

Shadow on presidency

Reagan to be watched for cancer recurrence

Dr. Steven Rosenberg gives report

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — With four stark words — "the president has cancer" — the government's top cancer surgeon cast a shadow of uncertainty over Ronald Reagan and his presidency. Although doctors say a recurrence is unlikely, the once extraordinarily healthy president will be watched closely for any new sign of malignancy.

The finding Monday that the tumor taken from Reagan's colon 48 hours earlier was malignant and had spread to the wall of his bowel won't change the plan to discharge the president from Bethesda Naval Hospital this weekend or early next week, his doctors said.

This morning's White House medical update said the president slept well during the night and was examined by physicians at 8 a.m. EDT. It described him as being in excellent spirits and said, "His condition is excellent; his vital signs — temperature, pulse, blood pressure, respiration — are within normal ranges."

The president spent part of the morning reading newspapers and watching television.

Reagan walked around his suite Monday and planned to do so again today. "The president experienced some abdominal discomfort when moving, but has not required any pain medication," the statement said.

Navy Capt. Dale Oller, Reagan's chief surgeon, said, "The president continues his superlative recovery" and was up walking around his room and sitting in a chair reading Monday afternoon after being informed of the test results.

Related stories, Pg. two

Reagan already has returned to doing some work. Spokesman Larry Speakes said the president signed an executive order Monday creating a commission to review defense contracting practices and read his daily update on national security developments.

Vice President George Bush, meanwhile, canceled trips to Missouri and Ohio to help lobby for Reagan's tax plan at meetings the president had planned to attend.

Reagan may, as one of his doctors predicted, be horseback riding on his California ranch a month from now.

But for the rest of his life, the 74-year-old Reagan will be scanned, tested and probed for signs that the cancer has come back. Next to lung cancer, colon cancer is the second most deadly form of the disease.

"There is greater than a 50 percent chance that the president now has no cancer whatsoever — that there are no cancer cells in his body — and he is completely cured," said Dr. Steven Rosenberg, the chief of surgery at the National Cancer Institute and, as such, the government's No. 1 cancer surgeon.

"However, there is a chance that the tumor may recur at some time in the future," Rosenberg said.

"The majority of patients in exactly the president's situation would certainly survive five years and beyond," said Rosenberg.

Oller said the president told him, "Well, I'm glad that that's all out" after the doctors informed Reagan the tumor had been malignant but they thought they had removed all the cancerous tissue.

Cancer specialists don't regard patients diagnosed with the disease as cured until they have survived five years without a recurrence, but Rosenberg said that in the president's case, "We have no evidence that this cancer has spread, and I think the chances are good that no spread will take place."

The most likely place for a recurrence would be in the liver, where it is extremely dangerous.

"I would recommend that the president undergo a colonoscopy in six months and every year thereafter," Rosenberg said. It was Reagan's first colonoscopy, a visual examination of the inside of the large intestine, that revealed the presence of the tumor on Friday.

"I would recommend that he have periodic blood tests (every two months) to check the status of the internal organs as well as certain markers of a colon malignancy, which can now be tested for," Rosenberg added. "He needs regular X-rays of his chest, of his lungs, of his liver. That would be part of the standard follow-up of patients who have had this diagnosis made."

But because surgeons removed all the potentially cancerous tissue they could find and there is no evidence that radiation or chemotherapy is effective in treating colon cancer, "No further therapy is indicated at this time," the physician said.

Salvation Army's leaders see same needs in different cities

By CATHY SPAULDING

Pampa is a long way from the city streets of Austin or the border tropics of Harlingen. But the needs are still the same, according to the two new commanders of the Pampa Salvation Army.

Lt. Carl Hughes of Harlingen and Sam Foden of Austin took command of the local Army June 19 upon the departure of Major and Mrs. Milton Wood. Hughes is commanding officer at Pampa while Foden takes on assistant commanding duties.

"I find it very similar," said Hughes, a former photographer with The Odessa American.

"Needs are needs wherever we are," Foden added.

He said that both Harlingen and Pampa have problems with the lack of job opportunities for the unemployed. He acknowledged that there are more illegal aliens in Harlingen than there are here.

Foden said his Austin ministry saw similar needs although "Austin had more employment opportunities."

"Homeless people was also a problem there," he said, adding that although there are homeless people here, they are not as evident since it is a smaller city.

Although they've been here for nearly a month, Hughes said he wants "to get our feet on the ground first" before making any major plans.

"We had a lot to learn," he said, adding that there will be "no drastic changes" in the Salvation Army ministry.

Not that they don't have ideas. Hughes said he'd like to establish a Boys' Adventure Corps, a Salvation Army sponsored organization which is similar to the Boy Scouts. He hopes to have it set up by September. He has already taken boys and girls to the Salvation Army Camp.

"Major and Mrs. Wood had a good program," he said adding that he plans to continue many programs such as the Golden Agers monthly luncheon. "Eventually we'll start some of our programs."

"But we're going to see that the program is the best for the community," he said. "We want to be a part of the community."

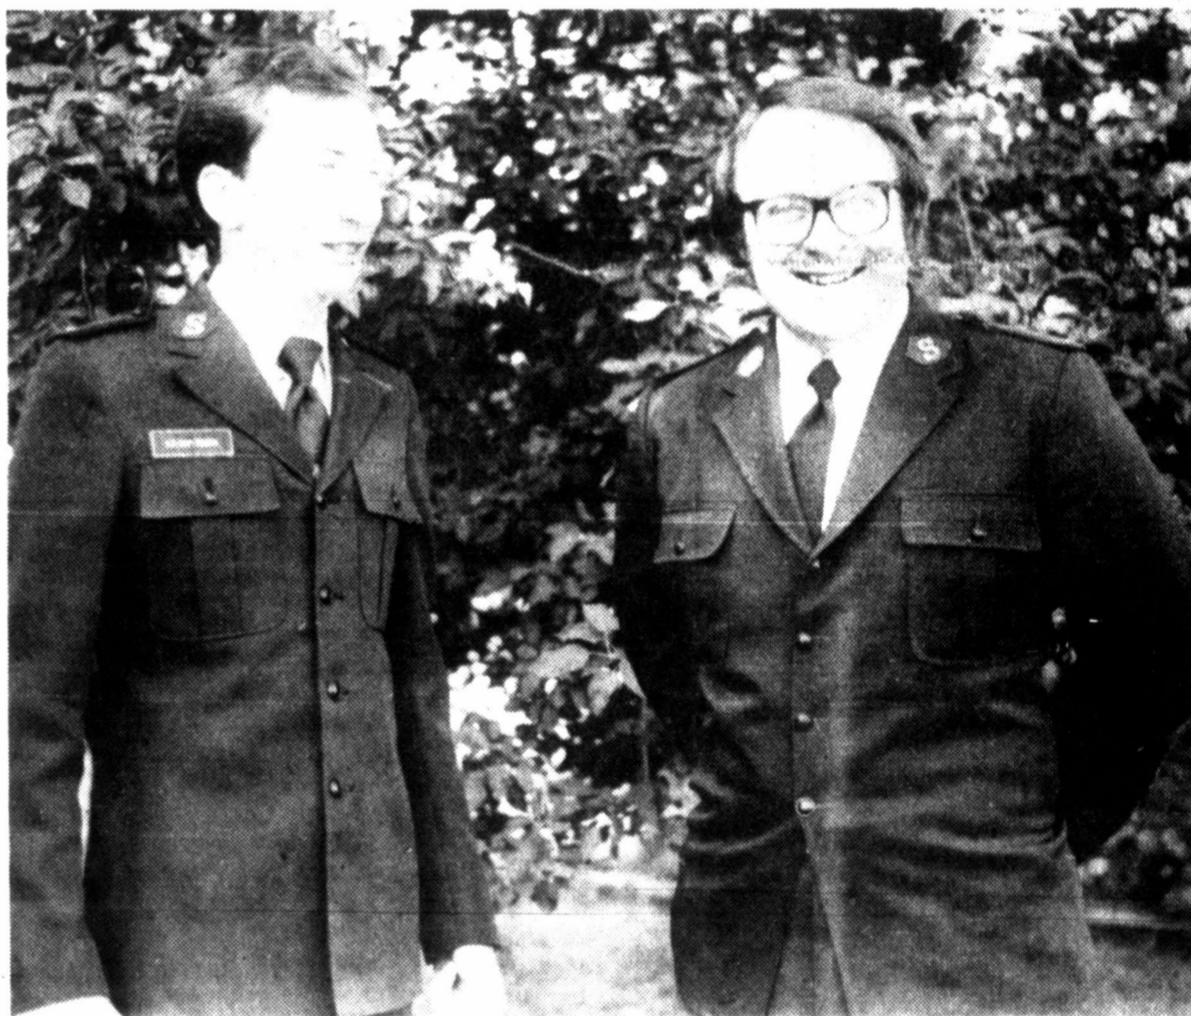

A native of Odessa, Hughes got involved with the Salvation Army when his girlfriend joined. Although the courtship dwindled, his commitment to the organization grew. After attending officer's training in Atlanta, he spent a year at the Amarillo Salvation Army office before his three year stint in Harlingen.

"I went from the Top to the Tip and now I'm back at the Top," he remarked.

Foden grew up with the Salvation Army. Both his parents were officers. Austin, where he was assistant commanding officer, was Foden's first opportunity as an officer. He held internships at Hattiesburg, Miss., and Decatur Ala.

Although still getting their feet on the ground, Hughes and Foden already are busy with Salvation Army projects. This week, they have the hallways cluttered with furniture as they repaint the offices.

And already, the officers are working on the annual Christmas drive: buying toys, getting the special Salvation Army Dolls ready, obtaining the money kettles. The officers are also planning Bible Studies.

Report shows school tax hikes most ever

AUSTIN (AP) — Local school trustees in Texas levied the largest school property tax hike in history, while state aid to schools increased by $1 billion last year, the Texas Research League reports.

The privately funded research organization said trustees in the 1,068 local school districts levied a $519 million property tax increase for a total tax bill of $4.1 billion.

The statewide average increase was 14.3 percent, the league said Monday.

School property taxes in 1984-85 averaged 62.2 cents per $100 of market value, the researchers reported.

During a special legislative session in the summer of 1984, lawmakers enacted sweeping reforms for public schools in Texas — including higher teacher salaries and tougher standards for students and teachers.

To help fund those changes and highway improvements, the Legislature also enacted the largest tax increase in state history — a three-year $4.8 billion boost, primarily in the sales tax and motor fuel taxes.

The additional $1 billion in state aid pushed the total state financial assistance to schools to $4.6 billion, the research group said.

The research league, in its annual report on education in Texas, said school budgets adopted last year called for spending of $3.103 per student for current operations.

Eighty percent of that money was spent for salaries, the league said. Statewide, payroll expense averaged $2,487 per student.

According to the report, the average salary for classroom teachers among all school districts in Texas was $20,117.

The report also said there was an average of one teacher for every 16.2 pupils statewide, although small classes at the high school level and abbreviated teaching schedules meant that many classes had more than the average number of students, the league said.

In looking ahead, the research league said that compared to the $1 billion increase in state aid last year, only $129 million more in state funds will be distributed to schools next year.

Helmet liability White Deer concern

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

WHITE DEER — Some 44 football helmets are in "excellent" condition according to football coach Windy Williams. But the company that made them has gone out of business, taking with it liability protection in case of head injury.

Williams presented the problem to trustees of the White Deer-Skellytown Independent School District Monday at their regular meeting. He requested authorization to buy 44 new helmets from a more stable firm at a cost totalling $4,089.

Williams is not the first coach to bring the issue up. Superintendent

Tom Harkey said that at the beginning of last year's football season, then-coach Paul Wilson warned that the helmet maker, Bob Kelly Co., was no longer in business, but no action was taken at the time.

"The helmets are still state-approved and in good condition. I couldn't tell you that there's anything bad with them," Williams told the board.

He added that he does not know of an insurance company that would cover liability for the helmets.

"We would be liable for issuing the helmets," he said.

"Proper headgear is a high risk," board president Cinda

Lafferty said.

Williams feels the school should scrap the old helmets to replace them with new ones.

"I'm not sure we ought to sell them," Harkey said, citing a large number of lawsuits involving faulty headgear. Trustees also ruled out keeping the helmets for junior varsity or junior high football.

Trustees asked Williams to check with other schools who have used the helmets to see what they would do with the problem. He also is to check to see if any insurance company would cover helmet liability. Because football practice begins Aug. 12, trustees agreed to have a special called meeting to discuss the helmets as soon as Williams has the information.

Trustees also allowed Williams to buy travel shirts for members of the Bucks football team. Cost of the 36 shirts would be $630.80, or $16.60 each. The shirts, to be worn at away games and on Fridays during football season, would be issued to the players and returned at the end of the season. Basketball players would get to keep theirs.

Williams reasoned that the team shirts would be a motivational factor and would boost morale.

"Don't be surprised if the band director doesn't come up for the same reason to get band shirts,"

Swindle ruled competent to stand trial

A 223rd District Court jury this morning found stabbing and arson suspect Donald Aaron Swindle competent to stand trial on the charges against him.

District Judge Don Cain tentatively set a trial date for Sept. 16.

Swindle has been charged with attempted capital murder in the Nov. 3, 1984, stabbing of a Pampa teenager. Gwendolyn Jones, 14, was stabbed 10 times with a file knife in an assault allegedly intended for her mother, Bertha Holt, authorities have said.

The assailant hid inside a bathroom and then stabbed the young woman when she entered her Varnon Drive residence. The teen survived the attack.

A military cap belonging to Swindle was found at the scene and police later arrested him in the incident. That arrest also led to Swindle's being a suspect in the stabbing of Theresa Bisset, 29, near the railroad tracks near Tyng and Russell in September.

Swindle, 22 at the time of the incidents, also was later charged with arson of six Pampa residences occurring in October.

In January Swindle, formerly of 1002½ E. Francis, was confined for treatment of mental illness in the Rusk State Hospital. After treating Swindle for seven weeks, a psychiatrist at Rusk determined Swindle was ready to stand trial on the charges.

The panel of 12 jurors today, after hearing arguments by defense attorney John Warner and Asst. District Attorney David Hamilton for the state, decided unanimously that Swindle was mentally competent to stand trial.

The finding of mental competency for trial does not exclude Swindle from claiming mental incompetency at the time of the stabbings and arsons he committed.

Experts think president's total recovery odds greater

NEW YORK (AP) — President Reagan has a better than 50 percent chance of being cured after the removal of a cancerous polyp, his doctors say. But other medical odds-makers give the president an even greater chance for complete recovery.

In a press briefing Monday, Dr. Steven Rosenberg, chief of surgery at the National Cancer Institute, said tests showed that the polyp was a "Dukes B" lesion that was "moderately well differentiated."

Given such findings, "the president's chances of being completely cured, that is, never again having any evidence of this tumor appear during his normal life span, is greater than 50 percent," Rosenberg said.

"I'm sure that there's nobody in this country that would argue with that number, more than 50 percent," said Dr. Ronald Koretz, chief of gastroenterology at Olive View Medical Center in Van Nuys, Calif., who estimated the chance at close to 70 percent.

Dr. Sidney Winawer, chief of gastroenterology at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York, said he would have estimated 60 to 80 percent, "but they have the facts and we don't."

The estimate "could very well be a bit higher, even considerably higher" than 50 percent, said Dr. Thomas Hendrix, chief of gastroenterology at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore.

While the Dukes classification gives a range of estimates for cure, a patient's place within it depends partly on the degree of cell differentiation—the degree to which the cells appear normal under a microscope. The more normal-looking, in general, the less likely the cancer is to have spread when it was in the body, Koretz said.

The classification system for the extent of a colon cancer's invasion was established by English pathologist Cuthbert E. Dukes in 1932. Medical authorities nowadays have slightly differing versions of the categories, but here's a general description:

An "A" lesion means the cancer is in the innermost layers of the colon, which is shaped like a tube. The inside lining of the colon, called the mucosa, where colon cells secrete and absorb fluids, is only about three-one-hundredths of an inch thick. A cancer that has barely invaded the surrounding muscle may also be in this category.

In a "B" lesion, like the president's, the cancer has invaded the layer where muscles cross and along the colon contract to keep the colon's contents moving. It may include invasion of the serosa, the tough, fibrous covering of the colon.

In a "C" lesion, the cancer has broken through the serosa and escaped to lymph nodes.

The cure rate falls as the extent of invasion climbs because of increasing chance for spread of the cancer.

Hendrix said that about 95 percent of cancers removed while confined to the thin inside lining remain cured for five years, while those that have gone deeper but not broken through the outer surface of the colon have about a 65 to 80 percent cure rate. Cancers that have broken free of the colon and spread to lymph nodes have only about a 20 percent to 30 percent cure rate.

Pace of government changed for summer

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Republican members of the Senate Finance Committee sit down for breakfast Wednesday, it will be George Bush, not Ronald Reagan, who will be trying to sell them the administration's tax reform plan.

And while President Reagan recuperates for the next two months from surgery, it will be White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan who will make many decisions that some would say are presidential matters.

Reagan's bout with colon cancer may have few long-term political effects, but it will certainly change the pace of government and the power of the players at least for the summer.

Any matter involving a president has political implications and Reagan's illness is no exception. There are temporary political benefits from Reagan's personal battle with cancer — the criticism is muted and tough confrontations can be delayed or avoided.

But there are some temporary drawbacks as well.

Reagan's ability to lobby hard for his latest budget deal or for his tax reform plan will be limited by his physical condition.

For example, Bush will not only stand in for Reagan at the Wednesday meeting with the Republicans on the Senate tax-writing committee, he will do the same at a session with the Democratic committee members on Thursday.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Bush "will sit in when it's appropriate."

And the vice president — any vice president — has a hard time being as persuasive as the president.

Smoke billows from Cedar Rapids plant

Plastics fire fumes evacuate 10,000 Cedar Rapids residents

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (AP) — Up to 10,000 people were evacuated after a dense cloud of choking, foul-smelling fumes from a smoldering plastics fire spread over the southern part of the city, officials said.

The fumes apparently were created when firefighters sprayed water on a burning plastic dome at an old sewage treatment plant, which is being demolished, shortly after the fire began about 2:30 p.m. Monday, authorities said.

Susan Neely, an aide to Gov.

Terry Branstad, estimated 8,000 to 10,000 people had been evacuated, and police Capt. Howard Gardner estimated between 5,000 and 10,000 people had fled their homes.

The evacuation area extended about five miles south of the fire at the old Cedar Rapids Water Pollution Control plant, said police Capt. Ron Hansen.

"Then we're talking about, I would guess, another five miles east and west in width in some areas," Hansen said.

The area evacuated included a housing complex for the elderly, a children's home and a mobile home park near Highway 30.

At least 900 people went to Red Cross shelters, but "we do estimate that we are housing only percentage of those who have been evacuated," said Gerald Claton, director of the Red Cross in Cedar Rapids.

"At the present time the winds have died, so we are not at this point evacuating additional areas," he said.

Harkey warned.

Trustees also accepted a bid of $17,699 from Mike Murphy construction, to convert a duplex in Skellytown into a two-three bedroom house for elementary school principal, Ken Cox. Trustees also considered substantially increasing the rent, but did not vote on it.

Harkey told board members that he spent $3,500 to have Murphy, a bonded contractor, to paint two high school classrooms with a special penetrant to stabilize some asbestos, an insulating substance declared toxic by the Environmental Protection Agency, that was found in the rooms. Last year, a firm from Oklahoma City charged the school $10,000 to remove asbestos from the White Deer and Skellytown schools.

The school district has a policy that the board must approve purchases of more than $500. Lafferty suggested that the board consider changing the policy so that the school can make purchases of more than $500 during the month if one or two board members are notified.

the trustees feel the employee's performance is not satisfactory, the contract may be terminated without having a hearing.

"That does not mean the board will always get by without a hearing," said Harkey, who has had mixed feelings about the idea in the past.

"It was my idea that the probationary contract would keep you from getting good contracts," he said.

Also approved was the installation of new locks on doors of the high school, vocational agriculture building, gym and fieldhouse.

Trustees hired Pampa Fine Arts patron Darlene Birkes, a former teacher, to teach high school English and journalism. She replaces Margie Waters, who is moving to Borger. Also hired were Conda Maze as vo-ag teacher, Gwen Murray as elementary English teacher and Gary Richardson as coach. Trustees also allowed kindergarten teacher Sharon Thoms to resume her duties after a leave of absence.

Inmate attorney skeptical, prison officials vow to comply

HOUSTON (AP) — The attorney for inmates in a 13-year-old civil rights lawsuit against the Texas prisons said he is skeptical that officials will comply with an agreement to end overcrowding in the nation's second-largest corrections system.

"It's not in the nature of the prison beast to make changes," William Bennett Turner said Monday after U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice agreed to the out-of-court settlement. "I am not euphoric about the settlement. This provides just the barest of minimums. We made every compromise we reasonably could make."

The settlement addressed the final civil rights issue raised in a landmark case filed in 1972 by inmate David Ruiz, a convicted robber.

Justice in 1980 used the suit to find Texas prison practices unconstitutional and ordered sweeping reforms. The overcrowding issue had been slated for trial earlier this year but attorneys for the inmates and the state reached an out-of-court settlement.

Among other things, the settlement puts a ceiling of 32,500 inmates in Texas prisons. The population now is about 38,000.

Prison officials acknowledged that compliance with the agreement would be difficult, particularly with the time stipulations on new prison construction.

"It's nice that their lawyer says they're going to comply," Turner said. But he predicted the compliance would hinge on whether the department had the staff and money, whether the changes could get through the prison system bureaucracy and whether the will existed to make the changes work.

"The oldtimers would like to get back to the good old days," Turner said. "It used to be cowboy boots and hats. Now it's more gray and bureaucratic."

State prison board Chairman Robert Gunn agreed with Turner's skepticism, but insisted officials "are going to get the job done."

"We would not have entered into an agreement we could not comply with," said Rick Gray, the state's attorney in the case.

Under the settlement, prison officials have promised that trusty camps and new prisons will take care of any increase in the number of inmates.

"We're going to give it our best effort," said Lane McCotter, who took over last month as director of the Corrections Department. "I'm sure we can do it. But it's the mammoth construction undertaking that's worrisome."

Estimates of complying with the court orders have been in the hundreds of millions of dollars.

"We don't know how many dollars it's going to take to build prisons," Gunn said. "There's a lot of indefinites involved."

"It's no longer going to be cheap," Turner said. "There's a lot of fixing up to be done."

Gunn said one way to trim prison population was to send minor offenders to halfway houses, restitution centers and probation programs.

Gray said he believed the shrinking of the population also would ease violence among inmates. More than 400 inmates were stabbed and 25 were killed last year, making 1984 the bloodiest on record in Texas prisons. So far this year, 15 inmates have been slain and more than 140 have been stabbed.

Under the settlement, two-person cells will be allowed for inmates but the space in the cells must be increased. Turner said the trimming of the prison population would create some 5,000 single cells.

Justice, from Tyler, already had given preliminary approval to the agreement reached in May but withheld final approval until he could hear comments from prison inmates.

Turner said Monday he received 184 objections signed by 1,616 inmates, with complaints addressing visiting rights, prison conditions, inadequate recreation and staff and, among other things, skepticism that the Corrections Department would comply.

Turner also said inmates incorrectly feared that this was "their last opportunity to say how awful conditions in the TDC are."

"It's not the end," he said. "The judge now has put the prison system under court order."

"Now that we don't have to spend virtually fulltime preparing for trial, we can spend time blowing whistles and, if necessary, drag them (prison officials) back before Judge Justice," Turner said.

Textbook hearings begin

AUSTIN (AP) — Several housewives say history textbooks proposed for use in Texas classrooms portray housewifery as a less than noble occupation.

Jennifer Amo of Hurst, who called herself a "domestic engineer," told the State Textbook Committee Monday that her children have questioned her about her decision to work at home.

"I have personally made a choice, not an echo, in determining my lifestyle," she said. "My children have been influenced by much of this biased textbook material. They've asked me why I didn't work. It's demeaning."

The committee, which will recommend textbooks to the State Board of Education, opened three days of hearings Mondays with public comments about history books. Mrs. Amo and other women complained that textbook publishers have gone too far to satisfy feminists.

Ada Ferguson, an Austin PTA official, said young girls should be taught not to feel "put down, unlightened or unfulfilled" if they decide to become housewives. She also complained some of the books do not mention Phyllis Schlafly, a leader of the anti-Equal Rights Amendment movement.

Mrs. Amo agreed, saying, "It is impossible to present an accurate view of the women's movement or the ERA without even mentioning Phyllis Schlafly of her successful campaign against ratification of the ERA."

"Irrespective of biased opinion against the non-feminist philosophy, it is history and it cannot be censored," she said.

Textbook critic Mel Gabler of Longview offered brief remarks and a lengthy printed analysis of the history texts. He said many of the books do not meet state law.

"Ignores or understates the challenge of Soviet imperialism in Vietnam and Grenada," said a typical Gabler comment about one book.

People for the American Way, an anti-censorship organization, praised the proposed texts as a "significant improvement" over books used in past years.

"Fundamentalist critics have uniformly attacked all the books being considered on a series of issues ranging from the U.S. role in Vietnam to the importance of slavery in the Civil War. In effect, they claim that authors, editors and all publishers have conspired to misrepresent these topics. Is this really credible?" said Michael Hudson, the group's Texas coordinator.

Eleanor Hutcheson of Fort Worth complained about little pictures of George Washington.

Problems of sexist terms

A spokesperson for Coronado Hospital once told me . . . there, I said it again.

In my zeal to avoid using sexist terms, I ended up using one in its place. I called someone, who happens to be a woman, a "spokesperson." If that someone had been a man, habit would have prompted me to call him a "spokesman."

Those irritating "sexist" terms tend to crop up all over the place: chairman, spokesman, fireman, secret agent man. But even beyond these obvious one-sex references, I have to deal with such sentences as: "If a thief is given the opportunity, he will burglarize a house" or "A nurse must always be on her best behaviour." Sexism abounds, even when we're not planning it.

Inserting "person" in place of "man" in an effort to avoid sexism often makes the mismatched word stick out like a drag queen at a men's prayer breakfast.

In the past, newspapers have referred to the people who chair civic clubs as "chairman" whether it was the Noon Lions Club or the Women of the Moose. And the people who chaired such organizations seldom objected, if they even ever bothered to notice.

Another bugaboo is "fireman." I've never been able to merit using "fire fighter" as a cure-all replacement for the sexist term. A fire fighter wakes up at midnight and spends hours battling a fierce blaze pouring out of a sky scraper. It would seem an overstatement to give the same term to someone who puts out a small dumpster fire or answers a false smoke scare.

In newspapers, using "sexist" terms is, at worst, an embarrassment. But McLean school officials have discovered that even using them in the most commonly used capacity could get them into trouble. According to a recent Texas Education Agency audit, the school committed the grievous sin of using the "he" pronoun in its student and teacher handbooks. Nurses were "she's". References to gender, however insignificant, are to be eliminated from school handbooks and job descriptions.

That, in itself is no major worry. In most cases, all the schools have to do is make everything plural: "Nurses are to be on their best behaviour." I find myself using plurals often to cover sexist terms.

Another, more stuffy, alternative would be to use the asexual term, one: "One should be mindful of good manners." Ick.

The Bible is the latest battle ground to eliminate sexism. Instead of saying "man does not live on bread alone," say "people do not live on bread alone." Amen! Instead of saying Jesus died so that man may know salvation, say Jesus died so that all may know salvation. Hallelujah! Instead of saying "God gave His Son," say "God gave the only child." Huh?

I wonder if other languages have such a battle with sexism. Latin languages such as French and Spanish use gender references for their nouns: le crayon, la table, el toro. I wonder if feminists in France and Spain are battling with journalists, educators and Bible scholars there to eliminate such sexist references to gender from their language. It sure would make it easier for Texas high school students to learn a foreign language without having to wonder if a swivel rocker takes a male or female modifier.

Instead of getting picky about sexism in our language, why not get picky about sexism in our society. Despite the "advances" from Women's Liberation, it still exists. And the best way to cure it is to have employers and businesses — not the Federal government or the Texas Education Agency — examine their policies to guard against unequal hiring practices, pay inequity and the "buddy" system for promotions.

If someone called me chairman of something, I don't think that would demean me as a woman.

Woman. Uh, shouldn't that be woperson.

Houston city ordinance ruled unconstitutional

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston police officers will no longer be able to arrest people who "interrupt" them while on duty after a federal appeals court ruled a 27-year-old city ordinance unconstitutional.

A three-judge panel of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals struck down the city law which "permits policemen to arrest people for merely speaking to them."

The appeals decision, released Monday, overturned a February 1984 ruling by U.S. District Judge James DeAnda who found the ordinance to be constitutional. DeAnda's finding came after Houston gay activist Raymond Wayne Hill challenged the law in a federal court trial.

"I won, I won, hallelujah, hallelujah," Hill told the Houston Chronicle.

Hill, 44, a Houston legal assistant and board member of the Gay Political Caucus, had sought $50,000 in damages from the city for four arrests made under the ordinance. The appeals court remanded the question of damages and fees for Hill's attorney back to DeAnda.

Hill said he shouted to two policemen grabbing a man trying to clear traffic at a congested Houston area.

Davis-Bacon Act changes not likely

The Davis-Bacon Act of 1931 was enacted to protect local labor workers from unfair wage gouging during the Depression. But over the years, the laws has become featherbedding for big labor and an unfair expense to taxpayers. Building costs under Davis-Bacon are increased because of a union stranglehold on wage contracts.

During consideration of the 1986 Defense Authorization bill, the Senate defeated, 49-49, an amendment introduced by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., that would have stripped anti-Davis-Bacon language from the final bill.

The Senate's vote was historic because it marks the first time in 53 years a move to modify the act has survived a floor vote. The bill stood with language introduced by Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, that would remove wage protectionism on military construction jobs.

The House-Senate committee is currently working on a compromise defense bill. Democrats will lobby hard to remove Gramm's language from the final version of the defense bill, and will likely succeed.

The Labor Department and the Reagan administration have rewritten regulations of Davis-Bacon to allow for the unrestricted use of semi-skilled helpers, a policy not provided in the past. Although they are fighting big labor in the courts, the Reagan administration should prevail.

The Davis-Bacon Act is a wasteful and unjustified piece of legislation that has outlived its usefulness, if it ever had any. It deserves to be repealed outright, but isn't likely to even be amended. Big labor still has the clout to kill overdue reform in the House of Representatives and will probably be successful in knocking out the reforms approved by the Senate.

Has NEA seen the light?

Education Secretary William Bennett said last week it was time for the National Education Association (NEA) to "get into education in a serious way and out of politics."

Lo and behold, the NEA at its annual convention acted as though it just might - might, I say - be ready to take up the secretary on his felicitous suggestion.

I write these lines in some amazement. Over the past two decades I have watched NEA with attention and interest. Rarely has a staid old institution gone wacko so fast. Could sanity really be returning?

Founded in the 19th century to advance professionalism among schoolteachers, NEA by the 1960s had sickened of its respectable image. It pulled off its brogans, hurled its granny glasses to the floor, and decked itself in love beads. It adopted every liberal social-political-economic case known to man, and then some.

NEA came out against nuclear arms and the Nicaraguan Contras. It backed gay rights and abortion. In 1976 the NEA started endorsing and working for presidential candidates: always Democratic candidates. It dutifully crash-dived with Walter Mondale last November.

Education? Why, yes, come to think of it, the NEA did have some thoughts on education: such as that the federal government should fund and control it, and that all teachers should get whopping raises regardless of their merits and should strike whenever they felt like it.

To say the NEA did these things is not entirely fair. Its leadership did them. Individual teachers, slaving in the educational trenches, gritted their teeth and carried on.

Scores of thousands of teachers dropped out of NEA altogether, forming rival organizations.

The more moderate American Federation of Teachers (AFT) got increasingly favorable press notice of its willingness to listen to proposals for toughening up the curriculum and paying teachers by merit.

A recent poll by the Washington-based National Council for Better Education showed the NEA badly out of touch with its membership.

The teachers surveyed were for the Equal Rights Amendment and legalized teacher strikes all right, but they were against gay rights, forced busing, and federal funding for abortions, NEA positions all. A majority favored prayer in public schools and teaching the biblical account of Creation. Turned out 44 percent of them had even voted for Reagan, against 43 percent for Mondale.

NEA President Mary Hatwood Futrell dismissed the poll with contempt but at the convention gave signs of taking it seriously. She said: "Do we believe we should adhere to policies established by our members? Yes, we do. Are we willing to make changes? Yes, we are."

Whereupon she threw her support behind the testing of new teachers, an idea formerly anathema to NEA though embraced by the AFT President Albert Shanker. The NEA convention subsequently went along with the president. It went further: It endorsed "dismissal proceedings with guaranteed due process" for putatively incompetent teachers. This would not have happened in the old days.

The NEA went further still: It bought $15,000 worth of tickets to a Republican fundraiser!

As I contemplate the "new" NEA, various adages come to mind. For instance, "One swallow does not a season make"; and "Beware of Greeks bearing gifts." It is by no means clear that NEA wants to wipe clean the blackboard on which it has been scrawling for twenty years.

The NEA is unlikely ever to become an organization of shouting, whooping Reaganites, ready to ban abortion, and ship the Contras a few more millions. On the other hand, so what? It might suffice if the NEA merely became an organization one could sit down and talk to, calmly and reasonably, about educational improvement, the way one can talk to Shanker's AFT.

Not for a long, long time has one been able to hold such a conversation with the left-wing ideologues running NEA.

If that's changing now - if it's about to change - then I say, hooray for Mary Hatwood Futrell.

The curse of baldness

I have several friends who are bald or who are balding, and they are all quiet excited about the discovery of a blood pressure medication that actually grows hair as a side effect.

The medication is called Minoxidil, and when applied to the scalp or to any other portion of the body in solution, up sprouts new hair.

Many men consider being bald a nightmare. "It's awful," said one of my friends. "I started balding when I was 25. Now I'm down to eight hairs and four of them are loose."

I once thought I would go bald. As a young reporter I wrote a story about a fortune teller who was operating in the city without having paid her business license fee.

The story cost the fortune teller a thousand big ones. She called me at the newspaper office and promptly put a curse on me.

"May angry women take all your money," she said, "and may all your hair fall out."

She was one for two. I still have my hair.

I consider myself very lucky that at 38 I still show no signs of balding. My barber once assured me I would never go bald as long as I didn't get my head caught in a weedeater.

As I researched this piece, I found there are now several ways men can defeat baldness besides the Minoxidil route.

There is the toupee, of course, which works just fine as long as you don't mind appearing as if you are walking around with a large cat on your head.

Also, a man can go the transplant route.

"I've had three transplants already," said another of my balding friends, who has been quite conscious of his appearance since he started losing his hair.

"A couple of more," he went on, "and I might even consider being seen in public again."

Another balding friend underwent what is called scalp reduction.

"What they do," he explained, "is take out a chunk of your scalp and then pull what's left together. It makes the scalp smaller and therefore makes what hair I have left seem fuller."

"Isn't that a rather painful experience?" I asked.

"No," he said, "but both my ears are now just about on top of my head, which makes it difficult to hear at times."

I don't know what I would do if I suddenly began to go bald. I don't know if growing hair again would be worth all the trouble of having blood pressure medicine rubbed on my head or having transplants or having my scalp reduced.

Besides, there is a story I know about a baldheaded man who was quite ugly. He met a beautiful woman, but he was so ugly she refused to date him.

So the man had a hair transplant, had plastic surgery on his face, lost 50 pounds and bought a new suit of clothes. The woman, at long last, agreed to go out with his overhauled, handsome figure.

As he and his beautiful companion walked out her front door on the way to their first date, the man was struck down by lightning.

In his dying breath, he looked heavenward and asked, "God, why did you do this to me now that my dreams are coming true?"

And God said, "Sorry, Sam, I didn't recognize you."

Just food for thought, my balding friends, that's all.

Henry Kaufman, where are you now?

By William A. Rusher

In the latter half of 1982, the recession was at its worst and liberals fondly imagined that the voters were getting ready to jettison Ronald Reagan in 1984. At this critical juncture a Wall Street (Saloman Bros.) economist named Henry Kaufman became nationally famous when he predicted that interest rates on federal funds (which had fallen from 14 to 9 percent in the latter half of the year) were about to soar again. His forecast was taken so seriously by a nervous stock market that it briefly drove stock prices sharply down.

For one man's opinion to have that sort of effect betokened real power, any way you sliced it. That the opinion was a gloomy one, and foretold further trouble for Mr. Reagan, made Kaufman the instant darling of the media. For the better part of a year, therefore, Kaufman's owlish visage was a staple on the nation's television screens, darkly predicting that the huge federal deficits that were being rolled up would soon cause the government to pre-empt whatever credit was available to cover its debts, thereby driving up interest rates and crippling the nation's economic recovery.

Bryant Gumbel and the other anchor men who sat at Kaufman's feet in those days never bothered to tell us anything about Kaufman's political views, if any. He was simply brought on as a wise man, beyond fear of reproach, and encouraged to do his thing. Presumably, however, anyone who believed him would have little faith in Reaganomics.

Unfortunately, Kaufman had overlooked one important fact. European investors, watching Mr. Reagan bring the U.S. economy back to life, were seized with a powerful itch to join in the anticipated prosperity. Hundreds of billions of dollars flowed out of Europe's lagging economies into the American economic arena looking for investments, and interest rates, instead of rising, held steady. Some even fell further.

Kaufman stuck to his guns, however. On May 4, 1984, he told the Texas Bankers Association that interest rates were due to rise "spectacularly higher."

On the contrary, after a brief upswing, the aforesaid rate for federal funds, for example, was at 8.4 percent by the end of the year.

Early in 1985 Kaufman tried again, warning on Jan. 28 that rates will be two percentage points higher by the end of the year. His company's financial forecast was even more specific, asserting that the rate for federal funds "could rise toward the 10.5 to 11 percent areas before the end of the third quarter." Just at the moment, however, with the third quarter well under way, they are about 7.5 to 8 percent.

Of course, if J.P. Morgan was right about what he told the brash youngster the market would do ("Fluctuate, my boy, fluctuate"), sooner or later interest rates will go up, and Kaufman can claim vindication at last. But recently he's been doing better for the Democratic National Committee than he's been doing for the customers of Saloman Brothers, and I really think Tip and the boys owe him a murmured expression of their heartfelt thanks.

READERS WHO WERE KIND ENOUGH to express sympathy over my account of the suitcase I lost on a flight from Milan to Venice on June 7 may be interested to know that Allitalia delivered it, intact, to my New York apartment on July 3.

Belgium's prime minister steps down

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The coalition government of Prime Minister Wilfried Martens splintered by a dispute over its handling of soccer riot last May, resigned today, the Royal Palace said.

The center-right government's future remained unclear, however, because King Baudouin did not immediately accept the resignation.

The palace issued a three-sentence statement saying

Martens had presented the resignation to the king during a meeting at the palace. "The king holds this resignation in suspension," the statement said.

Martens made the decision to resign the government during an emergency Cabinet meeting Tuesday morning, according to Employment Minister Michel Hansenne and Education Minister Daniel Coens.

The Martens government took office in 1981, and stayed in office longer than any other during the past decade. Among major tests it weathered was carrying out a 1979 decision to install 48 U.S.-made cruise missiles for NATO. The first 16 were installed in March, but a new government still could halt deployment of the remaining 32.

The Socialist Party, which is not part of Martens' government, is strongly opposed to the missiles. Martens decided to honor a commitment by the previous government to deploy the missiles, but he was under great domestic pressure to reject them.

The missiles are among 572 being deployed by five West European NATO members in response to a buildup of Soviet medium-range SS-20 missiles aimed at NATO capitals.

Martens refused comment today as he left the Cabinet meeting. "I give priority to the king," he said, apparently meaning he would not say anything until he had spoken with the king.

Soviet negotiator pessimistic after arms talks

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The chief Soviet negotiator at the superpower arms talks in Geneva, Viktor P. Karpov, today said there had been no progress in the second round of the talks.

Karpov, speaking to reporters before the start of the final session of the second round, said progress in the next round "depends upon the other (U.S.) side."

The second round, which began May 30, was to recess for about two months after the joint plenary meeting of all six principle negotiators and their aides at the Soviet mission to the United Nations.

The U.S. negotiating team of some 15 people, led by Max M. Kampelman, arrived seven minutes late for the session, which began at 11:07. Kampelman made no comment.

Speaking to reporters in Russian before the U.S. team arrived, Karpov said, "There has been no progress. None," when asked about the status of the talks.

Karpov referred to a speech June 26 by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in which he called on the United States to adopt "a more sensible position" in Geneva and said if there was no change in the U.S. position Moscow "should of course assess anew the whole situation."

"That speech gave a very good idea of what is happening in the talks right now," Karpov said. "And it's not our fault. It's the other side's fault."

He said it was "incumbent on the second side to change its position." In his June 26 speech, Gorbachev also said U.S. development of space defense weapons was blocking progress at the Geneva talks. The Soviets have demanded that the United States give up research on the strategic defense initiative, dubbed "Star Wars," as a precondition for other arms control agreements.

Kampelman and Karpov smiled, shook hands and exchanged banter in front of reporters for several minutes before getting down to business.

The summer break from the arms control talks that began March 12 was expected to last about two months, sources said. However, officials announced no date for resuming the talks.

Wheeling-Pittsburg case tests bankruptcy laws changes

By EARL BOHN
AP Business Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The first significant interpretation of new bankruptcy laws governing a company's ability to dissolve its labor contracts is due Wednesday when a federal judge rules in the case of Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp.

"The first decision out of the box on something like this is extremely important because it becomes the touchstone to which other attorneys and judges are going to refer," said Randy Barber, who operates the Center for Economic Organizing, a labor consulting firm in Washington.

The ruling by U.S. District Judge Warren W. Bentz could help determine how much ground organized labor has recovered since it received a major blow from the Supreme Court's 1983 decision in the case of a New Jersey building supply company named Bildisco.

In a 5-4 decision, the Supreme Court ruled that Bildisco did not violate labor laws when it dissolved its Teamsters union contract immediately upon entering Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code.

Under Chapter 11, a company is protected from creditors' lawsuits while it tries to reorganize and work out plans to pay its bills.

"Bildisco held that, in effect, the employer could reject the contract without waiting for court approval, which seemed flat in the face of the bankruptcy reforms of 1978, which said contracts can be rejected subject to court approval," said Harvard Law School professor Vern Countryman, who is representing unions in another case.

But the high court approved rejection of the contract "if the contract is burdensome to the estate and the equities balance in favor of rejection ... and if the court were persuaded that reasonable efforts to negotiate were made or were to be made or were not likely to produce a satisfactory result," said Sheldon Lowe, a New York bankruptcy law specialist.

The fine points were complex, but the broad implications were clear to organized labor. The decision sent union lobbyists scrambling to Capitol Hill for change in the law.

Congress responded by amending the federal Bankruptcy Code a year ago this month to include new conditions for rejecting contracts.

"Our victory in the legislation was to overturn the employer's power to make a unilateral decision before the involvement of the federal bankruptcy court," said Rex Hardesty, spokesman for the AFL-CIO in Washington.

But because the new law has been tested in only relatively minor cases so far, labor and management are closely watching the Wheeling-Pittsburgh case as a potential landmark.

At stake are the wages and benefits for 8,200 employees, pensions for 10,000 retirees and the future of a company with annual sales of about $1 billion.

In his first case as a bankruptcy judge, Bentz is being asked to decide the largest bankruptcy filing by an American steelmaker in modern times.

He was appointed to U.S. Bankruptcy Court less than a month before Wheeling-Pittsburgh, unable to repay more than $500 million in loans, filed April 16 for reorganization under Chapter 11.

Upward Bound targets success

WTSU. Canyon — A group of dedicated individuals at West Texas State University is working hard to provide target students with a greater opportunity for success. Headed by Roger Scott, Student Special Services provides assistance for certain university students through a program called Special Services, and for high school students through an Upward Bound program. These programs are federally funded through the Department of Education.

Upward Bound has been responsible for many successful people including Elijah Bonnell Demerson and Elisha Lonnell Demerson, twins who participated in the program. In 1973, they became the first Negro twins to enter the U.S. Military Academy at West Point. Both are now ministers, and Elisha serves as a Potter County Commissioner.

Another former Upward Bound student, Richard Benavidez, is currently the territorial manager for Whitehall Laboratories, a pharmaceutical company. He spoke at the Upward Bound awards ceremony on July 7.

Dear Abby

Women's troubled past could ease another's present pain

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Ashamed in Amherst," the young woman who left a good husband and two babies for a married man she thought she couldn't live without. She soon realized she had made a terrible mistake, and messed up her life so badly she couldn't go back. She seriously considered suicide.

Abby, this letter will be long, so you have my permission to shorten it or change it any way you wish, but I beg you to print it.

BEEN THERE IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR BEEN THERE: Your letter is long, but I'm running it just as you wrote it:

DEAR "ASHAMED": When I was 23, suicide looked pretty good to me, too.

My husband and I had two beautiful children, ages 2 and 3, our own home, good jobs and lots of nice things, but I had to leave to "find myself."

Leaving was especially easy when I found out that a couple of my "good buddies" at work wanted to be more than good buddies. I was Queen of the May and it was party time. My husband filed for divorce and I went along, figuring it was what he wanted. (I found out later it wasn't.)

Fun-time became less and less fun. And a year later I was living with one of my good buddies who wanted to get married, but I didn't. What a mess I'd made of my life! I'd left a wonderful husband and babies for what? I wanted to go back, but I was too ashamed. I considered all the different methods of suicide I'd ever heard of, trying to decide which would be the least difficult for someone to clean up. And what if I failed? I could be paralyzed, have half a brain, or be permanently damaged somehow. If I succeeded, what was waiting for me after this life? Who would find me? My boyfriend? Someone in my family? A stranger?

My children's precious faces kept popping into my head, and I saw people pitying them and whispering to one another, "Their mother killed herself, you know." Worst of all, my adorable babies would always think it was their fault because children feel guilty about anything that goes wrong in their family, and mine already had my divorce to contend with. I had to tough it out for them. I'd always believed in God, so I prayed. I told him: "God, I've messed up my life, so from now on I'm not going to do anything unless you tell me to do it. Please, just take over my life and do what you want with me." Maybe you've never believed in God, but if you have just the faintest idea that he exists, give him a try; that's all he needs to get you started. How he answered my prayer is another long story, with an enormously happy ending.

I'm married again, to the most terrific guy in the world. We've been married for eight years, and it's getting better all the time. (It was only nine years ago that I wanted to end my life.) We have a beautiful 14-month-old daughter, and I'm happier now than I ever thought I could (or deserved) to be.

Abby cares, your babies care, and I care. That's four people right there, and there are many more who would let you know they care, too, if they even suspected how hopeless you feel.

In faith, hope and love ...
"BEEN THERE"

DEAR "BEEN THERE": I and countless others are indebted to you for your inspiring testimony. Too bad you'll never know how many lives you've touched because you cared enough to write.

Put-together furniture gains popularity

Individuals who need to furnish in a hurry have discovered that furniture they can select and take home themselves to put together immediately is just the ticket.

Though it is not yet changing the way most Americans buy home furnishings, ready-to-assemble furniture is gaining more sales across the country.

Industry authorities predict it has a bright future, especially the pieces that are available at moderate prices. Predictions of success have grown stronger recently as a number of ready-to-assemble specialty stores have prospered.

In Europe, this type of merchandise already accounts for as much as a quarter of retail furniture sales, and recently American home furnishings trends have been following the European lead. This spring, when Ikea, the Swedish chain, opened in a suburb outside Philadelphia would-be customers lined up for an hour or more to get into the new store which specializes in this type of furniture.

The main advantages of ready-to-assemble furniture are easily summarized: cost savings are likely. This is far from surprising since the buyer takes on much of the responsibility by transporting his own furniture and by putting it together himself.

Immediate delivery and use and easy disassembly and removal to a new home are other obvious advantages. Sometimes, but not always, this type of furniture offers more interesting designs at moderate prices.

Like other types of furniture, ready-to-assemble pieces vary in quality and costliness. At the lowest prices, less sturdy pieces made of composite products such as particleboard are often found. Better quality costs more.

How does one judge the quality in a piece of furniture that comes in a box? Examine the floor sample very carefully, suggested one retailer. Fasteners are among the most important part of the furniture and need to be sturdy enough to support the weight they will bear. A buyer should always put the sample through its paces. Sit down in the chairs; lie down on beds; try wobbling tables to see if they are steady. Look for information on hangtags or on the box about materials used. Check to see if any warranties are offered.

A group of manufacturers, importers and others who attended a trade show for this type of furniture in New York City recently used the occasion to form the Ready-to-Assemble Furniture Association. The new group plans to establish a single name for this type of furniture and to work out a clear definition of it.

At least four names are used interchangeably to describe it: KD furniture (an industry term which refers to the knock-down or flat parts), kit furniture, furniture in parts, and ready-to-assemble furniture. The new association will also provide information to the general public, according to Douglas Kerr, executive vice president.

About 150 manufacturers, many from foreign countries, brought their products to New York to show and sell. Though not necessarily the most adventurous or most durable furniture available nowadays, many pieces were practical, livable and moderately priced, according to retailers who came to take a look. These pieces (or others like them) should be on retail sales floors within the coming months. Not all items will be available everywhere, but consumers who live in large cities will stand the best chance of finding a good selection.

When KD furniture first appeared, straight chairs, tables and shelving predominated, but the New York show featured virtually every type of furniture in parts. Besides a plethora of desks, tables and wall systems, there were upholstered easy chairs and sofas, computer furniture and furniture for children's rooms. The children's pieces seem especially useful since many featured adjustable heights so they could "grow" with the child.

While the general public has been receptive to the new type of furniture, home furnishings retailers have not been particularly welcoming. As a result, other types of retailers are selling furniture in parts in many areas. Chain stores, discount outlets, home centers, hardware stores, even large drug stores, are among those handling it.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q — I have completed a solid oak coffee table that I built from plans and directions in a magazine. The article gave no instructions for finishing the table except that it recommended an oil finish. I would prefer some kind of finish like varnish, but I wonder whether the open pores of the oak have to be filled first. I once heard oak should be given a wood filler before it gets its final coat. Is this necessary or can I put a clear finish right over the oak without the filler?

A — Some people prefer the kind of rugged look oak has without filling the pores. You say "some kind of finish like varnish." Why not varnish itself? It is often used on oak. There is no reason, however, why you can't use any finish that would go on most wooden surfaces, including a penetrating sealer, lacquer or one of the synthetics.

Free glaucoma tests to be given

A free glaucoma check is to be given by the The Texas Society to Prevent Blindness, Wednesday, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Medicine Shoppe, 1827 N. Hobart.

Glaucoma is one of the nation's leading causes of vision loss and a major cause of blindness. Two million Americans have glaucoma, yet half the victims do not realize they have the disease, says the National Society to Prevent Blindness.

The check for glaucoma is simple and painless. All individuals found to have a potential problem (elevated eye pressure) will be urged to visit a vision specialist or physician for further testing and diagnosis.

Glaucoma strikes without pain or other obvious symptoms. Its exact cause is unknown, but the damage resulting from glaucoma is permanent. Left untreated, this eye disease causes loss of vision and leads to blindness.

Along with senior citizens, other high risk groups include diabetics, people with cardiovascular diseases and those with a family history of glaucoma.

Nancy listened calmly to news

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — Nancy Reagan, feeling drained and alone during President Reagan's surgery ordeal, listened "calmly without blinking" as doctors told her the large growth removed from her husband's colon was cancerous.

While the president read a book in his room and waited to hear the outcome of pathological tests, Mrs. Reagan was told of the findings in a 30-minute meeting with his doctors, letting her come to grips with the news before she went in to see her husband.

"She asked clear, concise questions of them and listened very intently as they spoke," said presidential spokesman Larry Speakes. He was with the first lady and White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan as they heard the doctors' report in the sitting room adjacent to the president's bedroom at Bethesda Naval Hospital.

Mrs. Reagan had cried alone three days earlier when she learned that the growth might be malignant, but she was dry-eyed when those fears were confirmed, officials said.

Doctors told her they thought all of the cancerous tissue was removed before it spread to other parts of Reagan's body.

"She took it very calmly, without blinking — looked straight ahead," Speakes said.

Asked if she was upset, Speakes said, "Well, of course, as always, as anyone can imagine, certainly she's concerned and curious and has questions. But Mrs. Reagan accepted the news in a very calm fashion."

Determined to change her schedule as little as possible, Mrs. Reagan returned to the White House on Monday afternoon to substitute for Reagan as host to the Washington diplomatic corps at a Boston Pops concert on the South Lawn.

After the concert, she invited the 422 guests into the mansion, where she stood in a receiving line for nearly an hour, shaking hands with diplomats and thanking them for their expressions of concern about the president.

While Mrs. Reagan appeared composed in public, she was described by her press secretary, Jennefer Hirshberg, as feeling "drained and a sense of aloneness."

Mrs. Reagan spent the night at the White House, as she has since the president entered the hospital on Friday. She talked to friends and family members by telephone, Ms. Hirshberg said.

"She didn't want to leave the hospital but he wanted her" to go ahead with her schedule, the press aide reported. Even so, Mrs. Reagan will cut short a trip Wednesday to the aircraft carrier USS America, returning to the White House after a few hours' visit instead of spending overnight. The trip is intended to let her see a Navy program to combat drug abuse aboard ships.

Dr. Steven Rosenberg, chief of surgery at the National Cancer Institute, who informed Mrs. Reagan of the test results, told reporters later it is a standard practice to present a pathology report to family members before telling the patient. "It gives the family a chance to adjust to the information and perhaps be more supportive to the patient when the news is received," he said.

Miss Puerto Rico is named Miss Universe

MIAMI (AP) — A "really, really excited" Deborah Carthy-Deu of Puerto Rico, newly crowned Miss Universe 1985, attributed her success to hard work, faith and holding on to a dream.

Miss Carthy-Deu, a 19-year-old, hazel-eyed brunette from San Juan, was crowned Monday night by Miss Universe 1984, Yvonne Ryding of Sweden, before an audience of 5,000 people in the James L. Knight International Center and an estimated 600 million television viewers around the world.

The university student, who wants to become an actress, won a $175,000 prize package, which includes $120,000 in cash, a Mazda RX-7 sports car, a mink coat, a Hollywood screen test, a New York City apartment for a year and five years worth of makeup, suntan lotion and panty hose.

"New York, here I come," said the 118-pound, 5-foot-8, Miss Universe in a news conference after the two-hour pageant with game-show host Bob Barker and actress Joan Van Ark as masters of ceremony.

"I'm really, really excited," she said. "I'm still on cloud nine."

Miss Carthy-Deu, chosen over 78 other contestants, had this advice for other young women: "They should really work hard to achieve anything that they want to pursue."

She added that she would advise young women "never to lose their dream or their energy or their good-will."

Miss Spain Teresa Sanchez, 20, was first runner-up; Miss Zaire Benita Mureka, 18, was second; Miss Venezuela Silvia Martinez, 20, third; and Miss Uruguay Andrea Lopez, 17, fourth.

The remaining semifinalists, chosen in competition last week, were: Laura Martinez-Herring, 22, of El-Paso, Texas; Marcia Giagio Canvezes, 21, of Brazil; Karen Tilley, 21, of Canada; Claudia Van Sint Jan, 19, of Chile; and Olivia Tracey, 24, of Ireland.

The semifinalists were chosen after all 79 women were judged in swimsuit and evening gown competition and in preliminary interviews.

Texas Air acquires 21.2 percent of TWA

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Air Corp., which agreed last month to acquire Trans World Airlines Inc., owns 8.6 million TWA common shares, or 21.2 percent, including the 6.4 million-share option it received as part of the merger agreement last month, the company reported.

In filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission Monday, the Houston-based airline holding company said that it purchased 2.2 million TWA shares on the open market in recent weeks at prices ranging from $20.50 to $21.12. The Dallas Morning News reported.

The stock purchases were made public amid reports that TWA union leaders held unsuccessful merger discussions last weekend with officials of Miami-based Eastern Airlines Inc. TWA unions have been seeking a prospective white-knight partner to protect them from Texas Air's radical labor practices.

"The machinists and the pilots would rather merge with the devil than with Frank Lorenzo (Texas Air chairman)," one New York analyst told The News.

Texas Air owns Continental Airlines Corp., which abrogated its union contracts after filing for bankruptcy protection in 1983, and New York Airlines Inc., a non-union commuter airline.

TWA has the highest-cost, most restrictive labor contracts in the airline industry, airline analysts say.

Texas Air's stock purchases were seen as "insurance" by most analysts Monday. A successful merger is threatened by TWA's unions, as well as by New York investor Carl Icahn, who owns nearly 33 percent of TWA's stock, the News said.

Eastern officials already have backed off from the talks, industry sources confirmed Monday.

AL has biggest bats in 56th all-star game

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Which All-Star team would you rather have?

Rickey Henderson leads off a magnum-force American League lineup with a .357 average. George Brett, leading the major leagues at .358, bats third.

Baltimore's big boppers, Eddie Murray and Cal Ripken, hit fourth and fifth. Jim Rice, one of baseball's biggest errors during the last decade, is seventh — that's right, seventh — and Carlton Fisk, tied for the major league lead with 23 homers, is eighth.

"This is the best team I think we've had," Brett said.

Then there is the National League, which will be without some of its standouts for tonight's 56th All-Star Game.

Pedro Guerrero of Los Angeles and Gary Carter of the New York Mets are injured. Joaquin Andujar, the leading winner in the majors, decided to stay home in St. Louis. Fernando Valenzuela of Los Angeles and the Mets' Dwight Gooden may not pitch an inning between them.

And the game is even at an AL park, the semi-surrealistic Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome.

"We're at a definite disadvantage because they have all played here. They know all the nooks and crannies," NL Manager Dick Williams of San Diego said. "That's our alibi."

But will the Nationals need one? If they win, it will be the 21st time in 23 games, extending their margin to 36-19-1.

A victory would probably come on the strength of pitching.

LaMarr Hoyt, the Cy Young winner in the AL two seasons ago, will open up for the NL. He's one of five San Diego players in the starting lineup.

"I know their guys and I hope that helps me," Hoyt said.

Williams said either Nolan Ryan of Houston or the Mets' Ron Darling would follow Hoyt. Then Valenzuela and Gooden, who combined to strike out six consecutive batters in last year's game, would get their turns.

To finish, Williams brought along three premier relievers, his own Rich Gossage, Montreal's Jeff Reardon and Scott Garrelts of San Francisco.

Detroit's Jack Morris will make his second All-Star start for the AL. He pitched two scoreless innings in opening the 1981 game, and threw two shutout innings last year.

"We're playing in a hitters' ballpark," Morris said. "All I want to know is location, where their power zones are. If I'm pitching well, I'll get them out."

Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson will guide the AL and attempt to become the first manager to win with both leagues in All-Star play. He said he'd like Toronto left-hander Jimmy Key to follow Morris "because they have some left-handed power."

The 8:40 p.m. EDT game is expected to draw a sellout crowd of 55,122.

"When there are lot of people, this place heats up," said slugger Tom Brunansky of the host Minnesota Twins. "And when that happens, the ball flies out of here."

First all-star game milestone for many

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — While tonight's All-Star baseball game is old stuff to a veteran like Pete Rose, it's a significant milestone for the 16 players who are participating in the midsummer classic for the first time.

"It's time to let these kids have their day in the sun," said the Cincinnati Reds player-manager, who has been picked for 17 All-Star games. "I know how they feel today, though. I still remember my first one."

This game belongs to the young. There will be 10 new faces in the AL dugout and six on the National League's, and each will be fulfilling a lifelong dream.

"Once you've made it, you can never take it away from you," Montreal Expos relief ace Jeff Reardon said. "Because of both the fans and my peers, I'm here now. I'll cherish this moment the rest of my life."

"My dream was just to make it to the big leagues," said Seattle Mariners outfielder Phil Bradley, who was an all-Big Eight quarterback at the University of Missouri.

Top draft pick still not in Cowboy camp

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Defensive end Kevin Brooks, like 23 other first-round draft picks, was a holdout when the Dallas Cowboys opened their training camp, but Cowboys president Tex Schramm says the pressure will be on them, not the National Football League clubs.

"When all of the camps get started, when all the teams get in, the pressure will be very much on the players," Schramm said Monday.

"Everyone is going to have 70 to 100 players in camp, and everything will be going on as usual. Players will be competing, and teams are not going to miss one or two players," Schramm said.

"With the players, however, it will be extremely important from a personal standpoint. Once the camps open, the pendulum of pressure swings very strongly on the player."

Brooks is one of four who weren't on hand Sunday when the Cowboys became the first NFL team to set up camp. Also missing were offensive linemen Matt Darwin and Matt Moran and defensive end Kurt Ploeger.

Defensive end Jim Hermann and wide receiver Leon Gonzalez signed Sunday afternoon and running back Robert Lavette signed late Saturday.

Brooks is the first No. 1 pick not to report to the Cowboys' camp on time since 1971, Brandt said.

Brooks is asking for a four-year package worth about $1.5 million, including a $500,000 signing bonus. Cowboys personnel director Gil Brandt is believed to have offered him about $1.5 million over five years, including a $400,000 signing bonus.

Brooks actually came to camp in hopes his agent, Mike Trope of Los Angeles, and Brandt would work out a deal. But after four hours of negotiation, Trope decided not to accept the club's offer, and Brooks had to leave the California Lutheran campus where the Cowboys train. He said he planned to stay with friends near Thousand Oaks.

Brandt and Cowboys coach Tom Landry have warned rookies that missed time in camp will result in a lower signing bonus.

Landry also said rookies will have a more difficult time making the roster since the National Football League has reduced its team rosters from 49 players to 45.

"A rookie misses valuable time now because this is when he gets a foothold," Landry said.

Baseball strike deadline set

CHICAGO (AP) — While major league baseball treats itself to the All-Star Game tonight in Minneapolis, its attention will also be focused on the possibility of a players' strike in three weeks.

There had been speculation for weeks that the players association would boycott the All-Star Game to try to force a new collective bargaining agreement with club owners. But on Monday, the union instead set an Aug. 6 strike deadline.

"There will be a strike effective with games of that date if no agreement is reached," said Donald Fehr, acting executive director of the players association.

"The players strongly considered not playing" the All-Star Game, Fehr said. "It's not unfair to our fans. It's not a fans' game. It's one game that goes to the owners. Of the television revenue that flows from that game, $2,176,000 goes to player pensions, and $20 million goes to the owners, plus the owners get the gate proceeds as well."

But, Fehr said, the union decided to go ahead with the All-Star show because it is "a game the fans enjoy and want to see played."

In Minneapolis, Lee MacPhail, president of management's bargaining arm, the Player Relations Committee, said he regretted the strike decision.

"We are and have been ready to collectively address the problems confronting us," MacPhail said. "We do not want a strike. It would be a failure on both our parts and other dates but when all was said and done, we decided Aug. 6 was the best collective date."

Fehr called the strike date firm and said that progress at the negotiating table without an agreement by then probably would not prevent a walkout. "Speculation is not productive," he said.

The players want management to maintain the traditional one-third slice of the television rights revenue for the union's pension and benefit plan. The owners have resisted that after signing a record $1.1 billion broadcast deal far exceeding previous contracts.

The clubs also claim to be losing money, saying their books show $43 million in losses last year. The players' analysis, however, shows profits of about $10 million.

The next bargaining session is set for Thursday in New York.

The 1984 game made only a 24 percent profit, which was donated to crippled children's hospitals in Texas and Oklahoma, according to Oil Bowl officials.

NCAA finally sanctions Oil Bowl

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — The Oil Bowl game is on after all.

The longstanding high school football contest between Texas and Oklahoma all-stars, which had been threatened by the NCAA with decertification, is set to go Aug. 10 as planned.

The NCAA earlier had refused to sanction the 1985 game because last year's game failed to make a 40 percent profit for charity, and a report concerning the charitable proceeds was turned in more than seven months late.

Pampa advances in state meet

DENVER CITY—Pampa's 13-year-old all-stars came from behind in the last inning to score a 2-1 victory over Graham in the opening game of the state tournament here Monday night.

Trailing 1-0 after six, Pampa scored both runs in the seventh to chalk up the victory, with James Bybee driving in the decisive run.

Bybee was also the winning pitcher as he won a tight duel with Graham's Bob Rogers.

Bybee, Brandon Knutson and Matt Brock each had hits for the Pampa team.

Pampa tries to make it two in a row in the double elimination tournament in a game with Lamesa at 6 p.m. today.

Ellis, Joseph Yurich and Steve Hawkins.

Tonight's opponent for the Americans defeated North Randall County 9-5 Monday night.

The National team was shut down by the pitching of High Plains West's Hunter Battle. The only runner to reach base made it on an error.

Losing pitcher was Chris Howard.

Pampa Nationals outlast Americans

DUMAS—After taking a 15-5 lead into the top of the sixth inning, Pampa's National Little League softball team had to hold on for its life to escape with a 15-12 win over the Pampa Americans in the District One Little League tournament here Monday night.

The Pampa Americans rallied for seven runs in the sixth and had the tying run at bat before the Nationals finally got the third out to salvage the victory.

The Americans will play Borger at 6 p.m. today in the losers bracket and the Nationals meet Dumas at 8 p.m. Wednesday in their next game.

Jennifer Bailey was the winning pitcher for the Nationals, striking out three and allowing no walks. Velasquez went the distance for the Americans and was the losing pitcher.

Leading hitters for the Nationals were Helen Wade and Chasity Moody. Wade had two singles, driving in three runs, while Moody had a single and a bases-loaded double, driving in three runs. Rocky Striplin and SantaCruz each had two hits for the Americans.

The two Pampa teams had advanced through the first round with victories, the Nationals winning 25-9 over High Plains West and the Americans defeating Canadian.

Americans advance as Nationals lose

Pampa's American Little League all-stars won their opening game in the District tournament at Amarillo Monday night, while the Nationals fell victims of a no-hitter and were bumped into the losers bracket in the Dumas tournament.

The Americans defeated High Plains East 8-2 behind the 14 strikeout pitching of Quincy Williams, while the Nationals managed only one base runner and lost, 25-0, to High Plains West.

Both teams will be in action tonight, the Americans meeting South Randall County at 8 p.m. and the Nationals playing Frith at 6 p.m.

Williams allowed only two hits and walked just four for the American Stars. Tony Bybee was the leading hitter with three singles. Bryan Ellis had a double and Justin Cross, Paul Brown, Joseph Yurich and Steve Hawkins all contributed singles.

Good defensive plays were turned in by Paul Brown, Guy Savage, Quincy Williams, Bryan

Rangers Buddy Bell may be headed for Cincinnati

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Texas Rangers third baseman Buddy Bell probably will be dealt to the Cincinnati Reds today for a package of young players, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported, quoting sources close to the negotiations.

The newspaper said that the deal reportedly wasn't finalized, but that it appeared likely that Cincinnati — Bell's first choice all along — had emerged from an original pack of 10 clubs he had agreed to be traded to, the newspaper said.

"Exactly whom the Reds would give up was unclear, but possibilities included 28-year-old outfielder Duane Walker, who had also asked to be traded, and one to three pitchers from a group of Paul O'Neill, Jeff Russell, Fred Toliver, Rob Murphy, Bob Buchanan, Jay Tibbs or Kal Daniels," the newspaper added.

Bell, who must approve the deal before it can go through, insisted he had not yet done that but has made it clear he would be happy to go home to Cincinnati, where he was raised and still lives, the newspaper said.

"The only thing I can tell you is that there were four or five teams who were still interested the last time I talked to (Rangers General Manager) Tom Grieve," Bell said from his in-season Arlington home. "I think Cincinnati has had an interest all along."

Cincinnati manager Pete Rose, in Minneapolis for the All-Star Game, was playing down the likelihood the Reds would obtain the perennial Gold Glover, who asked the Rangers last week to trade him.

"He's a helluva player, but they want a lot," Rose said at Monday's All-Star Game workout. "You can't bust up your team for one player. You may get one player, but you can't give up two or three. And that's what they're talking about."

The Reds are one of several teams who have spoken to Bell's agent, Ed Keating, to find out what it will take to renegotiate the third baseman's contract, the Star-Telegram said. That figure, Bell said several days ago, is negotiable.

Grieve said Monday that he has set a timetable of completing the trade by the time play resumes Thursday, when the Rangers begin a four-game series at Detroit.

"I'd definitely like to have it done by then," Grieve said. "I've had a couple of conversations and before the day is over I will have talked to everyone involved. There's not a whole lot of change. The chances of a trade are about the same."

It was learned that the Yankees had made an offer Sunday that the Rangers had yet to reject. But the offer was made because owner George Steinbrenner is pushing it and Yankees insiders don't believe it will be enough for Bell, the Star-Telegram said.

Wilander U.S. Pro net champ

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — He's young. He has all the shots. And he's aggressive.

He is Sweden's Mats Wilander, the 58th U.S. Pro tennis champion.

Wilander carried the title, and a check for $35,700, on a flight home today after whipping Argentina's Martin Jaite 6-2, 6-4 Monday night on Longwood's clay center court.

"There's no time to rest," said Wilander, the world's third-ranked player. "I'm playing in the Swedish Open, a Grand Prix tournament, and my first match is Wednesday."

Wilander, who won his second French Open last month before being upset in the first round on grass at Wimbledon, relished his return to clay. The 20-year-old Swede, who also has won the Australian Open twice, swept five matches in straight sets in pushing his earnings for the year over $400,000 as the No. 1 seed here.

"I'm hitting the ball better than I did in the French Open, but I'm not 100 percent physically and I'm not moving as well," he said.

A couple of months ago Wilander decided he needed to work on a better first serve. He also felt he had to become more aggressive.

Wilander's serve was inconsistent against Jaite, who had been seeded 11th as the world's No. 40 player.

Despite his perceived shortcomings, Wilander scored points consistently. When the 20-year-old Jaite tried similar tactics, Wilander went to deep lobs and passing shots.

Jaite did pick up several spectacular points on volleys, but was broken in the fourth, sixth and eighth games of the 39-minute first set. Wilander lost his serve in the fifth game.

Jaite was broken in the second game of the second set, then returned the favor. The two exchanged breaks again in the seventh and eighth games. Then, after a double fault at 30-all, Jaite was broken again.

Dees captures club crown

Clint Dees won the Pampa County Club's men's golf championship with a 36-hole total of 142 over the weekend, edging Jerry Larson by one stroke for the title.

Other flight winners, runnersup and scores included:

First—Ralph Prock, 149; Gary Austin, 151.

Second—Billy Simon, 157; (three-way tie) Homer Miller, Beck Woldt and Dr. Joe Donaldson, 160.

Third—Ronnie Wood, 158; Cody Allison, 164.

Fourth—Jim Triplehorn, 163; Dr. Frank Kelly, 169.

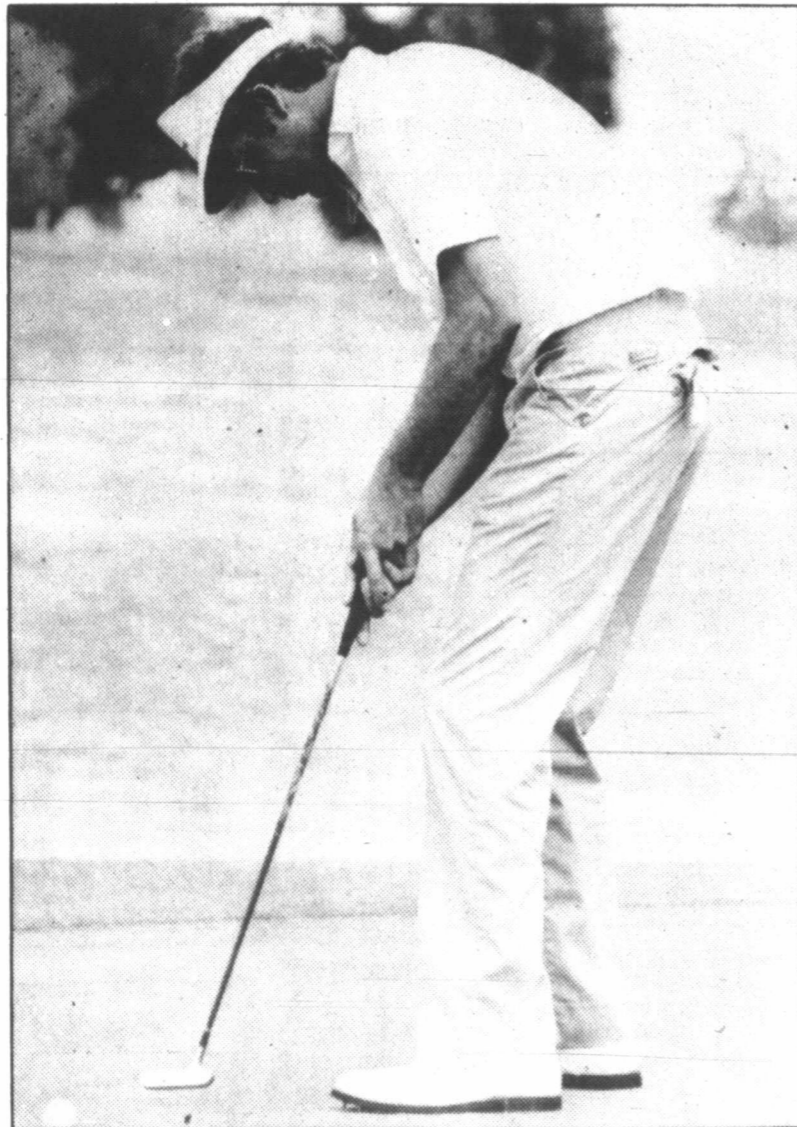

Fifth—Dr. Ed Williams, 171; Roy Webb, 175.

Sixth—Steve McCullough (won playoff) and Don Lehman, 175.

Senior Group—Ralph Prock, low gross, 179; Jim Triplehorn, low net, 156.

Low net winners in the flights were: Championship, Doug McFatrige, 135; First, Buddy Lamberson, 136; Second, Larry Gilbert, 136; Third, Gary Dalton, 131; Fourth, Jerry Scott, 134; Fifth, Dale Kessel, 139; Sixth, Ben Fallon, 137.

Dr. Fred Simmons eagled the 18th hole for the only eagle of the tournament.

Astros continue searching for escape from mediocrity

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros will start the second half of the 1985 baseball season in much the same fashion that they started the season.

They're trying to become better than a mediocre .500 ball club and they're still searching for the elusive power hitter.

General Manager Al Rosen gets the criticism for not trading for more home run punch.

Manager Bob Lillis has had to defend his team's desire to win after a former coach said the Astros were more interested in serving as role models than winning baseball games.

While the Astros, 43-45 going into the All-Star break, escaped the terrible starts that have plagued them the last two seasons, there is a new problem — extra inning games. The Astros have won only three of 10 overtime games this season.

"If you turn that around, we're right there," Lillis said. "I think our goal is to start coming through in the clutch. That'll help our situation greatly."

Lillis thinks the power hitting solution could be resolved if rookie Glenn Davis comes through at first base.

"As far as Glenn goes, we're looking for a righthanded RBI, power-type hitter," Lillis said.

"It's difficult to trade for one and we might have one right here. The only way you can find out is to give him a chance to play."

Davis, who became the starting first baseman when Enos Cabell was traded to the Los Angeles Dodgers, may have more defensive deficiencies than at the plate.

Davis is a continuation of an Astros youth movement that has been gaining momentum throughout the season.

Pitchers Mark Ross, Julio Solano and currently Mark Knudson, have been given shots at the majors. Jim Pankovits, Ty Gainey and Chris Jones also have been called up from Class AAA Tucson.

Lillis defends his own approach to the game and his team's clean-cut image.

Astros Coach Don Leppert, fired this season after he refused to accept another assignment, said the Astros were more interested in being neat than winning baseball games.

"I think it's important in this day and age to be role models," Lillis said. "We have several role models on this club and I think they still want to win."

Lillis would like to see the team charge well past the .500 level in the second half of the season.

"We're ahead of last year's schedule but we're still trying to get something going," he said. "We seem to win a few and then lose a few and we're hovering right around the .500 mark."

"Over the next part of the season we have to make a run at it, get some streaks together. You have to be 20-25 games over .500 to have a chance of winning it. That's our goal."

The Astros have, as expected, received solid starting pitching from Nolan Ryan, Joe Niekro and Bob Knepper, and Mike Scott is in the midst of an impressive comeback year throwing a split-fingered fast ball developed in the off-season.

The Astros would be further buoyed in the second half if shortstop Dickie Thon continues his improvement.

He was placed on the disabled list earlier this season.

Diamond Shamrock EPA fines now total $1.7 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — The amount of fines the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has charged Dallas-based Diamond Shamrock Corp. for violations in its handling of chemicals in the Houston area now totals $1.7 million.

The EPA said Monday the company, which in recent years has shifted its focus from chemicals to oil and gas, had agreed to pay a $900,000 administrative fine for failing to notify the federal agency before making or importing three new chemicals.

Two weeks ago, the company agreed to pay $800,000 to settle separate charges of violating PCB regulations at its Green's Bayou pesticide plant in Houston.

The types and amounts of the three chemicals involved in Monday's fine were not disclosed. EPA said the company was permitted to keep those a secret.

Though EPA originally had proposed a fine of $1.7 million for the notice violations in March, the amount was reduced because of undisclosed "new facts" and because Diamond Shamrock had cooperated in the investigation. The company voluntarily disclosed the violations on the part of its Duolite International subsidiary in the first place, EPA said.

In addition to the $900,000 fine, the company agreed to audit compliance with the Toxic Substances Control Act at 43 of its installations, and the EPA reserved the right to take further action on the basis of the company's findings.

The act requires companies to tell EPA 90 days before they begin commercial marketing of new chemicals in order to give the agency a chance to decide whether to regulate them. EPA spokesman Dave Ryan said "some" of the three chemicals actually had gone on sale.

Fines totaling $6.9 million were imposed against six companies last month for similar violations.

PCBs, polychlorinated biphenyl compounds, can cause cancer in laboratory animals. They have not been manufactured in the United States for seven years, but were once widely used for electrical insulation.

Names in News

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Debra Winger, who lost out on the title role in a new Francis Ford Coppola film because of a hiking injury, is negotiating a new role for later this year, her publicist says.

Ms. Winger, 29, is about 70 percent recovered from a ruptured spinal disc she suffered during a fall while hiking in January near a cabin she owns in New Mexico, publicist Pat Kingsley said Monday.

She is "doing a lot of swimming and walking" and undergoing physical therapy, Ms. Kingsley said.

Ms. Winger lost the lead in Coppola's "Peggy Sue Got Married" to actress Kathleen Turner because of her injury. She currently is negotiating for a movie in the fall, but Ms. Kingsley said she could not disclose further details.

TORONTO (AP) — Even Mother Nature bows to England's Queen Mother, who ends a five-day visit to Toronto today.

On Monday, the mother of Queen Elizabeth II requested an unscheduled visit to the CN Tower, but dense morning fog ruled out the side trip.

However, rain scrapped a planned jaunt to historic Fort York and sunshine broke out later in the day, wedding in an hour in her packed itinerary to see the tower.

From the 1,825-foot height of the world's tallest free-standing structure, the Queen Mother sipped lemonade in the revolving restaurant and gazed fondly down at the city she first saw in 1939 with her late husband King George VI.

MONTEREY, Calif. (AP) — Rock Hudson, who joined Doris Day in films like "Pillow Talk" and "Send Me No Flowers," shared a stage with the actress and her new co-star, a dog, as they introduced "Doris Day's Best Friends."

Hudson, Eva Gabor, Merv Griffin and the dog, 1-year-old Buster, attended a news conference Monday when Miss Day introduced the new cable television show about pets. The half-hour program will air beginning Oct. 6 on the CBN Network.

Miss Day, 61, a veteran of about 40 films, is the founder of the Doris Day Pet Foundation in Los Angeles.

The show marks Miss Day's first regular television appearances since 1972.

SPARKED A CONGRESSIONAL outcry about overpriced military parts, so the Navy switched to a cheaper version of the modified socket wrench that was made by Grumman Aerospace Corp. An internal Navy memo said the new wrench is now causing problems.

The memo, sent to Grumman and Navy aircraft maintenance commands and obtained by The Associated Press, says the cheaper wrench, made for use on ejection seats of F-14 Tomcats, A-6 Intruders and EA-6B Prowlers, is damaging the metal plating on the firing heads of the seats.

DEBRA WINGER

MARLIN PERKINS

Names in News

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Debra Winger, who lost out on the title role in a new Francis Ford Coppola film because of a hiking injury, is negotiating a new role for later this year, her publicist says.

Ms. Winger, 29, is about 70 percent recovered from a ruptured spinal disc she suffered during a fall while hiking in January near a cabin she owns in New Mexico, publicist Pat Kingsley said Monday.

She is "doing a lot of swimming and walking" and undergoing physical therapy, Ms. Kingsley said.

Ms. Winger lost the lead in Coppola's "Peggy Sue Got Married" to actress Kathleen Turner because of her injury. She currently is negotiating for a movie in the fall, but Ms. Kingsley said she could not disclose further details.

TORONTO (AP) — Even Mother Nature bows to England's Queen Mother, who ends a five-day visit to Toronto today.

On Monday, the mother of Queen Elizabeth II requested an unscheduled visit to the CN Tower, but dense morning fog ruled out the side trip.

However, rain scrapped a planned jaunt to historic Fort York and sunshine broke out later in the day, wedding in an hour in her packed itinerary to see the tower.

From the 1,825-foot height of the world's tallest free-standing structure, the Queen Mother sipped lemonade in the revolving restaurant and gazed fondly down at the city she first saw in 1939 with her late husband King George VI.

MONTEREY, Calif. (AP) — Rock Hudson, who joined Doris Day in films like "Pillow Talk" and "Send Me No Flowers," shared a stage with the actress and her new co-star, a dog, as they introduced "Doris Day's Best Friends."

Hudson, Eva Gabor, Merv Griffin and the dog, 1-year-old Buster, attended a news conference Monday when Miss Day introduced the new cable television show about pets. The half-hour program will air beginning Oct. 6 on the CBN Network.

Miss Day, 61, a veteran of about 40 films, is the founder of the Doris Day Pet Foundation in Los Angeles.

The show marks Miss Day's first regular television appearances since 1972.

SPARKED A CONGRESSIONAL outcry about overpriced military parts, so the Navy switched to a cheaper version of the modified socket wrench that was made by Grumman Aerospace Corp. An internal Navy memo said the new wrench is now causing problems.

The memo, sent to Grumman and Navy aircraft maintenance commands and obtained by The Associated Press, says the cheaper wrench, made for use on ejection seats of F-14 Tomcats

Early cancer detection may be helped by Reagan episode

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — What Betty Ford's breast cancer did for that disease about 10 years ago, President Reagan's polyp may do for colorectal cancer: boost public awareness and help doctors find the disease early, experts say.
In trying to diagnose colon and rectal cancer early enough to improve chances for survival substantially, doctors want to examine patients "before they see red blood in the stool," said Dr. Sidney Winawer, chief of gastroenterology at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York.

Visible blood in the stool, bleeding from the rectum and sudden change in bowel habits may indicate colorectal cancer and deserve an examination, he said.

But examinations of people without symptoms can catch the disease earlier, and an American Cancer Society official said Monday he believes the publicity surrounding Reagan's polyp will help that effort.
"I certainly expect an increase in people calling for detection examinations," said Lawrence Garfinkel, vice president for epidemiology and statistics and director of cancer prevention. "I think any kind of national publicity ... is good to get people to come for detection of cancer."

Cancer society spokeswoman Joann Schellenbach said, "We used to call colorectal cancer the cancer nobody talked about. I would say this week it's the cancer everybody's talking about."
Garfinkel said diagnoses of breast cancer surged about 10 years ago after former first lady Betty Ford and Happy Rockefeller, the wife of former Vice President Nelson Rockefeller, went public with their cases.

The cancer society estimates about 96,000 cases of colon cancer will be found this year, plus 42,000 cases of rectal cancer. Among cancers, only those of the lung and skin are found more frequently than colorectal cancer.
About 59,900 Americans are expected to die from colorectal cancer this year, second only to lung cancer. Colon cancer is expected to account for $1,600 of the deaths.

To catch colorectal cancer early in people who haven't shown symptoms, the cancer society recommends three kinds of tests:
Starting at age 40, people should have their doctors do an annual digital examination of the rectum. The doctor feels for lumps with a finger in the first few inches of the rectum.
Starting at age 50, people should get from their doctors a kit for an annual stool blood test. At home they put bits of feces from three consecutive bowel movements on a special slide, and return it to the doctor. The goal is to find hidden blood.
Also at age 50, the society recommends starting examinations of the rectum and part of the colon by a physician who uses a flexible, hollow tube to look for growths. If two annual exams fail to find anything wrong, the society suggests another exam every three to five years thereafter.

The importance of early detection shows in the percentage of patients surviving five years after diagnosis: 87 percent for colon cancer and 78 percent for rectal cancer that is found and removed in an early stage, but only 47 percent and 38 percent respectively if the cancer has spread elsewhere in the body.

Some evidence suggests that a high-fat diet may promote colon cancer, whereas fiber in the diet may prevent it, said Sidney Weinhouse, biochemistry professor at the Temple University School of Medicine.

Mexico's opposition parties gain strength in Congress

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico's opposition parties gained strength in Congress but the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party still retained its near monopoly on the political system, according to almost-complete voting results.
The final tallies of the July 7 congressional races were expected to be released today.
The Federal Electoral Commission announced late Monday that with 289 districts decided, the Revolutionary Party had captured 281 seats in the lower house of Congress.

The National Action Party, the main opposition party, won six seats and the tiny, conservative Authentic Party of the Mexican Revolution two.

A total of 300 seats in the lower house is elected directly by voters.

In the last session of Congress, the Revolutionary Party held 299 seats and National Action, a conservative party, only one.

An additional 100 seats in the chamber will be apportioned in August to the minority parties according to how well they did in the voting.

The congressional wins give the Revolutionary Party, in power for 56 years, a near sweep of the mid-term elections.

It scored heavily in state and municipal elections and was declared the victor in six of the seven governor's races. The seventh was to be announced today in the northern state of Sonora where the PRI candidate has already claimed victory.

The electoral gains, though, have been marred by widespread claims of vote fraud that have prompted rallies and demonstrations in the prosperous states along the U.S. border where National Action, known by its Spanish acronym PAN, is strongest.

PAN supporters refused for a fourth day Monday to let car and truck traffic cross the border at Agua Prieta, across from Douglas, Ariz., to protest alleged election irregularities.

But in the northern states, electoral commissions gave the Revolutionary Party, or PRI, decisive wins.

In Sonora, just south of Arizona, the state electoral commission declared PRI the winner of all 69 municipal races and the 18-seat state legislature. As a result, PRI recaptured the mayors' offices in the state capital of Hermosillo.

Agua Prieta and San Luis Rio Colorado that had been held by PAN members.
PAN won three of its six congressional seats in the border city of Ciudad Juarez and the other three in the cities of Chihuahua, Durango and Ciudad de Leon.

Calling All Home Makers

A GOOD BUY

Since everybody is so conscious of what they should spend their money for these days, we thought we'd pass along some thoughts made recently by an economic analyst on family spending.

He said in his opinion, among the best buys today are furniture and other home furnishings—and his reason is that one should consider the knowledge that furniture and home furnishings last longer and therefore give the purchaser a longer run for his money.

He said it makes sense to him to put money into something of a permanent or semi-permanent nature such as furniture, where the cost is amortized over a long period of time, and where you get continued pleasure from it.

He also brought out the point that it makes sense to put one's money into a place where people spend as much time as they do in their homes.

In any case, whether you're thinking about economics or simply the comfort and beauty of your home, remember that we not only have good furniture values and selection, but we're aware of helping you consider your budget, and getting you the most for your money.
