

U.S. officer shot by Soviet guard

HEIDELBERG, West Germany (AP) — A Soviet guard shot and killed an unarmed U.S. Army officer of the American military mission in East Germany and the United States lodged a "serious protest" over the incident, U.S. authorities said today.

An urgent investigation of the shooting was under way, authorities said.

The officer was identified as Maj. Arthur D. Nicholson, Jr., 37, of West Redding, Conn., according to Lt. Col. Miguel Monteverde, an Army spokesman at the Pentagon in Washington. He joined the Army on May 1, 1969, he said.

Nicholson, who was posted to the U.S. military mission in Potsdam, East Germany, was killed while on duty Sunday afternoon with another officer, "some distance from Berlin," said a diplomatic source in the West German capital of Bonn. Monteverde said he had been assigned to the mission since February 1982.

The other officer was unhurt, said the source who spoke on condition he not be identified.

Both Americans were unarmed, he said.

At the White House, spokesman Larry Speakes said President Reagan was awakened early this morning and told about the shooting by his national security adviser, Robert C. McFarlane.

"He was just given the facts," the spokesman said, indicating the president did not order any immediate action.

Speakes called the shooting "unwarranted and unjustified" and said a preliminary investigation supported that statement. He refused to give any details of the incident. McFarlane had earlier told reporters that, have no information," he said.

According to an Army statement, Nicholson is survived by his wife, Karyn, and a daughter, residing in Berlin, and his parents, Mrs. and Mrs. Arthur D. Nicholson of West Redding.

The initial Army announcing the shooting statement said, "U.S. officials are discussing the seriousness of the incident with the Soviet authorities."

Later, a U.S. diplomatic source in Bonn said the United States filed a "serious protest" with the Soviets over the shooting. It was lodged by the U.S. diplomatic mission in West Berlin, he said.

The U.S. officer was killed while "doing his job and acting appropriately," said one diplomatic source, who also demanded anonymity. He refused to say more.

The U.S. military mission in West Berlin this afternoon confirmed the shooting.

"It is with deep regret that I must confirm the shooting and the death of an American army officer by a Soviet soldier in the German Democratic Republic (East Germany) on the afternoon of Sunday, March 24," a statement by spokesman Thomas A. Homan said.

"The officer was on duty as a member of the U.S. military liaison mission in Potsdam (East Germany)," the statement said. "An urgent investigation is under way to determine the exact circumstance of this unfortunate incident."

Officers at the Potsdam missions are allowed to travel around East Germany except in restricted areas named by the Soviets, such as Soviet military installations.

Some older farmers losing the will to live

HEREFORD, Texas (AP) — With one shot through the heart, Cecil Morrison Jr. ended his life as a Deaf Smith County farmer.

Freddy Lesly fired his first round into the ceiling of his Crosby County farmhouse. The second round he fired into his temple.

Morrison, 53, and Lesly, 51, had fought lengthy battles to avoid financial ruin. They lost the fight and with it the will to live.

The two Texas farmers represent the grim extreme among thousands of farmers nationwide facing bankruptcy or foreclosure, the Dallas Times Herald reported today.

But they are only the early casualties in the farm crisis that began five years ago and promises to get worse, officials say.

After years of depressed prices and unhealthy debt loads, the serene picture of life on the family farm has worn threadbare, according to farmers and mental health officials.

Depression, alcoholism, divorce and suicide — outlets for anguish in big cities — have now taken hold in the countryside.

Statistics on the extent of stress-related problems are elusive, and counselors and mental health clinics in rural areas are few. But sources say even where professional help is available, farmers traditionally have avoided it, preferring to handle life and its problems on their own.

In the case of older farmers like Morrison and Lesly, they would rather die than take their problems to professionals, said Darline Gamble, a Lubbock psychologist.

Ms. Gamble, who works with farm couples, says many are on the brink of financial disaster and ready to buckle under the stress.

But most of her clients are younger and more willing to seek professional help, she said.

The worst problems afflict older farmers who, like Morrison and Lesly, handle problems by turning inward, closing themselves off to family and friends, Ms. Gamble said.

Carl King, executive director of the Texas Corn Grower's Association, said the problems are mounting. King said troubled family farmers stream through his Dimmit office daily.

"I have some of them come in here with tears bouncing off their shoes," King said. "When a man is 60 years old and looks at a million dollars and 30 years' work down the drain, well, he wakes up in the morning and it don't feel good."

"Heart attacks, high blood pressure, you name it and I'm seeing it," King said. Even without statistics to prove it, King said he believes "there's more suicides in agriculture now than ever."

Experts say farmers with medium-sized farms are the most vulnerable to such problems.

According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, 14 percent of the country's medium-sized family farms are in imminent danger of folding. Some agriculture leaders say the figure is closer to 25 percent, while others say as many as 45 percent of the nation's family farmers will go broke this year.

Gary Condra, Texas Tech University agricultural economist, estimates there are about 500,000 family farmers nationwide, about 23,000 of them in Texas.

They are the farmers who produce $40,000 to $250,000 worth of food and fiber each year and work their farms full time, often with the help of other family members, Condra said.

"They're the rugged, pioneer types who think they should be able to handle anything," Ms. Gamble said. "Their whole personal self worth is destroyed if they lose that farm. This is a family tradition. It's like letting down their whole family tree."

Selection of new city logo scheduled at Tuesday meet

Pampa city commissioners will select the new city logo during their regular meeting Tuesday morning.

City Manager Bob Hart said a citizens committee had selected six finalists from the 157 entries submitted. The commissioners will decide on the winning entry tomorrow.

The logo will be used on city letterheads, vehicles, patches and other materials to provide a sense of unity to city operations, Hart said.

The city commission also will consider ordinances concerning citizen advisory boards for the city.

One ordinance will establish a seven-member Parks and Recreation Advisory Board to provide continuous study, review and recommendations of the parks and recreation services of the city.

Another will provide changes in the Traffic Commission. Hart said one of the main changes will involve making surveys and recommendations relating to the city's compliance with the provisions of the Manual on Uniform Traffic Control Devices published by the U.S. Department of Transportation and Federal Highway Administration.

The commission also will consider appointments to the Board of Adjustments.

In other matters, the commissioners will consider awarding of bids relative to the street seal coating project for this year.

The commission will consider a new

See related column, Page two ordinance relative to wrecker rotation and impoundment. Also on the agenda are authorization of contracts for fire services with Lefors, Gray County and Roberts County.

Commissioners also will consider a contract with the Municipal Code Corporation of Tallahassee, Fla., relative to the codification of city ordinances. Hart said the codification will provide indexing, organization and easier access to city ordinances.

The commission will consider setting two public hearing dates for April 9 on zoning change request matters. One involves a request to change zoning from Retail to Commercial District for the triangle bounded by Hobart, Perryton Parkway and 23rd Ave. The other is a request to change zoning from Agriculture to Single Family 2 District for a tract bounded by Lynn St. on the west and located between Worrell and 18th Avenues.

Other items include approval of accounts payable and the schedule of personnel changes and an executive session to discuss pending litigation.

Hart will give the commission reports on Southwestern Bell Telephone's rate hike request, cab service, LPG transport routes and departmental reports.

One of these drawings will be chosen as the official logo for the city of Pampa during Tuesday's meeting of the city commission.

SOUTH AFRICAN VIOLENCE—Rioters in Kwanobuhle, near Uitenhagen, South Africa, Sunday attack the house of a township councillor, who along with his two sons was killed Saturday when the funeral home he owned was set afire by rioters. Police watch thousands of blacks

UITENHAGE, South Africa (AP) - Police in helicopters and armored cars hurried a convoy of thousands of jeering blacks through a whites-only district after the blacks attended a funeral for victims of race riots.
Uniformed police and reservists at almost every street corner Sunday made sure the cars did not stop.
Blacks shouted, "We're going to get you, whitey!" but there was no violence in spite of the highly emotional atmosphere surrounding the police killing of 19 blacks in the same area last Thursday.
Smoldering houses filled the air with smoke after overnight clashes with police in which three people died, raising to 29 the number of blacks killed since last Thursday, according to authorities on Sunday.

Mono Badela, a reporter for the Johannesburg-based black newspaper, City Press, said at least 25,000 blacks attended Sunday's funeral, on a large open square in the black township of Kwanobuhle, for three blacks killed in riots two weeks ago.
But police spokesman, Col. Gerrie van Rooyen, said about 8,000 blacks joined the funeral and procession to the cemetery. White reporters were barred from covering the funeral.
"We didn't go into the township at all during the funeral," van Rooyen said. He said there were no clashes during the day in Cape Province.

At the funeral, speakers from the United Democratic Front and other organizations opposing apartheid, the white-minority government's official system of race segregation, addressed the mourners.
The government has ordered a judicial inquiry into the shootings of the 19 blacks, which it maintains happened when the blacks refused orders to leave the whites-only district through which they were marching and began throwing rocks and gasoline bombs.

Finalists chosen in logo contest

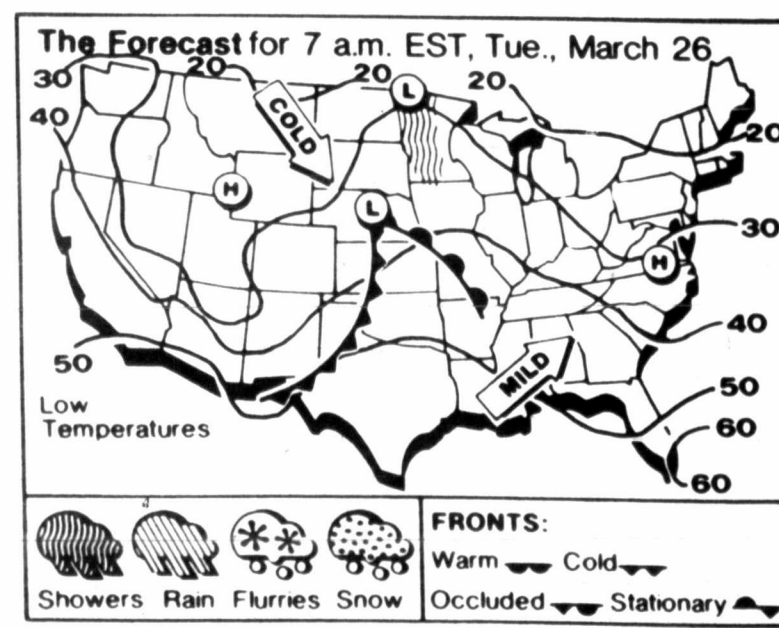

By BOB HART
Pampa City Manager
The City Logo design contest is now over.
We had 157 entries submitted, and they were very, very good entries. We had a committee of citizens representing various groups throughout the community that narrowed down the choices.
The Pampa City Commission will look at the six finalists at their Tuesday, March 26, meeting.
For those of you who submitted the 151 entries that were not selected as finalists, I appreciate your efforts and interests and must tell you that I have to share the same opinion of our judging committee, because they did not select my entry, either.
On behalf of the city commission, I want to thank everyone who participated in the logo contest. We are looking forward to getting the winning design in public and hope that every citizen can enjoy the logo while providing identification of Pampa as a city organization and community.
In other areas of city activities, I want to spend some time this week talking about our Animal Control Department.
As everyone knows, stray and unwanted animals are, and have always been, a problem in our country. Animals which are not cared for cause many problems. Among these are disease, both to the animal and ourselves; property damage, and nuisance by barking, biting and defecating on property other than its own.

These are just some of the reasons laws have been passed to protect the public from animals, disease and irresponsible pet owners.
Taking on a pet is a big responsibility. It is one that will last the lifetime of the pet. Most animals will live at least 10 years, a matter which should be considered when getting a pet.
As a pet owner, you are responsible to your pet as well as to your neighbors. When taking the task of responsible pet ownership, you are required to comply with all laws regarding animals: providing adequate health care; making every effort to avoid breeding, which causes more unwanted animals; cleaning up after your pet and providing your pet with the love and attention it requires.
In the City of Pampa, the law states you must fence, leash or chain your dog at all times. Dogs and cats must be vaccinated once a year for rabies by a licensed veterinarian and the animal must wear the tag.

Animals cannot be allowed to cause a nuisance. This would cover damaging or defecating on private property other than the owners; causing unsanitary, dangerous or offensive conditions; chasing vehicles, or biting and molesting persons.
In the city, the Animal Control Department works seven days a week, and the numbers of animals picked up each year is quite surprising. In 1984, we handled 3,279 calls and picked up 3,405 animals; 656 of those animals were dead on the streets, victims of motorists. (This is just one of the reasons you should keep your pets restrained.)
Animal Control issues hundreds of citations each year in hopes of encouraging pet owners to restrain their animals.
The employees of the Pampa Animal Shelter and your neighbors ask that you please be a responsible pet owner. A dog is a living creature that deserves safe and comfortable surroundings.
Our responsibility begins where yours ends.

GOP is taking aim at four statewide races

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Texas Republican Party leaders agree that a large and spirited Republican primary field could help the GOP defeat Gov. Mark White in 1986.

GOP leaders set their sites on four statewide offices, including the governor's post, when they gathered Saturday for the quarterly meeting of the State Republican Executive Committee.

They also snubbed the idea of separate presidential primaries and non-partisan judicial elections.

Besides hoping to recapture the governor's seat, GOP leaders said they reached an informal agreement to focus on ousting Attorney General Jim Mattox and Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, and winning the seat on the Texas Railroad Commission being vacated by Democrat Buddy Temple.

Houston oilman Rob Mosbacher, the GOP's state finance chairman, said concentrating on a handful of races is an attempt to thwart a united Democratic Party effort.

"By selectively targeting our opponents, we feel we'll be able to more effectively use the resources we'll have," he told the Dallas Times Herald. "And we won't ignite this Democratic Party juggernaut that could adversely affect the entire ticket."

GOP Chairman George Strake said Republican pollster Lance Tarrance of Houston found that 35 percent of the people he recently surveyed said they were unhappy with Democratic Gov. Mark White's performance.

Republicans acknowledging their interest in the governor's mansion include former state Sen. Bill Meier of Hurst, former state Sen. Mike Richards of Houston and incumbent state Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown of Lake Jackson.

Some Republicans and independents are trying to persuade conservative Democrat Kent Hance to switch parties and run in the GOP gubernatorial primary next year. The Dallas Morning News reported.

Other GOP leaders said they consider Mattox ripe for an upset because he served 18 months under a felony indictment before his recent acquittal on a commercial bribery charge.

Strake said the GOP's political experts will spend 1985 devising strategies for capturing the targeted races. With a budget of more than $2 million adopted Saturday, he said, 1985 "is the year to get our ducks in a row and soften up our targets."

Houston authorities investigating right-wing court visitors

HOUSTON (AP) — Tax protestors who have turned up in large numbers lately to disrupt court proceedings have caught the attention of investigators wondering if they are part of the far-right and sometimes violent Posse Comitatus.

"Sometimes they appear very volatile," said a county judge in whose court 15 of the protestors turned up recently. "They filter into the courtroom separately. Until we have something like the airport security machines, there's not much I can do."

Police started an investigation after large groups of protestors turned up in court and disrupted the proceedings, the Houston Chronicle reported Sunday. One so-called "tax patriot" was caught with a stun gun, authorities said.

"One thing we want to know, a very important matter, is if any of them have a connection with Posse Comitatus," said one officer close to the investigation.

Posse Comitatus, which doesn't recognize the Internal Revenue Service or the courts, contends the U.S. is a police state and says it wants to do away with the Federal Reserve System. The group also claims traffic fines are illegal revenues.

Most of the recent tax protestors come into courts with misdemeanor traffic charges and then proceed to file multiple motions, clogging the judicial procedure, officials said.

A privately circulated memorandum written recently by a Harris County judge overseeing the investigation noted: "They are basically tax protestors that wish our government to be in another form. Religion is part of the organization. Some have a cache of weapons."

"They are cousins to the Ku Klux Klan. The organizations are springing up rapidly across the nation. We can attest to this because of their seemingly sudden involvement in the county courts."

The memo continued: "Some of these tax protest groups are in La Porte, the metroplex area, Louisiana and the Western states."

Posse Comitatus members have had violent encounters with police around the United States and many have tangled with the IRS, officials said.

The tax protestors disassociate themselves from the violent Posse Comitatus, but the Chronicle said that interviews showed they often espouse many of the Posse Comitatus tenets.

Off beat

Read that camera manual

With warmer weather and the greening of grass and plants comes the desire for outdoor activities and the making of plans for that vacation trip.

While getting prepared for the summer-time activities, don't forget to check out that camera which probably hasn't been used since you took those pictures of the children and grandchildren at Christmas time.

One of these still-cool evenings when it's better to be inside than outdoors would be a fine time to check the camera and its related equipment to make sure it is working properly. When you are preparing to take that once-in-a-lifetime picture miles from nowhere is not the time to find out it won't work.

Most of today's cameras depend upon tiny batteries to supply power to the light meters and other electronic systems. If the battery has been in the camera from several months, it might be wise to replace it. Batteries always seem to go dead just before you want to take an important picture.

Most of us have 35 mm cameras, so we should check the beast out to make sure it is clean and working properly. First remove the lens and lock up the mirror system. Then use an air syringe or a baby aspirator and blow all of that dust out of the inside of the camera. Dust can get on the film and it causes those small, black dots on the pictures. Be sure and check to see if any small pieces of broken film are inside the camera, they do weird things like blocking the film advance mechanism or getting in front of the new film and spoiling the picture.

Also, blow the dust off of both ends of the lens and then take lens cleaning tissue with a drop of lens cleaner on it and clean the lenses. Careful...don't use too much of the liquid cleaner. Never touch the lens with your fingers and make sure that only proper lens cleaning tissues are used to wipe the surfaces of the lens.

If it has been some time since you have used your camera it might be a good idea to dig out the instruction manual which came with it when you purchased it. Maybe you are like many people who don't even bother to look at the manual before beginning to use a new camera and may have trouble finding the manual.

But, from years of experience and the use of numerous types of cameras I have found that it is best to read that little book first, becoming familiar with the camera. By studying the book and walking through the camera, one can familiarize himself with all of the controls as well as just what the camera can do.

Believe it or not, most camera instruction manuals are interesting reading, particularly those for the more expensive interchangeable lens cameras.

Most camera instruction manuals begin with nomenclature pages that name each major part and show where they are located. Do you know, for example, where the film plane indicator is on your camera? (You use it for exact measurement of film to subject distance.)

Read through and locate each item listed. If you don't know what the item is for, read on until you do know.

For instance, the manual will tell you the type of battery to load in your camera and the location of the battery compartment. Once the batteries are loaded, it tells you how to check to see if they were properly loaded or if they are good.

Next we learn how to mount the lens and then open the camera back and load film. The latter is particularly interesting. Many times people load their film improperly so that it does not roll up on the takeup spool — and only discover the error some 50 or so exposure later when they begin to wonder why they haven't hit the end of the roll yet.

If you had followed the instructions in the manual this wouldn't happen. Once the film is loaded and you close the back of the camera, the manual tells you to turn the rewind crank until it is tight and then shoot off two frames. When you crank the film to the next frame the rewind crank will move. If it doesn't it's not winding on the takeup spool. It's a trick most pros use without thinking.

Next the manual shows you how to set the ASA-ISO film dial, how to hold the camera, how to read exposure information in the viewfinder, how to focus with the basic focusing screen in place, how to take the picture, rewind and remove the film.

It also explains how far you must advance the film advance lever, how the frame counter works, how the shutter release button works, how the shutter speed and aperture dials work and more, but in much more detail than the basic operation section included.

Begin with the basics and move forward gradually. The manual explains, for example, depth of field and shows you how it's determined. It explains the relationship between f stops and speed settings and tells you when to use a high speed (for fast action) or low speed (for more depth of field), how to use the self timer and the multiple exposure (if the camera is so equipped).

Flash photography is covered, complete with warnings about some complete with warnings about some types of flash units that should not be used with the camera.

Finally it winds up with accessories you may want to get some day to go with your camera, warns about some types of lenses that can not be used with the camera and has an excellent section on camera, lens and battery care.

It's not just an instruction manual on the camera, but a miniature course in photography. Take out the instruction manual and read it, thoroughly.

Senate considers seat belt bill today

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas senators are expected to finally approve today a bill requiring the use of seat belts by those in the front seat of a moving automobile.

The measure, by a late amendment, also includes "Big Bubba" in his pickup truck.

The bill, which calls for fines of $25 to $50, was tentatively approved Thursday.

A final approval sends it to the House for committee action and floor debate.

Legislators returned from a long weekend with 133 days left in their regular legislative session.

Also on the Senate's agenda for Monday was a bill that would increase from three to six the membership of the state highway commission.

A Senate committee Monday will hear a proposal that would allow second home mortgages, which State Comptroller Bob Bullock said "is on the upswing in financial markets."

Texas is the only state that prohibits homeowners from borrowing money against the paid equity in a home for purposes other than home improvements or taxes on the home.

Bullock, in response to an inquiry from Rep. Debra Danburg, D-Houston, said hypothetical figures suggest that Texas "could receive an economic shot in the arm of somewhere between $4.8

billion to $7.2 billion, and the state might get between $240 million to $360 million in sales tax revenues" if homeowners could borrow against equity.

The comptroller stressed that his figures did not represent an official estimate.

A delegation of mayors and others was expected to testify Monday against a bill in House committee that the Texas Municipal League says is another attempt "to limit the means to cities to regulate billboards."

"Effectively what it will do is stop cities from being able to protect the aesthetic quality of our cities," said San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros, league president. "No city has the resources in its general fund to spend massive amounts of public funds to purchase billboards."

On Tuesday, a conference committee will hold its second meeting to resolve differences in the House and Senate versions of water proposals.

A controversial proposal to regulate fish-for-profit contests is on a Senate committee calendar for Wednesday.

The bill would allow the state to levy a fee of up to 15 percent of the overall purse of the larger fishing tournaments.

Opponents claim it would kill tournament fishing in Texas.

ISLAND EXODUS SLOW—An unidentified tourist waves goodbye to Galveston Island from the back of pickup truck as the vehicle he was riding slowly makes its way out of the city due to heavy traffic about dusk Sunday. The bumper to bumper traffic results when the beach crowds all decide to head back home at the same time. The beautiful weather and 71 degree temperature brought the tourists to Galveston.

Lawmakers considering computer crime bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Two Texas lawmakers are sponsoring separate legislation that they say will bring the state into "the 21st Century" and outlaw computer snooping.

State Sen. Ray Farabee and state Rep. Barry Connelly say their bills would outlaw computer tampering and make it illegal to alter or destroy somebody else's computer data.

Experts say that because of the state's vibrant high-tech climate, Texas is likely to be a prime target for computer crime because there are no laws against computer snooping. Many other states, they say, have passed laws punishing computer violators.

"These are crimes that can cause thousands, if not millions, of dollars in damage," said Farabee, a Wichita Falls Democrat.

His legislation has won approval from the state Senate and Connelly's companion bill is now pending in the House.

Both measures would make altering computer records a felony punishable by up to 10 years in prison and a fine of up to $5,000. Computer snooping would be a misdemeanor punishable by up to 180 days in jail and a fine of up to $1,000.

Connelly said prosecutors are now reluctant to pursue complicated computer fraud or theft cases because the laws currently on the books don't really fit high-tech crimes.

"If a prosecutor has to take the time, the money, the resources to struggle through existing statutes to find out some place where he might be able to nail somebody, he's not going to do it," the Houston Republican said.

Although the scope of computer crime is thought to be large, no one is certain how much damage it causes. In the highly competitive world of high technology, firms are often reluctant to report breaches of security, the Dallas Morning News said.

"It's estimated that up to 90 percent of these crimes go unreported," said Shannon Vale of Austin, a lobbyist for the Texas Computer Industry Council.

The American Bar Association said more than a quarter of the businesses it surveyed last year said they were victims of computer crime. The association estimated annual losses at $730 million.

Group threatens suits for land lost to Mexico

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A group of Mexican-Americans are waging a legal battle to reclaim millions of acres of South Texas land and the group's leader says it might sue the state for $1 billion.

The group — Asociacion de Reclamantes — says the land was lost through an 1848 treaty between the United States and Mexico.

Last Monday, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear the Asociacion's case against Mexico. But the group's leader said the fight will proceed despite the high court's refusal.

"We're not going to give up no matter what happens," the group's president, Yolanda Zarate, told nearly 200 members at a meeting Saturday.

Another suit may be filed in Texas, probably in San Antonio, said the group's attorney, Robert Salazar of Denver.

Miss Zarate said the Mexican government had indicated a willingness to settle the dispute diplomatically.

"But they haven't done anything to settle with us," she said. "And seven years have gone by."

The Edinburg woman said the descendants will make a final attempt to negotiate with Mexico through lawyers.

"But if we don't get anywhere, we will sue Texas," she said.

The final recourse, she said, would be to sue the United States.

The U.S. got what was believed to be clear title to Mexican land located between the Nueces and the Rio Grande rivers, including the King Ranch and Padre Island, through the 1848 Treaty of Guadalupe.

The descendants, who number about 2,500, claim the two governments should not have let private citizens lose their land. They have fought for compensation through the Asociacion since 1978 in federal courts in Mexico and the U.S.

"If we can get somebody to see what's in black and white in the treaty," said Miss Zarate, "then they'll see that we're entitled to the repayment."

Aminta Zarate, mother of Miss Zarate and treasurer of the Asociacion de Reclamantes, said the organization is in financial trouble and asked its members to pay their $25 annual fee.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coving commandment.

Our opinion

He calls it courage, we call it tyranny

If you are among the citizens of this country who believe in the concept of "representative government," in which those you elect to public office carry out your wishes, you would have found comments by Texas House Speaker Gib Lewis last week most disturbing.

Lewis, speaking on a panel before the Texas AP Managing Editors Association, had just proposed the formation of a select committee to study the needs of higher education in the state. He was asked by Lubbock Editor Burle Pettit if it might not be a good idea to see how the public school reforms implemented by H. Ross Perot's committee work out before assigning another committee to reform the colleges and universities of the state.

It was a fairly simple question—and one that we think should have been asked. But Lewis responded as if he had been personally attacked for helping push the Perot recommendations, and the accompanying tax increase, through the special session of the Legislature last year.

He unleashed a lengthy defense of the recent public school changes (we hesitate to call them reforms), and proclaimed, in effect, that they have already saved public education in Texas, even through none of the changes have been in effect long enough to gauge their impact and most still have not been implemented.

It is bad enough for the speaker of the Texas House (along with the governor) to take such an absurd position. But something else Lewis said bothered us even more.

He said even if his support of the education changes eventually costs him re-election, he is proud of the part he played in getting them approved. He praised the "political courage" of other members of the Legislature who supported the education package, then were kicked out of office by the voters when they sought re-election.

What Lewis was saying is that he is proud of actions he took as an elected legislator, even if those actions were opposed by the people who elected him.

And, his praise of other legislators was for acting in direct contradiction to the wishes of their constituents.

He can call that "political courage" if he wants to. We think it is more like "political tyranny."

One thing it is not, though, is representative government.

Soviet economy won't rise

So what's the betting as to Mikhail Gorbachev?

The betting is that, youth and personal vigor notwithstanding, Gorbachev will never be able to impart life to the moribund Soviet economy. Probably not even the semblance of life.

The betting says something hopeful about Westerners. Namely, that some durable scales have fallen from well-covered eyes, some hard lessons taken belatedly to heart.

Whatever Lincoln Steffens, the credulous American editor, may have said back in the '20s, the Soviet Union is NOT the future. It does NOT work - never did, never will, any more than a broken axle will carry a Peterbilt truck.

Gorbachev, like Yuri Andropov, his tutor, may exercise himself in the hunting down of shirkers, black marketeers, and outright thieves. All beside the point. The point is that communism fails economically because it is the embodiment of capital punishment: It punishes economic capital at every possible turn.

Communism centralizes economic decision-making, withholds incentives to produce, scorns private accumulation, penalizes work, rewards sloth, does all it can, in fine, to make misery and poverty as inevitable as sunset.

Not that communism can do otherwise. The Soviet system operates this way simply because it is Soviet - built, that is, on an extravagant fable.

The fable is that the state's raw, bloody power can drive horses to water AND make them drink.

If the fable seemed plausible in the '20s, '30s, and even beyond, it was because nothing like Marxism had ever been tried on a large scale. A noted Dallas clergyman, the Rev. Canon Donald Henning, tells a story much to the point. It concerns a Scottish Presbyterian dominie haranguing his flock with forecasts of fiery torment in the afterlife. "I can see ye now," quoth the dominie, "Ye'll be crying, 'Laahrd, Laahrd, we'd hae done right if only we'd known. But we didn't know!' And in a voice of thunder, the Laahrd will cry, 'Well, ye know NOW!'"

Yes, concerning the economic lunacies of communism, we Westerners know now. But do the Soviets know? And, knowing, are they prepared to take serious remedial actions? Like the Chinese Communists, for instance, who in recent years have pried open the economic system - a little - offering incentives to invest and produce.

Theoretically, of course, Gorbachev could act in exactly this way. The betting, as I say, is that he will do no such thing. This, because, under existing circumstances, he would have to challenge the way of life of the Nomanklatura, the party establishment, which lives off the fat of the land and likes things just as they are.

Who knows what goes on in the minds of these - so to dignify them - people? It is enough perhaps to note that in the past they have always resisted reform, preferring porcine privilege to economic reality. When Krushchev started to tamper with the system, out went Krushchev.

Andropov, the secret policeman, bruted no reforms during his short tenure. He simply flourished the whip. Gorbachev, for all anyone knows, could be a closet supply - sider. What IS known about him is that he is Andropov's disciple.

Meanwhile, back in the West, what is there to do? Something different, maybe, like making the Soviet Union's economic problems harder, not easier, in order to encourage economic loosening in the Chinese mode.

The more grain, the more technology, the more drilling equipment, even the more Pepsi Cola the West sells the Soviets - on cheap credit, natch - the less urgent becomes Gorbachev's need to tackle the establishment and shake its power. And thereby make the world at least a little safer for democracy.

Soviet muscle is exclusively military; Western muscle is chiefly economic. The former is constantly exercised in foreign policy, the latter almost never. Why? That's what Westerners should be asking, in the dawn of the Gorbachev era.

Today in History

Today is Monday, March 25, the 84th day of 1985. There are 281 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

One March 25, 1965, the Reverend Martin Luther King Jr. led 25,000 marchers to the state Capitol in Montgomery, Ala., to protest the denial of voting rights to blacks. That same day, civil rights worker Viola Liuzzo of Detroit was shot to death while driving to Montgomery.

On this date:

Ten years ago: King Faisal of Saudi Arabia was shot to death by a nephew with a history of mental illness. The nephew was beheaded in June, 1975.

Five years ago: Massachusetts Senator Edward M. Kennedy upset President Jimmy Carter in the New York and Connecticut Democratic presidential primaries. On the Republican side, Ronald Reagan took New York while George Bush won in Connecticut.

One year ago: Voters in El Salvador, hindered by a shortage of ballots and confusion over election rules, went to the polls to elect a president.

Wild driving for survival

You are seeing some wild driving on TV. There must be an enormous public fascination with cars careening over curbs, skidding in circles and jumping into lakes.

Some of us suspect the chase movies encourage impressionable youngsters to attempt a degree of stunt driving which is dangerous even for professionals.

At the same time there is now a school you can attend which teaches wild driving with a purpose.

It may be that the best driver training for police is available to Los Angeles lawmen; practical lessons which teach the physical limits of an automobile.

Yet, even that "best" driver training program is 30 years out of date.

Terrorists since have been teaching themselves much better techniques - while corporate executives, military personnel, government officials and private citizens have become increasingly vulnerable.

Responding to that need, JPM was established in 1983. JPM, located in Falls Church, Va., identifies J. Peter Minogue, an antiterrorist specialist.

At a driver training facility on Long Island, Minogue's experts are teaching the good guys how to elude and - or escape the bad guys.

Americans most in jeopardy - or their drivers - are taught vehicle modification, weapons, hostage survival, armor and tactical driving, detecting vehicle bombs.

Tactical driving of an automobile - even an armor - plated automobile - requires both dexterity and knowhow. The skidding in circles "performance driving" you see on TV is not safe at any speed, it requires a studied understanding of the vehicle and its capabilities on various road surfaces.

The learning process requires concentration and many hours of practical exercises both on the open road and in traffic.

Most high schools teach "defensive driving," remaining alert to what the other driver might do.

JPM teaches "aggressive driving," appropriate response to what a kidnapper or assassin is likely to do.

No driver graduates from JPM without sharing the wealth of security experience shared by its distinguished faculty.

And nobody is certified until he can handle slalom, compound braking, threshold braking, off - road recovery, low - tire exercises, blown - tire exercises, pursuit driving evasive maneuvers - bootleg runs, J - turns.

And he must handle "surprises" - ambushes, barricades, ramming - day or night.

It's a shame we have to think of these things but, since we have to, it's a good thing that the somebody who is best at it - is on our side.

Smooth change in power

It just goes to show what a little practice can do.

The latest transfer of power in Moscow was accomplished with dispatch and precision that might suggest the Soviets do this sort of thing all the time.

As a matter of fact, that pretty much describes the situation of late, this being the third changing of the Kremlin guard in less than three years.

The experience showed. From the announcement of Konstantin Chernenko's death to the naming of Mikhail Gorbachev as his successor barely five hours later to the Red Square funeral three days later, proceedings were public and orderly - in marked contrast to past occasions, especially the conspiratorial and chaotic events of 30 years ago.

That was the occasion of Josef Stalin's prolonged passing, attended by a news blackout outside the Kremlin and a power struggle within - to the death in one case. Lavrenti Beria, the sinister secret police boss, grabbed for supreme power and got himself shot. Another prominent claimant to the succession, Georgi Malenkov, lucked out with a one-way ticket to the provinces and political oblivion.

Eventually, one Nikita Khrushchev, who had been no one's choice except his own, elbowed all others aside and got the job, which he later lost in another power struggle.

That is all fairly recent history, and the smooth Chernenko-Gorbachev transfer suggests the Soviets may have learned something from it. Exactly how much, however, we may be a long time yet in learning - possibly until it is time for Gorbachev himself to pass on power.

It may be that his accession marks an achievement that has previously eluded the Soviets in the almost 70 years since their revolution. For all we know, a process may have been implemented for selecting an heir and guaranteeing that he will be permitted to take charge without challenge at the appropriate time.

But it would appear otherwise. Granted that the internal workings of the Kremlin remain murky to those outside, the best guess is that this succession was again by consensus. More readily reached than the last two perhaps, but still with the air of the ad hoc about it.

It may have worked well this time, if only because the necessity was so obvious following two very short-tenures. But that is not the same as institutionalizing the process, or, possibly even more important, regularly bringing new and younger talent into that process.

It is not that the need for the latter especially isn't recognized, as Gorbachev's own rapid ascent demonstrates. He was taken into the Politburo in 1980, when old Bolshevik Alexei Kosygin retired as prime minister, pointing up the superannuated state of the governing hierarchy. The average age of the Politburo at the time was deep in the 70s. Gorbachev, then 49, was the youngest member by almost a decade.

But again, there is still an air of the ad hoc. The Politburo average age is now down to the high 60s, but beginning to creep up again.

Gorbachev remains the youngest. Having made it to the top in record time and apparent good health, he is likely to remain there for a long time.

Driving lessons cause good marriage to slip out of gear

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Someone wrote in to say that women whose husbands always drove them around were at a terrible disadvantage should they become widowed without having learned how to drive. He then urged all married men to teach their wives how to drive.

I'm all for women learning how to drive, but I have never met a man who taught his wife to drive who would recommend it to another man. A man can teach another man's wife how to drive, but when it comes to teaching his own wife, it's one big fight from beginning to end!

I am not smart enough to explain it in technical terms, but there is something about the husband-wife relationship that makes it impossible for the wife to accept criticism or instruction from her own husband. And for some reason, a man has very little patience with his own wife's mistakes.

Newlyweds or old-timers, it makes no difference: If there's a man alive who ever taught his wife how to drive without a fight, I'd like to know how he did it.

BEEN THERE IN FLORIDA

DEAR BEEN THERE: Probably by knowing how to disengage his mouth until he put his brain in gear, his patience in overdrive and his temper in reverse.

DEAR ABBY: I need advice fast. My mother, who just turned 65, had an operation two months ago for cancer of the lung. One-third of her lung was removed and she's been on oxygen ever since. Her doctor says she's doing fairly well. Now my problem: I have caught my mother smoking several times. Her doctor told her not to smoke, but she smokes anyway.

My father has a heart condition, and if he found out, it would tear him apart. And if her doctor knew this, I don't know what he'd do.

I love my mother and don't want her to turn against me, but I know that not saying anything to my father and the doctor isn't right. How should I handle this situation? UPSET

DEAR UPSET: I'm sure you are aware that smoking around oxygen can be disastrous, so for that reason alone you must tell the doctor that your mother is sneaking smokes.

Although the cancerous portion of your mother's lung was removed, her craving for tobacco was not, so she also needs to be treated for nicotine addiction. Tell your mother's doctor at once. It could save her life.

DEAR ABBY: I'm so angry I'm ready to explode! I am soon to be married, and I cannot believe the number of people who are bringing guests to my wedding. A great deal of planning went into making up our guest list, keeping in mind both the size of the room and the cost of the affair, and I resent all these extra people, most of whom I don't even know.

Only one person called to ask if he could bring a guest. Abby, this is not a backyard barbecue; it's a formal wedding, for God's sake!

What should a bride do when the dining room for her sit-down wedding dinner accommodates 210, and the response cards indicate that 234 will attend? (Incidentally, the dinners cost $70 a plate.)

Has anyone ever telephoned an invited guest who penciled in a couple of extra guests and said, "I'm sorry, but I can't accommodate your guests?"

I've heard, "There's always room for one more," and I suppose there is—but 24? Any suggestions? FURIOUS ON LONG ISLAND

DEAR FURIOUS: If you're asking for my permission to call those who penciled in extra guests to say, "Sorry, I can't accommodate your guests," you have it.

Kerkvliets remember Pampa

Editor's note: The family histories that are to be included in the Gray County history book, titled "Gray County Heritage" are not only those who live here now. As shown in the article following, there are families who are a part of Gray County's heritage even though they no longer live here.

KERKVLIENT, Edmund and Blanche

Thirty-four years have passed since Ed and Blanche McMillen kerkvliet left Pampa, and they still must explain to "northerners" that it's near Amarillo.

But Pampa is a special place to them. They met here in 1943 and after World War II ended they married here on Feb. 28, 1946. Two of their sons were born in Pampa: Paul Edmund in November 1946, and Stephen Joseph in May 1949.

Now Pampa Army Air Field is gone. So is Holy Souls Church. And the old Pampa Hospital is no more. Like most structures, they have succumbed to time, but our memories have not.

Ed's first impression upon "shipping in" at the new air base in 1942 was not favorable. Winds blew across the plains, sharper than any blizzard in Minnesota. He had been born in one on March 27, 1917, to Nicholas and Margaret Dubbeldee Kerkvliet on their Lincoln County farm.

But Ed was a survivor. From Texas he was sent to Air Cadet school at Bozeman, Mont. Training was cut short in 1944 and he was sent overseas with the Air Transport Command in the Southwest Pacific. An occasional air raid interrupted the daily existence, as the soldiers waited for the war to wind down.

Eight years later, Ed would take his chances of surviving as a farmer, with borrowed money, on 160 snow-covered acres in Wisconsin. New neighbors were dubious after learning "the missus" never worked a day on a farm. In just a year, however, the Kerkvliets had survived and made the first year's payment on their land contract right on time. When James Michael arrived in April 1953, those same folks talked about their new neighbor's luck.

"Another tractor driver for Ed," they said. Blanche McMillen Kerkvliet was born Dec. 31, 1917, at Clovis, N.M., to Roy and Bernice Adams McMillen. Her father was from Newton County, Mo., while Bernice was born at Murray, Ky., but both grandfathers had been caught up in the westward migration.

Roy left his job with the Santa Fe Railroad in Clovis for better pay at a grain elevator in Amarillo soon after sister Janet was born in 1923. Their father was an avid photographer, leaving his daughters an irreplaceable legacy on film. Visits to grandparents and old family friends, vacations, school days, weddings and other milestones were all captured and placed in albums.

Blanche had barely started school in 1926 when Roy announced they were moving to Pampa. During an earlier visit by Roy's sister and her husband from Oklahoma, there had been a few trips to Pampa. Roy's employer knew of a grain elevator for sale there. Where the "wheat grows and oil flows" was no empty slogan. Roy and Grover Stark were impressed and a partnership was formed. As "moving day" loomed nearer, Blanche felt more apprehensive.

The first days at school in Pampa were dismal. Instead of classes in the red brick building on the east side of the block downtown, she was sent to one of the "barracks." They had been hauled in to accommodate the increased enrollment until new schools could be built in different sections of the rapidly growing town.

The family had been staying with the Starks who had bought a house out on East Browning earlier that year. Roy's father came down from Colorado to help build the little house on back of the lot at 446 N. Hill. It was home until they were able to start construction on the large brick veneer. It was 1929 and business was booming.

Years to follow, however, were "boom-to-bust" especially for some farmers, and eventually for some grain elevators. Nature sought her revenge in form of "black blizzards" which heightened in 1935, the year Blanche graduated from high school.

The year before had seen the Stark-McMillen partnership dissolved, and Roy was fortunate to be working as business manager for Pampa Independent School District.

College seemed impossible, but Blanche enrolled at Texas State College for Women in Denton that fall as a journalism major. She took summer jobs between terms, and after her sophomore year she decided to stay home to work as secretary at the First Christian Church. In 1938 she enrolled at Western School for Private Secretaries at Albuquerque, returning late the following year to take a bookkeeping job at Pampa Office Supply.

From 1942 to 1946, Blanche was at Cabot, mostly in the payroll department, with a year as chief clerk. Hours were long and demanding until after V-J Day, when she turned her job over to one of the men returning home and worked as a secretary until becoming a full-time homemaker.

PHS student awarded Wal-Mart scholarship

Worley Kennedy, son of Judge and Mrs. Carl Kennedy, has been selected to receive a $1,000 scholarship from the Wal-Mart Store in Pampa.

"We are very pleased to award this academic scholarship to such an outstanding student. The judges had a slate of well-qualified students representing several schools to choose from."

Kennedy, a senior at Pampa

High School, plans to attend Texas A&M University in College Station this fall. The scholarship selection criteria is based primarily on academic performance and involvement in the school and community.

Kennedy has been active in Student Council, Key Club, Young Life, and National Honor Society. He has participated in football, basketball, baseball, and track throughout his high school career.

Photography project begins with meeting on Tuesday

The first Gray County 4-H photography project is to begin Tuesday at 7 p.m. at the Gray County Courthouse Annex.

Steve Osborn is to lead this project. Having studied photography, Osborn has also done some professional work such as weddings and family portraits.

At the meeting, Osborn will tell participants what he has planned for the project and the equipments and supplies needed.

Those who are interested in the project do not have to be a current 4-H member. The project is open to anyone, ages 9 to 19, who are interested in photography. Any camera will be accepted for use in the project.

Animals are massacred at Australian children's zoo

ADELAIDE, Australia (AP) — Shocked keepers at the children's zoo this morning found the carcasses of 64 animals, including kangaroos, sheep and a crocodile, that had been hacked to death during the night, police said.

Police Detective Sgt. Jeff Lawrence said the attackers appeared to have climbed into the children's section of the Adelaide zoo over a wooden fence and slaughtered the animals, more like pets to staff and the thousands of children who visited them.

"As a police officer you can accept a murder scene, but to see innocent animals in a children's zoo slaughtered... One's got to wonder what type of person this is," he said.

Police said they were sure the killings were carried out by more than one person because several people would have been required to hold down some of the larger animals while they were being killed.

"The sheep were disembowelled, the majority of the animals had their throats cut or were stabbed near the heart," he said.

An antelope, a llama, kangaroos and sheep were among the larger animals attacked in the slaughter which extended indiscriminately to guinea pigs, rabbits and chickens inside a children's playhouse.

In one section, a crocodile was beaten over the head with an iron bar, dragged over a low railing and disembowelled. In another enclosure, kangaroos had had their throats slashed.

"Most of them were tame and would come up to you, and consequently were very easy to catch," said zoo director Robert Baker as zoo staff and police inspected the scene.

Baker said the killings would have taken some time because of the large number of animals attacked. "It was the way in which it was done that was so terrible, it was obviously premeditated," he said.

"They just went from one enclosure to the next killing. All the staff are extremely distressed and angry."

Another Frenchman feared kidnapped in Lebanese city

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The head of the French Cultural Center in the Moslem port city of Tripoli in northern Lebanon is reported missing and feared kidnapped, police here said today.

Police sources in Beirut said Bernard Bonne, a French language teacher at the center, informed police in the El-Tall neighborhood of the city that Gilles Sidney Peyrolles last had been seen Saturday afternoon. Tripoli is 50 miles north of Beirut.

The sources spoke only on condition they not be identified.

Police said an investigation had been launched but that there was no word on Peyrolles' whereabouts.

Although the Lebanese army was sent into Tripoli late last year to end militia fighting, Tripoli remains largely under the control of the "Tawheed Islami," a Sunni Moslem fundamentalist group headed by Sheik Saeed Shaaban.

The report followed the kidnappings of at least four foreigners, and possibly six, in mostly Moslem west Beirut in the past two weeks. No clues have emerged to the whereabouts of any of the victims.

The kidnap victims include American journalist, Terry A. Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press; two Britons and a French diplomat. Two other French citizens are missing and feared kidnapped.

Anonymous telephone callers have claimed responsibility for all the recent kidnappings, as well as the abductions of four other Americans missing in west Beirut, in the name of a group called Jihad Islami, or Islamic Holy War.

Meanwhile, Sheik Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah, a Shiite Moslem cleric with reported links to the mysterious Hezbollah radical movement, issued a statement denouncing kidnapping.

His statement appeared in the Beirut independent newspaper An-Nahar on Sunday.

Fadlallah has said he does not believe Jihad Islami exists. Some observers say the name Jihad Islami may be a code word used by several anti-Western groups.

Congressional news releases are costly items for nation's taxpayers

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senator from Maryland complained recently about the vast sums of taxpayer money that members of Congress spend on news releases and newsletters.

"When there is an oversupply of any product the value goes down," said Republican Charles McC. Mathias.

Mathias was on the Senate floor when he voiced his cry for a change. His staff made sure the world knew about it, by issuing a news release.

columnist wouldn't know if he didn't open his mail."

He would have been delighted to be on the U.S. Naval Observatory mailing list. The news releases prepared by Gail S. Cleere not only inform, but they can brighten even a non-astronomer's morning.

"Venus will absolutely dazzle us in February," she wrote in that month's newsletter. "Her finest hour of the year is on the 26th when she shines at a magnitude of -4.3."

Whatever -4.3 is, it's good.

The last thing a newspaper should print is a primer on what sets a usable news release apart from one that doesn't even get its envelope slit.

For instance, the day's mail brings a piece that begins, "An Important News Item. As you probably know..." If we know it, it isn't news.

That wasn't the only turn-off. Included was a testimonial from former Interior Secretary James Watt, beginning "As a veteran of wars with the media and the so-called opinion makers." Some things are better left unsaid.

Back to Capitol Hill. To borrow from Boyle, things you wouldn't know if you didn't read handouts:

That Sen. Jim McClure, R-Idaho, warns the public "to be aware of the double-dealing" of a conservation group, which apparently found his support for conservation to be lukewarm.

An AP News Analysis

According to Mathias, congressmen spent $68 million and senators $43 million on news releases and newsletters last year.

People who write news releases operate on the theory that if you distribute enough of them, some might get used, making the effort worthwhile. Others take the more realistic view that they are producing junk mail no one wants, but it's a living.

The difference between newsletters and news releases is a narrow one. The newsletter, mailed at great expense, tells voters at home what a grand job their representatives in Congress are doing. The congressional news release tells reporters what great things the member is saying and doing.

Congress is only one contributor to the floodtide of handouts. News releases are a major industry in Washington. Fold in the busy minds in the federal agencies and departments, stir in a healthy dose of flackery from lobby groups, season well with gobs of personal promotion and get a stomach ache visualizing whole forests being consumed for self-aggrandizement.

The late Associated Press columnist Hal Boyle, who died in 1974, was a consummate artist at plowing through mounds of news releases to find pearls to glisten under the heading "things a

Researchers fear looters have many Mayan treasures

IXCANRIO, Guatemala (AP) — Looters have taken so many artifacts from the ruins of an ancient Mayan city that researchers at the site say their own work is now "salvage archaeology."

The ruins discovered in Guatemala's northeast corner are the site of the Mayan city Rio Azul, which flourished more than 1,000 years ago.

Archaeologists hoped the ruins would tell them about life in Rio Azul, named for a nearby river, but looters may have taken some of the site's most important artifacts, the Houston Chronicle reported.

"The horrible thing is those objects are being exhibited at major museums, and they were being sold on Madison Avenue in New York last year," said Clemency Coggins, a researcher at Harvard University's Peabody Museum.

Richard Adams, an archaeologist who reported the site's existence in 1982, said some U.S. art buyers quietly encourage looting.

"There is a gentlemen's agreement between the buyers and the dealers: 'Don't ask questions,'" said Adams, who heads a 14-member team studying the ruins.

Adams said Harvard archaeologist Ian Graham, who is traveling in Central America, once saw a jade mask on sale for $35,000 from a New York art gallery.

The mask bore the Rio Azul emblem glyph, a mark used to identify a person or place on artifacts.

Ms. Coggins said that while glyphs are "about as conspicuous as possible," it is impossible to prove the origin of an artifact.

"You have to make judgments on the basis of stylistic or chronological factors, but I don't know if that is legally binding," Ms. Coggins said.

Museums are becoming "a lot more cautious" about the artifacts they accept, but they are still pressured by collectors who want to donate an object for a tax deduction, she said.

"Certainly, the tax laws at this moment encourage donation of objects to museums," she said.

"And the laws do not in any way look at the question of stolen objects."

However, Douglas Ewing, president of the American Association of Dealers of Ancient, Oriental and Primitive Art, said the looting is "a local problem."

A massive plunder of the Rio Azul ruins in 1981 was interrupted when Graham and a Guatemalan official surprised the looters. Government agents exchanged gunfire with the raiders, but many artifacts had already been removed from the site.

"It is unlikely that the idea came from within Guatemala," he said. "The value of the ruins at Rio Azul is something only a trained archaeologist would know."

Demonstration recalls 60s

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A small group gathered this weekend to mark the fifth anniversary of the slaying of El Salvador's Archbishop Oscar Romero.

Romero was gunned down March 24, 1980 while saying Mass inside a church in his war-torn Central American country.

The group of about 30 people also met to deplore the war and violence that has spread to other Central American countries since Romero's violent death.

Some people waved cardboard signs bearing slogans such as "No more covert war, Ron" and "Nicaragua is Spanish for Vietnam."

The nephew of Salvadoran President Napoleon Duarte stood in his carmel-colored corduroy cowboy hat and remembered the sermons Romero gave at the Metropolitan Cathedral in San Salvador.

"He was a very good, good person," said Jose Reynaldo Duarte in broken English. "He said, 'I am the voice of the people.' When he died it increased the problem in El Salvador. It was bad for everybody."

Duarte, his wife and four daughters came to the United States in February 1981. He sells vacuum cleaners in El Paso while awaiting word on his application for political asylum.

Duarte said he had never before attended a gathering of activists concerned about his homeland and Central America.

Duarte, 40, said he did not agree with the group's contention that the United States should end military aid to Central American governments. But he respected their right to say so.

Contest set for Texas directory cover

How would you like to see your painting on nine million telephone books in Texas?

Now's your chance. Southwestern Bell Telephone is sponsoring a statewide contest to select a painting for use on its directory covers during 1986.

The painting should depict in some way the Texas Sesquicentennial. It might portray significant events or sites in the state's history; it may even include faces of Texas' heroes. You are only limited by your imagination.

In announcing the contest, our Texas Division president, Jim Adams, summed it up this way: "Southwestern Bell has played an active role in the state's history and its growth. It just seemed like a natural for us to be involved in celebrating the Sesquicentennial."

Texas roots go back to 1880s

"We're a Texas company with roots going back to the 1880s. You might say we have grown up together. That partnership continues today. Our 34,000 employees are involved on-and-off-the-job in serving 4 1/2 million Texans in more than 450 communities."

A purchase award of $5,000 will be paid to the artist whose painting is selected. In addition, the artist will be identified in every phone book which carries the covers. That's about 160 directories with a distribution of almost nine million copies.

Deadline for contest entries is July 1, 1985. No actual paintings are to be submitted. All initial judging will be done from color slides of the artwork.

The contest is open to all Texas residents with the exception of employees and families of Southwestern Bell Corporation and its subsidiaries. School children, college-age students, professional artists and amateurs alike are encouraged to enter.

No restrictions on artist's medium

There's no restriction on the medium the artists uses — it can be oils, acrylics, water colors, tempera, even crayon. That should make it easy for anyone to enter.

An entry form and contest rules may be obtained by writing to:

Art Contest
One Bell Plaza
Post Office Box 225521
Dallas, Texas 75265.

Send today for all the information. And remember, the contest ends July 1. Good luck!

Look for information in your local newspaper about our Tele-Help booklets. There are five new booklets available at no charge by calling this toll free number: 800-325-2686, extension 86.

Topics for the new booklets were suggested by customers and employees. They include information on: establishing local telephone service... using the telephone to make your home more secure... handling annoying phone calls... choosing among local service options... and, installing home telephone wiring.

The company's Tele-Help program was launched last year to help customers cope with the changes caused by divestiture. To date, almost 2 million booklets have been distributed to Texas customers.

Mostly we've heard positive comments about the program. Customers tell us they want as much information as possible about the changes, especially those which touch their service. That's the reason we're extending the program through the end of this year.

If you're confused about our services or some of the industry changes, chances are we have a booklet that will help. Call today and find out.

Frustration of defeat...

Final Four field Big East reunion

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer
The Big East suddenly looms even bigger.

Only 6 years old, the Big East has become the first conference ever to place three teams in the Final Four of the NCAA basketball tournament. And it did so at the expense of the Atlantic Coast Conference, which had three teams eliminated in head-to-head play with the Big East in the regional finals over the weekend and five of six during the tournament.

The Final Four in Lexington, Ky., next weekend will consist of three members of the top five in the final Associated Press poll — top-ranked Georgetown, No. 3 St. John's and No. 5 Memphis State — along with the unranked Villanova Wildcats.

"We made a pact before we played a game as freshmen that before we finished that we would go to the Final Four," Ed Pinckney, one of Villanova's four seniors, said after the Wildcats stunned seventh-ranked North Carolina 56-44 Sunday to win the Southeast Regional at Birmingham, Ala. "We've finally done it. There aren't any words to describe how I feel."

It was an emotional day, too, for Lou Carnesca, the 60-year-old St. John's coach, as the Redmen made the Final Four for the first time since 1952.

"When I looked at the clock and saw five seconds left, I thought, 'That's it, we're going, we're going,'" Carnesca said moments after St. John's defeated No. 16 North Carolina State 69-60 in the NCAA West Regional at Denver. Carnesca said he was "very much elated, very happy. After 1,000 games, this one when I'm going down into the grave, this is the one I'll remember."

However, St. John's drew the unenviable task of playing defending NCAA champion Georgetown for the fourth time this season in next Saturday's second game. The Redmen took one of their three previous meetings against Georgetown, which captured the East Regional on Saturday with a 60-54 triumph over sixth-ranked Georgia Tech at Providence, R.I.

In Saturday's opener, Villanova meets Metro Conference champion Memphis State, which edged No. 4 Oklahoma 63-61 on Saturday in the Midwest final at Dallas.

Villanova, 23-10, overcame a cold first half — 23 percent shooting and a 22-17 deficit — and Harold Pressley, Dwayne McClain and reserve Harold Jensen put the Wildcats in control with six points each during a 22-7 run early in the second half. They shot 76 percent — 16 of 21 — in the second half while limiting North Carolina to 45 percent for the game.

Villanova last appeared in the Final Four in 1971.

Brad Daugherty had 17 points for North Carolina, 27-9.

North Carolina Coach Dean Smith said Villanova's defense "was more active than I've seen it on tape. We weren't really sharp in the second half. This is the time to be sharp, and Villanova certainly was."

As usual, St. John's, 31-3, was led by Chris Mullin with 25 points and Walter Berry with 19. But the Redmen didn't pull away from North Carolina State until the final two minutes.

Lorenzo Charles, who didn't score until late in the first half, led North Carolina State, 23-10, with 15 points.

Georgetown is in the Final Four for the third time in four years and Coach John Thompson said: "We gear everything we do to the tournament. This is the Big Top, where the pressure is, where the excitement is. We consider ourselves America's team."

The Hoyas used an unusual route to get to the Final Four. Saddled with four fouls, All-America center Patrick Ewing missed most of the second half and point guard Michael Jackson missed half of it. But Ralph Dalton stepped in for Ewing and Horace Broadnax filled Jackson's playmaking role.

Georgetown held Georgia Tech's Mark Price, a second-team All-American, to just three of 16 shots.

Seven-foot John Salley led Tech, 27-8, with 15 points.

Memphis State, 31-3, made it to the Final Four for the first time since 1973 after two years of failure and second-guessing. "Now I want to wear the roses around my neck," said Coach Dana Kirk. "I think we've got a good basketball team and however far we go we deserve it."

Andre Turner, who beat Boston College last Thursday with a last-second shot, scored four points in the final 33 seconds and All-American Keith Lee had 23 points as the Tigers eliminated Oklahoma.

Oklahoma, the highest-scoring team in the nation with a 90-point average, was held to its lowest total of the year and All-American Wayman Tisdale managed only 11 points.

Oklahoma ended its finest season — 31-6 — in frustration. According to a security official at Reunion Arena, Oklahoma guard Tim McCalister threw a cup of ice in the face of referee Hank Armstrong as the officials were being escorted off the floor. With 13 seconds remaining, Armstrong was the trailing official and did not make what appeared to be a palming call against Turner. Five seconds later, he whistled McCalister for his fifth foul.

Tough to repeat as NCAA champ

By JIM O'CONNELL
AP Sports Writer

Georgetown Coach John Thompson added his name to a select coaching list last year when his Hoyas captured the national championship. Now, he is two victories from an even more exclusive grouping — the repeaters.

It was an 84-75 victory over Houston last March that gave Thompson the NCAA college basketball title after his team had come so close two years earlier, losing by one-point to North Carolina in the championship game.

"Winning the title was such a complete feeling, one of satisfaction," Thompson said before the start of the current season.

"Considering the fact that (UCLA's) John Wooden won 10 and several other coaches have won more than one, there are very few people who have ever lived who can say they won a national championship."

Even fewer have repeated. Only

UCLA and four other schools have successfully defended the title.

Thompson said before the season began that he wasn't thinking about repeating.

"Hey, we're going to defend the Big East first, then the national championship. We're going to take this step by step."

The Hoyas are stepping along nicely.

Led by 7-foot, All-American center Patrick Ewing, the Hoyas were the No. 1 team in the preseason poll. They held the top spot until a one-point loss to St. John's snapped their 29-game winning streak. Within 48 hours Georgetown lost again, this time by two-points to Syracuse. They plummeted to second in the polls.

Thompson righted the Hoyas, who went on to win the Big East tournament, finish No. 1 in the final poll and receive the top seeding in the East Regional.

The Hoyas four victories in the NCAA Tournament have been by a combined 60 points as only No. 6 Georgia Tech managed to come within 10 points.

Gunslingers going for Denver's Gold

DENVER (AP) — Although the San Antonio Gunslingers defeated the Denver Gold 36-13 in pre-season action last month, there aren't many partisans on either side who think that outcome is a fair barometer for tonight's rematch.

"We've looked at film of the exhibition game, and I'm sure Mouse (Denver Coach Mouse Davis) has, too," said San Antonio Coach Jim Bates. "But we're not relying on it very much. In the pre-season you're mainly looking at players, evaluating talent."

Besides, Denver has improved a lot since that game, while we've gone backwards.

The target of Bates' chagrin is his offense, or lack of same. After four regular-season games, San Antonio is averaging an anemic 200 yards per game in total offense — a figure that ranks 13th in the 14-team United States Football League. The Gunslingers have fewer first downs than any other USFL team (47), and they're tied with winless Orlando for fewest points scored (44).

In last week's 38-7 loss to the Los Angeles Express that dropped San Antonio to 1-3, quarterback Fred Mortensen completed only seven of 23 passes for 73 yards, with one touchdown and one interception. The Gunslingers didn't cross the 50-yard line until late in the final quarter.

Gamblers still holding perfect USFL hand

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Although Jim Kelly wasn't the passing ace he usually is, the Houston Gamblers still are holding five of a kind — all victories.

The Gamblers, the only 5-0 team in the United States Football League, accumulated a net of only 254 yards in total offense, a record low in the team's 23-game history, in Sunday's 27-20 decision over the Portland Breakers. Kelly, who had 17 touchdown passes in his first four games, added only two scoring tosses while completing 18 of 32 passes.

"I didn't have the stats that everyone expected in this one but the big thing is that we came back and won the game," Kelly said.

Actually, it was Portland that came back to make the game close, scoring two fourth-quarter touchdowns to tie the score 20-20 before Kelly handed to Sam Harrell for the game-winning TD from a yard out with 54 seconds left.

In other USFL games Sunday, New Jersey tripped Tampa Bay 28-24, Birmingham edged Baltimore 7-3 in a mud bath and Oakland defeated Memphis 31-19. On Saturday night, Arizona whipped Los Angeles 27-13.

Tonight, San Antonio is at Denver. Portland quarterback Matt Robinson had better numbers than Kelly, hitting 21 of 33 passes for 289 yards and one touchdown, while Breakers running back Dwight Beverly rushed for 103 yards, including a 6-yard touchdown that tied the score with 3:38 to play.

Generals 28, Bandits 24

New Jersey crossed up Tampa Bay with a running play in the final minute and Herschel Walker scored the winning touchdown from 13 yards out with 24 seconds remaining. "They were expecting us to throw all the way," Generals Coach Walt Michaels said. "So we crossed them up with a quick pitch to Herschel and he just ran it in there."

Walker's TD climaxed a Generals rally from a 24-14 deficit and left both teams with 3-2 records.

Flutie, who hit 11 of 22 passes for 165 yards and two TDs, started New Jersey's comeback when he capped a 62-yard drive by firing a 7-yard TD pass to Walter Broughton with 5:05 left. Broughton also caught Flutie's 33-yard TD pass in the second quarter.

Bandits quarterback John Reeves completed 20 of 39 passes for 39 yards, including a 64-yard scoring pass play to Eric Truvillion. Stallions 7, Stars 3

Birmingham improved its record to 4-1 as Joe Cribbs scored the game's only touchdown on a 10-yard run in the third period. Baltimore, the defending USFL champions, scored only on a third-quarter field goal by David Trout after a drive stalled at the four.

The Stars, 1-3-1, also lost their leading runner, Kelvin Bryant, due to a pulled hamstring in the first quarter.

Invaders 31, Showboats 19

Bobby Hebert threw second-quarter touchdown passes of 1 yard to Gordon Banks and 15 yards to Anthony Carter and fullback Albert Bentley ran for 148 yards for Oakland against Memphis.

Walter Lewis fired three scoring passes game in a losing cause — 24 yards to Greg Moser in the first period, 5 yards to Mark Raugh in the second and 14 yards to Derrick Crawford in the fourth.

The Invaders improved their record to 3-1-1, while Memphis is 3-2.

Stephenson regains touch

GLENDALE, Calif. (AP) — Jan Stephenson has made her first million, collected her 13th career victory, and reinforced her desire to play golf.

"My desire to play now is greater than ever," Stephenson said Sunday after she'd ended almost two years of frustration with a one-shot victory over Amy Alcott, Pat Bradley and Barbara Moynix in the LPGA's $250,000 GNA tournament.

"Right now, winning this tournament was the most important thing in my life... I had put so much work into my game and was getting nothing out of it. I didn't want to finish on a bad note."

"It's been so long since I'd won." The GNA victory, with the $37,500 winner's share making her the ninth Ladies Professional Golf Association player to top $1 million in career earnings, came despite some shaky moments for Stephenson.

Stephenson, 33, had been going through a lack-of-confidence crisis, it seems, for the past two years, roughly corresponding to the time she last won. Putting was the problem.

Strange's fast start raises hopes for best year ever

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — It's already a good year for Curtis Strange. In fact, it's a very good year, the best he's ever had.

And he has every intention of making it a better one.

"I've got something to rest on now," Strange said Sunday after his second victory of the season in the Panasonic Las Vegas Invitational golf tournament.

"I don't want to put my foot in my mouth and make any predictions that I might be sorry for," Strange cautioned. "But now I've won two early. I've got a chance to have a really good year now."

"This brings a lot of things into the picture — leading money-winner, almost anything." Even though the season is less than one-quarter gone, the money-winning title became a realistic possibility when Strange dropped a 6-foot birdie putt on the 90th hole of the five-day tournament and claimed the biggest prize in American golf, $171,000.

That huge check pushed his season winnings to $332,344, by far the best on the Tour and well over his earnings for any previous year.

He won this one with a closing, 5-under-par 66 and a 338 total, 17 under par on the Las Vegas Country Club course. In addition to staking him to the money-winning lead, it enabled him to join Lanny Wadkins and Mark O'Meara as the double winners for 1985, virtually assured him of a place on the Ryder Cup team, and stamped him as a prime contender for the important Tournament Players Championship this week in Ponte Vedra, Fla.

Strange took the lead with three consecutive birdies beginning on the sixth hole but had to survive three major challenges to acquire the seventh title of his career.

The first was from Tom Watson, the six-time Player of the Year who led through the third and fourth rounds. Watson, however, drove out of bounds into a construction site on the 12th hole, made double bogey and followed with a bogey from a bunker on the 13th. He wasn't a factor again.

Next, it was Jay Haas, who was within a stroke of the lead until he dumped his second shot in the water on the par-5 18th and made double bogey.

And, finally, there was the longshot Mike Smith, a 34-year-old career struggler. Playing in front of Strange, he uncorked a birdie-birdie-birdie finish that lifted him into a brief tie for the lead.

Losing streak ends

Summit meet spurs 76ers

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

For many National Basketball Association teams a three-game losing streak is no special cause for alarm. When it happens to the Philadelphia 76ers, however, it's time to call a summit meeting.

The 76ers players, who virtually fell out of their first-place race with the Boston Celtics in the Atlantic Division because of the losing streak, had an air-clearing talk among themselves Sunday before routing the Midwest Division-leading Denver Nuggets 124-103.

"We tried to establish a new direction because we had lost three in a row," said Julius Erving, who hit 11 of 14 shots from the field and scored 22 points for the 76ers. "We were talking with one another, talking about our pluses and minuses in such a way that no one took it the wrong way."

"It does some good for a team to get together and talk things out," reserve forward George Johnson said. "It was good for us to close the doors and talk among ourselves about what we're doing and what we'd like to be doing."

But despite Sunday's triumph and a gaudy 52-19 record, the 76ers are still five games behind the Celtics.

In other games, San Antonio defeated Seattle 104-99, the Los Angeles Lakers outscored Detroit 148-130 and Utah routed Chicago 110-92.

Guard Andrew Toney paced the 76ers' triumph, posting the first "triple double" of his four-year career with 28 points, 12 assists and 11 rebounds. Moses Malone added 20 points and 16 rebounds.

Lakers 148, Pistons 130

Earvin "Magic" Johnson had 25 points, 19 assists and 10 rebounds, his 11th "triple-double" of the season, leading Los Angeles to its 10th straight victory.

Detroit trailed only 103-95 at the end of the third quarter, but a 32-11 streak in the first eight minutes of the fourth period put the Lakers, who hit 65.3 percent of their shots for the game, in control.

Laker center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Detroit guard Isiah Thomas led each of their teams with 30 points.

Abdul-Jabbar was 15-for-19 from the field to surpass the previous NBA record for field-goals attempted, 24,272 by Elvin Hayes. Abdul-Jabbar now has 24,289.

Spurs 104, Sonics 99

Backup center Ozell Jones scored 10 of his 13 points, blocked three shots and grabbed seven of his 11 rebounds in an eight-minute span of the second quarter to give San Antonio the lead for good against Seattle.

F-16 pilots are risking blackouts

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Air Force officials say that in nine fatal crashes of its newest planes, including F-16 jet fighters, pilots may have blacked out in midair from the aircraft's tremendous force.

The F-16, the Air Force's newest fighter plane, is so agile that the force of strenuous maneuvers can halt the flow of blood to the brain and render pilots unconscious, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Sunday.

The blackouts, which are called "G-induced loss of consciousness" or GLC, typically last about 30 seconds, according to videotapes made during tests on an Air Force centrifuge at Brooks Air Force Base in San Antonio.

But Air Force officials say 30 seconds is long enough to kill.

The results of midair blackouts to "pilots flying single-seat F-16s at 200 feet (are) disastrous," Gen. Jerome F. O'Malley, commander of the Air Force Tactical Air Command told a recent Air Force Association gathering.

"As we started to look over the facts from past accidents, (it became apparent) that this has been going on for some time," he said.

A Tactical Air Command publication recently reported that "several F-16 pilots" killed in accidents were "apparently victims of their own right hands," referring to the hand on the control stick," the newspaper reported.

"If you're in a hard, level turn or slice when you pass out, the aircraft may be screaming earthward in short order," the Air Force article said.

The Air Force official said blackouts are suspected in nine fatal crashes in recent years. But the problem ranks among the leading suspected causes of the 18 fatal Air Force F-16 crashes to date, officials said.

Four of those accidents involved the Fort Worth-built General Dynamics F-16, Air Force officials said.

The blackouts happen when the tremendous "G" forces generated by extreme acceleration force blood from the pilot's brain.

"In today's fighters we can demand more G's more rapidly and sustain them longer than pilots could in former days," said a recent article in an in-house Air Force publication warning pilots of the problem.

"Unfortunately, we are seeing a nasty by-product of that capability: Fully functioning aircraft are flying straight into the dirt after the pilot pulls back on the control stick and takes an unscheduled nap," the Star-Telegram said.

The problem has only recently come to light.

"We had an awful lot of accidents that were of an undetermined cause. We could not understand why a guy would fly this good airplane into the ground," said Col. Edsel DeVillie, a safety officer at the Tactical Air Command Headquarters at Langley Air Force Base, Va.

The F-16 is built to withstand nine G's, or nine times the force of normal gravity, in tight turns and maneuvers, the newspapers said, but few pilots can remain conscious for long under such pressure.

The F-16 is also capable of delivering such power at the touch of a hand.

In one fatal crash the entire maneuver preceding impact took less than 30 seconds.

Restrictions on Canadian cattle eased

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is considering a proposal to certify three additional Canadian provinces — Alberta, Manitoba and Saskatchewan — as being free of cattle brucellosis.

Bert W. Hawkins, administrator of the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, said last week that the proposal would allow easier U.S. entry of breeding cattle from those provinces.

However, entry would be subject to two conditions:

—Cattle would have to be accompanied by a certificate showing they had passed a negative brucellosis test within 30 days prior to entry.

—The cattle would have to originate from herds that have been intact for at least one year before entry.

Currently, in addition to the negative test within 30 days before U.S. entry, cattle from non-certified provinces must originate from herds maintained as intact units for at least two years. Also, the herds must have passed a negative brucellosis test within the past 12 months. Female cattle under 18 months may instead be certified as having been vaccinated for the disease.

The provinces of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, Newfoundland (including Labrador) and British Columbia have already been recognized as free of brucellosis.

"Canada and its cattle industry are deserving of high praise for their progress in wiping out 'cattle brucellosis,'" Hawkins said. "The rest of Canada currently has only 25 herds quarantined for suspicion of brucellosis, and the country has had no confirmed cases since March 1984."

COMPARE THEN DECIDE

HONOREES—Entertainer Carol Burnett and Walter Cronkite share a moment after they were inducted into "The Television Hall of Fame" Sunday afternoon in Santa Monica, Calif. A two-hour special on the ceremonies is slated to air on NBC April 22. (AP Laserphoto)

Teachers seeking flights in space

DALLAS (AP) — National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials say they expected more people from Texas to apply to become the first private citizen in space. More than 400 applicants so far are vying for the privilege. Considering Texas' size and the fact that it is the home of the Johnson Space Center, more applicants were expected to turn up, NASA officials said.

Mentally ill and retarded serve longer prison sentences in Texas

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Many mentally ill or retarded convicts are dumped into Texas Department of Corrections facilities because society has no place else to put them, some prison officials say. "If a community wants a rest from somebody who's a nuisance, the place to send him is TDC," said Dr. Walter Quijano, TDC's administrator of psychiatric services. "A community learns quickly that the maximum commitment to a state hospital is usually 30 days, 90 days," Quijano said. "But in the case of a nuisance, they stick him with a crime and send him to TDC, and we have him for two, three years." TDC has about 4,000 mentally ill or retarded inmates, 1,000 of whom require inpatient care. The Houston Post reported. Texas prisons house more than 37,000 inmates. Quijano says it is cheaper and easier for society to put a mentally ill person in prison than in a state mental hospital. "I do not know if that is a deliberate social policy. Some people recognize it but do not do anything about it," he said. "It would be hard to prove." TDC spent about $21 a day for each convict it housed in fiscal 1984. Mental health officials say it costs an average of $106.81 a day to keep someone in a state mental hospital and $85.42 at a state school for the retarded. But Charles Friel, a sociologist at Sam Houston State University, said the mentally handicapped often end up in prison because they just "don't fit anywhere." He said cost does not determine where such inmates are sent. "It takes a lot of intelligence to be that Machiavellian," Friel said.

"The people involved are not that smart. The judge is just trying to move his docket. The prosecutor is just trying to move a case from his 'in' box to his 'out' box." John Byrd, executive director of the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles, said the main problem is the lack of non-prison facilities for mentally handicapped convicts. Some mentally ill inmates are paroled and sent to facilities operated by the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, said parole board spokesman Mike Roach. But MHMR is short of facilities and patients often wind up on the streets, he said. While many prisoners are paroled before their sentences are up, retarded or mentally ill inmates are more likely to stay in prison for their full sentences, Roach said.

Car splits in crash, kills 3

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Police said they believe alcohol was a factor in a high-speed car wreck that claimed the lives of three Grand Prairie men. A fourth man was seriously injured in the crash early Sunday. Police said the four men had left a Knights of Columbus hall in Grand Prairie and were driving at a high rate of speed through Arlington when the wreck occurred about midnight.

They were a family torn apart by temptation... kept apart by pride... but brought together by a miracle!
