Israeli warplanes hit Palestinian guerrillas

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli warplanes attacked a Palestinian guerrilla base in east Lebanon today in the second air strike in the area in 24 hours, and Beirut radio stations said Syrian positions unleashed a screen of ground-to-air missiles against the raiding jets.

The military command in Tel Aviv said all its planes returned safely to base after scoring "accurate hits" on a suspected Palestinian guerrilla base along the Beirut-Damascus international highway in the Bekaa Valley.

There were no immediate reports of casualties in the new raid that was staged at 11:45 a.m. near Taalbaya, about a mile from the highway town of Chtaura, which houses the command of the Syrian army along the Bekaa ceasefire line with Israel.

Israeli military sources, who spoke only on condition they not be identified, said the target was a base consisting of several huts and tents.

Beirut radio stations had no reports on whether any Israeli planes were hit by the Syrian ground-to-air missiles.

It was Israel's second air strike in the area within 24 hours and the third this year. Both the Israeli command and Beirut radio stations said the target was a base operated by the Abu Moussa group, the Syrian-backed faction that rebelled against Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat in 1983.

Two Israeli jets bombed a suspected base of the pro-Moscow Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine in the same area Sunday. Witnesses said a woman and her child were killed in the bombing and the woman's husband was seriously wounded.

Israeli planes have attacked targets in Lebanon three times this year. In 1984 there were 16 air strikes, against both Palestinian and Lebanese Shiite Moslem targets.

Sunday's strike came a few hours after three Israeli soldiers were killed in South Lebanon.

Mattox confident at trial beginning

AUSTIN (AP) — A confident Attorney General Jim Mattox entered the Travis County Courthouse today saying he expects to be found innocent of the commercial bribery charges against him.

"I'm glad to be getting it going," Mattox said as he arrived for the scheduled opening of his trial.

Asked whether he expected to be found innocent, Mattox replied: "Obviously, I believe in the system."

Mattox, 41, has pleaded innocent to the third-degree felony. He is accused of threatening the bond business of a Houston law firm.

State District Judge Mace B. Thurman, who is presiding in the case, said he would consider motions today. Jury selection should start Wednesday, Thurman said, and lawyers should begin presenting evidence on Friday.

The trial might take a month, the lawyers said.

Prosecuting the case is Travis

County District Attorney Ronnie Earle, while Mattox's defense team includes prominent Austin trial lawyers Roy Q. Minton and Charles Burton.

The grand jury indictment, which followed a 2½-month probe, alleges that Mattox threatened in a phone conversation to block state-required approval of public bonds submitted by the Houston law firm of Fulbright & Jaworski.

Mattox had sought to have the indictment quashed, but state appeals courts rejected his bid.

According to records filed in the court last week, Mattox is subpoenaing eight newspaper reporters, asking for all "notes, written memorandums or any other kind of records" relating to news stories written about Mattox up through Aug. 31, 1983.

Mattox confirmed recently that his office had investigated reports of alleged misuse of state cars by Earle's office.

At 11:30 p.m. on Jan. 12, a fire was discovered at the Rustic Inn Restaurant located at 318 West Brown in Pampa. The fire raged throughout the building and was finally brought under control at about 5 a.m.

An investigation was conducted by the Arson Investigation Unit of the city of Pampa and after much effort and laboratory testing of materials recovered at the fire scene, it was determined to be an arson fire.

Two cars were seen leaving the back area of the restaurant just prior to the fire being discovered and reported.

Crime Stoppers of Pampa will pay $1,000 for information leading to the arrest and indictment of the person or persons responsible for this crime.

If you have information about this arson, or any other crime, you can report it and remain anonymous by calling 669-2222.

States put more money in education

WASHINGTON (AP) — Their treasuries benefitting from economic recovery, state after state is considering ways of making good on all the talk about improving education, an Associated Press survey finds.

"This is the year for states to put their money where their mouth is," said Steven Gold, fiscal analyst with the National Conference of State Legislatures in Denver. "If it isn't going to come this year, it may never."

After lean years that saw cutbacks and salary freezes through the 1982 and 1983 recession, most state legislatures are finding budget surpluses, the AP survey found.

The upturn is attributed to both economic improvement that has enhanced tax revenues and to the budget cutting states resorted to in 1982 and 1983, Gold said. "Nearly all the states are in much better shape than they were before. Compared to '82 and '83 things are better, but they could hardly have gotten worse."

While at least 15 states are considering some kind of tax cut, many are looking for ways to put more money into education.

Many states are considering proposals for merit pay or other teacher incentives such as "career ladder" advancement plans, new testing programs for students, and increased standards for teachers. Such career and pay advancement programs based on performance were a recommendation common to the many recent studies on education.

Some states are stepping up levels of state support for local school districts or raising teacher pay. Boosts of 10 percent or more in teacher salaries or other education support are on the table in states including California, Georgia, Alabama, Kansas, Connecticut, Vermont, Utah and Nevada.

"1983 was such a bad year that despite all the attention to education, many of them couldn't do anything because of a lack of funds," said Sharon Brown of the legislative organization's Washington office.

In Oklahoma, facing a $120 million shortfall due to depressed oil prices, Gov. George Nigh has proposed a 5 percent pay raise for teachers and a new career ladder program — the first pay raise for teachers or state workers there in three years.

In Massachusetts, Democratic Gov. Michael S. Dukakis is proposing a four-year, $220 million schools program, less ambitious than one he failed to win last year. It would establish statewide skills testing for students and give teachers a salary increase while subjecting them to periodic evaluations and tightened certification and tenure requirements.

"This is the year we're going to have to do something — and I mean something fundamental, something sweeping," Dukakis said.

In Nevada, Gov. Dick Bryan proposed a 25 percent increase in education support over two years, including a 15 percent pay increase.

Minnesota, with a $1 billion surplus projected, is considering major education changes as well as a $604 million tax cut proposed by Democratic Gov. Rudy Perpich.

Perpich proposes a voucher plan to let 11th- and 12th-grade students go to the public school of their choice without regard for district lines. He has also proposed a swap of tax responsibilities with local governments that would increase state support of schools to 80 percent from 63 percent. And he would increase state spending for kindergarten through post-secondary education by 19 percent over two years.

The AP survey found that in sharp contrast to the fight over federal deficits and budget cuts, some states are expecting huge surpluses: $986 million in California, $600 million to $800 million in New Jersey, $400 million in Wisconsin, at least $268 million in New York.

City to consider logo contest

Pampa city commissioners will consider initiating a contest to develop a logo for city use during their regular meeting at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday.

The logo will be used for all city vehicles, stationery, water bills, patches for city employee wear and other materials.

City Manager Bob Hart said the logo will help provide a sense of cohesive identity for city offices and employees.

In other matters, the commissioners will hold two public hearings on zoning change requests.

The first will concern a request for zoning change from Agriculture to Single Family 2 District for Briarwood Place Subdivision, located between Harvester and 18th on the south and north and between Davis and Zimmers on the east and west.

Briarwood Place will be used for residences and the new Lamar Full Gospel Assembly Church.

The other hearing relates to a zoning change from Agriculture to Retail District for land surrounding Coronado Community Hospital to the north and west. The land is being subdivided into lots for future medical and health care related building sites.

The commission will consider action on two ordinances for second reading. One relates to granting a zoning variance for expansion of the Furr's Family Center, and the other concerns establishing regularly scheduled workshop sessions for the city commission.

In other business, commissioners will consider acceptance of street paving in the Chaumont Addition, adoption of a resolution and order calling for the election of city offices for April 6, and approval of accounts payable and salary changes.

Hart will report on a Highway Department meeting, a Texas Municipal League legislative seminar and Clean Pampa, Inc., matters.

Most area cities show gains in retail sales

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

All but one city in The Pampa News' reporting area reported improvements in their sales tax payments from the state according to the latest report, though some are still running behind totals for the same period last year.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock sent checks this month totaling $111.8 million in local sales tax payments to the 991 cities levying the one percent local sales tax.

February checks represent taxes collected on sales made in December and the fourth quarter of 1984 and reported to the Comptroller by Jan. 20.

"Disappointing Christmas retail sales during the 1984 Christmas season held February payments to a puny 6 percent increase over last February for the state overall," Bullock said.

"And even his little increase is due as much to new items being taxed for the first time as it is to any real sales growth," he added.

But Bullock sent Pampa a check this month for $198,189.34, nearly $17,500 more than the $180,701.08 Pampa had received in February of last year from December, 1983, sales.

Total rebates from the state in the first two months of the year are $301,611.48, a 7.33 percent increase from the $281,025.87 recorded for the same 1984 period.

Last month the city was registering a 3.09 percent growth in comparable January checks.

Elsewhere in Gray County, Lefors received a check this month for $1,479.80, nearly 47 percent more than the payment of $789.88 it had in the previous February.

Last month the city received no check, with Bullock reporting the city had a 100 percent drop in payments from January, 1984. With its February check representing its total yearly payments to date, however, Lefors registered an 11.94 percent hike above the $1,321.95 recorded for the first two monthly checks of 1984.

McLean received a February check for $2,688.98, nearly $850 below the $3,534.08 sent from the state in the same month last year.

Its yearly total payments are $3,558.64, representing a 27.47 percent decline from the $4,906.65 it received in its first two monthly checks in 1984. In January, however, McLean was registering a drop of 34.64 percent.

Two Carson County cities improved their sales tax payments from their January reports, while one showed a decrease.

The state sent Groom a check this month for $2,099.62, falling from the $2,434.07 it had received last February. To date its yearly payments stand at $2,984.53, a 14.84 percent dip from the $3,504.78 recorded last year in the same two-month period. But that's an improvement from the 17.35 decrease reported in January.

With a February check for $1,459.17, Skellytown dropped into the negative column. Last February the city had a check for $1,709.16.

Payments for the first two months of 1985 total $2,835.10 for Skellytown, resulting in a 5.88 percent fall from the $3,012.07 recorded in the same 1984 period. In January Bullock had reported a 5.56 percent increase for the city.

White Deer received a payment of $2,394.17 this month, down from the February, 1984, check for $2,778.46. Its yearly payments to date are $2,984.01, down 37.95 percent from the $4,808.84 in payments for the first two months of 1984. However, in January the city was registering a 70.95 percent decline.

In Hemphill County, Canadian edged nearer the positive column with a check this month for $16,784.18, about 6 percent less than the $17,942.74 received from the state last February.

Its total payments for the first two months of the year stand at $26,381.39. That's 18.81 percent below the $32,495.02 recorded for the same 1984 period. But according to Bullock's reports, Canadian was showing a 34.05 percent decrease in January.

Miami had a drop in its February check this year, receiving $2,678.35 compared to $3,033.93 for its previous February payment.

Total yearly payments this year for the Roberts County city are $3,636.42, falling 41.31 percent below the $6,196.42 recorded for the first two months in 1984. But Bullock had reported a 69.71 percent plummet for the city in January payments.

In Wheeler County, Mobeetie is off to a good start for the first two months of the new year. The city had a check this month for $689.32, more than $300 under the $1,003.85 received in its February, 1984, payment.

But last year its February check was also its total payments for the first two months of the year. With a check received last month, Mobeetie's total payments for this year now stand at $1,355.26, representing a 35.01 percent hike.

At this time last year, Mobeetie was reporting a 69.25 percent decline. It had recorded a 42.84 percent drop for all its 1984 payments compared with 1983, indicating improved sales for the city.

Wheeler had a February payment of $5,256.05, about $845 below the previous February check for $6,101.10.

Its yearly payments to date are $7,331.14, a drop of 23.40 percent from the $9,570.61 it had gained in the first two months of last year. But in January Bullock had recorded a 40.19 percent decline for Wheeler, indicating some improvement in sales from December, 1983.

VIEWS SHOW — Atlanta City Councilwoman Carolyn Long Banks watches the CBS Sunday night showing titled "The Atlanta Child Murders" at a local hotel. Some officials and team captains of the Search Force which hunted for clues on Saturday mornings watched the show at the hotel. (AP Laserphoto)

Leaders keep up criticism as deaths movie is shown

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta's tragic string of child slayings played as TV drama while community leaders kept up their attack on the CBS program as a "disgusting" distortion, psychologists counseled worried parents and broadcasters got instant viewer criticism.

The first part of "The Atlanta Child Murders" aired Sunday night after weeks of criticism from local officials. The conclusion of the five-hour, two-part movie is scheduled Tuesday night.

"It's totally disgusting," said City Council member Carolyn Long Banks. "I've seen it two times and the more I see, the madder I get about the content of it and its effect on children across the country."

The movie contained "absolute lies," she said.
CBS, which has defended the project as a balanced "docudrama," met with city representatives and agreed to air an advisory saying the movie is not a documentary and is partly fictionalized.

It is based on the slayings of 29 young Atlanta blacks and the two 1982 murder convictions of Wayne B. Williams, a self-styled talent scout. Sunday's segment of the movie covered the events leading up to Williams' arrest.

The network's local affiliate, WAGA-TV, reported that viewers began calling Sunday night after the movie had been on about 20 minutes and the station received about 150 calls by the time the program concluded.

"Most were complaining that we or CBS — shouldn't have shown it in the first place," said Kevin Dunn, the station's assistant news director. "The most common complaint was of the portrayal of people here as hicks."

George Schweitzer, a CBS spokesman in New York, said the network received about 50 calls, "mostly negative."

More than 100 telephone calls were received by an Atlanta school system hot line. Ruby Tatum, a psychologist with the school system, said many calls were from parents whose children were upset by the movie and several were from out-of-state callers who wanted to know if Williams is free or locked up.

Williams, serving two life sentences at the Georgia Diagnostic and Classification Center in Jackson, watched the movie on a black-and-white television with about 100 fellow inmates, said John Siler, a state spokesman.

Asked whether the film might put Williams in danger from other prisoners, he said, "We're keeping a good, close eye on him."

Newborn dwarfs will go home this week

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The world's first dwarf twins born to a dwarf couple from Helotes five days ago in Methodist Hospital are reported doing well and are scheduled for release later this week, the twins' father said Sunday.

"They are doing super," Joseph Michael and Jacob William. "They are undergoing routine treatment given to newborns."

Was and his wife, Suzanne, are also dwarfs as are the twins' grandparents, Bill and Betty Howe. Was is 4-feet-6-inches tall, and his wife is 4-feet-3.

The birth of the twins is unusual, officials said, since most dwarfs have normal-sized offspring.

Neither of the Howes' parents was a dwarf, Was said.
Since the birth, Was said he has been splitting his time between his job as a convenience store clerk and the hospital. He said the twins may be released Wednesday or Thursday.

"I am just trying to stay out of the limelight," Was said in reference to a media blitz surrounding the births.

Doctors were able to determine that the twins were dwarfs in the 10th week of gestation, Was said.

They were delivered by Cesarean section by Dr. Charles Honore last Thursday in the 38th week of pregnancy. Joseph, born at 8:20 a.m., weighed in at 6 pounds, 1 ounce. His brother, Jacob, was born at 8:26 a.m. and weighed 4 pounds, 14 ounces.

One of the 127 types of dwarfism occurs in every 15,000 to 20,000 births, doctors said.

The difference between a dwarf and a midget, Was said, is the dwarf's torso is larger than the lower body. A midget, another form of dwarfism, is evenly proportioned, Was said.

Doctors so far have been unable to determine what causes dwarfism, Was said.

Church refuses to give up hope

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Members of MacArthur Park Church of Christ have refused to give up hope their 33-year-old youth minister, who disappeared seven months ago, will return home some day.

Wesley Barrett "Barre" Cox vanished July 12 on a remote farm road near Tuxedo, Texas, about 50 miles from Abilene.

Authorities found his abandoned and vandalized car on that road. Cox was reported heading home to San Antonio when he disappeared. He had been attending summer school at Texas Tech University in Lubbock.

Jones County Sheriff Mike Middleton said he is puzzled by the lack of new clues in the case.

"We just keep his picture out and hope someone spies him out there," he said.

The sheriff said he has heard several rumors about where Cox might be, but none has panned out.

Carpet cleaning fraud may affect up to 18,000 people

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Thousands of San Antonio residents who answered advertisements for cut-rate carpet cleaning were conned by a company whose employees were taught to manipulate customers and increase fees 1,000 percent, according to a former company employee.

The customers planned to spend as little as $2.75 per room to have their carpets steam cleaned, but were left holding bills as high as $300. The San Antonio Light reported Sunday. The company grossed more than $1 million annually from local sales alone, the newspaper said.

The San Antonio-based company, Genie Services Inc., which had offices in more than 40 cities in 16 states, is under investigation by the FBI, the state attorney general's office and a Bexar County grand jury for allegations of consumer fraud and hot-check writing.

Genie Services, which opened here three years ago, closed its doors Jan. 11 after district attorneys in several states began investigating allegations that the company wrote hot checks to many of its more than 450 salespersons and 50 full-time employees last year.

A former Genie employee, who worked with the firm for most of its existence, said the company's extensive training program taught employees to bait customers with the advertised price and then coerce them into purchasing much more expensive services.

The sales technique, known widely as bait-and-switch, may violate federal consumer fraud laws and Federal Trade Commission standards, FBI agent-in-charge Bill Dalseg said.

The former Genie employee, who asked not to be named, produced documentation, including a three-page section entitled "The art of progressive selling," which he said was from Genie's training manual.

That document taught Genie salespersons to force customers to purchase as many of the company's 13 cleaning chemicals as possible, and at prices decided at the time of sale according to whether the homeowner "looked like they could afford more," the employee said.

The chemicals, ranging from carpet deodorant to gum remover, were manufactured locally for about $3 per gallon and then sold to customers for up to $60 per gallon, the former employee said.

Copies of the company's "Genie Time" magazine show that customers in the San Antonio area during 1984 spent an average of $65 each time Genie stepped into their homes — despite the low advertised cost.

The magazine and copies of Genie's daily receipts, provided by the former employee, show the company cleaned carpets in nearly 18,000 San Antonio homes during 1984.

In addition, Genie also fulfilled government contracts at Fort Sam Houston, Brooks Air Force Base and the Veterans Administration Hospital.

House schedules water vote

AUSTIN (AP) — An $800 million statewide water plan will be presented to the House on Tuesday as the first major proposal to come before that body in a session that started over five weeks ago.

The House water package, which includes a proposed amendment to the Texas Constitution, was unanimously approved in committee on Wednesday.

"It's a comprehensive plan that has a little bit in it for every area of the state," said Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, chairman of the House Natural Resources Committee.

A Senate committee reviewing a $1 billion water proposal has 32 amendments pending, and has scheduled a vote for Wednesday. "There is no more vitally important issue before this Legislature," said Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock.

Legislators were unable to agree on a water plan in 1983 as a proposal that had cleared the Senate failed in the final hours.

Today's Senate calendar included 10 proposals. One would amend the state constitution to provide additional bond money for the state veterans' housing program.

Eligible veterans can borrow up to $20,000 at less than 10 percent interest to apply toward the purchase of a home, but the program has been so popular that the bond money is rapidly being depleted.

Missing from the Senate agenda is a bill that would delay for 2 1/2 years the state licensing of a low-level nuclear waste dump in Texas.

A motion was made to debate the measure on Thursday, but Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, threatened to filibuster the bill because he said it did not protect the water supply in a South Texas area that appears to be the prime choice for the disposal site.

Sen. John Traeger, D-Seguin, needed 25 votes to bring up the bill and got only 14. He said unless Truan drops his demands that the bill also prohibit for 2 1/2 years the purchase of a site, Traeger will let the bill die. Removal of the measure from the Senate calendar indicates that Traeger was serious.

A joint afternoon session was set today to hear a speech by U.S. House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Fort Worth.

Wright, a former Texas legislator, claims he has lined up early commitments from 184 Democrats in his bid to replace U.S. House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill when O'Neill retires in two years.

No arrests imminent, police say

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Only a few leads and a few clues have been produced in the month since the start of the largest criminal investigation in Fort Worth history, officers say.

And no arrests are imminent, officers add.

Police Chief H.F. Hopkins announced the formation of a special investigative task force on Jan. 10, that would include 40 full-time officers.

The investigation centers on cases involving five women: Catherine Davis, 23; Cindy Heller, 23; Sarah Kashka, 15; Lisa Griffin, 20; and Angela Ewart, 21. Davis, Heller, Kashka, and Griffin have been found dead. Ewart is still missing.

TERROFOC TROP—Melody Richardson, along with her son Bryan, eight, and daughter Sarah, two, became local heroes after halting a kidnapping attempt in West University Place, a suburb of Houston. The three witnessed the kidnapping and began a wild chase that attracted police and saved Elna Harbich, also of West University Place. (AP Laserphoto)

A little object controls us

Have you been worrying for many years about some sinister force taking control of your personal life?

Well, in case no one has noticed, you can quit worrying because a rather ordinary object has slipped behind our backs and filled the role of Big Brother.

You say you didn't know. See, that shows how easily our minds have been captured.

Let's put this in the form of a riddle: What comes in all sorts of colorful shapes and always makes us curious?

"Hey Mac, you're wanted on The Phone."

How many people can brush off that ominous message; when called, the normal reaction is to drop everything and find out what The Phone has in store for us.

Many of us are so taken with the gadget, we feel the need to have a recording device hooked up to take messages when we're not there. Wouldn't want to miss out on an important call.

The power works the other way, too — we share a little of The Phone's magical domination when we're on the calling end.

Then we must consider how important The Phone is to our everyday activities.

"Say, you want to have a drink after work?"

"Sure, but let me call home and check in first."

As we go about our daily business, think how frustrating it would be without that wonderful governing force in our lives. No calling ahead to make sure an order is ready. No way to set up appointments in advance. No quick coordination to make sure distant offices are on the same wavelength.

Obviously, we're tied to that contraption for eternity.

The Phone deals a share of frustration — enough to make sure we don't get infatuated with it.

For example, how many times have you stared at one of those things and willed it to ring? Waiting for return calls is one more way The Phone controls us; we're afraid to leave its side, even to get a cup of coffee.

And the blasted thing has a way of playing tricks. Once it rings, we automatically assume something important is transpiring. Too often, we have to change our opinion when the person on the other end of the line is trying to sell us something we don't want and couldn't use even if we had it.

Around my house it is usually a call for one of the boys and I bite my fingernails, knowing I'm missing an important call, while they chat on, and on, and on.

Trying to ignore The Phone never seems to work. With each unanswered ring, our imagination increases. After the 10th ring, we've conjured visions of family tragedy, business collapse or some philanthropist calling to offer a million bucks.

And the minute you unplug one, immediate guilt feelings appear. What if somebody really needs to get in touch with you?

And isn't it strange how the power diminishes when directed through a second party. If someone else takes a handful of messages, you feel no qualms about tossing them in the trash without taking any action. Lack of personal contact with The Phone somehow breaks the spell.

You would have to believe The Phone has a sense of humor. Other wise, why would we have listened to so many computer recordings about circuits being busy, please try again?

The Phone knows no bounds. It will interrupt anything and anyone. You have no privacy when The Phone is nearby.

And it increasingly is nearby. The development of new equipment means we will be able to reach out and touch someone in airplanes, wilderness areas and just about any other remote place they care to name.

But we must continue to consider The Phone as a friend. Why else would we pay ever higher rates to have the darned thing as a constant companion?

Mother, two children thwart elderly woman's kidnapping

HOUSTON (AP) — When Melody Richardson spotted two men forcing an elderly woman into the back of their car, she had to do something, she said.

The younger Gonzalez was in fair condition Sunday at Ben Taub Hospital with a gunshot wound in the neck, Smitkin said.

Their alleged victim, Elna Harbich, 70, had been beaten but was not hospitalized.

"I don't have words to express my appreciation," Mrs. Harbich said of the woman who saved her life.

According to Smitkin, the two men allegedly rammed their vehicle into the back of Mrs. Harbich's car Friday afternoon, apparently planning to rob her.

When Mrs. Harbich got out to exchange information, the two men reportedly sprayed Mace in her face, grabbed her and threw her on the back floorboard of their car, Smitkin said.

But the actions did not go unnoticed, Smitkin said. The Richardsons drove by about 4:30 p.m. and saw what was happening. As Mrs. Richardson followed, she said she honked the car's horn.

"I knew we had to stay with the car because the woman might end up dead and I didn't want to live with that or my children to live with that," she said. "I would do it again, too. I really did the only thing I could have lived with," she said.

When the two men finally were forced to stop behind another car at a traffic light, Mrs. Richardson spotted officer Andy Anderson and signaled for him to follow.

Anderson stopped the car after a few blocks, pulled his gun and told the two men to get out of the car.

But Alfredo Gonzalez put the car in reverse and tried to run over the officer, Smitkin said.

The officer fired, striking Alfredo Gonzalez in the neck, Smitkin said.

Farmer loses crop, most of farm to bank

SEMINOLE, Texas (AP) — Cotton farmer Gary Harvey blames his financial fall on a tangled web of economic forces beyond his control.

Harvey, 37, said he recently cut a "friendly foreclosure" deal with the Moncor Bank of Hobbs, N.M. that wiped out his debt of about $1.8 million.

In the process, Harvey lost his 1984 cotton crop and 1,280 acres of the 1,600-acre farm he works 25 miles northeast of Seminole.

He said he is glad to be out from under it all.

"You don't sleep, your teeth fall out, you lose your religion and you damn near lose your wife," Harvey said.

Harvey said he could have filed for reorganization under federal bankruptcy laws and kept his land two more years.

"But I said, 'Look, I'm not going to be able to pay. Let's get this settled up so I can sleep at night,'" he said.

He blamed his fall on a combination of factors: a strong U.S. dollar on international money markets, increased foreign production, government commodity programs, lower inflation rates and high operating costs in the face of low cotton prices.

"Everything has gone up but the price of our products," Harvey said, citing rising prices for energy, fertilizer and equipment during the past 10 years.

Harvey said the price he received for his crop dropped from 65 cents per pound in 1973 to 48 cents per pound in 1984.

Kenneth Newcomb, agricultural loan officer at the Seminole National Bank, agreed high operating costs are driving farmers from their land.

"You cannot spend $240 an acre (to grow cotton) and sell (it) for $200 an acre and make any money," he said.

Harvey said prices fell in part because of a worldwide glut created by the entrance of countries such as Brazil and the People's Republic of China into the world cotton market.

"In 1980, China (Chinese agricultural officials) visited Seminole," Harvey said. "They came over here and took our technology away. We gave it to them."

"Overseas producers are taking the markets away from the United States," agreed Woody McKenzie, president of the Gaines County Farm Bureau.

McKenzie also said the strong U.S. dollar, a result of high interest rates, has made the American crop more expensive to overseas buyers.

Harvey criticized government-sponsored commodity programs.

"If they're going to be in our markets and not let us have a free market, then, by God, they ought to pay us parity price," Harvey said. "Why can't they control production but guarantee a profit?"

"When you owe that kind of money, you want inflation because you can pay it back with cheaper dollars," he said.

TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

President should keep his promise

Somewhere amid the recent shuffling of the Reagan White House, a promise or two remained lost. You know the story: the treasury secretary became the chief of staff and the chief of staff became the treasury secretary; the interior secretary moved to his ranch and the energy secretary moved to Interior; the education secretary moved to a schoolhouse in Utah.

After all that, what was accomplished? It created temporary vacancies in Education and Energy, the two departments that candidate Ronald Reagan promised to abolish. So what in the name of the Great Communicator is Reagan doing filling those vacancies?

The Energy and Education departments own their Cabinet-level existence to Jimmy Carter, and in the 1980 campaign Reagan used them as symbols of everything that was wrong with big government: bloated payrolls and miles of regulations covering areas not even remotely related to any legitimate function of government.

He would see to it that they were abolished, Reagan said. Four years later, they remain as entrenched as ever.

Terral Bell as least made a stab at Education, proposing to convert the department to a "foundation" and drop it from the Cabinet. The timing, however, was wrong. Along came a national commission report about the decline of American education and the cry, "How can you cut off the flow of federal funds at a time of such dire needs?" Nary an abolitionist was left in the open.

And energy. Now there's a perfect dinosaur. Created in the 1970s in an attempt to show the American people that their government was doing something about the energy crisis, the department continues to lumber along in blissful ignorance of the fact that the energy crisis died of its own lack of inertia.

It doesn't take a Cabinet secretary to figure out that marketplace supply and demand is the best way to ensure that oil supplies do not run short. Even the OPEC cartel, once thought by some to be invincible, has found the marketplace, not government meddling, to be its downfall.

Reagan faces a difficult task in his attempt to rid the nations of its twin DOES. Both are firmly entrenched in the Washington firmament, lobbyist and loyalists abound. Nevertheless, a trial balloon has been floated with the suggestion that the departments of Energy and Interior be combined. That would be only a small positive step since it would leave Energy's damaging regulatory authority intact.

If there is to be a Reagan legacy, it should be that he decreased the scope of the federal bureaucracy. There is to better way to start than to keep his promises of 1980 to abolish those two departments. The new commissioners should make losing their jobs a top priority.

Only U.S. oil prices down

OPEC's decision to cut its average base price to about $26.80 is attributed to a "world-wide glut of oil" - but, with a world economy stronger now than in 1980 when prices were soaring, no one has explained WHY this "glut" exists. It exists, quite simply, because a soaring U.S. dollar has driven world oil prices UP even as they fell in America.

In this world of floating exchange rates and free-wheeling commodities markets, it is easy to get confused by what economists call "the money illusion."

Recently even the Wall Street Journal reported that the "dollar" was rising because world oil prices were falling. Yet, when you think about it, falling oil prices should make ALL oil-producing nations' currencies fall - and all oil-consuming nations' currencies rise. The dollar should have fallen, and the yen, franc, and deutschmark should have risen. Yet just the opposite occurred.

At the very least, falling world oil prices should have made no difference to any Western currency - and of course, they didn't. The fact is: only U.S. oil prices were falling because the dollar was rising - and this rising dollar created the glut. If you don't believe this, consider some interesting facts:

Since January 1984, the U.S. dollar has risen 15 percent, and U.S. oil and gasoline prices have fallen 15 percent. But, oil and gas prices in Europe have NOT been falling, since 1980 they have actually been RISING - rapidly. The reason is unambiguous: as the dollar has soared (some 65 percent against the world currencies, and as much as 100 percent more against the franc and pound), the cost of buying oil (in their own currencies) has risen sharply, despite the falling DOLLAR price of oil.

For example: in 1981, when the pound was worth $2.39, and the spot price of oil was $36, the British pound - price was 15.06 pounds - bbl. By January 1985, the pound was down to $1.13, a 106 - percent rise in the dollar's value against the pound. As a result, even though the dollar price of oil had fallen 21 percent to $26.80, the pound - price of oil had soared 56 percent to 23.51 pounds - bbl. So, talk to a Briton about falling oil prices and he'll look at you in puzzlement, as well the French and Germans.

Since 1981, the dollar rose over 100 percent against the franc, 1981 - 84, so the franc - price of oil soared 50 percent from 171 francs per barrel to 257 last month. The German deutschmark (D - M) price of oil rose 20 percent from 70.6 D - M per barrel to 84.2 D - M.

Thus, even as OPEC has been depicted as the victim of a great glut of oil and falling prices, it has actually been riding the U.S. dollar to ever HIGHER prices to their main customers in Europe and the Third World.

Using the multi-lateral trade-weighted index, the dollar has risen 65 percent since 1981, which, after the 21 - percent drop in the dollar price of oil, leaves the world as a whole paying 44 - percent more for oil today than in January 1981.

Since less than 10 percent of OPEC's production is sold to the U.S., the balance is being sold at these very high, non-dollar prices. That's the primary reason OPEC couldn't maintain its $29 bench-mark price.

The best proof of this is to look at Saudi Arabia. It cut its production over 50 percent and its listed dollar prices 15 percent. That should have cut its revenues 60 percent. Instead they have fallen only about 24 percent - mainly because it is being paid in highly appreciated dollars by European and Japanese customers.

This also explains why Britain and Canada have been so willing to discount their own export oil prices in dollars. Both countries are now getting much higher prices, in terms of their own currencies than in 1981, and so can afford it.

Every time the dollar rises in value, all the oil-producing nations, except the U.S., get hit with a price increase in terms of their own currencies. Conversely, the moment the dollar starts to fall, as it eventually should, oil-producing nations will get lower prices in their own currencies.

That, incidentally, is one of the primary reasons for the original 1973 OPEC price run-up. Back in the late '60s the U.S. and Europe were busily devaluing their currencies through inflation. When the U.S. cut the final link with gold in 1971, the price of gold shot through the roof, from $35 - oz to nearly $100 - oz by 1973.

Since there has always been a direct link between gold and oil (15 barrels per ounce), the price of oil followed gold right up, as OPEC caught up with a decade of Western devaluation and raised their oil prices from $3 to $11, and kept raising them as the U.S. dollar plunged to new lows in 1979 - 80.

Over the past eighteen months, however, the dollar has pushed gold down from $445 to $302, indicating that oil would soon follow from $30 - bbl to a new potential low of $20 - all because of the dollar's rise.

So, if you want to know how any commodity price is likely to move, keep your eye on the dollar. OPEC does.

Today in History

Today is Monday, Feb. 11, the 42nd day of 1985. There are 323 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Feb. 11, 1812, a new word entered the American political lexicon: "gerrymandering." The word was coined after the Massachusetts legislature, at the behest of Gov. Elbridge Gerry, passed a redistricting bill that was advantageous to Gerry's party.

On this date: Ten years ago: Margaret Thatcher defeated four rivals to win the leadership of Britain's Conservatives. She became the first woman to lead a British political party.

Five years ago: On Day 100 of the hostage crisis, in an interview with the French newspaper Le Monde, Iranian president Abolhassan Bani-Sadr raised the possibility that the hostages might be released "in the next few days."

One year ago: The space shuttle Challenger returned to earth following an eight-day mission that featured the first untethered space walk by astronauts.

Today's birthdays: Actress Eva Gabor and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, are 64.

Do foreigners own U.S.?

Americans, whatever our nation's problems, we are the envy of the rest of the world. Whatever displeases you, there's no place to run to.

Americans enjoy better health, longer life, more solvency, harder currency, even proportionally less national debt than most anywhere else.

And our prospects are brighter yet. We are where the action is.

Whether we know it or not, the rest of the enlightened world does.

Direct foreign investment in the United States has increased more than 400 percent this last decade, from $25 billion to more than $135 billion.

Industry Week cites some interesting examples. Howard Johnson restaurants are as American as apple pie - yet they are owned by British.

Standard Oil of Ohio, founded by Rockefeller, is mostly owned by British.

The British have $2 billion more invested over here than we have invested over there.

Foreign investors continue to increase their investment in our most vital industries - food products and petroleum refining.

And as a fringe benefit, foreign countries are thus able to "swipe" much of our valuable technology.

The overlap and interlace of foreign investment confuses our own economic barometers.

When you hear the latest sales figure on "American-made cars" - those include cars coming off an assembly line in Smyrna, Tenn., the profits from which go to Japan.

From many of our nation's biggest, most highly-mechanized farms - profits go to owners overseas. Count both farm and timberland, foreigners already own at least 13.7 million acres of what used to be "our" country.

This worries some people. An organization called Citizens Against Foreign Control of the United States is headed by June Collier of Montgomery, Ala. She says all this foreign investment puts our country back where it started: "We are colonies again!"

This is an exaggeration. We Americans still have invested abroad almost twice as much as the acknowledged foreign holdings in the United States.

Mrs. Collier is properly anxious however about the sub-rosa foreign investment, presently incalculable. She fears, "We are going to find more and more public decisions being made for us by people who do not even speak our language."

One way to cure a pain in the back

BY D.R. SEGAL

Low back pain, as it is called in the trade, usually pays me a visit during the winter season and this year was no exception.

The thing about low back pain is that almost everyone you talk with warns to the subject immediately and tells you about his or her latest or worst bout with the universal curse of the race. Followed by a favored treatment.

During my present affliction I have been advised as to the magic prowess of two chiropractors, a machine that tilts you upside down, codeine pills (helpful), and exercise in the form of deep knee bends.

The best advice I ever got on the subject came from an orthopedic surgeon who told me that if you've had it before you've got it again. He told me to take some aspirin and go home.

It was his further theory that the treatment of low back pain depended most not upon the physical condition of the patient but the lifestyle of the doctor. Doctors with yachts, twin-engine planes and wives 30 years their junior are inclined to operate, he said.

When the yacht is fully paid for, this fellow puts you in traction. When the plane has been sold and the young wife has run off with a 32-year-old urologist, this doctor tells you to buy a bottle of aspirin and lie down the rest of the day. Made sense to me.

The latest treatment for low back pain is to inject the victim with meat tenderizer (no, I am not joking), but this technique is not accepted by the U.S. medical community as standard treatment.

The fellow who told me about his wonderful chiropractor said he went to him on Monday and the back pain was gone by Wednesday. I told him I did not go to a chiropractor on Monday and my back was OK on Tuesday.

As for the machine that tilts you upside down, I think it would be my good fortune to dislocate a collarbone or fall on my head, neither of which is an acceptable alternative to an aching back.

I once discussed the matter of low back pain with my old friend the Rev. Jack Daniel and after a spell I felt much better. So did he, and his back hadn't been bothering him at all.

I suppose that is what comes of associating with a spiritual fellow and I'd a darn sight rather go that route than have some surgeon inject Adolph's into my spinal column.

To fellow sufferers I can only tell you this word of comfort: When I got down in the back, I complained to a doctor of my acquaintance and he said, well, remember, it is worse when it's on the other side.

Dear Abby

'Twenty Questions' is serious game for Gamblers Anonymous

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I've been married to Al (not his real name) for 16 years. I love him and I know he loves me, but I cannot stay in this marriage unless he quits gambling. Al owns his own business and we live well, but he owes money all over. He bets on football, basketball, baseball, boxing, horses and dogs. He even bets on elections, and he bets big!

I know he's won a lot of money, but he never tells me how much he loses.

Please help me to help him, Abby. Gambling is like a disease with him. AL'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Compulsive gambling is a disease; it's never "cured," but it can be controlled. Gamblers Anonymous (fashioned after Alcoholics Anonymous) offers this questionnaire:

1. Do you ever lose time from work due to gambling?
2. Is gambling making your home life unhappy?
3. Is gambling affecting your reputation?
4. Have you ever felt remorse after gambling?
5. Do you ever gamble to get money with which to pay debts or otherwise solve financial problems?
6. Does gambling decrease your ambition? Efficiency?
7. After losing, do you feel you must return as soon as possible and win back your losses?
8. After a win, do you have a strong urge to return and win more?
9. Do you often gamble your last dollar?
10. Do you ever borrow to finance your gambling?
11. Have you ever sold anything to finance gambling?
12. Are you reluctant to use "gambling money" for normal expenditures?
13. Does gambling make you careless of the welfare of your family?
14. Do you ever gamble longer than you had planned?
15. Have you ever gambled to escape worry or trouble?

16. Have you ever committed, or considered committing, an illegal act to finance gambling?
17. Does gambling cause you to have difficulty in sleeping?
18. Do arguments, disappointments or frustrations create in you an urge to gamble?
19. Do you ever have an urge to celebrate any good fortune by a few hours of gambling?
20. Have you ever considered self-destruction as the result of your gambling?

Ask your husband to answer these questions honestly, and if he answers yes to seven or more questions, he is a compulsive gambler, and I strongly recommend that he get in touch with Gamblers Anonymous (it's in your phone book).

It is a non-profit fellowship of men and women who admit that gambling is not a game or a sport—it's a disease they must learn to control.

Encourage your husband to go to a meeting and learn firsthand how he can overcome the disease. For more information about Gamblers Anonymous, write to the national office: P.O. Box 17173, Los Angeles, Calif. 90017. Please enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAR ABBY: My best friend, "Denny," was engaged to be married three months ago, so I threw a stag party for him that turned out to be a big mistake.

I hired "Salome," an exotic dancer, to entertain at this party the night before the wedding, and Denny ended up in bed with her. To make a long story short, Denny's fiancée heard about it and called off the wedding. Now Denny is making plans to marry Salome. My question: Should I give Denny another stag party? LESTER

DEAR LESTER: I vote no, but if you do, don't hire another exotic dancer. Ask Salome to dance—and retain the seventh veil for her wedding.

'Macbeth' to be presented here

The Pampa Fine Arts Association will present the National Shakespeare Company's production of "Macbeth" at 2:30 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 24, at the M. K. Brown Auditorium.

Further information may be obtained by calling 665-2731. "Macbeth," the tragedy of a proud soldier, is the Shakespearean drama most frequently produced in the 20th Century. The play tells the story of a valiant warrior spurred to his own destruction by supernatural temptation, blind ambition and oppressive guilt.

On his triumphant return from battling the Vikings, Macbeth encounters three witches who foretell he will be Thane of Cawdor and ultimately King of Scotland. When he is indeed made Thane of Cawdor by the present king, Duncan, Macbeth believes that the witches' final promise will be fulfilled and that their prediction is fated.

Thus begins a descent into evil which is unrivaled in the Bard's canon. Macbeth is consumed by his own lust for power. Abetted by his wife, Lady Macbeth, he murders King Duncan. But Macbeth quickly discovers the crown he has gained has lost him his peace of mind.

Smart Money

Lending to relatives

By Bruce Williams

DEAR BRUCE WILLIAMS — Two years ago, my grandmother loaned her nephew a great deal of money. He cried on her shoulder and told her how much trouble he was in. He said he would pay every nickel back, so Grandma loaned him several thousand dollars.

In order to do this, she took out a mortgage on her home. Now her nephew says that the money was a gift and he will not pay it back.

What can I do to help my grandmother get her money back? — J.C., MANCHESTER, N.H.

DEAR J.C. — Your grandmother has a real problem. In the absence of a written agreement between them, it's a matter of whether the courts believe that your grandmother gave her nephew the money or loaned it to him. If she wrote "loan" on the check, this would be useful.

Because of the amount of money involved, I suggest that your grandmother see an attorney and take the rascal to court. However, if the nephew has no money, the expense of going to court can hardly be justified. In that case, even if you have a judgment, the likelihood of collecting is small.

Your grandmother has learned a very bitter lesson about loaning money to relatives. Even with a relative, it's important that such loans be done in a businesslike fashion. That means having a note executed with the terms of repayment clearly stated.

DEAR BRUCE WILLIAMS — Last year I joined a local health club.

At that time, the club had two outlets. The first was open every day and had separate facilities for men and women. The second outlet was open on alternate days for men and women.

I chose that club so I could use the facilities on a regular basis. I joined for three years on an installment price totaling $650. Shortly after I joined, the first club was closed.

About three months later, the second club closed and the company went bankrupt. In the meantime, the health club sold my contract to a finance company. The company says they are sorry the club went broke, but I still have to continue my payments.

Do I? — S.V., PROVIDENCE, R.I.

DEAR S.V. — I suggest that you seek legal counsel. You probably signed a contract that allowed the health club to assign it to a third party, which the club did. The finance company then gave the money to the health club, and you now owe the money to the finance company.

You can sue the health club, but if it's bankrupt, it probably has very little assets. In most jurisdictions, I think you'll find that you must continue to pay the finance company even though the health club went broke.

It's a very dangerous thing to make these long-term arrangements with health clubs, tennis clubs, and so forth unless they are on a very firm financial footing. Many of these clubs have gone under, leaving people stuck with a prepaid membership and no place to go.

DEAR BRUCE WILLIAMS — This summer my wife and I bought a 17-foot boat.

We took it out for a shakedown cruise around the lake and noticed a

Sampson leads way for West

MOST VALUABLE—Ralph Sampson goes up for a rebound against Julius Erving during the NBA all-star game in Indianapolis Sunday. (AP Laserphoto)

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Ralph Sampson, only in his second National Basketball Association season, has received one of the few honors to elude veteran Kareem Abdul-Jabbar in 16 years.

Sampson was selected Most Valuable Player in the league's All-Star Game Sunday after scoring a game-high 24 points and helping the Western Conference end a five-game losing streak with a 140-129 decision over the East.

"It's about time a true big man was selected," said Abdul-Jabbar, who was making a record 14th All-Star appearance in the 35th edition of this annual game. "And the way he's progressing they may be giving it to him many more times."

The 7-foot-2 Abdul-Jabbar, who broke a deadlock with Wilt Chamberlain, Bob Cousy and John Havlicek for All-Star appearances, started at center with the 7-4 Sampson at forward.

Sampson, one half of the Houston Rockets' Twin Tower front line, also led the West in rebounds with 10 before a record crowd of 43,146.

"His talents at forward haven't really been exploited," said Abdul-Jabbar about Sampson. "In college and last year he had to play at center. I think he's doing a lot better at the forward. I think it's a natural position for him."

Abdul-Jabbar's Los Angeles Laker teammate Earvin "Magic" Johnson contributed 21 points and 15 assists.

"It's fun playing with Magic Johnson. He puts the ball on the court and all you have to do is run with him. He'll hit you with the pass," said Sampson, who was selected to the All-Star team for the second time in his two-year career.

"Anytime you got big men that can go to the basket, you've got something," said Johnson, adding that he thought Sampson "would be much better if he played with me. I think a lot of times you have to know when to give it to him and when not to."

"Sampson was awesome today," said East Coach K.C. Jones after

Sampson hit 10 of 15 from the field. "He came down the middle on the fastbreak, filled the middle on defense and hit the boards."

"He was head and shoulders above most of the players when the game was on the line," West Coach Pat Riley said. "Sampson's a great young player and will get nothing but better."

The East hardly shot like All Stars, finishing with a 40.8 shooting percentage after making only 49 of 120 field-goal attempts.

Isiah Thomas of the Detroit Pistons led the East with 22 points but sat out most of the second half with a thigh injury.

"Isiah wanted to play but I had seen enough," Jones said. "I didn't see any reason to risk a serious injury. I wouldn't do that to one of my players in a regular game."

Thomas, who won MVP honors in last year's game, was injured late in the second quarter.

The West never trailed after taking a 34-33 lead late in the first quarter, although the East managed five ties after that.

For the East, Larry Bird had 21 and Terry Cummings 17.

The previous high attendance for any NBA event was 41,163 on Feb. 4, 1969, for a regular-season double-header at the Houston Astrodome. The previous high for an All-Star Game was 31,745 in 1979 at the Pontiac, Mich., Silverdome.

Networks won't help make calls

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

The United States Football League can't count on television if it wants to use "official" instant replays this season. Both ABC and ESPN, the networks which televise USFL games, indicate they won't go along with the idea.

During Saturday night's exhibition between Tampa Bay and New Jersey, the USFL experimented with an instant replay. Cal Lepore, the league's supervisor of officials, viewed a replay of a questionable fumble and upheld the field officials' call.

Lepore said the experiment would continue next Saturday in Birmingham and that if Commissioner Harry Usher approved, it would be used during the season.

But Jim Spence, senior vice president of ABC Sports, and Bill Fitts, executive producer of ESPN, said Sunday their networks had no intention of crossing the line between televising games and officiating them.

Spence said ABC had been approached 15 months ago by Chet Simmons, Usher's predecessor, about providing instant replays in order to review officials' calls.

"We stated then that we thought there should be a clear difference between our responsibility as a broadcaster and any role we might have in game decisions," Spence said. "Although our involvement would be indirect, we didn't feel that was a proper role for us as a broadcaster."

Bears, Aggies set their sights on Mustangs

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writers

The Baylor Bears and Texas Aggies hope to take advantage of preseason Southwest Conference basketball favorite Southern Methodist's recent sinking spell.

The floundering Bears wish to catch the Mustangs still grumbling about Atlantic Coast Conference officiating when the two teams meet tonight in Waco.

The Bears have won only one SWC game but are always tough in Heart O' Texas Coliseum.

The Texas Aggies, who have rested for a week, then get a shot at the Mustangs on Wednesday night in Dallas. SMU has two league losses and the Texas Aggies have lost three times.

No matter what happens to SMU against Baylor at least a share of the SWC leadership will be a stake in the A&M-SMU clash.

The Aggies have't played in a week.

Texas Christian set up the A&M-SMU showdown with a 72-66 overtime victory over the Arkansas Razorbacks, who defeated the Mustangs last week.

Both Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton and Texas Christian Coach Jim Killingsworth agreed that parity has arrived in the SWC.

"The conference race is close enough this year that it seems that on any given day the No. 9 team can beat the No. 1 team," said Killingsworth.

Sutton agreed, saying "I'm not sure you could call TCU's victory an upset. The league is very well balanced this year. TCU is good but so is every other team in the league."

Weeks ago Sutton predicted the eventual league champion would have at least three SWC losses. He could still be right.

SMU lost 82-78 in overtime to North Carolina State on the road and Mustang Coach Dave Bliss was less than pleased with the way the game was called.

Bliss said the officials refused to call fouls everytime seven-foot center Jon Koncak touched the ball.

"They (the ACC officials) just wouldn't make any foul calls on the inside stuff," said Bliss. "It happened three times down there late in the game. They hit Jon and there was no call."

"We just couldn't get any calls," said Koncak who was held to a season low five points.

TCU's victory over Arkansas was the Horned Frogs' first regular season triumph since 1972. The Frogs beat Arkansas in the SWC Tournament two years ago.

It was TCU's fourth SWC victory in its last five games.

Bubba Jennings scored 30 points and Quentin Anderson added a career high 27 points Sunday as Texas Tech took a 91-80 victory over Texas edged Rice 66-65 in the other SWC game played Sunday.

It was the Red Raiders first victory over Houston in four years.

Jennings, the SWC's third leading scorer, hit 20 of his counters in the first half as Tech rallied from a five-point deficit to knot the score 40-40, at intermission.

"Quentin played today the way he needs to play every day said Tech head coach Gerald Myers. "He came out and wasn't worried about scoring and just played the game. If a guy plays the game the way he is supposed to, then the scoring will come."

"We haven't beaten Houston in a long time," said Anderson, who was a freshman reserve the last time the Raiders topped the Cougars, 81-70 in Lubbock in Feb. 1981. "We played hard and hung on to win today. It's a big win for us in the SWC."

"The way I saw it, it was just a hard fought game that could have gone either way," explained Houston mentor Guy V. Lewis. "I knew before the season it was going to be hard to win here."

"They shot well and we didn't. They got a little momentum in the second half and just put it out of reach," he said.

Greg Anderson and Ricky Winslow shared Houston's scoring honors with 20 points each. Alvin Franklin added 16 and Eric Dickens collected 12.

Texas guard Karl Willock sank two free throws with four seconds left to ice a 66-65 victory over Rice. Texas made up a 7-point halftime deficit midway through the second period by holding the Owls scoreless for six and a half minutes. But Rice took advantage of free throw opportunities — hitting 12 of 15 in the late going — to keep the score close. The score was tied seven times in the second half.

Mike Wacker scored 17 points for Texas and Carlton Cooper added 16. Greg Hines led Rice with 18 points, 13 of them in the first half.

Texas improved its record to 12-9 and 5-6 in conference play. Rice dropped to 9-12 and 2-9, one game out of the conference cellar spot held by Baylor.

In response to questions about Texas' improved hitting on the free-throw line, UT head coach Bob Weltlich said jokingly, "I'm coaching them a lot better."

On a serious note, he added, "Actually, I don't know how you teach free throws. They're just concentrating better, I guess."

In other games this week, Texas Tech is at Rice and TCU is at Baylor on Wednesday night.

Arkansas travels to Texas on Thursday night for an 8:08 p.m. regionally televised game.

On Saturday, SMU gets back into the intersectional wars by hosting Louisville at 1:10 p.m. in a game to be televised by CBS.

Texas Tech is at Arkansas at 3:08 p.m. in a regionally televised game. TCU is at Texas A&M and Baylor is at Texas.

Sheehan's closing 66 wins tourney

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Patty Sheehan saved her best for last, capping a final round 66 with an eight-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole to win the $200,000 Sarasota Classic.

Her 6-under-par effort Sunday was the best of the day and allowed her to finish the tournament at 10-under 278, one stroke ahead of Nancy Lopez.

Lopez couldn't duplicate Sheehan's final hole heroics as she missed a 10-footer which would have forced a playoff for the $30,000 first prize.

Sheehan gave Lopez, who played in the foursome just behind her, credit for pushing her to victory.

"I felt it was a two-person race all along," Sheehan said. "Even though I wasn't paired with her, she was the force that kept me going. I knew after the second hole it was going to be me and Nancy."

Sheehan began the day one shot behind third-round co-leaders Lopez and Patty Hayes. Her birdies on her first two holes set the stage for the duel with Lopez.

Then, it all came down to the final hole, the par-5 18th at the 6,124-yard Bent Tree Golf & Racquet Club. Sheehan said she had heard a roar coming from the 17th green and thought Lopez had birdied to move ahead of her.

She hit a 5-iron short of the green, then put a sand wedge eight feet from the hole and calmly made the putt. Only then did she realize the cheer hadn't been for Lopez, and she was all alone in the lead.

Lopez needed a birdie to tie and went for her green on her second shot, hitting a 4-wood on the fringe next to one of the gallery bleachers. She was left with a 65-foot chip that she put within 10 feet of the hole, but she missed the birdie putt.

Lopez, who won the Sarasota Classic in 1978, earned $18,500 for her efforts Sunday.

Tied for third, four shots back at 282, were Jane Blalock, who had 67 Sunday, and Betsy King, who fired a 70.

Clemson doubles team triumphs

HOUSTON (AP) — Clemson's Richard Matuszewski and Brandon Walters captured the indoor national championships in doubles play in the Rolex Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association Championships Sunday.

Clemson officials say the win marked the first national tennis championship in the university's history. Matuszewski and Walters, seeded seventh in the tournament that featured 16 of the top doubles pairs in the country, defeated Steve Kouch and Joe Marszenell of Houston 6-1, 6-3 in the finals.

On the way to the championship round, the Clemson pair knocked off Chuck Merzbacher and Matt Grace of Minnesota, the tourney's second-seeded duo of John Lettis and Jim Grabb from Stanford.

'Spud' stops SMU's ace

RALEIGH (AP) — Anthony "Spud" Webb knows about Southern Methodist.

Webb, a Dallas native, plays on the same summer league as Mustang Carl Wright. It was his assignment in the second half of North Carolina State's 82-78 overtime victory over fourth-ranked SMU Saturday to guard Wright.

Wright sparked the Mustangs to a 44-37 halftime lead, coming off the bench to score 10 points. He scored 10 more in the first 10 minutes of the second half. Then Webb went to work.

"I just tried to keep him from catching the ball, and not let him get to the blocks on me and turn around and shoot," the 5-foot-7 senior said.

From then on, Wright's hot streak went cold. Neither he or any of his SMU teammates scored in the last 8:14 of regulation. Wright managed only three points in overtime, all at the foul line.

"Wright does a lot of things with the ball, and we needed quickness to react to what he does," said N.C. State coach Jim Valvano. "Spud is the quickest player we have, and I think he gave Wright problems with his quickness."

The Wolfpack needed something. They pulled to within 48-47 before SMU went on a 9-point scoring spree to extend the lead to 57-47. The Mustangs were able to maintain the 10-point advantage the Wolfpack defense put their offense in the deep freeze.

"The key to the ball game was our defense in the second half," said Wolfpack guard Terry Gannon, who led his team with 19 points. "They didn't get any patterns going against us. Carl Wright is a pro-type player. Then again, when he isn't hitting, he's still trying to shoot, and basically that can disrupt the offense. The other four guys are standing around."

Meanwhile, 6-11 center Cozell McQueen was taking his assignment against 7-foot SMU center Jon Koncak seriously. He held the 1984 Olympian, who averages 18 points and 11 rebounds a game, to five points.

Alex English may be biggest all-star of all

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Athletes too often are looked on as some sort of disembodied creatures, supermen operating in their own private stratosphere.

Most make enormous salaries. They have awesome abilities. It is easy to forget that beyond their formidable athletic skills, these are but human beings, sharing the same frailties and emotions as the rest of us — fear, joy, sadness, anger.

Many of them, like Alex English of the National Basketball Association Denver Nuggets, are moved by the human condition.

Last October, at the start of the NBA season, an 82-game long grind that challenges the minds and bodies of the men who play this demanding sport, Alex English was enjoying a rare night off at home with his family. He turned on the television set after dinner and in the next few moments, his life changed.

Denver's Public Broadcasting station was airing a special on the famine in Ethiopia, produced by the British Broadcasting Corporation. English, a sensitive man who writes poetry to pass his idle time, was touched by the new film.

Touched and horrified. "It was pitiful," he said. "There were kids who were starving. Kids! It was a terrible situation."

Alex English has two small children and another on the way. He could relate to the vacant stares of the hungry children of Ethiopia. "I wanted to help," he said. "I felt a need to do something about it. I think every person has an obligation to do his share."

English, who is a vice president of the NBA Players Association, called the union's executive director, Larry Fleisher. "He had seen the horror," Fleisher said. "He felt we had to do something for those people. It evolved from there."

"I had the idea," English said, "But it took all of the All-Stars to say they would do it. I wanted to reach out and do something to help. But I'm just one person, and how much impact can one person have?"

Not much, unless he has a number of tall and talented friends willing to contribute a day's pay for a good cause.

Fleisher polled the Association's officers — Junior Bridgeman, Quinn Buckner, Jim Paxson and Norm Nixon — and about a half dozen of the league's top players, the likely All-Stars. They all endorsed English's idea.

It called for the 24 NBA players in Sunday's game to contribute their cash shares — $2,500 for winning team players, $1,500 for losers — to Interaction Ethiopia, which is coordinating relief activities for that stricken country.

The NBA agreed to supplement that $48,000 with $52,000 more for a total $100,000 donation. The idea received such a positive response from the public that the players hope to do more.

"We've got to produce and create ideas," Fleisher said. "The guys are willing to do things. They give tons of time to charitable causes."

For Alex English, though, the Ethiopian crisis and those starving children have become a top priority item.

"The amount we are giving can only sustain them for a short time," English said. "So we have it on the (union) agenda to discuss more All-Star games this summer."

"I'd like to see the relief fund continue beyond this game and become the No. 1 NBA players' charity."

When you reflect on the West's 140-129 victory Sunday and the remarkable performances of players like MVP Ralph Sampson, Magic Johnson, George Gervin and Isiah Thomas, remember they played for free because of Alex English's human emotions for his fellow man.

That might make him the biggest All-Star of them all.

PGA competition gets super tough

HONOLULU (AP) — The competition on the PGA Tour, it would seem, is getting to be rather severe.

Consider Craig Stadler. In two tournaments this season he was a total of 47 shots under par. And he didn't win either one of them.

Or consider Lanny Wadkins. He won two of the first four tournaments of the 1985 season and played well in the other two. So he takes a week off and somebody blows right past him on the money-winning list.

Mark O'Meara did the job Sunday, turning back Stadler's late upset bid and scoring his second consecutive victory on the Tour in the Hawaiian Open.

The triumph, nailed down on a critical, 25-foot birdie putt on the 17th hole just as it appeared the wheels were coming off for O'Meara, was worth $90,000 from the total purse of $500,000 and lifted him into the money-winning lead with $194,625 for the young season.

"It means a lot to me," said O'Meara, who added this title to the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am he acquired a week earlier and became the first man in two seasons to win consecutive tournaments. "To play as well as I did — one bogey for the tournament is quite an accomplishment for me. To win two in a row..."

He paused, smiled and continued: "I wanted to win the money title last year and didn't do it. This year, well, I didn't want to let Lanny get too far in front."

Wadkins, winner of the Bob Hope Classic and Los Angeles Open, did not play in the Hawaiian Open and dropped back to second on the money list at $185,850.

Stadler, beaten by Wadkins in a playoff at the Bob Hope after each finished regulation play at 27 under par, was 20 under par this time.

"Whatever it was, it wasn't quite good enough," Stadler said after a last-round 64 that included: an eagle-birdie-birdie start, a birdie-birdie-birdie finish and a total of six birdies and an eagle. He also had two bogeys and "those were the killers," he said.

O'Meara, who started the final round four shots in front of the field, had a closing 69 and a 267 total, one ahead of Stadler.

Stadler, playing well in front of O'Meara on the warm, breezy day briefly caught the front-runner with a 2-putt birdie-4 on the final hole, just missing on a 40-foot eagle attempt.

Moments later O'Meara assumed the lead again. After missing short birdie putts on the 15th and 16th, he rolled in a 25-footer on the 17th that proved to be the winner.

"I was determined not to let this tournament get away from me," O'Meara said. "I was determined. I was not going to let that putt (on 17) be short. I was determined to get it to the hole."

Ed Fiori and Larry Mize shared third at 272.

Name's different, but luck still bad

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Mary Slaney has changed her name, but her luck remains bad.

Slaney, who was Mary Decker until marrying British discus thrower Richard Slaney Jan. 1, added another chapter to her injury-plagued career Saturday night. She limped off the track in tears with just over two laps remaining in the women's 1,500-meter race in the Vitalis-U.S. Olympic Invitational at the Meadowlands Arena.

At first, her injury was believed to be a severe cramp in the right calf.

But Sunday, her coach, Dick Brown, said the injury might be

Youngsters take charge in skiing

BORMIO, Italy (AP) — Jonas Nilsson, the 21-year-old Swede who captured the gold medal in the men's slalom on the last day of the World Alpine Skiing Championships, completed the change of guard that has turned the competitive ski world over to younger racers.

Nilsson, who upset Marc Girardelli of Luxembourg in Sunday's finale, was the latest of the bright young stars to emerge during the 12-day competition as the older and more established racers are replaced at the top of the skiing world.

Older stars generally finished out of the medals. Sweden's 28-year-old skiing legend Ingemar Stenmark, for example, could do no better than fourth place in the slalom for his best showing.

The championships in this northern Italian resort also confirmed the supremacy of Switzerland as the No. 1 skiing power in the world.

The Swiss won four gold, three silver and one bronze for a total of eight medals.

more serious. "I think the cramp probably caused some torn tissue," he said. "We will probably know in two or three days."

The extent of the damage will be determined after Slaney returns to her home in Eugene, Ore., and is examined by Dr. Stan James.

Slaney said the pain was so severe Sunday that she could not "put any pressure" on the foot. "It (the pain) is right in the belly of the muscle," she added. "I've never had a tear like this."

"I don't know whether it's torn or pulled or what. It's a little bruised and swollen."

Slaney first felt the pain as she approached the backstretch. "On the turn, it got worse, and then I had to stop," she said.

Owner of the world indoor best of 4 minutes, eight-tenths of a second, she was on her way to breaking the four-minute barrier.

Off Slaney's training sessions recently in San Diego, Brown had projected her time for the 1,500 as 3:59.3.

"She was even about a second ahead of that pace," Brown said, recalling having watched Slaney zip around the fast 10-laps-to-the-mile track and open a commanding lead over runner-up Diana Richburg.

"She was ... looking forward to having a big kick," he continued. "She's so frustrated, because she was so fit."

While Slaney was nursing her injury, other competitors were regaling in their victories:

Ruth Wysocki, an upset winner over Slaney in the 1,500 at last year's West Germany by 19 seconds and was timed in 8 minutes, 56.13 seconds.

But her time was nearly nine seconds off the world best set last month by Mary Decker, the American track star who was involved in a dramatic collision with the barefoot Budd at the Los Angeles Olympic Games last summer.

Atlantic Coast Conference game at Atlanta. The victory gave Tech an 18-4 record, 7-3 in the topsy-turvy ACC, one game ahead of North Carolina and Maryland, each at 5-3.

No. 15 North Carolina posted a non-conference victory Sunday, downing Louisiana State 75-70.

In Saturday's games, No. 3 Memphis State and No. 4 Southern Methodist lost on the road in non-conference games. Kansas downed Memphis State 75-71 and North Carolina State beat SMU in overtime 82-78.

Top-ranked St. John's, meanwhile, stretched its winning streak to 13 with a 70-68 victory at No. 19 Villanova, while Fresno State ended No. 11 Nevada-Las Vegas' winning streak at 17 games, which had been the longest in Division I, 63-52.

John Salley scored 27 points and Yvon Joseph and Mark Price had 18 apiece for Georgia Tech, which built a 47-27 halftime lead and finished with 59 percent shooting from the field.

Salley said the Yellow Jackets didn't have revenge on their minds for their 68-54 loss to Wake Forest Jan. 5.

"Now, we just wanted to win," said Salley, a 7-footer from Brooklyn, N.Y. "We're just trying to reach the peak we reached in Hawaii. We came at them with the same intensity that they came at us."

Georgia Tech captured the Rainbow Classic in Hawaii last December by beating Arkansas, Washington and Maryland. Delaney Rudd topped Wake Forest with 21 points.

Brad Daugherty scored 19 points to pace North Carolina, 18-5, over LSU, 14-7. Five clutch free throws by Kenny Smith clinched the Tar Heel victory, prompting N.C. coach Dean Smith to say, "Basically, I thought we played maybe our best basketball, for the full 40 minutes, that we've played all year."

Chris Mullin scored 12 of his 21 points in the last 6:14 to rally St. John's past Villanova. The Redmen, 19-1 overall, have won all 11 Big East starts, breaking the conference mark of 10 set by Georgetown last season.

"We certainly contained Mullin in the first half," said Villanova coach Rollie Massimino. "Then, he exploded and showed what kind of player he is."

Georgetown, 21-2, 8-2, won its third straight behind David Wingate's 18 points against BC at the Boston Garden. Bill Martin and Wingate combined for nine straight points in the stretch.

U.S. agent believed kidnapped

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mexican and U.S. authorities were searching today for a Drug Enforcement Administration agent believed to have been kidnapped by drug traffickers in Guadalajara, Mexico, the DEA said.

The agent, Enrique Salazar Camarena, 37, "left the DEA office shortly after noon Thursday for a luncheon date with his wife and has not been seen since," DEA spokesman Robert Feldkamp said late Sunday.

"However, DEA learned from an eyewitness Sunday that four armed men were seen abducting him and throwing him into a car in Guadalajara," Feldkamp added.

He said the kidnapers, believed to be drug traffickers, had made no contact or ransom demand. He noted this was the first suspected kidnapping of a DEA agent in Mexico.

He added, however, that "last October in Guadalajara, the U.S. government vehicle of another DEA agent assigned to Guadalajara was machinegunned by unknown individuals outside of the agent's house."

He said there were no injuries or arrests in that incident.

Feldkamp said that since Camarena's reported abduction, additional DEA agents have been rushed to Guadalajara, located about 280 miles west of Mexico City, from the Mexican capital and Texas to assist local police in the search.

Camarena has been with the DEA since June 1974. In June 1980, he was assigned to the agency's office in Guadalajara, where he lived with his wife, Geneva, and three children.

Reagan's big job to change minds

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — President Reagan's renewed commitment to shrinking the relative size of government is not just an assault on government spending but a battle to change men's minds as well.

It is a dual challenge, and each aspect would seem almost insurmountable to the fainthearted.

Try as he has to get government off people's backs, for instance, the level of government participation in the economy has risen during his administration, reaching 26.3 percent of gross national product late in 1982.

Federal spending as a percentage of GNP has fallen since then to around 24 percent, but that still leaves it well above levels reached in the Carter administration, which still bears a spendthrift reputation.

The job of changing minds may be much bigger.

Ever since the Great Depression of the 1930s the notion has persisted among many voters that the federal government was there to serve them, and during each session of Congress the notion was reinforced.

It came to be believed that the federal government was a source of funds that simply couldn't run out, the reasoning being that since the federal government had the power to tax it could always replenish its coffers.

The development can be seen in the numbers. In 1932 federal tax receipts were only $8 billion. By the third quarter of 1984 they had grown to an annual rate of $706 billion, a mammoth growth even discounting for inflation.

The change can be seen in the terminology, too. What once was obtained because of dire necessity soon became thought of as a right or an entitlement. And those who received benefits became clients rather than recipients.

The metamorphosis can be traced in the attitudes of congressmen, the growth of bureaucracy, the nature and number of jobs that were, in the minds of voters, "jobs that only government could handle."

Some of them were necessary, of course, such as regulation of drugs and medicines, preservation of the environment, safety of transportation, the development of nuclear energy, and national defense.

But some jobs that government took over might have been handled better by the private sector — or so the thinking goes today. Pension benefits, for example, and even some social and welfare operations.

The transition to big government was accompanied necessarily by a shrinkage in the size of the private sector. And as the relative size of the private sector shrank, its ability to finance government became strained.

The resulting deficits now face both the public and private sectors — that is, the entire country and all its citizens — with probably the most perplexing economic problem of the century.

So much of what government does today is considered by millions of people to be humane, necessary, right, traditional and expected that it requires a mammoth educational campaign simply to expose another side of the story.

So many individuals, families, congressmen, businesses, charities, pensioners, veterans and others have a vested interest in preserving the status quo that the job cannot be done without great strain and pain.

'TROLLS' OF HOUSTON—Dwellers of a camp located under a bridge in downtown Houston find food out of dumpsters and shy away from shelters like the Salvation Army.

Homeless men find a niche under Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — The city's storm drainage system has become a refuge for some 75 homeless men who have fashioned elaborate makeshift dwellings underneath Houston's glittering skyline.

Ted Martin, a 21-year-old former construction worker who hitchhiked to Houston from Illinois two months ago, enters his underground dwelling by slithering through an open drainpipe with a rope tied to a fence.

Inside, he and his "roommates" have an overstuffed chair, a plywood bed and a crude kitchen. They even added a clothesline for their laundry. Drinking water is kept in old beer bottles, and the men hide their few valuables in make-shift safes.

"We got all the necessities we need. Right here is peaceful. We're partners here," Martin told the Houston Post in a story published Sunday. "If I'm out of something and he's got it, we share. If I have it and he doesn't, we share. That's the way it goes."

Police, who refer to the underground men as "trolls," said the pipe dwellers often keep pets, mostly dogs. When the animals die, their masters bury them in a cemetery above ground. The graves are marked with hand-made wooden crosses.

The graves caused some concern at first. "A police officer saw the craw and thought they had buried somebody there. They dug it up and got some dog bones," said police Sgt. Jim Brown. "You get some funny looks when you pop up," said Jeff Bolz, 23, who said he left Omaha, Neb., a year ago because he was fed up with society.

"It's like a vacation down here," Bolz said.

Another inhabitant, identified only as Red, 28, thumbed his way to Houston several months ago "because there wasn't no work in Ohio."

"I'm down here because I wanna be down here. I've stayed at a dozen different camps in the last couple of months. The missions are lice infested. It's tough finding a job here. I've had a couple, but it's tough." Red said before he slipped out into the night.

Black leader rejects conditional release

SOWETO, South Africa (AP) — Nelson Mandela, the black rights leader who has been jailed for 21 years, has defiantly rejected the white-ruled regime's conditional offer of freedom and demanded an end to its racial separation policy.

Zini Mandela, 24, announced her father's response to the offer Sunday at a rally attended by about 10,000 people of all races in Soweto, the huge segregated black township outside Johannesburg. She said her father gave the statement to her mother, Winnie, on Friday when Mrs. Mandela visited him at Pollsmoor prison near Capetown.

President Pieter W. Botha told Parliament last month that Mandela and others jailed with him could go free if they renounced violence as a tool to end apartheid, the government's legal policy of racial separation.

But Mandela, who was president of the outlawed anti-apartheid African National Congress when he was arrested, said he could not accept freedom while the congress remained banned and unable to take part in the debate on the nation's future.

"Let him (Botha) renounce violence," Ms. Mandela quoted her father as saying. "Let him say that he will dismantle apartheid."

"I cannot sell my birthright, nor am I prepared to sell the birthright of the people, to be free," Mandela said. He was jailed for life in 1964 for planning sabotage.

A spokesman for Botha said the president had not seen a copy of Mandela's statement, and he had no immediate comment. The spokesman said South African newspapers could publish the statement, an exception to policy barring Mandela and other leaders of his organization from being quoted.

In Pretoria, Prisons Department spokesman Maj. Abri van Vuuren said two political prisoners serving life sentences with Mandela had accepted Botha's offer for release. Van Vuuren said the prisoners' names would not be disclosed until they were released, which he said would be "soon."

Ms. Mandela said prison authorities "tried to stop this statement being made, but he (Mandela) would have none of this and made it clear that he would make the statement to you, the people."

She said her mother could not deliver the message because she was "banned," meaning she is not allowed to meet with more than one person at a time and cannot be quoted. The crowd greeted Mandela's daughter with wild applause and foot-stamping, and carried her to the stage as she entered the packed Jabulani outdoor amphitheater.

U.N. chief supports New Zealand policy

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — U.N. Secretary-General Perez de Cuellar today described New Zealand's nuclear free policy as "well-inspired."

Perez de Cuellar spoke at a news conference at the end of an official visit during which New Zealand was embroiled in a row with the United States over New Zealand's refusal to allow U.S. nuclear-powered or armed warships to use its ports.

Asked whether he thought the policy — which caused a near-rupture of ANZUS, the defense alliance of Australia, New Zealand, and the United States — was realistic, Perez de Cuellar said, "If we think in terms of realistic or unrealistic we won't move."

Election tests impact of Kim's return

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Koreans vote Tuesday in National Assembly elections that test both the rule of President Chun Doo-hwan and the impact of opposition leader Kim Dae-jung's dramatic return from two years self-exile in the United States.

The rough treatment Kim and his U.S. supporters received at the airport when he arrived in Seoul on Friday got widespread coverage in the U.S. media, but it has been almost ignored in South Korea's state-guided press and broadcast media.

South Korean police, separating Kim from his American escorts, roughed up the 59-year-old opposition leader and the Americans, leading to a call by two U.S. Congressmen for cancellation of Chun's planned visit to the White House in April.

The State Department has formally protested the incident, but Reagan administration officials say the visit is still set.

At stake in the elections are 184 directly elected seats in the 276-member single-house assembly. The remaining 92 seats are awarded proportionally among parties, with the party winning the most seats in direct voting awarded 61.

Chun's ruling Democratic Justice Party is considered certain to retain its majority. But observers say Kim's New Korea Democratic Party could win enough seats to play a role in assembly negotiations.

Kim, who had been convicted of sedition and sentenced to 20 years, went to the United States two years ago on grounds of obtaining medical treatment.

He said in an interview he believed his return would rejuvenate opposition forces among South Korea's 41 million people.

Members of Kim's party say they expect to pick up at least 20 seats in the election.

The government claims balloting will be free from tampering.

American supporters of Kim Dae-jung today rejected statements by U.S. Ambassador to Korea Richard L. Walker that they and the Korean government violated agreements on Kim's return.

Embassy spokesman David Fitzgerald confirmed that Walker told a New York Times reporter Sunday that "some members of the group now tell of the decision on the Tokyo-Seoul leg (of the flight to South Korea) to renege on the agreement and to use a locked-arms technique in order to assert the unity of the group."

The description issued Sunday by the Americans concerning the treatment given Kim and his companions at the Seoul airport said in part:

"...a phalanx of plainclothesmen leaped out from behind a curtain, locked arms, and forcibly shoved the group back.... Four men grabbed Congressman (Thomas) Foglietta (D-Pa.) by the arms and legs and flung him backwards onto the floor. Five or six men seized Ambassador White, ripped him away from Kim Dae-jung and threw him to the floor. Kim Dae-jung, his wife and two Korean-Americans were forced into the elevator."

The government has acknowledged that police shoved members of Kim's party but denied officers indulged in "punching and beating."

Saudi Arabia's King Fahd is meeting with Reagan at the White House today

WASHINGTON (AP) — King Fahd of Saudi Arabia, calling today on President Reagan at the White House, wants the United States to take a more active diplomatic role in the Middle East, beginning with pressure on Israel to make concessions to the Palestinians.

But the administration intends to challenge Fahd, in the first visit here by a Saudi king in 14 years, to use his influence to bring King Hussein of Jordan to the peace table with the Jewish state.

A senior U.S. official told reporters in advance of Fahd's talks that the Saudis would like Reagan "to take a more aggressive posture" now that the election is over and he does not have to go before the voters again.

"That's all well and good," the official said. "But the key to it is to have someone to talk to on the Arab side."

However, another U.S. official told The Associated Press there is virtually no hope Hussein and Yasser Arafat, leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization, will agree on a way to negotiate with Israel at least until the spring.

The official said Hussein is determined to proceed, but that Arafat is not yet convinced negotiations with Israel is the only way to help Palestinians living under Arab control.

Both officials spoke only on condition they not be identified.

Fahd, heading a colorful delegation from one of the few remaining powerful monarchies in the world, arrived here Sunday and has meetings with Reagan, Secretary of State George P. Shultz, Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger and splashy formal dinners on his schedule. He will be here through Friday.

During his talks, Fahd is expected to renew Saudi calls for Israeli concessions to the Palestinians, including the surrender of Jerusalem and the establishment of a Palestinian state. In the Saudi view, the United States holds the key to achieving these goals because of its influence on Israel.

U.S. officials said, however, that the first priority is for Arabs to support Hussein and to help him get to the negotiating table with Israel.

"We believe Saudi Arabia, as well as other moderate states, including certainly Egypt, need to support that process and give Hussein what he is trying to obtain in the way of a mandate," said the official who briefed reporters on Fahd's visit.

"I don't think it's so much a question of Saudi pressure on Hussein, but rather Saudi support for Hussein, and maybe some pressure on the PLO to come to an accommodation with Hussein," the official said.

Saudi Arabia is regarded as a force for moderation in the Middle East.

It also is an important U.S. trading partner, as emphasized in full page ads placed in today's Washington Post and Washington Times by the Saudi Arabian embassy.
