

Fuel spills into streets

About 6,500 gallons of diesel fuel gushing from a ruptured storage tank leaked across the lot of the Jack Vaughn Oil Co., 400 E. Tyng, down adjoining streets and into city storm sewers Monday afternoon.

A spokesman for the Pampa Fire Department said a rusted storage tank ruptured, spilling the fuel. A company employee at the scene said a tanker truck driver tried to unload his truck into a full tank, causing the rupture.

The fire department sprayed foam on the diesel-soaked lot of the business as a precaution against fire. Police also blocked off the area.

The company used a suction hose to pick up some of the spilled fuel and put it back into a tanker truck.

The fuel rolled off the lot and down curbs along Houston, Tyng and Craven streets about 1 p.m.

City crews covered the fuel that spilled into the curbs and streets with sand.

City spokesman Steve Vaughn said he worried that the fuel leaking into the storm drains would pollute the old Pampa Lake near the rodeo grounds, into which they feed. As a precaution, a front-end loader was used to scoop out a pit to catch the fuel at the drainage lake.

Bullock says state schools' coffers full

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislative leaders are not enthusiastic about Comptroller Bob Bullock's suggestion that a $3.4 billion "bowl of gravy" held locally by state colleges and universities can be used to ease the state's financial crisis.

"There's a lot of different factors involved and several scenarios that were not taken into consideration in his comments," said Speaker Gib Lewis.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said his staff was looking into the matter but he felt that colleges and universities should keep at least a part of their local funds.

Bullock told the Texas Daily Newspaper Association Monday that state budget writers should take a close look at the local funds held by the 48 state colleges, universities and institutions before raising college tuition or thinking about new taxes.

"These schools have their noses in a $3 billion bowl of gravy which is in their local bank accounts and which the Legislature never sees," Bullock said. He added: "I was for a tuition increase until I got into this, but I was wrong."

Gov. Mark White, who also talked to the TDNA, told reporters he was "somewhat surprised" at Bullock's remarks.

He said he thought the Legislature had the responsibility "to see to the direction of these funds and that they are well spent on our priorities."

Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, head of the House Higher Education Committee, said she thought Bullock "was mixing apples and oranges."

"He's talking about local funds that are generated for causes for which the state will not pay and mixing them with causes that the state does pay," she told reporters.

Bullock said the $3.4 billion the schools got from the assorted programs, business enterprises and gifts almost equals the $3.8 billion the Legislature gave higher education over the past two years.

"In other words, the Legislature's appropriations to higher education are only half the picture," Bullock said.

He said the local funds cannot be included in the comptroller's revenue estimate.

"It is money that never goes through the state treasury. It is money that isn't accountable to the Legislature. How it is raised and how it is spent rests solely in the hands of college officials."

He said income from these outside enterprises is growing by as much as 17 percent a year. Despite the schools' spending from the funds, there is now a balance of $2 billion remaining from the 1983-84 period, Bullock said.

Bullock stressed he was not saying there was anything wrong with the way schools maintain the local funds or how they spend it.

"But it would make good business sense for the Legislature to get an accounting of this money and take it into consideration in setting priorities for the limited state tax dollars they have available," he said.

"Politically, I think a tax bill is out," Bullock told the newspaper editors and publishers.

"In the next two years we will have 14.5 percent more money than the past two years. We can live within it."

"In conclusion, Texas ain't broke, but sometimes I wonder why it is not. A little more of this and it damn sure will be," he said.

Housing construction drops sharply

WASHINGTON (AP) — Housing construction, hurt by a steep drop in apartment building, plunged 11 percent in February, the sharpest decline in almost a year, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said that construction of new homes dropped to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.64 million units last month, down from a rate of 1.84 million units in January.

The decline, the sharpest since housing starts fell 23 percent last March, came despite the fact that construction of single-family homes rose 5.3 percent during the month.

That gain was offset by a 36.7 percent drop in construction of apartment developments with five or more units. Construction of apartment projects with two to four units fell 12.4 percent.

Michael Sumichrast, chief economist for the National Association of Home Builders, said there could be concern about rising interest rates.

He also said his survey of builders' expectations of future sales turned down sharply in March.

Analysts have noted modest increases in mortgage rates in recent weeks following an announcement by the Federal Reserve Board that it had halted its efforts to push interest rates lower.

Fatal accident reported

Department of Public Safety troopers were investigating a fatal traffic accident near Pampa at press time today.

The wreck reportedly claimed the life of an area resident and injured one other. The traffic accident reportedly happened about 9:30 a.m. today on a county dirt road, a mile west of Kingsmill and south of U.S. 60.

Details on the accident and identity of the man who was injured were not available from the DPS at press time.

Injured in the accident was Dennis Mills, 40, of Dallas. Mills, an employee of Panstar Oil and Gas Co., sustained neck and chest injuries in the wreck, but his condition this morning was not believed to be critical, according to a spokeswoman at Coronado Community Hospital.

Mills was taken to the hospital by Pampa Medical Services.

Groom ends basketball cheerleading

GROOM — Cheerleading at basketball games is cost prohibitive Groom school officials agreed as they discussed spending priorities at a special meeting Monday.

Responding to requests from cheerleaders' parents who said the $450-475 price range for cheerleader uniforms is too expensive, school trustees sliced the uniform limit to $350. The cheerleader uniforms — two skirt and sweater sets and a "pep rally" costume — are not part of the school budget and are funded out of the cheerleaders' pocketbook or through fund raisers.

Trustees felt that the best way to cut down on the wear and cost of the uniforms would be to use cheerleaders just at football games, not at basketball teams.

But this doesn't mean that the school will no longer back the Tiger roundballers. Cheerleading at basketball games takes a different spirit.

"Our kids get pretty active in the basketball stands," said cheerleader sponsor Judy Babcock, explaining that there seems to be more spirit when students sit close together inside the fieldhouse.

She added that most of the cheerleaders play on the Tigerette basketball team, leaving only one girl to cheer during the girls' games.

The main goal, she stressed, was to cut down on the amount that the cheerleaders and their families have to spend on their uniforms. She and principal Kenneth Sweatt studied ways to cut back on the uniform cost. She said that "after much discussion" the board concurred with their proposal.

The board looked to some cost cutting on its own. The purpose of the special meeting was to find ways to pay for such maintenance problems as a slanting basketball court in the school's small gym and the cracking track field.

At their regular meeting last week, trustees discussed ways to fix the gym floor, which has a three inch "hump" near one of the free throw lines. At the Monday meeting, they concluded that each method — wood, rubber floor, carpeting evening out the concrete — would be too expensive.

Superintendent Rex Peebles said the school will wax the floor to cut down on skidding.

Angry depositors question governor on bank's failure

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The state Senate today rejected a House-approved bill to help 69 savings and loan associations reopen with federal protection, while angry depositors questioned Gov. Richard Celeste over the failure of Home State Savings Bank.

Celeste, who on Friday ordered the savings and loans closed for three days to protect them against a run by depositors, on Monday extended the so-called bank holiday for 48 hours to give lawmakers time to work.

The state House then approved 85-2 a bill that would force the thrifts to become part of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. But the Senate adjourned early today after lawmakers couldn't agree on whether to make FSLIC membership mandatory.

Celeste ordered the state's 70 privately insured thrifts shut down after a run triggered by the Cincinnati-based Home State's March 8 closing in the wake of revelations it could lose millions in the failure of ESM Government Securities Inc. of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

The run jeopardized the assets of the Ohio Deposit Guarantee Fund, which provides private deposit

Gov. Celeste on call-in program insurance to state-chartered S&Ls. About 125 federally insured institutions are not affected and remain open.

One of the 70 closed institutions, Columbia Savings and Loan Co. of Cincinnati, opened Monday as a member of the FSLIC.

The governor took heat for the Home State situation during his monthly statewide radio call-in program Monday night. He tried to reassure depositors of the closed S&Ls he was doing everything he could to get them re-opened.

One caller, identified only as Bob from Youngstown, termed the bank crisis Celeste's "own Watergate" because Home State is owned by Marvin Warner, a political associate of Celeste's.

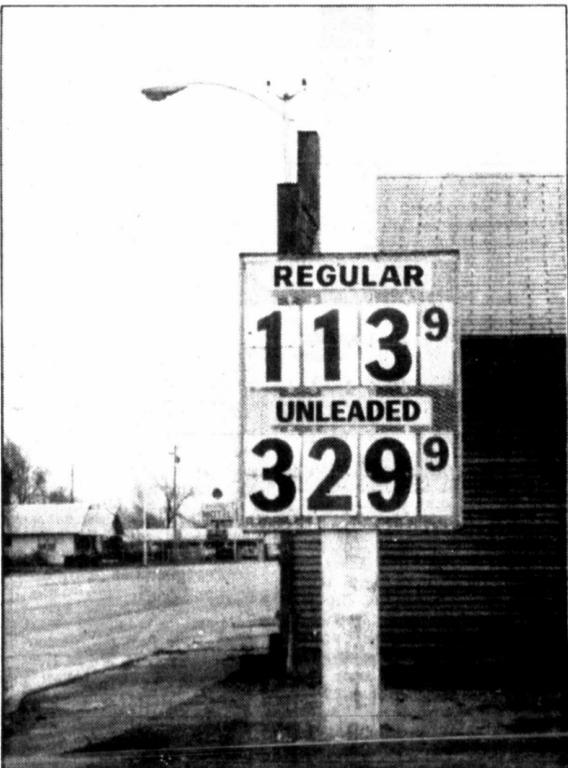

Celeste told the caller he would support appointment of a special prosecutor to investigate the closing of Home State, which had invested about 60 percent of its $1 billion assets in the collapsed Florida firm.

House debate on the legislation prompted an angry floor speech by Speaker Vern Riffe Jr. after Rep. Thomas P. Gilmartin suggested that only a handful of institutions would benefit from it.

"We do this to people who've been fair and just and honorable and good taxpayers," Riffe said.

About 2,500 Home State depositors met Monday night in the Sinclair Community College gymnasium in Cincinnati to plan a Wednesday motorcade to show Celeste they will fight for their money.

Organizer Fred Kaufman received deafening applause when he began by saying he didn't know anything about finances "except I put my money in the bank and I'd like to draw it out."

Determined fire bug hits at restaurant

A determined fire bug started a blaze in the Pizza Inn restaurant, 2131 Perryton Parkway, about 1 a.m. today, police and fire officials said.

The arsonist set separate fires in the restaurant's storeroom, office, men's restroom and rear dining area, fireman Wayne Smith reported.

The fires were ignited with paper, he said. Most just smoldered, causing light damage in the dining room, office and restroom. The fire in the storeroom took hold, however, spreading light smoke damage to the rest of the building, the fireman said.

The fire was reported by employee Sheila Briscoe, 1328 Coffee, according to a police report.

Smith said employees were closing and preparing to leave the restaurant, when they smelled smoke. The fire department was called but later told to disregard the call after employees couldn't find a fire, he said.

But about five minutes later, the employees spotted flames and made another call for help, he said.

The firemen quickly extinguished the small fire in the storeroom.

No arrests had been made this morning.

Realtors oppose proposal to change homestead laws

The Texas Association of Realtors (TAR) and the Pampa Board of Realtors have announced their opposition to an effort in the state Legislature to change the Texas Homestead Law.

The realtors charge that a coalition of big business lenders from throughout the country are attempting to alter the current constitutional and statutory provisions of the homestead law that provides Texans with protection of their family homesteads from creditors.

Realtors are joined by the Texas Consumer Association, the AFL-CIO and several senior citizens organizations in their opposition to the proposal.

The proposed change in the homestead law is pushed by a group called Texans for Home Value Access (THVA), which seeks permission to make general purpose loans to homeowners to be secured by the borrower's homestead and subject to deed-of-trust foreclosure in case of default.

The repercussions of a second-mortgage amendment could be devastating to Texas homeowners and only result in long-term hardship for many Texans, while providing a windfall of profits for many lenders, realtors claim. The call the proposal a "threat to the Texas homeowner."

Article XVI, Section 50, of the Texas Constitution exempts the homestead from forced sale for any reason except failure to make mortgage, home improvement or tax payments. No mortgage deed of trust or other lien on the homestead is valid except for the purchase money or improvements to the homestead.

The THVA coalition argues the current law prevents homeowners from using their home equity as collateral for large, general purpose loans. TAR and consumer groups contend credit-worthy Texans already can obtain most loans without using their homes as collateral.

"While THVA offers certain safeguards in their proposed legislation, homeowners should remember that the ultimate outcome of the law will be determined by legislative procedure," the realtors state in a news release.

The initial proposed change will require a constitutional amendment, decided by a two-thirds vote in both houses as well as a vote by the public in a general election.

But, the realtors note, the safeguards are not contained in the constitutional amendment, though they are included in the enabling legislation.

Such legislation regarding any safeguards can be reviewed and changed through a majority vote in each house, the realtors explain. Thus, in future sessions of the legislature, the safeguards could be stripped from the homestead law by only a majority vote without ever coming before the public for approval, they claim.

In its release, THVA says Texans have a right to use their home equity as they wish. But the business coalition fails to address the fact that the equity Texans possess would not be pledged solely at their election, the realtors claim.

The borrower who fails to pledge his house as collateral may be denied the loan, regardless if he has the financial strength to qualify for a signature loan, the realtors state.

Eventually, signature loans could vanish, and Texans may find themselves coerced into putting up the family home in order to get a large loan, they claim.

If the Texas Homestead Law is altered, the most vulnerable homeowners will be the elderly and those on fixed incomes who would become a prime target to the temptation of borrowing against the home, the realtors warn.

"The issue at stake here is debtor protection from creditors," they state. "The right to own property without fear of sudden or unexpected loss of that property is one of the basic tenets of the original and current Constitution of the State of Texas."

"For 145 years, the Texas Homestead Law has seen us through economic crises. Were it not for this constitutional protection during America's Great Depression, many more families would have lost their homes," the realtors claim in their release.

"The Texas Homestead Law is unique to Texas," they observe. "It was designed to protect the integrity of the family, and it works to protect every Texan today, as it did in 1839."

Court upholds draft prosecution

WASHINGTON (AP) - The federal government's former policy of prosecuting only those young men who publicized their refusal to register for the military draft was valid, the Supreme Court ruled today.

By a 7-2 vote in the case of a 24-year-old former Yale philosophy student from Pasadena, Calif., the court said the former policy did not violate any constitutional rights.

The decision clears the way for the prosecution of David Alan Wayne, who had claimed his free-speech rights were violated by the government's "selective prosecution."

Today's ruling also appeared to clear the way for the prosecutions of other young men who, like Wayne, publicized their resistance to the military draft registration.

Draft registration - not the military draft - was reinstated in 1980 under a law signed by then-President Jimmy Carter. Some 12 million young men, about 98 percent of those eligible, have registered since then.

The law requires all male citizens and resident aliens born after Jan. 1, 1963, and between the ages of 18 and 26 to notify the Selective Service.

Enacted in the aftermath of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, the law is designed to make it easier to draft young men if that becomes necessary.

Wayne challenged the government's method of "deliberately selecting for investigation and prosecution only a class of vocal protestors against the law." Those prosecuted represent a tiny fraction of the more than 700,000 who have not registered.

Writing for the high court, Justice Lewis F. Powell said Wayne "has not shown that the government prosecuted him because of his protest activities."

Powell said Wayne had shown only that the government was aware that its passive enforcement policy would result in the prosecution of vocal objectors.

The government has since abandoned its policy of prosecuting only "known" non-registrants and now seeks out all eligible young men who have failed to register.

Powell said the former policy "placed no more limitation on speech than was necessary to ensure registration for the national defense."

Powell was joined by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Byron R. White, Harry A. Blackmun, William H. Rehnquist, John Paul Stevens and Sandra Day O'Connor.

Justices Thurgood Marshall and William J. Brennan dissented.

The decision upheld a ruling by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that had reinstated Wayne's indictment.

Panel approves open container, mandatory seat belt bills

AUSTIN (AP) — A senate committee has approved bills that would prohibit drivers in Texas from drinking and require them and all front-seat passengers to wear seat belts.

The Senate State Affairs Committee vote Monday on the seat belt bill came after several senators said they don't appreciate the federal government dictating state law.

The bills now go to the full Senate for consideration.

Democratic Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Canyon, won 11-1 committee support for his bill that would make it a $200 fine for drinking while driving. A similar "open container" law failed in the 1983 Legislature. Under Sarpalius' bill, drivers cannot have alcoholic beverages in their possession. The law would not apply to passengers. In the original bill, open containers were prohibited if they were in the driver's reach.

"The main objective is to stop drinking and driving. It is very important that we emphasize whether it's being consumed or had it in their possession," Sarpalius said.

Legislation requiring drivers and front seat passengers to wear seat belts gained committee approval on an 8-5 vote.

The mandatory seat belt bill introduced by Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Mesquite, excludes large trucks. A so-called "Bubba amendment" that excluded pickup trucks was dropped from the bill.

Sen. Don Henderson, R-Houston, tried to add an amendment that would have allowed for the use or non-use of a safety belt to be admissible evidence in a civil trial. The amendment failed 8-4.

The amendment had received criticism from some lawyers.

"The only people in the state that this provision will benefit are the plaintiff's trial lawyers who will continue to be enriched with money they make off of these people's injuries," said John Golden, president of the Texas Association of Defense Counsel.

Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville, urged his colleagues to vote against the bill and send a message to Washington.

"I think when we ban drinking while driving we're saying innocent people should not be jeopardized by those wanting to drive while intoxicated. However, when we vote to force an individual to wear a seat belt, we're saying the government should tell someone to protect his or herself," Edwards said.

He said the same logic used to back the bill would lead to laws banning cigarette smoking and hand guns.

Henderson also said he did not like the federal government telling states what to do.

The U.S. Department of Transportation has said it would make air bags mandatory if states that include two-thirds of the nation's population don't make seat belt use mandatory.

Student lobbyists against any drastic tuition increase

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Student Lobby has endorsed a moderate tuition increase but says they are opposed to recent legislation that could raise tuition by as much as 1,100 percent.

Diane Friday, a director of the student group, said a bill introduced by Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, would increase tuition at state colleges and universities from $4 per semester hour to $48 beginning next fall.

"Students have been reasonable about tuition this session because of the state's financial situation. We know a tuition increase is going to have to come of this session," Ms. Friday said during a Monday news conference.

Jones' bill, which has not been set for a public hearing, would also increase non-resident students' tuition by 50 percent — from $40 to $60 per semester hour — starting in the 1986 fall semester, she said.

In the bill, medical and dental students would see their tuition raised by 200 percent this fall and by a total of 250 percent by the following fall.

Texas residents in medical or dental school now pay $400 per semester, but that would be raised to $1,200 this fall and to $1,400 by the fall of 1986. Non-resident medical and dental students' $1,200 fee would climb to $3,600 this fall and $4,200 in 1986.

Foreign students' tuition would increase by 100 percent next fall — from $40 per semester hour to $80 — and by 150 percent — to $100 — in 1986.

The student group has endorsed a tuition increase bill by Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, that raises tuition from $4 to $8 in 1985, to $12 in 1986 and then by $2 increments until 1990.

The House Higher Education Committee last week approved

Mrs. Delco's bill, which also sets aside 25 percent of the tuition fees for financial aid. Jones' bill allots 9 percent.

Ms. Friday said students are already facing a tough time making ends meet by paying rent, food, clothes, transportation, books, utilities, other student fees and tuition.

Catherine Mauzy, another director of the Texas Student Lobby, said students have been working with the Legislature to come up with a fair and equitable tuition plan.

Ms. Mauzy said she is questioning whether any kind of tuition increase is needed after hearing about a report from State Comptroller Bob Bullock. Bullock says state colleges and universities made $3.4 billion in the last two years from library fines to football tickets.

NEW PESO COIN—A Harlingen laundromat has discovered that the new one peso coins issued by the Mexican government are almost the exact size and weight of the U.S. quarter.

but are worth only half a cent each. Laundromats and vending machine operators are having to alter their money changers to keep from losing money. (AP Laserphoto)

Pesky new pesos feel like quarters to coin machines

WASHINGTON (AP) — Laundromats along the Texas-Mexico border are getting taken to the cleaners by a new Mexican peso that is the same size and weight as a U.S. quarter but only worth a half-cent.

The pesky peso is creeping northward, and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen warns that it could become a serious problem.

In Washington, where the coins have already appeared, they so far are only "an irritation," said D.C. Vending Co. vice president Bill Deoudes.

"I have pocketfuls of them," he said. "We get them in cigarette machines. Laundry machines take them, too. But we find them mainly in cigarette machines."

He said he had just found 15 pesos in a $1.25-a-pack cigarette machine.

"So somebody got three packs of cigarettes, $3.75 worth of cigarettes for about 10 cents," Deoudes said.

Bentsen, D-Texas, said "some of the machines can discriminate between the new Mexican peso and our quarter, but others like this laundromat cannot do so."

The senator voiced the comment — gesturing to a picture of a typical laundromat — while taping a regular weekly TV program which Bentsen's office provides to television stations in Texas.

"We don't know the full scope of the problem," said Jack Devore, an aide to Bentsen, noting that so far no specific figures were available on the number of businesses affected.

However, Devore added that "several operators of various types of automatic coin machine businesses — mostly laundromats — have come to us saying it's a big problem."

Deoudes said only more sophisticated machines, such as coin changers, can tell the difference, but most vending machines are fooled by the new peso.

"And the Greek two-drachma coin. They do the same thing," Deoudes said. He said the Greek coin, worth about 1 to 1½ cents, show up mainly in machines in Greek restaurants.

Vending machines can identify a Canadian quarter because it's magnetic, Deoudes said, but the coins often jam the machines and necessitate service calls.

A spokeswoman for Potomac Vending in Maryland said the more sophisticated machines, like video arcade games, can be adjusted to detect differences in the coins.

Bentsen said the border, already in a depression because of peso devaluations, "doesn't need this kind of problem."

He wrote last week to Secretary of State George Shultz, asking him to negotiate with the Mexican government about minting a new coin.

Deoudes expressed little hope the government can do anything about the coins. Again, it will be left to the vending companies to do something, he said.

Lawyer says Port trial not fair

HOUSTON (AP) — The attorney for an 18-year-old man found guilty in the murder of a female mail carrier says he will seek a new trial for his client because the first court proceeding was not fair.

Houston lawyer Jack Zimmermann said Monday if the new trial is refused, he will then appeal David Port's conviction if his client's family agrees.

Port was convicted of fatally shooting Debra Sue Schatz, 23, as she delivered mail on June 7 in the fashionable west Houston neighborhood where the teen-ager lived with his parents.

The case drew national attention because the father and stepmother were jailed in Houston for refusing to testify against David Port before a grand jury. The parents were jailed for contempt of court while their son was free on a $2,000 bond. Both parents were later released.

The trial was moved from New Braunfels on a change of venue after state District Judge I.D. McMaster ruled the extensive publicity surrounding the case made it impossible to seat an impartial jury in Houston.

In a pretrial hearing, McMaster decided to allow into evidence a police officer's report of an oral confession young Port allegedly made.

But Zimmermann said the police report "was false, unreliable and illegally obtained."

The lawyer said that, surprised by the judge's ruling, he prepared his young client for a guilty verdict and a long sentence.

Zimmermann said Harris County prosecutor Mary Milloy also committed a reversible error in comments she made to the jury. He said she asked the jurors to compare the Timex watch worn by Debora Schatz to the Rolex worn by David Port.

This comment, said Zimmermann, "appealed to class prejudices."

Too many places to be

One of the most offensive things I've heard in my newspaper career was a line from a feminine hygiene product commercial from a few years back. It featured a flustered pretty brunette with a note pad and a microphone and her friend comes up and says: "You're the one who wrote the active life of a reporter."

I have since decided that if my friend ever said that to me, I'd flatten her sinuses.

To be honest, I do not live the active life of a reporter. I live the active life of an area staff writer. With a small daily like this, I really have no other choice. This may not sound like the ambitious young career woman I should be, but I really don't want another choice.

If I worked for a larger newspaper, Amarillo or Odessa for example, I would be pigeon-holed into a "beat." I'd cover, say, the Canyon Independent School District and if something in White Deer or Miami caught my fancy, I'd have to turn the story over to someone else.

But with the variety come some real pains in the neck. The most bothersome are the meetings which all fall on the same night. Like probably most school districts in the state, Miami, White Deer and Groom meet on the second Monday of each month.

This set-up not only messes up my favorite television night — "Scarecrow and Mrs. King," "Kate and Allie," "Newhart" and "Cagney and Lacey" — it keeps me up late and confuses the whole editorial staff on the following morning. If I attend one meeting, I obviously miss the other two and have to call the superintendent or the secretary the following morning. The following night is no better when McLean and Miami city councils meet.

When I miss a meeting because I am at another meeting, something big usually happens that the "spokesman" fails to mention. Sometimes it's a petty personality conflict that is better suited for "Peyton Place." Sometimes it is something people should know more about than what the "spokesman" wants us to know. I miss the input from the community, the comments from the board members.

Getting information from a spokesman, five minutes before deadline, makes me appear one-sided. I worried about that Saturday when called to chastise me for my Tuesday story about a water board meeting. I was at a county commissioners' meeting while the water board was planning a water election. I talked with a water board member to find out what they voted on and all of a sudden, I'm being called everything but a mouthpiece for the county board.

Most good reporters would rather be accused of being an "obstructionist agitator" than a "mouthpiece" for the city, school or county. When a city official praises my coverage of his fair town, my overriding fear is "My God! I'm a disgrace to my profession. What scandal am I leaving out?"

People should realize that it is bad luck to compliment a reporter on such matters. We could get fired.

Now, I could try to wrap this up into a concise conclusion, like I usually do. But I have a Miami school board meeting to go to tonight and I really don't have the time.

Senate approves flexibility in court system

AUSTIN (AP) — Senators have approved a plan to modernize a state court system that has changed little in over 100 years, and House members have tentatively voted to put state prison construction under scrutiny of state officials in Austin.

The Senate on Monday approved a proposed constitutional amendment that would, according to its sponsor, inject greater flexibility into a court system that remains essentially the same as it was in 1876.

Printed background material on Sen. Ray Farabee's proposal notes that nine types of Texas courts have more than 3,000 judges; 3,140 overlapping boundaries; and over 1,200 separate jurisdictional provisions.

The proposal, which was sent to the House on a 28-0 vote, would name the Texas Supreme Court as the administrative head of the judicial branch, and would give legislators power to provide for additional qualifications for judges and additional court personnel, such as masters and magistrates.

If approved by the Legislature, the proposal would be voted on at Nov. 5 at a statewide election.

The House tentatively approved a bill that would strip the Texas Department of Corrections of its power to build facilities and put the State Purchasing and General Services Commission in charge of construction.

Duncanville Rep. Ray Keller, bill sponsor, has complained that prison officials have wasted construction money in recent years.

The House also tentatively approved a measure authorizing county officials to accept credit card payment of fines and fees. A 5 percent fee could be added to the fine or fee to cover processing costs.

Senators sent to the House a bill that would prohibit a "public servant" from voting on matters in which he or she had a "financial interest."

"Financial interest," which is specifically defined, would replace "personal and private interest," which is the current law.

Violators could be sentenced to jail for up to one year.

Other bills approved by the Senate, and sent to the House, would:

— Reinstate permit exemptions for farmers and farm implement dealers operating wide vehicles on certain roads. A 50-mile limitation also would be removed.

— Raise from $30 million a year to $60 million direct allocations from the state highway fund to the Department of Public Safety.

— Authorize municipal utility districts to own and operate parks and recreational facilities but prohibit them from issuing bonds to pay for such facilities.

— Include officers commissioned by the state comptroller as "peace officers."

— Raise from $1,000 to $5,000 the limit above which county commissioners courts must seek competitive bids for the purchase of equipment, materials and supplies for county road departments.

— Include Texas State Technical Institute within the definition of institutions of higher education. The bill would require the Texas College Coordinating Board to administer all postsecondary technical-vocational education programs.

Legislator claims farmers want profits, not just credit

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — A survey of U.S. farmers shows they are anxious to make money and don't want to continue borrowing, according to U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm.

Stenholm, D-Stamford, said the same consensus is forming among members of a house agricultural subcommittee on cotton, rice and sugar. The subcommittee took the survey, and has been listening to farmers in visits across the country.

The "thin thread" of consensus is that "farmers don't need more credit," Stenholm said. "They need to make money so they can pay off the loans they have now."

Stenholm said he will help write legislation to make farming in the United States more profitable.

Such a bill would include maintaining "some semblance of the current loan and target price structure," he said.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Stick their noses where they belong

Just when we thought legislators might be running out of novel ways to stick their snouts into the common people's business, Missouri Rep. Fred Williams has come up with a doozy. He'd make it illegal to blow your nose in a restaurant.

We kid you not. Williams, assistant majority floor leader of the Missouri House, said he came up with the bill to eliminate a "gross and unhealthy habit." If the good folks in Missouri don't have the common decency to run outside—or at least to the privacy of a restroom—to blow their noses, then Williams sees it as the clear duty of the state government to force them to see the error of those ways.

The legislator says he has received a considerable amount of mail from his constituents, some of whom chastised him for sticking his nose where it doesn't belong. But others saw the nose-blowing problem for what Williams believes it is: a most serious health hazard.

"A lot of people have complained to me about restaurant nose-blowers, and I have been disgusted by it myself many times," Williams told a reporter. That certainly sounds like a good reason to outlaw it, doesn't it? We can't have disgusted legislators running around, now can we?

As with many laws, there would be certain exceptions. Sneezing is one of them. That wouldn't be illegal under the Williams bill. But we can imagine there would be volumes of court decisions attempting to define where a sneeze ends and regular nose-blowing begins.

Pity the poor person in Kansas City, who following a legal sneeze, can't resist one more toot of the old schnoz. Or the poor person in St. Louis with the dripping nose, dashing frantically for the comfort of the restroom tissue box under the watchful gaze of the state's nose-blowing watchdogs.

People constantly blowing their noses in restaurants can be annoying. Their actions can even be unhealthful. Certainly it would be far preferable if the sick stayed away from the healthy. But is all that sufficient reason to make the nose-blowers criminals?

Of course not. Far better that legislators—in Missouri and elsewhere—stick their noses into their own handkerchiefs and not into other people's private lives.

Somebody has to say no

Hooray for the president. And long may he veto—as in fact he may, if future vetoes turn out as successfully as last week's.

By temperament Ronald Reagan is not a vetoer. If he can't win outright, he likes to bring warring factions together, so as to salvage something of value.

On March 6, however, Reagan was confronted with a farm - bailout bill, tailored to the needs of overextended Midwestern farmers. The bill offered $100 million in interest subsidies, $1.85 billion in new loan guarantees, and $7 billion to pay for crops not even planted, far less harvested.

Less than three hours after the bill landed in his court, Reagan swatted it away. Mr. Speaker O'Neill shrugged wearily. The votes to override the veto were not at hand. Point and game to the president.

Maybe more than that, because the veto permitted Reagan to make some telling points. First, about Congress. "In the first major bill since convening in January," Reagan said, "a majority proved itself incapable of resisting the very tax - and - spend philosophy that brought America to its knees and wrecked our economy."

Second, about himself: "The bottom line is that someone in Washington must be responsible.

Someone must be willing to stand up for those who pay America's bills. And someone must stand up to those who say here's the key, there's the Treasury, just take as many of those hard - earned tax dollars as you want." Reagan added that he would "veto again and again until spending is brought under control."

What is this - if true - but heartening and long-overdue news? The veto is among the most important of presidential weapons. Article I, Section 7, of the Constitution explicitly sanctions it: "Every Bill which shall have passed the House of Representatives and the Senate, shall, before it become a Law, be presented to the President of the United States; If he approves he shall sign it, but if not he shall return it, with his Objections, to that House in which it shall have originated," etc., etc.

The power to say "no" is at least as urgent as the power to say "yes" - and never so urgent as now, when congressmen cower before every interest group hoping to head off a budget cut.

If Congress will not say "no," the president must say it. That is all there is to the matter. That, and several bushel baskets of moral courage, lacking which vetoes are impossible.

The farm credit - relief bill was in some sense altruistic. Many farmers ARE in trouble, which means the banks they borrowed from, and the suppliers who sell to them, are likewise in some difficulty. The farmers are deserving sympathy. The question at hand was whether they were also deserving of federal aid.

Numerous of the farm bill's congressional promoters sweated hypocrisy at every pore. Leading House Democrats who spend their waking hours decrying "Reagan's deficit" could not wait to load the deficit higher yet with loan guarantees and crop prepayments.

Well, OK. But won't the farm veto hurt Reagan politically? Maybe so, maybe not. One material consideration is that cowardice in the end hurts public men much more than courage ever does.

Reagan pointed to yet another factor. Only 4 percent of farmers are in dire trouble, and help is available through existing programs, several of them liberalized by the administration itself.

Meanwhile, how does it help anyone to bust the budget, as Congress did in voting to pay for crops that haven't even been planted?

As he leaps over the net to claim victory, Reagan looks a lot like Washington's No. 1 budget - cutter as well as the taxpayers' friend. Not bad for one afternoon's work.

Today in History

Today is Tuesday, March 19, the 78th day of 1985. There are 287 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On March 19, 1920, the U.S. Senate for the second time rejected the Treaty of Versailles, setting the stage for a decade of American isolationism.

On this date:

Ten years ago: The U.S. Supreme Court struck down part of the Social Security law that authorized survivors' benefits for widows with children, but denied benefits for widowed men with children.

Five years ago: The White House said President Jimmy Carter had invited Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to confer with him in Washington the following month on talks concerning Palestinian autonomy.

One year ago: Major U.S. banks raised their prime lending rates to 11.5 percent.

Today's birthdays: Judge John Sirica is 81. Author Irving Wallace is 69.

Livening up a dull game

What's always been wrong with golf is, any way you slice it, golf is a dull game.

The players are dull - robots carrying sticks. They don't even sit or scratch their privates like other athletes. The spectators are dull. They applaud even when some guntz hits a good shot.

The television announcers are dull, too. If Dave Marr cracks you up, you probably think Bernard Kalb is a riot.

Take the United States Open golf tournament. In a recent one a couple of players tried to put a little life in the stodgy proceedings, but all those stuffy United States Golf Association (USGA) officials in their long - sleeved white shirts nearly had a hissy.

(All my life I have wanted to know the exact definition of the word "hissy." I think it means turning red in the face and stomping and raving around like something crazy.)

One of the players, Lon Hinkle, discovered it was closer from tree to green on a par five hole to hit his drive into another fairway. To show you how dull golf is, that was front - page sports news for days.

The USGA would have nothing of it. They ordered a tree planted near the tee so Lon Hinkle couldn't take the scenic route.

Put the USGA in charge of sex and it would eliminate body contact.

Then there was young Bobby Clampett. Young Bobby Clampett missed the cut, but they asked him to play along the next day anyway because somebody still in the field needed a partner.

Graciously, Bobby Clampett agreed and took a busman's holiday. He also hit a few of his tee shots from his knees and joked around with the gallery.

It didn't matter that Bobby Clampett's knee shots were long and straight. It didn't matter there is nothing in the rules of golf that says you can't hit the ball from a kneeling position. And what's wrong with joking around with the gallery?

"Watch me hit this ball on my knees," said Bobby Clampett.

"Ha! Ha!" laughed the gallery.

The hilarity is killing me.

Anybody seen Bobby Clampett lately? Of course not. He was dragged away from the thirteenth hole by USGA officials and shot.

I played golf last week. I hadn't played golf in 10 years. I quit because I was a lousy golfer and because I didn't like to walk around in the woods. There were spiders and snakes in there.

Also, it was making me a dull person. After a round of golf, I thought a big night out was a couple of hands of canasta with my neighbor, Mr. Forndyce. Mr. Forndyce was a nice enough fellow, but he was also 83 and had been declared legally dead from his eyebrows down 30 years earlier.

But I finally found a way to play golf that is fun. I played in the annual Busch Bash, formerly the Old Milwaukee Open, at the Newnan Country Club. Two grown men named Joe Lawson and Jim Mottola are in charge of it. If Joe Lawson and Jim Mottola ran the U.S. Open Bobby Clampett could hit balls standing on his head and they wouldn't care.

The Busch Bash involved playing 27 holes of golf and drinking a beer on each one. There are some terrific rules:

If you don't want to hit the ball, you can throw it. I didn't hit the ball so well, but I made some excellent throws.

If you don't want to hit the ball or throw it, fine. Drink another beer.

If you hit the ball into the woods, forget it. Hit somebody's ball that didn't go into the woods.

You can wear tennis shoes.

Wives and girlfriends of participants are encouraged to stay away from the trailer parked behind the seventeenth green.

The night before the tournament, there is a party from seven until nine o'clock that lasts until three in the morning.

The night after the tournament, there is a party that still may be going.

There are always prizes at the annual Busch Bash, but tournament officials never remember to give them out. In fact, at the party after the tournament I asked Joe Lawson who won, and he said, "Who knows?"

That's my kind of golf tournament. I only wish some officials from the USGA, the pompous old goats, could have been there. They would have had a hissy. A double.

RRC must punt or run with the ball

Mail on the oil and gas rights dispute has slowed down, but we have received hundreds of letters. We don't attempt to answer all out-of - district letters, but do on all in-district letters.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission's proposed ruling in this case is one I abhor. The fact is, I voted for an increased appropriation for the Railroad Commission in 1979 with the understanding the feds would leave the regulation of our oil patches to the Texas Railroad Commission. But it doesn't seem to matter which political party is in power when it comes to the federal government further encroaching on states' rights. Let me suggest you contact your congressman and your U.S. Senators on this issue.

When this issue first came up, I contacted the Railroad Commission and asked them to depart from their usual procedure of having a hearing in Austin. I asked them to have it in the Panhandle where all concerned could have their say without having to travel over 500 miles. As you know, the hearing was held in Amarillo.

More recently, I arranged for a meeting here in Austin for the people concerned with all the elected state officials from the Panhandle. We invited representatives from Governor White's office, Lieutenant Governor Hobby's office, Comptroller Bullock's Office, Speaker Lewis' office and the Railroad Commission. At the suggestion of the newly - hired counsel for the independent oil producers, the meeting was postponed.

Since the Railroad Commission is the elected body that looks after the oil patches, I have referred many of the letters I receive on this issue to them. The Railroad Commission is the only agency in state government which can rule on this very controversial issue. It has been 18 months since the first hearing in Amarillo. They still have the ball in their hands. They need to either punt, lateral, hand off, pass or run with it.

"And now for the latest update on the president's lower intestinal tract..."

Mulroney hopes Canada won't be ignored by U.S.

QUEBEC (AP) — Prime Minister Brian Mulroney says he hopes his successful "Shamrock Summit" with President Reagan means Canada won't be ignored any more in Washington.

Reagan flew home Monday after completing a 24-hour visit full of treaty signings, scenic backdrops and St. Patrick's Day showmanship in Quebec City, the historic capital of French Canada.

In his meetings with Mulroney, Reagan made progress on the sticky issues of acid rain and trade barriers, while signing deals on West Coast salmon fishing, legal cooperation and a new radar network in the Canadian arctic.

After seeing Reagan off at the Quebec City airport — and kissing Nancy Reagan on both cheeks — Mulroney said he made a direct appeal to the American president for sustained attention.

"I told him, I know you have a lot of fish to fry when you get back to Washington," Mulroney said. "I just want to make sure we never again get lost in the shuffle."

Mulroney's Progressive Conservative Party ousted the Liberals six months ago in a landslide election victory, largely on the promise to nurture closer ties with the United States. But not all critics have been stifled.

"It might have been called the Shamrock Shuffle," Ed Broadbent, leader of the socialist New Democratic Party, said of the meeting. "We've had President Reagan, regrettably I think, calling the tune."

Mulroney brushed aside all criticism, saying Reagan's visit "marks a new era in relations between Canada and the United States."

Every detail of the friendly encounter between the two leaders, both of Irish descent, was reported widely in Canada, often live on national television and usually favorably.

A commentator on the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. described the summit as "twenty-four hours of mutual praise and admiration."

In three speeches, Reagan even ventured brief comments in French — the majority language in Quebec — getting smoother with practice and winning applause from his audience.

For all the picturesque staging, there was enough substance to rebut criticism that the affair was all show — including a joint declaration pledging reduction in trade barriers and the appointment of high-ranking envoys to handle acid rain, often called the chief irritant in U.S.-Canada relations.

The two leaders also signed a treaty, the product of more than 15 years of negotiations, covering the salmon catch of the Pacific Coast, where many fish are spawned in one country but are caught by fishermen in the other's waters.

At the same ceremony — conducted behind the thick stone walls of a fortress built to defend Quebec from a possible American attack in the 1800s — the two sides signed an agreement to build what Mulroney called a "state-of-the-art" radar system to replace the Distant Early Warning line in northern Canada.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger sparked some concern when he said in a televised interview Monday morning that Canada could be the site of missiles intended to shoot down incoming Soviet cruise missiles detected by the new radar.

Large blast shakes Bagdad

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — A pink flash lit the dawn sky in Baghdad today and seconds later a powerful blast shook buildings in the Iraqi capital. Iran reported the explosion was caused by a ground-to-ground missile that hit the industrial district of Dora.

Iran's Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Cyprus, said the missile caused "considerable losses and damage." There were no immediate reports from Baghdad on damage or casualties.

Iran and Iraq — at war for 4½ years — renewed attacks on each other's cities more than two weeks ago. Iran also has launched a ground offensive into southern Iraq.

Starting today at 8 p.m. Baghdad time (noon EST), Iraq said it would shoot down any aircraft in Iranian airspace. Many airlines canceled service to both Tehran and Baghdad. Iran said it protested to the International Air Transport Association and the International Civil Aviation Organization.

The blast came hours after Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak and King Hussein of Jordan departed the Iraqi capital after discussions with President Saddam Hussein of Iraq. The two Arab leaders are Iraq's closest allies.

On his return to Cairo, Mubarak told reporters: "Iraq does not need more military assistance because it is in a better military position" than Iran. Egypt's official Middle East News Agency reported.

It was the fourth explosion in five days to rock Baghdad. Reporters have been barred from the sites of previous blasts. Iran claims the blasts were caused by long range missiles. Baghdad is about 100 miles from the Iranian border.

This reporter, driving into Baghdad from the south early today, saw the burst of light, followed seconds later by the explosion. Witnesses described the explosion as the biggest since last Thursday.

Lebanese army battles militiamen

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Lebanese army battled today in the southern city of Sidon against Christian militiamen who declared their allegiance to the rebellion against President Amin Gemayel's Syrian-oriented leadership. Police said four people were killed and 38 wounded.

The clash was the first in the area since Christian militia garrisons near the predominantly Moslem city pledged allegiance to the week-old mutiny in Gemayel's Phalange Party militia. It was also the first serious confrontation in Sidon since the Israeli army withdrew from the area Feb. 16.

Prime Minister Rashid Karami warned Monday the rebellion might force the Christian president to step down, rekindling Lebanon's civil war.

Hostilities in Sidon first broke out shortly after noon Monday, pitting Shiite and Sunni Moslem militiamen against Christians from the Phalange militia, known as the Lebanese Forces, posted in barracks in the villages of Hlaylie, Qanaya and Qiyaa.

Police said two hours later, the Sidon army garrison sent four tanks and two truckloads of troops to break up the fighting. The battle then tapered off to sporadic sniping but it escalated again until a cease-fire was called at 8:30 p.m.

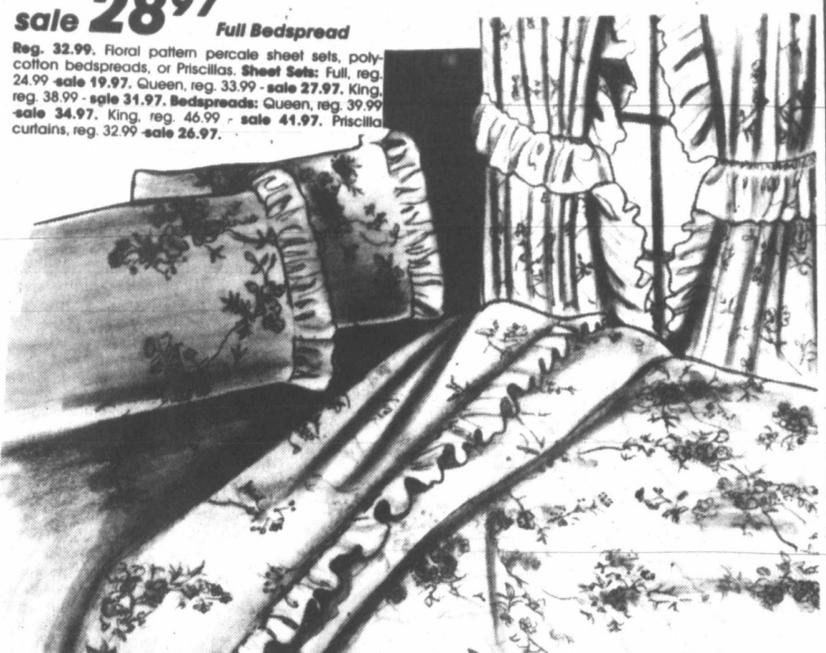

But at first light today, when the 98th army battalion sent the first armored patrol to the area, Christian militiamen were still entrenched in their positions despite the withdrawal agreement, police said.

Design turns garage into home

No matter the size of your home, there are probably times you feel it's too small.

And perhaps it really is. Small homes are being built these days in an effort to hold down costs. But it could be that you're not making the best use of the space you have.

Making the best use of space: That pretty well sums up what these designers sought to illustrate in their conversion of a two-car garage into a small home or efficiency apartment for two people. Complete in every way, the garage-turned-home is chock-full of space-stretching ideas that can be adapted to just about any kind of building or remodeling project by just about anybody.

To give an idea of how well the designers succeeded in achieving their goal, this little home has almost 700 cubic feet of storage space — as much as some homes three times the size. (The home itself retains the original dimensions of the garage: 24 feet by 22 feet.)

The home has an unusual diagonal floor plan. Its interior is divided into a kitchen, a living-dining-sleeping area, referred to as the "main living area," a den or office, a bathroom, and a utility room which functions as a pantry, storage bin and laundry.

The home is not wanting in amenities. Among its other attractions, it boasts a fireplace, skylights, a greenhouse in a corner of the kitchen and every modern kitchen appliance. Manufacturers now make scaled-down appliances for just such situations.

There are two secrets to making a space seem larger than it actually is. One of them calls for the talents of a magician.

Magicians must be skilled in creating illusions to pull off their tricks. In the garage home, an open floor plan creates the illusion of extra space. Only the utility room and bath are fully enclosed with walls.

At night a sliding partition (fixed to a track in the ceiling) screens the queen-size bed, which is in the main living area, from view. During the day it tucks up into its own close — it's a Murphy bed — or can be left out and fitted with a slipcover to serve as a sofa.

A dark color scheme and insufficient windows would have made the garage home seem unbearably cramped. The designers opened it up with skylights, a greenhouse, light blond and rattan furniture, mirrors and off-white walls, kitchen cabinets and counters.

The "unifier" is a tile floor in a floral pattern which flows throughout the entire home, drawing together the various elements of the decor into a harmonious whole. Such unifiers are essential in decorating an open-plan home.

Secret number two to stretch a limited space is to make the furnishings do double duty (like the Murphy bed). Or triple duty, like the movable kitchen island.

The island has a pull-out chopping block for food preparation and 10 drawers for napkins, silverware, tea towels and whatnot. With the sides raised and two center leaves inserted, it's a 45 inch by 60 inch table for dining a deux (or even a quatre). Wheel it into the main living area — it's on casters — and it becomes a sewing or game table.

Similar in spirit to the multifunctional kitchen island is the "super closet," in the main living area, which is a marvel of organization. It gives new meaning to the old saying "a place for everything and everything in its place."

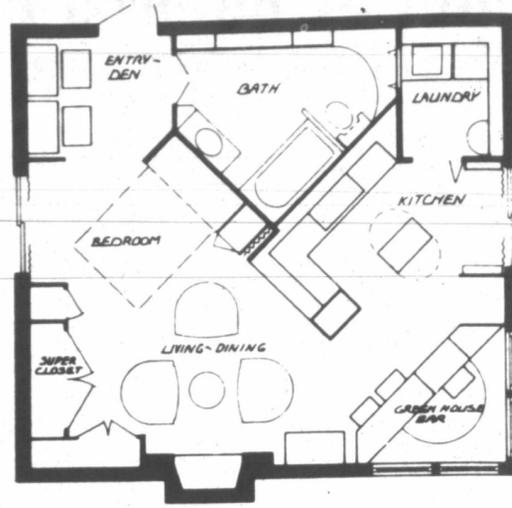

The super closet contains shelves, drawers and clothes rods (six of them) for hanging, stowing and stacking an impressive number of garments.

Even the doors have receptacles for stashing jewelry, scarves, handbags and other small articles. And the doors, which are mirrored on the inside, fold out and around to form a mini dressing room.

The garage home is described in more detail in a free 12 page brochure, illustrated with numerous color photographs of the interior and diagrams of individual projects like the kitchen island and super closet.

Ballet gives innovative performance in Community Concert season finale

By BILL HALEY
Guest Reviewer

The Pampa Community Concert Association brought down the curtain on its 1984-85 season with a performance by the Royal Ballet of Flanders Saturday night in M.K. Brown Auditorium.

Flanders is a county of Belgium embracing the legendary provinces of Bruges and Ghent and bordering the North Sea. Under the guidance of Valery Panov, dancer turned director, the organization, according to some observers, is headed for greatness.

Ballet began in the European courts of the 15th and 16th centuries. Both the dancers and the audience were of the nobility. Their movements were stately and elegant, usually depicting some person or incident of epic stature.

The Flanders corps opened with a pas de deux (dance for two) accompanied by three lush preludes for the piano by Rachmaninoff. Following this was "The Submerged Cathedral" using Debussy's famed composition of that name. Then came "Allegro Brillante," a conventional ballet with the entire company, set to the seldom heard Third Piano Concerto of Tchaikowsky. Closing the program was Stravinsky's extremely popular "Rite of Spring," a work of major proportions.

Looking at the program as a whole, one must regard it as a memorable evening for Pampa. The dancing was perfection. Creative lighting made the sometimes rigid dancers appear as bronze statuary.

Panov, obviously an innovator, used such things as erotic passes, two dancers in tandem — one on his back, the other standing — both waving arms and legs to make intriguing abstractions.

The performance did what every artistic venture should do; it forced the audience to rise to its level. Except for overshooting the intermission, the large crowd in attendance responded very well.

I must raise one point, however. In my opinion, doing "Rite of Spring," with choreography by Panov rather than Nijinsky, is a little like saying, "This is 'A Christmas Carol' by William F. Buckley."

Q — I have heard some money can be saved by using green lumber in building a house. Since I am very handy, I figure I can build it myself. Is there anything I should know about using green lumber?

A — Plenty. In fact, an entire book of information, much of it necessary because green wood shrinks later. I read such a book several years ago and, after getting your query, dug it out. It is called "Green Lumber Construction," written by Leigh Seddon for Garden Way Publishing, Charlotte, VT 05445. In 1981, when it was published, it cost $8.95.

Q — Our house has a brick wall running along one side of the driveway. The bricks are holding together very well considering the house and wall are 15 years old, but they are dirty looking. How can I clean the wall without damaging it?

A — Since rain has not damaged the wall in 15 years, it is unlikely scrubbing it with detergent, mixed with water, will cause any problem. Try about half a cup of detergent in an ordinary pail of water. Before you apply the mixture, wet down the wall with a garden hose. If the bricks get cleaner but not quite clean enough, repeat the procedure. You should always wash any kind of wall from the bottom up. Streaking on the part of a wall already cleaned will come off easily. Streaking on an unwashed wall will not.

Dear Abby

Son who marches to different beat is too far out of step

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: We have a family problem: In May, my stepson will be graduating from medical school, and our family is having a reception in his honor.

My husband and I have a 15-year-old son who has a spiked Mohawk haircut and wears unconventional clothes, such as orange T-shirts, army jackets and jeans. We always encouraged "Steve" to be an individual while he was growing up; for this reason he feels it's his right to look as he wishes.

My husband refuses to allow Steve to attend his stepbrother's reception with his hair in a Mohawk and punk-rock attire. He says he would be embarrassed by Steve's appearance, and others might find it offensive. Steve refuses to attend unless he can come as "himself" (especially since he's not crazy about being with all those adults anyway).

I say it's my husband's problem or that of our guests if they can't accept Steve as he is.

What do you think would be a fair solution to this problem?

CAUGHT IN THE MIDDLE

DEAR CAUGHT: Since you and your husband always encouraged Steve to be an individual as he was growing up, nobody should be surprised if he isn't conforming to convention now.

If Father won't let Steve attend the reception in his punk attire, and Steve refuses to attend unless he can be "himself," that settles it.

Since Steve isn't crazy about attending anyway, he's off the hook. If Steve isn't there, Father won't be embarrassed and the guests won't be offended. So as I see it, no solution is necessary because there's no problem.

DEAR ABBY: On St. Valentine's Day you had a whole paragraph telling people to be "sweethearts" by doing nice things for others.

It was fine until I came to the last part, which read: "Forgive an enemy. Pray for your friends. Donate some blood. Pay your doctor bill. Listen to your teen-ager. Tip the cook in addition to the waitress."

Abby, you must be kidding! Why tip the cook? Don't you know that the cook is the highest paid employee in the restaurant! In fact, in the better restaurants the cook has more money than most of the people who eat there.

BEVERLY HILLS WAITER

DEAR WAITER: Sorry, I should have said, "Compliment the cook if the food is exceptional."

DEAR ABBY: I was reared to say, "No, ma'am," "Yes, sir," etc. regardless of the person's age.

I recently made a purchase at a bookstore, and when the young lady who waited on me asked if I wanted to pay cash, I replied, "Yes, ma'am."

She jumped down my throat and said, "I'll have you know I'm younger than you, and I don't appreciate your insinuating that I am older!" I was shocked at her rudeness.

This morning on a TV game show, a young contestant was asked if he was married. He replied, "No, sir." Later on, the young man won a trip to Hawaii for two, so the host asked if he had someone to go with him, and the contestant replied, "Yes, sir."

When the host was signing off, he said, "... And please don't call me 'sir' anymore, as it makes me feel old!"

Abby, is it still correct to say ma'am and sir in today's society? Or am I out of step?

TECUMSEH, OKLA.

DEAR TECUMSEH: Yes, sir, it is still correct!

Victorian furniture on upswing

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

One class of antiques that wasn't on view at the Winter Antiques Show in New York's Seventh Regiment Armory recently was Victoriana.

Despite its absence, however, Victorian furniture and decorative arts are very much on the upswing, according to Joan Bogart, a Baldwin, N.Y., collector and dealer.

She says "Victorian collectors are coming out of the closet," now, though the style they admire still has a way to go to acquire the social cachet of 18th-century English and American decorative arts.

Some signs of social acceptance for the once-scorned mid-to-late 19th-century period include the opening in 1984 of two 19th-century rooms at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, according to Mrs. Bogart. One is circa 1840; the other is a late Victorian interior with elaborate carved furniture by John Henry Belter.

The price paid at auction for a Belter piece recently set a record for 19th-century American furniture made after 1825, she added. Furthermore, the High Museum in Atlanta recently opened a wing devoted to 19th-century American decorative arts; shortly before that, the Margaret Woodbury-Strong Museum opened in Rochester, N.Y. Mrs. Strong collected Victorian furnishings, and the museum is dedicated to showing these objects, which reflect 19th-century life and arts.

The high prices being paid for some Victorian pieces will flush out even more choice items, said Mrs. Bogart, noting that "whenever record prices are paid, people start looking in their basements and saying 'now we'll sell it.'"

Though many people think of Victorian furniture and decor as excessive, it does not have to be, says Mrs. Bogart, adding, "Simpler pieces coexist with the more elaborate ones."

The period's excesses often came not from the furnishings themselves, but from the large number of them found in a single room. Today, one often accomplishes the goal of creating a period feeling with a much smaller selection.

One reason the Victorian style is appreciated today is suggested by Elisabeth Donaghy Garrett. She notes in "The Antiques Book of Victorian Interiors" that Victorians viewed their home as a refuge. Just as today, consumers were advised to select accessories to lend individuality to their home.

The proliferation of collectibles was accommodated on omnipresent shelves. A living room might contain some or all of the following: easels to display paintings, etageres, corner shelves, tall curio cabinets, and hanging cabinets. Tables were adorned with objects, and even the mantelpiece over the fireplace sported its full complement.

Looking for a way to give your home a Victorian emphasis? Mrs. Bogart suggests the following. Buy a single or a pair of Belter side chairs at under $1,000 a chair.

Select an elaborate crystal chandelier, or better yet, a pair of chandeliers. Find a marble-top table, ranging in price from several hundred dollars to thousands, depending on size, elaborateness, method of manufacture.

Colors that most accurately reflect the Victorian period include deep and bright tones, shades of red, turquoise, emerald green. Fabrics that were popular then and can be duplicated today include brocades and cut velvets.

Drunken driving deaths increase

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Alcohol consumption figured in more than half of the traffic deaths in 10 Texas counties, a Texas A&M researcher says.

While accident reports from the counties studied show drunken driving played a part in 21 percent of the fatal accidents, autopsies indicated 51 percent of the drivers were legally drunk, said researcher Olga Pendleton.

Ms. Pendleton said her study for the university's Transportation Institute was the first to compare blood alcohol concentrations from autopsies with the corresponding accident reports. She looked at autopsies for 558 fatally injured drivers.

"There is apparently more drinking and driving going on out there than accident reports would lead us to believe," she said.

"We found that 66 percent of the accident reports on DWI drivers did not show alcohol as a contributing factor," she said. "We also found that the average blood alcohol concentration of all 558 fatalities was 0.11, exceeding the legal limit of 0.10."

The researcher said Texas does not require blood alcohol concentration tests for fatally injured drivers, as do 35 other states, and officers filling accident reports make only subjective judgments concerning alcohol as a factor in accidents.

Included in the studies, she said, were accident records in Bexar, Harris, Dallas, El Paso, Tarrant, Travis, Nueces, Johnson and Wichita counties because blood alcohol concentration tests are conducted in autopsies there.

She said, "the proportion of legally intoxicated driver fatalities ranged from the highest of 55.4 percent in Travis County to 39.4 percent in Tarrant County."

State mayors back revenue sharing

AUSTIN (AP) — Congress could kill cities' financial futures by acceding to President Reagan's request to pull the plug on federal revenue sharing, according to Texas mayors.

The $4.6 billion annual program is scheduled to remain in effect through 1986, but Reagan's proposed budget would kill it in October.

The result, Texas mayors told congressman Monday, would be higher taxes or reduced services.

"Complete elimination of revenue sharing would raise property taxes by at least 20 percent or reduce our police force and fire protection by an equivalent amount," El Paso Mayor Jonathan Rogers told a U.S. House subcommittee that is conducting regional hearings on revenue sharing.

Congress first approved the program in 1972 under the theory that the federal government is the most efficient tax collector. Texas cities have used revenue sharing money to buy equipment — such as firetrucks, police cars and street repair machinery.

Nationwide, about 39,000 local governments get revenue sharing funds. It is money that would be hard to replace, the mayors testified Monday.

"It has made the difference to many local governments between tough decisions and impossible ones," Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire said.

Older cities, like Galveston, depend on the federal money, the island city's mayor said.

"The city has higher than average unemployment, old housing, an infrastructure dating to Grover Cleveland and 10 percent of our residents live in federally subsidized housing," said Mayor Jan Coggeshall, whose city gets $900,000 a year from the program.

"Back home, our options are simple, cut programs or raise taxes," she added. "The New Federalism is a mockery when it really means, 'We cut you out of our pie.'"

The mayors said they understand the need to balance the federal budget, but Ms. Coggeshall told the subcommittee, "Please don't make the cities the scapegoat for previous errors in federal arithmetic."

Subcommittee Chairman Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., favors continuation of the program.

"Local services paid for by revenue sharing are not frills," said Weiss. "All of us are concerned by the enormity of the federal deficit, but I believe that deficit reduction can be accomplished by responsible budgetary action, without scapegoating those who depend on public services."

The other two panel members on hand Monday — Republicans Richard Arney of Texas and David Monson of Utah — back Reagan.

Arney said the program "would be inconceivable if not already firmly entrenched."

Congressional recipe for making ice water

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Press releases are like soybeans, suggests Sen. Charles McC. Mathias Jr., R-Md. Plant too many and the value drops.

The chairman of the Senate Rules Committee drew the comparison while decrying the "appalling cost" of congressional mailings. House members spent $68 million and senators $43 million in tax revenues last year to send out their newsletters and press releases, Mathias told the Senate.

Sen. Steven Symms, R-Idaho, wondered aloud if the cost were worth it, noting that many of his mailings seemed to end up in the trash anyway.

And how could that newspaper in Moscow, Idaho, dare write an article headlined "Steve Symms, Please Phone Home" suggesting he was losing touch with his home state, Symms wanted to know.

Since last visiting Moscow in the fall, he'd sent the paper "23 press releases, none of which had been printed in the paper. They just throw them in the wastebasket," he said. Symms suggested a bias against conservative Republicans. Mathias said he doubted political affiliation was "the operative factor here."

No, said Mathias, "when there is an oversupply of any product the value goes down — as the senator representing a great agricultural area is all too well aware."

"I think the law of supply and demand is operating with respect to congressional mail just as with the price of wheat, corn, soybeans and all the rest."

Will it be Imelda Marcos versus Carazan Aquino?

By DAVID BRISCOE
Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Will Imelda Marcos or Corazon Aquino be the next president of the Philippines?
Both Mrs. Marcos, the country's first lady, and Mrs. Aquino, the widow of assassinated opposition leader Benigno Aquino, say they will not run.

However, there is increasing talk in the capital of a battle between the country's two best-known women for the presidency of the Philippine islands.

The election is scheduled for 1987, but his critics, it may be earlier, possibly this year.

Although the Philippines has never had a woman president, women have held most other government posts, including positions as Supreme Court justices. Men are the traditional leaders in Philippine society, but women, who have entered nearly all professions, wield considerable power.

Mrs. Marcos, 55, says she only wants to support her husband for re-election. Mrs. Aquino, 52, says she, as leader of an opposition coalition, only wants to gain justice for her husband and "restore democracy to the Philippines."

But Marcos' early announcement that he will run for re-election in 1987 and his increased activity following several months of medical seclusion have not stopped rumors he may soon yield to his younger and more active wife.

Labor Minister Blas Ople said Mrs. Marcos is the most likely contender after Marcos because she is "preeminent in organization resources and personal networks."

Mrs. Marcos, a cabinet minister and governor of Metropolitan Manila, has long been the second most powerful figure in her husband's government, overshadowing Prime Minister Cesar Virata.

In recent weeks, she has dedicated public markets, met with farmers in their fields, handed out relief goods and announced several new projects. She headed a delegation last week to the funeral of Soviet leader Konstantin Chernenko.

Mrs. Aquino's insistence that she will not run for any office has also failed to stop speculation she may be drafted by a badly splintered opposition looking for a candidate acceptable to all factions.

Her husband, assassinated Aug. 21, 1983, in what government prosecutors are trying to prove was a military conspiracy involving Armed Forces chief Gen. Fabian C. Ver, is considered a martyr by a wide variety of opposition groups.

"If you are looking for one who could really unify the opposition right now, it would be Mrs. Cory Aquino. That is the feeling of all us," said former Supreme Court Justice Cecilia Muñoz Palma, the first woman to hold that position, who chaired a recent opposition political convention.

Mrs. Aquino, a quiet but compelling woman whose public speeches rarely last for more than a few minutes, has never run for political office. She openly accuses Marcos of masterminding her husband's death and has been working for unity among several groups opposing Marcos.

The speculation about Mrs. Marcos and Mrs. Aquino highlights the active role of women in the Philippines.

Women journalists, for example, are among the boldest in criticizing Marcos' government; a woman, Eugenia D. Apostol, publishes three of the widest-circulating opposition weeklies.

Catholic nuns have been at the forefront of human rights groups trying to gain the release of political prisoners.

Two beauty queens, Maita Gomez and Nelia Sancho, have led protest marches.

Mrs. Marcos' daughter, Imee, sits in the National Assembly along with opposition assemblywoman Eva Estrada Kalaw, who is also a possible presidential candidate.

Most Communist guerrilla bands waging an armed revolt against the government include women, commonly referred to as "Amazons" in military news releases. A militant women's group recently honored 13 women, including some who were allegedly tortured and killed by the military.

The government has recently fielded an all-female anti-riot squad, equipped with helmets, shields and clubs.

Mexico to reduce number of banks

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government will reduce the number of banks in the nationalized banking system from 29 to 20, fusing some institutions to make the network more efficient, the Treasury Department announced Sunday.

A statement by the department said people doing business with the banks being merged could continue to go to the same bank offices.

"The mergers have among their objectives the strengthening of the participating institutions to fulfill programs begun several years ago by the authorities for the integration of multiple banks, promotion of healthy competition among the national credit societies and development and strengthening of the regional banks," it said.

Exchange students tell of experiences

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Six area foreign exchange students spoke at the Friday noon luncheon meeting of the Downtown Kiwanis Club, discussing their experiences of being in America. Four of the students were visiting with two exchange students in Pampa, coming from other area schools for an opportunity to get together and share their experiences and to have activities as a group.

Speaking at the luncheon were Carmen Casado of Spain and Kathy Thurkettle of Australia, both attending school in Pampa. Casado is an American Field Service exchange student; Thurkettle is participating in the Rotary International student exchange program.

Joining them for the weekend were Johanna Jackli of Switzerland, attending Amarillo High School; Diego Sagoth of Costa Rica, a student at Caprock High School in Amarillo; Yocasta Reina of Honduras, an exchange student at Nazareth High School; and Jan Marc Petroschka of West Germany, attending Panhandle High School. All are AFS students.

Casado noted Spain, with a population of about 70 million, is about half the size of Texas. In her home country, she lives in a city in the south part of the nation, but her family also has a house by the coast where they live during the summer months.

Referring to the weather differences, she said her part of Spain averages 40 to 50 degrees in the winter, with temperatures over a 100 degrees in the summer. But the breezes by the coast help cool off the high temperatures during the summer.

"There are many differences" between Spain and Texas, she said. "Spain has a long history, many monuments, many cathedrals." Differences also exist between the schools. "I like here a lot more," Casado said; there are more student activities and a choice of subjects.

"I'm doing so many different things here," she said, noting there is more time for activities. In Spain the students "had to study so much" that there was little time for outside activities.

In addition, young people rarely drive cars, instead using buses and trains, she said.

Like several of the students, Casado said she had already graduated in Spain and now is a senior again in high school.

Thurkettle said she came from a small town of about 2,500 people in Australia. When told she would be attending school in Pampa, a city of more than 25,000, "I about died," she said.

But now that she is accustomed to Pampa, "It doesn't seem too big," she said. And in many ways, it is not so different from her home, she stated.

Echoing the sentiments of the others, Thurkettle said school "is very different here." In Australia, students had eight lessons a day, with very few choices in subjects, compared with six classes and more choices here.

Students also had few activities and no such opportunities as office and library assistants in her home school, she noted. While there were some sports in Australia, there is a difference; for example, basketball is played more competitively here, she stated.

Reina observed that Honduras is a small country with only four million population. She lived in a city in the north with a population of 64,000.

She said she's "now living in the extra, extra small town of Nazareth... but the people are so friendly." Reina has already graduated from high school and attended one semester at a university before coming to the United States. "I will have my second graduation here," she said.

School here is quite different for her. In Honduras she had to take 12 subjects in school. The students stayed in the same classroom, with the teachers going from one room to another. She attended a private school and had to wear a uniform.

Reina said the weather has been a big difference for her in coming to Texas. The lowest temperature in her homeland is "about 38 or 40," she said. "I'm freezing here all the time."

Jackli lives five miles outside of Zurich in Switzerland, a small country with a population of 6 1/2 million. She showed some small cowbells and Swiss money from her homeland.

"No, I can't yodel," she said in response to a question from the audience.

She said she's enjoying school here, having "a lot of fun." She especially enjoys choir and the other outside activities available at Amarillo High School, she said. There are few student activity opportunities at school in Switzerland, she explained.

Sagoth said Costa Rica "is a little bitty country" with three million population. But it's warm there, he said, with temperatures generally around 70 to 80 degrees; he noted he lived by the beach.

"It's always cold here, it seems," he said of Amarillo.

Sagoth said he had to take 12 subjects in school in Costa Rica. "You can choose whatever you like here," he said of Caprock High School.

In Texas he has had the opportunity to play basketball. He also enjoys being able to take grocery store chain, said Lt. Dwayne Pluckhahn. He said the woman was shot in the left shoulder about 8:45 p.m. Monday. A police spokesman said a news conference would be held today by the police chief. Officers would not even disclose the victim's first name or her age. "Because the investigation is ongoing, we cannot release any details at this time," said Pluckhahn. The JRB chain, which was sold to another chain several years, boasted 20 stores in 1975.

White seeks money for drug fight

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says the federal government is not doing all it can to protect the Gulf states from drug trafficking. "If we cannot stop a DC3 coming across the Mexican border (with drugs) how can we stop an ICBM from another country?" the governor told the Texas Daily Newspaper Association.

"Our federal government is not doing all it can to protect us. I cannot understand how we can spend as much as we do and get so little protection," said White who has taken part in recent anti-drug conferences with other governors in New Orleans and Miami. White told the daily newspaper editors and publishers that the current Legislature has problems "because our revenues have not grown as much as expected and we have a very significant shortage." He said the continued decline in the growth of oil and gas revenue has convinced him and legislative leaders of one thing.

"The most important purpose we have in government is to build a broader base of revenues," White said "and I predict we will be able to do this." He stressed the fast-growing cooperation between the state's established industries and the new high-tech electronics.

"We have to move faster than we ever have in the past," he said. White also said a major concern of the Legislature and his administration is water. "We cannot let it deteriorate further without taking action," White said referring to the package of water bills pending.

Another problem is taking care of criminals, he said.

Why GM is against import controls

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Why did General Motors Corp. support an end to import restraints against Japanese automobiles — restraints that were volunteered three years ago by the Japanese themselves in order to help the U.S. car industry?

The reasons, some of which were given to the House Ways and Means Committee by Marina Whitman, vice president and chief economist, provide a vivid contrast to the idea a few years ago that industrial America was on the decline.

Since 1980, Mrs. Whitman related, GM has invested $40 billion in new plants and equipment in the United States, erecting new facilities in Oklahoma, Louisiana, Missouri, Michigan and Kentucky.

Eight other plants have been remodeled, and eight more are in the planning stage or under construction. The company has embraced robots and computers in both products and operations.

It has made acquisitions, most notably of Electronic Data Systems, which it assigned the goal of managing the company's data processing operation. And it became involved with several companies pioneering in machine intelligence.

Even more revolutionary, it formed the Saturn Corp. to reinvent the small car using entirely new approaches — new product and process technologies, and new manufacturing and management concepts wherever they might be useful.

During this time the company's massive organization was restructured to bring business decisions closer to the operating level and product decisions closer to the marketplace. And it won from unions a more cooperative attitude.

Seemingly lesser moves, but conceivably as important, were made in other areas. The company and unions, for example, embraced the zero-defects concept, which assigns responsibility for errors and accepts no deviation from quality.

In Mrs. Whitman's view, protectionism would actually hurt American producers, and eventually customers too. "Now is the time to remove trade barriers — not build them," she told the congressmen on Feb. 28.

"We believe our long-term interests are served by having the industry respond to the rigors of worldwide competition," she said. "Continuation of restraints would sap the competitive strength of domestic producers."

GM's ideas have been criticized as self-serving, because it plans to import "very small, very fuel-efficient, low-priced cars from Japan." But, said Mrs. Whitman, such imports would make up only a tiny portion of GM sales.

Mrs. Whitman suggested that the domestic automobile industry is over-regulated, and that Congress should review fuel-economy standards so as not to handicap American manufacturers in meeting foreign challenges.

Restaurant an institution, closed in daylight, is open only at night

By TARA BRADLEY-STECK
Associated Press Writer
CLAIRTON, Pa. (AP) — The Bluebird Restaurant hasn't seen the light of day since World War II. It's a cozy, friendly place where insomniacs seek comfort, dates linger into the night, gamblers count their money and regulars savor the sweet taste of permanence.

"You always run into someone you know," said Bob Shuster, 42, a Clairton native who has lived all over the country. "I've been coming here since I was a kid... In 40 years, all they've changed is the tablecloths."

The restaurant's unusual hours — 9 p.m. to 4 a.m. Tuesday through Thursday and to 5 a.m. Friday and Saturday — haven't changed in more than 40 years.

"The night was always good to us," said owner George Romanos, 60. "I tried other businesses. I just didn't like it. This is a fun place. I not only make a good living here, I have a lot of fun, too."

In decades past, the Bluebird drew customers from the nearby steel mills along the Monongahela River. Now the mills are quiet and many storefronts in this once-thriving Allegheny County town are boarded up.

Still, the 62-year-old restaurant thrives through the night, drawing its customers "from as far as 30 to 50 miles away" and offering them hearty one-pound steaks, fresh sauteed mushrooms and Greek-style onions and peppers in tomato sauce.

"When you get a little reputation, people will come from all over. If we depended on Clairton, we wouldn't be here," Romanos said.

"There are people out all night long," said his wife, Laura, 60. "People who work — bartenders, show people — people on dates. Groups have reunion classes here. The young people like this place because it's not plastic."

The older people who grew up with the Bluebird "love to come and reminisce," Romanos said.

There's nothing fancy or gimmicky about the Bluebird. The decor is plain, the food plentiful.

A 50-year-old neon sign, showing a bird outlined in blue and the word "restaurant" spelled out in pink, flashes its message in the cold night air.

On weekends, the weekday insomniacs and loners are replaced by lovers on dates, Romanos said.

"Daylight people are working people," said Theresa Kessler, 50, a waitress at the Bluebird for 16 years. "They have a 10-minute break or a half hour or 45 minutes for lunch."

"At night, it's altogether different," she said. "They're in no hurry to get home. They're relaxed. These are the best people to wait on, believe me."

EATERY—George Romanos, owner of the Bluebird Restaurant in Clairton, Pa., recently looks out of the diner that hasn't served a customer in the light of day since World War II.

Personalities like Louis Armstrong and Jose Greco have, however, patronized the small eatery open from 9 p.m. to 4 a.m. (AP Laser-photo)

Man giving away car with house purchase

LEAGUE CITY, Texas (AP) — Homebuilder Martin van Wolfswinkel says he is so desperate to sell his own house that he's offering his luxury car as a free bonus.

"I wanted to see what it would take," van Wolfswinkel said.

Van Wolfswinkel said he is selling the house for $80,000 below its appraised value and giving a 1985 500 SL Mercedes to the buyer. He placed a flashing sign in the yard and a display at a shopping mall to advertise the deal.

"I don't know what else to do," said van Wolfswinkel, who said a depressed housing market has lowered interest in his own two-story, $235,000 home in this Houston suburb and others he has built.

He said he put the house up for sale two months ago in a fit of desperation.

Van Wolfswinkel said he also built about a third of the homes near his own, but not a single one of them has sold. He said he rented all the others out himself but grew determined to sell his own.

Train buff offers tour of labor of love

By DAVID TARRANT
The Dallas Morning News
DALLAS (AP) — The old train rumbled down the railroad tracks blowing its whistle and attracting the attention of several workers swinging pickaxes in a nearby stone quarry.

Inside one of the train's passenger cars, the riders — illuminated by the pale, cozy light from a brass lamp — gazed out their windows at circus customers queuing up in front of the Big Top.

The train is the old Santa Fe Texas Chief, which last operated in the late 1960s. The conductor is longtime Highland Park resident Burt C. Blanton.

And the rail route — Blanton's personal tour through small-town America — runs through his 26-by-34-foot garage attic.

For 19 years, beginning in October 1951, Blanton labored in the attic, assembling with painstaking detail his picturesque rail route — a region of farmland and rocky, hilly terrain; of circus tents, ice plants, windmills and wooden platforms where women carrying parasols and men in suits wave to the passengers at each depot.

"I endeavored to create here what I had seen traveling through the countryside by train over the years," Blanton said. "I never dreamed the thing would last more than three years. But I got into it, and it was the most fascinating thing — just the building of it."

Now Blanton, who will be 88 on July 4, wants to move his 350-car miniature railroad — the "Blanton-Freeman Railroad" — and its 300 feet of track out of the attic and into a new permanent home.

"It's worried me. I worried that if I died it would be sold piece by piece," he said.

Officials at the Southwestern Museum of Science and Technology-The Science Place say Blanton can stop worrying. They want the Blanton-Freeman Railroad intact and may exhibit it at Fair Park during next year's Texas Sesquicentennial celebration.

"We're real thrilled," said Bill Hill, exhibits curator. "We're going to recreate the whole upstairs of his garage."

REALTORS®, real estate professionals who are members of the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS®, invite you to observe Private Property Week, April 28-May 4. This weeklong observance reaffirms the rights that come with owning property. For most of us this means a home of our own.

Home ownership ensures a stronger democracy because it dispenses decision-making to the individual household. Homeowners tend to put down roots, to become involved in local government processes and to care about what takes place in their community and neighborhood.

The rights that attend home ownership are precious and must never be taken for granted. Rather, they must be protected and preserved for future generations.

Pioneers advance in NAIA tournament

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Tim Thomas was awarded a basket on a goaltending call with eight seconds to play Monday night, lifting Wayland Baptist to a 70-69 triumph over Marycrest in the semifinals of the NAIA men's basketball tournament.

Defending champion and top-seeded Fort Hays State met Central Washington in the other semifinal game.

Carlton Davis, Wayland Baptist's 6-foot-9 center, brought the Pioneers to within a point 69-68 with a free throw with 39 seconds left.

After Marycrest missed a freethrow, Wayland Baptist, 30-9, rebounded the errant shot and a few seconds later the goaltending call was charged to Marycrest's Darryl Smith.

Davis had 21 points for the Pioneers and Richard Miller had 12.

Marycrest, ending its season with a 33-6 record, got 14 points from Reggie Eiland and Smith.

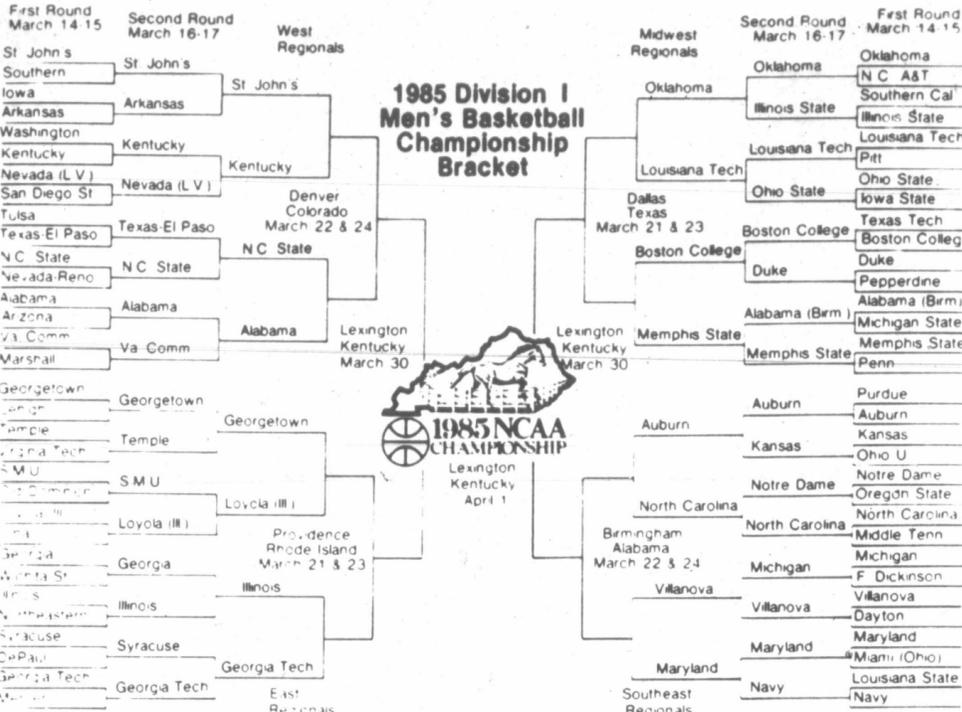

Pampa runner places in Austin 10K race

AUSTIN—Pampa runner Chris Hansen placed high in the Capitol City 10K race held here Sunday.

Hansen turned in a clocking of 32:38, placing 16th in the 30 to 39 age division and 62nd overall among over 20,000 runners competing.

Hansen said this is the first time a Pampa runner has recorded a time under 33 minutes. His best previous time was 34:12. The 32.38 breaks down to an average pace of 5:18 per mile.

The overall winner was Sam Sitnik of Austin, who finished the race in 28:17.

'Champion's pride' helps out Holmes

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Sports Writer

For a fleeting moment on the night of Sept. 28, 1979, Larry Holmes looked to be a beaten fighter.

He had just been sent crashing to the canvas by a right to the jaw thrown by Earnie Shavers — an awesome punch.

"My pride said, 'damn, you're the champion, you've got to get up,'" Holmes recalled Monday, three days after he demonstrated again what a proud champion he is with a 10-round demolition of David Bey at Las Vegas, Nev. for the International Boxing Federation title.

Larry Holmes has always gotten up. He always has risen to the occasion.

"This is a business, a money-making business," is the reason the 35-year-old has given for his last several fights. "You've got to be successful. You've got to look good."

But money wasn't the reason Holmes wanted to look good against Bey, nor was it solely because it might have been his last fight.

It was champion's pride.

Holmes had looked unimpressive in stopping James "Bonecrusher" Smith in the 12th round last Nov. 9. He had an injured right thumb, but it seemed that his age and legs were more responsible for his dull effort. Some of us thought he might be heading for a fall against the big, strong Bey.

"You think I like to read you guys writing Larry Holmes is washed up," Holmes said in a telephone interview from his office in Easton, Pa.

"You think I like reading that Larry Holmes took one fight too many."

"You think about those things when a fight is going on, but you have to control that or you might as well quit."

Mantle, Mays forgiven, restored by Ueberroth

NEW YORK (AP) — Commissioner Peter Ueberroth promised "new and stricter guidelines" for baseball's future relationship with legalized gambling after restoring Mickey Mantle and Willie Mays to the sport they starred in for so long.

Mantle and Mays had been barred from baseball by Ueberroth's predecessor, Bowie Kuhn, when they accepted jobs as goodwill ambassadors with Atlantic City gambling casinos.

After studying their cases for the last two months, the new commissioner on Monday moved to return them to the sport but at the same time defended Kuhn's original action.

"I find no fault with the previous ruling," Ueberroth said. "Baseball must remain free from any connection between it and gambling. That is vital. I am making two exceptions for these two great players because of what they mean to our game."

"I read everything there is to read on the subject. I checked what they had been doing. They don't deserve to be out of the game if they want to be in it."

Ueberroth said he had consulted with Kuhn before making the Mays-Mantle ruling. "Bowie has only been helpful. I consider him a friend. I discussed the matter with him. He spent 15 years in this job. He knows it very well."

However, Kuhn, now employed by a Manhattan law firm, did not agree with Ueberroth's action.

"I don't know of a basis for changing my decision," he said. "I have trouble going along with it. I told him that. He expected me not to agree. He thinks this should be treated as an exception. I didn't. That is a judgment he has to make."

"He says he is not changing policy, merely making an exception based on the character and conduct of Mays and Mantle. I have no question about their conduct. I never have. My problem is with their employment."

"Baseball needs some definitive guidelines even tougher than the policy that exists to date."

Ueberroth promised that the sport will have exactly that, probably within the next month, to tightly control future associations between baseball personnel and casinos.

"We've got to look at the subject," he said. "It's a complex issue. But I don't think we can start dictating who you can play golf with."

That, essentially, is the role Mays fills with Bally's Park Place and Mantle with Del Webb's Claridge Hotel. Both receive $100,000 a year for promotional and public relations duties and for rubbing elbows with the casinos' best customers. Kuhn, however, found that relationship dangerous for baseball even though Mantle and Mays never quite understood the former commissioner's position.

"I couldn't figure it out," Mantle said. "It was a dumbfounded feeling. I wondered why I was banned. It seemed to me I was a better guy (at that time) than I used to be (when I played)."

"I acted like it didn't bother me, but it did. You don't want to get kicked out of your favorite bar or be banned from baseball."

Mays said "I don't think I did anything wrong for baseball."

Neither did George Steinbrenner, owner of the Yankees.

"This was a tremendous action," Steinbrenner said. "To arbitrarily ban two of the greatest players in the history of the game because of their association with a legalized activity, while we allow fellows who were convicted of using drugs to play. I don't see the balance. I don't think justice was served. I think justice has been served now."

Coach loses job at Stephen F. Austin

NACOGDOCHES, Texas (AP) — Don Wilhelm, women's basketball coach at Stephen F. Austin State University has been relieved of his duties and assigned other responsibilities, school officials announced Monday.

No reason was given for the reassignment, but in his first full season as head coach of the Ladyjacks, Wilhelm had a 3-24 record.

Wilhelm, 45, was named acting head coach after Mary Ann Otwell resigned Dec. 6, 1983. He was promoted from his position as assistant women's basketball coach at SFA.

As acting head coach during the 1983-84 season, the Ladyjacks finished with a 14-12 record, 11-9 under Wilhelm's coaching.

In 22 years of coaching, Wilhelm had coached only men's teams before coming to SFA. He was head coach at Johnson County Community College in Kansas

Vice President for University Affairs Baker Pattillo and Sadie Allison, women's athletic director, in making the announcement, said a search would begin immediately for a replacement.

Trends will develop in the year ahead whereby your authority over others will be considerably expanded. Don't be afraid to accept responsibility.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You'll have no difficulty winning debates today if you use your common sense and logic. Pressing points emotionally will defeat your purposes. Major changes are in store for Pisces in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) In your financial dealings today follow the dictates of your intuition, especially if it warns you not to accept things at face value.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Seek associations today with people who share interests similar to yours. Individuals who don't operate on your wavelength will make you feel uncomfortable.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Guard against tendencies today to make things tougher for yourself than they need be. Don't force round pegs into square holes.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your friends will be more appreciative of you today if you accept them as they are and not try to remake them in your image. Avoid critical remarks.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Timing is extremely important today. If you push projects prematurely before laying proper foundations, your castles in the air could crumble.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be patient and tolerant today with companions who do not grasp the essence of situations as quickly as you do. Help them, don't harass them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Problems will result today if you want a bigger slice of the pie than that to which you're entitled in things you do collectively with others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be careful how you conduct yourself in your dealings with others today. If they feel you're trying to manipulate them, they'll do the opposite of what you want.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You might have some difficulties with which to contend today but if you're persevering, you'll come out victorious in the end. Draw upon your staying power.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't permit yourself to be caught in the middle of petty politics with pals today. If you take a position, you could catch it from both sides.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) People for whom you feel responsible might require your protection today. Keep an eye on things if they're involved with someone whose motives you suspect.

March 20 brings Spring, National Names in News

Agriculture Day, kick meat habit

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spring arrives on Wednesday, March 20, which also is National Agriculture Day and the first Great American Meatout.

According to the Washington-based Farm Animal Reform Movement Inc., "thousands of Americans" across the nation will observe the arrival of spring "by kicking the meat habit" at least for the day.

"The Great American Meatout (patterned after the Great American Smokeout campaign) is designed to reduce the national consumption of meat and thereby to mitigate the destructive effects of intensive animal agriculture on consumer health, world agricultural resources, environmental quality and animal welfare," the movement said in its announcement.

"Raising animals for food consumes up to 90 percent of our agricultural resources, depletes our topsoil and groundwater, pollutes our lakes and streams, destroys forests and other wildlife habitats, and causes intense suffering to six billion animals annually."

The six billion animals include billions of poultry, including about four billion broilers that are slaughtered each year.

A spokeswoman for the American Meat Institute, which represents the meat packing and processing industries, called the plan and claims by the group "really quite ill-founded and illogical."

The institute's Mary Burnette said Monday that the movement's allegations cannot be supported by evidence, particularly those claims that meat is in some way harmful to those who eat it.

"Our contention is that red meat is really a significant contributor to the nutritional well-being of Americans, and anything that implies anything other than that is really quite misleading and does the public a disservice," she told The Associated Press.

Gene Hemphill, an aide to Agriculture Secretary John R. Block, said he had not heard of any Agriculture Department participation or recognition of The Great American Meatout. Block's family farm in Illinois produces hogs for the pork market.

The movement's announcement said "meatout supporters" will be distributing thousands of small folders detailing "the major problems with meat production and consumption" and providing tips on how to quit eating meat.

"Among these are putting away all meat in the house, cleaning the greasy stove, keeping around appropriate 'munchies' for when the meat attack strikes, and visiting restaurants that offer salad bars and other meatless dishes," the report said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new vaccine may be only a few years away to control coccidiosis, an intestinal disease which costs the U.S. poultry industry $300 million a year, says Agriculture Secretary John R. Block.

Block said Monday that scientists have produced "a genetically engineered antigen" or protein which helps produce disease-fighting antibodies in fowl.

Although the protection against coccidiosis is not complete, Block said the results are "highly encouraging" because the new antigen offers the first potential shield against the disease without inducing actual infection in order to develop immunity.

The department's Agricultural Research Service used spleen cells from mice that had been injected with coccidia, the parasites that cause the disease. The spleen cells then were fused with mouse cancer cells to produce antibodies in volume.

In July 1982, the agency competitively selected a commercial firm, Genex Corp. of Rockville, Md., to produce genetically engineered antigens using the antibodies. Agency and Genex scientists found that injecting chickens with the experimental antigen stimulated production of antibodies.

Officials said it will be several years but perhaps less than five years before a commercial vaccine is developed.

Coccidiosis can cause death in poultry or severe weakening and weight loss due to improper digestion of feed. It also can cause the fowl to have a paler skin color.

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — Alfred Butts says he was impressed with the plant where 250 million maple Scrabble tiles are cut and painted each year. When he invented the game 50 years ago, he made them all by hand.

"It's wonderful. I had no idea it was such a big operation," Butts, 85, said Monday. It was his first tour of the only factory where the wood parts of Scrabble are produced.

Butts was a New York City architect with nothing to build during the Great Depression when he came up with the idea for a word game.

"There were very few word games at the time. Anagrams were about the only ones around," he recalled. "I thought I could improve on them."

TAUNTON, England (AP) — It was curtains — as a motorist — for playwright Tom Stoppard, author of "The Real Thing," who was banned from driving for a month after he admitted driving 104 mph on an expressway.

Stoppard, 47, also was fined the equivalent of $67 in Taunton Magistrates Court on Monday. A revival of his play "Jumpers," written in 1972, is scheduled to open in London on April 1.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The group Alabama was nominated in five categories at the 20th annual Academy of Country Music Awards, scheduled to be presented May 6 at Knott's Berry Farm in Buena Park, Calif.

Alabama was nominated Monday for top entertainer, vocal group and single record and for song of the year for "When We Make Love" and album of the year for the LP "Roll On."

Ricky Skaggs was nominated for entertainer of the year, top male vocalist, and for album of the year for "Don't Cheat In Our Hometown." The Oak Ridge Boys were nominated for entertainer of the year and top vocal group.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It would have made late acting great John Wayne proud to have his second and third great-grandchildren — twin boys — born on St. Patrick's Day, said Wayne's oldest son, Michael.

Matthew and Luke Swift were born at Tarzana Medical Center to Anita Maria Swift, 26 — the oldest of Wayne's 23 grandchildren — and attorney Tim Swift, 32, family publicist David Garrie said Monday.

"The Quiet Man" would have been smiling to see his twin great grandsons born on St. Patrick's Day," said Michael Wayne, the actor's oldest son and the babies' great-uncle.

Wayne, who died in 1979, played an Irishman in the movie "The Quiet Man."
