

Students get chance at spotlight

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

The gridiron stars, band marchers, cheerleaders and roundballers have all had their place in the limelight. Now it's time for the rest of the students to shine at the University Interscholastic League's literary and academic contests Friday and Saturday.

While 23 Pampa high school students will compete at the District 5A district UIL meet Friday in Canyon, students from McLean, Lefors and Groom will meet at a Class A district meet at Clarendon College. Four Miami High School students and four Mobeetie Junior High students will attend a literary meet Saturday at Frank Phillips College in Borger.

White Deer high school students have already participated in 2A district competition March 24 in Clarendon. Ten students have qualified for the Regional UIL competition April 12 in Lubbock and two students will go as alternates. Students placing first through third go on to regional competition.

White Deer qualifiers at the Clarendon meet included Brent Bridwell, first in typing, and Dana Walden, first in feature writing.

Also qualifying were Bobbie Martin, second place and Drew Wilson, third place in journalism; Tommy Urbanczyk Ron McIntosh, third place in debate; David Nicholas, third place in science; Cody Wheeler alternate; David Lawrence, third in prose.

White Deer students also qualified for Regional competition with their one-act play, "Waiting for Godot." Ron McIntosh was named best actor in district competition earlier this month with Dave Nicholas in the all-star cast and Travis McIntosh and Keith Tice receiving honorable mention.

Three Miami students took top honors Saturday at the District academic contest in Booker. They are Clint Wheeler in calculator application, Mindee Flowers in number sense and Jamia Clifton for high school spelling.

They will advance to regional competition April 12 in Levelland.

Miami students participating in the Borger meet are Leah Gilbert, Jennifer Signs, Lori Gill and Toni Richardson.

Groom High School students competing at Clarendon are Becky England, Karen Britten, Tim Case.

Funds to allow continuation of Pampa police programs

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

The Panhandle Regional Planning Commission's board of directors has approved continuation of state funding for two Pampa Police Department programs.

Grants for the department's school liaison officer and crime prevention officer were approved by the board Wednesday in Amarillo.

Each of the grants is a continuation of decreasing, five-year funding through the Criminal Justice Division of the governor's office. The first year of each program was totally funded through the governor's office. The amount of the continuing grants has decreased by 20 percent each year thereafter.

The PRPC, which administers the CJ funding for the region, approved payment of $11,862 for the school liaison officer in fiscal year 1986. The approved funding for the fiscal year, which begins in October, is the fourth year of the five-year grant.

The board approved funding of $18,253 for the third year of the crime prevention grant.

The approval of state funding means that the city will pay 60 percent of the cost of the school liaison officer in the next fiscal year. Local funds will pay 40 percent of the cost of the crime prevention program next year, with the state picking up the balance.

A total of $159,514 in criminal justice grants was available for the entire Panhandle region. Nearly all of the available money, including the $30,115 approved for the city police department, was designated to pay for existing programs.

Pampa Police Chief J.J. Ryzman, a member of the board, had requested a grant of $71,339 for a specialized crime unit. However, it was denied by the board, since virtually no money was available for new programs.

Ryzman said two officers would make up the specialized crime unit, which would investigate drugs and organized crime.

All of the programs for which funds weren't available will be forwarded to the governor's office for further study. The office later may decide to approve paying for the specialized crime unit with other state funds, the chief said.

The PRPC board at the Wednesday meeting invited the Pampa Police Department to join the Special Crimes Unit. The unit based in Amarillo investigates serious crimes such as murder. Law enforcement officers from Potter, Randall and Deaf Smith Counties and from the Amarillo and Canyon police departments make up the unit. Ryzman said the invitation to his department will be

MX clears last hurdle

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House today gave final congressional approval for spending $1.5 billion on 21 more MX missiles. The vote cemented the first major legislative victory of President Reagan's second term.

The action ended a two-week legislative ordeal that included four House and Senate votes, a series of roadblocks once thought certain to scuttle the MX program.

Most congressional leaders attributed Reagan's triumph to his intense, skillful lobbying and to his success in linking approval of the MX intercontinental nuclear missile to prospects for an acceptable arms control bargain with the Soviet Union coming out of the Geneva arms talks.

In the final minutes of debate, Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., who is fiercely against the MX, referred to a newspaper photograph showing "a beautiful scene of MX missiles streaking toward the earth."

"When some people see this, they see a demonstration of resolve," Markey said. "When I see it, I see the end of the world."

Rep. Norman Dicks, D-Wash., a leader of House moderates supporting MX spending, said Reagan has kept his word to become deeply involved in arms control efforts.

He said Congress should therefore help the administration achieve some of its military modernization program.

"I believe that if we vote to undercut the president and our arms negotiators at this point we are making a mistake," Dicks said.

Rep. Vic Fazio, D-Calif., said the MX debate has divided the House "as no issue has in the last decade, Democrats against Democrats, Republicans against Republicans."

"We are like two tired fighters in the last round," Fazio said.

Prior to the vote, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, all but conceded defeat.

With the vote just over an hour away, O'Neill said he continued to "hope against hope" that the $1.5 billion appropriation would be defeated. But he conceded that two Democrats who voted against the MX on Tuesday would not be on hand today.

"So we lose two votes," O'Neill said. He did not name the two Democrats or give their reasons for not attending the fourth and final congressional MX vote.

The speaker said that while he had some hope of convincing three Republicans to vote against the appropriation, "I would have to assume the White House has those three pretty well in line," he said.

Sixty-one Democrats voted with the 219-213 majority in the initial House test on MX and O'Neill indicated he has little chance of turning any of them around.

Using an MX analogy, O'Neill joked that those votes "have been hardened in the silo."

"I always hate to declare against myself," he replied. "I hope against hope."

On Wednesday, O'Neill said he was making "an all-out effort" to orchestrate an upset to stop the release of the money to build a second installment of 21 of the intercontinental nuclear weapons.

Barking-dog trial delayed

The precedent-setting trial of a Pampa kennel owner charged with harboring a barking dog has been delayed for about two weeks, according to the owner's lawyer.

Pampa attorney Mark Buzzard said the case previously scheduled for trial Wednesday was delayed at the agreement of all parties.

Suzi Reed, 1105 Juniper, was charged earlier this month with "allowing an offensive condition to exist by allowing dogs to bark and disturb the neighborhood in violation of Ordinance 969 (the city's animal control laws)."

The city ordinance doesn't specifically list dog barking as an offense. City prosecutor Rick Harris claims the charge falls in the category of a canine "nuisance" creating an "offensive condition."

Reed's lawyer said today that he will file a motion to dismiss the charge, challenging the "validity" and "constitutionality" of the ordinance.

He said any ordinance alleging that certain conditions are "offensive" to "any person" is legally vague. Buzzard pointed out that what one person considers offensive; another may not.

The lawyer said he will file his motion and brief some time next week. He said he hopes Municipal Judge Phil Vanderpool will rule on the motion before the case goes to trial.

Reed was the first Pampa resident scheduled for prosecution on the specific charge of having a barking dog. The charge is based on a formal complaint filed by her next-door neighbor, Vearl Ferguson.

For the past 11 years, Reed has operated Suzi's World of Poodles from her home in northwest Pampa. She usually has about 20 adult dogs — AKC-registered toy poodles and Yorkshire Terriers — in her backyard kennel.

Ferguson said the barking animals had disturbed his family and that he can't sell his house because of the residential kennel next door.

Candidates forum scheduled Tuesday

The Legislative Affairs Committee of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce has planned a candidates forum for an Eggs and Issues breakfast Tuesday morning.

Each candidate in the local city commission and school board election will be invited to attend and make a brief two- to three-minute presentation.

Committee members feel the forum will help inform voters about the candidates in the upcoming elections on April 6.

The breakfast will begin at 6:45 a.m. in the Starlight Room of the Coronado Inn.

Reservations should be made with the Chamber office at 669-3241 by 5 p.m. Monday. Cost of the buffet breakfast meal is $5 per person.

Indicted on six counts

Goetz wants full story told

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernhard Goetz says he hopes his indictment on four counts of attempted murder will help bring out the full story of why he shot four teen-agers on a subway train and end the controversy that caused worldwide debate on vigilantism and self-defense.

Goetz was to be arraigned today in Manhattan Criminal Court following his indictment Wednesday by the second of two grand juries to investigate the Dec. 22 shootings.

The first grand jury indicted Goetz, 37, only for felony weapons possession charges. He did not testify before either panel.

In addition to attempted murder, the second grand jury charged Goetz with four counts of fourth-degree assault, one count of first-degree reckless endangerment and one count of second-degree criminal possession of a weapon.

Goetz said he shot the youths in self-defense after one of them "demanded" $5. One of the teen-agers said he told the second grand jury he was merely trying to panhandle Goetz.

"It's probably all for the best. Everything now should come out in the open, with time, and that will end the controversy," Goetz said.

An attorney for Goetz, Barry Slotnick, said he would immediately move to dismiss the new indictment "because it was brought improvidently by the district attorney for partisan reasons."

"The chief judge has said a grand jury will indict a ham sandwich if the district attorney wants it to," Slotnick said Wednesday. "Bernie Goetz today turned out to be a ham sandwich."

Attempted murder is a felony with a maximum penalty of up to 25 years in prison. The assault and weapons possession charges carry up to 15 years, and the reckless endangerment charge carries up to seven years in prison.

Goetz faced up to seven years in prison on the felony gun possession indictment handed up by the first grand jury.

Prosecutors were expected to ask for an increase in his $5,000 bail.

"As soon as the first grand jury action came down, we started to review the case," District Attorney Robert Morgenthau said. "Our job here was to do what we thought was right."

Morgenthau announced March 15 that he would seek the new charges, saying he had a new witness that had not been available to the first grand jury. He refused to identify the witness.

The indictment was issued one day after Goetz refused to address the second grand jury because prosecutors wanted him to waive immunity from prosecution

U.S. trade deficit rises in February

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States' foreign trade deficit climbed to $11.4 billion last month, the worst showing since September, as export sales fell by 7.7 percent, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the February deficit was 11 percent higher than the $10.3 billion deficit recorded in January and was the biggest monthly imbalance since an $11.5 billion deficit last September.

Last year, the United States recorded a record $123.3 billion merchandise trade deficit and Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige has predicted the deficit this year will climb to $140 billion.

The country's poor trading performance has been blamed in part on the high value of the dollar, which makes U.S. goods more expensive and harder to sell overseas while whetting considered further at the board of director's meeting next month.

Most of the criminal-justice funds approved Wednesday pay for salaries of the Pampa officers involved with the two programs.

Mark King serves as Pampa's school liaison officer. Bruce Denham is the department's crime prevention officer.

The school liaison program started on a part-time basis in 1979. It was made a full-time program in fiscal year 1982, the first year of the CJ funding.

King spends time each day at Pampa High School and regularly visits the middle school and elementary schools. Students are given programs on traffic safety, law enforcement, drugs, etc. The officer attends school games and often eats lunch with students. King also works with the "Ident-Kids" program, making a record of youngsters' fingerprints on parents' request.

Denham is the officer inside the full-size "McGruff" costume. The crime dog costume and six puppets are used for programs on how citizens can help "take a bite out of crime."

The department's biggest crime prevention effort is made in the Neighborhood Watch program. The watch program began here in Jan 1983.

Denham meets with Pampa residents at their request to organize the Neighborhood Watch programs. The crime prevention officer explains how the program can reduce the crime rate in a neighborhood. He instructs the citizens on how to watch for crimes in their area and how to report them. The participants choose a block master, who serves as the liaison between the neighborhood and police department.

Once organized, the residents buy "Neighborhood Watch" signs, which are installed on the corners entering the neighborhood.

The members receive a monthly newsletter and are invited to participate in various programs, such as a ladies' handgun course.

In just over two years, more than 50 Pampa neighborhoods have enrolled in the crime-prevention program.

Two top state officials support mandatory alcoholism insurance

AUSTIN (AP) - Two top state officials say they support mandatory alcoholism treatment insurance because of their own personal clashes with alcohol.

"I am an alcoholic, a recovering alcoholic," Comptroller Bob Bullock told a joint meeting Wednesday of the Senate Health and Human Resources and the House Human Services committees.

"I am an alcoholic," Treasurer Ann Richards said. "I speak out in hopes that other people will seek out the same treatment for themselves."

Both were applauded by many in the Senate chamber as they left the witness stand.

The two appeared to support three Senate and House measures that would make it mandatory that health insurance coverage include alcohol and drug dependence treatment for both individuals and group policies. The coverage is now at employers' option.

Sen. Bob McFarland, R-Arlington, author of the Senate version, said his measure would be held in committee for further study and possible amendments.

"Alcoholism is a disease and incurable," Bullock said. "This bill will not cost money, it will save money. Insurance is already paying for the injuries and the illness now. I hope you bring Texas in line with 21 other states."

Bullock said between 1976 and 1981 he was in a hospital about 25 times. "Blue Cross paid about $700 a month on the average in my case," he said.

Will Davis, Austin attorney and former State Board of Education member, opposed the proposal as a spokesman for 125 legal reserve life insurance companies in Texas.

"There is no free lunch," Davis said. "Under this you will take away the right of people to say yes or no."

State pays tribute to Ramsey

Ramsey died Wednesday at 81. A native of San Augustine, he was lieutenant governor from 1951 until 1961, when he resigned to become a member of the Texas Railroad Commission. He retired from the commission in 1977.

Ramsey died of pneumonia, according to a spokeswoman for Seton Medical Center in Austin. He had been hospitalized for five days, said Linda McFarland.

No pass, no play showdown is set Monday

AUSTIN (AP) — A crucial vote on the controversial no pass, no play eligibility rule for high school athletes and others has been scheduled for Monday morning.

The Senate Education Committee, which is trying to "fine tune" last summer's school reform bill, argued over the rule Wednesday but no decision was reached.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, committee chairman, said the Monday date would allow time for preparation of amendments that several members said they would present.

"That's appropriate for this. April Fool's Day," Parker remarked.

Parker also warned that "if this bill gets loaded down with a retreat from excellence in education, it is not going to pass."

The argument began when the committee was offered a subcommittee report recommending a bill by Sen. Bill Sarpalus, D-Canyon, to revise the no pass, no play eligibility rule approved by the State Board of Education.

Currently a student is disqualified from playing or practicing athletics or other extracurricular activities for at least six weeks if he fails to make a grade of at least 70 in any course.

Sarpalus' bill, approved by the subcommittee Tuesday, would require students only to maintain passing grades in the 21 courses required for graduation, not electives. The required courses include English, mathematics, science, social studies and history.

"We say as long as you pass required courses you are eligible to take part in extracurricular activities," Sarpalus said. "If you fail one you can't play again until you make up the grade. It may take one week, or three or even six weeks."

"Actually what you are doing is saying a student taking three required courses and three electives, can fail three of his courses," responded Sen. Kent Caperton, D-College Station.

"You are setting lower standards than you should," said Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville. "You could flunk 23 course at six-week intervals and still participate in athletics. That sends out a terrible message to students of this state."

"My bill provides an incentive to make up their grades," Sarpalus argued.

"I think the State Board of Education needs greater flexibility in setting the grading period," said Caperton. "Why not make it three weeks suspension?"

Parker said he, joined by Caperton, would offer amendments Monday for the three-week period, plus other changes that would recognize efforts of students who take advanced courses.

Malnourished food program approved

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill authorizing $18.4 million for a food program for malnourished Texans has gained the Senate's approval.

The Senate passed 26-3 a bill which provides help for hungry old people, pregnant women and children in the state who can't buy food.

Wednesday's 26-3 vote sent the bill to the House.

A special Senate committee reported that hunger is a serious problem among thousands of Texans, said Sen. Hugh Parmer, the bill's sponsor. "There is indeed hunger in Texas. We do not have starvation but what we have is Texans who regularly miss meals," Parmer, D-Fort Worth, said.

The bill would add $12 million to a program known as Women, Infants and Children. It also appropriates $3.5 million for meals for the elderly home-bound. Parmer said 22,000 elderly are on a waiting list to receive such meals.

The bill also would provide $2.5 million for an emergency nutrition program for the "new poor", those who have worked all their lives and are now facing hunger, Parmer said.

He said many Texans eligible for existing food programs are not receiving assistance because of insufficient funds, lack of awareness of services and complex application procedures.

Parmer said the requests for food at Houston private charities has gone from 23,000 in 1979 to 236,000 in 1983.

"Our private charities in Texas are drowning with requests they can't meet," Parmer said.

Senate Finance Committee Vice Chairman Ed Howard, D-Texasarkana, asked how the program would be funded. He said the state can't afford to give state employees pay raises, much less appropriate $18.4 million for a food program.

Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown, R-Lake Jackson, said the Senate should wait until we see what happens with the rest of the budget.

House panel approves prison budget

AUSTIN (AP) — The House Appropriations Committee has recommended an $842 million, two-year state prison budget that would end free groceries for Texas Department of Corrections employees.

Overall, the budget is the "bottom line" for meeting standards set by a federal judge. "There is no other approach that will meet federal court orders," House Law Enforcement Committee Chairman Ray Keller, R-Duncanville, told the panel Wednesday.

A rider on the bill gives prison workers a 3.4 percent pay hike instead of the free grocery program. The so-called "emolument" program has been criticized as out of control. Keller has said thousands of dollars worth of food has disappeared.

The House panel approved its version of the budget a day after the Senate Finance Committee hammered out a $937.2 million appropriation. The House version has an almost identical bottom line because it allows TDC to sell about $100 million worth of land and use it to build a maximum security prison.

Legislators and state officials are trying to work out a spending plan that would end the 12-year-old prison reform lawsuit. James Lynaugh, TDC deputy director for finance, said the two budgets are very similar, and a House-Senate conference committee should not have much trouble working out the differences.

The House bill also appropriates $20 million for improvements to "ancillary services," such as bathroom and recreation facilities. A recent study showed Texas' prisons are sorely lacking in such facilities.

"The courts have said it's not just beds," Keller said. "You can have 100 beds, but if you only have two shower heads, you're overcrowded."

The Senate version allots $20 million to start construction of a new prison.

House budget writers sifted through a series of budget bill riders, some dealing with oft-criticized areas, including the emolument program.

Rep. Bill Ceverha, R-Richardson, pushed a rider that would bar state money for outside lawyers working on the prison suit. Austin lawyer Rick Gray, a former assistant attorney general, has been paid $438,000 in the past 18 months to represent the state, according to Rep. Mike Toomey, R-Houston.

"It appears to me we are being ripped off," said Rep. Jim McWilliams, D-Marshall.

Rep. Rene Oliveira, D-Brownsville, defended Gray's work, saying it would be counterproductive to fire him now.

Jury considering punishment for young girl's kidnappers

CLEBURNE, Texas (AP) — Jurors who took only 20 minutes to convict two men of the aggravated kidnapping of a 13-year-old Alvarado girl now must decide whether the pair should be sentenced to life in prison.

Michael Lynn Mills of Dallas, 28, and James Wesley Foote, 34, of Arlington, were found guilty Wednesday afternoon of abducting Amy McNeil and demanding $100,000 in ransom from her father, a prominent businessman.

Johnson County District Attorney Dan Boulware said both defendants have prior felony convictions. The punishment phase of the trial was scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. today.

Mills' parents were not surprised by the verdict and said their only hope was for leniency.

"I just hope they'll have the kindness not to go the maximum penalty," said Jimmy Mills of Dallas.

"He's young. He could still have a life," said his wife, Geraldine. Miss McNeil, who was held captive for 2½ days, was a key witness against the pair and is expected to testify again at the trial of three other people accused in the Jan. 11 abduction.

She described how Foote pushed her up against the back window of a car during a running gun battle with authorities.

After a chase of speeds reaching 100 mph, the shootout ended in East Texas with a Texas Ranger and a deputy sheriff racing through a hail of gunfire to rescue the girl.

Miss McNeil also told jurors how her kidnappers took drugs, stole cars and talked about fleeing to Hawaii with the ransom money.

Travels for entertainment

I spent Monday night as I have done nearly every year since I was a student in grade school - I watched the telecast of the presentation of the Academy Awards.

That's an annual event I have missed only a few times in 30 years or so. The first time I missed the broadcast was in 1969; I was in Army basic training camp at El Paso and the drill sergeants wouldn't let me stay up to watch the TV in the lounge.

I also missed the show in 1970 and 1971 while I was serving in Germany. Because of the six hours or so difference in time, it came on in the wee hours of the night and I didn't stay up to catch it.

And I missed most of the show in 1983 while I was visiting my mother in the Intensive Care Unit at an Amarillo hospital. No one else seemed to be interested in the broadcast. I finally located a TV set in one lounge in time to catch the last 20 minutes or so.

After all those years, I feel I can comment on the production aspects of Monday's broadcast from "the entertainment capital of the world."

I enjoyed the hosting for a change. Jack Lemmon gave some dignity to the event, along with his fine cast of co-hosts. I didn't have to listen to any overly long, rambling, embarrassing, humorous monologs a la Bob Hope and Johnny Carson.

But it still took nearly half an hour to get the first award presented, with only six awarded by the end of the first hour. The time could be greatly shortened if they would cut out all the self-serving tributes to Hollywood's greatness.

And despite the need to make money to finance the production, as usual there were way too many commercials.

I would prefer to see more film clips and less flippancy, less historical tributes and shorter song productions.

The "Ghostbusters" segment was overblown, overlong, overcrowded. In contrast, "Let's Hear It for the Boy" was too sparse - the number called for a group of boys dancing around the stage, as is seen in the video version. And "Footloose" lacked the verve and rhythm and appeal of the song scenes in the movie in spite of the large number of dancers.

But the stage design and sets - definitely among the best in years, eye-catching without being eye-boggling.

In fact, the show was one of the best staged Academy Awards shows in memory. Except for the intrusion of Willie Nelson and Kris Kristofferson. Now I can generally appreciate their singing. But tying in their number with the so-called three country movies of the past year was a little too much, especially since they had to give us three songs instead of one brief one.

The most obtrusive thing about the production was their singing. "How do you feel about fooling around from your head down to your toes?" I don't see how that song was appropriate to the introduction of the duo as representing the decency and morality and steadfastness of the farmers in the movies.

(Of course, I feel country-western music presents some of the most immortal songs around, but that's another column.)

The hardest matter in watching the broadcast was trying to decide which nominees to cheer for. It's kind of hard to have a favorite when three of the Best Picture nominees haven't yet been shown in Pampa.

Out of the 30 nominations in the top categories - picture, actor, actress, supporting actor and actress, and director - more than half of them, 16 in all, have not yet made their appearance in the city.

And it's unlikely "The Killing Fields" will make it here despite its seven nominations and three awards. It has a blow against it - it's a Warners Brothers production. You know, like "Gremlins", "Purple Rain", "Tightrope", "City Heat" and "Vision Quest", all for some reason not being shown here.

And "Amadeus", with 11 nominations and eight awards, including Best Picture, Best Actor and Best Director? Only time will tell.

The lack of knowing who to cheer for won't happen with me next year. Despite my loyalty to Pampa, I guess I will just have to start traveling to Amarillo more to make certain I catch all the good films. And, of course, having made the trip, I might as well eat out there, do some shopping, etc.

So much for "Shop Pampa First."

Leukemia victim not giving up despite blood mismatch

HOUSTON (AP) — A leukemia patient whose hopes for a bone marrow transplant from a long-lost brother and sister were dashed because their blood does not match says he "more determined than ever" to live.

"I'm not going to quit. I have no picture in my mind that I am dying. Maybe of old age, but not leukemia," Steve Akin said at a news conference Wednesday.

Doctors determined Tuesday in blood tests of John Davis, 21, of Chicago and Barbara Davis, 28, of Green Bay, Wis., that their bone marrow doesn't match that of Akin, a brother they met for the first time last week.

"It was hard," Akin said of the test results. "But you just can't get down because it's hard to get back up."

Davis, 21, who bears a remarkable resemblance to Akin, said word of the mismatched blood was a "big disappointment."

"Everybody said it was going to be me that was compatible," he said.

Akin, 24, of Victoria, begins intensive chemotherapy today at M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute. Doctors should be able to determine in about two weeks if the treatment is working, he said.

While the bone marrow transplant represented Akin's best chance of survival, doctors have said, traditional chemotherapy could give him a remission.

Akin, Davis, Ms. Davis and two other sisters were among seven siblings separated as children. The two sisters, raised in Texas, had bone marrow incompatible with Akin, so he asked a court to open his adoption records. The records showed his parents placed the other children for adoption in Chicago.

News stories of Akin's search for his siblings led to the discovery of the Davises, who were reunited with Akin in an emotional meeting in Houston last week.

Akin said he found that two other sisters had died.

Akin was diagnosed in 1983 as having acute myelogenous leukemia.

Some farmers have to fail

BY CHARLES VAN EATON

Can the federal government use its tax and budget powers to rescue economically crippled farmers? Should the federal government use its tax and budget powers to rescue economically crippled farmers? The answer to the first question is yes. But if the answer to the second question is no, the first question becomes irrelevant: clearly it is the second question which should be addressed first.

There is substantial evidence that the second question is now being addressed by the powers that be in Washington. It's about time. Students of economics have been addressing the question ever since the federal government began the practice of attempting to redistribute purchasing power from consumers to farmers through the use of farm price support programs - and that was fifty years ago.

FARM PRICE support programs do one thing: they cause prices to consumers to be higher than they would be otherwise and they cause the real purchasing power of taxpayers' incomes to be lower than they would be otherwise. Indeed if they don't do this, they fail to accomplish the income redistribution which they seek to accomplish. But even if they accomplish this, they do not thereby assure security for farmers. And it is that which constitutes both the problem and the reason why there must be a change in what government has been doing.

The result of all this, as economic theory has predicted for fifty years, is the creation of chronic commodity surpluses and (this comes as a surprise to many people) a weaker, rather than stronger, farm economy.

American agriculture is in serious trouble despite the fact that expenditures on farm price support programs have increased from just over $4 billion to just under $20 billion over the last four years. Farmers are faced with unpayable debts, weak prices, collapsing export markets, falling land values, and higher interest rates. Despite the fact that many farmers have already lost their farms through foreclosures, thousands more face foreclosure in coming months. There is, unfortunately, no choice: those banks which specialize in farm loans - small rural banks for the most part - have no more capital to support extension of additional loans on top of the uncollectable loans they have already made.

HOW COULD anything like this have happened? Surely with all the billions of tax dollars which have been spent on agriculture over the past fifty years the nation's agriculture sector should be the healthiest segment of the economy.

But it doesn't work that way. Indeed it can't work that way. The billions have been spent to prop up farming at levels of activity far in excess of what the market for farm products would have supported in the absence of price supports. The U.S. farm economy has been and is now a house of cards waiting to fall.

Farm price support programs have resulted in too much production and too many farmers operating small to medium - sized farms which are uneconomic. By the very nature of farm price supports - payments based on units of output - the largest 12 percent of farms (those with sales in excess of $100,000 per year) received half of all farm subsidies and account for the major part of farm sales. To qualify for a larger share of this largesse, the medium - sized farms have been even more intensively farmed with the result that soil erosion - now estimated at twice what existed during the "dust bowl" days of the 1930's - has increased. Combine these results with the effects of disinflation - which is wonderful for the economy as a whole - and the value of farm land used as collateral for loans has decreased. The nonsense of fifty years has now borne its fruit and by way of bankruptcy and foreclosure the system is basking itself. Not a happy outcome - but, nevertheless, an inevitable one.

CAN GOVERNMENT bail the failing farmers out of their dilemma? Yes, it can. Will it cost a lot of money? Well, if an increase of $16 billion (not counting the $10 billion PIK program or 1983 - 84) over the last four years hasn't arrested the contraction, it isn't likely that anything less than a "ton of money" would work.

But, at best, more money would solve the problem for only a short time. Given the underlying changes which have been occurring in the character of markets and technology, this country does not need the number of farmers it has. No amount of money spent to rescue failing farmers now can change those trends which are generating farm failure.

Government should not continue trying to prop up farm income through farm price support programs. The farmers who "need" it are not needed by the consumers. The farmers who don't need it - and who will get along quite nicely without it - can't make a moral claim against the consuming and taxpaying public for subsidies.

It's long past time to let what must be, be. And that means an end to price support programs. Ending them will not put an end to farming or all farmers - only to some farmers. Sad but true, that's the way the world works. Van Eaton teaches economics at Hillsdale College, Mich...

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Why is gambling by state moral?

They are gambling in Pennsylvania and the state is not getting a cent. And it's legal to boot. Chalk one up for freedom of initiative. And for bleary-eyed legislators who can't be bothered to read their own regulatory handiwork.

While New Jersey steals some $150 million a year from the legalized Atlantic City casinos and many other states make goodly sums from their lotteries, the boys at the Harrisburg are coming away empty-handed.

How in the name of big government could that happen? It happened when State Rep. Frank O'Connell Jr. inserted the word card in legislation intended to decriminalize games such as billiards, bowling and darts in bars. Did O'Connell, a farmer bar owner representing a resort area, intend to allow friendly games of pitch, or throw the door open to blackjack?

He is not saying, but intentional or not, the card trick worked. The bill sailed through the state's 253-member Legislature and right past staunch gambling opponent Gov. Richard Thornburgh. Apparently the pure-minded public officials never thought the word "card" could be expanded to include blackjack, poker and other casino-style games.

The bar owners, however, knew a good thing when they saw it—and set up shop just as soon as the bill became law.

What has happened since then? The people are gambling and the legislators are grumbling. Two bills have been introduced to repeal the gambling measure; the state Senate voted 39-9 for repeal in the preliminary vote.

All this legislative fuss, however, is based on nothing but fear of something the state cannot control. The Philadelphia district attorney told a reporter that without controls, the gambling would lead to "bodies lying around."

Perhaps he forgot that the murder statute is still in force—and even if it weren't, it's questionable that people would rush out to kill each other over a blackjack loss.

Gambling will exist whether the state controls it or not. It is an almost perfect example of victimless crime: you pay your money and take your chances.

But that apparently is too simple a rationale for government rulemakers who, in Pennsylvania and other states, seem perfectly willing to bend on the issue of morality as long as the state runs the game and gets a share of the ensuing loot.

Today's highlight in history:

How to bring bacon home

PALM BEACH, FLA.—Here at the playground of the rich in south Florida, you can pick up a newspaper and find reports from the polo matches on the front page of the sports section where baseball ought to be.

Obviously, polo is very important to the well-heeled of the area who drive out to the matches in their Rolls and then discuss between chukkers how difficult it is to find good help these days.

I have never seen a polo match and neither has anyone I know. A friend of mine, Glenn McCutchen, says he was in Palm Beach on business once and actually attempted to see a little polo.

"I read there was going to be a match at the Palm Beach Polo Club," Glenn reported, "and so I asked somebody at the front desk at my hotel how to get there."

"He looked over at me, turned up his nose and said, 'I'm sorry, sir, but I am not allowed to divulge such information to anyone from the masses.'"

I didn't make it to the polo matches during my stay in Palm Beach, either. When I asked at my hotel for directions to the club, the man behind the desk suggested I go bowling instead.

I was quite discouraged, because the reason I wanted to see a polo match in the first place involved humanitarian effort on behalf of America's beleaguered farmers.

This all began when I received a letter some time ago from one David S. Burre, who has an engineering firm in Atlanta. Mr. Burre pointed out that he and a group of his friends were drinking one evening in a place called the High Horse Tavern and came up with a way for farmers to get out of their financial straits.

The idea goes something like this: In every small town and village in America, there should be established a polo franchise.

Because polo ponies are so expensive, Mr. Burre's idea is to have the game played while mounted on pigs.

"Pig polo," said David Burre. "Finally the layman, for a small investment of $350, could own a thoroughbred - type animal - a polo pig - and think of the money farmers could make selling pigs to pig polo franchises.

Mr. Burre and his friends, who admittedly birthed his idea after a night of considerable consumption, already have devised rules for pig polo. Here are a few:

A period is called a "lard."
No slopping of the pigs between lards.
No rooting, for the home team or otherwise, allowed.

Umpires are licensed USDA inspectors.
I think this idea has merit. It's time we helped the farmer and it's time the rest of us - members of the great unwashed - were given the opportunity to enjoy the great sport of polo, even if we have to ride pigs to do it.

I don't know what the spiffy types in Palm Beach do after a polo match is over, but in David Burre's pig polo, the fun has just begun when the final oink is sounded.

In pig polo, you see, the winners get to celebrate by cooking and eating the losers' mounts.

Tariffs nothing but consumer taxes

BY OSCAR COOLEY

There are 234,000,000 people - give or take a few million - in the United States, and they are all consumers. This is one class that they all belong to.

Most of these people are also producers or distributors of goods or services for the consumers, either directly or indirectly. They produce the goods that the consumers want and they do it so well that this is the best fed, best clothed and best housed country in the world.

However, the U.S. government does things that reduce the consumers' abundance. One such act is to limit or eliminate the import of some goods from abroad. A common way of doing this is to place such a heavy tax or tariff on the import of a certain good that the foreigner can not afford to send it here. Another is to announce a certain quota or number of units of the good that may be imported here - Japanese cars for example - per year. After the quota has been filled, no more may come.

The first of these methods has been applied to steel; the second to automobiles. There are many versions of both methods.

This is called protectionism. The government is "protecting" the U.S. steel and automobile industries from the competition of foreign steel and auto makers.

Note that there is one class of American, the all-inclusive class, the consumers, who far from being protected by these measures is exploited for they are paying more for steel and for automobiles because of the cheaper steel and automobiles that are held out of their reach.

He probably does not realize what is happening to him. A state sales tax of 5 percent or so usually is written on the bill, but this tariff is not written on anybody's bill. It is there nevertheless. It is not a tax you pay the government but a secret extortion which the government enables private firms to make from their customers.

The owners of the steel and auto companies are pleased because they have less competition to meet and therefore are enabled to make more money. The union workers of the companies also exult over the tariffs that exclude foreign imports, for it makes it easier for them to demand and get higher wage rates.

Few Americans are aware that they as consumers are victims of the tariff laws. Certainly, discussion of these laws in the press and on the air media seldom if ever mentions that the consuming public, 234,000,000 strong, are the ones that bear the brunt of these laws. Why not? Why keep it such a deep - dark secret? Why does it go unmentioned on the very floors of Congress where these tariff eggs are hatched?

Are the consumers of no importance? Are the extra costs imposed on them worthy of mention? Tell that to one who has just bought an American-made car when he wanted a Japanese - made one;

It is the consumers' votes that send lawmakers to office. They can as easily vote that officeseeker down as up. In place of the expensive brochure which candidates send voters, some salient facts and figures showing how much the protectionism of Congress is giving industries, but is actually harming the voter - consumers, would be in order.

New business competitors

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — The upcoming managers of American corporations are extremely individualistic, interested and involved in many pursuits, and dislike being considered part of a group, according to a Harvard professor.

"They are profoundly changing American companies," says Professor D. Quinn Mills, labor relations scholar at Harvard Business School and a member of the National Commission on Employment Policy.

Mills' findings were gathered from observations of students, upcoming executives and senior corporate officers who train or instruct at the business school, along with information from case studies and interviews.

He attributes the change, among other things, to greater competition, technology, and social and political influences that make management a more subtle, sensitive and humane matter than heretofore.

Mills contrasts today's less rigid young corporate leader with his more authoritarian predecessors, whose managerial attitudes and skills and even personal behavior were shaped by military demands of World War II.

The big war forced heavy emphasis on strong, quick, decisive leadership and a hierarchy of command that shot clear signals to subordinates. But today's managers, says Quinn, seldom have the military model as an ideal.

Mills believes management in the past failed to treat people with as much respect as they deserved, often failing to accept legitimate questions or suggestions from them. "The employee felt demeaned, like a kid," he said.

The new managers, he comments, believe in treating people as unique, and worthy of being given individualized attention and personalized reward based on merit.

Mills' findings are scheduled for May publication in a volume to be called "The New Competitors," in which he contends that "what distinguishes top performing organizations is their ability to make a well-functioning unit of a group of people, while still identifying and recognizing individual merit."

Whereas older leadership tends to be conservative, Mills says today's young professional manager is neither liberal nor conservative.

Liberals, he points out, believe in free markets for the expression of ideas but not for the sale of goods, while conservatives believe in a free market for goods but not for ideas.

Young professionals, he said at a seminar for news people, believe in a free market for both ideas and goods.

While their beliefs do not fall into the counterculture category, he says, they do not sacrifice other interests for work. And unlike older managers, they are comfortable with minorities and the opposite sex as workplace peers.

They see business as much an avocation as a vocation and, unlike many of their predecessors in middle and upper corporate ranks, do not view it as a burden to be endured in order to get ahead.

The new managers arrive at a time when the marketplace is being reshaped by intense competition that many observers trace to imports, a lessening of government regulations in various industries, and a decline of unions.

The new management system they are evolving, Mills concludes, "holds the potential for American companies to recapture the ability to compete more successfully in our own and foreign markets."

Non-essential UN personnel to withdraw from Lebanon

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United Nations will withdraw all non-essential employees from Lebanon because of the recent rash of kidnappings of foreigners in the country, a U.N. spokesman said.

U.N. spokesman Joe Sills said Wednesday each U.N. agency has been asked to examine its staff and determine which members are not absolutely essential.

Sills was responding to reporters' questions about the abduction Monday in Beirut of British journalist Alec Collett, 63, who was on assignment for the U.N. Relief and Works Agency.

Later today, a group that has claimed that it killed two British diplomats in Greece and India last year claimed responsibility for Collett's abduction.

A statement delivered to a foreign news agency office in Beirut said the "Revolutionary Organization of Socialist Moslems" had kidnapped Collett, and accused him of being a British spy.

Nine foreigners have disappeared in Lebanon in the past two weeks. On Wednesday, a kidnapped Briton, Geoffrey Nash, was released unharmed near his home in west Beirut. Nash, a 60-year-old metallurgist, was the first of nine Westerners kidnapped or reported missing in Lebanon since March 14.

Judge finds HUD is in contempt, orders loan denials re-evaluation

CHICAGO (AP) — Thousands of foreclosure victims nationwide could regain their homes under a federal court ruling that U.S. housing officials denied them access to a mortgage-assistance program, an attorney says.

One former and two current officials of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development have been found in contempt of court because they ignored court-ordered guidelines for evaluating mortgage relief eligibility.

U.S. District Judge Hubert L. Will ruled Friday that HUD must re-evaluate the cases of an estimated 32,000 homeowners nationwide who were denied access to the mortgage program.

Will said his decision was "overlong and frequently repetitive or redundant" to make sure "HUD will have no basis for ignoring, evading or misunderstanding" its intent.

Richard Buchheit, director of HUD's single-family mortgage division in Washington, was among those named in Will's 102-page ruling. Buchheit declined comment when reached by telephone at his Virginia home Wednesday night.

"We're still studying the judge's decision," he said.

Homeowners who were improperly denied mortgage relief from 1980 to 1983 and who lost their homes through default will be eligible to have them returned, receive homes of comparable value or "whatever additional relief" is needed, Will ruled.

In a 1979 consent decree, HUD agreed to establish a mortgage assignment program in which homeowners who had defaulted on federally insured mortgages could apply to have HUD take over their mortgages.

Under that program, HUD would reschedule the payments with more liberal terms, allowing the homeowners to keep their homes. To be eligible, a default would have to have been caused by circumstances beyond the homeowner's control.

The 1979 decree said HUD was to determine the date of default as 30 days after homeowners made their last mortgage payment, said attorney William Wilen, who represented the Legal Assistance Foundation of Chicago in a class-action lawsuit against the agency.

Wilen said Wednesday HUD violated the decree by setting up an "artificial rule to deny people access to the program," using a two-month period instead of one month to determine the homeowners' default date.

Former HUD official Philip Forest was involved in the two-month rule and named in Will's opinion, along with Buchheit and his assistant, Sally McCormick, Wilen said.

Some farmers have to fail

BY CHARLES VAN EATON

Can the federal government use its tax and budget powers to rescue economically crippled farmers? Should the federal government use its tax and budget powers to rescue economically crippled farmers? The answer to the first question is yes. But if the answer to the second question is no, the first question becomes irrelevant: clearly it is the second question which should be addressed first.

There is substantial evidence that the second question is now being addressed by the powers that be in Washington. It's about time. Students of economics have been addressing the question ever since the federal government began the practice of attempting to redistribute purchasing power from consumers to farmers through the use of farm price support programs - and that was fifty years ago.

FARM PRICE support programs do one thing: they cause prices to consumers to be higher than they would be otherwise and they cause the real purchasing power of taxpayers' incomes to be lower than they would be otherwise. Indeed if they don't do this, they fail to accomplish the income redistribution which they seek to accomplish. But even if they accomplish this, they do not thereby assure security for farmers. And it is that which constitutes both the problem and the reason why there must be a change in what government has been doing.

The result of all this, as economic theory has predicted for fifty years, is the creation of chronic commodity surpluses and (this comes as a surprise to many people) a weaker, rather than stronger, farm economy.

American agriculture is in serious trouble despite the fact that expenditures on farm price support programs have increased from just over $4 billion to just under $20 billion over the last four years. Farmers are faced with unpayable debts, weak prices, collapsing export markets, falling land values, and higher interest rates. Despite the fact that many farmers have already lost their farms through foreclosures, thousands more face foreclosure in coming months. There is, unfortunately, no choice: those banks which specialize in farm loans - small rural banks for the most part - have no more capital to support extension of additional loans on top of the uncollectable loans they have already made.

HOW COULD anything like this have happened? Surely with all the billions of tax dollars which have been spent on agriculture over the past fifty years the nation's agriculture sector should be the healthiest segment of the economy.

But it doesn't work that way. Indeed it can't work that way. The billions have been spent to prop up farming at levels of activity far in excess of what the market for farm products would have supported in the absence of price supports. The U.S. farm economy has been and is now a house of cards waiting to fall.

Farm price support programs have resulted in too much production and too many farmers operating small to medium - sized farms which are uneconomic. By the very nature of farm price supports - payments based on units of output - the largest 12 percent of farms (those with sales in excess of $100,000 per year) received half of all farm subsidies and account for the major part of farm sales. To qualify for a larger share of this largesse, the medium - sized farms have been even more intensively farmed with the result that soil erosion - now estimated at twice what existed during the "dust bowl" days of the 1930's - has increased.

Combine these results with the effects of disinflation - which is wonderful for the economy as a whole - and the value of farm land used as collateral for loans has decreased. The nonsense of fifty years has now borne its fruit and by way of bankruptcy and foreclosure the system is cleansing itself. Not a happy outcome - but, nevertheless, an inevitable one.

CAN GOVERNMENT bail the failing farmers out of their dilemma? Yes, it can. Will it cost a lot of money? Well, if an increase of $16 billion (not counting the $10 billion PIK program or 1983 - 84) over the last four years hasn't arrested the contraction, it isn't likely that anything less than a "ton of money" would work.

But, at best, more money would solve the problem for only a short time. Given the underlying changes which have been occurring in the character of markets and technology, this country does not need the number of farmers it has. No amount of money spent to rescue failing farmers now can change those trends which are generating farm failure.

Government should not continue trying to prop up farm income through farm price support programs. The farmers who "need" it are not needed by the consumers. The farmers who don't need it - and who will get along quite nicely without it - can't make a moral claim against the consuming and taxpaying public for subsidies.

It's long past time to let what must be, be. And that means an end to price support programs. Ending them will not put an end to farming or all farmers - only to some farmers. Sad but true, that's the way the world works.

Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Why is gambling by state moral?

They are gambling in Pennsylvania and the state is not getting a cent. And it's legal to boot. Chalk one up for freedom of initiative. And for bleary-eyed legislators who can't be bothered to read their own regulatory handiwork.

While New Jersey steals some $150 million a year from the legalized Atlantic City casinos and many other states make goodly sums from their lotteries, the boys at the Harrisburg are coming away empty-handed.

How in the name of big government could that happen? It happened when State Rep. Frank O'Connell Jr. inserted the word card in legislation intended to decriminalize games such as billiards, bowling and darts in bars. Did O'Connell, a farmer bar owner representing a resort area, intend to allow friendly games of pitch, or throw the door open to blackjack?

He is not saying, but intentional or not, the card trick worked. The bill sailed through the state's 253-member Legislature and right past staunch gambling opponent Gov. Richard Thornburgh. Apparently the pure-minded public officials never thought the word "card" could be expanded to include blackjack, poker and other casino-style games.

The bar owners, however, knew a good thing when they saw it—and set up shop just as soon as the bill became law.

What has happened since then? The people are gambling and the legislators are grumbling. Two bills have been introduced to repeal the gambling measure; the state Senate voted 39-9 for repeal in the preliminary vote.

All this legislative fuss, however, is based on nothing but fear of something the state cannot control. The Philadelphia district attorney told a reporter that without controls, the gambling would lead to "bodies lying around."

Perhaps he forgot that the murder statute is still in force—and even if it weren't, it's questionable that people would rush out to kill each other over a blackjack loss.

Gambling will exist whether the state controls it or not. It is an almost perfect example of victimless crime: you pay your money and take your chances.

But that apparently is too simple a rationale for government rulemakers who, in Pennsylvania and other states, seem perfectly willing to bend on the issue of morality as long as the state runs the game and gets a share of the ensuing loot.

Today's highlight in history:
On March 28, 1979, the worst commercial nuclear accident in history occurred inside the No. 2 reactor at Pennsylvania's Three Mile Island power plant. A cooling system malfunctioned, damaging the reactor's core and causing leakage of radioactivity into the atmosphere.

How to bring bacon home

PALM BEACH, FLA.—Here at the playground of the rich in south Florida, you can pick up a newspaper and find reports from the polo matches on the front page of the sports section where baseball ought to be.

Obviously, polo is very important to the well-heeled of the area who drive out to the matches in their Rolls and then discuss between chukkers how difficult it is to find good help these days.

I have never seen a polo match and neither has anyone I know. A friend of mine, Glenn McCutchen, says he was in Palm Beach on business once and actually attempted to see a little polo.

"I read there was going to be a match at the Palm Beach Polo Club," Glenn reported, "and so I asked somebody at the front desk at my hotel how to get there."

"He looked over at me, turned up his nose and said, 'I'm sorry, sir, but I am not allowed to divulge such information to anyone from the masses.'"

I didn't make it to the polo matches during my stay in Palm Beach, either. When I asked at my hotel for directions to the club, the man behind the desk suggested I go bowling instead.

I was quite discouraged, because the reason I wanted to see a polo match in the first place involved humanitarian effort on behalf of America's beleaguered farmers.

This all began when I received a letter some time ago from one David S. Burre, who has an engineering firm in Atlanta. Mr. Burre pointed out that he and a group of his friends were drinking one evening in a place called the High Horse Tavern and came up with a way for farmers to get out of their financial straits.

The idea goes something like this: In every small town and village in America, there should be established a polo franchise.

Because polo ponies are so expensive, Mr. Burre's idea is to have the game played while mounted on pigs.

"Pig polo," said David Burre. "Finally the layman, for a small investment of $350, could own a thoroughbred - type animal - a polo pig - and think of the money farmers could make selling pigs to pig polo franchises.

Mr. Burre and his friends, who admittedly birthed his idea after a night of considerable consumption, already have devised rules for pig polo. Here are a few:

A period is called a "lard."
No slopping of the pigs between lards.
No rooting, for the home team or otherwise, allowed.

Umpires are licensed USDA inspectors.
I think this idea has merit. It's time we helped the farmer and it's time the rest of us - members of the great unwashed - were given the opportunity to enjoy the great sport of polo, even if we have to ride pigs to do it.

I don't know what the spiffy types in Palm Beach do after a polo match is over, but in David Burre's pig polo, the fun has just begun when the final oink is sounded.

In pig polo, you see, the winners get to celebrate by cooking and eating the losers' mounts.

Tariffs nothing but consumer taxes

BY OSCAR COOLEY

There are 234,000,000 people - give or take a few million - in the United States, and they are all consumers. This is one class that they all belong to.

Most of these people are also producers or distributors of goods or services for the consumers, either directly or indirectly. They produce the goods that the consumers want and they do it so well that this is the best fed, best clothed and best housed country in the world.

However, the U.S. government does things that reduce the consumers' abundance. One such act is to limit or eliminate the import of some goods from abroad. A common way of doing this is to place such a heavy tax or tariff on the import of a certain good that the foreigner can not afford to send it here. Another is to announce a certain quota or number of units of the good that may be imported here - Japanese cars for example - per year. After the quota has been filled, no more may come.

The first of these methods has been applied to steel; the second to automobiles. There are many versions of both methods.

This is called protectionism. The government is "protecting" the U.S. steel and automobile industries from the competition of foreign steel and auto makers.

Note that there is one class of American, the all-inclusive class, the consumers, who far from being protected by these measures is exploited for they are paying more for steel and for automobiles because of the cheaper steel and automobiles that are held out of their reach.

He probably does not realize what is happening to him. A state sales tax of 5 percent or so usually is written on the bill, but this tariff is not written on anybody's bill. It is there nevertheless. It is not a tax you pay the government but a secret extortion which the government enables private firms to make from their customers.

The owners of the steel and auto companies are pleased because they have less competition to meet and therefore are enabled to make more money. The union workers of the companies also exult over the tariffs that exclude foreign imports, for it makes it easier for them to demand and get higher wage rates.

Few Americans are aware that they as consumers are victims of the tariff laws. Certainly, discussion of these laws in the press and on the air media seldom if ever mentions that the consuming public, 234,000,000 strong, are the ones that bear the brunt of these laws. Why not? Why keep it such a deep - dark secret? Why does it go unmentioned on the very floors of Congress when these tariff eggs are handed?

Are the consumers of no importance? Are the extra costs imposed on them worthy of mention? Tell that to one who has just bought an American-made car when he wanted a Japanese-made one.

It is the consumers' votes that send lawmakers to office. They can as easily vote that office seeker down as up. In place of the expensive brochure which candidates send voters, some salient facts and figures showing how much the protectionism of Congress is giving industries, but is actually harming the voter - consumers, would be in order.

"Another corporate pirate to see you, sir!"

New business competitors

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — The upcoming managers of American corporations are extremely individualistic, interested and involved in many pursuits, and dislike being considered part of a group, according to a Harvard professor.

"They are profoundly changing American companies," says Professor D. Quinn Mills, labor relations scholar at Harvard Business School and a member of the National Commission on Employment Policy.

Mills' findings were gathered from observations of students, upcoming executives and senior corporate officers who train or instruct at the business school, along with information from case studies and interviews.

He attributes the change, among other things, to greater competition, technology, and social and political influences that make management a more subtle, sensitive and humane matter than heretofore.

Mills contrasts today's less rigid young corporate leader with his more authoritarian predecessors, whose managerial attitudes and skills and even personal behavior were shaped by military demands of World War II.

The big war forced heavy emphasis on strong, quick, decisive leadership and a hierarchy of command that shot clear signals to subordinates. But today's managers, says Quinn, seldom have the military model as an ideal.

Mills believes management in the past failed to treat people with as much respect as they deserved, often failing to accept legitimate questions or suggestions from them. "The employee felt demeaned, like a kid," he said.

The new managers, he comments, believe in treating people as unique, and worthy of being given individualized attention and personalized reward based on merit.

Mills' findings are scheduled for May publication in a volume to be called "The New Competitors," in which he contends that "what distinguishes top performing organizations is their ability to make a well-functioning unit of a group of people, while still identifying and recognizing individual merit."

Whereas older leadership tends to be conservative, Mills says today's young professional manager is neither liberal nor conservative.

Liberals, he points out, believe in free markets for the expression of ideas but not for the sale of goods, while conservatives believe in a free market for goods but not for ideas.

Young professionals, he said at a seminar for news people, believe in a free market for both ideas and goods.

While their beliefs do not fall into the counterculture category, he says, they do not sacrifice other interests for work. And unlike older managers, they are comfortable with minorities and the opposite sex as workplace peers.

They see business as much an avocation as a vocation and, unlike many of their predecessors in middle and upper corporate ranks, do not view it as a burden to be endured in order to get ahead.

The new managers arrive at a time when the marketplace is being reshaped by intense competition that many observers trace to imports, a lessening of government regulations in various industries, and a decline of unions.

The new management system they are evolving, Mills concludes, "holds the potential for American companies to recapture the ability to compete more successfully in our own and foreign markets."

Judge finds HUD is in contempt, orders loan denials re-evaluation

CHICAGO (AP) — Thousands of foreclosure victims nationwide could regain their homes under a federal court ruling that U.S. housing officials denied them access to a mortgage-assistance program, an attorney says.

One former and two current officials of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development have been found in contempt of court because they ignored court-ordered guidelines for evaluating mortgage relief eligibility.

U.S. District Judge Hubert L. Will ruled Friday that HUD must re-evaluate the cases of an estimated 32,000 homeowners nationwide who were denied access to the mortgage program.

Will said his decision was "overlong and frequently repetitive or redundant" to make sure "HUD will have no basis for ignoring, evading or misunderstanding" its intent.

Richard Buchheit, director of HUD's single-family mortgage division in Washington, was among those named in Will's 102-page ruling. Buchheit declined comment

when reached by telephone at his Virginia home Wednesday night.

"We're still studying the judge's decision," he said.

Homeowners who were improperly denied mortgage relief from 1980 to 1983 and who lost their homes through default will be eligible to have them returned, receive homes of comparable value or "whatever additional relief" is needed, Will ruled.

In a 1979 consent decree, HUD agreed to establish a mortgage assignment program in which homeowners who had defaulted on federally insured mortgages could apply to have HUD take over their mortgages.

Under that program, HUD would reschedule the payments with more liberal terms, allowing the homeowners to keep their homes. To be eligible, a default would have to have been caused by circumstances beyond the homeowner's control.

The 1979 decree said HUD was to determine the date of default as 30 days after homeowners made their last mortgage payment, said attorney William Wilen, who represented the Legal Assistance Foundation of Chicago in a class-action lawsuit against the agency.

Wilen said Wednesday HUD violated the decree by setting up an "artificial rule to deny people access to the program," using a two-month period instead of one month to determine the homeowners' default date.

Former HUD official Philip Forest was involved in the two-month rule and named in Will's opinion, along with Buchheit and his assistant, Sally McCormick, Wilen said.

Non-essential UN personnel to withdraw from Lebanon

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United Nations will withdraw all non-essential employees from Lebanon because of the recent rash of kidnappings of foreigners in the country, a U.N. spokesman said.

U.N. spokesman Joe Sills said Wednesday each U.N. agency has been asked to examine its staff and determine which members are not absolutely essential.

Sills was responding to reporters' questions about the abduction Monday in Beirut of British journalist Alec Collett, 63, who was on assignment for the U.N. Relief and Works Agency.

Later today, a group that has claimed that it killed two British diplomats in Greece and India last year claimed responsibility for Collett's abduction.

A statement delivered to a foreign news agency office in Beirut said the "Revolutionary Organization of Socialist Moslems" had kidnapped Collett, and accused him of being a British spy.

Nine foreigners have disappeared in Lebanon in the past two weeks. On Wednesday, a kidnapped Briton, Geoffrey Nash, was released unharmed near his home in west Beirut. Nash, a 60-year-old metallurgist, was the first of nine Westerners kidnapped or reported missing in Lebanon since March 14.

Bright dresses greet season

CHANEL WHITE ENSEMBLE — A white silk cardigan jacket is worn over a strapless gown with black velvet bodice and narrow white silk skirt in this ensemble from the fall-winter ready-to-wear collection of Chanel shown Monday. As memories of the late Coco Chanel's designs, the ensemble features a bow and gold chains. (AP Wirephoto)

NEW YORK (NEA) — There's something about the stirring of spring and its brighter days that calls for clothes to be colorful and pretty. In fashion, only dresses really look springy and many young designers have been concentrating on new ideas in dresses for this season.

At the showrooms of Rod Owens, for example, a headquarters for new names, dresses vary from the architectural, multicolored panel designs of Abrizz to the abstractly patterned sequin shifts of Sister Max. She uses subtle earth tones to soften the sequin glitter, but the prints of Issa's bias-skirt, sashed or tunic dresses are splashy in orange, brown and white or red, black and yellow.

When not working with prints, designers like their dresses put together in big sections of contrasting colors. Steven Stolman vertically splits his full-skirted Jasco cotton jersey dress into two uneven halves of yellow and fuchsia. Stolman also likes the drama of wide-shouldered, tunic-like dressing for day. These may feature a slim body in navy-and-white stripes with a wide tunic hem in navy.

The split-color theme also appears in other collections in different ways. Levino Verna, for example, uses abstract shaped appliques in red, yellow, turquoise and navy over the bodice of a white silk jacquard luncheon dress. The dress has full sleeves and a sashed waist. Plaids come naturally in color contrasts. Now they appear in spring dresses, such as the blue-and-olive block plaid in linen-cotton-silk blend used by Enna Vides at Talia for a sashed blouson-style. Her design features a ripple skirt and cuff collar accenting its wide shoulders.

Many designers like the clean, bright look of such classic print themes as polka dots. Oscar de la Renta's white, navy and red dress has an air of the '50s, with its short puffed sleeves. Richard Warren uses a navy splatter-dot print on white for a sashed '50s dress. Morton Myles goes to coin-dot size for his slim silk dress with open "sweetheart" neckline, draped bodice and empire waist.

Graphics prints from sportswear intrigue dress designers, such as the navy-and-emerald scribble print on gray silk used by Joseph Gargiulo for Abe Schrader. The dress is soft and the knife-pleat skirt and shirt-sleeves show sportswear influence, as does his two-piece blouson in tweed print silk with knit trim.

Spring dress silhouettes are divided between the sportsoft trend already seen for some time and the newer short, fitted look. Bill Blass does it as a slim purple linen tunic over a brief camel skirt. Geoffrey Beene makes his tunics soft, Russian-influenced, over black skirts, often matching the hosiery to the orange, turquoise or oyster color of the tunic.

Certain themes always pop up for more than a sailor collar on a slim spring, such as the nautical look, which for Sara McNamara may be no linen dress in sections of pink, vanilla and pale orange.

Sports change look of women's clothing

By Florence De Santis

NEW YORK (NEA) — In the 1850s, women could play croquet in ordinary hoop skirts. When tennis came along in the 1870s, they had to abandon the bustle fashion of the day for a simpler silhouette. It was the first move toward sportswear, although at the same time, ladies in day dress — corsets and all — played ice tennis.

All this and more can be seen in the current exhibition at New York's Fashion Institute of Technology. Called "All-American: A Sportswear Tradition," it shows the involvement of American women with sports and clothes for them during more than a century.

Perhaps the first really designed sports costume appeared in the Gay '90s, when bicycling became a new craze. Women couldn't get their skirts over the center bar, and someone had the idea to adapt the bloomer into a long, full-pleated style that met the tops of buttoned gaiters. The jacket, fitted and double-breasted, had the then-fashionable leg o'mutton sleeves. Despite the heavy wool fabric of the day, it was quite a jaunty look.

Claire McCardell even revived it in a slimmer knicker length with a hooded sweater in 1940, and Perry Ellis in his 1981 collection did it in full-length imitation as the "Cossack" costume.

Women's constant pressure to get into sports created many advances toward more comfortable fashions. In the same '90s, the first short skirts appeared in shooting costumes for upper class women. Again, the skirts met the tops of knee-high gaiters, so modesty was preserved. In 1907, swimming star Annette Kellerman got arrested for taking the sleeves off her swimsuit, but she kept on the required stockings. Actually, the resulting look was rather like today's bodysuits. In the 1920s, Suzanne Lenglen created a tennis scandal with her sleeveless and "short" tennis dress.

The FIT exhibit also includes the many garments women took from men in the quest for action clothes. The cardigan, the raglan sleeve and the leotard were all first popularized by the men for whom they're named, but by 1900 Charles Dana Gibson was already sketching some of his Gibson girls in sailor costumes and slouchy cardigan sweaters.

GAY '90s bicyclist, as seen in the exhibition "All-American: A Sportswear Tradition," at New York's Fashion Institute of Technology, started women wearing pants.

DEAR ABBY: I am 46 years old and my husband is 44. We have been married two years—his third, my second. My problem is that this man is insatiable in the bedroom! He's been this way ever since we were married. He wants sex at least three times a day. On weekends we spend the whole day in bed. I thought he would eventually slow down, but his sex drive is as strong as ever.

He's a model husband in every other way, but I am exhausted from all this lovemaking. I feel like a prostitute who has to deliver on demand, only I'm not getting paid for it.

Once a day would be plenty for me, but he insists it's not enough for him. I want to be a good wife, and I'm afraid if I deny him he will go elsewhere to satisfy himself. What can I do? I don't want to lose him.

EXHAUSTED IN PALO ALTO

and I am furious! Someone with whom I correspond sent my letter on for others to read without asking my permission to do so. Would you call that ethical?

Is it necessary for a person to state in so many words that the writer does not want his/her letter sent to another? Or shouldn't that be assumed?

I would appreciate your printing this. I think I know what you will say, but some people need to see it in black and white.

FUMING IN BURLINGTON, IOWA

DEAR FUMING: Is it ethical? No. Don't assume anything. Remember, the pen is not only mightier than the sword, it can be equally dangerous. So if you're concerned about your letters being recycled, write nothing incriminating, or write nothing at all.

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, also available in Spanish, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

DEAR EXHAUSTED: Look at the facts: Your husband's sexual appetite far exceeds yours, but you continue to deliver on demand like an unpaid prostitute for fear you'll lose him. Meanwhile, you're exhausted.

My dear lady, you must tell your "model husband" exactly how you feel. If you lack the courage, see a counselor who will surely call your husband in, since he is part of the problem. You need to be assured that your feelings are every bit as important as his. And he needs to know it, too. If you married for love, perhaps you have the wrong man. And if he married for sex, perhaps he has the wrong woman.

DEAR ABBY: It happened again.

Reagan bombs out on stage

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's long career as a movie actor, which is often credited with giving him a mastery of the television medium, hasn't served him so well in recent stage performances.

good-natured audience hardly seemed to mind. Home in his own backyard, however, Reagan fared less well last weekend when a couple of his jokes fell flat at the Gridiron Club's supposedly off-the-record annual dinner at which the press and the farmers." The line might have gone over better had Reagan not just vetoed legislation to give credit relief to the financially strapped agricultural community.

Nor did the audience go for the president's advice not to worry about rumors he was seeing a psychiatrist three times a week.

Using a journalistic device to circumvent the club's off-the-record rule, The Washington Post sent a reporter to interview people who had attended the dinner and reported what Reagan had said, touching off a tornado among farm-state lawmakers.

An AP News Analysis

invited politicians devote an evening to lampooning the pols.

Even loyal White House aides acknowledged that the president "bombed" when he suggested "we should keep the grain and export

In Quebec last week for a "Shamrock Summit" with Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, the president and Mrs. Reagan made a brief appearance on stage with the Mulroneys at the finale of a black-tie gala performed in their honor.

American and Canadian officials had hinted the two leaders would sing a duet or put on some sort of a skit in keeping with the spirit of St. Patrick's Day and their Irish heritage.

But as the cast sang and swayed to the tune of "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," Reagan, looking distinctly uncomfortable and unrehearsed, swayed against the tempo and mouthed the words to the old classic inaudibly and out of range of the microphone.

Mulroney, a younger ham proud of his baritone, took the mike himself for a two-line solo that pointedly upstaged his American guest.

Law officers agree with deadly force ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Supreme Court ruling limiting police authority to shoot unarmed, fleeing suspects is attracting support from many law enforcement officials who say they already abide by the new guidelines.

The ruling is "just and proper," said Robert Angrisani, spokesman for the International Association of Chiefs of Police in Gaithersburg, Md. Association members approved the guidelines two years ago "and now the Supreme Court has agreed with us," he said.

The court ruled, 6-3, Wednesday that police may not shoot unarmed, fleeing criminal suspects who pose no apparent threat to the officers or the public. The court said a Tennessee law that allowed unrestrained use of deadly force violated the constitutional rights of suspects.

Nearly half the states in the nation have laws similar to Tennessee. But in many of those states, local police departments for years have banned shooting of fleeing suspects who are not considered dangerous.

Support for the court's ruling was not unanimous.

Tennessee State Rep. Joe Kent, a Memphis police lieutenant, said, "It's a black day for your police officers and it's a blacker day for your law-abiding citizens."

But Assistant City Attorney Charles V. Holmes of Memphis said the local police department had been abiding by the new strictures prior to the ruling. The city's previously revised deadly force policy "is consistent with today's ruling," he said.

The decision stems from a 1974 incident in Memphis in which police shot and killed Edward Garner, 15, as the boy was fleeing from a house burglary.

Wednesday's ruling means the city of Memphis may be forced to pay damages to the boy's father, Cleamtee Garner, whose 1975 lawsuit charged police with violating the boy's rights.

The policeman who shot young Garner in the back of the head said the boy, who appeared to be unarmed, would have escaped if the officer did not fire.

The Supreme Court decision upheld a 1983 federal appeals court ruling that said Tennessee's law on deadly force was unconstitutional.

The high court rejected arguments by Tennessee law enforcement officials that police will be hampered unnecessarily if they are forced to make split-second decisions on when it is permissible to shoot an escaping suspect.

States still may authorize police to shoot to kill armed suspects or those suspected of crimes involving "serious physical harm."

In other decisions Wednesday, the court:

—Ruled by a 4-4 vote that

Scarsdale, N.Y., must permit the placing of a Nativity scene in a village park as long as non-religious displays are allowed there.

Such tie votes, which occurred because of the absence of Justice Lewis Powell, uphold the lower court rulings, but do not set any nationwide precedent because it is possible in some future case the same issue will be decided by all nine justices.

—Made it easier for local governments nationwide to fend off lawsuits that charge them with violating federal antitrust laws.

The ruling is likely to protect numerous communities that run sewer systems, cable television, hospitals and mass transit systems as monopolies.

Workers evacuated from burning rig

HOUSTON (AP) — An oil rig off the coast of Indonesia caught fire after a blowout and explosion, but all the workers aboard were evacuated safely, the owners of the drilling platform said.

The Zapata Enterprise caught fire about 15 miles offshore, or about 250 miles south-southeast of Jakarta in the Java Sea, said Barney White, spokesman for the Houston-based Zapata Corp., which owns the rig.

The rig, which has been in service since 1980, usually has between 55 and 60 workers aboard, White said.

"We have accounted for all hands," he said. "There were no injuries and no deaths at this point."

In Jakarta, Martin Nyoo, local commander of the Ministry of Communication's Sea and Coast Guard Command, confirmed that there were no casualties. The crew had been evacuated to the east Java capital of Surabaya, he said.

The rig was working an old well for a Korean firm when the accident occurred about 2 a.m. (2 p.m. CST Tuesday), he said.

"Our details are a little sketchy because of communications difficulties in that part of the world," White said. "There was a blowout and explosion on the Enterprise and we subsequently abandoned the rig."

The fire was still burning 24 hours later.

Bruins, Cards in NIT finals

NEW YORK (AP) — Uwe Blab and Brad Wright were the two tallest basketball players on the court in the semifinals of the National Invitation Tournament, and each clearly was the most visible in more ways than one.

The centers for Indiana and UCLA, respectively, each was instrumental in helping his team win Wednesday night as Indiana defeated Tennessee 74-67 and UCLA stopped Louisville 75-66.

Blab scored 24 points and grabbed 10 rebounds and Wright had 23 points and 12 rebounds, along with four blocked shots as the tradition-rich Bruins and Hoosiers headed for a summit meeting in the NIT championship game Friday night at Madison Square Garden.

"Blab and (Steve) Alford sustained their attack," Tennessee Coach Don DeVoe said, "and we didn't play great basketball in the last five minutes."

The 7-foot-2 Blab, the "Mr. Inside" of the Indiana attack, and Alford, "Mr. Outside," teamed up for 47 points and generally controlled things in the late going when Tennessee made its patented run.

Earlier in this tournament, the NIT's "Comeback Kids" wiped out a five-point deficit in the last 19 seconds to beat Southwestern Louisiana and otherwise have made a habit of thrilling comebacks.

Wednesday night, the Volunteers just ran out of gas, thanks to the omnipresent Blab inside.

The Hoosiers had a 13-point lead in the first half and 10 at intermission before the Vols rallied behind Tony White, who scored 22 points overall. It wasn't until the last two minutes when Blab hit two key foul shots and blocked a Tennessee shot and Alford hit some crucial free throws that the game was in hand for Indiana.

"We have a tendency to let up with a lead — that happened tonight," Blab said. "But we were lucky to turn it back on."

Except for Blab and Alford, Indiana Coach Bobby Knight was not at all happy with his team's play.

"Alford and Blab are the whole offense," he said. "If they're off, we're in trouble."

He also said he "wanted to see the ball flying around the perimeter a little more. We're not doing that well yet."

Pistons rout Rockets

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit reserve center Earl Cureton said he helped cool down Houston rookie Akeem Olajuwon by beating the 7-foot center to his favorite shooting spot.

Olajuwon poured in 27 of his game-high 33 points in the first half, but Detroit rallied behind guard John Long's 25 points and Cureton's defensive play for a 127-110 National Basketball Association victory Wednesday night.

The victory clinched an Eastern Conference playoff berth for the Pistons.

"I sat on the bench and watched him the whole first half," said Cureton. "He kept shooting from the same spot, so what I did was to get to the spot before him, and that stopped him."

Olajuwon converted 12 of 13 field goals and all three of his free throw attempts to give the Rockets a 69-66 halftime lead. But he hit only 2 of 8 from the field in the second half.

Cureton scored only 9 points, but blocked three shots, grabbed 10 rebounds and forced several Rockets turnovers.

"Earl definitely did a fantastic job for us, and that keyed the whole game," said Pistons Coach Chuck Daly, who also was happy with his team's defensive play, especially in the second half.

"There's no question that with defense like that, we can do things," Daly said. "With it, we secured a playoff spot. It might be as good of a game as we've played the whole year. If we played defense aggressively, we can be a force."

The Pistons outbounded the Rockets 31-14 in the second half after both teams were even in rebounds at the intermission, 22-22. Rockets Coach Bill Fitch blamed that statistic for the defeat.

"We got clobbered on the offensive boards," said Fitch. "We didn't get anyone hitting the defensive boards. That really was the thing that killed us. We forced some shots and we gave them too many seconds."

Ralph Sampson, the Rockets' 7-4 forward who scored 26 points and grabbed 10 rebounds, agreed with Fitch.

"They hit the boards very well," Sampson said. "They boxed out well and when they do that they can hold their own on the boards."

Long scored 12 points in the third quarter to stake the Pistons to a 102-92 lead going into the final period.

Pampa entered in Amarillo Relays

Pampa High's track, golf and tennis squads are among 143 teams entered in the 11th annual Amarillo Girls Relays, scheduled for Friday and Saturday at sites across the city.

Both Pampa track and golf teams are expected to contend for titles, while the tennis squad will have some challengers for individual honors. There will also be boys' tennis.

Pampa's girl tracksters, unbeaten in four meets, will have the best shot at unseating three-time defending champion Amarillo High.

"I'll come home happy if we win this meet," said Pampa coach Gary Cornelsen. "I'll know then we have a good team." The Lady Harvesters own meet victories at the Amarillo Invitational, Borger, Dalhart, and Perryton.

In last weekend's victory at Borger's Bulldog Relays, the Lady Harvesters racked up 157 points and had record-setting performances by the 400-meter relay team and Tonya Lidy in the 200. The 400-relay team with Miss Lidy as the anchor set a meet record of 49.5. Other team members were Jackie Oglesby, Courtney Brown, and Kristi Hughes. Miss Lidy set a new meet mark in the 200 with a time of 25.0.

Fourteen teams are entered in the large-school division. Running preliminaries and all field events will begin at 2:30 p.m. Friday at Dick Bivins Stadium. Running finals are set for a 1 p.m. start Saturday.

The Pampa girls' golf team is leading the District 1-4A standings after two rounds and could give defending champion Amarillo High a fight for championship honors.

The large-school division competition will be held at Ross Rogers Municipal Course.

"We're off to a good start," said Pampa coach Frank McCullough. "The girls are working real hard and I'm real excited about their chances of going to regionals this year."

Pampa team members include Jessica Baker, Kim Harris, Becky Starnes, Brienna Marsh, and DeLynn Ashford.

Tennis for the large-school division begins at 8:30 a.m. Friday at the Amarillo Tennis Center.

"The kids are playing real good tennis now," said Pampa coach Pam Clark. "They're coming off the best tournament (at Lubbock last weekend) they've had this season."

Freshman Andrea Adcock is Pampa's top-seeded player. All final matches, which begin at 8:30 a.m. Saturday, will be at the tennis center.

Couples to defend TPC tourney title

By BOB GREEN

AP Golf Writer

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — Fred Couples finds himself in a familiar, enviable position.

"I'm playing now just about like I was this time last year," Couples said.

And that was good enough to make him the winner of the 1984 Tournament Players Championship.

"I'm really looking forward to it. I'm excited about it," Couples said before teeing off today as the defending title-holder in the annual championship of golf's touring pros.

"Last year, coming in, I'd been in the top 10 four times in a row. This time, coming in, I've been in the top 10 in five of my last six."

"I feel like I'm starting to play pretty good, that it's all coming together," said Couples, who has been in title-contention in two of the last three weeks.

"I can't say I expect to win this week," he said. "But I do expect to play pretty well. All I can hope is that I'm in contention sometime in the last round, get in contention and then try to make the most of it."

Among his chief challengers are three men who have scored multiple victories already this season — Curtis Strange, Lanny Wadkins and Mark O'Meara.

"I'm starting to feel pretty sharp again," said Wadkins, who complained of "being a little rusty" following a one-month break earlier this year.

"We'll just have to wait and see what comes out. Sometimes, the difference between first and 20th can be your putting, or one shot. Or it can be no difference at all, just depending on whether it's your week or not," he said.

Strange, who has finished first, fourth and first in his last three starts, currently leads the Tour in money-winnings with a whopping $322,344 and ranked as a leading contender for the $162,000 first prize here.

O'Meara has gone into a slump since scoring consecutive triumphs in the Crosby and Hawaii.

Fuzzy Zoeller, the U.S. Open title-holder, and British Open champ Seve Ballesteros each has won in recent weeks and must be considered a threat here. Masters king Ben Crenshaw and PGA champ Lee Trevino also are in the 144-man field that will be chasing a total of $900,000 in prizes.

Defending champion Fred Couples, who has finished in the top 10 in four of his last five starts; Tom Watson, holder of a record six Player of the Year titles.

Shockers down Borger junior varsity

Pampa routed Borger, 13-3, in a junior varsity baseball game played Monday at Harvester Field.

The game was called after the fifth inning due to the 10-run rule.

Shawn Fry had a single and home run for the Harvesters and reached base twice on walks.

Kenny Steward had a single and double and played a good defensive game at catcher, according to Shockers' coach Tom Pollack.

Winning pitcher was John Mounthy, who went the distance on the mound.

The Shockers, 3-2, play Lefors there today.

Yankees' Whitaker switched back to second-base position

By The Associated Press
Who's on third? No, who's on first. Maybe Lou's on third?
Nope! Lou's on second, where he's always been.
Translation: The Detroit Tigers' great experiment of shifting All-Star second baseman Lou Whitaker to third base, which Manager Sparky Anderson said was "etched in cement," ended before it began. Before the Tigers' 6-3 exhibition loss to the Pittsburgh Pirates on Wednesday night, Anderson announced that Whitaker would rather fight than switch.
"I called him in and said, 'Which do you want to play,'" Anderson explained. "I told him, 'I want to know before we go any further.' He said maybe he'd rather play second. That was it. That was all I had to hear. The man's a star.

When the star wants it, that's all there is to it. I would hope you'd do what your star wants you to."
Instead, rookie Chris Pittaro, whose outstanding play at second planted the seed in Anderson's mind, will move to third, a position he has never played. Anderson said he was confident Pittaro could make the switch.
"Like I told him, I don't care how many errors he makes, I'm going to stick with him as long as I can," Anderson said. "There's always the chance I'm not going to like what I see, but I'm going to stick with it a month — a month for sure."
"The instincts the boy has are so outstanding I have no doubts. With the hands he's got he should have no trouble catching the ball."
Whitaker never played third in any of the Tigers' exhibition games.

Pittaro, not surprisingly, said the switch to third didn't bother him. "I'm just glad to play in the major leagues," he said.
Meanwhile, Jason Thompson and Doug Frobel homered for Pittsburgh while Jose DeLeon pitched six innings, allowing three hits and one run. The setback dropped the world champion Tigers under .500 for the first time at 9-10.
Elsewhere, Frank Viola pitched seven scoreless innings and Greg Gagne and Gary Gaetti homered to lead the Minnesota Twins over the New York Mets 4-0.
Mike Boddicker and Ken Dixon combined on a three-hitter and John Lowenstein drove in one run and scored another as the Baltimore Orioles defeated the New York Yankees 2-1.

Cocaine apparent motive in point-shaving case

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Tulane University basketball players Clyde Eads and Jon Johnson will be granted immunity from prosecution to testify before a grand jury investigating center John Williams and two other players accused of shaving points, according to a published report.
The Times-Picayune, The States-Item said in today's late editions that Eads, from Tampa, Fla., and Johnson, from Columbus, Ga., both 22-year-old senior forwards, who will testify today, had given statements implicating themselves and their teammates. The newspaper did not identify its source, except to say that it was close to the investigation.
On Wednesday, sophomore swingman David Dominique of New Iberia, La. and senior guard Bobby Thompson of New Orleans surrendered to authorities for fingerprinting and booking.
Williams, a 23 year-old senior, was arrested Tuesday night, along with Gary Kranz, 21, of New Rochelle, N.Y., a Tulane student accused of gambling law violations as well as cocaine dealing. All four were released without bail.

Cocaine, not money, was the apparent motivating factor, District Attorney Harry Connick said. He also said it is possible that other players are involved and that more arrests would be made.
Williams, a 6-foot-10 all-conference center, Dominique and Thompson are accused of violating Louisiana's sports gambling laws. Kranz is accused of the gambling violations plus possession and distribution of cocaine, Connick said.
The maximum penalty for violation of Louisiana's sports bribery law is five years in jail and a $10,000 fine.
Tulane finished the season 15-13 overall and 6-8 in conference play.
Connick, the Orleans Parish district attorney, said New Orleans attorney Edward F. Kohnke IV, a Tulane graduate, provided the tip that led to the investigation.

"I wasn't the first one to hear about it," Kohnke said. "I had a source on the street and checked with him. I felt I got good enough information to follow up on it."
"All you have to do is talk to the bookies," Kohnke told the New York Times. "All the bookies that were talked to knew the fix was on."
U.S. Attorney John Volz said his office has been involved in the case for several weeks, and he has asked the FBI to investigate possible federal violations.
He gave no details about possible links to federal gambling raids in Memphis, Tenn., during the weekend.
The federal government's involvement came at the request of Tulane officials. Athletic Director Hyndman Wall said the government was called in because university officials heard "rumors emanated

Women's Final Four

Old Dominion wary of Northeast Louisiana's "E.J."

AUSTIN (AP) — Coach Marianne Stanley of Old Dominion says among the "exciting matchups" at the NCAA Women's Final Four in basketball, Eun Jung Lee of Northeast Louisiana would be a good match "against all of Old Dominion."
"When you've got a point guard (Lee) that makes lob passes from halfcourt ... and when you've got some big kids that can catch those kinds of passes, it's tough," says Stanley.

"E.J. just does some great, great things," Stanley said of the 5-foot-6 junior guard from Seoul, Korea, who averages 18 points a game. "I told my kids, don't be surprised if she dropkicks one into the basket."
Fifth-ranked Old Dominion, 29-3, opens the tournament Friday night against No. 2 Northeast Louisiana, 30-1, which has a 15-game winning streak.
Western Kentucky, which upset No. 1 Texas 92-90 in the Midwest regional semifinals at Bowling Green, Ky., plays Georgia in the second game Friday night.

Coach Paul Sanderford of Western Kentucky, 28-5, was asked at a Wednesday news conference with the other coaches if his No. 14 Lady Toppers were in a "no-lose situation."
"I feel like we're the underdog. I kind of like being the underdog. The pressure's on Andy," Sanderford said of Georgia Coach Andy Landers, whose Lady Bulldogs, 28-4, are ranked No. 8.
Sanderford said his team might have a "problem with the intimidation factor," because this will be its first appearance in the Final Four. "If we can get by the first half and stay close, we've got a chance," he said.

"What do you mean 'intimidated by?'" said Landers. "You've already beat us once."
Western Kentucky, playing at home, edged Georgia 72-67 in overtime Dec. 12.

March 29, 1985

In the year ahead, try to keep your business contacts and social acquaintances separate from one another. You can enjoy a good life with each, provided you don't allow either group to cross the line.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Losses are possible today if you are impractical regarding the management of your resources. Do nothing silly, such as asking a fox to watch your chickens. Major changes are in store for Aries in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your career judgment could be questionable today. You may see yourself having the advantage when, in fact, the opposite might be true.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be extra careful in your financial dealings today, especially if friends are involved. Do nothing that could cause them to question your motives.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) There will be ample opportunity around you today but you may not know how to use it in ways that could benefit you as well as others.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Even though you'll be able to size up situations for what they are today, you still might make decisions that won't serve your best interests.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Joint ventures must be handled with extreme skill today. If something goes awry between you and those you're involved with, it'll be hard to unwind.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Miscalculations are possible today because your judgment could be questionable. Unfortunately, you may compound this by seeking counsel from inept advisers.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Do not place your faith today in persons who have disappointed you in the past. You might want to believe they have changed but, in reality, they haven't.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be conscientious and dependable regarding duties and responsibilities today. Anything you let slip by the boards will crowd you into a corner later.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It's imperative that you and your mate are in complete accord regarding major expenditures today. Neither should commit funds without consulting the other.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Strive to be self-sufficient today. Don't try to maneuver others into doing things for you that you know you should be taking care of yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Make no moves today that can weaken or deplete your financial position. New debts should not be incurred until you first clean up your old obligations.

Judge reduces Elder sentence

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A federal judge today reduced the sentence of a sanctuary movement worker convicted of illegally helping Salvadoran refugees from one year in prison to 150 days in a halfway house.

Jack Elder, 41, the director of Casa Oscar Romero, convicted on six counts in Houston last month, had refused two years' probation and was sentenced to one year in prison Wednesday.

But U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela agreed to reconsider the sentence following consultations with defense and prosecution attorneys. Vela ruled today that Elder would serve the reduced term in a halfway house to be determined later.

Elder's attorney, Steve Cooper, had asked that the sentence be reduced to 90 days because Elder was a first-time offender. Vela asked Elder if that meant he did not want probation.

"You understand that you don't have to do that," Vela said before imposing the modified sentence. "You understand that it's your choice."

Cooper told Vela that Elder would prefer going to jail instead of serving a probation term that would restrict his activities in the sanctuary movement.

Elder hugged his wife, Diane, and left the courtroom with her and Stacy Lynn Merkt, another convicted sanctuary worker. About 75 supporters of the sanctuary movement began clapping after the sentence was announced.

"I feel great," Elder said after the hearing. "The sentence was probably fair. I assume right now that I'd be in custody."

Ms. Merkt, 30, a volunteer at the shelter, was sentenced to 179 days in prison Wednesday for her conviction of conspiring to help the Salvadorans enter the country illegally.

The judge also ordered her to serve concurrently 90 days on a similar conviction last May. Vela revoked her two-year probation term on that conviction Tuesday, ordered her to move out of the shelter and not to speak with reporters.

Ms. Merkt is appealing her conviction. Elder was freed after the hearing.

Elder had been sentenced to one year in prison Wednesday after he rejected terms of a two-year probation sentence that Vela had offered.

To receive probation, Vela said Elder would have to move out of the Catholic Church-sponsored shelter in San Benito and not speak publicly about the sanctuary movement.

"I am a person who agrees with the sanctuary movement, but I'm going to reassure people that the integrity of the legal system will be preserved," Vela told Ms. Merkt and Elder Wednesday.

Sanctuary movement workers argue Salvadorans are political refugees entitled to asylum because they fear persecution in their war-ravaged homeland.

Federal authorities, however, argue that the Salvadorans are coming to the United States strictly for economic reasons. They also deny that sanctuary movement workers are being singled out for prosecution.

At a news conference after the sentencing, Bishop John Fitzpatrick of the Brownsville said work at the shelter will continue.

"I am proud of Jack and Stacey and those who lay their reputations and lives on the line to protect, nourish and care for the poor of other nations who seek nothing more than the same opportunity our refugee forefathers sought and obtained during the past two and more centuries," he said.

"Casa Romero will continue to operate as it has in the past — to feed, clothe, nourish and give hope to refugees from Central America."

Before her sentencing, Ms. Merkt told Vela, "It is for my beliefs that I am convicted."

AFTER COURT APPEARANCE—Dr. Allen Boesak, left, leader of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches, talks with newsmen after his appearance in court Wednesday in Cape Town, South Africa. Boesak appeared in court Wednesday along with several other prominent anti-apartheid campaigners after their arrest Tuesday at an illegal march to Parliament.

Steel dump ruling's effects on Lone Star are uncertain

TEXARKANA, Texas (AP) — The U.S. Commerce Department says foreign steel is being sold in America at unfair prices but there is disagreement over whether the ruling will affect the drilling-pipe market enough to help steelworkers in Lone Star, Texas, the Texarkana Gazette reported today.

In Washington Wednesday, the Commerce Department ruled that steel pipe and tube products imported from Spain and Argentina for oil drilling projects have been sold in the United States at unfairly low prices.

The U.S. International Trade Commission must now decide whether to impose anti-dumping duties. The commission will examine whether the imports are substantially injuring the United States market.

The Commerce Department investigation began after several American steel companies, including Lone Star Steel, filed a petition in June 1984 over imports of the products, which are used underneath the ground and the water to drill for oil.

Shipments of the steel products from Spain in 1983 were 23,000 net tons, with a value of about $12.5 million, the department said. It said Argentina exported 17,400 net tons worth $4.8 million into the United States.

The Commerce Department said a ruling on a case involving similar products imported from Mexico was expected by the end of May.

Dumping occurs when a foreign company sells a product in the United States at a price lower than it costs to make it. Some companies dump products during a market downswing so they can later dominate the market when business improves.

Lone Star laid off 3,500 workers in August 1982 when it shut down its plant, which has since partially re-opened with 2,000 workers.

The company lost $4.6 million in the first three months of 1984.

Bullock says wants 'to count the hogs'

AUSTIN (AP) — State Comptroller Bob Bullock, after having a biscuit-and-gravy breakfast with a University of Texas lobbyist, gave UT officials a giant piggy bank for the "bowl of gravy" in local fees he says they collect.

"I didn't want to take everything out of the trough, Gerald. I just wanted to be able to count the hogs," Bullock told UT lobbyist Gerald Hill on Wednesday.

"I'm glad I lost my voice," Hill responded faintly, saying his voice gave out after lengthy testimony before a legislative hearing.

The jostling breakfast was organized by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and drew state senators and state officials. Hill, ladle in hand, dished out grits to accompany the biscuits and gravy.

Last week, Bullock said state universities collect $3.4 billion in various "local fees" which the schools spend as they wish.

The money — from sports events, laboratory fees, library fines, dormitory rent and other sources — nearly equals the $3.8 billion the Legislature appropriated for higher education. Bullock said lawmakers apparently aren't getting a full accounting of it.

"These schools have their noses in a $3 billion bowl of gravy which is in their local bank accounts and which the Legislature never sees," he charged.

At Wednesday's breakfast, Bullock was kidded about his criticism and joked in return about the reaction of university officials statewide.

Plate in hand, state Treasurer Ann Richards said, "Hey Bullock, do I have to put my nose in it?"

Bullock quipped that the breakfast was "the first of 48 we intend to have — one for each college."

He presented Hill with two piggy banks: a tiny one with the inscription "For Tax Dollars Only" and a much larger one inscribed, "To Gerald and the Good Old Boys at the System — This is 'Wavy Gravy' for your fund money."

Noting a clinking sound inside the two-foot-long piggy bank, Hill said, "I think it's full of slugs."

Report places the blame on company

DANBURY, Conn. (AP) — A published report says an Indian inquiry has placed "direct responsibility" on Union Carbide Corp. and its Indian subsidiary for a gas leak that killed more than 2,000 people, but the company says it is standing by its own investigation.

A report by the Indian government that has not been released "places responsibility for the leak on a combination of design flaws, operating errors, defective systems, and managerial mistakes," The Christian Science Monitor reported Tuesday.

The newspaper said sources close to the investigation, who were not identified further, disclosed some of the report's main conclusions.

Date set, finally, for Garn space trip

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Space agency officials set an April 12 launch date for Sen. Jake Garn and six astronauts on a space shuttle mission with a long history of changes, rescheduling and reshuffling.

NASA announced Wednesday that the mission, now named 51-D, will be launched from the Kennedy Space Center in Florida at 8:04 a.m. for five days in orbit and the deployment of two satellites. If on schedule, the launch will come on the fourth anniversary of the first shuttle launch.

It is the sixth launch date scheduled for a five-member astronaut crew led by mission commander Karol Bobko. The crew has experienced changes in payload, spacecraft, crewmates and experiments. And the mission has been cancelled twice and re-named twice.

Garn, a Utah Republican, will fly on the crew as a payload specialist. He was named to the flight as part of his oversight responsibility as chairman of the Senate subcommittee that controls NASA's budget.

Others on the flight are pilot Don Williams, mission specialists Dr. Rhea Seddon, Jeff Hoffman and David Riggs, and payload specialist Charles Walker, an engineer with McDonnell Douglas Corp.

The mission was first organized in 1983, named 41-F and scheduled for launch on Aug. 29, 1984 aboard space shuttle Discovery with five crew members.

The astronauts helped designed a mission patch and posed for a crew picture.

When a preceding flight was delayed at the last moment, 41-F was cancelled and its activities combined with a mission called 41-D.

Bobko and his group became a crew without a mission.

A few weeks later, the crew was reassigned to a mission called 51-E on space shuttle Challenger and given a Feb. 12, 1984 launch date. A new payload was assigned and the crew started training for it. The mission patch was redesigned and another portrait made.

In January, Garn and a French scientist, Patrick Baudry, were assigned to the flight, bringing the crew to seven. The mission patch was changed and a new crew portrait was taken.

Various hardware flaws caused two more launch delays, and then Challenger and a satellite experienced serious problems that forced the mission to be cancelled.

Bobko and his "bridesmaid" crew were reassigned to a mission called 51-D and put on space shuttle Discovery. A crew that had been planning to fly under that name was booted off and became a crew without a mission.

Baudry was removed from Bobko's crew and Walker was added. The payload was reshuffled.

Once again, the mission patch was redesigned and the crew portrait was retaken.

Bobko said the astronauts on his "core crew" have been affected little by the many changes that have occurred in the flight manifest and crew complement. As new jobs were added, said the astronaut, he found someone on his crew who was ready for the change.

"I was surprised at how much resident expertise I had in my crew," said Bobko.

The plans call for the astronauts to launch a Canadian satellite called Telesat I and the Navy satellite Syncom IV. Seddon, a medical doctor, will conduct cardiac research. Garn will be the subject of medical experiments on space motion sickness.

Walker will operate a McDonnell Douglas device designed to manufacture superpure pharmaceuticals in weightlessness.

Each of the astronauts has also been given a toy, such as a top or yo-yo, to demonstrate in weightlessness. The demonstrations will be filmed and shown to students as lessons in science.

DETERMINED—Gwen Kemp of St. Paul had no mercy on a burglary suspect. She chased him out of her apartment, over a fence, up an embankment and into a parking lot, where she leaped on to the hood of his car and held on to the windshield wipers for dear life. (AP Laserphoto)

Burglary suspect is captured after pursuit by victim

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — A woman says she acted on impulse and didn't have time to be scared when she chased an intruder out of her apartment, vaulted a fence and clung to the windshield wipers of his car as he tried to speed away.

"He told me, 'All right, baby, we're going for a ride,'" Gwen Kemp said Wednesday of her wild tour on the hood of the man's car. "I said, 'Let's go.'"

Ms. Kemp, 31, said a lot of other things, too, during the course of the chase, but she declined to be specific, explaining, "You can't print it."

She said she had never thought what she might do if she found someone burglarizing her apartment, so when she came home for lunch Monday and found the door chained from the inside, "I acted strictly on impulse."

Ms. Kemp — who described her 5-foot-2 body as of "medium" build — banged the door in. The intruder beat a hasty retreat through the patio door, with Ms. Kemp in close pursuit.

She credited her stamina to having quit smoking and begun jogging "as often as I can stand it" about a year ago.

Even so, by the time she confronted the suspect in a nearby parking lot, both of them were too out of breath to do anything but stare at each other and gasp.

Then he jumped into a car and locked the door before she could pull it open. Ms. Kemp said she beat on the windows, then leaped on the hood when he started the car.

He zig-zagged in the parking lot and tried some short stops, but Ms. Kemp hung tight. Finally, after a sudden stop about a block from the apartment complex, the suspect couldn't get the car going again.

He jumped out and took off running. This time, Ms. Kemp didn't follow.

"I decided to let it go," she said. "I figured I had the car."

Meanwhile, a neighbor had called police, who arrested the suspect a few minutes later as he walked along a nearby street. According to their report, the man was 5-foot-7 and weighed about 140 pounds. As of late Wednesday, he had not been charged.

"I worked long and hard for what I have," said Ms. Kemp, who has been a technician at 3M Co. for 12 years. "I don't have much, but I can't have anybody taking it away from me."

As it turned out, nothing was taken from Ms. Kemp's apartment.

And what if she had caught the intruder?

"I would have beaten him up," she said.

Reagan is on Wall Street seeking financial support

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is appealing to the nation's financial leaders for help in rescuing his embattled budget plan from a drastic congressional overhaul.

The president was making his case in person on Wall Street today with a visit to the floor of the New York Stock Exchange in Manhattan and a speech on the economy at St. John's University in the borough of Queens.

Reagan's New York trip was to make a little history: he is the first sitting president to visit the exchange in its 193-year existence. And plans called for him to ring the electronic bell that opens stock trading — pushing the button at exactly three seconds before the 10 a.m. starting time.

"It's a great honor for the president of the United States to come here, to a symbol of the nation's business," said Richard Torrenzano, a vice president of the exchange. "It's a thrill for every member on the floor."

The president was to view a trading floor that has been greatly changed by technology in recent years. Banks of video display terminals loom over each trading post in the cavernous main room, where brokers and specialists transfer millions of shares each day.

Reagan was to address some 1,700 members on the floor of the exchange, which is the world's principal securities market, and then meet with 160 Wall Street and stock exchange leaders.

The speech at St. John's, the nation's largest Roman Catholic university, was to be a general review of his economic outlook and policies, according to White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

The president's message is aimed at gaining support for his budget, tax reform and deficit-cutting measures, Fitzwater said. And by addressing some of the nation's most powerful and influential business and financial leaders, the president hopes to help get his message across to other audiences as well.

"He's trying to reach both the Congress and the American people, as well as financial leaders," Fitzwater said.

The budget battle with Congress is the next major item on the president's agenda, with his lobbying blitz for the MX missile nearly wrapped up and the fight over renewing aid to the "contra" rebels in Nicaragua still weeks away.

Reagan's New York trip comes as the White House is trying to strike a compromise with Congress over the budget, while agreeing on ways to trim the nation's $200 billion deficit.

Just Because It's Yellow Doesn't Mean It's The Real Yellow Pages!

Don't slip up. Make sure you're advertising in the Real Yellow Pages.

Anybody can make a phone book. But that doesn't mean it will appeal to your customers. The telephone company directory and the Combined Area Telephone Directory are the books people in your area count on for complete, reliable buying information.

The local telephone company directory has been published longer than most of us would like to remember. The Combined Area Telephone Directory has been published for the last ten years. It is a proven fact that both phone books are liked and used by people in your area.

Southwestern Bell Publications, Inc. and Combined Area Telephone Directory, Inc. are both members of NYPSA...National Yellow Pages Services Association. An official of each company has been elected by their fellow directory publishers to the board of directors of the American Association of Yellow Pages publishers.

So don't be confused. Winners are often imitated. Make sure you're advertising in the Real Yellow Pages, from your local telephone company and Combined Area Telephone Directory.
