

A pooch can cause big problem if he barks.

A Pampa first! Barking dog results in arrest

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

Last week, she was the one of the "Last of the Red Hot Lovers." This week, she was the first Pampa resident ever arrested and charged for having a barking dog.

Diane Williams, 39, 717 E. 16th, thinks she was arrested in connection with the noise made by her daughter's barking canine. The lawyer who posted the woman's bond agrees.

Police admitted escorting the woman to the police station on an arrest warrant, but first said she wasn't "arrested." Later, Chief J.J. Ryzman said the woman's detention did indeed amount to an arrest, but that she wasn't booked in accordance with routine procedure.

Whatever it's called, Williams' detention — spawned by the actions of her daughter's barking dog, complaining neighbors, municipal court officials and police — made the woman hot enough to see red.

The woman had a principal role in last week's Act I production of Neil Simon's "Last of the Red Hot Lovers." She said her lawyer remarked about the irony of being "a star one week and arrested the next."

The ordeal began when Williams' neighbors called the city prosecutor about three weeks ago and complained about the barking pooch in the woman's backyard. Williams said the neighbors had also phoned her about the noisy animal "in the middle of the night."

An animal control officer came to her home about a week ago to discuss the complaint, Williams said. She said she told the dog catcher that the neighbors' dogs also constantly barked and usually instigated the chorus of yapping. On that note, she said the dog catcher left, and Williams considered the case closed.

But about 4:50 p.m. Wednesday, Pampa police officer Lynn Brown showed up at Williams' door to serve a warrant for her arrest. The warrant, issued by City Judge Phil Vanderpool, alleged that she had violated Ordinance No. 969, the city's animal control laws.

The ordinance doesn't specifically mention dog barking, but it does list a bow-wow "nuisance" as a violation.

"A dog or a cat shall be considered a nuisance if it...causes...offensive conditions," say the only terms in the ordinance that might deal with a barking dog.

"No dog or cat shall be allowed to cause a nuisance. The owner of every dog or cat shall be held responsible for every act of such dog or cat proscribed by the provisions of this ordinance," it says.

The revised animal control laws were passed by the city commission in January 1984. At the time of its passage, City Attorney Don Lane said the ordinance contained no specific provisions about barking dogs because they are hard to enforce.

Williams is the first person ever arrested under the new ordinance on the specific charge of having a barking dog, according to City Prosecutor Rick Harris.

Harris admits that the ordinance has "no description of a barking dog." But he said he interprets the above language in the ordinance as providing for arrest and prosecution for harboring a noisy pooch.

The city prosecutor said he's prepared to try the woman on the charge.

"You can only fine them for a violation. You can't put a muzzle on the dog," Harris said.

He said each day that the ordinance is violated constitutes a separate offense, each subject to a maximum $200 fine.

The prosecutor said the complaint against Williams was signed by her neighbor. Based on the complaint, Municipal Judge Vanderpool issued the warrant for her arrest.

Police served the arrest warrant but initially said Williams wasn't arrested. No record of the incident was made on the police department's arrest log.

"I definitely was arrested. I don't know what else you call it," Williams said.

She said officer Brown gave her two choices: drive her car to the police station, surrender and post a $51.50 bond on the charge.

Kent Hance to represent independents

From Wire and Staff Reports

BORGER — Former U.S. Rep. Kent Hance has been hired by a group of Panhandle independent oil and gas producers to help defend their interests in legal battles with major producers, including Dorchester Gas Producing Co. of Dallas and Phillips Petroleum Co.

Vernon Stowers of Pampa, a spokesman for the independents, announced the hiring of Hance to represent the group after day-long meetings behind closed doors here Thursday.

Hance, who represented the West Texas district around Lubbock before running last year for the Democratic U.S. Senate nomination, now works for a Dallas law firm. He will represent the independents in hearings before the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission in Washington and before the Texas Railroad Commission in Austin, Stowers said.

Hance said Thursday he believes the FERC hearing constitutes "a major economic problem for the Panhandle and state of Texas if the rulings by FERC are carried through."

Brenda Murray, an administrative law judge, has made recommendations concerning what FERC should consider constitutes an oil or gas well. Independent Panhandle oil and gas observers predict that if FERC accepts the ruling, some 10,000 producing wells would close in the Panhandle alone, reducing state severance taxes by the millions.

Representatives for the independents say the judge, in a decision favoring major gas producers, has ruled that a well that produces as much as 2,000 cubic feet of gas to one barrel of oil is producing natural gas, rather than casinghead gas.

The distinction is important because natural gas in the Panhandle Field has been classified as "old gas" and is subject to federal price controls while casinghead gas is not.

In recent weeks the independents have used their interpretation of the 2,000 to 1 gas-oil ratio to claim the judge's ruling would create severe conditions for oil and gas production in the Panhandle and probably throughout the nation.

However, in her findings Judge Murray notes "the fact of high gas-oil ratios by itself is not persuasive" that the gas produced could not be casinghead gas.

She also cites scientific evidence concerning the composition of the gas being produced by most of the independents in the dispute as one basis for her ruling.

At least 35 independent producers in the Panhandle Field face the possibility of having to refund overcharges and pay fines for prices they have charged for gas produced by their wells if her recommendation is accepted by the commission.

"This is going to be a real tough battle with tremendous economic impact on the state of Texas," Hance told the Borger News-Herald.

U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo, who met with about 100 business, oil and gas and civic leaders Thursday, said the Texas Railroad Commission "has failed to do its duty and in doing so has opened a Pandora's box it cannot close."

Bolter said the railroad commission "could have prevented this situation (the FERC hearing) had its members acted as they should, and they still could if they so desired."

Falling energy costs keep price index flat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices, beginning the year on an encouraging note, held flat in January, the government said today. Energy prices posted their steepest drop in almost two years while food costs also declined sharply.

It was the third time in the last five months that the overall index showed no increase.

While most economists foresee a price rise of 2 percent for all of 1985, one said that, over the next few months, "it is hard to believe that we will see any significant increase."

That optimism is based on sagging worldwide oil prices and the continued strength of the dollar, which hit new highs against foreign currencies again this week.

As for last month, energy prices fell 2.4 percent, the biggest decline since a 3 percent drop in March 1983. Gasoline prices fell 2.7

percent while home heating oil prices were off 2.3 percent. Both declines were the steepest since August.

At the wholesale level, gasoline is now 6.7 percent cheaper than it was just a year ago.

Food prices fell 0.6 percent in January, their best performance since a 0.8 percent decline last May.

That drop was largely the product of a 21.3 percent fall in egg prices, the steepest decline for any category in the index. Analysts credit that drop to higher production at a time of weak demand.

Fresh fruit prices rose 3.7 percent, the biggest increase for any food category. Experts said the February rise would likely be even higher as the January price survey was done before the devastating freeze hit Florida's citrus-growing areas.

Vegetable prices dropped 3.6 percent last month but experts again pointed to the Florida freeze and said consumers could soon see increases in vegetable prices.

The good news on energy and food prices was tempered somewhat by higher prices for new cars and trucks. Both posted price hikes of 2.2 percent.

In releasing today's report, the Labor Department said that if prices held steady for a full year at January's level, wholesale costs would actually fall 0.4 percent. That figure is based on a more precise calculation of monthly prices than the figure made public.

In all, the Producer Price Index for finished goods stood at 292.7 in December, meaning that goods costing $10 in 1967 would have cost $29.27 last month.

Prices rose a slight 0.2 percent December and 0.3 percent in November.

Attorney testifying in trial of Mattox

AUSTIN (AP) — Houston attorney Thomas McDade, who aroused Attorney General Jim Mattox' ire by trying to question Mattox' sister in a lawsuit, was scheduled to be the first witness in Mattox' commercial bribery trial today.

Mattox pleaded innocent to the felony charge on the first day of the trial Monday. On Wednesday a jury of eight women and four men was picked.

The trial was in recess Thursday. Mattox was named in a felony indictment Sept. 13, 1983, accused of threatening in a telephone call to put the Houston law firm of Fulbright & Jaworski out of the municipal bond business unless McDade dropped efforts to question Mattox' sister, Janice, in connection with a lawsuit involving the state, South Texas rancher Clinton Manges and Mobil Oil Corp. The suit was settled last year, and Mattox denies threatening McDade.

In an open court hearing last November to take depositions for Mattox' trial, McDade testified that when another partner of the law firm, Wiley Caldwell, told him of receiving a June 17 call from Mattox he thought Mattox was "kidding."

McDade said the firm was given until 3 p.m. June 17 to "back off" from taking depositions relating to getting Laredo Judge Ruben Garcia taken off the Mobil Oil case.

McDade and other attorneys of the firm, which represented Mobil Oil, contended that Garcia was too close to Mattox and Manges to handle the case.

Senate rejects bill for petty thieves on jury

AUSTIN (AP) — A Senate split 50-50 has rejected a proposal that would allow a person convicted of minor theft such as writing a hot check to serve on a jury.

"Why do we need a bill to put thieves on a jury?" asked Sen. John Montford, a former prosecutor who led opposition to the bill.

Bill sponsor Bill Sarpalus said the measure was requested by a judge who declared a mistrial after a person with a misdemeanor theft conviction was found to be serving on the jury.

Sen. Sarpalus, D-Canyon, said there is a conflict in the Penal Code and Texas Code of Criminal Procedure over jury service by persons convicted of minor theft, and several judges supported his bill.

The vote to debate the measure was 14-14, and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby added a "no" vote to make it 14-15. Sarpalus needed 25 votes.

Sarpalus' bill would amend the Code of Criminal Procedure so that a juror could not be automatically disqualified if the juror has been convicted of a Class C misdemeanor theft, which carries a maximum punishment of a $200 fine.

"Class C misdemeanor theft does not just involve hot checks but also shoplifting," said Montford, D-Lubbock.

Sarpalus said, "People could still be challenged

(for jury service)."

Montford responded, "It's bad posture for juries to allow exceptions to theft cases."

"We're talking about $20 (thefts) here," said Sarpalus.

"A thief is a thief," said Montford.

In other action Thursday, the Senate approved and sent to the House bills that would:

- Require the Juvenile Probation Commission to put into effect statewide standards for juvenile detention facilities.
- Allocate to the General Revenue Fund all interest earned on state money that is not earmarked by law or the constitution for the fund where the interest money was earned. The Legislative Budget Board estimated this proposal would shift $38.3 million to general revenue over the next two years.

— Authorize proceeds from the sale of a county hospital to be deposited in a special fund that could be used only to finance health care, including care for indigent residents.

Senators also approved a resolution providing for Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby to appoint five-member subcommittees on urban affairs and elections during the 1985 Legislature.

White claims contributions play no part in nominations

AUSTIN (AP) — Political campaign contributors don't get special consideration in appointments to state boards and commissions, Gov. Mark White said.

At his weekly news conference Thursday, White was asked about legislators' criticism of his appointments procedure and also about campaign donors.

"None," White replied when asked what part contributions play in his decisions.

Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, this week complained White first led him to believe a candidate Caperton favored for the Texas A&M Board of Regents would be appointed, then passed him over.

But Thursday, White said he never misled Caperton and was "very dismayed" by a speech in which Caperton told White to find someone else to push his favored legislation.

At that point, White was asked whether political contributions had any impact on his decisions. Then reporter Carole Kneeland of Dallas television station WFAA, asked:

"What about the accusation that you sell seats on the..."

White interrupted, demanding, "Who said that? Who's ever said that?"

"Some reporters in my shop in Dallas," Ms. Kneeland replied.

"Well they're damn wrong," White said.

"They're absolutely wrong. I don't know what contributions any of those people gave me."

About the same time, the Senate voted 28-0 to confirm three White nominees as University of Texas system regents.

The three were Austin lawyer Shannon Ratliff, who has been treasurer of White's 1982 gubernatorial campaign committee; Houston oil company executive Jack Blanton and oilman W.F. Roden of Midland.

On Monday, Caperton, whose Senate district included Texas A&M, charged that White and his staff misled the lawmaker into believing Caperton's former law partner, Don Mauro of Bryan, would be one of those the governor named an A&M regent.

When Mauro wasn't appointed, Caperton said, "Not only did this governor choose to ignore my advice, but I had no input or consultation with regard to the two appointees who ultimately were named."

Criticism also came from Sens. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville.

"It's an indication that this is not one problem involving one senator. We have made some painful decisions to help him, and friendship should be a two-way street," Edwards said.

Low-income Houston area is named historic district

HOUSTON (AP) — A low-income neighborhood once known as Freedmen's Town by the emancipated slaves has been named a historic district, but the city's planning director says the designation still may not save the area's old buildings.

The National Park Service last month named the 40-block area — now known as the Fourth Ward — as a listing in the National Register of Historic Places.

The designation means plans to redevelop the area using federal funds must first be approved by the Texas Historical Commission, said Kenneth Breisch, a surveying supervisor with the commission.

The Freedmen's Town Association spearheaded efforts to win the historical designation, hoping it would encourage owners to take advantage of tax incentives available to those who fix up their houses.

The Fourth Ward is home mainly for poor, low-income renters.

But City Planning Director Efraim Garcia said the listing could have the opposite effect.

"The designation will actually be an impediment to restoration instead of a help," Garcia told The Associated Press on Thursday. "It shows a basic lack of understanding of economics and who the designation would help and who it would hurt."

Garcia said tax credits are given to homeowners in a historical district only for restoration, not repairs. Garcia said restoration is twice as costly as repairs because the homeowner must replace the antique structures with ones that resemble the original and are made the same way.

"I've always said that historic restoration is an avocation for the rich," Garcia said. "There's no way that you can restore poverty areas and still retain the same residents."

Garcia said he wanted to acquire $8 million from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to renovate the street and sewer system, build 600 new homes for some of the residents and relocate others.

Under the plan proposed by Garcia, only part of the neighborhood would have been set aside as the historical district.

"What we would have done is select the key historical elements of the area — we were looking at a six-square-block area — and put in a deed restriction to ensure only restoration would take place. And the rest would be used for new units," Garcia said.

About 200 people who objected to the designation wrote federal officials, but the letters were ruled invalid because it wasn't proved the authors were actually property owners.

Steve Jarnigan, president of the Fourth Ward Property Owners Association, told The Houston Post he doesn't think homeowners will spend the money necessary to restore the houses to their original condition.

Gunman: 'if I hear a noise, I'm gonna shoot, kill her'

TEMPLE, Texas (AP) — A 28-year-old man who went on a shooting spree at Temple Junior College, wounding two instructors and holding one inside a building for about three hours, exhibited wild personality shifts before he fatally shot himself, authorities say.

"He'd be just normal and say, 'Well, I'll release her and come out if you promise me this and this,'" said Police Chief Thomas Vannoy after the shootings Thursday.

Moments later, the man would say things like "If I hear a noise, I'm gonna shoot her and kill myself," Vannoy said.

Steven Parsons, who had addresses in Austin and Longview, died about 10:15 p.m. Thursday during surgery at Scott & White Hospital for a gunshot wound to his mid-sternum, said Dolores Gautier, assistant director of nursing. Police said an autopsy has been ordered.

The woman he was holding, management instructor Laurelyn Carlisle, 33, of Salado, remained in critical condition early today following surgery for a gunshot wound to her stomach, said hospital spokeswoman Carol Trono.

Speech instructor Debbie Foster, 30, of Little River, Texas, was treated for a gunshot wound to her hip and released from the same hospital, said Susan Frederick, assistant director of nursing.

Police said the two women discovered the gunman rifling through their purses inside their offices at the campus Fine Arts Building and challenged him. Ms. Foster was shot as she fled from the building, said Sgt. Steve Klempa.

Marvin Felder, the college's president, said Ms. Carlisle was held after the shooting began, about 10 minutes before a meeting he had called with faculty members in the building about 3 p.m.

Felder said Ms. Foster "really felt Laurelyn was in imminent danger — that the man was not at all stable."

The gunman, brandishing a .22-caliber handgun, also fired at another unidentified faculty member who was not hit, said Felder. The suspect kept as many as 30 police officers at bay, authorities said.

"I can't help but think of Laurelyn in there for three hours with a man threatening to kill her or himself. I can't imagine the torture on the human mind," Felder said.

Klempa said police had summoned a psychiatrist from the nearby Veterans Administration Hospital, the gunman's brother and Mrs. Carlisle's husband, Rex, to aid in negotiations by telephone when the suspect became upset.

"He told us he was going to shoot himself," Vannoy said at a news conference in which he described negotiations with the gunman. "There was a pause. He set the phone down. Silence. And there was a shot."

"And at that time, we decided that we better make entry and make sure he hadn't shot the woman," Vannoy said.

Klempa said that officers had prepared a plan to enter the office where the gunman was holed up.

Klempa said that the suspect didn't make any demands. "He said he was suffering from mental problems and he felt very defeated, very down," he said.

Vannoy said that the suspect's parents had gotten divorced recently.

"Supposedly, he'd left his wife someplace down around Tyler in that area of East Texas and he admitted that he needed help, but he wasn't sure how to go about it," Vannoy said.

The man had "just arrived in Temple, possibly within the past 24 hours," Klempa said.

Klempa said he had at least one relative in Temple, which is about 120 miles south of Dallas, and had last listed a Longview address.

Temple Junior College spokeswoman Susan Howe said the building is a single story structure of classrooms and an auditorium.

Felder said the two women spotted the suspect in the building before the shooting began.

When is bad really good?

The only new laws I ever applaud are laws that repeal old laws. Sometimes, but not often, legislators approve legislation eliminating restrictions that previous laws have imposed on citizens.

Since I don't think there should be any laws restricting any individuals' actions that do not harm anyone else, it seems that I should be leading the cheers for a bill presently before the legislature that would make it legal to place a bet on the outcome of horse races.

But I'm not so sure that this bill should be passed.

If the bill simply stated that it would no longer be against the law to bet on horse racing, then I would be all for it. People who lose their money betting on the horses are harming nobody but themselves and I don't think there should be a law against that. But that's not exactly what the latest horse-racing proposal says.

This bill says it's okay to bet on horse races that are regulated by the state. That's not the same thing as saying wagering on the horses is legal.

This piece of legislation would establish a state commission to regulate horse racing in Texas. That's what makes me stop and think.

I can't really understand why we need a state commission to regulate racing, especially since the bill does not require the commission to collect the taxes that would be imposed on wagering. It allows the state comptroller to monitor any racing establishment to make sure those taxes are paid. And, I don't think the commission would be empowered to tell the horses how fast to run. So I really can't see much purpose for it.

A racing commission (and the staff it would require) would, of course, have to be paid. And it would eventually take a substantial share of the taxes on betting to pay for operations of the racing commission, defeating, at least in part, the very objective the politicians say they have in legalizing betting—the raising of revenues.

I disagree with the avowed political objectives of the horse racing supporters, who point out that legalization would add substantial sums to the state's coffers. A free society cannot base its laws on that premise. In order to have any claim to legitimacy, laws should prohibit only activities that threaten the rights of citizens. Betting on horse races does not do that because nobody would be forced to participate.

But because a little freedom is better than no freedom at all, I suppose I will wind up supporting, to some degree, the bill to legalize race betting.

But I will not support it with great enthusiasm because the concept of state control sticks in my craw. The idea that gambling on horses is okay if it is sanctioned by the state, but immoral if it does not have state sanction, is a concept that has to be rejected by any person capable of logical thought.

Kissing record falls

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — It took three minutes and 2.714 sets of lips on Valentine's Day for Texas A&M students to smooch their way to a collegiate world record for kissing.

College officials said 1,357 couples each paid a $10 registration fee for the Big Kiss event, co-sponsored by KKYS-FM and the A&M Student Government, with 78 cents of each dollar going to the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

Officials said they broke Oregon State's old record of 1,077 couples who were kissing in the same place at the same time.

By 9:45 p.m. Thursday, the 1,357 couples were standing in the shape of a big heart in the middle of Kyle Stadium — Texas A&M's football field — ready to set the record.

The event started more than an hour late because of the long line of eager couples waiting to get in, but there was plenty of entertainment. Local Rockabilly group Four Hams on Rye played for free, and Vaughn Bryant, head of A&M's anthropology department and resident kissing expert, offered tips to the crowd.

He reminded the Big Kissers to hold their mouths and lips just right, to watch the positioning of the nose, and to try some variations to keep the three minutes from getting dull.

Don't embarrass the palace guards

Poor Robert Latta. All he wanted to do was to catch a little inaugural action and see the major tourist attractions in Washington, D.C. He got more than he bargained for—a detention cell in the Secret Service compound, for instance, and the D.C. jail.

All just because Latta wanted to visit the White House during off hours and, to the horror of the crack security forces that guard the leader of the most powerful government on earth, he succeeded.

For his trouble he got one night with the Secret Service, seven nights in the municipal jail and a complete psychiatric examination. He's now free on $1,000 bail, but must return in March for a district court hearing on his charge of "unlawful entry."

We'd suggest instead that President Reagan invite him out to have a talk with the cloak-and-dagger set at the CIA. Perhaps he could help them write a manual on infiltrating Nacaragua.

Latta's qualifications appear solid. After all, he broke through some of the most expensive security equipment in the world. Never mind the obnoxious car-bomb barriers in front of the White House and the metal detectors that White House visitors must pass through—Latta avoided both and apparently didn't even have to work hard to do it.

Latta had arrived in Washington on Thursday before the inaugural weekend and obtained a list of things to see, including instructions on how to visit the White House, from the office of Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo.

He waited until Sunday to tour the White House—but lo and behold, on the day of the Super Bowl and the president's private inauguration, the palace was closed to mere tourists. Undaunted, Latta simply fell in behind the U.S. Marine Corps honor band which was on its way to perform for the president.

Even though Latta wasn't in uniform and was carrying a bag of books and clothes instead of a musical instrument, no one questioned him as he wandered about the mansion for a period of nearly 15 minutes.

But that 15 minutes of freedom cost him dearly. You don't embarrass the palace guards without paying a price. Even though charged with only a misdemeanor, eight days in the pokey before getting out on bail did not seem excessive to red-faced government bureaucrats. No doubt they'd like to see him locked up forever.

Perhaps Latta could find a way to walk away from that, too.

Arms talk teams strong

NEW YORK (NEA) — In designating our chief negotiators in the forthcoming arms talks with the Soviet Union, President Reagan has revealed some interesting and important things about his own state of mind on the subject.

It is, above all, a tough team. Max Kampelman is a Democrat — indeed, a former aide to Hubert Humphrey — but since 1977 he has been vice chairman of the Coalition for a Democratic Majority, the Democratic Party's hard-line rump caucus on foreign and even some domestic issues. John Tower, of course, was the chief Republican spokesman for the Pentagon in the U.S. Senate for decades until his retirement last year. Maynard Glitman's appointment as the third member of the troika is a graceful nod to the career foreign service, from which he was recruited; but it in no way modifies the basic image of the team as patient, unflappable and hard as nails.

Second, no matter how the talks turn out, Mr. Reagan is well-positioned, by virtue of these designations, to cope with the result. If an agreement is ultimately reached, the Senate (which must ratify any treaty) is bound to be reassured by the fact that Tower endorses it. If none can be arrived at, the Democrats are going to find it almost impossible to make partisan hay of that fact, given Kampelman's involvement in the process.

The hysterical overreaction of the media to Secretary of State George Shultz's recent preliminary "talks about talks" with Andrei Gromyko in Geneva guarantees that immense publicity will attend the opening of the formal negotiations. But these are almost certain to drag on for many months, if not years, and the attention span of the media — not to mention the public — is simply not that long. The dispatches will slip from page 1 to page 2, or even to page 4, staging a comeback every now and then when some "roadblock" is allegedly encountered, or removed. It is during those relatively quiet months that the doves — those who crave agreement at any price — will seek to bring major pressure on Mr. Reagan and his team not to let the negotiations "fail."

But what, precisely, do "failure" and "success" mean in such a context? To the appeasement-minded, "success" means reaching an agreement — any agreement — with the Soviet Union. It may be an ill-advised agreement. Soviet adherence to it may be largely unverifiable. No matter: It will temporarily satisfy the impatient longing of public opinion in the Western democracies (not to mention the media) for dramatic results. The Soviet Union knows how to wait for such pressures to mount, and how to take advantage of them.

Only later, when the loudly hailed agreement proves to have solved nothing, and our intelligence reveals that the Soviet Union is quietly violating various of its key provisions, will the negotiators who yielded to pressure for such a settlement realize how thoroughly they have been had. Does anybody envy Richard Nixon or Henry Kissinger or Jimmy Carter today, as they labor to redefine "detente" in some strained and arcane way that will make their fatuous pursuit of that chimera look like something other than the disaster it was?

Our negotiators must have, and I am inclined to think they do have, the courage to "fail" in this sense. The Soviet bosses, after all, can agree to genuine arms reductions any day they want to — and they can agree to effective verification, too. If they refuse to consent to one or the other, it will be because they calculate that they stand to gain more by refusing than by consenting. In that case, our negotiators ought to invalidate their cynical calculation by walking, calmly but firmly, out the door and taking the next plane home.

Today in History

Today is Friday, Feb. 15, the 46th day of 1985. There are 319 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Feb. 15, 1898, the U.S. battleship Maine blew up in Havana Harbor, killing 260 crew members. Many Americans blamed Spain for the explosion, despite the Madrid government's denial. "Remember the Maine!" became the battle cry for the United States as the two countries headed toward war.

On this date: Ten years ago: A jury in Boston found Dr. Kenneth C. Edelin guilty of manslaughter in the death of a male fetus following a legal abortion in 1973. The verdict was eventually overturned.

Five years ago: In a move aimed at fighting inflation, the Federal Reserve announced a full percentage point increase in its discount rate to a record 13 percent.

One year ago: Musical comedy star Ethel Merman died in New York at the age of 76. Today's birthdays: Composer Harold Arlen is 80. Actor Cesar Romero is 78. Actor Kevin McCarthy is 71. Former Illinois Congressman John Anderson is 63. Comedian Harvey Korman is 58.

A new threat to women?

A woman has a right to be worried about an office affair. I'm not thinking of love behind the filing cabinets, but a more common affair: the relationship between a woman and her video display terminal — or, VDT, as these computerized typewriters are called.

This high-tech tool for secretarial and clerical work is revolutionizing the workplace. Yet whether or not it poses a threat to women — who are the majority of the 10 million users in this country — is still unknown.

New research links VDTs to heart problems for the first time. A federal study of female clerical telephone workers in North Carolina showed that those who worked all day at VDTs have twice as much angina pain as other working women. These included women aged 30 to 39. Such chest pains are often the first sign of heart problems.

Dr. Suzanne Haynes, chief of medical statistics for the National Center for Health Statistics in Hyattsville, Md., said findings also showed that women who worked at VDTs all day reported more eye strain, headaches and back pain, as well as increased fatigue and insomnia.

Despite numerous tests showing only non-hazardous, low-level radiation from VDTs (less than a TV set, for example), there have been puzzling, scattered reports of miscarriages and birth defects among women workers.

In response to this, the National Institute for Occupational Health and Safety has authorized a three-year study of the reproductive health of 1,500 non-management working women, users and non-users of VDTs, to detect any significant difference in spontaneous abortions and birth defects.

It also should be noted that claims for workers' compensation for VDT-related injuries appear to be on the rise, according to an article in the Nov. 12 issue of Legal Times.

All these findings will no doubt boost the case for VDT regulatory bills already introduced in at least 15 states.

Such legislation is an attempt to regulate VDT use by calling for a variety of precautions, including periodic rest breaks and eye exams for users, periodic inspection and radiation testing, job alternatives for pregnant women and/or protective aprons. Some bills also call for specific brightness levels and glare filters for terminal display screens.

There are, however, companies and individuals strongly opposed to the proposed legislation. For example, Robert C. Maddox, assistant general counsel of Prudential Insurance Company of America (which uses 15,000 VDTs, by the way) particularly dislikes the idea of periodic inspections.

"They aren't necessary because if the protective circuitry goes bad, the image goes bad and the VDT can't be used anyway," he said.

Maddox also argues against mandatory rest breaks: "I think an employer and an employee can work out these matters without a legislative fiat. What we need at this point is education, not legislation."

VDT safety may be one of the major workplace issues of the decade. The day has passed when society will embrace all scientific and technological breakthroughs without hesitation. Women who accepted the Dalkon Shield and DES lived to regret their blind faith.

So, no one should be surprised that women want answers to questions about VDTs.

And the industries that make or use VDTs — already aware that an injured public can thirst for retribution — are looking for answers, too.

Bureaucrats almost always say 'no'

BY DAVIS E. KEELER

The other day a friend remarked tiredly to me that bureaucrats were always saying "No." I asked him what he meant.

"I just learned why those nifty Japanese television are priced so high," he said. "It's the tariff we slap on them when they're imported. It's included in the sales price — never mind the sales tax. I read this morning that a bunch of Japanese came over to ask the Tariff Commission to maybe reduce the tariff a bit. The commissioners said 'No.'"

My friend was of the opinion that bureaucrats were by nature negative folks, that the easy-going, cheerful and well-disposed were screened out and would never be listed in any government agency directory. Comforting though this theory may be, I suspect that the truth may lie elsewhere, say, in the structure of incentives in the bureaucrat's job.

I explained to my friend that there were two kinds of bureaucratic actions: discretionary and non-discretionary. A non-discretionary action is when you pay a fee for a license, and the bureaucrat collects it. If he follows the book, he won't be blamed for whatever mischief you might get into. "Oh," said my friend, wisdom dawning on him. "You're talking about his discretion, not mine."

"That's right," I said. "You have no options." Then I explained to him that a discretionary action was one in which the decision is the bureaucrat's, but if something went wrong, he got blamed. "His superiors will tell him that he didn't have to give you a license, that he should have known better. Hadn't they given him a crystal ball to use in these situations? Why didn't he use it?"

"But suppose nothing goes wrong?" asked my friend. "Guess the bureaucrat gets a gold medal." I shook my head. "No. His superiors get credit for running a tight ship." I explained that, technically, the bureaucrat's superiors permitted him to act reasonably. Of course, if the bureaucrat always says "no," then nothing can happen that he can be blamed for, not even a good thing.

"Look at what happened to the FDA when an approved product like Thalidomide turned out to be so harmful," I said. "It clamped up so tightly that now the U.S. lags behind Europe and probably even Yaphland in the availability of new, efficacious drugs."

My friend looked lost. I said, "Put yourself in a bureaucrat's shoes. You have four rules of thumb. If you say yes, and things go wrong, you lose. And if you say yes, and all goes well, you lose because your boss gets the gold medal."

"A copper-clad medal," remarked my friend. "And have you ever dropped one of the new pennies? It doesn't drop; it floats."

"One thing at a time, please," I replied. "Third rule of thumb: you can say no; that might have been the wrong decision, but nobody'll know. And finally, you can say no, and that might have been the right decision, but nobody'll know that, either. Your automatic salary increase is in the bag, but that's all. There's just no glory in it."

"So he's in a no-win situation. His best strategy is to avoid risk of loss and say no."

My friend's face grew livid. I shrugged. "Look, these people are only human. Why should they stick their necks out for your benefit? They're acting as rationally as they can in the circumstances. Wouldn't you say 'no' if you stood nothing to gain by ever saying 'yes'? Bureaucrats are a wonder of the modern age. They permit no risk to anyone. Not even to themselves."

Keeler is an Associate of the Institute for Humane Studies in Menlo Park, Calif.

Gena on Genealogy

By GENA WALLS

I have received more requests for the column that contained the will of Herman Obelweiss on file in Anderson County than any other column. The will ran in the Jan. 7, 1983, column and here it is again for all of you.

When a will was filed, the county clerk was responsible for it becoming a part of the record. If you are looking for a will and know the death date, check several years beyond that date. Often, if a will contained something that the wife did not agree with, she would hold the will.

For example, if the husband was angry with a child and disinherited or left a token amount, the wife might not file the will.

In some cases, a will has been recorded 20 years after the death of the person and has skipped a generation, but still has been proved to be a valid will.

Watch for other names on the will which sometimes can lead to additional family members. Witnesses were usually relatives or close neighbors that had known the family a long time.

Before making any assumptions about the content of the will, research the traditions of the area. Did the sons receive land when they reached legal age? Did the daughters receive a dowry? Either of these could lead to the child receiving a token amount at the time of the father's death. In most cases, the wife could not own anything — not even household furnishings. It is interesting to read these documents and learn what was considered valuable at that time.

Here's the will of Herman Obelweiss:

"... I am writing my will myself that dam lawyer want he should have too much money, he asked too many answers about my family, first thing i want i dont want my brother have a dam ting i got, he done me out of forty dollars fourteen years since. I want it that hilde my sister she gets the north sixty akers of at where i am homing it now. i bet she dont get that loater husband of hers to broke twenty akers next plowing time, she cant have it if she lets Oscar live on it it want it i should have it back if she does.

Tell mamma that six hundred dollars she has been looking for twenty years is berried from the backhouse behind about ten feet down. she better let little frederick do the digging and count it when it comes up.

Pastor Lucknitz can have three hundred dollars if he kiss the book he wont preach no more dumhead poletiks. he should have a roof put on the meeting house with it and the elders should the bills look at.

Mamma the rest should get I want that adolph shud tell what not she do so no more slick irishers sell her vokum cleaners dy noise like hell and a broom dont cost so much.

I want it that mine brother adolph should be execter and i want it that the jedge make adolph plenty bond put up and watch him like hell.

Adolph is a good business man but only a domopf would trust him with buster pfennig. i want dam sure that schlemic Oscar dont nothing get. tell adolph he can have a hundred dollars if he prove to the jedge Oscar dont get nothing. that sure fix Oscar. (Signed) Herman Obelweiss."

MAKING PLANS - Representatives from the city and Clean Pampa, Inc., met recently to discuss distribution of a Litter Ordinance Digest to local residents. The digest, compiled by Clean Pampa in cooperation with city staff members, will be mailed out in bank statements. From left are Public Works Director Allyn Moore; Jo Potter, Clean Pampa coordinator; Kirk Duncan, chairman of the organization's Municipal Committee; Steve Vaughn, head of the city's Code Enforcement Department; Dena Whisler, chairman of the organization's Public Relations Committee; and City Manager Bob Hart. Hart announced Tuesday that the city will be launching an effort to get residents to remove abandoned vehicles from the city. (Staff photo by Larry Hollis)

Dear Abby

Kids paying rent at home learn living within means

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: To "Furious in Dallas," who thinks it stinks that parents would ask their child to pay room and board for living at home: ("Children don't ask to be born," said "Furious.") "Their parents brought them into the world, and they're responsible for feeding, clothing and housing them until they decide to leave home."

When I finished my schooling and entered the working world, I, the child, was required to pay my parents room and board every week. My family was fairly well off, so at first I was angry, but my parents told me it was for my own good—that it would teach me responsibility and prepare me for the "real" world. They were right. That's how I learned the value of money—how to spend it and how to save it and how to live within my means.

The day I went to buy my wedding gown, my wonderful mother pulled out a little book and gave it to me. Inside was a savings account with all the money I had paid for room and board! She smiled and said, "It's yours."

Actually, I learned two lessons: responsibility and love. LEARNED IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR LEARNED: Lucky you to have had such wise parents. Read on for another example of how responsibility is taught:

DEAR ABBY: I know a couple whose daughter got pregnant when she was in high school. She kept the baby and her mother raised it while she (the young mother) ran around and got pregnant again.

Abby, my daughter will be taught the facts of life as soon as she is old enough to understand them. If she decides to have sex before she's willing to take responsibility for her actions, she will have to pay the consequences. In plain language, if she gets pregnant, she will have two choices: She will either have to put the baby up for adoption or she will have the baby, stay home 24 hours a day, seven days a week, and take care of it like any other mother!

If she wants a high school diploma or a college education, she will have to figure out for herself how to do it. OLD-FASHIONED MOTHER

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are in a heated discussion over something that is so trivial I'm almost ashamed to ask, but I'm afraid if I don't find the answer, it could escalate into something serious.

We have a 9-month-old son who has just started to walk a little. My husband says, "Put shoes on him right away to help him walk better, and hurry up or the kid will grow up with flat feet."

I say, "He has 74.6 years to wear shoes; what's the hurry?" Please, Abby, help us.

FOOTLOOSE MARY

DEAR MARY: Assuming the boy's feet are normal, he doesn't need shoes until he starts walking outside—then he'll need them only for protection. And tell your husband that walking without shoes does not a flatfoot make.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter, who is getting married next summer, suffers from asthma and is allergic to cigarette smoke.

With the wedding invitations we plan to enclose a separate card noting that there will be a reception and dinner following the wedding. On that card, we shall (in polite words) ask the guests to please refrain from smoking.

Is it acceptable to do that? WONDERING IN COUNCIL BLUFFS

DEAR WONDERING: Absolutely! The well-mannered invitees who cannot make it through the festivities without a nicotine fix will know that they will be expected to step outside for a smoke. And those who object need not attend.

Group compiles litter ordinance digest

Clean Pampa, Inc., members and city officials have joined efforts in compiling a Litter Ordinance Digest to distribute to local residents.

Jo Potter, Clean Pampa coordinator, said the digest was prepared to inform residents of city ordinances concerning littering and waste disposal responsibilities for citizens.

The digest notes that ordinances are "rules of conduct to make living with each other easier and nicer."

Clean Pampa members felt many people were not aware of the ordinances and would be more cooperative in making efforts to keep the city cleaner if they knew the city rules.

The digest gives brief statements concerning sections of city ordinances relating to such matters as littering, disposal of waste materials, burning of trash, disposal of hazardous materials, care of property, junked vehicles, placing of posters and signs, and other items.

"If all of us would take care to observe these ordinances, we would have not only a cleaner place to live, but also a friendlier one," the digest states. "No one appreciates someone else's garbage and trash."

The digest was compiled by members of Clean Pampa's Municipal Committee and Public Relations Committee in cooperation with city staff members.

At the recent city commission meeting, City Manager Bob Hart said Clean Pampa "is functioning very well now."

Hart said the city will be working with the organization to concentrate on the problems of abandoned and junked vehicles located throughout the city.

Clean Pampa members are working to locate the problem vehicles in the city and to contact the city authorities with such information.

Hart said the city would send out letters to residents having abandoned or junked vehicles to ask for their voluntary cooperation in alleviating the situation.

But he warned the city would take stronger action as needed to combat the problem.

"CHINESE CARNIVAL"—For the fun of on-lookers, a so-called Chinese Tin Army rolls on the snow covered street as part of the Foul's Parade in this tiny village on the Altmuehl River in Bavaria, southern West Germany, Thursday as carnival celebrations started throughout West Germany. The origin of this traditional parade is lost in history.

Satellite photos reveal the power supply for the earth's auroras

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Scientists for the first time have located a huge, egg-shaped power supply in space that helps create the Northern and Southern Lights, the mysterious curtains of green light that shimmer around Earth's poles.

The power source is an invisible zone 20 to 30 times the size of Earth, and is located about 400,000 miles distant, always on the side of the Earth away from the sun, University of Iowa physicist Lou Frank said Thursday.

It uses magnetic forces to trap electrically charged particles from the solar wind, a hot, particle-laden gas that speeds from the sun at nearly 1 million mph, Frank said.

"It (the power supply zone) really dances around out there," said Frank, who presented his findings at Jet Propulsion Laboratory during an international conference on solar wind interaction with Earth's magnetic field.

Frank said the most detailed ultraviolet and visible light satellite photos ever made of the Northern and Southern Lights allowed researchers to calculate the location of the power source in the Earth's magnetic "tail." The tail is the 4-million-mile-long part of Earth's magnetic field blown away from the planet by solar wind.

From the ground, the Northern and Southern Lights — also called the aurora borealis and aurora australis — usually are visible from high latitudes as "a series of (60- to 70-mile-tall) green curtains marching and waving across the sky," Frank said, although they also may appear as a red glow.

The Northern and Southern Lights occur because solar wind pushes the magnetic field around the Earth to create an electric voltage, or power supply, in the magnetic tail, he said. Through a complex series of reactions, the voltage accelerates the particles into Earth's polar regions, where they funnel into the atmosphere and are illuminated to create the lights.

Just as a television picture is produced by electrically charged particles shot onto a TV screen, the auroras are basically pictures produced on "Mother Nature's TV set" when the electric particles in space are accelerated into the atmosphere, Frank said.

Locating the power source was made possible by recent analysis of some of the 200,000 photographs of the Northern and Southern Lights taken from space 15,500 miles above Earth by the polar-orbiting Dynamics Explorer 1 satellite, Frank said.

The photos do not actually show the power supply that created the lights, but by studying the photographed variations in the lights, physicists were able to calculate its location, Frank said.

"This has not been done before," he said.

Reagan's second four years is opening with flurry of diplomacy

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's a little early to be making judgments about Ronald Reagan's second term as president, but after less than a month he is showing a tendency toward the kind of active diplomacy he shunned in his first term.

First in dealing with Moscow, and now in the Middle East, the Reagan administration is beginning to confront difficult issues in a traditional way.

The president isn't jumping in with both feet, as Jimmy Carter did, for instance, at Camp David in 1978. Nor is he about to hold a summit meeting with Konstantin Chernenko, the ailing Soviet leader. He remains the only president since Herbert Hoover not to meet with the man in charge in Moscow.

But the detachment with which Reagan approached the world while he concentrated on a record U.S. military buildup at home is giving way.

U.S.-Soviet negotiations on nuclear weapons are due to resume in Geneva in mid-March. The hierarchy of American decision-making has been straightened out to put Secretary of State George Shultz and Reagan, of course, in ultimate charge.

This means Shultz will be able to make swift assessments about the Kremlin's attitude and adjust relations with the Soviets along a broad range of cultural and business issues accordingly.

On the Middle East, the president this week received King Fahd of Saudi Arabia, the first in a series of scheduled visits by Arab leaders who are trying to engage the United States "more vigorously" in promoting the Palestinian cause.

Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak will drop in next month, undoubtedly with the same kind of pitch.

Reagan is holding back. He wants to make sure Israel's security interests will be protected. His advisers are telling him the first move to the table should come from Jordan's King Hussein.

In the first Reagan administration there was the embarrassment of having a U.S.-arranged plan to draw Lebanon closer to Israel and the West blow up in Shultz's face. So, naturally, Reagan and Shultz are cautious about putting America's prestige on the line again.

But depending on the merits of the understanding Hussein worked out with Yasser Arafat of the Palestine Liberation Organization, the president is prepared to renew his 1982 Mideast peace proposals and, he told Fahd at dinner this week, send a U.S. delegation to the bargaining table.

An AP News Analysis

Next Tuesday, meanwhile, the United States will open discussions with the Soviet Union in Vienna about the Arab-Israeli dispute, the war between Iran and Iraq, and the future of Afghanistan, where rebels are trying to oust more than 100,000 Soviet soldiers. Richard W. Murphy, the senior official in the State Department's Near East bureau, will head the U.S. delegation.

If the talks are successful, the administration probably will branch out and ask the Soviets to hold similar talks on other areas of the world. The goal is the "better working relationship" that Reagan told the United Nations last September he was seeking with the Soviet Union.

New York house fire kills seven

WYANDANCH, N.Y. (AP) — Fire ripped through a two-story house in the early morning hours today, trapping most of the occupants on the top floor and leaving seven people dead and two seriously injured, police said.

All seven victims were found on the second story of the home when the fire was brought under control after burning for more than three hours, said police Sgt. Charles Giordano.

Giordano said it appeared six of the dead were children and the seventh an adult. Firefighters were unable to reach the upstairs of the house upon arrival due to the intense flames, Giordano said.

One of the injured was badly burned and taken to the burn unit at University Hospital in Stony Brook, while the other was taken to Brunswick Hospital, he said. Both were sleeping on the first floor of the home.

The fire was reported shortly after 2 a.m. and burned until about 5:30 a.m., he said. The cause and the identities of the victims were not known.

Bad reputation of vultures is reported undeserved

ST. CLOUD, Minn. (AP) — It's a dirty, smelly job, Mike Tenney agreed as he observed several maggot-covered carcasses of car-killed deer that he had placed at a feeding station in an attempt to lure turkey vultures.

But Tenney hopes his study of the habits of the buzzards, which he acknowledges are probably the least glamorous of the birds of prey, will lead to a master's degree in biology at St. Cloud State University.

The buzzards provide magnificent air shows, often soaring for hours without moving their wings, and from a researcher's perspective, Tenney says, they are an ideal subject because little is documented about their habits.

What is known is that their scavenging is an essential part of the ecosystem and in parts of their natural range, particularly the tropics, it is invaluable to the control of pollution and disease, said Tenney, of Rochester.

Tenney began his study last spring and says he hopes to finish it in the fall of 1985. The majority of vultures have now migrated out of the region, leaving Tenney the winter to document his findings and take courses at St. Cloud State, where he is a teaching assistant in the biology department.

The buzzard's poor reputation is undeserved, Tenney says, maintaining that the bird is essentially a harmless scavenger.

Adult birds generally have a wingspan of 5 feet, with a naked, red head. The end of an adult bird's beak is white and the bird has warts around the eyes. Turkey vultures have a life expectancy of five to seven years, he said.

Tenney's study will include examinations of nesting, roosting and feeding habits, and the type of habitat associated with nest and roosting sites. He plans to capture about 20 adult vultures for tagging next year and hopes to track several with radio telemetry from signals sent by transmitters attached to the birds.

Minnesota is in the northern part of the turkey vulture's range, Tenney says. The birds usually arrive in late March, and some stay until late November.

Labeled for PROTECTION

Coleman Adv.

Some medicines may be taken internally; others are for external use only; therefore labels caution us as to their proper use. These precautions are for our own protection and good.

All things in life are not so clearly marked as to their proper use. The Bible is our source and guide, our label.

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path.

Psalm 119, 105

ATTEND CHURCH, STUDY GOD'S WORD

EVERYONE IN THE CHURCH
THE CHURCH IN EVERYONE

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Baptist Convention names Maddox to executive board

DALLAS - Russell Wayne Maddox, a native of Pampa, has been elected to join the staff of the Executive Board of the Baptist General Convention of Texas as consultant in the Church Building and Support Section.

The State Missions Commission of the BGCT approved Maddox for the position at a recent meeting in Dallas.

As an experienced architectural draftsman, Maddox will counsel Baptist churches throughout Texas regarding building programs.

He will also administer "Contribution on Construction" and "Small Gift and Loan" funds for the convention, according to Charles Lee Williamson, director of the BGCT Missions Division.

Maddox is a graduate of Texas A&M University at College Station, with a degree in architecture. He also holds a master of divinity degree from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary at Fort Worth.

He has served as associate pastor at First Baptist Church, Stratford; minister of education and administration at North Dallas Baptist Church, Dallas; and minister of education at Sunny Glenn Baptist Church, Dallas.

Maddox and his wife, Dana Elizabeth, have two children, Erin, 4, and Andrew, 2.

Local church sets area wide crusade

The First Baptist Church of Pampa will hold an area wide crusade March 17-22 featuring Jay Strack, a nationally known evangelist from Fort Myers, Fla.

The crusade will have services daily Sunday through Friday at 7 p.m. and Tuesday through Friday at noon. Meals will be available at the noon services.

Strack's advance planning man, Clayton Spriggs, was in Pampa Feb. 7 to meet with the chairpersons of the planning committees.

Chairpersons are Randy Land, youth; Veronica Carroll, telephone and attendance; Garry Schwalk, publicity; Wayne Wilson, prayer and visitation; John Glover, music; Neal Stovall, ushers; Jerry Sims, finance; and Doug Cunningham and James Baird, counseling.

Strack addresses the moral problems of America, with his goal being "to ignite a moral revolution in America."

Joining Strack as music evangelist is John McKay. In the 7 p.m. worship service on Sunday, March 17, McKay will present a mini-concert called "Celebration of Praise."

Religion Roundup

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) - A Norwegian theologian and former political leader, the Rev. Gunnar J. Staalset, has been elected as general secretary of the Lutheran World Federation.

The federation is made up of 99 member denominations totaling 54.4 million Lutherans, including more than 8 million in the United States. Altogether, the world's Lutherans total 68.5 million.

Staalset, 50, who earlier had declined to be nominated for the post, was overwhelmingly elected by the federation's executive committee to succeed the Rev. Carl H. Mau, Jr., who is retiring Sept. 1 after 11 years in office.

Staalset has been general secretary of the Norwegian Bible Society in Oslo since 1982 and previously served as head of the Center Party in Norway and as head of the Church of Norway's foreign equatorial communications company.

KANSAS CITY (AP) - Churches across the land - Protestant, Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox - are being asked to toll their bells on Ash Wednesday, Feb. 20, "in observance of the crisis facing rural America."

Both the National Catholic Rural Life Conference and the National Council of Churches suggested the bell-ringing begin at 10 a.m. local time and last for seven minutes.

A statement recommending the action said the bells first are to be tolled "as a sign of mourning and of our own complicity in allowing the present situation to come about" and then rung vigorously "as an alarm, a call to action" to resolve the rural plight and loss of family farms.

Ash Wednesday marks the start of Lent, a 40-day period of penitence.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - This city, 13th largest in the country, is developing a multimillion-dollar proposal to try to attract four more major Christian denominations to establish their national headquarters here.

Already based here is the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ).

FREE AT LAST—Jeremy Levin speaks to reporters Friday in Damascus before leaving for Frankfurt to meet his wife. Levin escaped from kidnapers who abducted him nearly a year ago on his way to work as Beirut bureau chief for Cable News Network. (AP Laserphoto)

Resistance 'capital' has fallen

NONG PRU, Thailand (AP) — Vietnamese forces, climaxing a lightning offensive, today overran the last stronghold of the Khmer Rouge in the Phnom Malai region of Cambodia and set fire to the conquered guerrilla headquarters of Phum Thmei, senior Thai military sources said.

A two-pronged Vietnamese attack knocked out Khmer Rouge defenses at Phnom Malai and rolled on to seize Phum Thmei which hugs the Thai frontier opposite this Thai village, the sources said.

Phum Thmei was a showcase for the Khmer Rouge and a kind of "capital city" for the Cambodian resistance. Last Saturday, resistance coalition leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk, a former Cambodian ruler, received the credentials of four ambassadors to his government there.

A final infantry assault on Phum Thmei was preceded by intense shelling. The Thai sources, who spoke only on condition they not be identified, said Vietnam's troops entered the camp about 10:30 a.m. and set fire to a number of the structures.

The fall of Phnom Malai and Phum Thmei put Vietnamese forces, including tanks and artillery pieces, into every major Khmer Rouge base along the a 40-mile-long stretch of the frontier south of the key Thai town of Aranyaprathet.

Levin: escaped from chains

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Jeremy Levin, the American journalist who gained freedom after 11 months of what he described as solitary confinement in Lebanon, was turned over to the U.S. ambassador today and declared: "I can't wait to be back on American soil."

"I feel wonderful. I've never been more thankful. I've never been more happy," he told reporters.

Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk Al-Sharaa turned Levin over to Ambassador William Eagleton at the Syrian Foreign Ministry at 10:30 a.m.

Levin told reporters he escaped late Wednesday night by tying three blankets together, sliding down a wall and fleeing to a Syrian army position in east Lebanon's Bekaa Valley.

"The faces of the Syrian soldiers were the first faces I saw since March 7 of last year," he told reporters.

He said he believed there were four other people held in the same place he was, but said he did not know whether they were Americans because he was held in "solitary confinement" through his captivity.

Levin said he was "chained to a wall or radiator" most of the time.

Levin was shaking when he arrived at the Foreign Ministry and appeared not to know exactly where he was.

A journalist told him that he was about to be turned over to the American ambassador and that he was in Damascus at the Syrian Foreign Ministry.

"That is fantastic," he said, in tears.

"Lucille, where is Lucille," he said in a loud voice, asking about his wife.

When told by a journalist from Cable News Network, with whom he had worked in Beirut as bureau chief, that his wife was waiting for a rendezvous with him in Frankfurt, West Germany, he gasped and responded: "I can't wait to see her. Please tell her I missed her very much and I love her so deeply."

Levin was dressed in grey trousers and a blue sweatshirt.

One of his escorts said the clothes — including bright white tennis shoes he wore at the news conference — had been purchased in the east Lebanese town of Chitaura on Thursday because he had arrived at the Syrian army position early that morning.

Levin, who has grown a beard during his captivity and whose hair was grayer than before his capture, did not show any signs of physical torture. But Foreign Ministry officials ordered reporters out of the room before they could pursue how he had been treated by his captors.

Levin said he was held on the second floor of a multi-story apartment building on a hillside. He said he could not be specific about the site because: "They took my glasses away, and I am very nearsighted. I could not see."

He said the reason he believed there were others held in the same building was that he heard four knocks each morning from people signaling to their guards that they wanted to leave the bathroom, which was adjacent to his room.

"But the voices were muffled, and I could not tell whether they were speaking English," he said. Four other Americans who disappeared or were kidnapped in the Moslem, western sector of west Beirut in the past year remain missing. They are William Buckley, a U.S. Embassy political officer; the Rev. Benjamin Weir, a Presbyterian minister; Peter Kilburn, a librarian at the American University of Beirut; and the Rev. Lawrence Jenco, a Roman Catholic priest.

Asked how he escaped, Levin gave this account:

"Wednesday night ... I had the best chance. They were careless about the chains, and I got the chain off."

"It's the usual cliché. I tied three blankets together and went down the blankets and I went as fast as I could, and then got to the main highway."

He said when he ran into Syrian soldiers it took several minutes to communicate his plight. He said he repeated, "Help me, help me" several times. "I could not speak Arabic and they could not speak English."

He said the soldiers finally understood he needed help and took him to a position that he said he thought was near the city of Baalbek, in Syrian-controlled east Lebanon. The city is headquarters of several radical Shiite Moslem groups.

After the news conference, Levin was whisked away to the ambassador's residence, where officials said an American nurse was to examine him.

He told reporters he wanted to "rest for a while."

Islamic Holy War, believed made up of Shiite Moslems loyal to Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, has claimed responsibility for several attacks against Western targets. Among them were the bombing of the U.S. Embassy in west Beirut in 1983.

Police say poodle stopped kidnapping

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The attempted kidnapping of a 7-year-old girl was foiled when the girl's dog bit one of her would-be abductors, police said.

"I've got the report up on my bulletin board with 'true dog of the year award' written under it," Lt. Robert Jasek said Thursday. "That dog saved that little girl from being abducted."

The girl told police she was walking her poodle, Nappy, about 5:30 p.m. Wednesday when a car drove slowly by. The two men in the car waved at her and the car went down the street, turned around, and came back, she said.

The passenger opened his door and motioned for the girl to get inside, she said. She told police she was scared and tried to run, but that the man grabbed her arm. At that point, she released Nappy's leash, and the poodle bit the passenger on his hand, she said.

The man then released the girl, who ran to an older girl who was riding a bicycle nearby.

Police put out an alert for the gray, two-door vehicle the girl described, but said they had no new leads in the attempted abduction. But Jasek said, "That dog really deserves a nationwide award."

SPORTS SCENE

Dan Pooley....In 4-way tie for lead.

Four tied for San Diego lead

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — The Isuzu-Andy Williams San Diego Open golf tournament is plunging to new lows.

Low scores, that is. Never before have so many players needed so few shots to make one trip around the twin courses at Torrey Pines, the scenic, Pacific-bordered club that graces this elite coastal community just north of San Diego.

"I guarantee, you'll see some good scores with this weather," said Gary Hallberg, who ought to know. He fired an 8-under-par 64 Thursday, one off the tournament single-round record, yet had to settle for a four-way tie for the lead.

Swinging amid ideal conditions — temperature in the upper 70s, brilliant blue skies, no wind — 118 of the 155 PGA players competing here shot par or better, and 20 of them covered 18 holes in 66 or fewer strokes.

The scores were so low, in fact, that tournament officials speculated it might take a 36-hole total of 140, 4 under par, to make the cut. That would eclipse the Williams record low cut of 3 under, set last year.

"The greens are very slow and firm. You can roll your putts aggressively, and you wind up knocking more in," said Hallberg, runnerup to Gary Koch here last year and the Williams champion in 1983. "I'm very confident here. The 64 actually was a fairly simple round."

Hallberg's modesty belied the fact that he chipped to within three feet of the hole five times, sank putts of 12, 15, 15 and 20 feet, scored an eagle on the par-5 sixth hole and managed par on the 18th despite hitting into the water and taking a penalty stroke.

His torrid play came over the south course, which in the past had been regarded as the more difficult of the two Torrey Pines layouts. He said the south's superior condition this year is making up the difficulty difference between the two.

Tied for the first-round lead with Hallberg were Don Pooley, Tommy Valentine and Howard Twitty. Five players were one stroke back, at 7-under-par 65: Steve Pate, Loren Roberts, Gene Littler, Bruce Lietzke and Vance Heafner.

Mark O'Meara, seeking his third straight tour victory after winning the Bing Crosby Pro-Am and the Hawaiian Open, suffered a disastrous quadruple bogey on the par-4 fifth hole and, despite a 33 on the back nine, finished at 72 and was in danger of missing the cut without a strong sub-par second round.

Pampa ends season tonight at home

Pampa closes out the basketball season tonight against Lubbock Dunbar at 8:30 p.m. in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Pampa failed to qualify for a playoff spot for the first time in six years, but the Harvesters would still like to avenge a 59-49 loss to Lubbock Dunbar suffered on Jan. 18.

A win then would have put the Harvesters within a half-game of second place, but the Panthers scored nine straight points in the third quarter and opened up a 12-point lead. Joey Torres and Jim Roothe had 16 points each in that game while Petey Davis led the Harvesters with 25 points.

Dunbar clinched the runnerup spot after whipping Levelland, 60-39, last Tuesday night, while Pampa is coming off a 55-49 win over Dumas.

The Harvesters will be after their 20th win of the season tonight compared to nine losses.

"We're going to playing for pride and a 20-game season," said Pampa coach Garland Nichols. "I'm going to challenge the seniors to go out and play their best game ever."

Dunbar's two district losses have come against district champion Borger. The Panthers almost upset the Bulldogs in their last meeting, losing by only one point.

"Dunbar is playing as well as they've played all year," Nichols said. "We'd definitely like to beat the second-place team. That would make us look pretty good on down the line."

A win tonight would give Nichols his fifth consecutive 20th-victory season at Pampa. Nichols' 1979-80 team went 16-14, but still won the district championship.

"Of course, we're disappointed that we didn't make the playoffs, but I felt like the kids played to their full capacity," Nichols said. "We're going to finish with a pretty good record when you consider all the road games we played."

Dirt riders sponsoring run

The Top O' Texas Dirt Riders are sponsoring a handicapped tag team fun run Sunday at Lake McClelland.

Registration will be from 9 to 11 Sunday morning while riders may practice from 12 to 1.

The race begins at 1:30 p.m. over a 2½ to 3-mile course. There will be an hour to an hour and a half time limit. The rider with the most laps will be crowned the winner. In case of a tie on laps, the first-place finisher will be the winner.

No three wheelers will be permitted.

Entry fee for members is $5 and for non-members is $8.

For more information, contact Danny Strawn at 669-1955 or Clint Deeds at 665-6940.

Old rivalry renewed at Garden

Dr. Irwin Dambrot shrugged in frustration and held out his hands, sort of like a dentist explaining the need for a root canal.

"I don't have tickets," he said, "and I can't get any."

Now, this isn't just any dentist we're talking about. Dambrot was co-captain of the City College of New York grand slam team which swept the NCAA and National Invitation Tournament championships in 1950. Thirty-five years ago, he was one of the best basketball players in New York, where the college game was king.

The doctor's basketball nostalgia nerve has been touched by the hottest ticket in town — Feb. 27 at Madison Square Garden.

CCNY plays New York University that night and that hasn't happened in the Garden since Dambrot was a senior, far removed from his first fixed bridge.

Forget "Cats" and "La Cage Aux Folles." Seats for those Broadway shows are easy to come by compared to the Garden's basketball offering that night. If you don't have a ticket by now, forget it. They're just not available.

Frank McGuire, director of intercollegiate athletics for the Garden, thought this 50th anniversary year of college basketball in the building would be a perfect time to renew the CCNY-NYU rivalry there. Some of the respective basketball alumni, invited to a reunion by the Association for a Better New York, couldn't agree more.

"Thank you for bringing back basketball to the Garden, where it should be and should stay," said Sid Tanenbaum, NYU '47.

Tanenbaum was a Brooklyn kid, barely 6-feet, who had to talk his way into NYU. "They were looking for 6-4 guys," he said. "I was too small. I told the interviewer, 'I won't waste your time,' and I started to go out the door."

"He called me back and said, 'Where are you going? Let's talk a little more.'"

When the conversation was completed, Tanenbaum was a Violet. "When I left the office, I met Frank Mangiapane. He was the next interview."

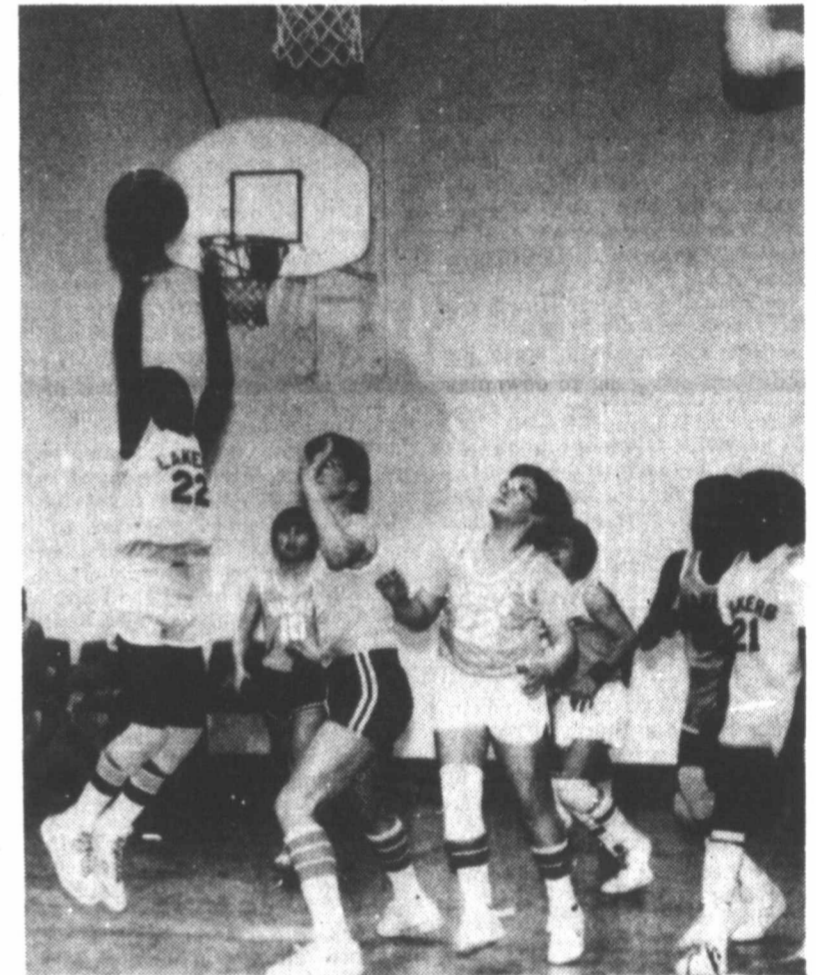

Mangiapane was captain of the 1945-46 Violets, who went 19-3, beating a number of intersectional powerhouses including Arkansas, Notre Dame and Baylor. The last game of the regular season, however, was a 49-44 loss to CCNY, a defeat that snapped a 13-game NYU winning streak.

One of City College's stars of that era was Sonny Hertzberg, who played in the backcourt with Red Holzman, later the coach of the National Basketball Association New York Knicks.

"Our game was completely different from the one they play today," Hertzberg said. "We played in gyms with low ceilings. You had to shoot line drives."

After the Tanenbaum-Mangiapane era, the next brace of Violet stars came in the late '50s when Cal Ramsey and Tom Sanders, a couple of local products, resisted out-of-town scholarship offers to play for NYU.

Wacker no longer a hacker

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Texas Christian basketball coach Jim "Killer" Killingsworth says his quitting smoking last year was no big deal, but his pals and players suggest otherwise.

They laughingly insist he spent more time smoking and coughing than talking and that without his cigarette hack, he's now cut his speaking time in half.

"He used to talk awhile and hack awhile," quipped Steve Marshall of the Horned Frogs publicity office, suggesting there was hardly time for his halftime strategy sessions.

Chucked junior forward Tom Mortimer: "It got to the point that 60-second timeouts weren't long enough to do us any good."

Student manager Alan Umholtz contends Killingsworth's post-game speeches during his smoking days often ran on for more than an hour.

"Without the cough," says Umholtz with a grin, "he gives the same speech in 20 minutes."

Assistant coach Charlie Fenske, accustomed to watching game films through a haze of cigarette smoke, says he didn't realize the high quality of the films until he watched one this year in a room free of smoke.

Killingsworth fields the running jokes with a hearty laugh and a popular barnyard expletive and pops in another piece of chewing gum, which he attacks with the finesse of a runaway cement mixer.

"He's got the jaws of an alligator," marveled one sports scribe after watching Killer's histrionics during TCU's overtime victory last weekend against Arkansas.

TCU Athletic Director Frank Windeger agrees. Says he: "Killer's got the strongest jaws in America. The man's chewed enough gum to stretch to Mt. Everest and back."

To break his two-pack-a-day habit, Killingsworth substituted gum for cigarettes nine months ago and while he doesn't keep track of how much he chews, he admits "it's a bunch."

Killer said he launched his non-smoking campaign almost casually last May with the help of nicotine-laced gum recommended by a doctor.

"I was chewing a helluva lot of that gum," he smiled. "To tell the truth, you get a pretty good fix if you chew a lot of it pretty fast."

The Rockets' Akeem Olajuwon (34) gets a push from the Knicks' Trent Tucker. Olajuwon scored 30 points and pulled down a season-high 25 rebounds as the Rockets won, 113-105.

Olajuwon leads Rockets to victory

NEW YORK (AP) — Ralph Sampson said the New York Knicks' pressing defense played right into the hands of the Houston Rockets and rookie center Akeem Olajuwon.

"They put the press on, but that only means that they have to handle Akeem 1-on-1, and they can't do that," Sampson said after Olajuwon scored 30 points and pulled down a National Basketball Association season-high 25 rebounds to lead Houston to a 113-105 victory Thursday night.

"Their press was a learning experience, but we'd seen it before and it wasn't that big of an adjustment."

Olajuwon's performance surpassed the previous NBA season high of 24 rebounds by Philadelphia's Moses Malone on Jan. 30 against Boston. The 7-foot rookie's 15 offensive rebounds bettered his own NBA season high of 14 at Utah on Jan. 6.

The 7-4 Sampson had 22 points and 12 rebounds as Houston outrebounded the Knicks 73-44. That helped the Rockets overcome a 26-11 turnover deficit.

"I went for every rebound," Olajuwon said. "If I go up for 10 rebounds, I'm going to get about six of them. It was certainly one of my best games."

"Naturally, he was such a destructive force," Knicks Coach Hubie Brown said. "He either got fouled or put it back in. He was the main ingredient."

Houston Coach Bill Fitch said Olajuwon's performance was his best this season. The game gave him more ammunition for his contention that Olajuwon was the proper No. 1 choice in last year's college draft.

Olajuwon's performance and that of Chicago's Michael Jordan, chosen third after Olajuwon and Portland's Sam Bowie, have been debated all season.

"Let's hold another draft in New York tomorrow and see who's first," Fitch said of Olajuwon's performance. "I love Michael Jordan, but if I were his mother, the best I could do is split the ballot for Rookie of the Year."

Fitch said the turnover deficit was indicative of the team's weakness in the backcourt compared to its talented front line.

"Our team is like a Cadillac without a radio," Fitch said, "but in the next few years I would rather be looking for guards than two big men."

Thursday's victory gave the Rockets a 30-21 record, one more triumph than they had all last season in 82 games. The Knicks, 18-35, had their home winning streak snapped at four games as they returned to Madison Square Garden after losing five times on a six-game road trip.

The Rockets led 44-29 in the second quarter but the Knicks cut the deficit to six at halftime and finally tied the score twice in the fourth period, at 92-92 and 94-94. NBA scoring leader Bernard King scored 14 of his 29 points in the final period to pace the New York rally.

After the final tie, Olajuwon's basket with 7:27 remaining triggered an 11-3 burst that put Houston ahead for good.

Houston hit 61.5 percent of its shots in the first quarter to open a 36-23 lead. Olajuwon scored 12 points, Lloyd nine and Sampson eight in the period.

The Rockets went on to lead by 15 on three occasions in the second quarter before Trent Tucker scored nine points during a 20-11

New York streak that cut Houston's advantage to 55-49 at halftime.

Pat Cummings scored 20 points for New York and Lewis Lloyd had 25 for the Rockets, who had lost seven straight games in New York since 1979.

Ward signs with Rangers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Texas Rangers outfielder Gary Ward has agreed to terms on a one-year contract for the 1985 season, team officials say.

Ward, 31, had been scheduled for a contract arbitration hearing next Tuesday in Chicago, but reached agreement Thursday on a one-year contract worth approximately $700,000.

The Rangers had turned in an arbitration figure of $650,000, and Ward had been asking for $770,000. He went through arbitration last year and lost. An arbitrator concluded he should be paid $450,000 as proposed by the Rangers instead of the $595,000 he sought.

The agreement Thursday came after negotiations between Rangers' Assistant General Manager Wayne Krivsky and Ward's agent, Tom Reich.

Ward receives his $250,000 raise after a season in which he batted .284 with 21 home runs and 79 RBIs for Texas in 1984.

Ward becomes the second-highest paid Ranger, if free agent designated hitter Cliff Johnson's signing bonus is not calculated along with his salary. Only third baseman Buddy Bell is paid more.

Also, four rookies have agreed to one-year contracts for 1985, the club announced. They were pitchers Glen Cook and Jose Guzman, catcher Kevin Buckley and infielder Greg Tabor.

Ward's signing leaves no arbitration cases pending for the Rangers. Catcher Don Slaught and relief pitcher Dave Schmidt also had filed. Slaught agreed to a one-year contract, and Schmidt won his case Saturday, being awarded $344,000 rather than the Rangers' offer of $230,000.

Michigan State takes Big Ten lead

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Bill Frieder, the Michigan coach, wasn't buying all the hype over his team's Big Ten matchup with Iowa. George Raveling, the Hawkeyes coach, sauntered onto the floor wearing a warmup suit to show how uptight he felt.

"You guys can make it out as a big game, but we have to play six more," Frieder said after his third-ranked Wolverines took a 1½-game lead over No. 11 Iowa with a 56-52 victory at Iowa City.

"I'm damn happy," Frieder said. "I'm not going to downplay that, but there's a long way to go and a lot of funny things can happen in this conference."

Raveling and his coaches wore jogging suits instead of the more traditional sport jackets and neckties. "I figured since you guys said this was the biggest game of the year, I would relax," Raveling said.

Roy Tarpley led Michigan, 19-3 and 10-2 in the Big Ten, with 21 points, but only four of those came in the second half as Iowa took a five-point lead with 4½ minutes to play. The Wolverines erased the lead on two straight baskets by Garde Thompson and a bucket by Antoine Joubert that put Michigan ahead for good, 50-49. Greg Stokes had 15 points for Iowa, 19-5 and 8-3 in the Big Ten.

While he was relaxing in his sweatsuit, Raveling blamed a defense that was a little too relaxed for allowing the two baskets by Thompson in that run.

"One of our players just fell asleep," Raveling said. "As I told him in the dressing room, 'I can buy you falling asleep on it the first time, but not a second time.'"

In other games involving Top Twenty teams, No. 8 Syracuse swamped Seton Hall 94-62. No. 12 Louisiana Tech beat Southwestern Louisiana 83-76 in overtime. No. 17

Illinois clobbered Northwestern 64-42 and No. 18 Oregon State defeated Washington State 69-49.

Top Ten
Syracuse scored the first eight points of the second half to open up a 60-47 lead and easily defeated Seton Hall in a Big East Conference game, giving Jim Boeheim his 200th coaching victory. In only nine years at Syracuse, Boeheim has a record of 200-66.

Wendell Alexis, a reserve forward, had 17 points for the Orangemen, 18-4 and 8-4 in the Big East. Seton Hall is 9-15 and winless in 13 conference games.

Navratilova, Lloyd in Lipton tennis finals

DELRAY BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The women's final is set, and it's no surprise. The men get their chance today with only one seed, and that No. 11, among the four semifinalists in the $1.8 million Lipton International Players Championships tennis tournament.

When the 128-player men's singles began two weeks ago, 15 of the top 20 players and 40 of the top 50 in the world were in the hunt. Now, only four remain — 11th-seeded Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia, Scott Davis, Tim Mayotte and Sweden's Jan Gunnarsson.

The Martina Navratilova-Chris Evert Lloyd final will be a familiar one. The two have split 62 matches in the longest rivalry in open tennis history.

The women's No. 1 seed, Navratilova gained the final with a 6-3, 6-3 victory over Canada's Carling Bassett, while Lloyd, seeded second, came from behind to eclipse West Germany's Steffi Graf 6-4, 6-2.

The men's semifinals will pit two American hard-servers against two European clay-courtiers as Smid takes on Davis and Gunnarsson faces Mayotte. But the hardcourts at Laver's International Tennis Resort favor neither style.

Davis reached the semifinals by upsetting Sweden's Stefan Edberg, who holds victories over Jimmy Connors and France's Yannick Noah. Smid ousted Noah in the quarterfinals, while Gunnarsson stopped 12th-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis and Mayotte has made it a habit of reaching his peak in big tournaments.

The women's final on Saturday and the men's title match on Sunday will be nationally televised by ABC. Each champion will pocket $112,500.

"It would be nice to play Chris," Navratilova said before Lloyd took the court against Graf. "I certainly will be ready for her this time. You know I have something to prove. But I know I will have to play a little better than I did today. At least I'll need to be a little more consistent."

The last time the two met, in the final of the Virginia Slims of Florida last month, Lloyd was the winner, snapping a 13-match losing streak to Navratilova.

Razorbacks drill Longhorns

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Arkansas basketball coach Eddie Sutton suffered through a Texas comeback attempt but finally relaxed in the wake of a 60-51 victory that kept his Razorbacks in the thick of the Southwest Conference race.

"I told my squad that if they can't win tonight, they can forget about those championship rings," Sutton said Thursday night.

"When we look at our schedule we see we have three games at home and travel to Rice," Sutton said. "If we can win out and SMU could stub its toe, we would share the conference championship."

The tough win in Austin raised Arkansas' record to 8-4, one game behind Southern Methodist's 9-3 mark and a half game ahead of Texas A&M and Texas Tech, who are 7-4. For the season, Arkansas is 17-9. Texas fell to 5-7 and 12-10.

Sutton said freshman Kenny Hutchinson, who hit 6-of-6 from the field against Texas, "came of age tonight. I've been saying all along the night would come when he would hit his shots and might bust loose."

Texas Coach Bob Weltlich was high on praise for Arkansas center Joe Kleine, whom he called "the most competitive player in this league, by far."

"I mean it's not even close. I wouldn't want to even try to name a player who would be second, he would be so far back. He just out-competed your entire team, and he has the equipment to do it," Weltlich said.

"They made a lot of big defensive plays when they had to and we just made some not so intelligent decisions," Weltlich added.

Kleine scored 22 points and held Texas center John Brownlee to just 6 points.

Wacker led Texas with 16 points, followed by Cooper with 15. Hutchinson finished with 15 for Arkansas.

Information about your changing telephone service from Fred Epperly, Network Services Supervisor

Divestiture revisited: one year later

A little over three years ago — January 8, 1982, to be exact — we were stunned by the announcement that AT&T would divest itself of 22 operating companies, including Southwestern Bell, in exchange for the federal government dropping its 8-year-old anti-trust suit.

Most of us remember that moment: where we were when we heard the news, the looks on the faces around us, the feeling in the pit of the stomach as it slowly dawned on us what it was going to take to dismember the world's largest corporation.

We did what we had to do — all the while wondering if it would work.

Today, it works.

Although every one of us is still analyzing divestiture's effects on our responsibility areas and working out the glitches, we've come a long way.

Service has remained at quality levels

A year ago, when divestiture took place, some thought the Bell System breakup would cause local telephone service to deteriorate drastically. But it hasn't.

And the many changes haven't always been easy — on you or on us. We still don't know where some of our longtime work friends in other departments wound up. And I can imagine the consternation of many customers who had been accustomed over the years to one calling another, being told overnight they would have to get their own telephones.

To help you with your questions, we introduced a series of informational booklets in 1984 called "Tele-Help." And, as a result of your questions, more booklets are coming this year, including a series for small businesses.

New revenues, new services and budget cutting

One of the principal axioms of our business has always been, "to serve well, we must earn well." Since divestiture, that's never been truer in Texas.

It's important to point out we've managed to get through the first year on our own as a stand-alone company without any significant increase in local residence rates. In fact, flat-rate residential service increased only 30 cents per month in 1984 — and that was the result of a rate filling a year earlier.

And despite all the havoc of divestiture, our internal measurements tell us service has never been better in Texas.

But more than ever, we understand that really satisfying customers requires a great deal more than looking good on a monthly service report. We know we have some weak spots, but we're working on them.

You see, the ultimate judge is not what our surveys tell us, but what you tell us.

And serving you is our only business. We appreciate the opportunity to do so.

INVESTIGATION—Carl Carlson, with the Kansas Bureau of Investigation, dusts shattered bits of glass for fingerprints outside the Bartlett and Co. grain office in Levant, Kan., where one man was shot and seriously injured and two other men were kidnapped and later killed in a shooting spree that claimed four lives Wednesday. (AP Laserphoto)

Shootout may have ended an eight-state crime spree

COLBY, Kan. (AP) — Four suspects in a crime spree that left four dead and four wounded in northwest Kansas may have been on a two-week rampage through eight states that resulted in several robberies and at least one other killing, authorities said.

There are "strong indications" the four were involved in armed robberies and shootings over the last two weeks in Michigan, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Arkansas, Texas and Oklahoma, police Chief Mark Spray said Thursday.

A three-county chase Wednesday that started with an apparent robbery at a restaurant in Granfield, Kan., 40 miles southeast of Colby, culminated in a shootout that left one suspect dead, authorities said.

Also killed Wednesday were a restaurant manager and two hostages who were taken at a grain elevator and shot "execution style." The four people who were wounded included two suspects and a Thomas County deputy who was shot after stopping the suspect's car.

Authorities spent Thursday trying to determine if the four suspects committed other crimes as they traveled south and west from Michigan before reaching Kansas on Tuesday.

Law enforcement officials from Arkansas and Texas said they planned trips today to Kansas to interview the three surviving suspects about robberies in which one woman was killed and another was shot seven times.

Meanwhile, local authorities planned to file charges today against James C. Hunter, 33, of Amoret, Mo., and Daniel E. Remeta, 27, and Lisa J. Dunn, 18, both of Traverse City, Mich., according to Thomas County Attorney Perry Murray.

Murray said he planned to charge each with two first-degree murder counts, two aggravated assault counts, two aggravated kidnapping counts and one aggravated robbery charge.

The fourth suspect, 18-year-old Mark Walter, of Suttons Bay, Mich., was killed during the shootout Wednesday.

Authorities said they believe the crime wave began Jan. 27 in Copemish, Mich., with the robbery of a gas station. Copemish is 25 miles southwest of the homes of three of the suspects, and the robbery occurred within 48 hours of the day family members say the suspects left home, Spray said.

Michigan authorities described Remeta as a long-time criminal who served three years at the Michigan State Prison at Marquette. Grand Traverse County Magistrate Stewart Soule said that Remeta appeared in his court at age 14 and said "what he wanted to do was kill a policeman, go out West and become a hit man for the Mafia."
