

Family files $4.7 million civil suit against Department of Public Safety and patrolman

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

The family of a 35-year-old woman who died following a December auto accident is seeking more than $4.7 million from the Texas Department of Public Safety and Patrolman Johnny Garth Carter, whose car slammed into theirs four days before Christmas.

Candace Ketchum Smith, 35, of 1801 Lea, died Dec. 22 after undergoing surgery for injuries she suffered in the 6:25 p.m. Dec. 21 collision at the intersection of North Hobart and 17th Ave. Her husband, William Smith Jr., 40, and their daughter Andra, 13, were also injured in the accident.

According to reports, patrolman Carter was involved in a high speed pursuit of a speeding motorist when he collided with the 1984 Ford driven by Smith. Carter was taken to Coronado Community Hospital, where he was treated for minor injuries.

In the civil lawsuit, filed on behalf of the Smith family last week in 223rd District Court in Pampa, Amarillo attorney Robert E. Garner says his clients are seeking $4.712 million in damages and attorney's fees from the Texas Department of Public Safety and Carter.

Named as plaintiffs in the suit are Mr. Smith and his daughter Andra, a son, Richard Arnold Smith, 16, another daughter, Tiffany Smith, 3, and Mrs. Smith's father, Richard V. Keitchum.

Most of the damages, $3 million, stems from a claim that by using "excessive force" Carter violated the civil rights of the Smith family.

"By using excessive force, he drove his vehicle in violation of the rules of the DPS," Garner explained. "Our expert (who investigated the incident) says he was going 80 miles per hour at the time and we say that was much too fast under the conditions."

The Smiths are also seeking $500,000 in damages from Carter and $500,000 from the state, the total limit of tort liability the state allows such plaintiffs. The Smiths also seek $500,000 in punitive damages from Carter and $12,000 for loss of their vehicle and at least $200,000 in attorney's fees.

The defendants have 20 days to answer the petition. Garner speculates that the Texas attorney general will represent the state in the case.

Garner plans on meeting with representatives of the state and Carter's insurance company Monday afternoon at his Amarillo office to show them parts of his file. The file includes statements from 35-40 witnesses and results of an investigation of the accident scene.

The attorney, who admits he has not met the Smith family, says he is basing the suit on three theories: the violation of civil rights, common law neglect from Carter and operating a defective vehicle.

Garner claimed that Carter's patrol car did not have the proper warning lights needed for town traffic.

"We don't think his car was designed for in-town traffic," he said. "The flashing lights were down on the bumper instead of on top of the car." And when you just hear the siren, you can't tell where it came from."

In the petition filed with the local court, the patrol car operated by Carter is described as having a "high output engine, five-speed manual overdrive with electronic fuel injection." It also reports the emergency lights on the front of the vehicle were attached near the center of the bumper, 12 inches apart, and that the siren speaker was installed under the car's hood.

The lawsuit charges, "The Texas Department of Public Safety, in equipping and delivering the vehicle to the officer in question, placed in his hands a dangerous instrument which was defective for the purposes in which the officer was using it in that the lights on the front of the vehicle were not visible and the siren was not audible and the power and braking systems of such vehicle made it no less than a dangerous instrumentality for police work in a congested area such as downtown Pampa, Texas, at the time and on the occasion in question."

The lawsuit continues, "Because such vehicle was unreasonably dangerous in its design and equipment, the Texas Department of Public Safety is responsible under the concept of strict liability in tort for the damages which were proximately caused by the use of said vehicle."

House MX opponents are near blocking of weapon

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. says opponents of the MX missile are within striking range of blocking the weapon in the House this week, and that the outcome could be decided by a margin as slim as six votes.

"It's an uphill battle, but it's close," O'Neill, a sharp critic of the missile, said in a weekend interview.

The Massachusetts Democrat disclosed that a Democratic headcount conducted within the past few days showed "a hard 196" votes against the MX among the 251 majority-party Democrats in the House.

"How the Republicans are going to vote, I really don't know. We have to get some Republican votes, there's no question about that," he said.

The House on Monday takes up President Reagan's request to free funds for an additional 21 MX missiles, with a vote set for the following day.

Reagan said Saturday he is optimistic the House will vote in his favor on the MX, "if common sense is there."

After a heavy lobbying campaign by the president, the Republican-led Senate voted to provide $1.5 billion for the missile by a 55-45 margin.

The missile was then dealt an unexpected setback as the House Appropriations Committee, which had earlier supported the system, voted against releasing the funds by a 28-26 margin. However, the pro-defense House Armed Services Committee supported a companion bill 37-8.

"There's no question that the president is doing everything he can over the weekend and pulling out all the stops," O'Neill said. "They're talking to all my people."

He noted the White House plans to dispatch Max Kampelman, the chief U.S. arms control negotiator in Geneva, to the Capitol on Monday to lobby Democrats.

Kampelman, a Democrat, will meet with party leaders in the morning and with the full Democratic Caucus at 5 p.m., O'Neill said.

O'Neill said opponents seemed to be gaining ground over the past few days with "ones who were wavering."

Langley wins top AP award

GALVESTON — Jeff Langley, Pampa News senior staff writer, won a first place award in the 1984 Texas Associated Press Managing Editors awards competition in Galveston this weekend.

Langley won the top place for spot news coverage in Class A for his precede story on the beginning of the Grandstaff trial in Borger early last year.

The award was presented during ceremonies Saturday. Pampa News Managing Editor Wally Simmons attended the convention and accepted the award for Langley.

Judges' comments noted, "Langley took a routine assignment and turned it into a superb example of writing. His spot news entry 'Grandstaff shooting lawsuit set for Monday' skilfully guides the reader through the past into the present and looks at the future in this story. Langley has a style that leaves the reader hungry for more."

Langley's entry was in competition with all other Texas AP newspapers having a circulation of 15,000 or less.

Published Jan. 8, 1984, in The Pampa News, Langley's winning story concerned the beginning of the trial against Borger police and other area law officials resulting from the shooting death of James Grandstaff, 31, on the Four Sixes Ranch east of Borger on Aug. 11, 1981.

His story related details of events leading up to the shooting and discussed the subsequent investigations, the filing of the lawsuit, claims by the defendants and law officials and preparation for the trial.

The Pampa News was the only Panhandle area newspaper to win an award in this year's competition.

Last year Langley won first place in the APME competition in the feature writing category in Class A for his story "The Boys came to buy" concerning the auctioning of former congressman Bob Price's ranch.

Syria pledges to help halt Lebanese revolt

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syria renewed its pledge Saturday to help Lebanese President Amin Gemayel put down a pro-Israeli revolt among his fellow Christians, an official Syrian spokesman said.

In another development, Shiite Moslem leader Nabih Berri accused "Israeli agents" of the recent kidnappings of foreigners in Moslem west Beirut.

The new Syrian promise came after nearly five hours of meetings in Damascus between Gemayel and President Hafez Assad. Gemayel met Assad privately, then the two were joined by Vice President Abdul-Halim Khaddam, Syria's expert on Lebanon, and Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa.

Assad's spokesman, Jibril Kourieh, said Assad "renewed Syria's pledge to stand firmly supporting the Lebanese legitimacy, especially in efforts to get the Israeli invaders out, and to safeguard Lebanon's unity and integrity."

Kourieh said Assad and Gemayel had discussed the "rebellion" in Lebanon, apparently referring to the revolt in the Christian Lebanese Forces militia against Gemayel's pro-Syrian policies.

Samir Geagea, leader of the mutiny, has close ties with Israel. In the previous 12 days, men under his command have taken control of most of the Christian areas of Lebanon and have demanded a greater say in government policies.

Syria has moved troops and armor to the fringes of the area controlled by Geagea's forces, but there have been no confrontations.

Beirut Radio and the Sunni Moslem Voice of the Nation station said Saturday that officials of the Geagea rebellion had met in southern Lebanon with Ariel Sharon, an Israeli Cabinet member who, as defense minister in 1982, planned Israel's invasion of Lebanon.

Israel Radio said Friday that Sharon visited Israeli army camps in Lebanon, but made no mention of a meeting with the Lebanese Christians, who had supported the invasion.

In Beirut, Berri, leader of the largest Shiite militia, Amal, and a Lebanese Cabinet member, claimed at a news conference that neither Moslems nor people seeking a true jihad — Arabic for holy war — were responsible for the disappearances.

LOVER OF ART - Pampa attorney Joe Gordon, Jr., looks at one of the volumes on art he has presented to the Lovett Memorial Library. Consisting of approximately 300 volumes, the Gordon Collection contains a number of books on art theory, artists' works, histories, critical studies and other aspects concerning the world of art from many nations and periods. The collection is held on reserve in the upstairs section of the library. (Staff photo by Larry Hollis)

Attorney donates art book collection to local library

Pampa attorney Joe Gordon, Jr., recently presented Lovett Memorial Library a collection of art books in memory of the late Anna Lee Gordon.

The Gordon Collection consists of some 300 volumes from all over the world, many of which were purchased by the Gordons on trips to Europe and the Far East. They cover the fine and decorative arts from a number of cultures and periods.

The collection, held on reserve, is shelved in the 800's section upstairs over the library's main reading area.

Books include studies of works by such artists as Michelangelo, Picasso, Gauguin, Chagall, Rubens, Matisse, Durer, Van Gogh, Goya, Rodin, Delacroix and Rembrandt. Others represented in the Gordon Collection are Paul Klee, Jackson Pollock, J. M. W. Turner, Grandma Moses, Henry Moore, Andrew Wyeth, Edward Hopper and Winslow Homer.

The collection includes books on the art of such nations and cultures as America, France, Italy, Japan, India, Israel, Egypt and Africa as well as Hellenism, Etruria, early Rome and the American Civil War. Other topics include movements and periods such as the Renaissance, impressionism, neo-impressionism, futurism, avant-garde, 19th and 20th Century art and modern art.

Arts covered by the collection include painting, sculpture, drawing, sketches, printmaking, photography and ceramics. There are also critical studies and histories on art and artists.

"It took a long time to collect these books," Gordon said. He added he was glad other people would have an opportunity to use them.

Librarian Dan Snider said it would be hard to place a value on some of the books since a number of them are no longer in print.

In other library news, representatives from the Friends of the Library joined members of the library's advisory board at their March meeting to hear Mary Kay Wells, coordinator of the Texas Panhandle Library System. Wells explained the system's role in providing area library services.

She commended the staff of Lovett Library for their progress in preparing the library's holdings for the Harrington Library Consortium computer automation project currently in progress.

The Pampa library now has three terminals tied in to the Amarillo base and expects its system to be completed and ready for use by the reading public by spring of 1986.

The computer system also will handle interlibrary loan requests.

"We have already received requests from libraries statewide for the loan of books that are currently held by Lovett only," Snider said.

"The Harrington System is making the sharing of resources among all libraries in the state a reality," Snider said, "and it's exciting to be a part of the project."

The Friends of the Library are currently involved in preparations for their annual used book sale at the library, scheduled for April 27 and 28.

Persons having used books they wish to donate for the sale are asked to drop them by the library or to call the library at 665-3981 or Nancy Hill at 669-3467 for pickup of the books.

Funds from the sale will be used to fund projects and activities benefiting the library and its patrons.

President wise to avoid visit, experts say

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two experts on Germany say they support President Reagan's decision not to visit a former concentration camp in an effort to avoid "reawakening the memories" when he visits that country in May.

But a West German official said Reagan was "about 10 million (people) off the mark" when he asserted that in Germany, "few alive remember the war."

Hans Wiessman, deputy director of the German Information Center, the New York City office of the German Embassy information branch, said that as of the end of 1982, there were 9.9 million people alive in Germany who were at least 20 years old in 1945, the year World War II ended.

Reagan will visit Germany in early May, just before the 40th anniversary of Germany's World War II surrender.

Helmut Sonnenfeldt, guest scholar at the Brookings Institution and former National Security Council member, said the Soviets would like the event to drive the Germans and Americans apart.

Such a rift would aid the Soviet campaign against European nuclear missile deployment and Reagan's strategic defense initiative, or "Star Wars" plan, he said.

"The Department of Public Safety had knowledge at all levels of its management that the vehicle and the equipment which it had were unreasonably dangerous for use in city traffic and is known within the department as a 'pocket rocket', and also known as an 'unidentifiable flying object' because of the existence of inadequate lighting."

The attorney said that his not knowing the plaintiffs is not uncommon.

"My investigator knows them and my staff have met them," he said. "I have met (Mrs. Smith's) father."

Although Garner hopes to get the case to trial within 90 days, he doubts the case could be settled that quickly.

He added that if it were not for the $500,000 limits set by state law, the plaintiffs would be asking for a lot more from Carter and the state.

"I think the case is worth far more than the limit," he said.

would not take a penny less than the policy allows."

According to the petition, Mrs. Smith was driving south on Hobart "in a lawful and prudent manner" with her husband and daughter. At about 6:25 p.m., Carter was driving a 1984 Mustang patrol car north on Hobart near 17th Street in the outside lane. The petition adds that "without warning other than the siren and lights, he drove behind cars onto the wrong side of the street in the identical lane as the plaintiff's vehicle."

When he veered into the southbound lane, he was going 80 mph, the petition claims, adding that Mrs. Smith was "frightened by such activity that she did not reflect on the best course of action for her to take." The petition stated that there was heavy traffic.

According to the petition, when Mrs. Smith realized the Carter vehicle would hit her head on, she swerved sharply to the left. Carter apparently applied his brakes, leaving 108 feet of skid marks. By the time of impact, the Carter vehicle had slowed to 52 mph, the petition contends.

Mrs. Smith was immediately transported to Coronado Community Hospital and later to Northwest Texas Hospital for treatment of injuries to her body and limbs. The petition reports medical expenses before her death were $7,046. Funeral expenses amounted to $3,550.

Smith's medical expenses, for hospitalization and for treatment of broken and fractured limbs, were $11,855. Andra Smith's medical expenses totaled $5,696. The petition claims that there may be future medical expenses.

In addition, according to the petition, Smith was employed as a chemical engineer at the time of the accident and made a salary of $67,000 per year. The lawsuit contends the accident "diminished" his ability to earn wages.

Obscure S&Ls knocked dollar for a loop

NEW YORK (AP) — A David and Goliath story unfolded in global foreign exchange markets last week when the U.S. dollar, the world's strongest currency, was knocked for a loop by the closing of 70 obscure Ohio savings and loan associations.

Analysts said the dollar's fall, representing one of its biggest losses ever, was in large part a matter of overreaction by skittish traders. They added that the wholesale closing of the S&Ls and the delays in their reopening did little to inspire confidence.

Currency traders already were edgy about the dollar's course when Ohio's governor announced a three-day closure of the state-chartered institutions on March 15, citing fears of a run by depositors following the earlier collapse of Home State Savings Bank in Cincinnati.

When that weekend closing was extended last Monday and as pictures of depositors camping outside S&Ls received prominent display in foreign newspaper and television reports, European traders responded with a dollar selling spree.

In two days, the dollar plunged 3.9 percent, a performance unequaled since the 10 percent devaluation ordered by the Nixon administration on Feb. 12, 1973.

U.S. financial markets remained relatively calm, not viewing the problem as more than a local inconvenience. But foreign traders, unfamiliar with the workings of the American banking system and unaware of the difference between the small Ohio S&Ls and the major international banks in the United States, were inclined to dump dollars.

Gold, a traditional haven for funds in times of unrest, shot up more than $35 an ounce Tuesday, its biggest percentage gain in more than a decade.

"I think there was excessive concern on just how vulnerable the U.S. banking system as a whole may be," said Lawrence Kreicher, an international economist and vice president at Irving Trust Co., a New York bank.

Kreicher said European traders viewed the situation as a threat to the stability of the U.S. financial system that would require the Federal Reserve to abandon its inflation-fighting tactics and begin pumping money into the banking system.

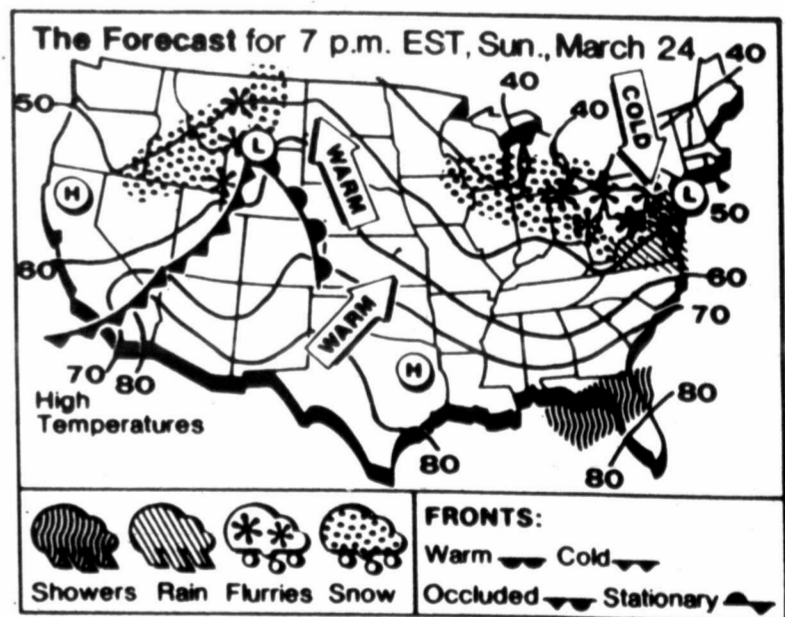

Such a course would reduce the chances of higher interest rates in the United States.

State board: more education dollars needed

AUSTIN (AP) — State public school funds fall short of paying for quality education, State Board of Education members said Saturday.

"Based on everything we know, we know we are underfunded," said board member Katherine Raines of Cleburne. "I agree we don't know how underfunded we are."

The comments came during discussion of a proposed message to the Legislature about school funds.

"The result of the current level of funding is to leave all programs, both regular and special, far short of the actual requirements of Texas school districts for both operating costs and facilities," said the message to lawmakers.

Board members agreed the state's annual allotment of $1,350 per student is too low. But the vote on sending the message was postponed because there was no agreement on how much is needed.

The state board committee that put together the recommendation said $2,100 per student is needed.

Charles Duncan, board member from Houston, said, "I don't feel comfortable that we really know yet what adequate funding levels are."

"I'm not trying to make the argument that $1,350 is adequate," he added.

State funds make up a portion of the money available to local districts. Many districts use local tax money to "enrich" their programs. Some poorer districts, however, have little local money to add.

Mrs. Raines said the message to lawmakers "should include a clear statement that this additional cost burden falls to the local district."

Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby said it's the board's "responsibility to advise the Legislature on what things are actually costing."

"Whether or not they can provide more funds is immaterial" to passing along the message, he said. "It should be no surprise to the Legislature that we are underfunded."

Lawmakers last year approved a $2.6 billion tax hike for public education.

Kirby said nobody should be "shocked" if the actual cost is above the $2,100 mentioned in the proposed message to lawmakers. Board member Jack Strong of Longview said the $2,100 figure should be deleted, lest it becomes "etched in stone."

Maria Elena Flood, board member of El Paso, agreed that the real cost is, as yet, unknown.

"The $2,100 may not even be close to it," she said. "Maybe it's $4,500."

Board Chairman Jon Brumley of Fort Worth said a revised message to lawmakers would be worked out for next month's board meeting.

"I don't know what the cost of a good education is," he said. "But $1,350 does not provide for a quality education."

Duncan said the additional money can come from only three places — state, local or federal funds.

"The consensus is that $1,350 is too low," he said.

The message to lawmakers proposed Saturday said the actual cost of education "lies far above" the $1,350 statutory level.

Undercover officers, studied odds, hedged bets, stiffed bookies

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas police studied the odds, hedged their wagers and even wished on a few bets when they went undercover during a gambling investigation.

They wagered $300,000 in bets ranging from $50 to $35,000 during "Operation Vigorish" — and said not a dime of it was lost.

The losers, police say, are the bookies. The six-month investigation resulted in 18 arrests last week.

"The operation cost us about $10,000 in investigative expenses, but the way it looks right now, I don't think we lost anything on wagering," said intelligence division Capt. Greg Holliday. "We made wise bets."

The six officers involved in Operation Vigorish prepared for their assignment by spending an intensive week "cramping to be a gambler and a doper," Vice Sgt. Don Marks told the Dallas Morning News.

They studied FBI materials, listened to tapes and learned the ropes from police gambling experts.

Then they headed for several targeted bars where Marks said "they met people, became trusted regulars, made bets and bought drugs."

One officer who posed as a wealthy real estate developer described the experience as becoming a "different person."

"It's like acting school," said a female officer who posed as the girlfriend of a high-rolling salesman.

The officers said they were tested at the outset.

"They ask you right out if you're a cop. They try to check out everything about you," the female officer said.

Throughout the operation, the officers studied tip sheets and the odds and even learned to make the ultimate sacrifice: betting against the Dallas Cowboys football team.

Lewis tells editors no tax increase this year

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — The Texas Legislature will not pass a tax increase this year, House Speaker Gib Lewis predicted Friday.

Appearing at the Texas Associated Press Managing Editors convention, Lewis also said he wants to appoint a committee to study higher education similar to H. Ross Perot's commission on public schools that recommended vast reforms and new taxes last year.

Lewis, D-Fort Worth, predicted such a committee likely would make drastic recommendations, including closing some colleges, consolidating some schools and programs, and eliminating some expensive programs.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock, appearing with Lewis in a panel discussion Friday, said the state is going to be forced eventually to tax individual and corporate income if some services aren't cut.

Bullock said the state is facing increasing demands for revenue for services for a growing population, for prisons bursting at the seams, and other critical needs.

"Eventually, we're either going to have to cut services or tax income," Bullock said.

But Lewis was not so definite on the same issue, saying Texas' low per capita tax burden has been a boost to economic growth.

Family must stop work in cemetery

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Officials of a cemetery in the small community of Bradshaw, 25 miles south of Abilene, have obtained a court order to stop an Abilene woman and two members of her family from making further improvements in the Bradshaw Cemetery.

An attorney for cemetery officials said Clara Turnbow of Abilene, Harold Turnbow of San Antonio and Jimmy Turnbow of Hereford have two relatives buried in the cemetery.

But the Turnbows have poured concrete curbing and enlarged the family plot to the point that it is "large enough to inter in excess of 100 bodies," attorney James McMillon said.

Presently, he said, the association does not sell cemetery lots, but accepts contributions from family members and others upon the interment of an individual body. Care for the cemetery is done on a volunteer and as-needed basis, he said.

Hightower swaps his girlfriend for budget

AUSTIN (AP) — Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower has reached a compromise with House budget writers in which he has agreed to remove his live-in girlfriend from her $1-a-year post with his agency.

In exchange, the Dallas Times Herald reported Saturday, the House Appropriations Committee on Friday approved a $40 million, two-year budget for the agriculture department and lifted restrictions that threatened Hightower's marketing projects, environmental research and efforts on pesticide control.

State Rep. Dudley Harrison, D-Sanderson, said the compromise was "worked out" between commissioner and Rep. Robert Saunders, the chairman of the House Agriculture Committee.

Hightower's housemate, Susan DeMarco, has been the marketing director for the agriculture department. She was paid only $1 a year but worked full time.

Last week, Saunders said he thought DeMarco's presence at the agriculture department was improper and violated the spirit of state nepotism laws.

Two weeks ago, the agriculture committee placed 30 restrictions on Hightower's budget, including one that would have prevented DeMarco from working for the department and others that would have prevented implementation of stricter pesticide regulations.

The committee's version of the budget also cut funds for several pet Hightower projects, including marketing programs.

Thanks for Senator Bill

Thank heaven for 31st District State Senator Bill Sarpalius. Without Senator Bill's constant, mandatory moral guidance, I might wake up drunk, thrown through a windshield, dead or burning in flames of hell.

Is this fine Christian fellow who represents us in Austin obsessed with legislation related to demon rum, or does it just seem so?

Every time Mr. Bill makes a trip to Austin, he proposes another law to put some sort of further restrictions on alcoholic beverages. Higher liquor taxes, a higher drinking age, stricter drunk driving laws and now one banning "open containers" from the hands of the state's drivers, among others.

One gets the impression that if Senator Bill thought it had a snowball's chance of passing, he'd sponsor a law to put a stop to drinking altogether. One gets the idea that he'd like to legislate a return to the days of temperance societies and bootleg bathtub gin.

Nobody wants drunk drivers on the road, but this man is obsessed with the evils of alcohol. It seems that the state senator has no other issues to consider in representing this district.

Senator Sarpalius never comes out and says he absolutely hates drinking. He says the laws restricting alcohol are designed to save lives.

But his votes and opinions on other "moral" issues such as horse racing and a state lottery convince me that Senator Bill thinks we all ought to attend his church. Or at the very least, be forced to follow his definition of the straight and narrow path to glory and salvation.

The description "redneck Bible thumper" comes to my mind.

The senator has seen a duty to save us from ourselves.

He supported his opposition to racing and a lottery with the ridiculous claim that those ventures into legalized gambling would actually cost the state money. It would cost more to regulate the gambling than the state would get as its cut of the enterprises. Senator Bill pronounced earlier this year.

Those states reducing their tax burdens with hundreds of millions taken in on lotteries and racing just don't realize all of the money they're losing, Sarpalius contends.

And never mind that participation in these sinful activities is totally voluntary: Mr. Bill knows what's best for our own good.

Take the seat belt law. If it gets approval in this state, you can thank our state senator for his protective benevolence each time you're forced to buckle up.

Whether it's just to get support from like-minded voters in the district or a real desire to impose his view of morality on the rest of us, Sarpalius always tries to claim the higher spiritual ground.

The man even has the nerve to call himself a conservative. When it comes to ordering others how to live their lives, the description probably fits.

But those truly immoral acts — greater state control of citizens' lives and higher taxes — are the ones that get Mr. Bill's greatest support. His desire to give the state more of our money and further control over each of us is reflected in his record and each time he opens his mouth.

Alcohol levels now on accident reports

DALLAS (AP) — After a researcher found that alcohol was involved in four times as fatal accidents as police reports showed, the Dallas Police Department began noting blood alcohol levels in all fatal accident reports.

"Our reports will reflect the same thing as the M.E. (medical examiner's)," said police spokesman Bob Shaw.

Shaw said the change in procedure was prompted by published reports that a Texas A&M University researcher found the number of legally drunk drivers killed in Dallas County accidents was four times as high as those reflected on 1983 traffic accident reports.

Olga Pendleton of the Texas A&M Transportation Institute, compared 558 accident reports from 10 counties with the corresponding autopsy reports.

She found that, overall, autopsies showed 51 percent of the drivers were drunk, while accident reports only indicated 21 percent of the victims had blood alcohol levels of 0.10 or above — the threshold for legal intoxication.

In Dallas County, she found an even greater discrepancy. Accident reports show 14 percent of the fatal accidents involved alcohol while autopsy reports showed 55 percent of the drivers were legally drunk.

"At the time of the accident, sometimes it's hard for the officers to say whether alcohol is involved," Shaw said.

Opinion

A real crackdown or a smokescreen?

Political officeholders seldom bother to hide their shamelessness. Take Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger. He's the fellow who for the past four years has steadfastly defended every single penny in the defense budget. Now he's saying it's time to cut out the abuses.

It seems like a new tack for Weinberger, who was dubbed (deservedly or not) "Cap the Knife" when he was President Nixon's budget director. As Reagan's secretary of defense, Weinberger has been anything but a budget cutter - threatening, pleading and cajoling each time someone suggest that President Reagan's stated desire to cut back government spending should include cutting spending by the armed forces.

The secretary has proclaimed that each item in the defense budget is essential to the security of the free world, apparently reflecting the desires of his boss, the president. Now he's saying that paying General Dynamics to board its dog was perhaps a bit excessive.

Perhaps the $225 the Pentagon was charged for a table at the Renton, Wash., Chamber of Commerce dinner dance wasn't absolutely essential to keep the commies at bay; presumably it kept the Boeing executives who attended happy. And the $125 Boeing charged the Pentagon for tickets to Washington State athletic events? Can the state legislators who got the tickets now be counted on to man the battle lines?

In a great show of public relations glitz, Weinberger last week announced that he will withhold about $35 million in Pentagon payments to General Dynamics while the government looks into possibly improper billing practices. Payments to other companies also will be reviewed, and future contractors will be required to certify that their bills do not include charges for political or entertainment expenses not directly benefiting the government.

That is good news. It will save the taxpayers a few dollars, but does it presage a new era of frugality at the Pentagon?

Lost among the cheers is the fact that slapping the wrists of a few errant contractors does virtually nothing to rein in a bloated defense budget that includes fanciful weapons systems and the defense of countries that more properly should be defending themselves.

If Weinberger and Congress were serious about saving taxpayers' money, they would cut back on more than just contract abuses. Simply re-evaluating the usefulness of some of the military's 5,000-plus installations worldwide could save the taxpayers almost 10 times the amount of money denied to general Dynamics.

The crackdown on military contract abuses is commendable, but not if it is simply a smoke screen to deflect critical attention from a still-bloated military budget.

Time for some to grow up.

Since 1980, the Reagan administration has made attempts to entice me to join them. You know my answer: I'm still a professor of economics at Virginia's George Mason University. Imagine me in the administration. The president would have to make a weekly television appearance just to explain why he has a "crazy" man in government talking about freedom in America. Think of all the flak.

Early in Reagan's first term a reporter asked me, "Williams, what's your definition of social justice?" My response, "Social justice is where I keep what I produce, and you keep what you produce. You can't have what's mine unless I give it to you. Social justice means there's neither illegal nor legal theft." Just imagine the media attacks on the president had his high-level official made such a freedom-oriented remark in the United States of America!

That's precisely the problem in America. Too many people think they have rights to the fruits of their fellow American's labor. Take the troubled farmers. The think they have a RIGHT to use government to confiscate your earnings to grant them loan guarantees, crop supports, and other bailouts. They say government ought to help. Big government can't GIVE them anything it doesn't first TAKE from you.

President Reagan kept his word to veto any farm handout that's to large. That's a hopeful sign. Granted, government caused much of the farm problem, but the farmers asked - in fact - they begged - for it.

Now, President Reagan faces conflict with another group of handout artists - college students. The president (quite correctly) points out that subsidies to higher education represent an income transfer from poor people to the middle-class. Some poor janitor or waitress pays federal and state income taxes which go to send a dentist's son through college. Where's the justice in such an arrangement? Of course, students demand federal and state aid, saying it will enable poor people access to college. But only about 6 percent of the college population come from families below the poverty line.

Sure cuts in federal aid programs will reduce the college population, but that may be a good thing. If something is subsidized there may be too much of it, leading to a waste of resources. Remember when mom said, "You'll turn out the lights when you have to pay the bill!" Living at home meant electricity and all sorts of things were subsidized. So you weren't that mindful about waste. Well, the same applies to education. Lots of kids are on campus solely for the purpose of prolonging adolescence. They'd be better off getting started in their careers rather than wasting valuable time playing around in college. There'd be greater tendency to do so if they, or their families, had to foot the bill.

As President Reagan proposes different spending cuts, all sorts of people will resist, claiming, "but my program is vital to the national interests." But there's something mighty suspicious about the uncanny coincidence that the program also turns out to be of vital personal income interest to the claimant. Wouldn't we all greet - with a healthy dose of suspicion - a claim by manufacturers of Campbell Soup that "It's vital to the national interests that Congress buy each American a cup of soup each day?" We should extend that same suspicion to any other group looking for a freebie.

Finally, Reagan's being Reagan. Whether it's weaning a baby off the mother's breast or weaning Americans off the federal breast, weaning is an unpleasant task. So let's give Reagan our support, but let's also give some moral encouragement to the crybabies. Maybe they'll grow up!

Putting foolish things aside

I took a long look at my electric hair dryer the other morning. It was a gift, and I cherished it once. Its sleek, modern styling hinted macho but at the same time said its owner would be a man of sensitivity, a man in touch with the necessity for good grooming habits.

I recall how the handle felt in my hand the morning of that first dry. It fit perfectly. It was a part of me, an added appendage for countless mornings to come.

I began in warm, shifted to medium in mid-dry and then gunned it to high for the finish. My hair fluffed as it had never fluffed before. One spark, however, and meet the human torch.

I realize there are a number of important issues that probably should be discussed in a forum such as this, but occasionally the real issues of the day are hidden deep behind the headlines. Occasionally, one must stand and be heard on a matter that at first glance might seem trivial.

The time has come, America, to speak out on the electric hair dryer for men.

It came to me as I stood, nerd-like, holding my dryer to my head. Like all mornings, I had showered and shampooed with a shampoo the fragrance of blossoming apricots, the color of the dawning sky.

This, I thought, is ridiculous. This is insane. This is a horrid, useless waste of time I can do without.

I figure I have spent five minutes every morning for the past five years blow-drying my hair. That is six days of my life spent with Flash Gordon's ray gun pointed at my brain, which probably has windburn by now.

It all began with cosmetics commercials screaming at us on television. Our forefathers rallied behind "54-40 or Fight!" For this generation, it has been, "The Wethead Is Dead!" Pour out your Wildroot Creme Oil, Charlie, it's a blow-dry kind of day.

What followed as a mad rush by America's male population to grow hair. Then dry it. Then spray it so it wouldn't budge in a hurricane. No longer did men comb their hair. They raked it. Hair wasn't "cut," it was "styled."

Ears disappeared from Maine to California, and 10 million bottles of Vitalis sat lonely and gathering dust, an oily relic of the past.

Young and old alike, we all bought electric hair dryers. Even athletes and probably truck drivers.

I know not what course others may take, but as for me, I have plugged in my electric hair dryer for the last time.

I despise the effort and time wasted on it and I despise its high-pitched hum. Put an electric hair dryer to your head and you couldn't hear the 7:05 flight to Cleveland take off in the kitchen.

Left completely alone, I have discovered, hair will dry itself in less than an hour. I will save time, conserve energy and never be mistaken for a skinny sheepdog again.

I threw my electric hair dryer in the garbage, along with my banana creme rinse somebody said would give my hair body. I don't want body. I also tossed my shampoo that smells like blossoming apricots. The fragrance of blossoming apricots is for girls and boys who drink whiskey sours and eat the cherries.

Join me if you dare, men. Wetheads, arise again and stand tall! If you must, even slick it down and part it on the side and look up your old barber.

You never know. He may still be in business.

Unneeded intrusion into free market

BY FRANK N. WILNER

If you book an airline reservation through an independent travel agent, chances are that it will be made on a computer system supplied by either American or United Airlines. And because these two systems have a built-in bias in favor of flights by the airline owning the computer reservation system, competing airlines which don't own such systems are calling for divestiture.

Never mind that independent travel agents using the systems operate in a highly competitive market. Never mind that most air travelers are intelligent consumers, often knowledgeable about competing air services. And never mind that travel agents chose the American or United computer reservation systems because they increase agency productivity over alternate methods of booking flights.

If one were to carry the logic of this unwarranted intrusion into free markets further, Coca Cola and Pepsi - Cola would be prevented from putting Cokes and Pepsis in the vending machines they manufacture.

Advocates of computer reservation systems divestiture complain that major airline-owned systems divert travelers to those airlines. This represents exploitation of the consumer, they allege, and requires intervention by government. Washington, D.C. free-market lobbyist Fred L. Smith calls such reactions, "a chain-saw solution to perceived market imperfections."

Suppose your neighborhood travel agent uses United's Apollo computer reservation system, and you ask the agent to book you on a flight from here to there. When the travel agent "asks" the computer for available flights, those offered by United will appear first followed by flights offered by other airlines - including fare comparisons. Thus it is not a matter of United - on its Sabre System - attempting to shut other air carriers out of the market by expunging their flights from the computer system. It is simply a matter of which flights are shown first, which are shown second, and which are shown last.

If a travel agent fails to alert the customer to the availability of more convenient or less expensive flights, the agent will suffer loss of future business. An agent attempting to exploit a customer by collecting larger commissions on more expensive flights is not going to be deterred by the order in which various flights appear on the computer screen.

Since United and American developed these systems at their own cost and risk, it is not surprising - nor unwarranted - that they give preference to their own flights.

Independent travel agents issue some 70 percent of all airline tickets, and the American and United computer reservation systems are used to make almost half of these reservations. If American and United are enjoying market dominance, it is not because there are impediments to market entry. It is because the marketplace values their computer systems more highly than others.

A federal law preventing independent travel agents from utilizing a computer reservation system developed or owned by a major airline would trample freedom of choice, and would add significantly to air-travel costs. After all, if a less expensive, more efficient system already existed, competitive pressures would have compelled independent travel agents to use it.

By forcing American and United from the computer reservation market, complaining (and competing) airlines stand the chance (and only the chance) of having their flights gain greater priority on the travel agent computer screens.

But if the increased costs of such a change squeeze already slim travel-agent profits, there will develop pressure for higher agent commissions and, eventually, higher air fares. Higher air fares will fall exclusively on the shoulders of airline passengers. There is no consumer equity in market-tampering legislation forcing divestiture of airline-owned computer reservation systems - systems which have been voted most efficient by the free market.

Wilner, an associate of the Institute for Human Studies, Menlo Park, Calif., is an economist in Washington, D.C.

Letters to the editor

Description fits, partially

Dear Editor:

I would like to respond to Mr. Langley's Off Beat article published on Sunday, March 17, 1985.

As a teacher in the Pampa Independent School District for the past 4 1/2 years, I would agree with some of Mr. Langley's statements.

First of all Mr. Langley referred to himself as a working slob. I agree that Mr. Langley is a slob, but the working part is certainly debatable. Exactly how much work is involved in setting behind a desk trying to arouse controversy?

Secondly, Mr. Langley implied that after retirement he would probably have to live off dog food. How appropriate for the "self appointed watch dog of the taxpayer". I think Mr. Langley should do his next article on belly aching newspaper reporters. Since farmers and teachers have the "good easy life", maybe he should consider changing professions.

Finally, the last item I agree with is the title of the column. However, I suggest that when Mr. Langley writes the column the Pampa News should change the title to Dead Beat.

Stock show sale unfair

To the Editor:

As a concerned parent of two students that participated in the recent Gray County and Top O Texas Livestock Show, I would like to ask the question. Is it fair?

In addition to their regular schoolwork, these two kids have averaged working with their animals about seven hours a week for the last five months. They had their animals in the very best condition for the shows.

These kids did exceptionally well during the shows. One of them won Reserve Breed Champion and the other placed third. At the end of the shows, it appeared that they would be justly rewarded for their efforts.

But then came the Livestock Sale on Saturday afternoon. This sale is the Grand Finale of the weeklong series of shows. It is a public auction where the animals are sold in the order that they place during the shows. The sale price and buyer are announced as each animal is sold.

Due to the fact that these kids did not have wealthy parents, relatives, or friends in the audience, they were embarrassed when they had to stand out in the ring with their animal while the auctioneer tried to get a respectable price for their animal.

Their animals sold for much less, as much as 75 percent less, than many of the animals that placed much lower in the shows. One of these kids did not even recover his expenses.

After the sale, these kids no longer felt like winners. They had worked hard and had done an exceptionally fine job of raising their animals, but did not receive a price that was commensurate with their placement in the shows. Instead, they received a price that was more comparable to their parents' financial status.

Wouldn't it be better to make a rule for the sale that would not allow an animal to bring a higher price than the animals that place higher in the shows?

Wouldn't a rule like this encourage those people with a better financial status to support programs like this with a more evenly distributed financial reward for these kids in general?

Wouldn't a rule such as this at least prevent someone from buying their child, grandchild, or friend the public recognition that they may or may not have earned?

Keep in mind, that there are no limits placed on the original purchase price of these show animals. Naturally, a boy or girl with a higher quality (higher priced) animal at the start, already has an advantage in the competition. Remember that this competition is at least similar to the other extra-curricular activities. Have you ever heard of someone being able to buy special recognition in a football game or maybe a band concert?

The stock shows seem to be a very worthwhile program. The kids definitely learn something of value in taking care of these animals. I feel that it is a shame that such a fine program should have such an unfair ending. Are there any other possibilities for insuring that the financial rewards for their efforts would be comparable to their placement in the show?

McLean students protest

To the editor,

We the student body of McLean High School would like to protest against the editorial in the Pampa News on March 12, 1985. We would also like to state our opinions on the matter.

Before you printed that letter, you should have gotten the opinion of the high school students to counteract the blow that Mr. Cummings received at such a time. We care for Mr. Cummings and think a lot of him. He had always been there—in or out of school—when we needed to talk, and he has done many things for the kids.

Did you ever stop to think of what a letter like that would do to a man? To his family? You have hurt his chances of getting another job and you have killed his family's image. The Cummings family is well disciplined, so that gives you some clue that Mr. Cummings is very fair and disciplines when it is needed.

How many principals do you know that have won the respect of his high school students? That would stand up for him when he need it the most? Think on that awhile.

About the discipline part, discipline starts at home. Not at school. Mr. Cummings has had to deal with some awful rowdy students in his time, and instead of whipping us until we rebel, he will give us a chance to explain our side of the story and then he will tell us why we should or should not do the things we did. How many parents out there will sit down and talk to your kids without getting temperamental? Not many, we are sure.

This makes one principal and a coach that the school board ran off. Who is it going to be next?

We would like to see one of the people who voted against him come up here and run this school for one week. It's not easy.

We hope that he does well on his next job and wish him the best of luck. We know he will do well because we have faith in him (unlike others). We know that we can't have him rehired, but we would like him to know that we care about him and love him to pieces.

McLean Student Body
(Signed by 63 students)

EDITOR'S REPLY—We don't know what you're talking about and your letter indicates that you don't either. We have not published any letters regarding the firing of Principal Cummings, and we have not written any editorials about it. All we have published is a story about the trustees' refusal to renew his contract and why they said they did it. Your letter seems to say that The Pampa News made some accusation against him regarding discipline. We did not. The school board did. If you disagree, you should address your remarks to the school board, not The Pampa News.

Help make Pampa bloom

To the editor,

Yes, Larry Hollis, it is flower planting time.

Last year in May, the Pampa Board of Realtors as a project of the Make America Better Committee planted flowers in the existing planters and added new ones in the downtown area.

Half-barrels were bought at a discount at Safeway. The plants were purchased at cost through Bob Crippen and Handy Hammer. The Realtors and Boy Scout Troop 404, with their leader Larry Hendrick, spent a Sunday afternoon planting geraniums and petunias. The merchants were charged a proportionate share of the costs.

The Scout troop supplemented the watering chores done by the merchants, and many evenings the Realtors could be seen giving the planters an extra watering. Water was not easily accessible, but through the generosity of Otis Nace, Brown Shoe Fit and Heard Jones, it was provided for this purpose. The Scouts earned badges for their civic involvement.

As a result of some work and a lot of cooperation, the downtown area had beautiful flowers from May until October. Friendly competition flourished among merchants as to whose planter was the prettiest. The feeling of working together toward the betterment of the town existed among all who worked on the project.

We, as realtors, must sell Pampa to our out-of-town clients before we can sell them a home. It is much easier to sell the town when it shows civic pride and homeowners show pride of ownership. So, let us all work together to make this a nicer place to live by planting flowers both at home and at work so that we may enjoy the results. The Realtors are continuing the project again this year. Help us make Pampa bloom!

MIKE KEAGY

Fair trial said possible

To the Editor:

On Sunday Feb. 10, 1985, two residents of Pampa put letters in your paper. The gentleman gave his viewpoint of what Judge Brenda Murry's ruling consisted of and how it could affect the Panhandle. Also, a woman expressed how the slowdown in drilling activity had affected their company.

You, Mr. Editor, then made your comments. To me this is freedom of speech and press. But it appears we may be losing that right.

Lawyers for Dorchester have subpoenaed these people for depositions. Lawyers study how to uphold our laws, but in this case, in my opinion, it has the ring of Nazi and Gestapo tactics of W.W. II. If you say what you think and they don't like it they serve you with a "legal paper" and take you in and interrogate you.

Other people hear about this and become reluctant to express their opinions. Three things are accomplished by this: 1. harassment; 2. suppress public opinion; and 3. they — Dorchester — will use these depositions to try and get a change of venue in upcoming hearings and trials.

This is insinuating that the public opinion, here in the Panhandle, of Dorchester is not good enough for them to get a "fair trial." This indicates to me they don't think there are 12 people in the Panhandle who are impartial or have sense enough to be on this jury. But we try murderers and thieves in these courts.

I would hate to admit that in my own town, where I do business and have friends, that I was so ill thought of that I couldn't get a fair trial in my own county.

You, Mr. Editor, also put and article about 23 royalty owners suing Dorchester for removing drip around the measuring points for gas sales and had not paid royalty. Dorchester has said it independent operators are stealing their gas, but I haven't seen any royalty owners suing independents as of yet.

I know of no federal or state indictments being served on independents or anyone being handcuffed and taken to jail. (Who is stealing from who?)

Mr. Editor I would appreciate your comments pro or con because I still believe in freedom of speech and freedom of the press.

Corporate divestitures reported on the rise

By CHET CURRIER

AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Mergers are making many of the biggest headlines in business these days, with deals like the planned combination of Capital Cities Communications and American Broadcasting.

But behind the scenes there is also a significant trend in the opposite direction — toward the equivalent of corporate divorces.

According to calculations by Mergers & Acquisitions magazine, there were 100 major divestitures of corporate assets in 1980, with a total value of $4.8 billion. By 1984, the number had swelled to 758, worth $29.7 billion.

Companies often make these moves with a great deal of fanfare. "Presenting Trans World Without Airlines," declared the diversified Trans World Corp. after it spun off its airline subsidiary early last year.

ITT Corp. recently took out large ads in the business press describing "Why we sold our Twinkies."

The company said the products of its divested Continental Baking subsidiary "no longer fit our idea of what ITT should be."

"In fact, in 1984 alone, we divested $638 million worth of companies that didn't fit. And we're divesting another $1.7 billion," it said.

What's behind this itch to ditch businesses that once looked appealing enough to buy, or to nurture from birth? As Standard & Poor's Corp. notes in the current issue of its publication The Outlook, managers are trying to adjust to a basic shift in business conditions.

"Many major companies are on slenderizing diets, shedding cash-draining operations or selling off assets that no longer fit into their strategic plans," S&P analysts note.

For one thing, as inflation has subsided, business operations that could thrive with the help of price increases in the 1970s may have lost the advantage of pricing flexibility.

Company managers normally have a strong rooting interest in what happens to the price of their stock. On the most immediate level, the stock's ups and downs can materially affect their own personal wealth, to the extent that they own shares themselves or hold options to buy stock.

Crusty Clara won't bellow for Wendy's, company says

CHICAGO (AP) — Clara Peller, the feisty actress who became famous for bellowing "Where's the beef?" in those hamburger commercials, is now saying "I found it. I really found it."

But she's plugging a different product — and Wendy's International Inc. said Friday the endorsement meant she couldn't continue to speak for the hamburger chain. On Saturday, she replied that the company had "no beef" with her.

Mrs. Peller, who is believed to be in her 80s, is now doing a commercial for Campbell Soup's Prego Spaghetti Sauce, being broadcast on prime-time television.

"We believe the commercial affects her credibility because she can only find the beef in one place, Wendy's," said Dennis Lynch, vice president of communications at Wendy's headquarters in Dublin, Ohio. He said Mrs. Peller made $500,000 last year for her Wendy's ads.

But in Chicago, Mrs. Peller said she had been misled by Wendy's. She said in a statement, issued by spokeswoman June Rosner, that during negotiations with Wendy's founder Davis Thomas and others they "constantly told me not to worry, that I would be taken care of forever."

"Wendy's charge that I am no longer credible because I found beef in Prego's Spaghetti Sauce is what isn't credible," Mrs. Peller said. "I may be an old lady but I'm not senile."

At a news conference today, Mrs. Peller said: "Wendy's is worried about the beef in Prego. ... Well, there's plenty of beef in this world for everyone. ... They have no beef as far as I can see."

She said reporters had come to hear "why I got fired from a job I never really had."

"I haven't done a commercial for Wendy's for many months, and even in the contract we tried to negotiate there was no guarantee of any future commercials," she said.

her lawyer said the spaghetti sauce is not the real bone of contention.

"She was going to sue them," said attorney Joel Weisman. "We really think this is a pre-emptive strike against the lawsuit."

Weisman charged that Wendy's used Mrs. Peller's picture without permission on billboards in Chicago and on masks handed out at a Denver Broncos football game last fall. When legal action was threatened, Wendy's offered to sign her to a three-year contract, he said.

"The negotiations were sputtering, we had no reason to think they would be fruitful. ... She decided to go work elsewhere, which she is free to do."

Time running out on Goetz grand jury

NEW YORK (AP) — The second grand jury in the Bernhard Goetz case has only a few more days to weigh accounts from two of the wounded teen-agers — and possibly to hear from the subway gunman himself — before deciding whether to bring new charges.

The 24 panel members, whose term is due to expire Friday, face the same basic question confronting an earlier grand jury that charged Goetz only with weapons violations: Was he victim or villain? But this time, there has been far more evidence about the incident in which four youths were wounded.

The second grand jury, unlike the first, heard shooting victim Troy Canty say Goetz purposely sat directly across from four youths on a Manhattan subway train and "stared at each and every one of them."

The first panel did not hear

James Ramseur, another of the youths shot, say three of the four were seated when Goetz pulled out his gun.

And the first jury did not get to question Goetz — as the second one may do this week.

That first panel had only Goetz's videotaped statements and several witness accounts of the shootings.

The new panel was formed when a judge agreed there was enough new evidence to permit a second investigation. The youths testified this time because Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau granted them immunity.

An appearance by Goetz, a 37-year-old self-employed electrical engineer, is still uncertain. Morgenthau's office wants him to appear Monday. But Goetz's three lawyers say he will not be available until Friday because they have prior legal commitments.

On ABC-TV's "20-20" program last week, actors recreated the shooting while taped statements made by Goetz to New Hampshire police were broadcast for the first time. On Friday, the New York Post published a front-page report signed by Goetz himself.

The testimony of Ramseur and Canty was made public by their lawyers and creates more questions for the grand jury.

—Was Canty, the youth who approached Goetz for money, a harmless panhandler or a thug?

—Did Goetz, carrying an unlicensed, loaded .38-caliber revolver, deliberately sit across from and stare at the youths as if looking for trouble?

—Did the teen-agers, all of whom have previous criminal records, most on charges of petty larceny and mischief, crowd around Goetz?

Goetz's accounts of the incident charge that the youths crowded around and menaced him. One had his hand inside his coat pocket, which Goetz took to mean he had a weapon.

When one of the youths smiled at him, Goetz said, "I knew what they were going to do ... It was at that point I decided I was gonna kill 'em all, murder 'em all, do anything."

"I knew in my heart (I) was a murderer," Goetz said on the New Hampshire tape aired on "20-20."

Howard Meyer, a lawyer for Canty, called Goetz's account untrue, charging that Goetz "methodically" mowed down the four teens.

Meyer said Canty told the grand jury the youths were "horsing around" — being loud, feigning boxing and in general being "a nuisance" — when Goetz got on the train.

Goetz sat directly across from the youths instead of moving to the far end of the train where the rest of the passengers sat, according to Canty. It was a move Meyer called "confrontational."

Canty — alone, says his lawyer — then approached Goetz and asked for $5. The question was not threatening, said Meyer. "He went up as any panhandler would and said, 'Can I have $5?'"

"This was not just another hustler asking me for a quarter."

Broadcast stocks soar in takeover speculation

By COTTEN TIMBERLAKE
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Takeover speculation, common to the oil patch, has moved into broadcast stocks.

Trading in the group went into a frenzy this past week after American Broadcasting Cos. said it had agreed to be acquired by Capital Cities Communications Inc. in a friendly deal valued at $3.5 billion in cash and securities.

If the deal obtains regulatory and shareholder approval, it will be the first time a network has changed hands, and some investors think it will open the way for other networks to be taken over.

Wall Street analysts say it would be extraordinarily difficult for an unfriendly suitor to take over CBS Inc. or RCA Corp., which owns the NBC television network.

But the analysts say a change in the Federal Communications Commission's rules on local station ownership has gotten broadcasting companies thinking about friendly acquisitions and mergers, and that has fueled investor speculation.

The FCC rules were recently changed to allow a single entity to own up to 12 TV stations, 12 AM and 12 FM radio stations. The rule had been seven of each.

The increase for radio stations is already in effect. The higher TV station count will go into effect April 2.

Broadcast stocks have been so hot that Standard & Poor's Corp.'s radio-TV broadcast index soared 307.77 points to 1,546.83 in the week ended Wednesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 20.10 points to 1,267.45, while the New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 1.19 points to 103.65 and the American Stock Exchange market value index rose 1.56 points to 224.99.

Big Board volume averaged 103.18 million shares a day against 97.43 million the week before.

CBS took center stage, and rose $20.25 during the week.

CBS, ABC, Capital Cities, RCA and Storer Communications Inc. spent a good part of the week on the New York Stock Exchange's list of most actively traded stocks.

Storer moved forward after group of dissident shareholders announced that they plan to seek control of the board of directors in order to sell the company's assets and distribute the proceeds to shareholders. The group controls about 5.3 percent of the stock.

William Donald, media analyst at Standard & Poor's, said, "There will be more volatility in the stocks."

"I think this is going to be a way of life with this group from here on in," Donald said. "If things do start to slow down, somebody is going to float a rumor about one or two of the companies and that's going to get things flying again."

Marcos' wife receiving eye treatment

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos said today that his wife, Imelda, is in the United States for treatment of an eye disease that could lead to blindness.

Although Mrs. Marcos previously acknowledged she has been undergoing eye treatment, Marcos' statement was the first indication that the first lady is suffering from glaucoma, an eye disease that causes progressive loss of vision.

Marcos made the disclosure in an interview with local reporters in the northern Philippine city of Baguio. Portions of the interview were shown on the government television station.

Mrs. Marcos, 55, left Manila on March 12 to attend Soviet leader Konstantin U. Chernenko's funeral in Moscow and then went on to the United States.

Researcher says New Mexico must face its problem of hazardous waste

By SUE MAJOR HOLMES
Associated Press Writer
SOCORRO, N.M. (AP) — New Mexico Tech researcher John Hawley says the biggest problem with toxic waste in New Mexico is making people face the fact there is a problem.

The question of where to put toxic waste has to be solved now because it's too late once waste gets into the water system of an arid, moisture-starved region like New Mexico, he said.

Hawley is head of a project to find sites for possible toxic waste repositories or management facilities in the state. He says the state needs a central facility for handling the wastes to prevent them from polluting New Mexico's countryside and water.

Tons of hazardous wastes are produced in New Mexico.

Companies, both large and small, generate waste ranging from used motor oil and solvents to pesticides and herbicides. The average home garage is filled with motor oil, cans of paint and aerosols for killing various garden pests.

Hawley said the common definition of hazardous waste doesn't even include one common source of ground water pollution — septic tanks.

And, he said, some people assume that because a piece of land is desert and perhaps not good for much anyway, it's all right to dump wastes on it.

"The biggest problem is that people tend to think we don't have a problem," Hawley said. "There's big open spaces, not a lot of people ... they can go out and dump anything."

Large companies have staffs that deal solely with waste management and a big cost of operation for such firms is shipping deadly waste out of state, he said.

But citizens — and some companies — feel free to dump trash on the mesas.

"And not just wood and trees — old cans of paint, used oil, pesticides, poisons, solvents," he said. "... Someone dumps a car body. There's oil, grease, acids, lead in the car battery."

Hawley also said the effect of various wastes on arid climates has not been given much study. For example, scientists don't know what happens to organic chemicals in a dry climate, where chemical reactions differ from those in a humid climate.

"There's a dilution factor in humid climates," he said. "Say there's a bad spill in the Columbia River; it's diluted. That doesn't mean it isn't a terrible thing, but a big river has maybe 100 times the discharge of a Rio Grande."

"When we dump something in the Rio, there's a concern. When we dump something in the arroyo, it just sits there; it isn't diluted," he said.

The main problem in arid climates such as New Mexico's is keeping any pollutants out of the ground water, Hawley said.

"Just about any major city in the state gets a lot of its water from the ground. Water is scarce and we want to keep anything out of it," he said.

Hawley said legislation signed by President Reagan in late 1984 only increases the problem of where to put hazardous waste because it lowers the amount of hazardous waste a business, university or hospital can store before the waste has to be shipped to a facility designed to handle it.

The law creates problems for universities, which often try to save money by ordering toxic materials, such as chemicals for laboratories, in bulk. The schools contend they are not generating hazardous waste, but merely storing it.

"I'm not sure anyone is excited about finding a dump site," he said.

Corporation intrigue new television drama

WASHINGTON (AP) — The most exciting television drama these days is a story of corporate intrigue and big money, involving the power struggles of a large cast of flamboyant characters.

Don't look for it in the regular program listings, though. This show is real, played out in the media, as conservatives complain about a "liberal bias" in television.

An AP News Analysis

news and talk of taking control of a network.

John T. Dolan, chairman of the National Conservative Political Action Committee, recently used NBC videotape to offer the New Right's view of how a profile of new Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev should be handled by the networks. The network ran its own version followed by Dolan's, and there was no doubt the New Right would have handled that story far differently than NBC.

Dolan's segment on the "Today" show was something of a cameo appearance compared to the lead roles being played recently in the network drama by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and Ted Turner, the owner of Cable News Network. While Dolan was displaying how he'd play the news if he ran a network, Helms and Turner are talking about taking control of one.

A conservative leader who can rival President Reagan as a political fund-raiser, Helms is urging his supporters to help a North Carolina group called Fairness in Media buy stock in CBS in an effort to control the network and combat what he claims is the network's liberal bias.

Talking about forming an alliance with Helms and FIM is Turner, who is hungry to gain control of one of the three major networks. The Atlanta-based entrepreneur says he is looking around for the $4 billion it would take to get control of CBS.

Is CBS worried? Network board chairman Thomas H. Wyman says there is "no financial substance" to reports Turner might launch a hostile takeover bid, his way of saying Turner couldn't raise the kind of money needed.

However, CBS has gone to court and alleged that Fairness in Media has violated federal securities laws and engaged in improper political activity.

Is NBC worried? Dolan's appearance on "Today" has "nothing to do with the conservative onslaught on the media," said Steve Friedman, the show's executive producer. "Nothing to do with any complaints. We're just trying to do some different television."

The NBC profile of Gorbachev was based primarily on the Soviet leader's recent visit to England and quoted several members of Parliament describing him as sensitive, self-confident and talking "very much like a westerner ... a Western intellectual." "Humorous" was the most critical adjective used to describe the Soviet leader.

The Dolan profile described Gorbachev as "the new Soviet dictator" and quoted conservative Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., as speculating that to rise to the top in the Soviet system, Gorbachev must be "tough" and "probably dangerous."

SAVINGS & LOAN—Close to 100 customers stand in line outside the Molitor Savings & Loan Saturday morning in Delhi, a western suburb of Cincinnati. All of Ohio's closed savings and loans were given permission to open on a limited basis Saturday. (AP Laserphoto)

Ohio S&Ls open on limited basis

CINCINNATI (AP) — The state-ordered closing of 69 privately insured savings and loans, triggered by the collapse of a Florida securities dealer, created a crisis of confidence among Ohioans that only time and sound banking practices can repair, industry officials say.

"The whole structure's built on confidence. People have to have confidence in the banking system," said William D. Connelly, vice president of Century Savings Bank in Cincinnati.

On Friday, state officials gave permission for all the closed savings and loans to reopen for deposits and limited withdrawals pending their attempts to obtain federal insurance. Century Savings had reopened earlier after getting insurance through the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp.

"As these institutions begin to open up, the crisis will pass," said William S. Bergman, executive vice president of the National Association of State Savings and Loan Supervisors. "I would think the confidence problem has been heightened by the anxiety of not being able to get to your money."

It's not the insurance that's the key, it's the ability to get your money when you want it. If the insurance helps that public perception, that's a plus."

Ohio officials are just now getting time to assess the questions raised by events triggered by the court-ordered closing March 4 of ESM Government Securities Inc. of Fort Lauderdale, Fla. ESM, which sold securities to numerous firms, had loaned $670 million to Home State Savings Bank of Cincinnati.

Home State's depositors, alarmed at the possibility they might lose their money, began a run on the bank despite official assurances their money was safe. Home State closed March 9.

That, in turn, caused runs at two other savings and loans also insured by the private, state-regulated Ohio Deposit Guarantee Fund.

Concerned officials of other ODGF-insured banks contacted Gov. Richard F. Celeste, who on March 15 ordered the 69 remaining ODGF institutions closed. The crisis did not affect the approximately 125 federally insured savings and loans in Ohio.

The state appointed Arlo Smith, a retired Cleveland banker, as conservator to oversee sale of Home State to a new owner for reopening. Smith has been unable to conclude the talks so far, and Home State depositors are still cut off from their money.

Celeste appointed lawyer Lawrence A. Kane Jr. last week as a special prosecutor to investigate Home State's collapse and recommend changes in Ohio's banking regulations.

Financier Marvin L. Warner, owner of Home State, reportedly withdrew $37 million of his assets from ESM days before its collapse. He has been sued by depositors, who say he should have protected them if he knew ESM was in trouble.

Warner, in telephone interviews with Cincinnati news media from an undisclosed location, has denied doing anything wrong. Warner, a major contributor to Celeste's 1982 gubernatorial campaign, also says the Federal Reserve Bank could have saved Home State by pumping money into it.

Air safety inspection said probed by FBI

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI is investigating allegations that Federal Aviation Administration officials suppressed significant portions of a report about safety violations at Continental Airlines, according to a broadcast report.

CBS News reported Friday that the leader of the FAA inspection team charged that references to major problems with Continental's pilot checkout and training procedure were deleted from the draft inspection report by officials at the FAA's Los Angeles regional office.

"I consider these changes an impropriety and a cover-up," CBS quoted Harry Langdon, the inspection team leader, as writing in a Jan. 5 letter to Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole. He said the changes showed "a lack of integrity and the abuse of authority."

Feldman said "unsubstantiated statements and emotional language" were the only elements left out of a final report on safety inspections of Continental Airlines last year.

New screening test used to protect U.S. blood supplies

By The Associated Press
Blood banks across the nation have begun using a screening test designed to protect U.S. blood supplies from contamination by the virus suspected of causing AIDS, and, as expected, the first results show just a few positive readings among thousands of blood samples tested.

Health officials blame at least 113 cases of acquired immune deficiency syndrome on transfused blood. The disease destroys the immune system, leaving the body vulnerable to other diseases, and is most common among male homosexuals and abusers of injectable drugs. Nearly half the 8,900 cases of AIDS reported in this country have been fatal.

Secretary of Health and Human Services Margaret Heckler has said the test, which detects antibodies to the virus HTLV-III, "assures a higher level of safety for our nation's blood supply."

But the test is not completely reliable, with "false negative" readings reported in a small percentage of cases where people actually carry the virus. Critics have charged that some people in high-risk groups will have their blood tested because they suspect they may have AIDS, and that some of their blood will slip through the test and further contaminate the blood supply.

In an effort to discourage people from donating blood just to learn their test results, most blood banks say they will delay notifying donors with positive results.

That policy has brought protests in Detroit and threats of picketing in New Orleans, but blood bank officials say most gay rights groups have been either

"ambivalent" about or supportive of the testing while waiting for separate diagnostic screenings to be set up in many cities.

"The test doesn't tell a person whether they have AIDS or not. ... This is not a diagnostic test," said Red Cross spokeswoman Christine Gray in Syracuse, N.Y., where testing on donated blood began March 14.

What the test, approved by the federal Food and Drug Administration early this month, does show is that a donor has been exposed to the HTLV-III virus, believed to cause AIDS, and has developed antibodies to it. Scientists have not determined what percentage of people with the antibodies may eventually show symptoms of AIDS.

When a test is positive, officials say, the sample is retested and the blood is destroyed.

"It's just another safeguarding system," said Diane Gilbert, a spokeswoman for the Southeastern Pennsylvania Chapter of the American Red Cross, whose technicians were being trained to perform the test last week.

"EARS OF HEAR"

"He that hath ears to hear, let him hear" (Matthew 11:15.) Jesus made this statement to the multitudes in regard to His work and that of John the Baptist. He meant simply "if you have an attitude of mind that will allow reception of truth then allow it into your heart."

Many in the days of Christ upon this earth were not of the disposition of mind to "hear" what He said. They "heard" in the sense that the sounds went into their physical organs known as the "ears" and then was relayed to the brain. But because of prejudice, pride, jealousy, etc., they would not allow the teaching to take root in their minds.

We have the exhortation "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock and it shall be opened unto you, for everyone that asketh receiveth, and he that seeketh, findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened." (Matthew 7:7-8.) This exhortation is evidently based upon the benediction in Matthew 5:6. "Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness; for they shall be filled."

Dunham tops Calcutta tolerates sidewalk dwellers

CAMI DUNHAM

MICHELLE EAKIN

Cami Dunham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Dunham, 2507 Evergreen, has been named valedictorian for the graduating class of 1984-1985 at Pampa High School.

Salutatorian will be Michelle Eakin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Eakin, 2212 Dogwood. Dunham has an overall grade point of 3.69730, while Eakin has a GPA of 3.65714.

Principal Paul Payne has released the rankings of the top 10 students for the Senior Class. There were 213 students in the class ranked by GPAs, he said.

Ranked third was John Tarpley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Tarpley, 1812 Christine. He has a GPA of 3.64762.

Two brothers ranked in the top 10. Worley Kennedy is fourth with a GPA of 3.61463, while Wiley Kennedy is sixth with 3.59048. Both are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Kennedy, Route 1.

James Stevens was fifth with a 3.59524 GPA. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gattis, Route 1.

Seventh is Kimberly Gross, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Gross, 1817 Holly Lane. She has a GPA of 3.51429.

Tied for eighth place are Michelle Black, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Keith Black, 1341 Russell, and Kimberly Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Wilson, 1701 N. Russell. Both have GPAs of 3.49048.

Rounding out the top 10 listings is Brian Kotara, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Paronto, 2501 Christine. He has a 3.46190 GPA.

Principal Payne commended the students for the academic excellence they have maintained in their high school years.

Dunham and Eakin will speak during graduation ceremonies for the Class of 1985, scheduled for Thursday, May 23.

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer
CALCUTTA, India (AP) — For 15 of her 20 years, Shakila Begum's address has been the sidewalk, a squalid spot of teeming urban turf where she has slept under a plastic sheet, cooked her scavenged meals, conceived and given birth to two sons. And she says without bitterness that the sidewalk most likely is where she will die.

The beguiling Shakila, who wears a shabby but clean red sari and fake gold bangles and works part-time as a maid, left her impoverished nearby village of Lakshkanapur when she was 5, with her father. In the village they seldom could eat twice a day. Usually they ate rice and vegetables in the late afternoon.

Her rickshaw-puller husband, Mohammad Shamin, literally was born on the sidewalk. He doesn't know where or when. He doesn't know where his parents came from. But he considers himself lucky to earn about 78 cents a day.

Monsoon is their blessed season because, while she huddles inside their fly-infested bamboo and leaf lean-to, Mohammad does good business in the flooded streets of Park Circus Maidan. Then they are rich and can eat fish and meat twice a month.

Shakila and her husband are among the thousands of sidewalk dwellers or sleepers — unofficial estimates say 500,000 — for which Calcutta is notorious. The official estimate is 50,000 to 200,000 but no one knows how many.

Sidewalk dwellers are a vast amorphous subculture, even worse off than the slum dwellers who have a roof over their heads and can afford a few rupees' rent. Most sidewalk people could not survive without their free dormitory.

Some sidewalk people use the street as a convenient free bed, especially in summer. Some sleep elsewhere but bathe in the standpipe water, relieve themselves at the curb and do odd jobs. Many, like Shakila, know no other life than the streets and gutters where they are illegal squatters, tolerated by a helpless, benign and over-burdened system.

Many street people work as part-time laborers, sweepers, rickshaw pullers. They pick through tons of garbage that accumulate each day, competing with the dogs, scavenging for less rotten vegetables to cook or resell, for salable charcoal, paper, rags, tin cans or nails to be straightened. Some wash utensils or weave baskets. Many beg and teach their children to do the same. Prostitution helps them survive.

Most of the limited help to the sidewalk people comes from religious and charitable groups, such as Mother Teresa's Sisters of Charity and the Lutheran World Service. They give free meals, blankets, medical care, run sidewalk schools and teach a few skills to a fraction of the population. Precious little.

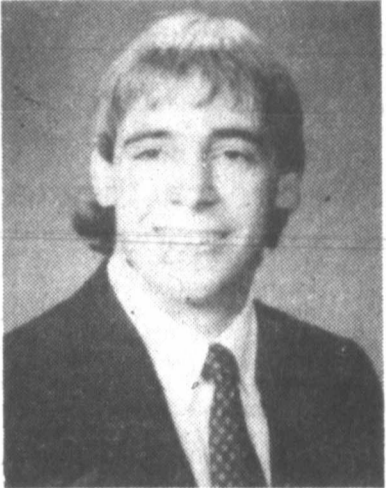

Shakila and Mohammad have two sons, 3 and 5. The 5-year-old was sent to a free primary school in her native village and she wants the younger boy to go.

"I want them to get educated," she says. "They must not live the life I live but I don't know how far they can go or how much I can help them. If we have to buy a single sheet of paper they will have to give up school because money must buy food."

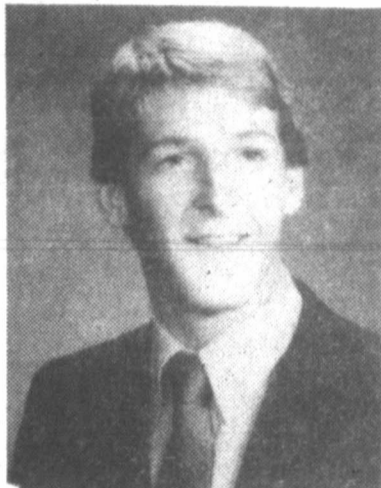

But Shakila appears to hold no grudge against the sidewalk world. Life is always difficult, but not always miserable. She and her family see free monkey, snake or magic shows in the street.

"We are content with this kind of food and life since our birth," she says. "We do not expect more. Sometimes we are hungry, but we wait for the next meal and are grateful."

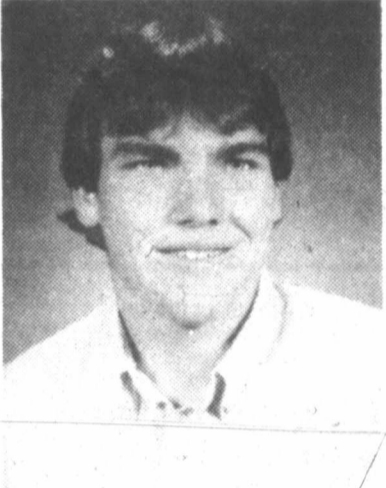

"I always pray to Allah," she says. "If it is his will, we will have better days."

AGRICULTURE SCENE

Spring planting hampered by wet conditions

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Wet fields in central and coastal areas of Texas are hampering spring planting operations.

Many farmers that would normally be through planting corn and grain sorghum by now are still waiting for their fields to dry, said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, in his weekly report on the state's agriculture.

Only about one-third of the corn and grain sorghum has been planted in the Coastal Bend area. In a few central counties, corn planting is about complete and grain sorghum is about 50 percent planted; however, planting is lagging behind in most areas due to wet fields.

Planting is now going full speed in South Texas where rains caused early delays, Carpenter noted. Grain sorghum is about 90 percent planted; corn, 75 percent; and cotton, 70 percent.

Corn and grain sorghum planting also is in full swing in Southwest Texas (Uvalde area) while sugar beets are being planted in parts of the Panhandle and South Plains. Some rice has been planted in the Coastal Plains.

Soil temperatures are continuing to moderate to enhance seed germination, according to the National Weather Service's Agricultural Weather Service Center at Texas A&M University. Temperatures at the 4-inch depth for the past week averaged as follows: Austin, 59 degrees F.; Beaumont, 67; Beeville, 65; College Station, 66; Dilley, 68; Eagle Lake, 65; Lavon Dam (near Dallas), 58; Longview, 66; Lufkin, 63; Pecos, 60; San Angelo, 61; Stephenville, 64; Uvalde, 65; Victoria, 64; and Waco, 60.

To ensure good seed germination, Carpenter advised farmers to stay abreast of soil temperatures and to consider the following as a minimum for planting: 50 degrees for corn, 55 for grain sorghum and 65 for cotton.

Both gardening and planting of truck crops is increasing over the state with the advent of spring.

noted Carpenter. Onions in the Winter Garden lost to the winter freeze have been replanted while onion harvesting is about to start in the Rio Grande Valley. Onion and potato planting has been active over much of Texas.

Small grain crops (wheat and oats) are making excellent progress and should produce a bountiful grain harvest later this spring, Carpenter noted.

Livestock and pasture conditions are continuing to improve as temperatures moderate. Favorable moisture conditions over most of the state should boost grass growth in the weeks ahead, said Carpenter.

Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions. PANHANDLE: Land preparation is in full swing, with sugar beets being planted. Potato planting is active in Deaf Smith County. Wheat is making good progress although some of the dryland crop needs moisture. Cattle are being moved off wheat fields where a grain crop is to be produced.

SOUTH PLAINS: Farmers are busy with preparations for the upcoming planting season. Sugar beet and potato planting is under way in a few counties. Wheat is making good progress, with cattle being moved off fields to enable grain production. Recent rains should boost the dryland wheat crop.

ROLLING PLAINS: Wet fields are continuing to hamper spring planting preparations, particularly in areas of heavier soils. Small grains are making excellent progress; cattle are being moved off fields where a grain crop is planned. Weeds are greenening-up ranges, and heavy infestations are expected in the coming weeks.

NORTH CENTRAL: Corn and grain sorghum planting is under way in some counties. Gardening is increasing and peach and plum trees are in full bloom. Wheat and oats are making good growth. Cattle conditions are improving, with calving in full swing.

NORTHEAST: Wet fields are continuing to hamper land preparation and spring planting operations. Wheat and oats are making excellent growth. Pasture and livestock conditions are improving.

FAR WEST: Land is being prepared for spring planting. Onion planting is under way and cantaloupes will be planted soon. Small grains are making good progress with the warmer weather and improved moisture conditions. Livestock and range conditions remain stable.

WEST CENTRAL: Farmers are busy getting fields ready for spring planting. Wheat and oats continue to make good growth; some growers are spraying for greenbugs and powdery mildew. Home gardening is active and fruit trees are starting to bloom. Livestock conditions are improving, with market prices greatly improved.

CENTRAL: Spring planting is under way; corn and grain sorghum are about 25 percent planted. Wheat prospects look excellent. Livestock conditions continue to improve, with spring lambing active. Hornflies and lice are increasing on cattle.

EAST: Land preparation and planting of spring vegetables is active although wet fields are causing some delays. Small grains and clovers are in excellent shape, and pastures are starting to green up. Many peach trees are in full bloom.

UPPER COAST: Wet fields are continuing to cause problems for farmers waiting to move ahead with spring planting. Only a limited amount of corn and grain sorghum has been planted along with some rice. Wheat and oats continue to make good growth. Spring calving is peaking.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Field work continues to be hampered by rainy weather. Corn and grain sorghum planting has been limited in many counties but ranges from 50 to 90 percent complete in drier areas. Some early corn is already up. Wheat and oats are making good growth and hay prospects look good. Gardening is in full swing. Cattle conditions are improving, with market prices stronger.

SOUTHWEST: Corn and grain sorghum planting is in full swing, with some early fields up to good stands. Onions lost to the winter freeze have been replanted. Sheep and goat shearing continues and livestock conditions are improving.

COASTAL BEND: Rainy conditions are continuing to hamper spring planting. Only about a third of the corn and grain sorghum acreage has been planted. Wheat and oats are in fair to good condition, and pastures are starting to improve. However, cattle feeding continues in most locations. Fruit trees are in full bloom.

SOUTH: Corn, grain sorghum and cotton planting continues in full swing. About 90 percent of the grain sorghum has been planted compared to 75 percent of the corn and 70 percent of the cotton. Producers are also planting hay crops. Cabbage and carrot harvesting continues, and onion harvesting is about to start. Livestock look good, with calving heavy.

Soviets purchase more corn

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says the Soviet Union has bought an additional 100,000 metric tons of corn — about 3.94 million bushels — for delivery through Sept. 30.

Officials said Wednesday the latest sale was reported to the department by private exporters, as required by law. No prices or other details were disclosed in the announcement.

However, the department says the latest estimated farm price of corn is $2.69 per bushel. A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 39.4 bushels of corn or 36.7 bushels of wheat.

Thus, the latest sales would have an estimated U.S. farm value of about $10 million.

Purchases for delivery in 1984-85 under a long-term grain supply agreement now total a record of 17.1 million tons, including 14.2 million tons of corn and 2.9 million tons of wheat.

The previous record year for U.S. grain exports to the Soviet Union was 15.5 million tons shipped in 1978-79.

In the year that ended last Sept. 30, the Soviet Union bought 14.5 million tons of U.S. grain, including 7.6 million tons of wheat, 6.5 million tons of corn and 416,200 tons of soybeans.

In Agriculture

By JOE VANZANDT
County Extension Agent

Our rains of last week certainly helped to maintain a very good supply of moisture for our growing wheat crop. We are having some very favorable weather this winter and early spring for our winter wheat.

The Gray County ASCS office received word this past week that haying and grazing privileges on ACR acreages for 1985 will be allowed. The basis for this is the fact that our hay supplies and available forages were depleted during the last year because of our extreme drought last summer. Details for your particular operation can be obtained at the ASCS office.

CATTLE INVENTORIES
The following information was obtained from our Extension Western Livestock Roundup monthly publication.

USDA released Jan. 1 estimates of cattle numbers Feb. 11. The reduction in cattle numbers during 1984 was even greater than anticipated.

The total number of cattle and calves on farms in the United States Jan. 1 was estimated by USDA at 109.8 million head. This was down three percent (four million head) from 1984, and was the lowest Jan. 1 total inventory since the 109.4 million head reported in 1968.

Total numbers of beef and dairy cows on Jan. 1 were estimated by USDA to be at 46.2 million head. This was a five percent decline from Jan. 1, 1984 and the lowest estimated number of cows since 1960. Jan. 1 beef cow numbers, at 35.4 million head, were down six percent from last year. This was the lowest number of beef cows since the 34.6 million head reported in 1968.

Continued reduction in total cattle numbers during 1985 seems highly probable based on the estimates in the January report. The calf crop for 1985 undoubtedly will be smaller with a lower cow herd, marking the fifth year in a row of lower calf crops.

Beef producers seemed to express little desire to expand herds at the current time, as heifers intended for replacement on Jan. 1 for the beef cow herd were reported to be down 10 percent from last year. There was a five percent increase noted in heifer retentions for milk cows, in line with expectations of producers to increase milk production once the dairy diversion program ends this spring. Offsetting this increase in dairy heifer intentions, however, is the reality of continued economic pressure on the dairy industry which may cause larger dairy cow slaughter in 1985 than has occurred during the past two years.

What does all this mean in terms of management strategies for the cow-calf producer? From a management viewpoint, the information may be translated into reflecting strong demand for replacement cows throughout 1985 and 1986.

Astute producers who have not already done so may perceive this period to be a favorable time for herd replacement and/or expansion. However, the prudent producer also will want to be cautious about chasing the cow market too high when bidding for replacement stock. The biological lags involved with getting a heifer bred, growing the calf, finishing the animal in the feedlot and putting a steak in the meat counter is about three to four years. By that time, much of the benefit of higher prices may already be past and prices likely will be lower.

On the other side of the coin, the next two years may represent a very favorable time for the cow-calf producer who is interested in exiting the cow business to sell cows.

'84 AG YEARBOOK DEALS WITH ANIMAL HEALTH
The 1984 Yearbook of Agriculture is chock full of practical information on animal health.

Livestock and Pets." The yearbook features important information on caring both for farm animals and pets. The yearbook is prepared by the U.S. Department of Agriculture and annually focuses on a topic of special interest.

It's packed with information on nutrition, diseases, medication and all kinds of health problems. The yearbook has 87 chapters, 32 pages of color photos and more than 300 black and white photos. It has sections on raising backyard poultry and pet birds, cattle, sheep and goats, horses, swine, fish, dogs, cats, rabbits and other small animals.

Workers: oil patch opportunity has opened for minorities

By SUSAN HAMMONS
Odessa American
ODESSA, Texas (AP) — Since joining Amoco Production Co. almost 10 years ago, Lester Shaw has worked his way from roustabout to gang pusher to pumper. He now earns nearly $14 an hour.

During that time, the black man said, he has seen oil patch opportunities open up for minority members.

"When I first went there, it was hard," the 48-year-old Shaw said, adding that a non-Anglo had to know someone at a company in order to get an oil field job. "If you went on your own, it was just about nil."

Nowadays, Shaw said, ability determines who gets the jobs. "I think they hire people now not because somebody can get you in."

In his early days as a roustabout, he said, minority members often were given a task to do, but no instruction on how to do it.

That, too, has changed. Said Shaw: "If you apply yourself now, and they see you try, then they'll help you."

Of Amoco's 38 workers in the Goldsmith area, where Shaw works, about eight are Hispanic and three are black.

Shaw said he's not had any trouble with co-workers, but he attributed that in part to his ability to "mix" with people.

If someone tells a joke about a black, for instance, "I'll just replace the black with a white man," he said. "They do it all the time."

Sometimes those jokes are not funny, said Shaw. "There have been instances where 'nigger' has been used. You just let it slide. Used to, I wouldn't."

During the 1960s, Shaw also worked for an oil field rental firm in various jobs, including truck driver. At that time, he recalled, Anglos let it be known blacks were not welcome in the oil patch.

"What's this oil field coming to?" he remembers someone commenting when he made a delivery. "Where do you want your stuff unloaded?" was Shaw's immediate response.

Bill Duff, owner of an Odessa oil field tool and service company, said that while prejudice may have been present among oil field workers in the past, he knew of no company that ever condoned either overt or covert racism.

The 31-year-old Duff said oil industry managers who have allowed prejudice to hamper their effectiveness have been transferred.

"In the last slowdown, our ladies and minorities outperformed the majority and kept their jobs because they outperformed them," Duff said.

But Billy D. Hall, a former employee of Gulf Oil Co. in Odessa, said the old oil patch attitude toward blacks has not been erased entirely.

A former Pinkerton security guard, Hall, now 42, was hired by Gulf's drilling division for a training program in 1978.

He started as a roughneck, then became a driller.

Hall said he was told he eventually would become a "company man" — one who eventually would oversee drilling operations for Gulf.

Of 80 employees in the drilling unit, only about three were black, he said. Anglos often were surprised to see him on the floor of a rig.

"For so long, it's been predominantly a white-dominated profession," he said, noting that some people resist any kind of change. But, "basically speaking, we got along real good."

However, after two years with Gulf, he was fired by the area training supervisor, a man in his 60s, Hall said.

"Nobody would listen to a black man," Hall said he was told. "There was no sense of me thinking I'm going to be a company man."

Now an Odessa apartment manager, Hall subsequently filed a complaint against Gulf with the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

Hall said he has been waiting for a letter from the commission so he can take legal action against the oil company.

Alex Vigil of the EEOC's El Paso office said Hall's complaint was filed in the last quarter of 1981 and later transferred to Dallas. But after Hall requested the right to sue Gulf in July 1983, the EEOC no longer was involved, Vigil said.

Said Fred Meurer, Texas Region director of public affairs for Gulf: "The case was settled between Gulf and Mr. Hall to the satisfaction of both parties," he said. That occurred in April 1984, he indicated.

Hall claimed that, because he filed a grievance against Gulf, other area oil companies blackballed him.

Gerald M. Scott, president of R.G. Drilling Co. Inc. in Odessa, denied the existence of a "formal blackball" system.

"That's a myth," the 38-year-old Scott said, adding he has seen no list since 1976, when he first became associated with the industry.

Scott said that, although most managers do not care about the color of a person's skin, minority members may suffer some discrimination because rig workers typically are hired not by office personnel, but by drillers in the field.

A person's unflattering employment record also tends to follow the employee, said Scott.

James Blain, president of John Drilling Co. in Odessa, agreed. "As far as I know, there's nobody ever been blackballed in the Permian Basin."

Blain said most drillers are concerned with hiring experienced, reliable hands, not with race.

Jim York, Amoco's Odessa district manager, said although a person's race is not a consideration, anyone terminated by another company is subject to having his or her track record scrutinized.

Although Hall said some companies hire blacks, "usually, when there are layoffs, the blacks are the first to go."

J.T. Butler, 45, a gas tester for Phillips Petroleum Co., said the color of skin has not been a hindrance.

Butler began working for the company as a roustabout in 1972, earning $3.25 an hour. In 1973, he got "bumped," but he said that action was based on seniority, not because he's a black person.

Sac Peak closing to affect astronauts

ALAMOGORDO, N.M. (AP) — The closing of the National Solar Observatory at Sacramento Peak, N.M., will take away a key part of the "early warning system" that helps protect orbiting astronauts from the radiation of sun storms, according to an Air Force expert.

Richard Altroch, an Air Force geophysicist who works at the Solar Observatory said only "Sac Peak" provides data on the sun's corona, the outer layer that is a major source of radiation.

"We provide data from the corona that is not provided by any other observatory," said Altroch. "If our observatory is closed, it will lower the amount of data available for making predictions."

Sac Peak is operated by the National Science Foundation. Officials have announced that the facility will be closed due to a reduction in funding.

Altroch said the observatory sends its studies to the Space Environment Services Center of the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration in Boulder, Colo. This center combines the observations with data from its own telescopes and from those of telescopes at Kitt Peak, Ariz. to make predictions about storms on the sun.

The Air Force scientist said that reducing the amount of solar data available will mean "a lower probability of a correct forecast" of sun storms.

An official at the Boulder center said, however, that the loss of data from Sac Peak will not seriously affect solar storm forecasting.

"Sacramento Peak is a secondary source of information for our center," said William J. Brennan, a spokesman at the NOAA center. "We'll still be able to do a credible job" without the Sacramento Peak data.

What will be missed, he said, is the expertise of the Sacramento Peak staff.

Bill Duff, owner of an Odessa oil field tool and service company, said that while prejudice may have been present among oil field workers in the past, he knew of no

Pampa girls win Borger meet

TRIPLE JUMP— Pampa's Sandee Greenway turned in her best performance in the triple jump with a 34-11 leap in the Bulldog Relays at Borger Saturday. The Lady Harvesters racked up 157 points to win their fourth meet of the season. (Staff Photo by L.D. Strate)

BORGER — Pampa's Lady Harvesters, relying again on their seemingly endless depth of talent, ran away from the competition in the Bulldog Relays for their fourth meet victory in as many outings Saturday.

Pampa rolled up 157 points, while Palo Duro was a distant second at 96. Amarillo High followed with 94 points. Borger was fourth at 84, Canyon, fifth, 64; Perryton, fifth, 35; Dumas, sixth, 10, and Guymon, Okla., eighth, 8.

"We've got a little more depth than anybody else and that's the reason we're winning," said Pampa coach Gary Cornelsen. "We're not winning every event, but we're scoring in just about everything."

Pampa did set two meet records Saturday in the 200 and the 400-meter relay. Tonya Liddy won the 200 in a record-breaking time of 25.0 and Pampa's 400-meter relay team of Jackie Oglesby, Courtney Brown, Kristi Hughes and Miss Liddy won with a new meet record of 49.5.

Sophomore Linda Ammons won the 400-meter dash with a personal best of 61.0, and the mile-relay team of Linda Ammons, Sandee Greenway, Beverly Payne, and Tonya Liddy came in first with a 4:16.2.

Both Sandee Greenway and Tonya Liddy had personal bests in the triple jump. Miss Greenway placed third with a 34-11 leap and Miss Liddy was fourth at 33-9.

Kristi Hughes placed second both the high jump and long jump and Miss Greenway was fourth in the long jump.

In the shot put, Sandra Farrah bettered her top throw with a 34-7 toss, good enough for second. Andrea Hopkins was third. Miss Hopkins had her personal best (117-4) in the discus for second place. Stacey Bennett was fourth.

Katrina Jackson was second in the 100 hurdles. Courtney Brown was second in the 100 (12-6) and Beverly Payne was second (13.0).

Pampa's 880-relay team of Beverly Payne, Jackie Oglesby, Katrina Jackson and Courtney Brown placed second.

Cornelsen was almost as pleased with the efforts of the Pampa boys as he was the girls, although the Harvesters finished fifth with 55 points.

"I thought the boys had a heck of a day," Cornelsen said. "They turned in some of the best performances since I've been coaching here."

Palo Duro rolled up 171 points to win the seven-team meet. Tascosa was third with 93, Perryton, fourth, 88; Dumas, fifth, 66; Pampa, fifth, 55; Guymon, sixth, 30, and Borger, seventh, 22.

Pampa's sprint relay team of Kelly Wyatt, Gary Jernigan, Marvin Jackson, and Lance Ripple ran a 43.7 to finish second. It was their best time this season.

Jernigan turned in his best times in two events. He was third in the 200 (23.0) and third in the 100 (11.0).

Also placing for Pampa were Lance Ripple, fourth, 11.4, 100, and Early Jackson, fourth, 400. Lyle Vanbuskirk had his best toss in the discus (139-1) for third place.

Willie Jacobs third-place in the 3200 (10:58.3) was also his best time.

"Overall, I was just real pleased with the way the boys performed," Cornelsen said. "They were very competitive."

Pampa boys will compete in the Perryton Invitational next Saturday while the Pampa girls are entered in the Amarillo Relays.

"We'll find out if our girls are for real at Amarillo," Cornelsen said. "We'll be going up against the four Amarillo girls, plus several other larger schools."

Pampa placed third in the girls junior varsity division with 123 points. Borger won the JV title with 152 points.

Pampa boys were second in the junior varsity division with 115 points. Perryton won first with 128 points.

Golfers win second district round

The Pampa High golf team shot a 315 to win the District 1-4A second round held Saturday at the Pampa Country Club course.

Pampa now trails first-place Canyon by three strokes after two rounds of district play.

Canyon finished second in Saturday's meet with a 320, followed by Borger B, 345; Borger

A, 347, and Pampa B, 348.

Freshman Jeff Ray of Canyon shot a 72 to claim medalist honors, while Clay Jett of Pampa was second at 74. Canyon's Phil Behrens was for third at 76.

Also for Pampa's A team, Jeff Langen and Dyrans Crosier each shot a 79, followed by Jody Chase, 83, and Johnny Snuggs, 89.

Pampa's B team was led by Brian Loeffler's 76. David McGill shot an 86, Bryan Hogan 89, Scott Pope and John Starnes, 97 each.

Loeffler is in second place in the district medalist race while Crosier and Langen are tied for fourth.

The third district round will be next Saturday at Dumas.

Lady Raiders lose to LSU

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Despite a 40-point show from Drake's Julie Fitzpatrick, Florida defeated the Bulldogs 87-80 to move opposite Louisiana Tech into tonight's finals of the Women's National Invitational Tournament.

Earlier Friday night, LSU pinned a 71-67 loss on Texas Tech, the tournament's No. 1 seed.

Texas Tech and Drake will play for third place at 7 p.m. today, followed by the championship game between Florida and LSU at 9 p.m.

Fitzpatrick's 40 points was the fourth-highest single-game performance in tournament history.

Margaret Peters led Florida's Lady Gators with 19 points. Tammy Jackson added 18 points and 10 rebounds for the Lady Gators, and Katurah Bell had 16 points and 11 rebounds.

Drake's Wanda Ford fouled out with 2:27 to play but finished with 18 points and 14 rebounds. For the game, Florida had a 40-38 edge in rebounds.

Jeanetta Burns hit four free throws in the last 30 seconds to propel LSU to its victory over Texas Tech.

After 10 lead changes in the first half, the Tigers took a 41-39 lead into intermission. Tech tied the score numerous times in the second half.

Lubbock Estacado racks up Harvesters

LUBBOCK — Defending District 1-4A champions Lubbock Estacado score eight runs in the fifth inning to defeat Pampa, 11-1, in high school baseball action Saturday.

The game was halted after five innings because of the 10-run rule.

The Harvesters, 0-2 in district play, and 4-6 overall, were hurt by six errors. Estacado had one error.

Pampa's only run came in the fourth inning when Jimmy Bridges doubled with two outs and came home on Brent John's single. Those were the only hits off Estacado hurler Keith Thornton, who struck out eight Harvesters and walked three.

Pampa pitcher Brent Cryer suffered his first setback after three victories. Cryer yielded seven hits, but held the Matadors hitless through the first two innings. He struck out three and walked one before he was taken out with two outs in the bottom of the fifth. Wade Howard pitched to the final two batters before the game was called. Estacado plated three runs in the third inning on a pair of hits and two errors.

David Torey had two hits and three RBI for Estacado.

Hoyas hold off Georgia Tech

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Sophomore Reggie Williams hit four clutch-free throws as top-ranked Georgetown, with All-American Pat Ewing on the bench much of the second half, Georgetown's Patrick Ewing (33) is guarded closely by Georgia Tech's Yvon Joseph.

hung on for a 60-54 victory over No. 6 Georgia Tech on Saturday and earned its third trip to the NCAA Final Four in four years.

The Hoyas' 16th straight victory gave them the East Regional championship and kept them on track to become the first team to repeat as national champions since UCLA in 1972 and 1973. They will meet the winner of Sunday's West Regional championship between St. John's and North Carolina State next Saturday in Lexington, Ky.

Ewing, who sat out 12 minutes of the second half with four fouls, still led the Hoyas with 14 points, all but two in the first half. Williams and Bill Martin added 12 each. Seven-foot John Salley scored 12 of his 15 points in the second half to lead the Yellow Jackets, while Price and Dalrymple each added 13.

Georgetown, 34-2, survived because of the poor shooting of Georgia Tech guard Mark Price, who was a 49 percent shooter during the season but hit only three of 15 from the outside against the Hoyas.

Georgia Tech, 27-8, overcame a four-point deficit midway through the game and fought the Hoyas down to the end. Reserves Ralph Dalton, filling in for the foul-plagued Ewing, and Horace Broadnax combined for nine points as Georgetown pulled to a 51-46 lead, its largest of the second half.

After Georgia Tech's Bruce Dalrymple hit a jumper with 3:45 remaining to cut the Hoya lead to 52-50, Williams tossed in two free throws with 1:12 left. Scott Petway scored his only points of the game on a jumper to make it 54-52 with 55 seconds remaining, but Williams then connected on another pair of free throws to make it a four-point Georgetown lead again.

Price finally hit a long jumper to make it 56-54, but Dalton then added two free throws and Broadnax ended it with a driving layup at the buzzer.

Salley crashed hard to the floor in the second half when David Wingate drove over him attempting a layup. He took only a brief rest and returned to the game.

With 5:23 left in the game, tempers flared when 6-11 Yvon Joseph of Georgia Tech fouled Dalton.

Georgetown used both Dalton and Ewing together for much of the first half to combat the size of Joseph and Salley and the first half ended in a 29-29 tie.

Ewing scored all the points in a 7-0 spurt which put the Hoyas up 23-15 and a jumper by Wingate gave the Hoyas their biggest lead of the half, 28-19.

Lady 'Horns upset by Western Kentucky

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. (AP) — Western Kentucky's Lady Hilltoppers and their hometown fans brought an abrupt end to Texas' dream of playing on its home court in Austin in the Final Four of the NCAA women's basketball tournament.

Lillie Mason's off balance 12-foot jumper at the buzzer put top-ranked Texas out of contention as No. 14 Western Kentucky pulled off a 92-90 upset Friday night in the Midwest Regional semifinals.

"These kind of games happen once in a lifetime," said Western Kentucky coach Paul Sanderford. "I'm proud of these kids. I don't know if I could have taken another five minutes."

Western Kentucky, 27-5, advanced to Sunday's final against No. 6 Mississippi, which knocked off Tennessee 63-60, in an earlier semifinal. The winner moves on to Austin next week.

Texas coach Jody Conradt didn't blame her team's loss on the fans. "It was definitely a great home crowd, but you have to give Western credit. The crowd didn't beat us; they played very, very well," she said.

Mason, who finished with 26 points, grabbed a rebound from a missed Texas shot and led a fast break. Texas then knocked the ball out of bounds, giving the Lady Hilltoppers time to set up the game-winning play.

Western Kentucky's Clemette Haskins, who also scored 26 points, hit a three-point play to tie the game at 84-84 with 3:06 left. Her 14-footer at 2:31 tied it at 86-86.

Texas pulled ahead 90-86 at 1:14 on a 12-footer by Kamie Ethridge and two foul shots by Andrea Lloyd.

Mason sank two free throws and Haskins hit another basket with 14 seconds left to tie the game at 90.

In the first half, the opponents battled even, but Texas forged a 48-43 lead at intermission on Gay Hemphill's 12 first-half points.

Lloyd scored 20 points and Hemphill finished with 19 for the Longhorns, 28-3.

Mississippi, 29-2, avenged a loss in the semifinals of the Southeastern Conference Tournament with its victory over No. 13 Tennessee, 22-10.

Ole Miss coach Van Chancellor was grateful to reach the regional final after losing to Tennessee and Georgia in the second round of the last two tournaments.

"It feels good to get past that barrier," Chancellor said.

The Lady Vols shot just 30 percent from the field compared with the Lady Rebels' 45.8 percent.

"The ball just wouldn't fall in," Tennessee coach Pat Head Summitt said after her team's 10-game winning streak snapped.

Alisa Scott scored 14 of her 18 points in the second half for Mississippi and opened up a 63-58 lead on two free throws in the closing seconds.

Mississippi held a 30-19 edge in rebounds during the second half.

Pampa tennis squads place at Lubbock meet

LUBBOCK — Kelli Welborn and Stephanie Trolinger of Pampa High pulled off one of the biggest upsets of the Lubbock Tennis Tournament this weekend before losing in the championship finals.

Miss Welborn and Miss Trolinger, playing in girls' doubles, opened the tournament by defeating Simmers and Gallagher, 6-4, 7-5, 6-2, of Lubbock Monterey, seeded as the top team. They defeated Strong-Uptaph of Lubbock Coronado, 6-4, 6-1, in the semifinals before losing to Irwin-Owens of Coronado, 7-5, 6-4, in the finals.

Pampa's boys' doubles team of Eric Hallerberg and Arcadio Rivera also defeated the tournament's top-seeded team in first round action. They knocked off Roach and Lamb of Canyon, 6-3, 7-5, but lost in the quarterfinals to Plainview's Dorman-James, 6-4, 6-7, 6-4.

In boys' singles, Matt Walsh advanced to the semifinals, but had to default because of a heart condition. Walsh defeated Danny Harding, Monterey, 3-6, 6-3, 6-1, and Pat Stroka, Odessa Permian, 2-6, 6-3, 6-1, to reach the semis.

"That was the heartbreak of the tournament," said Pampa coach Pam Clark. "It's the second time this has occurred to Matt. He's okay after he sits down and gets calm, but in this tournament he was only allowed three minutes to recover and it usually takes at least 15 minutes."

In boys' doubles, Soli Mohan and Reagan Eddins advanced to the semifinals, losing to Beck and Lopez of Levelland, 6-4, 6-3. They had defeated Pargas-Blakely, Lubbock High, 6-2, 7-5, and Gillman-Marshall, Borger, 2-6, 7-5, 6-2.

In girls' singles, Andrea Adcock reached the quarterfinals after defeating Jennifer Kayer of Evans Junior High, 6-2, 7-5. Miss Adcock lost to top-seeded Shelly Davenport of Levelland, 6-0, 6-1.

"This was the best tennis we've played all season," said Clark. "The kids can see that their physical ability is there, but the mental game is their downfall. Anyway, the kids should be really high for the Amarillo Relays next weekend."

OU falls to Memphis State

DALLAS (AP) — Andre Turner, Memphis State's designated hero, came through again on Saturday although he just missed being a goat. Turner, who beat Boston Memphis State's Keith Lee takes the ball away from OU's Darryl Kennedy.

College and Alabama-Birmingham with last-second shots during the tournament, scored four points in the final 33 seconds and All-American Keith Lee had 23 points to give the No. 5 Tigers a 63-61 NCAA Midwest Regional basketball championship victory over fourth-ranked Oklahoma and their first Final Four berth since 1973.

The winner of Sunday's North Carolina-Villanova Southeast Regional Final in Birmingham, Ala. will face Memphis State next Saturday in Lexington, Ky.

However, Turner — selected the regional tournament's Most Valuable Player — missed the front end of a one-and-one with eight seconds to play and watched helplessly as a desperation Oklahoma shot bounced high off the back of the rim at the buzzer.

Turner, asked if he was worried about missing his final free throw, said "I wasn't thinking about that. I was thinking they (Oklahoma) could only go into overtime and since we still had all our players I thought we still had a chance to win."

He added "I was real glad it didn't come down to where I had to make a last second shot again."

Lee hit a basket and canted four free throws in the final 90 seconds and Turner made a layup against the Sooner press then hit two free throws with 23 seconds to go.

Oklahoma, the nation's highest scoring team which was held to its lowest point total of the season, had one last chance after Turner missed a free throw with eight seconds to play. Anthony Bowie's 24-footer at the buzzer hit the back of the rim and bounced away.

Memphis State Coach Dana Kirk said "We did what we had to do at the end of the game. We handled the pressure."

"I thought we did an excellent job of shot selection and we played great defense against Oklahoma. We got into a lot of foul trouble and fought through it. We've had to do that all year. Keith Lee and Turner were just super."

Lee, who hit only nine of 22 shots, said "When you are playing a team like Oklahoma you don't worry about it when you miss. You have to have confidence in your shot."

It will be the Tigers' first appearance in the Final Four since 1973 when they lost in the title game to UCLA.

Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs said he thought Turner turned the ball over before he was fouled with eight seconds to play.

"Everybody in the place knew it was a turnover," Tubbs said. "You do what you can do but there are three guys (referees) out there who determine your future."

Hall calls it quits after Kentucky loss

DENVER (AP) — Joe B. Hall, whose illustrious basketball coaching career began in Denver in 1959, called it quits here after his 13th Kentucky team bowed out of the NCAA basketball tournament.

Hall, 56, who had hedged on his plans after his team's first two tournament victories — saying at one point he planned to go fishing after the season before making a decision — made it official after Kentucky's 86-70 loss to St. John's in NCAA Regional semifinal action Friday night.

"This is my last game as head basketball coach at the University of Kentucky," he said only minutes after the loss, his 100th compared to 297 victories at the Lexington institution.

"It's ironic that I started and finished my college coaching career here in Denver."

Hall began coaching at Denver's Regis College in 1959-60. He coached for five years at Regis before moving to Central Missouri for one season and moving to Kentucky as an assistant to Adolph Rupp in 1965. When Rupp retired in 1972, Hall, a former Wildcat player, took over the reigns of the fabled basketball program, producing one NCAA championship, three Final Four appearances, one NIT title and eight SEC crowns in his 13 seasons.

University of Kentucky President Otis Singletary said a search committee would be formed "after the hubbub" of the Final Four, when an estimated 2,000 coaches will be in Lexington for the concurrent National Association of Basketball Coaches convention.

Hall said he didn't plan to be involved in the selection of a successor. "I don't want any input," he said.

"Several times I've said I would not coach beyond my mid-50s," Hall said. "At that time a person should get into something, he'll spend the rest of his life with it. I really have not had time during the past 13 years to spend with my family that I wanted to have. I intend to have that time in the years ahead."

"I have business opportunities in Lexington, and I will be doing something less stressful than coaching."

Kentucky Athletics Director Cliff Hagan said he was "truly shocked."

"His record speaks for itself, and it's going to be a tough job to replace him," said Hagan.

Hall said he "more or less" had decided to leave after last season. "But I was awfully disappointed in our finish (a rout by Georgetown in the tournament), and I didn't want to leave a very young team with someone else. I'm glad I gave it another year. It has been exciting to watch this team develop."

"I leave with a combination of sadness and happiness. I hope I pleased a majority of people in Kentucky."

Lawmaker wants to open Texas bar grievance process

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) — A prominent state representative, and airline pilot, is flying into unfriendly skies these days with a bill that would open records of complaints filed against lawyers — now locked into secrecy by state law — to public scrutiny.

"I find serious fault with the belief that the profession of law can only be carried out if this kind of secrecy is granted," says Rep. Al Price, a Democrat, whose bill would open State Bar of Texas grievance records.

Texas Supreme Court Justice Franklin Spears says he believes Price ought to mind his own business.

"This is the judicial branch of government. We feel like we are running it pretty dang good and don't need the Legislature to tell us how to do it," said Spears.

"We don't need some legislator — who is not even a lawyer — to tell us how to do it. He ought to stick to legislating and we'll handle the judicial branch."

Spears says the grievance process must remain confidential, lest lawyers could be unfairly hurt by scurrilous complaints. Under the current process, district bar grievance committees — which include non-lawyers — hear the cases in private and mete out punishment when warranted.

The punishments range from private reprimands to disbarment proceedings. Price believes Texas has a right to know what's going on in the grievance committees.

"I am making no accusations that anybody is doing anything wrong. But I strongly believe that the law is public. The persons who carry out the functions of the law are public officials. Lawyers are officers of the court," he said.

The March issue of the Texas Bar Journal lists recent disciplinary actions taken. The "public" reprimands include the names of the disciplined lawyers. The "private" ones do not. For example, a district committee "negotiated a private reprimand with an attorney of Corpus Christi on Oct. 31, 1984."

The unidentified lawyer was hired in a paternity suit. The client was found to be the father of the child in question. The lawyer then did not show up for the hearing at which child support payments were set.

Potential clients have a right to know the name of this lawyer, said Price. So do voters.

Enter the specter of former Supreme Court Justice Don Yarbrough, recently paroled from prison after serving time for perjury.

"Had provisions of this bill been in effect, the people would have known about some of Yarbrough's problems, according to Price. "I don't know how many similar cases there are. I'm not even suggesting there are. But there might be."

Spears said the process must remain secret to work.

"Our tally shows that 60-65 percent of the grievances filed do not involve improper conduct by a lawyer, but stem from a result that the client didn't like. In every litigation there is going to be one winner and one loser. Sometimes both lose," the justice said.

The bar association is cracking down on unethical lawyers, he added.

"We're coming down hard on these lawyers and will continue to do so. If anybody doesn't believe that, file a complaint," said Spears.

People not satisfied with the grievance process can file lawsuits against lawyers and "get all the publicity they want."

"But when you are asking the bar to discipline it becomes a question of destroying a lawyer's reputation over the pique of a client," he said.

State Bar President Tom Ramey of Tyler agrees, saying opening the process would have a "very chilling effect on the whole effort."

"We know that numerous complaints are just out of spite. They are out of a fee dispute or just the failure of a lawyer to return a phone call. It's people unhappy with results. Somebody has got to lose every time in the courtroom," he said.

And in a time-honored legislative tradition, Spears ascribes motives to Price. As is common, it's an "I am told" situation.

"I think it needs to be said that I am told this fellow that introduced this bill has filed several complaints against lawyers which were investigated by the appropriate grievance committees and found to be without merit," he said. "I am told this is kind of a sour grapes bill in retribution."

Price denies any motive other than the public's right-to-know. He said he filed a grievance against a lawyer "years ago," but it has nothing to do with his current effort.

"What I'm saying is there are some things that are so important to the public good that trust is not enough. The people have a right to know," he said.

Lawyers might find they could benefit from a public system, Price added.

"When the flight recorders were put on airplanes pilots objected to it," said Price, an American Airlines pilot. "But it has not been nearly the threat to pilots that some had envisioned. In many cases it has substantiated that the proper decisions were made."

Two lawyer-legislators think Price might be on to a good idea.

"I think it would show the public that many of the complaints are frivolous and unreasonable," said Rep. Juan Hinojosa, D-McAllen. "You have a lot of clients who are upset or ticked off at the lawyer for whatever reason and they try to file some frivolous grievance against a lawyer to get back at the lawyer. It would be healthy to air out the grievances in public."

"As a matter of fact it might dissuade a lot of clients from filing if they know it's going to be made public and they are going to be made to look ridiculous," he added.

Bob Bush, D-Sherman and chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, said, "To try to restore public confidence in the legal profession, lawyers may have to give serious consideration to it."

He said it could help in cases of "lawyers who really do offend regularly just because they have buddies on the grievance committee."

But Bush sees the other side, the side plagued by piqued clients.

"I've talked to people in my office — whom I'd classify as mentally ill — who call up and just rage against some judge or some lawyer irrationally because they lost a case," he said.

"I know we'd be opening the door to let these people have a forum, when they really don't deserve a forum. They've had their day in court and they're still shaking their fist. They're still crazy as a loon," Bush said.

Golf course designer: nature best designer

By JUDY GIANNETTINO
Associated Press Writer
LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — So, you get teed off when your drive slams into a tree. That tree, you're convinced, was planted there just to handicap you.

Well, in thinking that, you're probably not too far off course.

But, it's nothing personal, says one golf course designer.

The key to good golf course architecture lies in letting nature, the topography, terrain, and, yes, the trees, dictate the design, said Garrett Gill.

A former Chicagoan and now Texas Tech University professor, Gill is a golf course architect.

His family has worked in the unique field for more than 30 years.

"It's not a very popular field," Gill said.

But for those in it, a fair way to describe it is "interesting and challenging," he said.

"There's no real hard and fast rules in golf course architecture," Gill said. "I think it's that that makes golf courses as interesting as they are. It's not a typical layout — you let nature, the topography and the terrain, dictate the design."

A landscape architecture professor at Tech, Gill actually moonlights as a golf course designer.

His father has been in the business since 1950 in Chicago and that's what hooked Gill, he said.

"I was the only one (in the family) interested in pursuing the field," he said.

Currently, Gill said, he has the "best of both worlds," teaching and "enjoying the golf course architecture without the stress of the business."

In Lubbock, Gill has a business linked to his father's, which during the past three decades has designed more than 150 18-hole golf courses in the United States.

"The basis for the job is to match the game to the conditions of the land," Gill said. "You first become familiar with the area, indepthly studying the topography, vegetation, soils and hydrology. From that, you can see ideal green sites and ideal tee sites. You just let nature show you everything."

The most important trap to avoid, Gill said, is trying to "design around nature because then you're avoiding it."

In the November 1984 issue of "Golf Digest," two courses designed by Gill, the Meadowbrook golf course at Rapid City, S.D., and the Hulman Links at Terra Haute, Ind., were cited as among the top 50 public courses in the country.

Meadowbrook was built where a residential subdivision once stood. A 1972 flood destroyed the subdivision and Meadowbrook became the first golf course to use spectator mounds, Gill said.

"We buried the rubble from the homes and streets that were destroyed in the flood to build the mounds," he explained. "The originality of the idea helped us to get the contract."

Designing and constructing a golf course can take up to six years, Gill said, with prices running as high as $2 million.

The amount of available work depends largely on how popular the game is, Gill said.

Currently, there is a resurgence in the interest in golf because "people need to take the time out of their otherwise busy, crammed lives to slow down a little bit," Gill said.

"However, I don't think it's ever going to explode," he said.

Even when the demand for new courses is down, Gill said remodeling work is needed.

Gill, who also enjoys playing the game, said the most difficult aspect of golf course architecture is "designing a golf course that can be enjoyed by every different class of golfer and challenging to every type of golfer."

He said, "It's not difficult to make a course difficult. The trick is to make one that everyone, from the pro to the beginner, enjoys playing."

The second hardest part of the job, he said, is "getting players to know you designed it. Nobody really thinks about it — they just play it and get upset when a tree's in their way."

Twins: twice the trouble, twice the fun

Being the mother of twins is a unique experience as anyone who has twins can testify. At times twice as frustrating; at times twice as rewarding; and at times very lonely.

"I never felt more helpless than I did when I watched my mother drive away. She had helped me the first three weeks after the twins were born and now I was on my own," one mother said. Solemnly, the other mothers nodded in agreement.

Five Pampa mothers of twins and one mother of twins to-be met recently at the home of Temi Dunn. They are among 17 women who have joined the recently-formed Mothers of Twins Club here. The mothers have twins of all ages up to 20 years old.

"The purpose of the club is to provide moral support to mothers of twins, to let them know they're not alone," Dunn explained. The club plans to form a lending store of baby equipment and clothes, a lending library and to talk to local merchants about discounts for mothers of twins.

"Clothes and food are so expensive when you have to buy for two," Dunn said.

And the organization wants to provide an opportunity for mothers of twins to get together. "It's hard to get out with twins. Some times we feel like we haven't talked to anyone in-so long," she added.

A babysitting coop is also in the works so that mothers of twins can find a bit of time for themselves, Dunn said.

"Mostly I think we're going to learn from each other," she said.

Guest speakers are to be scheduled for each of the monthly meetings, beginning with Dr. Steven Price at the April 4 meeting. The club plans to meet the first Thursday of every month at the Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ.

Mothers of twins or expecting twins are welcomed to attend the next meeting or to call Dunn at 665-6935 for more information.

For Kay Bowers, the mother-to-be, Mothers of Twins provided her with a chance to talk to other women who have had twins. "It's nice to talk with other mothers of twins. When I talk to someone who is pregnant with a single, it's so different," she said.

Bowers was surprised to find she was pregnant with twins. There had been no twins in her family for some time. "We never thought it would happen," she said.

Dunn remembered she gave birth to her twins as a newcomer to Pampa. "I didn't know anyone. I thought I was the only one in the world going through this."

The mothers compared notes about some of their special experiences associated with twins. For instance, they say they get asked the same questions again and again such as:

"How do you tell them apart? Are they twins? Are they both yours? Are they hard to take care of? How old are they? Are they identical (even when the twins are obviously a boy and a girl)."

Priscilla Rowe is the mother of fraternal twins — three month old Taylor and Cassi Jo. Margaret Haynes' twins — Andrew and Emily, 10 months — are fraternal, also. Fraternal twins happen when two eggs are fertilized at conception.

Identical twins are the result of one fertilized egg dividing into two separate individuals. Dunn, Maria Hacker and Peggy Ladd have identical twins. Dunn's two daughters are Chelsi and Darci. Consuelo and Anita are Hacker's identical daughters and Ladd's identical sons are Cody and Clinton.

Bower's says her sonograms indicate that she'll give birth to fraternal twins, a boy and a girl.

THE BEST THINGS come in twos! Two sets of identical twins, then, must be even better than one. This is Anita and Consuelo Hacker, in the dark jumpers, and Chelsi and Darci

Dunn, in the light dresses. Both sets are about two years old. They're used to playing together because their mothers are friends. Anita and Consuelo are the daughters of Maria and Dexter Hacker and Chelsi and Darci's parents are David and Temi Dunn.

Photos and story by Dee Dee Laramore

HANDS FULL — Margaret Haynes has her hands full with fraternal twins, Emily, in her lap, and Andrew, on the floor. The twins are 10 months old. Margaret and her husband Gary Haynes also have a son, Josh, 4½.

TWINS-IN-WAITING — Kay Bowers' profile is a sign of twins to come. Kay and her husband, Doyle Bowers, are expecting twins at any time. Also waiting are big sisters Joy and Rachel.

Peeking at Pampa

An unknown poet once said that the little brown bulbs slept in the ground as Winter raged and roared overhead until Spring came over the lea.

"The little brown bulbs at the very first tread All split up their nighties and jumped out of bed."

Well, all over town the little brown bulbs turned into yellow jonquils blooming in profusion for our enjoyment. Especially pretty are the ones blooming in the yard of Lois and E.L. Shelhamer. A beautiful sight wherever they are.

Thanks to Karon Bonnell for her arty illustrations in the Little Ordinance Digest compiled by Clean Pampa Inc. Did you save it for reference?

To show their appreciation and pride in her accomplishment, a number of local Altrusa friends of Glyndene Shelton presented her with a camera so that she will have a pictorial record of her tenure as Altrusa district governor.

Betty (Mrs. Jack) White and Shari (Mrs. Charles) Langen were seen spreading the word about the 20th Century Cotillion Club's annual antique show on April 12, 13, 14 by placing posters in downtown stores. Janie (Mrs. Joe) VanZandt has dealers from far and near lined up in promise of a bigger and better than ever show. Proceeds will go to the Opportunity Plan Inc., a scholarship fund in Canyon. Don't miss it!

More than 200 people attended the appreciation dinner at the First Christian Church for Shirley (Mrs. Speck) Winborne a couple of Sundays ago. Five banquet tables were filled with scrumptious food. Her 12-year-old son Tommy served the head table.

Dick Melton, chairman of the Board of Elders, presented her with a brass coffee service. Later members of the board handwashed the dishes! Jo (Mrs. Ron) Love presented a scrapbook she completed with on - the - spot pictures. (That took some doing!) Chiros, a youth group, made all the decorations.

Shirley was beautiful in deep pink with an orchid corsage while her three little granddaughters were all ruffled in red. Their names are Amy, 7, and Abby, 7 months, daughters of Gaylene and James Bradley, and little Morgan White, 9 months, daughter of Jamie and Scott White.

A recent bridal shower for Brenda Bell (Mrs. Dennis) Norris included a tour of the home of Cynthia and Billy Hawkins. Other hostesses were Donna (Mrs. E.R.) Sidwell, Sue (Mrs. Bill) Dearington, Jewel (Mrs. Buzz) Tarpley, Jan (Mrs. Charles) Lockhart and Susan Braddock. Brenda's twin sister Brook (Mrs. Kent) Vise was there from Wheeler.

A group of 30 parents met with Bill Potts, sponsor of Pampa High School Student Council to make plans for the senior prom on May 4. Parents ARE interested in their children's activities!

Shari (Mrs. Charles) Langen was a birthday dinner party honoree on St. Patrick's Day. Charles hosted the party for 14: sons Greg and Jeff, her father Ralph Dobkins of Borger, Minel and Paul Turner, Pauline and Milo Carlson, Donna and Wayland Acker, the Rev. Jay Strack, evangelist of the First Baptist Church, John McKay, revival singer and his accompanist. Belated birthday wishes, Shari!

Mark Alexander, son of Priscilla and Jack, has accepted a position with Peat, Marwick and Mitchell in Dallas following his recent college graduation.

Barbara Brown, beautiful and vivacious, came from Memphis, Tenn., to visit her mother Nan Brown and her brother Paul, Marilyn, David, Mark and Jane.

Barbara Dockter, assistant administrator in training for Pampa Nursing Center, has been transferred to Amarillo where she will be in training one month before taking her State Board examination in Austin.

In the meantime, she took a week out for fishing at Corpus Christi.

Chris and Bill Campaigne, Alleith and Bob Curry, Mary Ann and Dr. Frank Kelley, Maxine and Carlton Freeman, Frances and Dick Hudson, Anna Mae and Jim Tripplehorn all spent a week at the Wigwam, a resort in Arizona famous for golfing facilities. Lois and Don Thompson enjoyed a fun-filled week in Cancun, Mexico.

Pat and the Rev. Joe Turner returned all relaxed and refreshed from a week of rest and fun enjoyed in Cozumel, Mexico.

Nancy and Doug Coffee spent a week with their son Keith and his wife Adell, divided between Florida and Charlotte, N.C.

Recent Caribbean cruises include Faye (Mrs. C.B.) Reese, Betty (Mrs. Don) Fletcher, Loretta and Wayne Robinson, Pat and Ab Conway, Billie and Ralph Collingsworth plus Juanita and Glyn Bell of Shamrock. Faye would like to repeat the trip TODAY!

Marilyn and Gale Trollinger and Clorene and Boyd Moore attended a family reunion in Las Vegas.

EI and Bill Hesse visited relatives in Ardmore last week.

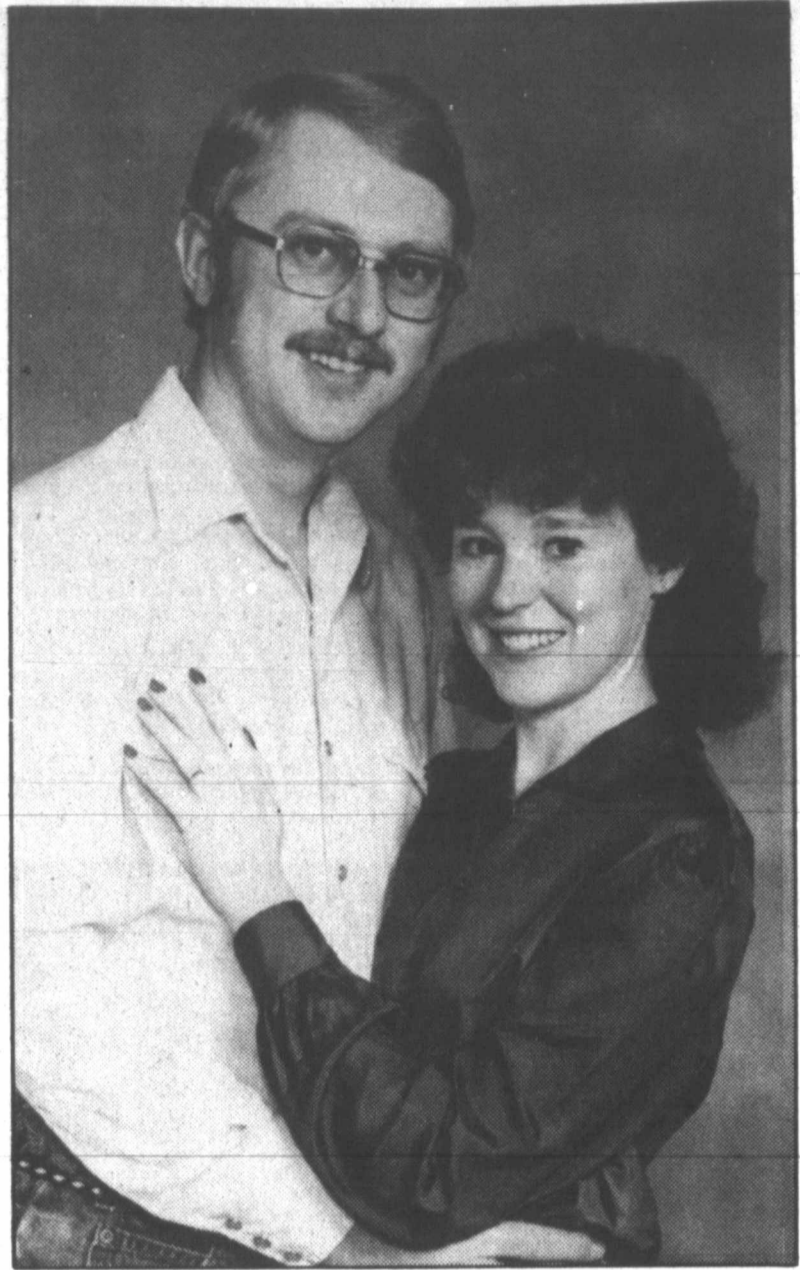

Best recovery wishes to Louise (Mrs. Lonnie) Richardson AND her daughter as they recover from broken bones, one a hand and the other a foot!

Fast recovery wishes to Pebble Carter as she recovers from a broken bone suffered in a fall.

Birthday wishes to Odell Henry, Bob Crippen, Floyd Watson, Richard Stowers, Steve Jones, and Travis Lively Jr. Anniversary congratulations to Velma and Willie Heil, Norma and Joe Autry, Elma and Harry Gordon.

Here's something to cheer about! Members of the Pampa Noon Lions Club, Pampa Police Department, news media and coaches pooled their talents in presenting a donkey basketball benefit game for little Amy Street. Amy and her parents drove like fury from Dallas to be present. Ten donkeys and their masters (?) played the game to the delight of more than 500 spectators. Jack Gindorf, chairman, was in rare - or maybe best form - while Ron Love hawked popcorn to earn the title "popcorn man." Floyd Sackett was the announcer while "Luscious Leesa" (Lee) Porter, "Dazzling Dalene" (Dale) West were cheerleaders. Carl English collected funds. And an extra kind word for Carl, who quietly and efficiently serves as secretary - treasurer. A good time was had by all!

Don't forget to get your family history brought in to the White Deer Lands Museum so it can be included with the Gray County History Book! And don't think that just because you've only lived here a little while or because you are not an old - timer that your history is not just as urgently needed. The deadline date has been extended to April 30, so there's still time! See you next week! KATIE

Dear Abby

Woman's marriage to demanding husband has weighed her down

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for 22 years. I've been pregnant 14 times and have nine living children. I weighed 98 pounds when we were married. My husband likes little women. He often told me that if I ever got as fat as his sister-in-law, he'd divorce me. (She weighs about 300 pounds.)

My first complaint is that this man likes sex. I like it too, but once a night is enough for me. (Not for him.) He does not allow me to use any kind of birth control—says he never has and never will.

I'm a God-fearing woman. I go to church and pray and pray at home, too, but the Lord doesn't hear my prayers. I got so fed up with my man's demands and abusive ways I started to gain weight on purpose so he would divorce me. I'm up to 207 pounds, and I still can't get rid of him.

Now what do I do? He makes good money, but he's as tight as a size 9 shoe on a size 12 foot. Help me.

SICK OF HIM IN MISSOURI

DEAR SICK: You're right, you do not have to put up with this kind of treatment. (No woman does.) You need more than prayer to solve your problem. If your minister can't do something about it, see a lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: My sons, 7 and 5 years old, are asked occasionally to a movie by our next-door neighbor—who has a 6-year-old boy.

I just learned that on one occasion the neighbor took her son to the bathroom, leaving my sons alone in the theater. And another time, she sent my two boys to the bathroom alone, while she sat with her son watching the movie.

Our boys are aware that children their age have been molested and some have been kidnapped, so naturally they were frightened, but didn't want to complain.

Abby, please urge parents to question how situations will be handled before sending their children with others.

LEARNING

DEAR LEARNING: You make a very good point—one that many parents would not think of questioning, and they should.

College group searches for ex-students

The Clarendon College Ex-student Association is looking for all ex-students. Those who have completed one course or received a degree and who do not receive the Clarendon College newsletter, please send a current address.

A college reunion is planned for April 27 and 28. The classes of 1975, 1960 and 1935 will be honored. Please reply to the Clarendon College Ex-Student Association, Box 968, Clarendon, 79226.

I hope you mentioned this to your neighbor. She needs to be reminded that children should never be left alone in a public place—even for a few minutes.

***

DEAR ABBY: My son is happily married to a fine young professional woman. When they married, "Mary" did not take my son's name ("Smith"). She wants to be known as "Dr. Mary Jones"—Jones being her maiden name.

They are expecting a baby, and she wants their child to bear her maiden name—Mary or Johnny Jones—not his surname of "Smith."

I may be old-fashioned, but I do not like the idea of my son's child bearing his mother's maiden name instead of his father's surname. People who don't know better may assume that the child was born out of wedlock.

Also, what is the correct way to address mail to my son and his wife, since he does not have a "Doctor" title, but she has?

GRANDMA-TO-BE

DEAR GRANDMA: Many professional women prefer to keep their maiden names, and if they have children, they use a hyphenated combination of their name and their husband's name (Johnny Jones-Smith).

Address their mail to "Dr. Mary Jones and Mr. John Smith."

***

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Combs to present senior recital on March 31

Bill Combs is to be presented by the Pampa Fine Arts Association and Texas Tech University in his senior recital March 31 at 3 p.m. in the First Baptist Church of Pampa. He is to be accompanied by Clinton Barrick of Lubbock and will perform a duet with Emily Brunson, soprano.

The PFA board invites the public to attend the musical program and the reception to be held in the church parlor afterwards. Selections for the Palm Sunday event will be sung in French, Italian and German as well as English.

A graduate of Pampa High School, Combs was active in the Pampa schools music program, church choirs and has appeared in the Christmas programs sponsored by PFA and the Pampa Civic Ballet.

While in Pampa, he studied with numerous choral teachers and directors, including Rosemary Lawlor, Susie Wilson, Gene Kenney, Donald Bailey, John Glover, Ann Thomas, Billy Talley, John Woickowski, Wathena Watt, Sue Higdon, and Elena Donald. He studied dance with Pampa teachers Jeanne Willingham and Madeline Graves and piano with Lois Fagan, Debbie Stokes and Mrs. Douglas Carver. Bill Haley was his theory teacher. Other teachers have included Emmerie Lehnick of Amarillo, John Gillas and Diana Moore of Texas Tech University.

Combs received a Nona Payne music scholarship and has been a scholarship singer with churches in Lubbock. He holds a scholarship in music theatre and has performed with Jon Garrison of the Metropolitan and New York City operas. He worked with JoAnn Naylor, a Broadway performer and choreographer.

During his study of music theatre and opera at Texas Tech, Combs has performed in 12 productions, including the lead in "The Marriage of Figaro," the opera performed at Texas Tech last weekend. Combs' senior recital format is to be presented at Hemmle Hall, Texas Tech campus on April 14 at 3 p.m.

The young vocalist recently signed with Peggy Taylor Talent Inc. of Dallas and plans to pursue a career in motion pictures and television following his graduation from Texas Tech University.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joel Combs of Pampa.

PROJECT SHOW SLATED
A project show has been set for April 27 in conjunction with County Roundup. This event is very similar to the "Potpourri Division" of the clothing project that we had last year.

There are many categories in which you can enter items.
Photography, home and personal accessories are being emphasized because of the arts and crafts, photography and clothing projects.

All entries must be turned in by 5 p.m. Tuesday, April 25. The items will be judged and then displayed at County Roundup. Awards will also be given at County Roundup.

Photography categories to enter are: photo story, single black and white print from 126 size film or smaller, single color print from 126 size film or smaller, single black and white print from 35mm size film or larger, and single color print from 35 mm size film and larger.

Home accessories categories are: original fiber arts, non-original fiber arts, original clay and glass, non-original clay and glass.

Personal accessories categories are: needle work, machine sewing and miscellaneous media.

The only classification in clothing skills will be garment construction.

Ceramics will go in the original or non-original clay and glass class.

This may be somewhat confusing. If you think you are interested from the information given, please call the extension office at 669-7429 so we can help you.

Cancer Society Crusade to begin

The Gray - Roberts unit of the American Cancer Society is to kick off this year's door to door crusade with a Coor's Against Cancer
Raquetball tournament March 29-31.

The tournament is sponsored by North Country Distributing of

Home overlock machine now available

By DONNA BRAUCHI
County Extension Agent
With Spring knocking at our door, many of us get an itch to sew something special. Spring fabrics and colors are always a refreshing change of pace. As we gear up to sew this spring, let's look at some new developments in the sewing industry.

The "overlock" sewing machine has been used industrially for decades but a home version was introduced last fall. It is being compared to the microwave oven, since its a new item that supplements a traditional household appliance. Industry representatives are now forecasting that the overlock machine will account for ten percent of the sewing machine business within five years.

Just what does this machine do? Basically, it is a finishing machine that joins together seams, overlocks, and trims excess seam allowance. Depending on the make and model, it can do rolled hems, blind tucks, decorative edgings, blind hems, decorate braids, and in some cases sew entire garments.

Every major sewing machine company offers at least one model of the overlock machine, and sells them primarily in fabric stores. The basic types of overlocks include:

One needle - three threads, trims and overcasts the seams but is not as strong as models with additional threads.
One needle - three threads especially recommended for knits because it has stretch built in, is strong and does rolled hems and other functions.

Two needle - four threads overlocks, chain stitches and sews several other stitches. It's very strong, but not recommended for knits as there is no stretch built in.

Before selecting an overlock model, consider what you want to accomplish, what types of fabrics you sew on, how often and how long the machine will be used and if you'll need it for both seaming and overcasting.

Overlocks are not without their drawbacks for home sewers. The sewer must carefully fit the garment before finishing seams with the overlock since extra seam allowances are cut off. This means a garment can't be let out after overlocking.

Home sewers may also have some initial difficulties dealing with the complex threading system. Tensions must be set for different threads and fabrics. Overlocks require more thread because of the use of multiple threads, so it's recommended that basic colors be bought in cones. Look for thread specially designed for fault-free, high speed sewing on overlock machines under the trademarked Core-Lock name. It is available in 10 colors. Some machines also require special needles while others use regular machine needles.

Many retail stores are offering seminars and demonstrations on the overlock machine. Since the cost of overlock can equal or exceed the cost of a regular sewing machine, however, carefully consider your sewing needs before you buy.

There are also several new sewing aids that might be of interest to you. Check your fabric store for dissolvable basting tape in 1/4 and 1/2 widths. The tape is used to install zippers, to hold a trim in place before stitching, and to match plaids. It dissolves in water without leaving a sticky residue.

Sew-on nylon snaps are another new product. These clear snaps are inconspicuous because they blend in with the fabric and they are flatter than metal snaps.

For Horticulture:

Spring warms up' early

By JOE VanZANDT
County Extension Agent

Our soil is definitely warming up quicker this year and things are starting to green - up and bloom earlier.

As an example, last year I sprayed my yard with Roundup as late as April 10, yet this year my bermuda was already starting to green - up a little by March 10. We just did not have a very long time this year to get to use Roundup on our bermuda and buffalo yards. I regret that I missed the time to apply it this year.

Our fruit trees are beginning to bloom. This is real early and I would guess that we will likely have a freeze to kill a lot of the fruit set by these early blooming trees.

However, homeowners that desire worm - free fruit next summer need to remember that insecticide sprays should start at petal fall. Then, by spraying every 10 days to 2 weeks for a total of 3 to 5 times should provide for fruit that is relatively free of worms.

Several insecticides are recommended including: malathion, diazinon, methoxychlor and zolone. Some of these are sold in combinations as fruit tree sprays or home orchard sprays.

WEED CONTROL IN LAWNS
A robust weed population in buffalo or bermuda grass is not only unsightly but can delay recovery of turfgrasses for several months.

Clover, chickweed, henbit and dandelions are common weed problems in lawns during winter and early spring months.

Homeowners can take several steps to control winter weeds in lawns.

Application of a preemergence herbicide such as Dacthal or Balan in October will prevent many winter weed problems. However, if you missed that opportunity, there are other methods to keep winter weeds in check.

Close mowing following periods of mild temperatures in March will greatly improve the appearance of a weedy lawn and will promote early recovery of turfgrasses.

However, mowing will not eliminate the weeds. Systemic herbicides (chemical weed killers) such as Weed - B - Gon (Ortho) and Systemic Weed Control (Ferti - lone) will successfully control most broadleaf weed problems if used according to label instructions. Two applications of these materials about 14 days apart may be required for complete control of broadleaf weeds.

These chemicals will not control grassy weeds such as annual bluegrass and rescuegrass. Preemergence herbicide treatments in the fall are required to control those grasses.

Systemic herbicides can be applied with an air pressure sprayer or a hose - end sprayer. Use care to apply materials uniformly at the recommended dosage when temperatures are above 60 degrees F.

If herbicides are applied properly, broadleaf weeds will begin to shrivel a few days after the first treatment and will turn brown after the second treatment. Close mowing several weeks after the second treatment should remove all traces of the broadleaf weeds and should promote recovery of desirable grasses.

How to draft your will

By the Editors of Consumer Reports

If you should die without a will, your state will decide how your property is to be divided. You also risk penalizing your heirs with sizable and often unnecessary costs that accompany the government's handling of your estate.

A will ensures that your estate will be divided according to your wishes. But who should write it, and what should it contain?

A lawyer can write your will, or you can do it yourself. Having the will written by a lawyer can be expensive, or moderate in cost, depending on the size of your estate — and on the lawyer you choose. However, the editors of Consumer Reports magazine believe that most people should be able to make most of the decisions about a will and even write a credible first draft themselves, without the help of a lawyer.

Every will should contain certain essential information. For instance, a will should clearly spell out how you want your property divided and who you want to handle your financial and personal affairs.

In the first paragraph, identify yourself, indicate that the document you are writing is a will, and state that it revokes all previous wills. Then, in separate paragraphs, designate an executor (and a guardian if children are involved); what objects of your estate you wish to give as specific gifts; how the rest of your estate is to be divided; and how you want your taxes and other expenses paid.

Last part of shortcourse set

The last segment of the lunch and learn shortcourse "Developing Your Potential" is scheduled for Wednesday at noon at Lovett Library meeting room.

Jerry Outlaw, executive director of Boy Scouts of Pampa, is to be program leader. He is to lead the participants in activities to help them determine and evaluate their personal interaction style as it relates to effective leadership.

A light lunch will be served beginning at 12 noon for $1.50. The program itself will be from 12:15 p.m. to 12:45 p.m.

Reservations may be made by calling the Gray County Extension Office at 669-7429.

Heart treasure chest

Chest teaches kids heart health

AUSTIN — At a time when most children are learning the alphabet and nursery rhymes, the American Heart Association in Texas has found they can also be learning about their heart and ways to keep it healthy. So the volunteer health organization has introduced an educational program "Heart Treasure Chest." It is the first preschool program of its kind, and is available free to day care centers, preschools and kindergarten classes throughout Texas.

The Heart Treasure Chest is packaged in a box resembling a pirate's treasure chest. The colorful chest contains components of the program including audiovisuals, fingerplays, musical activities, "experiments" and games. The activities focus on the heart, how it works and how to care for it through proper diet, physical activity and rest, presented at a level 3 to 5 year olds can understand.

Each day a new "treasure" appears from the chest. One time it may be a stethoscope which the children use to listen to their own hearts. Another day, it may be the "Healthy Heart Home" game, used to help children identify activities and food which are good for their hearts. A comprehensive curriculum guide provides teachers with specific suggestions for learning activities using the Heart Treasure Chest.

Research indicates that the roots of heart disease are found in early childhood when lifestyle habits are established. It is easier to form good habits as a child than to change poor habits as an adult. Based on this premise, the American Heart Association in Texas has developed education programs for many age levels beginning with preschool children.

The Heart Treasure Chest is the brain-child of the American Heart Association volunteers in Texas, and was recently adopted by the Association for national distribution. Its popularity has also led to its use by the children's television show, Romper Room.

Mabel Pitts, an expert in early childhood education and chairman of the AHA task force which developed this program, said, "Our objective was to design a program focusing on prevention of heart disease, keeping the material both accurate and interesting. The resulting Heart Treasure Chest successfully teaches children how to guard against the major risk factors of heart disease — smoking, high blood pressure and high cholesterol."

A recent evaluation of the Heart Treasure Chest program concluded that the materials, curriculum and learning activities were well received and highly praised by both the children and their teachers. The program was tested for effectiveness at 28 sites in four states before being released nationally.

Children enjoy the idea of a "treasure" and respond to the hands-on activities. Children also carry parent newsletters home with them. The newsletters offer suggestions for further activities and learning experiences involving the entire family. The Heart Association believes that these cooperative efforts between home and school will reinforce positive behavior patterns for both parent and child.

For more information on the Heart Treasure Chest program and other youth-oriented educational programs, contact Betty Casey, Gray County AHA treasurer, at Citizens Bank and Trust, 665-2341.

When you write the will, be precise, but don't use legalistic language. Write all fractions, ages and dollar amounts in both words and numbers. Number your pages — for example: page one of three. Sign or initial the corner of each page other than the signature page.

After you write the first draft, it's prudent to show your working copy to a lawyer to make sure the wording will stand up to legal scrutiny.

The final draft should be typed. Typewritten wills are easier to read than handwritten ones, and less likely to be misinterpreted. If a change or correction is needed, don't make erasures; retype the whole page.

Sign the will just after the bottom line of the text, leaving no room to slip in an extra line or paragraph. And sign it in the presence of three witnesses who are not beneficiaries.

A properly written will is a legally binding document. But it's not written in stone. You can revoke it or change it at any time. Consumer Reports' editors say that if you want to add to or change only a portion of your will, you can add a written amendment, known as a "codicil." But if you plan to make several changes, it's probably best to draw up a new will to avoid any confusion or misinterpretation. Never make changes by writing on your will. That could invalidate the entire document.

The editors add that it's a good practice to review your will every few years to make sure it still does what you want it to. A change in your assets, a divorce, a move or a change in your family's composition would be good reasons to revise a will.

(For a special reprint of Consumers Union's evaluation of divorce procedures, send $1 for each copy to CONSUMERS, P.O. Box 461, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Be sure to ask for the reprint on "What you should know about divorce today.")

Square dancing unites all ages

A kaleidoscope of butterfly-fluttery skirts and crinoline petticoats swirl as the square dancers follow caller Red Warrick's directions. He skillfully "moves the girls" in a changing pattern.

The staid Pottsboro High School gym and cafeteria pulse to the rhythmic beat of country music as almost 600 foot-stamping, hand-clapping dancers take their places in four-couple squares.

"Channel through, now link arms and circle!"

Arriving by the busload, as well as RV and camper, dancers and callers poured into Pottsboro recently to take part in the NORTEX (North Texas Square and Round Dance Association) square dance area's "first ever" two-day jamboree, sponsored by the Lakeside Dudes and Dolls square dance club.

Said Ginger Burns, wife (or "law" in square dance lingo) of the Pottsboro club caller, Jim Burns, "They're here from Oklahoma City to Houston, from Lufkin to Mineral Wells and every little town in between."

Thirty-three callers, ranging in age from 14-year-old Clint Owens to Jim Horn who started in 1947, took their turns calling "tips" (a set of two dances).

Each caller, voicing his own particular style and choosing from the 135 basic calls, led the dancers in intricate patterns — building maneuver on maneuver, changing directions, finally returning each dancer to his or her original spot in the square as the record ended.

"Dancers don't go by the music. They go by the calls," said Horn, adding that being a good caller is "90 percent making dancers respond to your personality so they have fun while they dance."

Warrick, 62, who has written and recorded more than 50 square dance records, said he "has slowed down" from his 1945 pace of calling as many as eight dances a week — in addition to working a full time job. Now, he declares, he only teaches two classes, is the regular caller for Red's Rompers in Henderson and calls for 32 area clubs "on invitation."

"Seesaw, pretty little law — ladies in, men circle!"

The dancers progress smoothly from pattern to pattern, weaving in and out — following the directions of 14-year-old Clint Owens, Hallsville eighth grader who says, "It's not your age that counts — it's can you call the dance."

Recently named the National Folk Dance of the United States, square dancing brings together people from all walks of life and in all age groups.

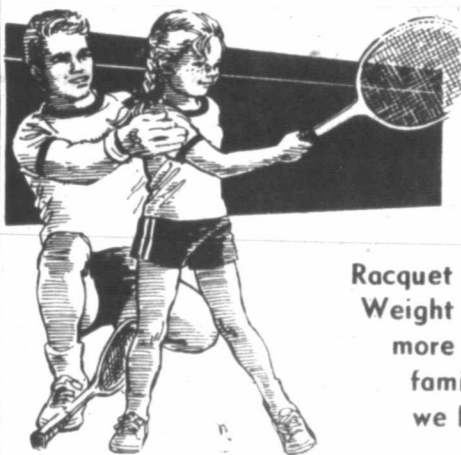

Brandi Harbin, 8, dons the full denim skirt and ruffled red blouse and petticoats of her club, the Happy Hoofers, because she "likes visiting lots of places." Ray and Frances Wood of the McKinney Twisters are celebrating Ray's 65th birthday at the jamboree; Bill and Vida Black, both past 80 and members of the Dudes and Dolls, never miss their club's dances and frequently travel with the group to dance in other towns.

Brushing her hair back and catching her breath, one dancer said she and her husband started dancing when they moved to a new town and, out of all the clubs, churches and organizations they checked, they found square dancers were "the friendliest and happiest people."

Leaving behind their everyday lives as students, factory workers, business owners, doctors and bankers, the colorfully clad dancers seem to embody the major emphasis of square dancing — fun, friendship, fellowship.

PARENT EDUCATION SEMINAR — Jim Walton, right, staff counselor at Catholic Family Service's Team Resources for Youth leads a "How to Talk So Your Kids Will Listen" parent education seminar. Walton is to lead the new Parent Support Group which meets Thursdays at 7 p.m. at the Catholic Family Service's offices in Amarillo.

Parenting group begun

"How can I talk so my kids will listen?" To help provide an answer to this question, Catholic Family Service of Amarillo has begun a new parent support group for parents who have children under 17 years old in their home.

The support group is open both to those parents who are experiencing behavioral or disciplinary difficulties with their children and to those parents who would like to improve their parenting skills in order to avoid potential problems. The support group meets on Thursday from 7 p.m. until 8:30 p.m. at the Catholic Family Service offices, 413 E. Third in Amarillo. Jim Walton, a staff counselor for the Catholic Family Service Team Resources for Youth Family Counseling Center. Walton holds a master of social work degree and is a licensed professional counselor. There is no charge for attending the support group.

assist parents in creating an atmosphere of cooperation, responsibility, and understanding in their homes, and also, to help parents develop parenting skills which will both increase their effectiveness and conserve the energy required in their demanding role. This is accomplished through interaction between parents in the group, learning specific parenting skills, role playing activities and providing materials to the parents for use in the home.

"If the atmosphere for cooperation, responsibility and understanding are not created in the home, then kids begin to drift toward negative behavior, and families become involved in a stress-laden way of life. That is why we are trying to help families create an atmosphere of cooperation and self-esteem in their homes."

The Parent Support Group has seven basic sessions. Topics discussed include helping children deal with their feelings, encouraging responsibility in children and helping children see themselves in a realistic and positive manner.

Arrangements may be made to attend the support group by contacting Catholic Family Service at 376-6323 or by coming to one of the Thursday evening sessions.

Capote: flamboyant yet tormented person

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK (NEA) — His voice was a mimic's delight; his wit, talk-show currency, and, oh yes, there was his writing. The public tends to forget that. Still, says Lawrence Grobel, 38, author of "Conversations With Capote" (NAL, $14.95), that's what Truman Capote will be remembered for.

"We saw the public clown," he says. "We did not see the searing intelligence underneath and the side of him that would go and hide for six years and produce 'In Cold Blood.'"

"We did not see the writer, he says, 'who agonized and needed booze and pills to get to the writing table. His work seems so effortless, but first he would write on a yellow pad, then a white pad, then type it and put it away for months and then rewrite. He was perfectionistic, but not prolific. The writers he criticized — Vidal, Mailer, Oates — are, and I think that bugged him."

And so, in this book and elsewhere, Capote vilified them as few dared. "He knew what shocked," Grobel says. "I don't like the Joyce Carol Oates remarks in the book, but I find them amusing and Capote was showing how well he understood gossip. People are interested in those remarks."

Also, Capote may only have been "giving" — if often gratuitously — what he was used to getting. As a child, there'd been torment from other children because of his voice, his prettiness, his precociousness (he was reading at age 4). And there was damage by adults.

Born in New Orleans, he was an only child whose parents divorced when he was 4. But his father had left long before. And Capote's mother, an alcoholic who was 17 when she gave birth to him, abandoned him in her own way. "He's 2 years old and she's going out with boyfriends and leaving him locked alone in hotel rooms," says Grobel. "Mostly, he was passed around among relatives and raised with cousins."

And, until he was discovered to be gifted and sent to private schools, school presented problems. Capote's first grade teacher, for instance, perhaps annoyed by his smugness, would smack his hand with a ruler while he recited the alphabet. So he grew up unable to do it. Neither, for some reason, could he ever subtract.

What he could do, by the time he was 12, was smoke and drink. He was also aware by then he was not attracted to girls. And by then he'd spent four years writing quite seriously, and so well that by his late teens, he was writing for The New Yorker. Says Grobel, "He was winning O'Henry Awards, never getting rejected and, in his early 20s, he wrote a novel, 'Other Voices, Other Rooms,' that became a sensation."

Suddenly, the flamboyant, sharp-tongued young man knew fame. "That messed up his life for a couple of years," says Grobel. Still, he had vanquished harsh beginnings and deep insecurities. Defiantly, publicly, he'd become "a brilliant gay." Personally, says Grobel, a Playboy writer who interviewed Capote 20 times during the last two years of Capote's life, "he was far more complex than anyone has caught so far."

He was, for instance, the sophisticate tyrannized by superstitions; the innocent appalled by animal suffering, oddly drawn to interview more than 400 multiple murderers — after he'd already completed "In Cold Blood."

Capote was also the spirited party-goer privately plagued by the dark side of life, and by his mother's death at her own hand before he was 30. He was the man who knew everyone, went everywhere and understood how the world "really worked behind the scenes," says Grobel, who found him irresistible and cooperative. "He told me terrific stories and never said 'off the record.'"

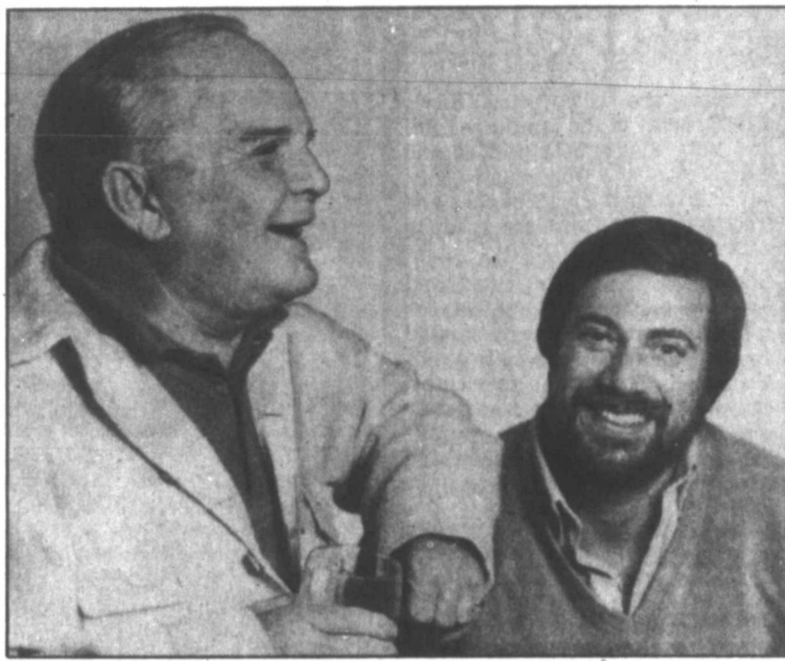

Short but powerful — "You never got the sense of a little, effeminate man" — he was open about everything: his epilepsy and cancer. His drug abuse. And the nervous breakdown he suffered in 1976 after four chapters of his last work, "Answered Prayers," were excerpted in Esquire magazine.

"Things had been building for some time," says Grobel. "There'd been the pain of the six years writing 'In Cold Blood,' and of having witnessed the execution of the two killers. He became depressed. Couldn't sleep. Didn't know the next step in his work."

Here he'd mastered the short story, the novel, then a new form with "In Cold Blood." Then he gets involved with these rich people and says, "All literature is gossip." People say, prove it, and he starts writing "Answered Prayers" based on his private journals.

And as he wrote, the world perched nearby, reminding him he was to write a masterpiece. After excerpts were published, however, the rich friends he'd written about deserted him — "That hurt him a great deal," says Grobel — and finally he broke down. Afterward, things never did go well.

There were drunken incidents in public. A painful love affair. And, constantly, the pressure to complete the book. "But," says Grobel, "he was not producing at the level he once had. He had bursts of talent at the end and, if he'd sustained them, I think he would have finished the book."

Capote never did. Last August, at 59, he died quietly in California. And Grobel, for one, feels his absence. "I was going to continue to talk to him the rest of my life. I said to my wife, 'I've gotten to this great writer and he does not mind talking to me!' Now, I miss this man to a degree I can't explain." With a sad smile and perhaps some wonder, he says, "I had his friendship."

WILL PUBLISH A SPECIAL PRIVATE PROPERTY WEEK EDITION ON SUNDAY APRIL 28, 1985

REALTORS®, real estate professionals who are members of the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS®, invite you to observe Private Property Week, April 28-May 4. This weeklong observance reaffirms the rights that come with owning property. For most of us this means a home of our own.

Home ownership ensures a stronger democracy because it disperses decision-making to the individual household. Homeowners tend to put down roots, to become involved in local government processes and to care about what takes place in their community and neighborhood.

The rights that attend home ownership are precious and must never be taken for granted. Rather, they must be protected and preserved for future generations.

Please join us in this year's observance of Private Property Week.

Film critics have joined the tens of thousands of families touched by the true-to-life story of THE PRODIGAL.

Here's what they have to say:

"The actors give their characters depth and texture, and consistently hold our interest. There's a seriousness of purpose here... uplifting climax."
—The Houston Post

"THE PRODIGAL is a worthy effort... the cast is uniformly excellent... It is more thoughtful about the complexity of our times than, perhaps, many viewers will expect."
—San Bernardino Sun

"Refreshingly, THE PRODIGAL depicts 'real' life without relying on profanity, nudity or gore... it touched the audience's emotions."
—Clearwater Sun

"An uplifting allegorical drama... THE PRODIGAL glistens with professionalism... it's solid entertainment."
—St. Paul Dispatch

"THE PRODIGAL... has hit San Antonio with an impact rarely felt before. It is changing people's lives... a realistic story told in a believable manner."
—San Antonio Light

"The story is insightful... the issues raised are real, and they demand a solution."
—Fort Lauderdale News

"Entertaining as well as thought-provoking for anyone interested in issues involving life's meaning and purpose, or anyone struggling with family relationships. The production quality of the film is first-rate. And the performances are all credible and effective."
—The Tampa Tribune

"A gripping film... relevant to the experiences of most American families... offers a worthwhile examination of some of the most searing moral dilemmas of our time."
—St. Petersburg Times

"There are plenty of laughs throughout the film. But be prepared for some emotion, too. Take a handkerchief for the ending..."
—Fresno Bee

"Every detail of the film seems to fit together into a beautiful work of art. The acting is superb... beautifully photographed and marvelously staged."
—The Houston Chronicle

"How I've longed for films of this caliber to be produced—all of it is first class."
—Joyce Landorf, Author

"THE PRODIGAL carries a terrific, relevant impact... a worthy film effort."

Ex-beauty queen can make you laugh Australian band finds American fans waiting

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
 LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cybill Shepherd, the former beauty queen and frosty tease in a half-dozen movies, also can make people laugh.

In her second television series, ABC's "Moonlighting," she is proving to be adept at both verbal and visual comedy and as straight man for co-star Bruce Willis.

"I've never done this kind of role before," she says, "although I did comedy in 'Silver Bears' in 1976. I've always wanted to do a comedy-adventure."

In "Moonlighting," she plays Maddie Hayes, a top fashion model whose business manager skips with all her money and leaves her the owner of a shaky detective agency she had bought as a tax write-off. She ends up throwing in with the head of the agency, Willis, who plays a fast-talking conniver named David Addison.

"She has a great deadpan," says Willis, a former New York standup comic. "She's good to play off of. When you have a good script you need someone good to play off of. She's wonderful."

Miss Shepherd, 34, is now on her second quest for stardom, following a return to her hometown of Memphis, Tenn., after her movie career dried up.

She was just barely out of her teens when director Peter Bogdanovich spotted her picture on the cover of Glamour magazine and cast her in "The Last Picture Show" in 1971.

She had been voted Miss Congeniality in the Miss Teen-Age

America competition and then won a "model of the year" contest that took her to New York. She was on the cover of Glamour magazine eight times in the year that Bogdanovich found her. They did three movies together.

"He was my first great teacher in acting," she says. "I learned a lot from the three other women in 'The Last Picture Show,' Eileen Brennan, Cloris Leachman and Ellen Burstyn. Then I worked for Elaine May in 'The Heartbreak Kid' and I learned some comedy from her."

Bogdanovich became not only her mentor but her companion and lover, as well.

"We lived together for 8½ years," she says. "During that time I worked with some heavyweight directors. But it was time for the relationship to be over. I was ready for many different reasons." She says, however, she is ready to work with Bogdanovich again.

Soon after she returned to Memphis in 1978 she married David Ford. They had a daughter, Clementine, now five. They were divorced in 1982. While in Memphis she recorded jazz and country-western albums and played jazz clubs and regional theater across the country.

"One of the things that got me back to Memphis was getting involved in renovating downtown," she says. "I helped save the Orpheum, a 1928 theater. We had a benefit and raised money to save it."

NEW YORK (AP) — They came from Sydney, Australia, to make their mark in the United States. But when they got here, the Eurogliders discovered they had already arrived.

"It's just like playing back home," said lead singer Grace Knight, resting up in her hotel room before doing a sold-out show at The Ritz. "It's been a real buzz — people right at the front of the stage singing songs on the album that we don't expect them to know."

The Eurogliders' arrival was preceded by the release of the album, "This Island." The six-member band was introduced to American audiences with "Heaven," a single given wide radio play after its release in the fall.

Eurogliders was somewhat of an oddity in Perth, an isolated city nearly 3,000 miles west of Sydney, because they performed original songs rather than covers — their versions of others' hits.

Eurogliders went against the trend, and made a place for themselves playing practically all originals. Their success on the Perth club circuit resulted in a contract with Polygram Records and their first LP.

POTENCY

All medicines vary in potency. This means that it takes a smaller amount of some drugs to produce the desired effect than with others. Doses are usually divided into three levels: "sub-threshold doses," "threshold doses" and "ceiling doses." Doses that produce no effect at all are called sub-threshold doses. A threshold dose is the amount necessary for a drug to have any effect at all. Ceiling doses are those where the drug no longer produces any further desired effect. Doctors prescribe specific drugs in specific doses for specific reasons. It is how much, how often and how long a drug is taken that produce the desired results.

If your physician finds it necessary to prescribe medication for you or a member of your family, have him call B&B PHARMACY directly. Feel free to consult with our pharmacist if you have a specific question about when to take it...with what to take it...or how long the prescription medicine can be kept. For accurate, sound and safe advice you will find us located at Ballard and Browning, 665-5788. Special discounts available for Senior Citizens on their prescriptions plus we provide free city wide delivery. We have an extensive selection of health aids and ostomy devices. Open Mon.-Fri. 9-6, Sat. 9-2.

Doubling up on medication will not necessarily bring results any faster.

March 25, 1985

There will be greater stability in your material affairs in the year ahead. Your returns won't flow in at an overwhelming rate but your growth pattern will be consistent.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Measures can be taken today to build your material security. Focus your energies and thoughts on ways to strengthen your present position. Major changes are in store for Aries in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Devote as much time as possible today to projects that are important to you personally. Much can be accomplished now in advancing your self-interests.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You can be more productive today by working in an atmosphere where you have solitude and others can't break in on your concentration.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You need to be around friends today who share interests similar to yours. Each will inspire the other to have a more positive outlook.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be both patient and persistent today and take things a step at a time. If you don't rush forward blindly, many of your objectives can be realized.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your imagination can earn you special rewards today. Have faith in your ideas and don't let others dissuade you from them before you're able to try them out.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Gains are probable today in a joint venture. However, nothing will happen if you don't ride herd on the project yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Partnership situations will provide you with greater benefits today than will actions you take independently of others. Don't be a loner.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Pay close attention to your work today and try to perform your duties to the best of your abilities. There will be extra dividends for jobs well-done.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Make a concerted effort to establish a good rapport with someone you may meet socially today. This person could turn out to be a valuable contact.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) If you don't dillydally today, a matter you've been anxious to finalize can now be settled to your advantage. Strike while the iron is hot.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Your mental faculties will be especially keen today and you should be able to do almost anything to which you set your mind. Have specific goals.

Senator indicted

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — State Sen. Carl Parker, one of the Texas legislature's most powerful members, was indicted Friday on charges of participating in a conspiracy to distribute cocaine and in the wholesale promotion of obscenity.

On the final day of its term, a Jefferson County grand jury returned the two indictments against the 50-year-old Parker, according to Randy Drewett, chief of the trial division of the Jefferson County District Attorney's office.

Drewett said the drug charge alleges that Parker participated with two other men in an organized criminal activity "with intent to distribute cocaine." The prosecutor said that charge is a first-degree felony.

Also named in the drug conspiracy charge was Danny Lee of Port Arthur and David Earl Johnson. Parker was named alone in the second indictment which charges promotion of obscenity.

Drewett said the drug indictment alleges 21 acts "on or about Jan. 18, 1983" which constituted a conspiracy to distribute cocaine. The prosecutor refused to give further details, saying "that would be part of the evidence in a trial."

Lee was previously indicted of a charge of cocaine possession and on another charge of promotion of obscenity, Drewett said.
