'So good it's frightening'

Latest artificial heart recipient reported doing great

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) -Artificial heart recipient Murray P. Haydon's doctors beamed about his recuperation as he resumed breathing on his own, but a "discouraged" and fever-plagued William J. Schroeder may never be well enough to leave the hospital, doctors said

Haydon could only mumble yes and no Monday after a respirator was removed from his irritated throat, but his condition "is so good it's frightening," said Dr. Allan M. Lansing, medical spokesman for the weekend.

Haydon, 58, of Louisville, ate ice chips Monday night, his first step toward sipping fluids rather than taking them through a tube. Lansing said the "next plateau" would be ridding Haydon of all his tubes and monitoring lines, except for the compressed-air lines that keep the heart beating.

Meanwhile, Schroeder, the world's second recipient of a permanent artificial heart, continued to suffer an untraceable

"At the present time he spends most of his time in bed. The quality of life is not good," Lansing said Monday

Schroeder, 53, of Jasper, Ind., was nearly well enough to go home when the fever struck him about two weeks ago, doctors said.

Dr. Robert Jarvik, who invented the artificial heart, said he spent some time with Schroeder last week. "He said a few words and that's all. He doesn't say complete sentences," Jarvik said.

"It's a very rough thing that's happened," he added.

At a Monday morning briefing, Lansing talked at length about Schroeder's discouragement, saying "the individual's spirit is a very important determinant of survival." Any patient who begins to lose the will to live "may lose his strength or he may commit suicide," Lansing said.

That apparently angered Schroeder's family and Dr. William DeVries, who performed both Jarvik-7 implants at the Louisville hospital.

"Dr. DeVries was mad at me because of all the stuff that came out" in subsequent news reports, Lansing said at an afternoon briefing.

"This morning, I was being as truthful as I could be," Lansing said. "Everybody has been going around saying that we have been hiding information, or at least implying that we were hiding

CBS maintains it didn't apologize

NEW YORK (AP) - Shortly after retired Gen. William C Westmoreland dropped his $120 million libel suit against CBS, the dispute switched from Vietnam War troop estimates to an argument over whether the settlement constituted an apology from the network.

Westmoreland said he got the apology he had been seeking all along. CBS officials said that the network had not apologized and that the 1982 broadcast that prompted Westmoreland's suit had withstood the test of 21/2 years of scrutiny, both in and out of court.

Van Gordon Sauter, executive vice president of the CBS Broadcast Group, said that Westmoreland declared a "victory" so that he could withdraw from a losing case. He said Westmoreland "may read into the (CBS) statement what he wishes to read into (it).

Like the war in Southeast Asia that was the heart of the trial's testimony, Westmoreland's abrupt withdrawal from the 18-week legal battle in New York left matters on an ambiguous note, emotions simmering and many questions

The final act of the lengthy drama was to be played out today in U.S. District Court, where Judge Pierre Leval was to dismiss the 12 jurors and five alternates.

Richard Benveniste, jury foreman, said Monday he was 'still stunned" by the settlement. "I'd have liked to have gone the whole route," he told The New York Times While Benveniste declined to discuss his opinions in the case, one unidentified juror told the newspaper that his "gut opinion" was that the panel was "leaning toward CBS more than 50 percent.

'Not everyone in there was sold on either side," the juror said. "It deliberation."

Gen. Westmoreland declares 'victory'

The documentary "The Uncounted Enemy: A Vietnam Deception' had accused Westmoreland of deliberately understating estimates of communist troop strength in Vietnam by at least 200,000 people to deflect American criticism of commanded U.S. forces in Vietnam in 1964-68. After a Westmoreland attorney told Judge Pierre Leval that the general was dropping his suit, both sides issued a joint statement saying "their respective positions have been effectively placed before the public for its consideration" and that continuing the case would serve no further purpose. In the statement, Westmoreland said he respected "the long and distinguished tradition of CBS," while the network said it did not would have been a long believe "Westmoreland was unpatriotic or disloyal in performing his duties as he saw

But in subsequent interviews, the conciliatory statement dissolved in acrimony as each side defined what it meant

"I got all I wanted," Westmoreland said later. "That (CBS statement) is what I asked for originally. ... I consider that I've won by virtue of that statement Westmoreland said of the statement: "I figured it was the best I could get. It was in essence an apology. One does not have to use the word. One apologizes in other ways. But Sauter said CBS stood by its story and that he did "not view that statement as an apology

'We believe the broadcast was accurate and fair," Sauter said at a news conference an hour after Westmoreland's. "We believe the statement is equitable and the general may read into the statement what he wishes to read into (it).

Sauter said the statement 'specifically said 'as he (Westmoreland) saw his duty, as he perceived his duty ... 'And if that meant reporting lower enemy figures that was justified," Sauter told ABC News.

"That is categorically false. That thought never entered my head,' said Westmoreland during the same interview Mike Wallace, the documentary's narrator and a co-defendant in the suit, said in an interview with Cable News Network on Monday evening: "Remember the late Sen. George Aiken, who suggested to the American people that perhaps what we should do is declare victory in Vietnam and get out of there. It seems to me that is what Gen. Westmoreland has done in use their homes as collateral on loans for education, medical and other expenses, according to two lawmakers pushing a constitutional amendment on second mortgages.

Second mortgages in Texas pushed

'We're only trying to let people use equity for a purpose that is important to them." Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena.

Brooks and Rep. Debra Danburg, D-Houston, on Monday filed the proposed constitutional change that is opposed by the Texas Consumer Association.

The two lawmakers said their proposal would not put borrowers in undue jeopardy of losing their homes to creditors.

Under the current law, a Texan can lose his home only for failure to repay a first mortgage, home improvement loan or taxes. Texas is the only state that bars second mortgages, according to Brooks.

The senator said second mortgages are needed by families who have "paid 18-20 years on the property, have their first lien down to $15,000-$20,000, have a home worth $70,000 and want to send the child to college or they have a catastrophic illness.

'This allows Texans to borrow on the equity of their homes," said Ms. Danburg. "The money is rightfully theirs

The Texas Consumer Association said in a position paper that second mortgages are not needed in the

'The homestead exemption has played a role in the economic stability of the state and has worked well for Texas citizens,' the association said.

Ms. Danburg said second mortgages could be used to help Texans start businesses. But the consumer association said loans for new businesses, and most other purposes, now are readily available

"The reason lenders will not make most new business loans now is that they realize the high risk involved and yet they want to encourage people to mortgage the family homestead on propositions with the same degree of failure," the association said.

Brooks said opponents of second mortgages are using decades-old 'horror stories' involving old ladies losing their homes.

"Almost all of them involved things that were against the law or unethical in the first place," he said of the "horror stories.

The consumer association maintains the bill is favored only by "large national corporations who see Texas homesteads as ripe for picking," including, Citicorp, Sears. Transamerica and other lenders who have formed Texans for Home Value Access to push legalized second mortgages.

House Speaker Gib Lewis said Monday he is not ready to take a stand on second mortgages.

"I think it's something we ought to let the committee look at and study," he said.

Lewis said he would not favor a constitutional change that would 'allow people to lose their homes.' but added, "I can see the problems people are running into. They are frustrated when that equity is not available to use.

Housing starts show big gain in January

WASHINGTON (AP) - Housing starts, pushed by a surge in apartment construction, jumped 14.9 percent last month, the biggest increase since May 1983, the government reported today

The Commerce Department said new housing was started at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.83 million units in January, compared to a revised rate of 1.60 million units in December.

The increase — the biggest since a 17.7 percent gain 20 months ago was led by a 76 percent jump in construction of apartment projects with five or more units. They were started at an annual rate of 692,000 units in January. This was the highest level of activity in this category since a rate of 750,000 units in September 1973.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said the report showed the housing industry started the new year "on an upbeat" despite unusually cold weather

"The drop in interest rates is boosting new housing construction and stimulating sales of new and existing homes." Baldrige said in a statement. He said that rates on conventional mortgages dipped to 12.9 percent in early February, down from a peak of 14.7 percent in

Michael Sumichrast, chief economist for the National Association of Home Builders, predicted the housing industry would enjoy a strong spring. He said the latest survey by his organization of builders' expectations showed the highest optimism on sales in eight

"The spring is starting out at an excellent pace. It is much better than we had hoped six months ago," he said.

The big January gain followed a decline of 0.3 percent in December and a smaller 2.3 percent November increase, based on revised figures, the department said

Construction of single-family homes fell 4 percent in January, dropping to 1.04 million units. Construction of apartments with two to four units was also down, dropping 15.3 percent.

Construction activity was strongest in the West, where new starts jumped by 53.2 percent last month, to an annual rate of 501,000 units. The Midwest also showed a strong increase, with construction started at an annual rate of 284,000 units, up 22.9 percent from the December level. The Northeast registered a 2.6 percent increase in construction activity in January, and the South showed an even smaller 0.6 percent rise.

Anti-apartheid campaigners arrested

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) - Six prominent anti-apartheid campaigners were arrested today on high treason warrants and security police raided activists' offices in major cities, police confirmed.

Col. Vic Haynes of police headquarters in Pretoria said the six were arrested in the same investigation that led to treason charges being brought last year against seven other anti-apartheid

Police said the six arrested in Johannesburg and Durban today were Albertina Sisulu, wife of jailed African National Congress leader Walter Sisulu; Sam Kikine of the South African Allied Workers Union: Isaac Ngcobo, whose affiliation was not immediately known; Dr. Ishmael Mohammed of the Transvaal Indian Congress; and Frank Chikane and Cassim Saloojee, both senior officials of the United Democratic Front anti-apartheid coalition

The names differed from six names supplied earlier by the law office of Priscilla Jana, who often defends people charged with political offenses. Mrs. Jana's office later said others may have been detained for questioning rather than charged with treason. Among those who Mrs. Jana named but who were not named by police were Popo Molefe, national secretary of the United Democratic Front: Siza Njikelana, of the South African Allied Workers Union; and June Mlangeni, who works at the South African Council of Churches.

Security police raided offices of the United Democratic Front, the nation's largest anti-apartheid organization, in Johannesburg, Cape Town and Durban, seizing some documents and banners at each office, United Democratic Front officials said.

A trial of the 13 defendants on treason charges would be one of the most far-reaching cases against opponents of white-minority rule since African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela and seven colleagues were sentenced to life in prison in 1964.

Today's arrests came three weeks after President P.W. Botha offered Mandela freedom on condition that he renounce violence as a method of fighting apartheid, South Africa's legal system of racial segregation Sanctuary workers Jack Elder, 41, and Stacey Lynn Merkt, 30, are on trial for the second time on charges of conspiring to transport two Salvadorans last November.

A 10-man, two-woman jury was scheduled to hear opening arguments today.

Visiting U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela said he expected the case to last about three days. The judge earlier this month moved the case from Brownsville, about 325 miles southwest of Houston, because of extensive publicity.

Elder left his San Antonio teaching job in August 1983 to become director of Casa Oscar Romero, a Roman Catholic Church-sponsored shelter for Central Americans in the Texas border town of San Benito.

to 30 years in prison. Ms. Merkt, a volunteer at the shelter, is charged with conspiracy and transporting the Salvadorans about 40 miles from the shelter to a bus station in McAllen. Ms. Merkt is on two years' probation on a similar conviction last May in Vela's court. If found guilty on the latest charges, she could receive up to 15 years in prison and lose her probation.

Last month in Corpus Christi, Elder was acquitted of charges of transporting three Salvadorans in March 1984. The jury agreed with defense contentions that Elder did not further the Salvadorans' movement into the United States by merely giving them a ride to the bus station

Bishop John James Fitzpatrick, whose diocese operates the shelter, said Monday that Brownsville area residents are 'pretty much polarized" over Elder's and Ms. Merkt's roles in the sanctuary movement. Fitzpatrick said he made a personal loan - "mine and the bank's" to post $2,500 bond for Elder and $25,000 for Ms. Merkt.

"I'm one of many, I think, who support them. I'm very proud of them," Fitzpatrick said. "I think they're doing something that's not only Christian, but American.'

The bishop said he sees the Saladoran aliens as political refugees. The government says they're economic refugees who are not allowed political status.

The Texas Department of Corrections hired a Dallas firm to look at prison facilities and determine their capacities.

TDC Director Ray Procunier told a House subcommittee Monday that he believes the prison system needs more maximum security cells. Procunier did not bring any specific money requests to the House Law Enforcement Committee panel.

'Texas is under the misunderstanding that the whole system is maximum security,' Procunier said.

TDC needs maximum security units for 4-7 percent of the approximately 33,000 inmates, he said. What passes for maximum security now is inadequate, according to Procunier. He wants units so secure that prison officials "could issue hacksaw blades" to inmates because they still couldn't cut their way out.

"Texas has way too many dormitories (for inmates) already. Texas should never build another dormitory," said Procunier.

Despite a year of violence behind TDC walls, the director said, "We are having the minimum amount of violence we could possibly have under the circumstances."

Witness says Mattox threatened bond war

AUSTIN (AP) - Attorney General Jim Mattox threatened to "go to war" with a Houston law firm if one of its attorneys did not stop trying to question Mattox's sister, a member of the firm said.

Caldwell said Mattox called him June 15, 1983, and said he was angered because Thomas McDade, a Fulbright & Jaworski lawyer, wanted to take a deposition from Janice Mattox, a Dallas lawyer.

'I was really concerned because I had spent 30 years building up our bond business," said Caldwell. 'He said unless I straightened out this thing with McDade there would be a complete breach between the attorney general's office and our bond business.

'If we had war with the attorney general it would mean eventually we would be out of business,'

All municipal bond issues must be cleared by the attorney general before being sold.

Another witness, Thomas Asher of New York, a general counsel for Mobil Oil Corp., said McDade, acting for Mobil, needed to question Mattox's sister to see if Laredo Judge Ruben Garcia should be disqualified from handling a suit filed against Mobil by South Texas rancher Clinton Manges and the Caldwell left the stand after completing his direct testimony and will return Wednesday for cross examination by defense attorneys.

Caldwell, a former money raiser for Mattox's political campaigns, said when Mattox called him 'He was angry, mad, and upset.

"He said if we did not stop McDade there would be a war and a complete breach between his office and ours," Caldwell said.

At the time, Caldwell said, Fulbright & Jaworski had 17 bond issues pending before the attorney general, totaling about $1 billion.

He said he talked with Mattox later and Mattox claimed McDade "was unlawyerlike and promised to use everything within his power to win the war between his office and Fulbright & Jaworski.'

Asher said he hired Fulbright & Jaworski to represent Mobil Oil in the $1.7 billion lawsuit. Manges, joined by Mattox, claimed Mobil owed both Manges and the state money for not fully developing an a 65,000-acre oil lease on Manges ranch in Duval County. The case was settled last year.

Asher said a deposition taken from Manges told of a meeting at Manges' ranch attended by Mattox, the judge and Manges.

Senator pushes timeshare regulation

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Ray Farabee's "no room at the inn'' timeshare bill has been sent to a Senate subcommittee for review of how it proposes to regulate such sales.

Farabee's bill would allow a customer three days after a sale to change his or her mind and get out of the deal, unless the transaction had been arranged by a licensed real estate agent. Timeshares "are subject to fraud or abuse," Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, told the Senate Economic Development Committee on

He said timeshares "appeal to the desire of people who worki50 weeks a year and want for two weeks to go to some far-off place.

One example of a timeshare would be the purchase of two weeks each year at a vacation resort. There are arrangements, Farabee said, where a person can exchange two weeks in Colorado, for instance, for two weeks in "Our biggest problem with the exchange program is overbooking, and the only time you can get two weeks in Florida is the middle of the summer," said Farabee. "Often, there is no room at the inn.'

Farabee also cited cases where a timeshare is sold and then the corporation selling the timeshares fails and the buyers "don't get

His bill provides for an escrow account to be set up for timeshare firms to deposit 50 percent of the total amount of sales.

Assistant Attorney General William Goodman testified that high-pressure promoters selling timeshares refer to customers as "ups" or "units."

"They're either the best salesmen in the country or the best con artists," Goodman

Mark Hanna, representing the Texas Association of Realtors, said, "I'm aware of no abuse in the marketplace in Texas in the sale of timeshares by licensees.

Inmate gets stay from federal judge convicted killer scheduled for execution this week for his part in the slayings of two men has been spared a trip to the Texas death

Carl Eugene Kelly, 25, of Waco, was ordered to die by injection before sunrise Thursday. But U.S. District Judge Walter Smith blocked the execution Friday to give a full hearing on a writ of habeas corpus.

Lynn Malone, who was the lead prosecutor in the case, said Monday that Kelly deserved a stay because some "factual and legal" issues should be resolved.

"I don't know that there problems, but legitimate questions that should be reviewed," he said. "It shouldn't be reviewed with him laying on the table. It's something that should be done with time and "I think there's a question about the admissibility of his statement that never has been reviewed. He gave a statement in which he admitted involvement. And he has made some allegations that he stopped talking, that he told the police he didn't want to talk with them, and that they re-initiated a conversation with him," Malone

Kelly's execution date, set in December by State District Judge George Allen, was his first. Kelly was convicted Sept. 2, 1980 of the slaying and robbery of Steven Pryor, 18, who was abducted from a Waco convenience store, taken to the city's Cameron Park and fatally shot.

Also killed in the incident was David Wade Riley, a transient who had been asleep in Pryor's car.

After Riley and Pryor were shot, their bodies were tossed over a 60-foot cliff known as Lover's Leap

Thomas Graves, also of Waco, pleaded guilty to both killings, as well as the slaying of Edward Traywick the day before. Graves, 20 at the time, received a life prison

But Kelly who also was 20 insisted on a trial was convicted June 5, 1981 and received the death sentence.

Graves was arrested the next morning driving Pryor's blood-stained car. Kelly's billfold was found in the trunk of the car. Limestone dust detected on the park, where they found the bodies at the bottom of the cliff.

Malone said Kelly had a "fairly extensive arrest record" although his list of convictions was "more limited.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals upheld Kelly's conviction last May.

In October, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to overturn his conviction. His appeal then contended that potential jurors were improperly excluded from his trial for voicing general reservation about the death penalty.

Vocabulary improvement

Today is Feb. 19, 1985 and the word of the day is JAMBALAYA. meaning "a cooked dish of Creole origin, consisting of rice, vegetables, meat or fish. How do I know that?

You see, I have a little desk calendar, 365 Ways to Improve Your Vocabulary, which teaches a fancy new word each day. My mother gave it to me for Christmas and suggested "maybe you can slip these words into your articles.'

So far, not one of those words have appeared in my stories. Oh, I've had several opportunities. The word for New Years' Day was DIONYSIAN, which means wild, frenzied and sensuous It's named for the Dionysius, the Greek God of wildlife, frenzy and sensousness. Had I been in better condition that day, I could have done a story on the Dionysian revelry that Pampans engaged in New LACUSTRINE — of, or pertaining to, a lake — is another word I could have used in a story. That was the word of the day for Jan. 19, the day of the Sweetwater Creek Reservoir election in Wheeler County. It was as if God wanted me to use it; so in my election story. I wrote, "Voters turned down the lacustrine issue." The editor, for some reason, cut the word out.

March 13 is the day after the Miami and McLean city council meetings. The word for that day is GALOOT, a slang word for a silly or awkward person. No, I better not.

DeeDee, our lifestyle editor, can slip EPITHALAMION (June 22) into one of her wedding stories. That's a nuptial song or poem in honor of the bride and bridegroom. In the obituaries for Sept. 23, we could bury the deceased in a NECROPOLIS, or large cemetery.

On Oct. 27, Larry Hollis can write about the goings on at the HOTEL deVILLE. No, Pampa is not getting a new luxury lodge. Hotel de ville is the French word for city hall.

As for some of the other words. . . . well, suffice it to say they're not part of everyday Pampa vocabulary. The word for Feb. 17 is ANADROMOUS, a fishy adjective meaning "migrating from the sea up a river to spawn." The only rivers in these parts are the Canadian and the Salt and North forks of the Red, so there's not that many anadromous things for fish to do there.

The calendar is chock-full of BAHUVRIHIS (Feb. 28). Those are compound nouns or adjectives of two parts, one adjective and the other nominal. When Lucy in Peanuts calls Charly Brown a blockhead, she is using a bahuvrihi. Use this word carefully, lest your pastor think you're praying to a Hindu god

Some of these new words do come in handy. Take the word for Jan. 8, ELOIGN, to remove oneself to a distance. When some beer-breath comes up to me when I'm eating dinner, I just snap "Eloign, Creep!" If he doesn't get up and go, he at least sits there in dumbfounded silence and doesn't bother me again.

Building a strong vocabulary is important. Without one, people end up using words like "ex-officio-wise" or other forms of doublespeak. A strong vocabulary is the sign of an educated society.

But in the everyday jargon of the common man, an overloaded vocabulary is an AMPHIBOLOGY (an ambiguity of speech, July 6). And if not used properly, these fancy words are nothing but BALDERDASH (nonsense, May 31)

By the way, the word for Wednesday is CORBAN or an offering to God. So don't forget your corbans, You may be tested on these next

It's time to think the unthinkable

Before we leave the budget numbers game, consider the following

Let us suppose one could eliminate with a sweep of the hand every dollar of federal spending in the president's budget with the exception of four items: the Pentagon, Social Security-Medicare, welfare, and interest payments on the national debt.

That would mean eliminating every housing subsidy, every agriculture program, ever transportation project now funded by the federal government, all foreign aid-economic and military-the Education, Energy, Interior departments and all the programs, all veterans'

It would also mean shutting down most of the government itself—Congress, the White House, Supreme Court, FBI and the rest of Justice.

Do all that and the president's budget would still be about $7 billion in the red.

Military spending and Social Security-both declared off-limits by this budget-cutting president-alone account for one half of all proposed spending in this

If the Pentagon budget were opened to cuts, where might they be made? Let us suppose the targets of most criticism-nuclear weapons and the Strategic Defense Initiative (star wars) were abolished. Eliminate every dollar in the president's proposed budget marked for nuclear-weapons research, development, production and deployment, and every dollar marked for "star wars" and you have reduced the Pentagon budget by less than Expose the sacrosanct Social Security system to cuts. he most extravagant action that might be considered politically possible would be to postpone scheduled cost-of-living increases in 1986. The savings? No more than $23 billion.

These theoretical—even fanciful—exercises nonetheless demonstrate just how formidable is the task of honestly dealing with deficits in the range of $150 billion to $200 billion stretching to the far horizon of this decade.

If Ronald Reagan does not want to be remembered as the president who made such oceans of red ink a permanent part of federal policy, it is clear that he—and Congress and the American people- must think the

The real potential savings to be found in the Pentagon budget are in the commitments we now have to defending European and Asian allies. The real potential savings in Social Security are to be found in moving toward voluntary participation, or, at the very least, making it a needs-based welfare program, abandoning the pretext of it being insurance for everyone of a certain age

Public cancels Demo show

Ronald Reagan, in his State of the Union message, called for "a revolution of spirit that taps the soul of America"; he enjoined his countrymen to "produce more, be more, do more," to "nourish and defend freedom and democracy, and to communicate these ideals wherever we can.

Next day the president (b. Feb. 6, 1911) was disparaged as "a kindly old man" by the pubescent House Speaker Thomas P. "Kid" O'Neill (b. Dec. 9, 1912).

True, admitted O'Neill, "the American people are mesmerized" by the old geezer (a k a Wheelchair Reagan). Not so the Kid. Of Reagan's message, the Kid, while break - dancing and popping gum in the House foyer, said: "It was very clever rhetoric, but it covered up the facts."

The facts? Such as that, according to the Nielsen ratings, the Democratic response to Reagan's State of the Union message drew an anemic 7 percent of the viewing audience, as against 43 percent for "Dynasty"?

If the Democrats were a sit - com - as in some sense I suppose they are - the sponsors would cancel them - as in some sense I suppose they did last November

Just what IS the matter with the Democrats? Nothing that a better run of electoral luck - or, much more to the point, a better run of leadership wouldn't fix and indeed probably will fix one of Rebuffed at the presidential level in four of the last five elections, leading Democrats like O'Neill are reduced to going "Nyah - nyah - nyah" at a president they can't lay a political glove on.

The party's State - of - the - Union response was a certified snoozer, soft, gentle, and unfocused. Like cocker spaniel puppies, the Democrats rolled sad eyes. Won't somebody please love us? The show was tailored almost exclusively for the consumption of yuppies. Most Democrats, to their credit, appear to have hated the whole production.

In truth, not much can be said when there isn't much to say. The Democrats gape wordlessly because the Republicans have snatched away their issues: "stolen the Whigs' clothing while they were in bathing," as was said of one Tory political coup in 19th - century England.

Once the Democrats were trusted to keep America: a.) prosperous and b.) free. It is the Republicans who today are so trusted - if not monolithically, at least much more than was true

Reagan since 1981 has successfully revived two basic American strengths - economic and military. Which is why America in the mid - '80s (the federal deficit notwithstanding) bears a striking resemblance to the strong, prosperous America of twenty - five years ago.

Yet whoever thinks Reaganism equals stagnation and stand - pattism should reach for his spectacles. "A Second American Revolution of hope and opportunity (as called for in the State of the Union); a revolution carrying us to new heights of progress by pushing back frontiers of knowledge and space" - stand - patters do not call for such revolutions. In fact, they do not call for

Ronald Reagan is as unlike William McKinley as the Rev. Jesse Jackson is unlike the late Henry M. (Scoop) Jackson. Our 74 - year - old president talks at times like a college senior (which is one reason so many collegians love him.)

Reagan exalts freedom, opportunity, enterprise, growth. "Let us begin," he says, in the State of the Union, "by challenging conventional wisdom: There are no constraints on the human mind, no walls around the human spirit, no barriers to our progress except those we ourselves

Once it was Democrats chiefly who said things like this. Today's Democrats - it is true at least of spokesmen like O'Neill - glower, fold their arms, hunker down. Bah, humbug! Bring back the good

A younger generation of Democrats, while far from Reaganesque in belief, understands something O'Neill cannot get through his snow thatched skull: that, in Lincoln's phrase, they must think anew and act anew. So understanding, they open themselves to collaboration with Republicans on essential, and popular, questions like tax simplification.

The Democrats' problems will work themselves out, though it could take a decade or more. Kid O'Neill is serving his last term. Younger Democrats will again find ways of embracing freedom and prosperity while distinguishing themselves from Republicans and Republican

For now, the initiative, the fun, the exhilaration are with the Republicans, those old fogies who, having at last shucked their wing collars, have learned how to breathe - and even to laugh.

Much mail on oil dispute

This past week we arranged for representatives from the Texas Railroad Commission and Comptroller Bullock's office to meet with us to discuss the impact of the much - publicized controversy regarding the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission rulings and the Railroad Commission's proposed rules. We hope to have more facts in the near future on this subject.

We have received hundreds of letters from people involved in the disputed oil issue in the Panhandle. We try to answer all letters from our district, but we cannot attempt to answer letters from all over the state. I might add that the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission is a federal agency over which I have no jurisdiction.

The elected Railroad Commission has the full responsibility to establish, enforce, and promulgate rules affecting oil and gas. Let me suggest you write the Texas Railroad Commission in regard to the recent rulings by the F.E.R.C. A hearing was held 18 months ago on this subject.

The F.E.R.C. ruling, according to many, will affect every oil and gas well in Texas. Tom Saal from Comptroller Bullock's Office predicts 25 percent of the $1 billion of severance taxes collected in Texas comes from well - producing oil and gas. If this is correct and the F.E.R.C. ruling is allowed to stand, I anticipate a news release of monumental importance will come out of the Comptroller's Office in the near future.

Visitors to the Capitol this week included Betty Henderson of Pampa, who was in Austin in the interest of the State Liberty Association. From the southern end of the district, visitors included Doyce Middlebrook from Shallowater, Joe Rankin from Ralls, and T.J. Taylor from Crosbyton. They were attending a meeting of the Texas Agricultural Cooperative Council. Marshall Pharr and Randy Eminger, both of Amarillo representing Southwestern Public Service, also visited my Capitol Office.

This week I paid my first electricity bill in Austin. The City of Austin supplies the electricity.

We have a very small apartment, all electric, and seldom use the heat. Our bill was $47 for one month and cost 11 - cents per KWH. The same number of KWH in Pampa would cost a little over $30.

When the Legislature is in session, receptions are the order of the day when the sun goes down in Austin. Last week Lois and I made four in one night. In addition to the ones mentioned above, we attended receptions sponsored by the Texas Junior College Association, TSTI, and the Texas Oil Marketers Association

Freddie Venderburg and Dennis Kuempel of Pampa also were in Austin last week and met with the Panhandle Delegation. The four State Representatives - Buck Buchanan, Chip Staniswalis, John Smithee and myself - and Senator Bill Sarpalius- meet for breakfast each Wednesday to discuss matters of common interest.

Dear Abby

Telephone callers need not be hung up over hanging up

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: "Anxious in Kentucky" wrote in part: "My mother said it's an old tradition that the person who makes the telephone call should be the one to end the conversation. Is that true?'

You replied, "This old tradition is news to me.

Well, Abby, it's not news to me. I was raised in the South, and my mother told me the same thing.

"Anxious" also said that she had been late countless times waiting for the caller to end the conversation because her mother had told her that she would talk all night before terminating a conversation she didn't initiate

I consider myself well-mannered, but I doubt if I would go that far. SOUTHERN BELL(E)

DEAR BELL(E): Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 63-year-old woman who grew up in Rhode Island, and I, too, was taught that it was impolite to end a telephone conversation I didn't initiate.

I am now enrolled in a communication course for nurses, and I submit the following from one of our textbooks: "Many people act nonassertively under the mistaken notion that certain behavior defines politeness and consideration for others. They have learned, for example, that it is impolite to end a conversation with someone who has called them; to enter ongoing conversations between two other people; to ask dinner guests to leave when the evening has grown late; to agree with compliments, or to praise themselves. These sorts of behaviors are neither impolite nor aggressive; they are assertive.

DOROTHY BARNETT, SAN GABRIEL, CALIF.

DEAR DOROTHY: Thank you for debunking an outdated rule of etiquette that never made much sense in the first place.

For the callee to wait indefinitely for an inconsiderate caller or a bore to terminate a telephone conversation is, in my opinion, more idiotic than impolite.

Some of the factors to be considered in choosing tools! include the following:

1. Select tools for the jobs to be done. Rather than equip a tool box in one purchase, add one or two good quality tools to the collection as you need them. This approach will result in an assortment of highly useable tools of lasting

2. Consider the amount to be spent. Tools come in a wide range of prices and quality. A good rule in purchasing a hand or power tool is to obtain the best quality for the money spent. This may mean fewer tools than if they were purchased in quantity. 3. Consider quality of tools. The Texas Boys Choir: The kids are great

By BILL HALEY

Guest Reviewer The charming and gifted Texas Boys Choir of Fort Worth made a personal appearance Friday in M.K. Brown Auditorium under the sponsorship of Pampa Community Concert Association.

Heralded by the New York Times as irresistible and rated by Igor Stravinsky as even better than the Vienna Boys Choir, its artistic position must be regarded as formidable to say the least.

Boyhood is very prominent in the annals of music history. Boys have been the sopranos and altos in the all male choirs which have performed for centuries in the service of the Catholic Church. Even after the reformation, these choirs continued to be employed in the Anglican and Lutheran churches. Also, in the Renaissance operas the women's roles were sung by boys because the chivalric code frowned on public performances by women.

Monday night's presentation, actually a sort of variety show, embraced not only singing but also illustrative staging such as lighting effects and choreography (dancing to most of us.) In many cases electronic transcriptions furnished the accompaniments.

The concert was drafted in three sections. The first, sub-titled 'Animals Are Creatures Too.' displayed handsome works by Kodaly, Britten and other lesser composers. Yet, in my opinion, too much time was spent on the subject and not enough on variation in style. In this group the programming was not particularly

The second and third sections dealt almost exclusively with the familiar - Shenandoah, Gershwin, Home On the Range, My Gal Sal and the like.

The finale was a George M Cohan type of poutpourri with singing and dancing ala "42nd Street.

One thing is certain - the TexasBoys Choir did not disappoint. The singing was both masterful and angelic. The footwork was expressive and entertaining. To put it bluntly - the kids were following points will help in assessing whether a tool is of high. intermediate or low quality: (a) Price - expect to pay more for high quality tools. (b) Source of purchase - higher quality tools are obtainable from hardware, lumber, and do - it - yourself retail outlets. Most manufacturers make high as well as lower quality tool lines. Generally, drug stores, variety stores, grocery stores and discount outlets stock intermediate and low quality tools. If unsure about quality in a tool, at least buy from a merchant you can deal with if the tool breaks or doesn't work the first time it's used. (c)

Manufacturer - Reputable manufacturers work to develop quality products. Many back their tools with warranties for repair or replacement.

4. Warranties - Look for a written statement setting forth a guarantee for replacement, repair. or return of your investment if the tool fails under certain conditions outlined in the manufacturer's warranty.

5. Space for Storage and Work -Tools should be kept clean and free of dust and moisture. Hang tools up rather than dumping them into a box where they will be hard to find and subject to damage. To prevent damage from rust, keep them in an area of low humidity. Metal that has rusted slightly can be restored with fine steel wool and kerosene. Regardless of the area, the work place should be uncluttered and dry, well lighted, and accessible to the project.

6. Rental of special tools and equipment - In situations that call for a piece of equipment that will likely not receive frequent use, it may be advantageous to rent the item for the job rather than buy. On the other hand, rental charges for using a tool three or four times can easily run as much as the purchase of a new tool. Let the size of the project as well as possible future use determine whether to rent or purchase special tools or equipment

United States and Soviet Union resume Mideast talks

VIENNA (AP) - U.S. and Soviet delegates today resumed superpower dialogue on the Middle East after a seven-year hiatus, with the Reagan administration cautioning that it expected no diplomatic breakthroughs. Chief U.S. delegate Richard S. Murphy and three American officials whose identities were not disclosed arrived at the Soviet Embassy, venue of the first of two planned rounds, shortly before 9:30

Murphy, an assistant secretary of state, brushed past reporters waiting outside the turn of the century former mansion in the heart of Vienna's diplomatic district. He said he would have no statement to make.

Group fails to block cruise test, plans demonstration

GRAND FORKS AIR FORCE BASE, N.D. (AP) - Anti-nuclear protesters who lost a court bid to stop today's first free-flight test of a U.S. cruise missile in Canada say they will release balloons in the missile's path in an effort to disrupt the test.

A B-52 bomber carrying two unarmed cruise missiles took off at 12:06 a.m. from Grand Forks Air Force Base on what Maj. David MacNamee of the U.S. Strategic Air Command said would be a 121/2-hour mission.

During the test, one missile will drop free of the B-52 over the Beaufort Sea near Alaska and follow a 1,500-mile route down the MacKenzie Valley, ending near Canadian Forces Base Cold Lake, 180 miles northeast of Edmonton, Alberta, MacNamee said.

The 18-foot-long missile will fly free under its own jet-engine power for 41/2 hours, he said. If the test goes as planned, observers will cut the engine by remote control and the missile will drift to Earth by parachute at the Primrose Lake Evaluation Range north of Cold Lake, he said.

Operation Dismantle applied for the injunction Thursday amid rumors the test was imminent.

'em. We owed 'em something,'' the 6-foot-10 Bedford said Monday after contributing 19 points to fourth-ranked Memphis State's 99-75 romp over South Carolina which avenged the Tigers' only Metro Conference loss of the season.

Scientists to study Lake Meredith fish

The Texas Parks and Wildlife determine the preferred habitat, Department and Texas Tech depth and water temperature, to be collected throughout the study University will be initiating a cooperative study this spring to determine the habits of large walleyes and smallmouth bass in Lake Meredith, according to Joe Kraai, a biologist with the TPWD. Kraai said the purpose of the study was to provide fishermen with this information to increase the harvest of trophy fish. He said the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department has studied the fish population of Lake Meredith since the mid-1960's and has monitored the harvest of fish since 1978. "Findings show that even though large walleyes and smallmouth are abundant in the lake, the harvest of these fish are poor," Kraai said.

The study is scheduled to begin in April, Kraai says, and is designed to determine the seasonal distribution and movement patterns of target fish, to see if their activities are related to period to assess food habits, environmental variables, to determine their preferred food items and the preferred size of the food items and to assess the amount of competition between these two species of fish.

To obtain this information, large walleyes (over 5 pounds) and large smallmouth bass (over 3 pounds) will be collected and ultrasonic transmitters will be implanted surgically, Kraai said.

"Tracking will be attempted at least two days each week for a two-year period using an ultrasonic receiver set and hydrophones.' Kraai said. "As individual fish are found, their locations will be plotted on detailed contour maps."

Kraai added that graph recorders and electronic meters will be employed to determine habitat and other variables

"Large fish of both species will "A stomach pump will be utilized and the food items will be identified and measured.

As information is gathered it will be passed on to fishermen through regular news releases and supplied at local concessions, Kraai said.

'At the conclusion of the study, all information will be summarized in a practical fishing pamphlet for free distribution to fishermen." Kraai said. "A creel census will be conducted from 1985 through 1989 to determine if fishermen are using information from the study and if this results in a significantly greater harvester of these trophy fish."

Kraai said funding for this study is supplied from the sales of fishing licenses, excise tax on fishing equipment and private research foundations.

Marathon man to play for Cowboys

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - If he remains healthy over the next 10 months, Todd Fowler will have prepared for and likely played in 40 professional football games in two eagues and successfully worked his way out of the pro football woodwork.

Fowler started 1984 as a little-noticed tight end from Stephen F. Austin University, advised by his coaches that he shouldn't wait for the telephone to ring very early on draft day.

It didn't. The United States Football League Houston Gamblers finally chose him in the 16th round, the 332nd player selected in the draft, but that was the chance the 6-foot-4, 220 Fowler needed.

Fowler became an instant 1,000-yard rusher for the Gamblers and set a USFL record 208 yards in a game against the Denver Gold. Fowler then capped his rookie season by signing a future contract with the National Football League Dallas Cowboys

Sutton, perhaps surprisingly,

"I know a lot of people in Texas think I'm a wild man, but I think it's a good rule because coaches have responsibilities they need to

They should, because the rule

'There's several that did it and they were able to get through it,' Fowler said. "But it will be out of one and into the other. It's going to be a full year's work — 40 games."

Fowler's meteoric rise attracted the interest of the Cowboys last season and the NFL club picked him in the supplemental draft. 'We think Todd Fowler is a very fine football player whose past performance indicates he can help our football team," Cowboys head coach Tom Landry said. Fowler's running back position in the Gamblers' pass-oriented offense is similar to a tight end, his college position. Fowler isn't sure where he'll fit into the Cowboy roster, at tight end or running back.

HOUSTON (AP) - Experts say suicide-prevention courses should be a required part of school curriculum, but they disagree about how it should be implemented and at what age.

A program of training and a system for recognizing students at risk of suicide may be appropriate because of the rising number of teen suicides, says Janel Miller, a psychologist and a consultant to the Clear Creek School district near Houston.

"It's up 300 percent in the last 20 years," said Mrs. Miller. "The rate is pretty significant. It's pretty scary."

Legislators in California and Florida already have mandated suicide education programs in schools as the result of a growing number of teens who take their own lives

In Texas, Sue Mihalik of the Texas Education Agency has proposed suicide prevention education beginning in in elementary school. The Katy Independent School District already has started such a program and in Dallas, Judi Smith of Suicide Prevention of Texas is proposing suicide education be included in curriculums there.

Mrs. Miller says the Clear Creek School district is looking at the possibility of including suicide prevention courses in the junior high curriculum.

Clear Creek experienced six suicides among students or former students within a year's time, triggering a program of crisis intervention in the Houston suburban community.

Mrs. Miller said a program that would introduce the suicide prevention training in the 7th grade would be useful, but such a program in highschool "is too late."

The psychologist said that a program in elementary school would not be useful because children that young have not yet fully grasped the fact of death, much less the concept of suicide.

Ms. Mihalik, however, believes that training to prevent suicides could start in kindergarten with decision-making and study skills, and later, at about age 9, the topic of suicide could be introduced.

"High school is way too late to start something like that," said Ms. Mihalik. 'Students should be taught when they are young how to deal with various situations rather than waiting until they get into a crisis situation."

Some parents and educators believe suicide education should be something that requires parental permission, in the same way that courses in sex education require permission in some districts, said Judi Smith of Suicide Prevention of Texas.

"They believe if you talk about death, students will do it," said Ms. Smith.

Mrs. Miller said Clear Creek and a number of other school districts that have experienced a series of teen suicides recently are now being studied by experts from the Centers for Disease Control. She said they are searching for factors that lead to teen suicides.

MARINA DEL REY, Calif. (AP) — Boxers Ken Norton and Paul Gonzales were among those cheering on Jeff Keith as the the 22-year-old athlete, who lost his right leg to cancer, completed a coast-to-coast run across the United States.

Mayor Tom Bradley also was on hand as Keith. of Fairfield, Conn. finished his 3,300-mile run Monday and got doused with champagne. President Reagan called a few minutes later from Washington to add his congratulations.

'Nancy and I prayed for you all the way," Reagan said. "We knew you had what it takes to complete your journey."

Keith, who began his run on an artificial leg June 4 at Faneuil Hall in Boston and averaged 16 miles a day, told the crowd, "Thank you I knew 'thank you' is an understatement but 1 can't express the gratitude that I feel.

"I know that many doubted me. I know that many believed that I could not complete the run. I always knew I would.

"I wanted to get my message across to the world that I'm not physically handicapped. I was physically challenged.'

Keith learned he had osteogenic sarcoma, or bone cancer, at age 12 after a hockey game. On Christmas Eve 1974, his right leg was amputated above the knee at St. Vincent's Hospital in Bridgeport, Conn.

He was escorted to the finish line by an entourage of fellow students from Boston College, where he was a lacrosse goalie. The trek was sponsored by the American Cancer Society, which said Keith raised $120,000 in contributions.

.S., Japanese veterans of Iwo Jima unite in memorial

IWO JIMA (AP) - American and Japanese veterans of the fierce five-week struggle to take this rocky speck of land returned today to place a memorial above the sands of Iwo Jima in hope so many lives - 27,000 - will never be sacrificed in war again.

Forty years ago today, three divisions of U.S. Marines waded through the Pacific, coming ashore the volcanic ash beaches, 660 miles south of Tokyo.

When the battle ended on March 26, 1945, nearly 21,000 Japanese had been annihilated after fighting from caves and tunnels and being cut off from reinforcements. About 6,800 Americans were killed in the fight, one of the bloodiest battles in World War II's four-year campaign in the Pacific.

American military strategists wanted Iwo Jima seized for use as a base to launch fighter planes to escort B-29 bombers on raids against major cities and industrial complexes in Japan's home islands. Japan surrendered in August 1945, after atomic bomb attacks on Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

The battle for the pork-chop shaped island, three miles wide by less than five miles long, lived on as the subject of the 1949 John Wayne film, "Sands of Iwo Jima" and through a widely-known Pulitzer Prize-winning photograph by Joe Rosenthal of the raising of the American flag by five Marines and a Navy corpsman.

Funding for today's reunion and memorial came from veterans associations in the United States and Japan. The family of Wayne, the late actor, helped pay for the memorial.

In English and Japanese, the granite marker commemorates the "reunion of honor" and expresses hope that "our sacrifices will always be remembered and never be repeated."

The island, filled with sulfur mines, now has small U.S. and Japanese military stations.

Among those returning were two of the approximately 19,000 Americans wounded in the

One was Jacklyn Lucas, a Marine who had just turned 17 when he smothered two Japanese hand grenades with his body on the battle's second day, saving several buddies and wounding himself severely. Lucas, 57, of Bowie, Md. received the United States' highest award for heroism, the Medal of Honor. He later joined the Army and retired in 1965 as a captain.

The other was Col. Charles Waterhouse, 60, of Edison, N.J., the only Marine from the Iwo Jima battle still on active duty. Then a 20-year-old machine gunner, he was shot through the shoulder on the fifth day, during the battle for Mount Suribachi, the island's 550-foot dormant volcano. It was the same day that his regiment, the 28th Marines, raised the American flag on the rocky

U.S. demands equal treatment in Japan's telecommunications market

WASHINGTON (AP) -American officials say they won't play "Uncle Sucker" when Japan opens its telecommunications market to foreigners for the first time April 1.

Since the breakup of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. a year ago, Japanese manufacturers have flooded the U.S. market with equipment ranging from telephones to sophisticated switching gear. Now, the Federal Communications Commission wants U.S. manufacturers to have the same access to Japanese consumers

The Japanese market for communications products is the second largest in the world, behind the United States. And to make sure U.S. manufacturers are treated fairly in that new marketplace, the FCC is studying retaliatory options in the event Japan does not give equal treatment to American and Japanese companies.

In ordering a study of those options, FCC Chairman Mark S. Fowler said he wanted to see how the regulatory program could be used "to assure reciprocal openness" and "a free and open marketplace.'

"They're dealing with Uncle Sam, not with Uncle Sucker," Fowler said a month ago when he confirmed the still uncompleted study was being conducted.

Fowler has discussed the study with Commerce Under Secretary Lionel H. Olmer, who is leaving soon for talks with the Japanese.

Japan's telecommunications system will change from government ownership to private enterprise on April 1. At that time, the Japanese plan to start allowing a private inspection association, controlled by Japanese manufacturers, to participate in the certification process for foreign-made equipment that will be connected to Japan's telephone networks.

In an interview, Fowler said the Japanase inspection association would have authority to enter American factories. That prospect has caused some U.S. manufacturers to fear the

Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy and us $35 worth of Commerce Committee, estimates the telecommunications balance of trade deficit for 1984 was $1 billion.

"The problem is especially acute with Japan, which currently sends telecommunications equipment for every dollar's worth we send them," Dingell said.

One option being studied by the FCC is slowing the processing of applications by Japanese manufacturers or making the FCC's acceptance procedures "a mirroring device" for Japanese certification rules. Most applications to allow a communications product to be sold in the United States are processed within 40 days.

Olmer said the success of failure of the U.S. trade effort would be based on several factors.
