

After being denied an emergency-exit seat, Anderson and 30 supporters, many with seeing-eye dogs, rushed past the airport's metal detector en masse and crowded together at the exit gate, thereby preventing other passengers from boarding the plane.

After a 30-minute standoff, USAir officials began quietly guiding passengers to the plane through nearby gates before the blind protesters could find those entrances and block them.

The 110-seat DC-9 jet then departed without Anderson.

In December there was a similar dispute between People Express and a passenger at Logan International Airport in Boston.

In the Boston incident, Judy Sanders of Minneapolis took a seat at random on a People Express flight. It happened to be near an exit, and she was arrested on a charge of being disorderly when she refused to move.

Officials concerned about rise in newspaper ads for adoption

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — The classified ads are usually from well-off couples in the metropolitan New York or Boston area. The ads say the couple will offer "love, security," all material advantages.

Wanted: a "white newborn." The price: $8,000 to $12,000.

A recent increase in such advertisements in Vermont newspapers has state adoption officials wondering how widespread the practice is and concerned about a lack of safeguards.

"This is a new phenomena," said Jeffery Johnson, director of Vermont Children's Aid Society, the largest non-profit child welfare program in the state. "I have never seen this many ads before here in the state."

"We have become aware of them within the last two years," said Maureen Thompson, head of the state's adoption services. "But there have been a whole lot of them lately."

Fifteen personal ads for adoptions were placed in Sunday editions of the Burlington Free Press and the Sunday Rutland Herald-Times Argus.

The increase is a result of difficulty in adopting children in metropolitan areas, Ms. Thompson said. "Since there are so very few healthy infants available, they have to search farther away. They have to advertise as far away as Vermont."

In Vermont, where private adoptions are legal, social workers call the process the "gray market" because the money paid to a mother who places her child for adoption is much less than in other states.

In those areas, the high cost has created a "black market."

Adoption officials and a New York woman seeking to adopt a child through a classified advertisement say that the price of private adoption in Vermont is between $8,000 to $12,000. In New York or New Jersey, where it is illegal, it can cost $20,000.

In 1984, there were about 300 adoptions in Vermont. Johnson believes about 100 of those adoptions were private, including many who used newspaper ads.

A Hicksville, N.Y., woman, who would not give her name in a telephone interview Wednesday, said she and her husband have placed a classified ad in Vermont newspapers for the last two months.

"I would say it is impossible to go through an agency," she said. "You have to wait years."

She said she and her husband successfully adopted a girl two years ago through a newspaper ad.

Other ads report of the "advantages of warm, loving, secure home," or "all material advantages available."
