Namath Out, Broken Thumb Has Sunds Like A Song Title, But let OB Sidelined For 6-Weeks McArthur Lane Sounds Like A Song Title, But He's Something Else To The St. Louis Squad

NEW YORK (UPI)-Nobody could blame the New York Jets for throwing in the towel on rest of the 1970 pro football season, but they don't discourage easily.

Their chances for a successful campaign went from rotten to worse last Sunday when quarterback Joe Namath broke his right wrist in a 29-22 loss to the Baltimore Colts, and now the rest of the season is being entrusted to reserve quarterback Al Woodall, who was a bust in the pre-season games.

The Jets have lost four of their first five games with Namath at the controls, and it isn't reasonable to expect that Woodall, or Bob Davis, another reserve, can lead them out of the wilderness. The toughest part of their schedule is yet to come and even the most optimistic of rooters can't envision much better than a 3-11 or 4-10 campaign.

In addition to Namath, the Jets have lost fullback Matt Snell for the season and have had regulars Gerry Philbin, Don Maynard, Roger Finnie, George Sauer, Randy Rasmussen and Steve Thompson sidelined for at least one game.

Yet, coach Weeb Ewbank maintains the morale of the club is still good.

Seaman will try to get his cholorophyll-tinted Shockers oriented to practically all new positions, a new offense, a beefed up-crash training program and the Seaman philosophy of playing football. with the Arkansas game just days away, the Shockers won't be at full command of their offense or defense but should field a team that is respectable.
