Charity Drive Preparations Started Here

Fund Appeal Scheduled January 26 And 27; Workers Asked

Volunteer workers were kept busy Wednesday and Thursday compiling a list of Big Spring people who are regularly employed to be used January 26 and 27 when a special appeal will be made for funds to carry for direct public charity here this year.

The campaign dates were set in a meeting of a city-wide charity committee composed of G. H. Hayward, Wendell Bedichek, E. A. Kelley, W. B. Currie and Dr. M. H. Bennett.

The funds raised will all be used to care for local people who can not work or are ill or otherwise dependent. This fund is needed in addition to federal relief funds allotted the county because those funds can not legally be used except to provide employment.

Drug Clerk's Mistake Costs Life Of Man

ANSON—Death of Robert Meeker, 35, was held accidental following an investigation which revealed he drank poison sold through mistake at a local drug store Wednesday morning.

Meeker, who had been held in the Jones county jail for 30 days on a burglary charge, was not indicted by the grand jury and had been released about 30 minutes before the accident occurred.

Meeker rushed into the station in alarm, and Clyde Tidwell, proprietor, called officers and a physician. After receiving first aid treatment, Meeker was started to Stamsford in an ambulance. He died en route to the hospital.

Officers said the investigation brought out that cartons containing bottles of the two drugs were marked in resemblances and their location had recently been changed on poorly lighted shelves in the store.

Random Items Show Large Sums Of Government Money Poured Out For Interlocking Bureau System

By RAYMOND CLAFFER
United Press Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1933, By United Press)
WASHINGTON, (UP)—One glance over random items of government expense reveals that the government is keeping up its reputation as a de luxe spender.

Government money continued to pour out in golden streams to nourish the elaborate interlocking bureau system in Washington.

The average taxpayer, in his sublime faith, supposes it is necessary to pay more than $400,000 a year to keep up the white house establishment. He is willing to pay it in order that the head of the nation should have every physical comfort and secretarial assistance.

But how many taxpayers know that last year the government spent more on the George Rogers Clark sesquicentennial than it did on the white house with its four secretaries, eleven limousines and all?

- This year the federal government expects to spend on the Chicago World's Fair more than one and a half times what it spends on the president of the United States and his official establishment.
- Random selections from the actual items of expense last year become even more interesting when it is remembered they contributed to the fact that the federal government spent $2,585,567,299 more than it received.
- The items include:
 - Congress—Salaries and mileage of senators $998,000.
 - Salaries senate officers and employees, $1,676,000.
 - Salaries and mileage representatives, $4,483,709.
 - Salaries house officers and employees $3,212,000.
 - Gratuities House of representatives $110,000.
 - Capitol building and grounds $350,000.
 - Site and construction house of office building $3,276,000.
 - Enlarging and improving capitol grounds $2,187,000.
 - Completion senate office building $1,133,000.
 - Botanic garden $500,000.
 - Miscellaneous—Government printing office, $3,953,000.
 - White House executive office, $424,000.
 - Allen property custodian, $221,600.
 - American Battle Monuments Commission, $656,000.
 - Arlington Memorial Bridge Commission, $1,580,000.
 - Board of Mediation, $198,000.
 - Board of Tax Appeals, $607,000.
 - Bureau of Efficiency, $160,000.
 - Chicago World's Fair (estimated 1933 expense) $400,000.
 - Civil Service Commission, $1,737,000.
 - Employees compensation commission, $4,724,000.
 - Federal Board of Vocational Education $9,882,000.
 - Federal Farm Board, $1,341,000.
 - Federal Reserve Commission, $330,000.
 - Federal Radio Commission, $969,000.
 - Federal Reserve Board, $1,741,000.
 - Federal Trade Commission, $1,765,000.
 - General accounting office, $4,317,000.
 - George Rogers Clark sesquicentennial commission $465,000.
 - George Washington Bicentennial Commission $611,000.
 - Interstate Commerce Commission, $9,083,000.
 - National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, $1,105,000.
 - National Capital Park and planning commission, $2,394,000.
 - Puerto Rico hurricane relief commission, $2,436,000.
 - Public buildings and parks in Washington $5,288,000.

Divorce Rate To Continue Up; Family Life Decline Further, Social Trends Group Asserts

BY HERBERT YAHRAES JR.
NEW YORK (AP)—That the divorce rate will continue to increase, the size of the family continue to decrease, and still more of the family's functions be taken over by outside agencies are among the conclusions presented in the report of the President's Research Committee on Social Trends.

However, the report finds little evidence that the family will disappear. It has "declined in social significance," the report says, "although not in human values."

The factory, the school, the store and the state have taken over activities that once tended to keep the family together, the report declares, leaving its stability dependent on "the strength of the tie of affection, correlated sentiments and spiritual values, the joys and responsibilities of rearing children."

How to strengthen this tie is a major problem, it says.

The stability of the future family is not clearly seen," writes Dr. William F. Ogburn, of the University of Chicago. "It rests a good deal on what research will discover, and the wide dissemination of the results."

Cites Need For Harmony
"The problems of husbands and wives," he says, "reach their crisis in separation or divorce and maintenance of strict divorce laws represents society's major effort to deal with them. Yet the more fundamental problem for the future stability of the family is toward off the disharmony which leads to separation."

He finds "a growing need not only for more knowledge" in the field of "inherited variability, habits, and the relationship of physical and psychological behavior," but also for a good knowledge of social science.

The report says that "many people have had higher rates of separation and remarriage" than those but few cultures "have or even had families which perform as few economic functions as do American families today dwelling in city apartments.

"These facts suggest," it says, "as does a projection of the divorce curve, that our culture may be conducive to further increases in divorce unless programs are instituted to counteract this tendency."

It may be that electricity is slowing up the migration of work from the home," Dr. Ogburn declares, "but most of the evidence points to the further transfer of functions from the home."

For the near future he expects that the family "will bear the major responsibility in developing the personality of its children."

But the task being an increasingly difficult one, "society may be expected to give more attention to this vital question, particularly because of a diminishing supply of children."

The report finds that in spite of the growing divorce rate, the married population 15 years old and older increased from 55.3 per cent in 1920 to 60.5 per cent in 1930, though the rate of increase in 1930 and 1931 was less, "as is usually the case during a business depression."

By sections, the divorce rates per 10,000 married persons in 1930 were: New England States, 24; Middle Atlantic States, 14; South Atlantic states, 24; Pacific coast states, 60; adjoining mountain states, 70; central states, rates intermediate between those of the coastal regions.

A slight decrease during 1929-1930 in the proportion of married people between the ages of 15 and 24 "suggests that the movement toward earlier marriage which has been going on at least since 1890 may have stopped and a reverse trend set in."

The report finds that the size of the family probably will continue to decrease, though the decline has been "neither great nor rapid," a sample study showing that the average size of the unbroken family living in 1930 was 3.67 in 1920 and 3.57 in 1930, a decline of 2.7 per cent.

Farm Relief Program Progresses; Roosevelt Would Restrict Domestic Allotment Bill To Wheat, Cotton

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senator Smith of South Carolina said Tuesday President-elect Roosevelt told him when they conferred in New York Monday that he wanted new domestic allotment farm relief bill confined to wheat and cotton. Smith added that Roosevelt told him he would approve any modification of the plan to cover cotton "that the people might agree upon."

Special Election To Submit Issue Of State-Wide Prohibition Object Of Organization Formed By Antis

AUSTIN—Temperance and anti prohibition leaders have reached a tentative agreement to submit statewide prohibition to a vote of the people in a special election this summer in such a way that constitutional guarantees against the return, establishment and operation of the saloons will be provided, and a legal option will be restored and mild prohibition legalized. The submission resolution will be sponsored in the House by Representatives John M. Mathis of Houston and Preston L. Anderson of San Antonio. It will be introduced in the senate by Senators W. E. Hogens of Gonzales and Archie Farr of Benaud. The resolution is expected to have the support of many of the senate and house members whose districts are all or partly in the Congressional District represented by El Paso, who voted for both the Garner resolution submitting outright repeal of the Eighteenth amendment and the Collier Beer Bill, without arousing the antagonism of his constituency.

Disarmament And Bigger Navies

One of the perverse signs of the times is the fact that the 1932 edition of "Jane's Fighting Ships"...

"Jane's Fighting Ships" is a compendium of the world's navies. It contains a picture and complete description of just about every warship in existence...

This, perhaps, convicts a lot of diplomats of giving mere lip-service to a cause in which they do not really believe...

The world wants peace very badly; it is still groggy from the effects of the last war...

But because the realities of world politics look more ominous than they have in years, and because no one is quite ready to believe that there exist in the world enough intelligence and good will...

Those of us who listen uneasily to all of the rumors of wars can only be comforted by the fact that these expert editors give high praise to the new American 10,000 ton "treaty" cruisers...

Earlier editions had criticized these ships; they were too lightly armored, they rolled excessively, they vibrated too much...

But what a commentary the whole thing is on the half-hearted way in which we have pushed all of our fine disarmament projects!

Sport Slants BY ALAN GOULD

Far be it from an amateur observer to say if rasalin's a racket or a good, clean sport, but it certainly has qualities to keep its participants young.

Take Ed (Strangler) Lewis. On second thought, perhaps you had better not take him without some preliminary preparation.

Recently the old Strangler was said to be all washed up, finished, ready for the wrestling discard. It was a matter of record that he was 41 years old and had been moving with more or less speed across assorted mats in every section of the United States for 21 years.

Now the famous Kentuckian seems to boast the physical condition of a young fellow in his early 30's, trying to get along and in a fair way to do just that.

He is just as good as the physical. It was not so long ago that some of the experts on rasalin ruled that the giant Lewis was null and void in a mat way, bad legs, bad eyes and no hope of regaining his former condition.

He tells the story: "I began to believe it myself," he said, "or at least I wondered if these fellows were right and that after 21 years I was washed up. I went to New York to find out. Went to Gus Wilson's camp, worked five hours a day, chopped wood, looked to the road, wrestled, did everything and soon I was in shape. I then tried the wrestling end, taking on seven of the best wrestlers in the world, in a series of testing matches and in two hours and 20 minutes disposed of all of them."

AMAZED AT OWN STRENGTH "Then I knew the boys were wrong, that I was not finished by a long shot and I knew then just as certain as shooting that Ray Steele would have no chance against me. The night I met him, I was perfect. Never felt better, either physically or mentally, and I was amazed at my own strength."

"No, 41 years is not old in the wrestling game. I am good for many years yet."

"London? He's the acrobatic champion. I'll concede him that distinction, but I'm the wrestling champion. There's a difference."

Regardless of the championship, he holds or does not hold, Lewis has put on a remarkable physical comeback. He is in shape.

McGUGIN STANDS FIRM Dan McGugin has shown that he is a brave man as well as a great football coach by assuming the presidency of the football coaches' association. Five previous incumbents have lost their job while in office.

However, the Tennessee lawyer is safe enough at Vanderbilt. He is an institution at the Nashville university and as long as he cares to hold the job he will be the head coach of the Commodores. He is one of several coaches in the South who stand like a rock and all the onslaughts of an infuriated alumni cannot force them out.

It's rather refreshing in these days of victory mad football supporters to see the old guard, dying perhaps but never surrendering, on the football battlefields.

Earl Sande who came out of the west to catch the fancy of the racing public, is preparing to stage another comeback—his third in the last five years.

Apparently the quiet little westerner, America's premier jockey from 1918 to 1928, is still haunted said Court, and each bid shall be accompanied by a certified check of Five Hundred Dollars payable to the order of the undersigned, as a guarantee of good faith on the part of such bidder.

The Court reserves the right to reject any and all bids received. Mail or deliver all such bids to the undersigned at Gall, Texas, not later than the date and hour above written.

Witness my hand and official seal this 6th day of January, A. D. 1933.

Ladies Hats 25c Won On Own Horse He bought a half-dozen horses and for a few months was content to get them in condition for the races. Then he was seized with an obsession to ride again and in the spring of 1929 he mounted Hermitage and rode his own horse to victory—the first on record at Havre De Grace where an owner, trainer and jockey were the same. Another year on the ground and again the racing public was saying that Sande would never ride again. Even Earl agreed with them. A year later, 1930, Earl was talking a different story. He wanted to ride and wanted a good horse. The answer was found in William Woodward's Gallant Fox. Aboard the big red horse, the Earl thrilled to the cheer of the multitudes as he booted the famous colt to the three-year old championship, winning more than $300,000 and losing only one race.

respect than the girls of his own set. But if that coloring was artificial Dick decided that it was more skillfully applied than most.

CHAPTER IV

Her face returned, her hair flapping, her feet tapping. Her hair doped on a roof, Sheila slid into the dance routine. She twirled and fluttered. She skimmed over the floor on which a few moments before Bill Brady had lumbered. But it was the same routine. It was the same music. Timmy's nodding head sped approval as he listened for the "click-click" of her feet.

He wondered who she might be and knew just enough not to ask anyone else around the place. If he was to further his interest in this girl he must let it appear casual. But he couldn't keep his very much overworked heart, loaded as it was with only a 22-year-old heart in the breast of a good-looking, wealthy, college-bred man can be, took a surprising routine of action. Dick's heart was in a positive tumult as he made his way back to Trevor Lane's side.

"That's the stuff, baby. You're a comer!" "I told you she could dance, Bill!" This from Timmy, working at the keys, his face beaming.

He wondered who she might be and knew just enough not to ask anyone else around the place. If he was to further his interest in this girl he must let it appear casual. But he couldn't keep his very much overworked heart, loaded as it was with only a 22-year-old heart in the breast of a good-looking, wealthy, college-bred man can be, took a surprising routine of action. Dick's heart was in a positive tumult as he made his way back to Trevor Lane's side.

"Once again, now baby. That last shuffle!" "The melody began to flow like liquid from the keys and in spite of agonized muscles, crying out with every step, Sheila, with rapid face, once more went into the dance. "Tum-tum, la ta ta-ta!" called Brady. "That's the stuff, kid."

Bill glowed at the tribute. "Mr. Lane, here," he said, indicating the gentleman, "is looking for talent." Sheila's eyes widened expectantly. "For a party he's giving this evening."

"You're getting along fine!" Timmy murmured to the girl without turning toward her. "Think so, Timmy?" "Sure. Not a lost beat, not an extra sound. It's a little hard, following you, Sheila, just as if you were thistledown. You'll be a star some day."

Bill leaned forward confidentially though his lowered eyes reached and was meant to reach every corner in the room. "Shayne puts over a song number in great style." Dick Stanley's pleading eyes met the girl's for an instant as she wavered.

"I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!"

Without preamble Joe opened the door. This time there was no halting or stalling or emission of the mingling of the great Brady, and welcome indeed! Joe's presence in a practice room always meant something. Sheila continued with the difficult routine. She was dancing beautifully.

"I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!"

Sheila didn't think the other man was a producer either. Had he been filling the cast of a show he would have watched her for a few minutes and then disappeared. Instead he was talking to Joe and beckoning to Bill Brady.

her. She must look a sight now, her hair every which way, her face beaming. With a crumpled little handkerchief Sheila attempted to repair the ravages of the last two hours. What a moment to come face to face with any young man!

as he disappeared in the direction of the others. Didn't he know she had burned her bridge? That she couldn't telephone him now? He thought he could find her in the telephone book, perhaps. As if she could afford her own apartment in these days!

CHAPTER VI

The ride to Jackson Heights in the subway was tiresome. Sheila had practiced all day, hardly stopping for lunch, her muscles becoming more and more fatigued.

"Shayne," repeated Joe meditatively, acknowledged the girl's howl with a curt nod. "Shayne. You're Johnny Desmond's daughter, aren't you? How come you changed your name?" "I—I wanted to make good on my own, Mr. Paris." Her voice was trembling. "I didn't want managers to hire me or agents to book me on my parents' account. You see, if I get anywhere I want it to be because I am a dancer, not because my mother and father were."

Lottie was "dressed like a Watteau shepherdess gone Siemfield," as she expressed it, sitting in a rocking chair working at some embroidery and chatting affably with the feminine member of a kid act who had not, Lottie later confided (rather modestly), been a kid for almost 20 years.

"I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!"

Presently the girl's husband appeared, wearing a great Siemfield, in borrow some cold cream. He too was past the age when he need fear the Gerry Society.

"I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!"

Sheila hoped the other dancers would like her and not regard her with that suspicious jealousy so frequently shown other members of their own troupe.

"I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!"

Sheila was glad to see someone she knew—even an old sweethearts like Phil Short. A sweetheart who, as a matter of fact, had dropped her suddenly without warning.

"I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!"

all of Billy, was the way Phil put it. "The dinner was excellent, though hurried. Sheila ordered lightly, as she did also, for both had the performance to think of. The act would go on in three-quarters of an hour."

baton flicking in approval. She darted toward him, whisked away coquettishly as Bill had taught her. The saxophone dropped a few bars unaided and, shielded by Roscoe's bulk, Phil winked at her. Roscoe nodded smiling. It was all so easy, of course, but Sheila knew he was pleased. Sheila too was pleased. This was like old times again. Daring, shuffling—suddenly the dance was ended.

CHAPTER VIII

"You aren't angry with me for coming, are you?" Dick asked pleadingly. "Shayne's voice was level. 'Angry? No. But you shouldn't have done it.' Now that she knew he cared enough to want to see her again she could seem casual. Her heart exulted but no one, seeing her, would have guessed that."

"I thought you were giving a party tonight," she went on. "Hamlet with Hamlet left out! Why aren't you at home entertaining your guests?" "Hamlet with Hamlet left out! That was an odd remark for a chorus girl to make. This little dancer in a cheap suit and tiny hat that had obviously seen wear continued to surprise him."

"I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!" "I know you are!"

very short time she had changed amazingly. A smart, more sophisticated brush to her hair. Pendulous earrings, swaying as she moved. Brighter lips. Her figure exquisite in an inexpensive evening gown that had earned the adjective "smooth" when displayed by other roomers at Ma Lowell's. How would that dress compare with the gowns worn by Stanley's dubitative friends? Sheila vaguely hoped the lights at the penthouse would be softly flattering.

CHAPTER IX

"I suppose you are one of our best and hardest working little play boys," she heaved, as with a deft motion Dick Stanley headed the car across the park toward Trevor Lane's apartment. What a sight! He seemed surprised. "It hardly!" "I'm a hard worker," he said. "I do hard work which for the moment, at least, wins no acclaim or results."

'Research Racket', With Numerous Duplications Cost Millions Each Year, United Press Survey Shows

By RAYMOND CLAPPER
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP)—Critics of what is sometimes called the "research racket" center much of their fire on the duplications and countless investigations in the department of agriculture which run into millions of dollars a year.

More listing of all items would be impossible in limited space. Even items on which more than $100,000 was spent last year are not all listed. In an organization spending $4,000,000 (B) a year a $100,000 item is small change though it would take a man working at $50 a week almost 40 years to earn that much. It is more than the average man earns in a whole lifetime.

- Here is a skeleton outline of expenses last year within just one government department, revealing the number of investigations and the duplication of work that goes on among several bureaus all operating under the Secretary of Agriculture, and supposedly coordinated into one unified working unit of the executive branch.
- These particular figures show to what an extent federal funds are expended on investigating insects. The insects are investigated by first one branch of the agriculture department and then another.
- First, important expenditures in the entomology bureau:
- Fruit and shade tree insects $700,000.
- Truck and garden crop insects $375,000.
- Forest insects $199,000.
- Cereal and forage insects $483,000.
- Cotton insects $208,000.
- Insects affecting man and animals $149,000.
- Household and stored products insects $116,000.
- Taxonomy and interrelations of insects $208,000.
- Meantime the bureau of plant industry also is busy, spending money as follows:
- Barkberry eradication $360,000.
- Bilister rust control $471,000.
- Cereal crops and diseases $548,000.
- Dry land agriculture $338,000.
- Forage crops and diseases $257,000.
- Foreign plant introduction $209,000.
- Forest pathology $209,000.
- Fruit and vegetable crop diseases $1,507,000.
- Rubber, fiber and other tropical plants $128,000.
- Sugar plant investigations $372,000.
- Western irrigation culture $173,000.
- Expenditures of less than $100,000 each were made for these items:
- Botany, citrus canker eradication, drug and related plants, gardens and grounds, genetics and biophysics, mycology and disease survey, nematology, phony peach eradication, plant nutrition investigations, seed investigations, tobacco investigations and root rot investigations.
- And the quarantine bureau also is on the job with the following expenditures:
- Foreign plant quarantines $669,000.
- Pink boll worm control $347,000.
- Gypsy and brown tail moth control $908,000.
- European corn borer control $884,000.
- Japanese beetle control $411,000.
- Mexican fruit worm control $112,000.
- Expenditures of less than $100,000 each were made for: Transit inspection, parlataria date scale, thurberia weevil control, white pine blister rust control, phony peach disease control, certification of exports and mediterranean fruit fly.

TO DAY and TOMORROW On Certain Illusions Beyond the Sea

From various European sources there are reports which indicate a serious misunderstanding of the probable course of American policy during the next six months.

It is not likely to be the American view. For while the policy of the Roosevelt Administration has not yet been disclosed, and perhaps has not yet even been formulated, it is reasonably safe to assume that the logic of American interests will make the United States quite unwilling to close an arrangement about war debts until there is an understanding as to what Great Britain proposes to do about her own currency and all the currencies of the world which depend upon it.

The chief impediment offered to the American people for agreeing to a final settlement of the war debts is that such a settlement will make for recovery. This is the argument advanced in the British note last month. It is a persuasive argument. But the British people will be seriously misled if they assume that the American people will be satisfied with vague assurances as to the good effects of a lenient settlement.

Bible Elevates Brain Over Brawn At U. Of Nebraska

LINCOLN, Neb. (UP)—Dana Xenophon Bible, bald, soft-spoken coach of the Cornhuskers of Nebraska University, has won his fight to elevate "brains" above "brawn" on the Nebraska football field.

Four years ago, Bible, already nationally recognized for his successful coaching of Texas A. & M. in the Southwest Conference, received the call to assume the duties of head coach at Nebraska.

Bible placed emphasis on deceptive play at the outset. The results, his men will tell you. "D. X. judges his men entirely on a basis of what they do on the field."
