YULE MAIL SETS MARK A new record for the number of Christmas cards and letters handled in one day was established Wednesday at the Big Spring post office, according to A. A. Porter, superin-tendent of mails.

Employes processed 54,231 pieces of mail, Porter said, which is well above the former record set in 1953 of 50,869.

For this same date last year, post office records show 50,334 pieces were handled by postal employes. There were about 592 insured packages Wednesday, he said, and an estimated 350 sacks of incoming mail.

Swamped with growing volumes of mail, Porter urges that patrons cooperate with postal employes by making use the mail separating rack in the lobby of the post office.

This rack, he said is helping employes keep pace with the record volumes and greatly assists in processing the mail on its way to the destination,

Here are the way the schoolhoy playoffs shape up this week, at least, to this reporter:

ABILENE 24 HOUSTON AUSTIN 7.

Houston may use its aerial weapon to score once against the Eagles but no one is going to stop Chuck Moser's team now. The Eagles started slowly enough but they're living up to all expectations now. Abilene has the size, the depth and the desire to return the AAAA championship to West Texas.

BRECKENRIDGE 27 PORT NECHES 14.
Comes now, Port Neches' come-uppance.
Neches will be tougher than a lot of folks figure but the Bucksrece are in a class by themselves. Too, they'll have the advantage of playing on their home field, which means a lot. Breckenridge probably would have beaten Lufkin a lot worse then they did, but for the fact that the field at Waco was wet.
Neches has been tough in its own area but where it made its mistake was in lesing the toss of the coin. If Big Spring had made good on only one more point try against Vernon, it would have been hesting Neches this week and a coin toss wouldn't have decided it.

Confusion And Cross-Purposes On Foreign Policy Should Stop

On Monday President Eisenhower held a long conference at the White House with Republican congressional leaders to discuss the shape of the domestic phases of his State of the Union Message which the Constitution requires a President to make to Congress and the people.

Tuesday the conference was resumed, this time with leaders of both major parties present and participating. And at the second session foreign affairs held the center of the stage.

Obviously this division of subject matter between domestic and foreign was no happenstance, and the wisdom of separating the two goes without saying. The President's domestic program is a partisan affair, so Democrats were excluded for that session. Foreign affairs are something else again, and a bipartisan approach is not only wise but an absolute necessity.

Foreign problems do impinge on many facets of domestic policy, but while individuals and parties do differ, oftentimes bitterly, on domestic issues, it is a matter of life and death that the whole country present a solid front on all vital elements

Under the Constitution foreign affairs are the peculiar domain of the President, acting through his secretary of State by and with consent of the Senate. He is the designated leader, the responsible executive, in matters of foreign policy, and his success depends on the extent to which he can carry the Senate along with him and make his voice heard and heeded throughout the world.

Our friends as well as our foes should never be left in doubt as to whose voice speaks on foreign affairs. It is constitutionally the President's. When he speaks he speaks for the nation. One clear voice carries the weight of the nation; a gabble of voices directed in all directions not only confuses our own people but confounds our friends and breeds contempt among our enemies.

Let us row among ourselves on domestic matters to our heart's content; but let the confusion and the cross-purposes and the loud disagreements stop at the water's

Cutbacks In Production Concern Of State As Well As Oil Industry

Leaders of six oil and gas associations have made up their minds to fight for reduction of the flood of crude oil that is flooding the country and threatening to crucify the independent producers. They met in Fort Worth over the weekend and made that decision. Methods of carrying it out had not been perfected as this was written, but the fight will be carried directly to Congress.

In brief, the independents are producers who have no other sources of revenue, whereas the "majors" engage in many related activities-refining, retailing and the like. When domestic wells are pinched in tighter and tighter from the effect of excessive imports by the majors, the independents are hit and hit hard.

They have hesitated to agitate for restrictive tariffs on foreign oil, hoping that imports would level off and that step would not be necessary. But they have found it increasingly difficult to compete with foreign oil in the domestic market, hence

They are agreed that something must be done, but they are not agreed on details. Several plans are under consideration, and the toughest problem facing the producers is to find a common meeting ground on a workable program,

Cutbacks in production are not simply the concern of the producers. Texas in particular bases its whole tax structure on one phase or another of the oil industry, and every time a well is cut down or out it is felt in the State Treasury at Austin.

A ceiling on imports might get the quickest results. In the long haul, however, there may be some way devised to maintain imports at a reasonably high level and yet make the excess subject to impoundment to avoid depression of the market. Whether oil could be stockpiled in depleted and abandoned fields like other strategic materials has not been established. Perhaps it is not as far fetched as it

They've become essential to our national defense and are becoming essential to coast-to-coast business planning.

Before these electronic dervishes were developed, guided missles had to be designed by trial and error. After completion, the model would be shot off to determine the trajectory - behavior. Then, the design would be corrected by hunch, by gosh, and scientific engineer-

True, scientists had complex mathematical formulas to make precise determinations of the effect of weight, design, air drift, wind resistance, gravity, etc., on guided missiles. But the calculations were enormous.

To select from 25 designs would take one man seven years using a desk calculator. A high-speed IBM electronic computer does the job in about seven minutes! So today the missiles can be said to be designed - on a computing machine - by elimination. You reject models that don't survive the mathematical tests. But the formulas - the instructions -

Fate Of Lost Colony, Virginia Dare Is Oldest Mystery In U.S.

The opinions contained in this and other articles in this column are colory those of the writers who sign them. They are not to be interpreted as necessarily reflecting the opinions of The Herald. — Editor's Note.

Mystery lovers—and there must be lots of them, judging from the volume of whodunits they manage to cram through radio and television transmitters—should take up American history.

Probably the oldest mystery in Ameriea is the fate of the Lost Colony and Virginia Dare. Even the "hammer man" hasn't been able to solve that one. Virginia was the first person of English parentage born in what is now the United States. She was the daughter of Ananias Dare, and the granddaughter of John White, governor of Sir Walter Raleigh's second colony on Roanoke Island, just off the North Carolina coast, She was born on Aug. 18, 1587, about a month after the colony was established and not long before It became the "lost settlement."

Shortly after her birth, White left for England with a couple of sailing vessels in order to get supplies for his colony. His itinerary was fouled up by the war between England and Spain and it wasn't until 1591, four years later, that he re-

When Gov. White got back, he for his colony was missing. The only clue it left behind was the word, "CROATAN," inscribed on a tree trunk, presumably to indicate the destination of the departed

There are two theories as to what hap pened to the lost colony. One is that the settlers starved out on the wilderness island and went to live with the Croatan Indians, at least some of whom were friendly to the colonists at that time. The tribe since then has claimed that white blood from the lost colony flows in its

The other popular belief is that the colonists were murdered by Indians, since some of the first Americans weren't too happy over the intrusion of the settlers from Europe

Austin Recollections-Raymond Brooks

Political Playback

Texas has been declaring its independence of the national Democratic Party right along.

It was the Jeffersonian Democrats, back there in the first decade of the Roosevelt era, led by J. M. West and Professor J. Evetts Haley.

Then it was the Texas Regulars, a group of intransigents shepherded by Judge Merritt Gibson of Longview, which reached toward top levels of state administration for support. Next, it was informal support for the Dixlecrats, though Texas didn't go far toward support of the splinter party. Then there was the Southern revolt, tied to the issue of tying the party loyalty pledge to the presidential nominee. That was before courts said a candidate could start running as an independent and later take the Democratic Party pledge and vote in its primaries. But this is the story of a loyalist, not

Tom Miller, businessman, became mayor of Austin about the time President Roosevelt started patching up the depression ruin. He was a strong Roosevelt man. He coined the motto "prosperity's roses blooms again with Roosevelt." He was the official host to the President when Roosevelt visited Austin Mayor Miller sesrved several terms as Texas finance chairman for the Democratic National Committee. He organized the Texas Jefferson-Jackson Day Dinner, with Vice President Alben Barkley the speaker, held in Austin.

Miller was a strict loyalist, but a conelliator. In 1944, the loyal forces got split up, with a minority insisting they couldn't endorse President Roosevelt's renomi tion without endorsing Vice President Henry Wallace, too. The same year, the whole loyalist movement was challenged by the Texas Regulars, who dominated the state Presidential convention by nest strategy. At the national convention, th Merritt Gibson Texas Regulars won the first round and award of all the Texas delegate seats. Meantime, the loyalists were fighting among themselves over Wallace. Miller was trying his best to conciliate them, and, as I recall, to work out some compromise that would keep the Texas forces from being split up, and the sincere Roosevelt folks left outside the convention hall. At any rate, a compromise was offered, giving the Texas Regulars half the votes and seats and the loyalists the other half. The issue was carried to the convention floor in the July 1944 convention. Final speeches were made by Hart Willis of Dallas, for the Regulars, and Herman Jones of Austin for the loyalists. The Texas Regulars marched out when the Miller forces were given half the votes.

In one of the caucuses of the lovalists. Miller showed up, beaming in hope he had the placating solution. He had deep respect for the rule that you can't quote the President directly. Fresh from a telephone conversation with President Roosevelt, Miller urged his group to settle the row with a compromise for the sake of harmony. "Our friends want this," he said. "I have been asked to convey this request to you. I can't tell you who. You know there are certain people you can't quote

Columnist Calls For Debate On Marxism Among U.S. Senators

Mrs. Louise S. Frisch of Baltimore has value. sent me a copy of a letter which she addressed to Senator Arthur V. Watkins who has sprung to recent fame as the hard and strong man in the McCarthy controversy, The first paragraph of this letter amused me and it may you:

"When you (Senator Watkins) told me yesterday that you have 'forgotten more about Communism than Senator Jenner ever knew," I thought perhaps you were responding to my inquiry self-defensively in a moment of irritation."

Perhaps the lady misquotes the senator but it is amusing to, accept her statement and go on from there I have no idea what either Senator Watkins or Senator Jenner knows about the canon of the Marxist church which is the foundation of all Communist thought and action in all the world. I do know that Senator Jenner employs one of the truly significant authorities on this subject in this country, Benjamin Mandel, whose knowledge is so profound that many who regard themselves as experts consult him constantly. So, even if Senator Jenner is not a great expert, he has sense enough to employ one.

Granted that Senator Watkins has "forgotten more about Communism" than Senator Jenner or anyone else ever knew. we shall have to take his word for it that he has forgotten the subject and let it go at that, No one can be blamed for forgetting. It would be an interesting escapade to have a debate on the floor of the Senate between Senator Watkins and Senator Jenner or any other senators who rattle the word "Communism" in their throats as though it came out of their brains. would be of advantage to the country to see exactly what they mean by this word. Encountering many senators in the course of my business, I have discovered very few who can really define Marxism in terms which Marxist can understand. Mostly they just don't like it, which may be as good as any definition. Few of them, for instance, can explain why a materialistic, pragmatic, atheistic concept of the cosmos should make converts so easily among the intellectuals of Europe and Asia.

A nice debate on the theory of Com-nunism would perhaps clarify the atmosphere. Maybe they would come out of it with some definitions. I recommend Earl Browder as the moderator, as he was for so many years the principal exponent of the doctrine in the United States. In fact, Browder was the most successful operator of the Marxist system until he was dised by Stalin as no longer of any

Perhaps it might be done in question naire form. The senator might then an swer a question or two of this order: 1. Why does a Hindu regard American materialism (high standard of living and all that) as not essentially different from the materialism of Marxism except in the apparatus of achievement?

2. Why is it that a Confucian does not find Marxism repugnant to his central doe

3. What effect has the vast accumulation of data in the natural sciences, partieularly in the fields of biology, astrophysics and nuclear physics, had upon the receptivity of Marxism by youth?
4. What is the fundamental difference between the "natural law" and "dialoctical materialism" and why is it therefore impossible for one to be a Christian and a Communist at the same time? 5. Why is it essential for Communists.

whenever they take over a country, to organize to combat all forms of mysticism, particularly when belief in mystical phenomena is organized in the form of a universal church?

Perhaps Senator Watkins, who says ha has forgotten so much, could be diverted from a critique of Joe McCarthy to a critique of Karl Marx. It would be an interesting exercise in forensics and should be particularly appetizing to one who was once a Christian missionary.
